PREFACE

This volume makes no attempt to do what has already been so excellently done in Mr. Stedman's Victorian Anthology, Ward's English Poets, and other similar collections. It is not a new Anthology of nineteenth century poetry. Instead of giving a few "gems," or "flowers" from each one of several hundred authors, it includes only the fifteen chief poets of the century. From each one of these, however, it attempts to give a full and adequate selection, sufficient really to represent the man and his work.

The book has been planned, primarily, to give in one volume all the material which should be in the hands of the student for a College or University course on the British poets of the nineteenth century. I have therefore tried to include, first, all the poems which would be given as prescribed reading in such a course; and, second, a thorough guide to the use of a well-equipped college or public library, in connection with that reading. I hope the book may also be found useful for more general courses on English Literature, for which there is no other collection covering exactly this part of the field; and for any reader who wishes to possess in one volume the best work of the chief nineteenth century poets—"Infinite riches in a little room."

The selections are very full, and for the most part consist of complete poems. They are designed both to give all the best of each poet's work, and also (except for Mrs. Browning) to give some representation of each important period and class of his work. Long poems are usually given entire, and space has been found for Byron's Manfred, Shelley's Prometheus Unbound, Scott's Marmion, Coleridge's Ancient Mariner and Christabel, Keats' Hyperion, Tennyson's Guinevere and Morte d'Arthur, Browning's Pippa Passes, Mrs. Browning's Sonnets from the Portuguese, Arnold's Sohrab and Rustum, Morris's Atalanta's Race, etc., etc. In general, extracts from long poems are not given, except in the case of single cantos which are complete in themselves, like the last two cantos of Childe Harold; or lyrics, such as the songs from Tennyson's dramas, or the Hymns to Pan and Diana in Keats' Endymion, which, when detached, make perfect and independent poems. An exception has been

PREFACE TO THE FOURTH EDITION

In the present edition a number of typographical errors have been corrected, the text and dates of some poems have been verified by comparison with more authoritative editions than were available when the book was first published, an Index of First Lines has been added to the Author-Index and Title-Index, and the Reference Lists have been thoroughly revised and brought up to date. I am under obligation to several friends who have sent me corrections and especially suggestions for the improvement of the Reference Lists: in particular to Professor Lane Cooper, Professor Frank E. Farley, Miss Henriette E. Moore, Professor A. B. Milford, Professor Richard Jones, and Professor Charles W. Hodell; and I take this opportunity to thank the many other teachers who have written me concerning their use of the book. It is a pleasure to know that the general plan and method of the book, and of the Reference Lists, have been found helpful; and though these have been only too generously flattered by imitation, it is also a pleasure to note that no similar collection has ventured to include so much as one-third the material offered by the present volume.

WORDSWORTH

TINES

Left upon a Seat in a Yew-tree, which stands near the lake of Esthwaite, on a desolate part of the shore, commanding a beautiful prospect.

Composed in part at school at Hawkshead. The tree has disappeared, and the slip of Common on which it stood, that ran parallel to the lake and lay open to it, has long been enclosed; so that the road has lost much of its attraction. This spot was my favorite walk in the evenings during the latter part of my school-time.
(Wordsworth's note.)

NAY, Traveller! rest. This lonely Yewtree stands

Far from all human dwelling: what if

No sparkling rivulet spread the verdant

What if the bee love not these barren boughs?

Yet, if the wind breathe soft, the curling waves,

That break against the shore, shall lull thy mind

By one soft impulse saved from vacancy.

---Who he was That piled these stones and with the mossy sod

First covered, and here taught this aged Tree

With its dark arms to form a effecting bower,

I well remember.—He was one who owned

No common soul. In youth by science nursed.

And led by nature into a wild scene Of lofty hopes, he to the world went

A favored Being, knowing no desire Which genius did not hallow: 'gainst the taint

Of dissolute tongues, and jealousy, and

And scorn,—against all enemies prepared,

All but neglect. The world, for so it thought,

Owed him no service: wherefore he at once

With indignation turned himself away, And with the food of pride sustained his

In solitude.—Stranger! these gloomy boughs

Had charms for him: and here he loved to sit.

His only visitants a straggling sheep, The stone-chat, or the glancing sand-

And on these barren rocks, with fern and heath.

And juniper and thistle, sprinkled o'er. Fixing his downcast eye, he many an hour

A morbid pleasure nourished, tracing

An emblem of his own unfruitful life: And, lifting up his head, he then would gaze

On the more distant scene,—how levely

Thou seest,—and he would gaze till it became.

Far lovelier, and his heart could not sus-

Would he forget those Beings to whose minds. Warm from the labors of benevolence,

The world, and human life, appeared a scene

Of kindred loveliness: then he would sigh,

Inly disturbed, to think that others felt What he must never feel: and so, lost Man!

On visionary views would fancy feed, Till his eye streamed with tears. In this deep vale

He died.—this seat his only monument. If Thou be one whose heart the holy

Of young imagination have kept pure, Stranger! henceforth be warned; and know that pride.

Howe'er disguised in its own majesty, Is littleness; that he, who feels con-

For any living thing, hath faculties Which he has never used; that thought with him

Is in its infancy. The man whose eye Is ever on himself doth look on one, The least of Nature's works, one who might move

THE REVERIE OF POOR SUSAN

This arose out of my observation of the affecting music of these birds hanging in this way in the London streets during the freshness and stillness of the Spring morning. - Wordsworth.)

AT the corner of Wood Street, when daylight appears,

Hangs a Thrush that sings loud, it has sung for three years; Poor Susan has passed by the spot, and has heard

In the silence of morning the song of the Bird.

'Tis a note of enchantment; what ails her? She sees

A mountain ascending, a vision of trees: Bright volumes of vapor through Lothbury glide,

And a river flows on through the vale of Cheapside.

Green pastures she views in the midst of the dale,

Italic figures indicate the year of writing; upright figures the year of publication. The detes for Wordsworth are taken from the latest editions of Widham Knight, A. J. Ceorge, and Thomas Hutchinson.

Down which she so often has tripped with her pail;

And a single small cottage, a nest like a dove's,

The one only dwelling on earth that she loves.

She looks, and her heart is in heaven: but they fade.

The mist and the river, the hill and the shade:

The stream will not flow, and the hill will not rise,

And the colors have all passed away from her eves! 1797. 1800.

A NIGHT-PIECE

Composed on the road between Nether Stowey and Alfoxden, extempore. I distinctly recollect the very moment when I was struck, as described —"He looks up—the clouds are split," etc.

"He looks up—the clouds are spin, (Wordsworth) articularly recommended to me among his Poems of Imagination, Yew Trees, and a description of Night. These, he says, are amonest the best for the imaginative power displayed in them." (Diary of Henry Crabb Robinson, May 9, 1815.)

The sky is overcast

With a continuous cloud of texture close, Heavy and wan, all whitened by the Moon.

Which through that veil is indistinctly

A dull, contracted circle, yielding light So feebly spread, that not a shadow falls, Chequering the ground-from rock, plant, tree, or tower.

At length a pleasant instantaneous gleam Startles the pensive traveller while he

His lonesome path, with unobserving

Bent earthward; he looks up—the clouds are split

Asunder,—and above his head he sees The clear Moon, and the glory of the heavens. There, in a black-blue vault she sails along,

Followed by multitudes of stars, that, small

And sharp, and bright, along the dark

Drive as she drives: how fast they wheel away,

Yet vanish not!—the wind is in the tree. But they are silent;—still they roll along Immeasurably distant; and the vault,

Built round by those white clouds, enormous clouds.

Still deepens its unfathomable depth.

At length the Vision closes; and the mind,

Not undisturbed by the delight it feels, Which slowly settles into peaceful calm, Is left to muse upon the solemn scene.

WE ARE SEVEN

—A SIMPLE Child, That lightly draws its breath, And feels its life in every limb, What should it know of death?

I met a little cottage Girl: She was eight years old, she said; Her hair was thick with many a curl That clustered round her head.

She had a rustic, woodland air, And she was wildly clad: Her eyes were fair, and very fair; —Her beauty made me glad.

- "Sisters and brothers, little Maid, How many may you be?"
 "How many? Seven in all," she said And wondering looked at me.
- "And where are they? I pray you tell." She answered, "Seven are we; And two of us at Conway dwell, And two are gone to sea.
- "Two of us in the church-yard lie, My sister and my brother; And in the church-yard cottage, I Dwell near them with my mother."
- "You say that two at Conway dwell, And two are gone to sea, Yet ye are seven!—I pray you tell, Sweet Maid, how this may be."

Then did the little Maid reply, "Seven boys and girls are we; Two of us in the church-yard lie, Beneath the church-yard tree."

"You run about, my little Maid, Your limbs they are alive; If two are in the church-yard laid, Then ye are only five."

"Their graves are green, they may be seen."

The little Maid replied,

- "Twelve steps or more from my mother's door,
- And they are side by side.
- "My stockings there I often knit, My kerchief there I hem; And there upon the ground I sit, And sing a song to them.
- "And often after sunset, Sir, When it is light and fair, I take my little porringer, And eat my supper there.
- "The first that died was sister Jane; In bed she moaning lay, Till God released her of her pain; And then she went away.
- "So in the church-yard she was laid; And, when the grass was dry, Together round her grave we played, My brother John and I.
- "And when the ground was white with snow,
 And I could run and slide,
 My brother John was forced to go,
- "How many are you, then," said I,
 "If they two are in heaven?"
 Quick was the little Maid's reply,
 "O Master! we are seven."

And he lies by her side."

"But they are dead; those two are dead!
Their spirits are in beaven!"
Twas throwing words away; for still
The little Maid would have her will,
And said, "Nay, we are seven!"

SIMON LEE

THE OLD HUNTSMAN;

WITH AN INCIDENT IN WHICH HE WAS CONCERNED,

This old man had been huntsman to the squires of Alfoxden. . . . The fact was as mentioned in the poem; and I have, after an interval of forty-five years, the image of the old man as fresh before my eyes as if I had seen him yesterday. The expression when the hounds were out, "I dearly love their voice," was word for word from his own lips. (Wordsworth.)

In the sweet shire of Cardigan, Not far from pleasant Ivor-hall, An old Man dwells, a little man,— 'Tis said he once was tall. Full five and thirty years he lived A running huntsman merry; And still the centre of his cheek Is red as a ripe cherry.

No man like him the horn could sound, And hill and valley rang with glee When Echo bandied, round and round, The halloo of Simon Lee. In those proud days, he little cared For husbandry or tillage; To blither tasks did Simon rouse The sleepers of the village.

He all the country could outrun, Could leave both man and horse behind: And often, ere the chase was done, He reeled and was stone-blind. And still there's something in the world At which his heart rejoices; For when the chiming hounds are out, He dearly loves their voices!

But, oh the heavy change !—bereft Of health, strength, friends, and kindred, see!

Old Simon to the world is left In liveried poverty. His Master's dead,—and no one now Dwells in the Hall of Ivor; Men, dogs, and horses, all are dead; He is the sole survivor.

And he is lean and he is sick; His body, dwindled and awry, Rests upon ankles swoln and thick; His legs are thin and dry. One prop he has, and only one, His wife, an aged woman, Lives with him, near the waterfall, Upon the village Common.

Beside their moss-grown hut of clay, Not twenty paces from the door. A scrap of land they have, but they Are poorest of the poor. This scrap of land he from the heath Enclosed when he was stronger; But what to them avails the land Which he can till no longer?

Oft, working by her Husband's side, Ruth does what Simon cannot do; For she, with scanty cause for pride, Is stouter of the two. And, though you with your utmost skill From labor could not wean them, 'Tis little, very little—all That they can do between them.

Few months of life has he in store
As he to you will tell,
For still, the more he works, the more
Do his weak ankles swell.
My gentle Reader, I perceive
How patiently you've waited,
And now I fear that you expect
Some tale will be related.

O Reader! had you in your mind Such stores as silent thought can bring, O gentle Reader! you would find A tale in every thing. What more I have to say is short, And you must kindly take it: It is no tale; but, should you think, Perhaps a tale you'll make it.

One summer-day I chanced to see This old Man doing all he could To unearth the root of an old tree, A stump of rotten wood. The mattock tottered in his hand; So vain was his endeavor, That at the root of the old tree He might have worked for ever.

"You're overtasked, good Simon Lee, Give me your tool," to him I said; And at the word right gladly he Received my proffered aid. I struck, and with a single blow The tangled root I severed, At which the poor old Man so long And vainly had endeavored.

The tears into his eyes were brought,
And thanks and praises seemed to run
So fast out of his heart, I thought
They never would have done.
—I've heard of hearts unkind, kind deeds
With coldness still returning;
Alas! the gratitude of men
Hath oftener left me mourning.

LINES WRITTEN IN EARLY SPRING

I HEARD a thousand blended notes,
While in a grove I sate reclined,
In that sweet mood when pleasant
thoughts
Bring sad thoughts to the mind.

To her fair works did Nature link The human soul that through me ran; And much it grieved my heart to think What man has made of man.

Through primrose tufts, in that green bower,

The periwinkle trailed its wreaths; And 'tis my faith that every flower Enjoys the air it breathes.

The birds around me hopped and played, Their thoughts I cannot measure:— But the least motion which they made It seemed a thrill of pleasure.

The budding twigs spread out their fan, To catch the breezy air; And I must think, do all I can, That there was pleasure there.

If this belief from heaven be sent, If such be Nature's holy plan, Have I not reason to lament What man has made of man?

TO MY SISTER

It is the first mild day of March: Each minute sweeter than before The redbreast sings from the tall larch That stands beside our door.

There is a blessing in the air, Which seems a sense of joy to yield To the bare trees, and mountains bare, And grass in the green field.

My sister! ('tis a wish of mine)
Now that our morning meal is done,
Make haste, your morning task resign;
Come forth and feel the sun.

Edward will come with you;—and, pray, Put on with speed your woodland dress; And bring no book: for this one day We'll give to idleness.

No joyless forms shall regulate Our living calendar: We from to-day, my Friend, will date The opening of the year.

Love, now a universal birth,
From heart to heart is stealing,
From earth to man, from man to earth:
—It is the hour of feeling.

One moment now may give us more Than years of toiling reason: Our minds shall drink at every pore The spirit of the season.

Some silent laws our hearts will make, Which they shall long obey: We for the year to come may take Our temper from to-day,

And from the blessed power that rolls About, below, above, We'll frame the measure of our souls: They shall be tuned to love.

Then come, my Sister! come, I pray, With speed put on your woodland dress; And bring no book: for this one day We'll give to idleness. 1798. 1798.

A WHIRL-BLAST FROM BEHIND THE HILL

A WHIRL-BLAST from behind the hill Rushed o'er the wood with startling sound:

Then—all at once the air was still,
And showers of hailstones pattered
round.

Where leafless oaks towered high above, I sat within an undergrove Of tallest hollies, tall and green; A fairer bower was never seen. From year to year the spacious floor With withered leaves is covered o'er, And all the year the bower is green. But see! where'er the hailstones drop The withered leaves all skip and hop; There's not a breeze - 286 breath of air-Yet here, and there, and everywhere Along the floor, beneath the shade By those embowering hollies made, The leaves in myriads jump and spring, As if with pipes and music rare Some Robin Good-fellow were there, And all those leaves, in festive glee, Were dancing to the minstrelsy.

EXPOSTULATION AND REPLY

"WHY, William, on that old gray stone Thus for the length of half a day, Why, William, sit you thus alone, And dream your time away? "Where are your books?—that light bequeathed

To Beings else forlorn and blind!
Up! up! and drink the spirit breathed
From dead men to their kind.

"You look round on your Mother Earth, As if she for no purpose bore you; As if you were her first-born birth, And none had lived before you!"

One morning thus, by Esthwaite lake, When life was sweet, I knew not why, To me my good friend Matthew spake, And thus I made reply:

"The eye—it cannot choose but see; We cannot bid the ear be still; Our bodies feel, where'er they be, Against or with our will.

"Nor less I deem that there are Powers Which of themselves our minds impress; That we can feed this mind of ours In a wise passiveness.

"Think you, 'mid all this mighty sum Of things for ever speaking, That nothing of itself will come, But we must still be seeking?

"—Then ask not wherefore, here, alone, Conversing as I may. I sit upon this old gray stone, And dream my time away."

THE TABLES TURNED

AN EVENING SCENE ON THE SAME SUBJECT

Up!up! my Friend, and quityour books; Or surely you'll grow double; Up! up! my Friend, and clear your looks;

Why all this toil and trouble?

The sun, above the mountain's head, A freshening lustre mellow Through all the long green fields has spread,

His first sweet evening yellow.

Books! 'tis a dull and endless strife: Come, hear the woodland linnet, How sweet his music! on my life, There's more of wisdom in it, And hark! how blithe the throstle sings! He, too, is no mean preacher: Come forth into the light of things, Let Nature be your teacher.

She has a world of ready wealth, Our minds and hearts to bless— Spontaneous wisdom breathed by health, Truth breathed by cheerfulness.

One impulse from a vernal wood May teach you more of man, Of moral evil and of good, Than all the sages can.

Sweet is the lore which Nature brings; Our meddling intellect Mis-shapes the beautous forms of things: We murder to dissect.

Enough of Science and of Art; Close up those barren leaves; Come forth, and bring with you a heart That watches and receives. 1798. 1798.

COMPOSED A FEW MILES ABOVE TINTERN ABBEY, ON REVISITING THE BANKS OF THE WYE DURING A TOUR. JULY 13, 1798.

No poem of mine was composed under circumstances more pleasant for me to remember that this. I began it upon leaving Tintern, after crossing the Wye, and concluded it just as I was entering Bristol in the evening, after a ramble of four or five days, with my sister. Not a line of it was altered, and not any part of it written down till I reached Bristol. It was published almost immediately after in the little volume of which so much has been said in these Notes, tWordsworth. The volume referred to is The Lyrical Ballads, as first published at Bristol by Cottle.)

Five years have past; five summers, with the length

Of five long winters! and again I hear These waters, rolling from their mountain-springs

With a soft inland murmur. 1 - Once again

Do I behold these steep and lofty cliffs, That on a wild seeluded scene impress Thoughts of more deep seclusion; and connect

The landscape with the quiet of the sky. The day is come when I again repose

Here, under this dark sycamore, and view

These plots of cottage-ground, these orchard-tufts.

Which at this season, with their unripe fruits,

Are clad in one green hue, and lose themselves

'Mid groves and copses. Once again I see

These hedge-rows, hardly hedge-rows, little lines

Of sportive wood run wild: these pastoral farms,

Green to the very door; and wreaths of smoke

Sent up, in silence, from among the trees!

With some uncertain notice, as might seem

Of vagrant dwellers in the houseless woods,

Or of some Hermit's cave, where by his fire

The Hermit sits alone.

Through a long absence, have not been to me

As is a landscape to a blind man's eye: But oft, in lonely rooms, and 'mid the din

Of towns and cities, I have owed to them In hours of weariness, sensations sweet, Felt in the blood, and felt along the heart;

And passing even into my purer mind, With tranquil restoration:—feelings too Of unremembered pleasure: such, per-

As have no slight or trivial influence On that best portion of a good man's life, His little, nameless, unremembered acts Of kindness and of love. Nor less, I trust.

To them I may have owed another gift, Of aspect more sublime; that blessed mood,

In which the burthen of the mystery, In which the heavy and the weary weight

Of all this unintelligible world,

Is lightened:—that serene and blessed mood,

In which the affections gently lead us on.—

Until, the breath of this corporeal frame
And even the motion of our human blood

Almost suspended, we are laid asleep

In body, and become a living soul:
While with an eye made quiet by the

Of harmony, and the deep power of joy, We see into the life of things.

Be but a vain belief, yet, oh! how oft— In darkness and amid the many shapes Of joyless daylight; when the fretful stir

Unprofitable, and the fever of the world, Have hung upon the beatings of my heart—

How oft, in spirit, have I turned to

O sylvan Wye! thou wanderer thro' the woods.

How often has my spirit turned to thee! And now, with gleams of half-extinguished thought,

With many recognitions dim and faint,
And somewhat of a sad perplexity,

The picture of the mind revives again: While here I stand, not only with the sense

Of present pleasure, but with pleasing thoughts

That in this moment there is life and food

For future years. And so I dare to hope,

Though changed no doubt from what I

Though changed, no doubt, from what I was when first

I came among these hills; when like a roe
I bounded o'er the mountains, by the

of the deep rivers, and the lonely streams,

Wherever nature led: more like a man
Flying from something that he dreads, than one

Who sought the thing he loved. For nature then

(The coarser pleasures of my boyish days,

And their glad animal movements all gone by)

To me was all in all.—I cannot paint What then I was. The sounding cataract

Haunted me like a passion: the tall rock,

The mountain, and the deep and gloomy wood,

Their colors and their forms, were then to me

An appetite; a feeling and a love, That had no need of a remoter charm, By thought supplied, nor any interest Unborrowed from the eye.—That time is past,

And all its aching joys are now no more, And all its dizzy raptures. Not for this Faint I, nor mourn nor murmur; other gifts

Have followed; for such loss, I would believe.

Abundant recompense. For I have learned

To look on nature, not as in the hour Of thoughtless youth; but hearing oftentimes

The still, sad music of humanity,

Nor harsh nor grating, though of ample power

To chasten and subdue. And I have felt

A presence that disturbs me with the joy Of elevated thoughts: a sense sublime

Of something far more deeply interfused.

Whose dwelling is the light of setting

And the round ocean and the living air, And the blue sky, and in the mind of

A motion and a spirit, that impels

All thinking things, all objects of all thought,

And rolls through all things. Therefore am I still

A lover of the meadows and the woods, And mountains; and of all that we be-

From this green earth; of all the mighty world

Of eye, and ear, -- both what they half create. And what perceive; well pleased to recognize In nature and the language of the sense, The anchor of my purest thoughts, the

The guide, the guardian of my heart, and soul

Of all my moral being.

Nor perchance, If I were not thus taught, should I the more

Suffer my genial spirits to decay:

For thou art with me here upon the

Of this fair river; thou my dearest Friend.

My dear, dear Friend; and in thy voice I catch

The language of my former heart, and read

My former pleasures in the shooting lights

Of thy wild eves. Oh! yet a little while

May I behold in thee what I was once, My dear, dear Sister! and this prayer I

Knowing that Nature never did betray The heart that loved her; 'tis her privi-

Through all the years of this our life, to

From joy to joy: for she can so inform The mind that is within us, so impress With quietness and beauty, and so feed With lofty thoughts, that neither evil tongues,

Rash judgments, nor the sneers of selfish men.

Nor greetings where no kindness is, nor

The dreary intercourse of daily life. Shall e'er prevail against us, or disturb Our cheerful faith, that all which we behold

Is full of blessings. Therefore let the moon

Shine on thee in thy solitary walk; And let the misty mountain-winds be free To blow against thee: and, in after years,

When these wild ecstasies shall be matured Into a sober pleasure; when thy mind

Shall be a mansion for all lovely forms, Thy memory be as a dwelling-place For all sweet sounds and harmonies;

oh! then, If solitude, or fear, or pain, or grief,

Should be thy portion, with what healing thoughts

Of tender joy wilt thou remember me, And these my exhortations! Nor, per-

If I should be where I no more can hear Thy voice, nor catch from thy wild eyes these gleams

Of past existence—wilt thou then forget That on the banks of this delightful stream We stood together; and that I, so long A worshipper of Nature, hither came

Unwearied in that service: rather say With warmer love—oh! with far deeper

Of holier love. Nor wilt thou then forget,

That after many wanderings, many years Of absence, these steep woods and lofty cliffs.

And this green pastoral landscape, were to me

More dear, both for themselves and for thy sake! 1798. 1798.

THE SIMPLON PASS

——Brook and road
Were fellow-travellers in this gloomy
Pass.

And with them did we journey several hours

At a slow step. The immeasurable height

Of woods decaying, never to be decayed,

The stationary blasts of waterfalls, And in the narrow rent, at every turn,

Winds thwarting winds bewildered and forlorn,

The torrents shooting from the clear blue sky,

The rocks that muttered close upon our ears.

Black drizzling crags that spake by the wayside

As if a voice were in them, the sick sight And giddy prospect of the raving stream, The unfettered clouds and region of the heavens,

Tumult and peace, the darkness and the

Were all like workings of one mind, the features

Of the same face, blossoms upon one tree.

INFLUENCE OF NATURAL OBJECTS

IN CALLING FORTH AND STRENGTHENING
THE IMAGINATION IN BOYHOOD AND EARLY YOUTH

WISDOM and Spirit of the universe!
Thou Soul, that art the Eternity of thought!

And giv'st to forms and images a breath And everlasting motion! not in vain, By day or star-light, thus from my first dawn Of childhood didst thou intertwine for me

The passions that build up our human soul;

Not with the mean and vulgar works of Man.

But with high objects, with enduring things,

With life and nature; purifying thus The elements of feeling and of thought, And sanctifying by such discipline

Both pain and fear,—until we recognize A grandeur in the beatings of the heart. Nor was this fellowship youchsafed to me

With stinted kindness. In November days,

When vapors rolling down the valleys made

A lonely scene more lonesome; among woods

At noon; and 'mid the calm of summer nights,

When by the margin of the trembling lake,

Beneath the gloomy hills, homeward I went

In solitude, such intercourse was mine:
Mine was it in the fields both day and
night,

And by the waters, all the summer long. And in the frosty season, when the sun Was set, and, visible for many a mile, The cottage-windows through the twilight blazed,

I heeded not the summons: happy time

It was indeed for all of us; for me It was a time of rapture! Clear and loud The village-clock tolled six—I wheeled about, Proud and exulting like an untired horse

That cares not for his home.—All shod with steel We hissed along the polished ice, in games

Confederate, imitative of the chase

And woodland pleasures,—the resounding horn,

The pack loud-chiming, and the hunted hare.

So through the darkness and the cold we flew,

And not a voice was idle: with the din Smitten, the precipices rang aloud;

Smitten, the precipiees rang aloud;
The leafless trees and every icy crag
Tinkled like iron; while far-distant hills
Into the tunult sent an alien sound

Of melancholy, not unnoticed while the stars,

Eastward, were sparkling clear, and in the west

The orange sky of evening died away. Not seldom from the uproar I retired

Into a silent bay, or sportively

Glanced sideway, leaving the tumultuous throng.

To cut across the reflex of a star;

Image, that, flying still before me, gleamed

Upon the glassy plain: and oftentimes, When we had given our bodies to the wind.

And all the shadowy banks on either side

Came sweeping through the darkness, spinning still

The rapid line of motion, then at once Have I, reclining back upon my heels, Stopped short; yet still the solitary cliffs Wheeled by me -even as if the earth had rolled

With visible motion her diurnal round! Behind me did they stretch in solemn train.

Feebler and feebler, and I stood and watched

Till all was tranquil as a summer sea. 1799. 1809.

THERE WAS A BOY

Written in Germany. This is an extract from the poem on my own poetical education. (Wordsworth. The poem referred to is The Prelude.)

THERE was a Boy; ye knew him well, ye cliffs

And islands of Winander!-many a time, At evening, when the earliest stars began To move along the edges of the hills,

Rising or setting, would be stand alone, Beneath the trees, or by the glimmering

And there, with fingers interwoven, both

Pressed closely palm to palm and to his mouth

Uplifted, he, as through an instrument, Blew mimic hootings to the silent owls, That they might answer him.—And they would shout Across the watery vale, and shout again, Responsive to his call,—with quivering peals. And long halloos, and screams, and echoes loud

Redoubled and redoubled; concourse wild

Of jocund din! And, when there came a pause

Of silence such as baffled his best skill, Then, sometimes, in that silence, while he hung

Listening, a gentle shock of mild surprise Has carried far into his heart the voice Of mountain-torrents; or the visible

Would enter unawares into his mind With all its solemn imagery, its rocks, Its woods, and that uncertain heaven

Into the bosom of the steady lake.

This boy was taken from his mates, and died

In childhood, ere he was full twelve years

Pre-eminent in beauty is the vale Where he was born and bred: the churchvard hangs

Upon a slope above the village-school; And through that church-yard when my way has led

On summer-evenings, I believe, that

A long half-hour together I have stood Mute-looking at the grave in which he 1798. 1800.

NUTTING

Written in Germany; intended as part of a poem on my own life, out struck out as not being wanted there. . . (Wordsworth).

—— IT seems a day

(I speak of one from many singled out) One of those heavenly days that cannot die:

When, in the eagerness of boyish hope, I left our cottage-threshold, sallying forth

With a huge wallet o'er my shoulders

A nutting-crook in hand; and turned my steps

Tow'rd some far-distant wood, a Figure quaint.

Tricked out in proud disguise of cast-off weeds

Which for that service had been husbanded.

By exhortation of my frugal Dame-Motley accoutrement, of power to smile

At thorns, and brakes, and bramblesand, in truth, More ragged than need was! O'er pathless rocks.

Through beds of matted fern, and tangled thickets,

Forcing my way, I came to one dear nook Unvisited, where not a broken bough Drooped with its withered leaves, un-

gracious sign
Of devastation; but the hazels rose
Tall and erect, with tempting clusters

hung,

A virgin scene!—A little while I stood, Breathing with such suppression of the heart.

As joy delights in; and, with wise re-

Voluptuous, fearless of a rival, eyed
The banquet;—or beneath the trees I sate

Among the flowers, and with the flowers I played;

A temper known to those, who, after long

And weary expectation, have been blest With sudden happiness beyond all hope. Perhaps it was a bower beneath whose leaves

The violets of five seasons re-appear And fade, unseen by any human eye; Where fairy water-breaks do murmur on For ever; and I saw the sparkling foam, And-with my cheek on one of those green stones

That, fleeced with moss, under the shady

Lay round me, scattered like a flock of sheep--

I heard the murmur and the murmuring sound.

In that sweet mood when pleasure loves to pay

Tribute to ease; and, of its joy secure,
The heart luxuriates with indifferent
things,

Wasting its kindliness on stocks and stones

And on the vacant air. Then up I rose, And dragged to earth both branch and bough, with crash

And merciless ravage: and the shady nook

Of hazels, and the green and mossy bower,

Deformed and sullied, patiently gave up Their quiet being: and, unless I now Confound my present feelings with the past:

Ere from the mutilated bower I turned Exulting, rich beyond the wealth of kings.

I felt a sense of pain when I beheld

The silent trees, and saw the intruding sky.—

Then, dearest Maiden, move along these shades

In gentleness of heart; with gentle hand Touch—for there is a spirit in the woods.

STRANGE FITS OF PASSION HAVE I KNOWN

The next three poems were written in Germany. (Wordsworth.)

STRANGE fits of passion have I known: And I will dare to tell, But in the Lover's ear alone, What once to me befell.

When she I loved looked every day Fresh as a rose in June, I to her cottage bent my way, Beneath an evening-moon.

Upon the moon I fixed my eye,
All over the wide lea;
With quickening pace my horse drew nigh

Those paths so dear to me.

And now we reached the orchard-plot; And, as we climbed the hill, The sinking moon to Lucy's cot Came near, and nearer still.

In one of those sweet dreams I slept, Kind Nature's gentlest boon! And all the while my eyes I kept On the descending moon.

My horse moved on; hoof after hoof He raised, and never stopped: When down behind the cottage roof, At once, the bright moon dropped.

What fond and wayward thoughts will slide

Into a Lover's head!
"O mercy!" to myself I cried,
"If Lucy should be dead!"

*1*799. 1800.

SHE DWELT AMONG THE UNTROD-DEN WAYS

SHE dwelt among the untrodden ways
Beside the springs of Dove,
A Maid whom there were none to praise
And very few to love:

A violet by a mossy stone Half hidden from the eve! -Fair as a star, when only one Is shining in the sky.

She lived unknown, and few could know When Lucy ceased to be; But she is in her grave, and, oh, 1799. 1800. The difference to me!

I TRAVELLED AMONG UNKNOWN MEN

I TRAVELLED among unknown men, In lands beyond the sea; Nor, England! did I know till then What love I bore to thee.

'Tis past, that melancholy dream! Nor will I quit thy shore A second time; for still I seem To love thee more and more.

Among the mountains did I feel The joy of my desire; And she I cherished turned her wheel Beside an English fire.

Thy mornings showed, thy nights concealed The bowers where Lucy played;

And thine too is the last green field That Lucy's eyes surveyed.

1799. 1807.

THREE YEARS SHE GREW IN SUN AND SHOWER

THREE years she grew in sun and shower, Then Nature said, "A lovelier flower On earth was never sown; This Child I to myself will take; She shall be mine, and I will make A Lady of my own.

" Myself will to my darling be Both law and impulse: and with me The Girl, in rock and plain, In earth and heaven, in glade and bower. Shall feel an overseeing power

To kindle or restrain.

"She shall be sportive as the fawn That wild with glee across the lawn, Or up the mountain springs; And hers shall be the breathing balm, And hers the silence and the calm Of mute insensate things.

"The floating clouds their state shall lend

To her; for her the willow bend; Nor shall she fail to see Even in the motions of the Storm Grace that shall mould the Maiden's By silent sympathy.

"The stars of midnight shall be dear To her; and she shall lean her ear In many a secret place Where rivulets dance their wayward round.

And beauty born of murmuring sound Shall pass into her face.

"And vital feelings of delight Shall rear her form to stately height, Her virgin bosom swell: Such thoughts to Lucy I will give While she and I together live Here in this happy dell."

Thus Nature spake.—The work was How soon my Lucy's race was run! She died, and left to me This heath, this calm and quiet scene; The memory of what has been, And never more will be.

A SLUMBER DID MY SPIRIT SEAL

A SLUMBER did my spirit seal; I had no human fears: She seemed a thing that could not feel The touch of earthly years.

No motion has she now, no force; She neither hears nor sees; Rolled round in earth's diurnal course. With rocks, and stones, and trees. 1799. 1800.

A POET'S EPITAPH

ART thou a Statist in the van Of public conflicts trained and bred? -First learn to love one living man; Then may'st thou think upon the dead.

A Lawyer art thou?—draw not nigh! Go, carry to some fitter place The keenness of that practised eye, The hardness of that sallow face.

Art thou a Man of purple cheer? A rosy Man, right plump to see? Approach; vet, Doctor, not too near, This grave no cushion is for thee.

Or art thou one of gallant pride, A Soldier and no man of chaff? Welcome !- but lay thy sword aside, And lean upon a peasant's staff.

Physician art thou? one all eyes, Philosopher! a fingering slave, One that would peep and botanize Upon his mother's grave?

Wrapt closely in thy sensual fleece, O turn aside,—and take, I pray, That he below may rest in peace, Thy ever-dwindling soul away!

A Moralist perchance appears; Led, Heaven knows how! to this poor

And he has neither eyes nor ears; Himself his world, and his own God;

One to whose smooth-rubbed soul can Nor form, nor feeling, great or small!

A reasoning, self-sufficing thing, An intellectual All-in-all!

Shut close the door; press down the latch:

Sleep in thy intellectual crust; Nor lose ten tickings of thy watch Near this unprofitable dust.

But who is he, with modest looks, And clad in homely russet brown? He murmurs near the running brooks A music sweeter than their own.

He is retired as noontide dew, Or fountain in a noon-day grove; And you must love him, ere to you He will seem worthy of your love.

The outward shows of sky and earth, Of hill and valley, he has viewed; And impulses of deeper birth Have come to him in solitude.

In common things that round us lie Some random truths he can impart,-The harvest of a quiet eye That broods and sleeps on his own heart. But he is weak; both Man and Boy, Hath been an idler in the land: Contented if he might enjoy The things which others understand.

-Come hither in thy hour of strength; Come, weak as is a breaking wave! Here stretch thy body at full length; Or build thy house upon this grave. 1799. 1800.

MATTHEW

In the School of ---- is a tablet, on which are inscribed in gilt letters, the Names of the several persons who have been Schoolmasters there since the foundation of the School, with the time at which they entered upon and quitted their office. Opposite to one of those names the Author wrote the following lines.

Such a Tablet as is here spoken of continued to be preserved in Hawkshead School, though to be preserved in Tawashead School, though the inscriptions were not brought down to our time. This and other poems connected with Matthew would not gain by a literal detail of facts. Like the Wanderer in "The Excursion," this Schoolmaster was made up of several both of his class and men of other occupations. I do on ms cass and men of other occupations. To not ask pardon for what there is of untruth in such verses, considered strictly as matters of fact. It is enough if, being true and consistent in spirit, they move and teach in a manner not unworthy of a Poet's calling. (Wordsworth.)

IF Nature, for a favorite child, In thee hath tempered so her clay, That every hour thy heart runs wild, Yet never once doth go astray,

Read o'er these lines; and then review This tablet, that thus humbly rears In such diversity of hue Its history of two hundred years.

-When through this little wreck of Cipher and syllable! thine eve Has travelled down to Matthew's name. Pause with no common sympathy.

And, if a sleeping tear should wake, Then be it neither checked nor stayed: For Matthew a request I make Which for himself he hath not made.

Poor Matthew, all his frolics o'er, Is silent as a standing pool;
Far from the chimney's merry roar, And murmur of the village school.

The sighs which Matthew heaved were

Of one tired out with fun and madness;

The tears which came to Matthew's eyes
Were tears of light, the dew of gladness.

Yet, sometimes, when the secret cup Of still and serious thought went round, It seemed as if he drank it up— He felt with spirit so profound.

—Thou soul of God's best earthly mould! Thou happy Soul! and can it be That these two words of glittering gold Are all that must remain of thee? 1799.: 1800.

THE TWO APRIL MORNINGS

WE walked along, while bright and red Uprose the morning sun; And Matthew stopped, he looked, and said,

"The will of God be done!"

A village schoolmaster was he, With hair of glittering gray; As blithe a man as you could see On a spring holiday.

And on that morning, through the grass, And by the steaming rills, We travelled merrily, to pass A day among the hills.

"Our work," said I, "was well begun, Then, from thy breast what thought, Beneath so beautiful a sun, So sad a sigh has brought?"

A second time did Matthew stop; And fixing still his eye Upon the eastern mountain-top, To me he made reply:

- "You cloud with that long purple cleft Brings fresh into my mind A day like this which I have left Full thirty years behind.
- "And just above you slope of corn Such colors, and no other, Were in the sky, that April morn, Of this the very brother.
- "With rod and line I sued the sport Which that sweet season gave, And, to the church-yard come, stopped short Beside my daughter's grave.

"Nine summers had she scarcely seen, The pride of all the vale; And then she sang;—she would have been

A very nightingale.

- "Six feet in earth my Emma lay; And yet I loved her more. For so it seemed, than till that day I e'er had loved before.
- "And, turning from her grave, I met, Beside the church-yard yew, A blooming Girl, whose hair was wet With points of morning dew,
- "A basket on her head she bare; Her brow was smooth and white: To see a child so very fair, It was a pure delight!
- "No fountain from its rocky cave E'er tripped with foot so free; She seemed as happy as a wave That dances on the sea;
- "There came from me a sigh of pain Which I could ill confine; I looked at her, and looked again: And did not wish her mine!"

Matthew is in his grave, yet now, Methinks, I see him stand, As at that moment, with a bough Of wilding in his hand. 1799, 1800.

THE FOUNTAIN

A CONVERSATION

We talked with open heart, and tongue Affectionate and true.
A pair of friends, though I was young, And Matthew seventy-two,

We lay beneath a spreading oak, Beside a mossy seat; And from the turf a fountain broke, And gurgled at our feet.

"Now, Matthew!" said I, "let us match This water's pleasant time With some old border-song, or catch That suits a summer's noon;

"Or of the church-clock and the chimes Sing here beneath the shade, That half-mad thing of witty rhymes Which you last April made!"

In silence Matthew lay, and eyed The spring beneath the tree; And thus the dear old Man replied, The gray-haired man of glee:

"No check, no stay, this Streamlet fears;
How merrily it goes!

'Twill murmur on a thousand years,
And flow as now it flows.

- "And here, on this delightful day, I cannot choose but think How oft, a vigorous man, I lay Beside this fountain's brink.
- "My eyes are dim with childish tears, My heart is idly stirred, For the same sound is in my ears Which in those days I heard,
- "Thus fares it still in our decay:
 And yet the wiser mind
 Mourns less for what age takes away
 Than what it leaves behind.
- "The blackbird amid leafy trees, The lark above the hill, Let loose their carols when they please Are quiet when they will.
- "With Nature never do they wage A foolish strife; they see A happy youth, and their old age Is beautiful and free:
- "But we are pressed by heavy laws; And often, glad no more, We wear a face of joy, because We have been glad of yore.
- "If there be one who need bemoan His kindred laid in earth, The household hearts that were his own; It is the man of mirth.
- "My days, my Friend, are almost gone, My life has been approved, And many love me; but by none Am I enough beloved."
- "Now both himself and me he wrongs, The man who thus complains; I live and sing my idle songs Upon these happy plains;

"And, Matthew, for thy children dead I'll be a son to thee!" At this he grasped my hand, and said, "Alas! that cannot be."

We rose up from the fountain-side; And down the smooth descent Of the green sheep-track did we glide; And through the wood we went;

And, ere we came to Leonard's rock, He sang those witty rhymes About the crazy old church-clock, And the bewildered chimes.

LUCY GRAY

OR, SOLITUDE

Written at Goslar in Germany. It was founded on a circumstance told me by my Sister, of a little girl who, not far from Halifax in Yorkshire, was bewildered in a snow-storm. Her footsteps were traced by her parents to the middle of the lock of a canal, and no other vestige of her, backward or forward, could be traced. The body however was found in the canal. The way in which the incident was treated and the spiritualizing of the character might furnish hints for contrasting the imaginative influences which I have endeavored to throw over common life with Crabbe's matter of fact style of treating subjects of the same kind. This is not spoken to his disparagement, far from it, but to direct the attention of thoughtful readers, into whose hands these notes may fall, to a comparison that may both enlarge the circle of their sensibilities, and tend to produce in them a catholic judgment. (Wardsworth.)

See also Henry Crabb Robinson's Diary, Sept.

OFT I had heard of Lucy Gray: And, when I crossed the wild, I chanced to see at break of day The solitary child.

No mate, no comrade Lucy knew; She dwelt on a wide moor, —The sweetest thing that ever grew Beside a human door!

You yet may spy the fawn at play, The hare upon the green; But the sweet face of Lucy Gray Will never more be seen.

- "To-night will be a stormy night—You to the town must go; And take a lantern, Child, to light Your mother through the snow."
- "That, Father! will I gladly do:
 "Tis scarcely afternoon—
 The minster-clock has just struck two,
 And yonder is the moon!"

At this the Father raised his hook, And snapped a fagot band; He plied his work;—and Lucy took The lantern in her hand.

Not blither is the mountain roe: With many a wanton stroke Her feet disperse the powdery snow, That rises up like smoke.

The storm came on before its time: She wandered up and down; And many a hill did Lucy climb: But never reached the town.

The wretched parents all that night Went shouting far and wide; But there was neither sound nor sight To serve them for a guide.

At daybreak on the hill they stood That overlooked the moor; And thence they saw the bridge of wood, A furlong from their door.

They wept—and, turning homeward, cried,
"In heaven we all shall meet;"

-When in the snow the mother spied The print of Lucy's feet.

Then downwards from the steep hill's edge

They tracked the footmarks small;
And through the broken hawthorn hedge,

And by the long stone-wall;

And then an open field they crossed: The marks were still the same; They tracked them on, nor ever lost; And to the bridge they came.

They followed from the snowy bank Those footmarks, one by one, Into the middle of the plank; And further there were none!

—Yet some maintain that to this day She is a hving child; That you may see sweet Lucy Gray Upon the lonesome wild.

O'er rough and smooth she trips along, And never looks behind; And sings a solitary song That whistles in the wind.

MICHAEL

A PASTORAL POEM

Written at Town-end, Grasmere, about the same time as "The Brothers." The Sheepfold, on which so much of the poem turns, remains, or rather the ruins of it. The character and circumstances of Luke were taken from a family to whom had belonged, many years before, the house we lived in at Town-end, along with some fields and woodlands on the eastern shore of Grasmere. The name of the Evening Star was not in fact given to this house, but to another on the same side of the valley, more to the north. (Wordsworth.)

If from the public way you turn your steps

Up the tumultuous brook of Greenhead Ghyll,

You will suppose that with an upright path

Your feet must struggle; in such bold ascent

The pastoral mountains front you, face to face.

But, courage! for around that boisterous brook

The mountains have all opened out themselves,

And made a hidden valley of their own. No habitation can be seen; but they Who journey thither find themselves

alone
With a few sheep, with rocks and stones,

and sites

That overhead are sailing in the sky. It is in truth an utter solitude:

Nor should I have made mention of this

But for one object which you might pass

Might see and notice not. Beside the

Appears a straggling heap of unhewn stones!

And to that simple object appertains
A story—unenriched with strange events,

Yet not unfit, I deem, for the fireside, Or for the summer shade. It was the first Of those domestic tales that spake to me Of shepherds, dwellers in the valleys,

Whom I already loved; not verily For their own sakes, but for the fields and hills

Where was their occupation and abode. And hence this Tale, while I was yet a

Careless of books, yet having felt the power

Of Nature, by the gentle agency Of natural objects, led me on to feel For passions that were not my own, and think

(At random and imperfectly indeed)
On man, the heart of man, and human life.

Therefore, although it be a history

Homely and rude, I will relate the same For the delight of a few natural hearts; And, with yet fonder feeling, for the sake

Of youthful Poets, who among these hills Will be my second self when I am gone. Upon the forest-side in Grasmere Vale

There dwelt a Shepherd, Michael was his name:

An old man, stout of heart, and strong of limb.

His bodily frame had been from youth to age

Of an unusual strength: his mind was keen,

Intense, and frugal, apt for all affairs,
And in his shepherd's calling he was prompt

And watchful more than ordinary men. Hence had he learned the meaning of all winds, Of blasts of every tone; and, oftentimes, When others heeded not, He heard the South

Make subterraneous music, like the noise
Of bagpipers on distant Highland hills.
The Shepherd, at such warning, of his flock Bethought him, and he to himself would

"The winds are now devising work for me!"

And, truly, at all times, the storm that drives

The traveller to shelter, summoned him Up to the mountains: he had been alone Amid the heart of many thousand mists, That came to him, and left him, on the

So lived he till his eightieth year was past.

And grossly that man errs, who should suppose

That the green valleys, and the streams and rocks,

Were things indifferent to the Shepherd's thoughts.

Fields, where with cheerful spirits he had breathed

The common air; hills, which with vigorous step

He had so often climbed; which had impressed

So many incidents upon his mind

Of hardship, skill or courage, joy or fear;

Which, like a book, preserved the memory
Of the dumb animals whom he had

Of the dumb animals, whom he had saved,

Had fed or sheltered, linking to such acts

The certainty of honorable gain;

Those fields, those hills—what could they less? had laid

Strong hold on his affections, were to

A pleasurable feeling of blind love, The pleasure which there is in life itself.

The pleasure which there is in the itself.

His days had not been passed in singleness.

His Helpmate was a comely matron, old—

Though younger than himself full twenty years.

She was a woman of a stirring life,

Whose heart was in her house: two wheels she had
Of antique form: this large, for spinning wool;

That small for flax; and if one wheel

That small, for flax; and if one wheel had rest

It was because the other was at work.
The Pair had but one inmate in their house,

An only Child, who had been born to them

When Michael, telling o'er his years, began

To deem that he was old,—in shepherd's phrase,
With one feet in the grave. This only

With one foot in the grave. This only Son,

With two brave sheep-dogs tried in many a storm,
The one of an inestimable worth,

Made all their household. I may truly say,

That they were as a proverb in the vale

For endless industry. When day was gone,
And from their occupations out of doors

The Son and Father were come home, even then, Their labor did not cease; unless when

Their labor did not cease; unless when all

Turned to the cleanly supper-board, and there,

Each with a mess of pottage and skimmed milk,

Sat round the basket piled with oaten cakes,

And their plain home-made cheese. Yet when the meal

Was ended, Luke (for so the Son was named)

And his old Father both betook themselves

To such convenient work as might employ

Their hands by the fireside; perhaps to card

Wool for the Housewife's spindle, or repair

Some injury done to sickle, flail, or seythe,

Or other implement of house or field.

Down from the ceiling, by the chim-ney's edge,

That in our ancient uncouth country

With huge and black projection overbrowed

Large space beneath, as duly as the light Of day grew dim the Housewife hung a lamp;

An aged utensil, which had performed Service beyond all others of its kind.

Early at evening did it burn—and late, Surviving comrade of uncounted hours, Which, going by from year to year, had found.

And left, the couple neither gay perhaps Nor cheerful, yet with objects and with hopes,

Living a life of eager industry.

And now, when Luke had reached his eighteenth year,

There by the light of this old lamp they sate.

Father and Son, while far into the night The Housewife plied her own peculiar work.

Making the cottage through the silent hours

Murmur as with the sound of summer flies.

This light was famous in its neighborhood,

And was a public symbol of the life

That thrifty Pair had lived. For, as it chanced,

Their cottage on a plot of rising ground Stood single, with large prospect, north and south,

High into Easedale, up to Dunmail-Raise.

And westward to the village near the lake:

And from this constant light, so regular And so far seen, the House itself, by al Who dwelt within the limits of the vale, Both old and young, was named THE EVENING STAR.

Thus living on through such a length of years.

The Shepherd, if he loved himself, must needs

Have loved his Helpmate; but to Michael's heart

This son of his old age was yet more dear—

Less from instinctive tenderness, the same

Fond spirit that blindly works in the blood of all—

Than that a child, more than all other gifts

That earth can offer to declining man, Brings hope with it, and forward-looking thoughts.

And stirrings of inquietude, when they By tendency of nature needs must fail. Exceeding was the love he bare to him, His heart and his heart's joy! For oftentimes

Old Michael, while he was a babe in arms.

Had done him female service, not alone For pastime and delight, as is the use Of fathers, but with patient mind enforced

To acts of tenderness; and he had rocked

His cradle, as with a woman's gentle hand.

And, in a later time, ere yet the Boy Had put on boy's attire, did Michael love.

Albeit of a stern unbending mind,

To have the Young one in his sight, when he

Wrought in the field, or on his shepherd's stool

Sate with a fettered sheep before him stretched

Under the large old oak, that near his door

Stood single, and, from matchless depth of shade.

Chosen for the Shearer's covert from the sun.

Thence in our rustic dialect was called The CLIPPING TREE, a name which yet it bears.

¹ Clipping is the word used in the North of England for shearing. (Wordsworth.)

There, while they two were sitting in the shade.

With others round them, earnest all and blithe.

Would Michael exercise his heart with

Of fond correction and reproof bestowed Upon the Child, if he disturbed the sheep

By catching at their legs, or with his shouts

Scared them, while they lay still beneath the shears.

And when by Heaven's good grace the boy grew up

A healthy Lad, and carried in his cheek Two steady roses that were five years old:

Then Michael from a winter coppice cut With his own hand a sapling, which he hooped

With iron, making it throughout in all Due requisites a perfect shepherd's staff, And gave it to the Boy; wherewith equipt

He as a watchman oftentimes was placed

At gate or gap, to stem or turn the flock:

And, to his office prematurely called, There stood the urchin, as you will di-

Something between a hindrance and a help:

And for this cause not always, I believe, Receiving from his Father hire of praise; Though nought was left undone which staff, or voice.

Or looks, or threatening gestures, could perform.

But soon as Luke, full ten years old, could stand

Against the mountain blasts; and to the heights,

Not fearing toil, nor length of weary wavs.

He with his Father daily went, and they Were as companions, why should I relate That objects which the Shepherd loved before

Were dearer now? that from the Boy there came

Feelings and emanations—things which

Light to the sun and music to the wind: And that the old Man's heart seemed born again?

Thus in his Father's sight the Boy grew up:

And now, when he had reached his eighteenth year,

He was his comfort and his daily hone. While in this sort the simple household lived

From day to day, to Michael's ear there came Distressful tidings. Long before the

Of which I speak, the Shepherd had been bound

In surety for his brother's son, a man

Of an industrious life, and ample means; But unforeseen misfortunes suddenly Had prest upon him; and old Michael now

Was summoned to discharge the forfeit-

A grievous penalty, but little less Than half his substance. This unlooked. for claim. At the first hearing, for a moment took

More hope out of his life than he supposed

That any old man ever could have lost.

As soon as he had armed himself with strength

To look his trouble in the face, it seemed The Shepherd's sole resource to sell at

A portion of his patrimonial fields. Such was his first resolve; he thought again. And his heart failed him, "Isabel," said

Two evenings after he had heard the

"I have been toiling more than seventy years,

And in the open sunshine of God's love Have we all lived; yet if these fields of ours

Should pass into a stranger's hand, I think

That I could not lie quiet in my grave. Our lot is a hard lot; the sun himself Has scarcely been more diligent than I; And I have lived to be a fool at last

To my own family. An evil man That was, and made an evil choice, if he

Were false to us; and if he were not false. There are ten thousand to whom loss like this

Had been no sorrow. I forgive him; but

Twere better to be dumb than totalk thus.

"When I began, my purpose was to speak

Of remedies and of a cheerful hope.
Our Luke shall leave us, Isabel; the land
Shall not go from us, and it shall be free;
He shall possess it, free as is the wind
That passes over it. We have, thou know'st.

Another kinsman—he will be our friend In this distress. He is a prosperous man, Thriving in trade—and Luke to him shall go,

And with his kinsman's help and his own thrift

He quickly will repair this loss, and then He may return to us. If here he stay, What can be done? Where every one is poor,

What can be gained?"

At this the old Man paused,
And Isabel sat silent, for her mind
Was busy, looking back into past times.
There's Richard Bateman, thought she to herself.

He was a parish-boy—at the church-door They made a gathering for him, shillings, pence

And halfpennies, wherewith the neighbors bought

A basket, which they filled with pedlar's wares;

And, with this basket on his arm, the lad Went up to London, found a master there.

Who, out of many, chose the trusty boy To go and overlook his merchandise Beyond the seas; where he grew wondrous rich,

And left estates and monies to the poor And, at his birthplace, built a chapel, floored

With marble which he sent from foreign lands.

These thoughts, and many others of like sort.

Passed quickly through the mind of Isabel,

And her face brightened. The old Man was glad.

And thus resumed:—"Well, Isabel!

These two days, has been meat and drink to me.

Far more than we have lost is left us yet.

—We have enough—I wish indeed that I
Were younger;—but this hope is a good hope.

-Make ready Luke's best garments, of the best Buy for him more, and let us send him forth

To-morrow, or the next day, or to-night:

—If he could go, the boy should go tonight."

Here Michael ceased, and to the fields went forth

With a light heart. The Housewife for five days

Was restless morn and night, and all day long

Wrought on with her best fingers to pre-

Things needful for the journey of her

But Isabel was glad when Sunday came To stop her in her work: for, when she lay By Michael's side, she through the last two nights

Heard him, how he was troubled in his sleep:

And when they rose at morning she could see

That all his hopes were gone. That day

She said to Luke, while they two by themselves Were sitting at the door, "Thou must not go:

We have no other child but thee to lose,

None to remember—do not go away,
For if thou leave thy Father he will die.*
The Youth made answer with a jocund
voice:

And Isabel, when she had told her fears, Recovered heart. That evening her best fare

Did she bring forth, and all together sat Like happy people round a Christmas fire.

With daylight Isabel resumed her

And all the ensuing week the house appeared

As cheerful as a grove in Spring: at length

The expected letter from their kinsman came,

With kind assurances that he would do His utmost for the welfare of the Boy;
To which requests were added that

To which, requests were added, that forthwith

He might be sent to him. Ten times or more

The letter was read over; Isabel

Went forth to show it to the neighbors round;

Nor was there at that time on English land

A prouder heart than Luke's. When Isabel

Had to her house returned, the old Man said,

"He shall depart to-morrow." To this word

The Housewife answered, talking much of things

Which if at such short notice he should

Which, if at such short notice he should go.

Would surely be forgotten. But at length

She gave consent, and Michael was at ease.

Near the tumultuous brook of Green-

head Ghyll,

In that deep valley, Michael had designed

To build a Sheepfold; and, before he heard

The tidings of his melancholy loss,

For this same purpose he had gathered up

A heap of stones, which by the streamlet's edge

Lay thrown together, ready for the work.
With Luke that evening thitherward he walked:

And soon as they had reached the place he stopped.

And thus the old Man spake to him:—

To-morrow thou wilt leave me: with full heart

I look upon thee, for thou art the same That wert a promise to me ere thy birth, And all thy life hast been my daily joy. I will relate to thee some little part

Of our two histories; 'twill do thee good When thou art from me, even if I should touch

On things thou canst not know of.——
After thou

First cam'st into the world—as oft befalls
To new-born infants—thou didst sleep
away

Two days, and blessings from thy Father's tongue

Then fell upon thee. Day by day passed

And still I loved thee with increasing love.

Never to living ear came sweeter sounds Than when I heard thee by our own fireside

First uttering, without words, a natural

While thou, a feeding babe, didst in thy joy

Sing at thy Mother's breast. Month followed month.

And in the open fields my life was passed And on the mountains; else I think that thou

Hadst been brought up upon thy Father's knees.

But we were playmates, Luke: among these hills,

As well thou knowest, in us the old and young

Have played together, nor with me didst thou

Lack any pleasure which a boy can know."

Luke had a manly heart; but at these words

He sobbed aloud. The old Man grasped his hand,

And said, "Nay, do not take it so—I see That these are things of which I need not speak.

—Even to the utmost I have been to thee A kind and a good Father: and herein I but repay a gift which I myself

Received at others' hands; for, though now old

Beyond the common life of man, I still Remember them who loved me in my youth.

Both of them sleep together: here they lived.

As all their Forefathers had done; and when

At length their time was come, they were not loth

To give their bodies to the family mould. I wished that thou should'st live the life they lived:

But, 'tis a long time to look back, my Son,

And see so little gain from threescore years.

These fields were burthened when they came to me;

Till I was forty years of age, not more Than half of my inheritance was mine.

I toiled and toiled; God blessed me in my work,

And till these three weeks past the land was free.

—It looks as if it never could endure Another Master. Heaven forgive me, Luke.

If I judge ill for thee, but it seems good That thou should'st go."

At this the old Man paused;
Then pointing to the stones near which

Then, pointing to the stones near which they stood.

Thus, after a short silence, he resumed: "This was a work for us; and now, my Son.

It is a work for me. But, lay one stone-Here, lay it for me, Luke, with thine own hands.

Nay, Boy, be of good hope;—we both may live

To see a better day. At eighty-four I still am strong and hale; -do thou thy part:

I will do mine.—I will begin again

With many tasks that were resigned to thee: Up to the heights, and in among the storms,

Will I without thee go again, and do All works which I was wont to do alone, Before I knew thy face.—Heaven bless thee, Boy!

Thy heart these two weeks has been beating fast

With many hopes; it should be so-yes-

I knew that thou could'st never have a

To leave me, Luke: thou hast been bound to me

Only by links of love: when thou art gone,

What will be left to us!—But, I forget My purposes. Lay now the corner-stone, As I requested; and hereafter, Luke, When thou art gone away, should evil

Be thy companions, think of me, my Son, And of this moment; hither turn thy thoughts,

And God will strengthen thee: amid all

And all temptation, Luke, I pray that

May'st bear in mind the life thy Fathers lived,

Who, being innocent, did for that cause Bestir them in good deeds. Now, fare thee well-

When thou return'st, thou in this place wilt see

A work which is not here: a covenant Twill be between us; but, whatever fate Befall thee, I shall love thee to the last, And bear thy memory with me to the grave.

The Shepherd ended here; and Luke stooped down.

And, as his Father had requested, laid The first stone of the Sheepfold. At the sight

The old Man's grief broke from him; to

He pressed his Son, he kissed him and wept;

And to the house together they returned. -Hushed was that House in peace, or seeming peace,

Ere the night fell:-with morrow's dawn the Boy

Began his journey, and when he had

The public way, he put on a bold face; And all the neighbors, as he passed their doors.

Came forth with wishes and with fare well prayers,

That followed him till he was out of sight.

A good report did from their Kinsman come,

Of Luke and his well-doing: and the Boy Wrote loving letters, full of wondrous news.

Which, as the Housewife phrased it, were throughout

"The prettiest letters that were ever seen.

Both parents read them with rejoicing hearts.

So, many months passed on: and once again

The Shepherd went about his daily work With confident and cheerful thoughts; and now

Sometimes when he could find a leisure

He to that valley took his way, and there Wrought at the Sheepfold. Meantime Luke began

To slacken in his duty; and, at length, He in the dissolute city gave himself To evil courses: ignominy and shame Fell on him, so that he was driven at last

To seek a hiding-place beyond the seas. There is a comfort in the strength of love:

'Twill make a thing endurable, which else

Would overset the brain, or break the heart:

I have conversed with more than one who well

Remember the old Man, and what he was Years after he had heard this heavy news.

His bodily frame had been from youth to age

Of an unusual strength. Among the rocks

He went, and still looked up to sun and cloud,

And listened to the wind; and, as before, Performed all kinds of labor for his sheep,

And for the land, his small inheritance. And to that hollow dell from time to time Did he repair, to build the Fold of which His flock had need. 'Tis not forgotten yet The pity which was then in every heart For the old Man—and 'tis believed by all That many and many a day he thither went.

And never lifted up a single stone.

There, by the Sheepfold, sometimes was he seen

Sitting alone, or with his faithful Dog, Then old, beside him, lying at his feet. The length of full seven years from time to time.

He at the building of this Sheepfold wrought.

And left the work unfinished when he died.

Three years, or little more, did Isabel Survive her Husband; at her death the estate

Was sold, and went into a stranger's hand.

The Cottage which was named the EVEN-

ING STAR
Is gone—the ploughshare has been through the ground On which it stood; great changes have been wrought

In all the neighborhood:—yet the oak is

That grew beside their door; and the remains

Of the unfinished Sheepfold may be seen Beside the boisterous brook of Greenhead Ghyll, 1800, 1800.

THE SPARROWS' NEST

Written in the Orchard, Town-end, Grasmere. At the end of the garden of my father's house at Cockermouth was a high terrace that commanded a fine view of the river Derwent and Cockermouth Castle. This was our favorite play-ground. The terrace-wall, a low one, was covered with closely-clipt privet and roses, which gave an almost impervious shelter to birds that built their nests there. The latter of these stanzas alludes to one of those nests. (Wordsworth.)

BEHOLD, within the leafy shade, Those bright blue eggs together laid! On me the chance-discovered sight Gleamed like a vision of delight. I started—seeming to espy The home and sheltered bed, The Sparrow's dwelling, which, hard by My Father's house, in wet or dry My sister Emmeline ¹ and I

Together visited.

She looked at it and seemed to fear it:
Dreading, tho' wishing, to be near it:
Such heart was in her, being then
A little Prattler among men.
The Blessing of my later years
Was with me when a boy:
She gave me eyes, she gave me ears;
And humble cares, and delicate fears;
A heart, the fountain of sweet tears;

And love and thought, and joy. 1801, 1807.

MY HEART LEAPS UP WHEN 1 BEHOLD

My heart leaps up when I behold
A rainbow in the sky:
So was it when my life began;
So is it now I am a man;
So be it when I shall grow old,
Or let me die!
The Child is father of the Man;
And I could wish my days to be

The Child is father of the Man; And I could wish my days to be Bound each to each Ly natural piety. 1802. 1807.

WRITTEN IN MARCH

WHILE RESTING ON THE BRIDGE AT THE FOOT OF BROTHER'S WATER

Extempore. This little poem was a favorite with Joanna Baillie. (Wordsworth)

Compare the description of the same scene by Wordsworth's sister: "There was the gentle flowing of the stream, the glittering, lively lake, green fields without a living creature to be seen on them; behind us, a flat pasture with forty-two cattle feeding; to our left, the road leading to the hamlet. No smoke there, the sun shone on the bare roofs. The people were at work ploughing, harrowing, and sowing; ... a dog barking now and then, cocks crowing, birds twittering, the snow in patches at the top of the highest hills, yellow palms, purple and green twigs on the birches, ashes with their glittering spikes, stems quite bare. The hawthorn a bright green, with black stems under the oak. The moss of the oak glossy. We went on ... William finished his poem before we got to the foot of Kirkstone." (Dorothy Wordsworth's Journal, April 16, 1802.)

¹ Dorothy Wordsworth, called Emmeline also in the poem To a Butterfty. See the beautiful lines To my Sister, p. 8, the last lines of the Sonnet p. 31, and notes on the Sonnets of 1802.

The green field sleeps in the sun;
The oldest and youngest
Are at work with the strongest;
The cattle are grazing,
Their heads never raising;
There are forty feeding like one!

Like an army defeated
The snow hath retreated,
And now doth fare ill
On the top of the bare hill;
The ploughboy is whooping—anon—
anon:
There's joy in the mountains;
There's life in the fountains;
Small clouds are sailing,
Blue sky prevailing;
The rain is over and gone!

TO THE SMALL CELANDINE

Written at Town-end, Grasmere. It is remarkable that this flower, coming out so early in the spring as it does, and so bright and beautiful, and in such profusion, should not have been noticed earlier in English verse. What adds much to the interest that attends it is its habit of shutting itself up and opening out according to the degree of light and temperature of the air. (Wordsworth.)

Pansies, lilies, kingcups, daisies, Let them live upon their praises; Long as there's a sun that sets, Primroses will have their glory; Long as there are violets, They will have a place in story: There's a flower that shall be mine, 'Tis the little Celandine.

Eyes of some men travel far For the finding of a star; Up and down the heavens they go, Men that keep a mighty rout! I'm as great as they, I trow, Since the day I found thee out, Little Flower!—I'll make a stir, Like a sage astronomer.

Modest, yet withal an Elf Bold, and lavish of thyself; Since we needs must first have met I have seen thee, high and low, Thirty years or more, and yet 'Twas a face I did not know; Thou hast now, go where I may, Fifty greetings in a day.

Ere a leaf is on a bush, In the time before the thrush Has a thought about her nest, Thou wilt come with half a call, Spreading out thy glossy breast Like a careless Prodigal; Telling tales about the sun, When we've little warmth, or none

Poets, vain men in their mood! Travel with the multitude: Never heed them; I aver That they all are wanton wooers; But the thrifty cottager, Who stirs little out of doors, Joys to spy thee near her home; Spring is coming, Thou art come!

Comfort have thou of thy merit, Kindly, unassuming Spirit! Careless of thy neighborhood, Thou dost show thy pleasant face On the moor, and in the wood, In the lane; there's not a place, Howsoever mean it be, But 'tis good enough for thee.

Ill befall the yellow flowers, Children of the flaring hours! Buttercups, that will be seen, Whether we will see or no; Others, too, of lofty mien; They have done as worldlings do, Taken praise that should be thine Little, humble Celandine!

Prophet of delight and mirth, Ill-requited upon earth; Herald of a mighty band, Of a joyous train ensuing, Serving at my heart's command, Tasks that are no tasks renewing, I will sing, as doth behove, Hymns in praise of what I love!

TO THE SAME FLOWER

PLEASURES newly found are sweet When they lie about our feet: February last, my heart First at sight of thee was glad; All unheard of as thou art, Thou must needs, I think, have had, Celandine! and long ago, Praise of which I nothing know.

I have not a doubt but he, Whosoe'er the man might be, Who the first with pointed rays (Workman worthy to be sainted) Set the sign-board in a blaze, When the rising sun he painted. Took the fancy from a glauce At thy glittering countenance.

Soon as gentle breezes bring News of winter's vanishing, And the children build their bowers, Sticking 'kerchief-plots of mould All about with fall-blown flowers, Thick as sheep in shepherd's fold! With the proudest thou art there, Mantling in the tiny square.

Often have I sighed to measure By myself a lonely pleasure, Sighed to think I read a book Only read, perhaps, by me; Yet I long could overlook Thy bright coronet and Thee, And thy arch and wily ways, And thy store of other praise.

Blithe of heart, from week to week Thou dost play at hide-and-seek; While the patient primrose sits Like a beggar in the cold, Thou, a flower of wiser wits, Slipp'st into thy sheltering hold; Liveliest of the vernal train When ye all are out again.

Drawn by what peculiar spell, By what charm of sight or smell, Does the dim-eyed curious Bee, Laboring for her waxen cells, Fondly settle upon Thee Prized above all buds and bells Opening daily at thy side, By the season multiplied?

Thou are not beyond the moon, But a thing "beneath our shoon:" Let the bold Discoverer thrid In his bark the polar sea; Rear who will a pyramid; Praise it is enough for me, If there be but three or four Who will love my little Flower.

RESOLUTION AND INDEPENDENCE

This poem was originally known as The Leech Gatherer, and is still often called by that title. Compare the account of its origin, in Dorothy Wordsworth's Journal:

"When William and I returned, we met an old man almost double. He had on a coat, thrown over his shoulders, above his waistcoat and coat. Under this he carried a bundle, and had an apron on and a night-cap. His face was interesting. He had dark eyes and a long nose. John, who afterwards met him at Wytheburn, took him for a Jew. He was of Scotch parents, but had been born in the army. He had had a wife, and 'she was a good woman, and it pleased God to bless us with ten children.' All these were dead but one, of whom he had not heard for many years, a sailor. His trade was to gather leeches, but now leeches were scarce, and he had not strength for it. He lived oy begging, and was making his way to Carlisle, where he should buy a few godly books to sell. He said leeches were very scarce, partly owing to this dry season, but many years they have been scarce. He supposed it owing to their being much sought after, that they did not breed fast, and were of slow growth. Leeches were formerly 2s, 6d. per 100; they are now 30s. He had been hurt in driving a cart, his leg broken, his body driven over, his skull fractured. He let no pain till he recovered from his first insensibility. . . . It was then late in the evening, when the light was just going away." (Dorothy Wordsworth's Journal, October 3, 1800.)

THERE was a roaring in the wind all night:

The rain came heavily and fell in floods; But now the sun is rising calm and bright:

The birds are singing in the distant woods;

Over his own sweet voice the Stock-dove broods;

The Jay makes answer as the Magpie chatters;

And all the air is filled with pleasant noise of waters.

All things that love the sun are out of doors;

The sky rejoices in the morning's birth;
The grass is bright with rain-drops;—on the moors

The hare is running races in her mirth; And with her feet she from the plashy earth

Raises a mist, that, glittering in the sun, Runs with her all the way, wherever she doth run.

I was a Traveller then upon the moor,
I saw the hare that raced about with joy;

I heard the woods and distant waters roar;

Or heard them not, as happy as a boy:
The pleasant season did my heart employ:

My old remembrances went from me wholly;

And all the ways of men, so vain and melancholy.

But, as it sometimes chanceth, from the might

Of joy in minds that can no further go, As high as we have mounted in delight In our dejection do we sink as low;

To me that morning did it happen so;
And fears and fancies thick upon me
came:

Dim sadness—and blind thoughts, I knew not, nor could name.

I heard the skylark warbling in the sky; And I bethought me of the playful hare: Even such a Lappy Child of earth am I; Even as these blissful creatures do I fare; Far from the world I walk, and from all care;

But there may come another day to me—Solitude, pain of heart, distress, and poverty.

My whole life I have lived in pleasant thought,

As if life's business were a summer mood:

As if all needful things would come unsought

To genial faith, still rich in genial good; But how can he expect that others should

Build for him, sow for him, and at his

Love him, who for himself will take no heed at all?

I thought of Chatterton, the marvellous Boy.

The sleepless Soul that perished in his pride;

Of him who walked in glory and in joy Following his plough, along the mountain-side:

By our own spirits are we defined: We Poets in our youth begin in glad-

But thereof come in the end despondeney and madness,

Now, whether it were by peculiar grace, A mading from above, a something given,

Yet it befell, that, in this lonely place, When I with these untoward thoughts had striven,

Beside a pool bare to the eye of heaven I saw a Man before me unawares:

The oldest man he seemed that ever wore gray hairs.

As a huge stone is sometimes seen to lie Couched on the bald top of an eminence; Wonder to all who do the same espy,

By what means it could thither come, and whence;

So that it seems a thing endued with sense:

Like a sea-beast crawled forth, that on a shelf

Of rock or sand reposeth, there to sun itself:

Such seemed this Man, not all alive nor dead.

Nor all asleep, in his extreme old age: His body was bent double, feet and head Coming together in life's pilgrimage;

As if some dire constraint of pain, or rage Of sickness felt by him in times long past.

A more than human weight upon his frame had cast.

Himself he propped, limbs, body, and pale face,

Upon a long gray staff of shaven wood:
And, still as I drew near with gentle pace,

Upon the margin of that moorish flood Motionless as a cloud the old Man stood, That heareth not the loud winds when they call

And moveth all together, if it move at all.

At length, himself unsettling, he the

Stirred with his staff, and fixedly did look Upon the muddy water, which he conned,

As if he had been reading in a book: And now a stranger's privilege I took; And, drawing to his side, to him did say, "This morning gives us promise of a glorious day."

A gentle answer did the old Man make.
In courteous speech which forth he slowly drew:

And him with further words I thus bespake,

"What occupation do you there pursue? This is a lonesome place for one like you." Ere he replied, a flash of mild surprise Broke from the sable orbs of his yet-vivid eyes,

His words came feebly, from a feeble chest.

But each in solemn order followed each,

With something of a lofty utterance

Choice word and measured phrase,

above the reach

Of ordinary men; a stately speech; Such as grave Livers do in Scotland use, Religious men, who give to God and man their dues,

He told, that to these waters he had

To gather leeches, being old and poor; Employment hazardous and wearisome! And he had many hardships to endure; From pond to pond he roamed, from moor to moor;

Housing, with God's good help, by choice

or chance,

And in this way he gained an honest maintenance.

The old Man still stood talking by my side;

But now his voice to me was like a stream

Scarce heard; nor word from word could I divide;

And the whole body of the Man did seem Like one whom I had met with in a dream:

Or like a man from some far region sent, To give me human strength, by apt admonishment.

My former thoughts returned: the fear that kills;

And hope that is unwilling to be fed; Cold, pain, and labor, and all fleshly ills; And mighty Poets in their misery dead. —Perplexed, and longing to be comforted,

My question eagerly did I renew, "How is it that you live, and what is it you do?"

He with a smile did then his words repeat;

And said, that, gathering leeches, far and wide

He travelled; stirring thus about his

The waters of the pools where they abide.

"Once I could meet with them on every side;

But they have dwindled long by slow decay;

Yet still I persevere, and find them where I may."

While he was talking thus, the lonely place,

The old Man's shape, and speech—all troubled me:

In my mind's eye I seemed to see him pace

About the weary moors continually, Wandering about alone and silently. While I these thoughts within myself pursued,

He, having made a pause, the same discourse renewed.

And soon with this he other matter blended,

Cheerfully uttered, with demeanor kind, But stately in the main; and when he ended,

I could have laughed myself to scorn, to find

In that decrepit Man so firm a mind.

"God," said I, "be my help and stay secure;

I'll think of the Leech-gatherer on the lonely moor!" 1802. 1807.

I GRIEVED FOR BUONAPARTÉ

The direct influence of Milton seems evident in many of the following sonnets, and is confirmed by the entry in Dorothy Wordsworth's Journal, May 21, 1802: "William wrote two sonnets of Buonaparte, after I had read Milton's sonnets to him." See also Wordsworth's note on "Nuns fret not at their convent's narrow room." p. 48.

I GRIEVED for Buonaparté, with a vain And an unthinking grief! The tenderest mood

Of that Man's mind—what can it be? what food

Fed his first hopes? what knowledge could he gain?

'Tis not in battles that from youth we train

The Governor who must be wise and good,

And temper with the sternness of the brain

Thoughts motherly, and meek as womanhood.

Wisdom doth live with children round

her knees:
Books, leisure, perfect freedom, and the talk

Man holds with week-day man in the hourly walk

Of the mind's business: these are the degrees

By which true Sway doth mount; this is the stalk

True Power doth grow on; and her rights 1802. 1802. are these.

COMPOSED UPON WESTMINSTER BRIDGE, SEPTEMBER 3, 1802

"We left London on Saturday morning at half-past five or six, the 30th of July. We mounted the Dover coach at Charing Cross. It was a beautiful morning. The city, St. Paul's, with the river, and a multitude of little box, made a most beautiful sight as we crossed Westminster Bridge. The houses were not over-Westminster Bridge. The houses were not over-hung by their cloud of smoke, and they were spread out endlessly; yet the sun shone so brightly, with such a fierce light, that there was even something like the purity of one of nature's own grand spectacles." (Dorothy Wordsworth's Lange of Light 1999) Journal, July, 1802.)

EARTH has not anything to show more

Dull would be of soul who could pass by

A sight so touching in its majesty: This City now doth, like a garment,

The beauty of the morning; silent, bare, Ships, towers, domes, theatres and temples lie

Open unto the fields, and to the sky: All bright and glittering in the smokeless air.

Never did sun more beautifully steep In his first splendor, valley, rock, or Ne'er saw I, never felt, a calm so deen! The river glideth at his own sweet will: Dear God! the very houses seem asleep; And all that mighty heart is lying still! 1802. 1807.

COMPOSED BY THE SEA-SIDE, NEAR CALAIS, AUGUST, 1802

"We had delightful walks after the heat of the day was passed -seeing far off in the west the coast of England like a cloud crested with Dover Castle, which was but like the summit of the cloud -the evening star and the glory of the sky, the reflections in the water were more beautiful than the sky itself, purple waves brighter than precious stones, for ever melting away upon the sunds. Nothing in romance was ever half so beautiful. Now came in view, as the evening star sunk down, and the colors of the west falled away, the two lights of England." (Dorothy Wordsworth's Journal, August, 1802.)

FAIR Star of evening, Splendor of the Star of my Country !-- on the horizon's brink

Thou hangest, stooping, as might seem, to sink

On England's bosom; yet well pleased to rest.

Meanwhile, and be to her a glorious crest Conspicuous to the Nations, Thou, I

Should'st be my Country's emblem; and should'st wink.

Bright Star! with laughter on her banners, drest

In thy fresh beauty. There! that dusky

Beneath thee, that is England; there she

Blessings be on you both! one hope, one

One life, one glory !-I, with many a fear For my dear Country, many heartfelt

Among men who do not love her, linger 1802. 1807. here.

IT IS A BEAUTEOUS EVENING, CALM AND FREE

This was composed on the beach near Calais, in the autumn of 1802. (Wordsworth.)
The last six lines are addressed to Wordsworth's sister Dorothy. See note to the preceding Sonnet.

IT is a beauteous evening, calm and free, The holy time is quiet as a Nun-

Breathless with adoration; the broad sun Is sinking down in its tranquillity;

The gentleness of heaven broods o'er the

Listen! the mighty Being is awake,

And doth with his eternal motion make A sound like thunder—everlastingly. Dear Child! dear Girl! that walkest with me here.

If thou appear untouched by solemn thought.

Thy nature is not therefore less divine: Thou liest in Abraham's bosom all the year ;

And worship'st at the Temple's inner

God being with thee when we know it not. 1802, 1807,

ON THE EXTINCTION OF THE VENETIAN REPUBLIC

ONCE did She hold the gorgeous east in

And was the safeguard of the west: the worth

Of Venice did not fall below her birth, Venice, the eldest Child of Liberty.

She was a maiden City, bright and free; No guile seduced, no force could violate; And when she took unto herself a Mate, She must espouse the everlasting Sea.

And what if she had seen those glories fade.

Those titles vanish, and that strength decay;

Yet shall some tribute of regret be paid When her long life hath reached its final

Men are we, and must grieve when even the Shade

Of that which once was great, is passed away. 1802. 1807.

TO TOUSSAINT L'OUVERTURE

Toussaint, the most unhappy man of men!

Whether the whistling Rustic tend his plough

Within thy hearing, or thy head be now Pillowed in some deep dungeon's earless den:—

O miserable Chieftain! where and when Wilt thou find patience? Yet die not;

do thou
Wear rather in thy bonds a cheerful

brow:
Though fallen thyself, never to rise again, Live, and take comfort. Thou hast left behind

Powers that will work for thee; air,

earth, and skies;
There's not a breathing of the common wind wind

That will forget thee; thou hast great allies:

Thy friends are exultations, agonies, And love, and man's unconquerable mind. 1802. 1803.

NEAR DOVER, SEPTEMBER, 1802

Inland, within a hollow vale, I stood; And saw, while sea was calm and air was clear,

The coast of France—the coast of France how near!

Drawn almost into frightful neighborhood.

I shrunk; for verily the barrier flood Was like a lake, or river bright and fair, A span of waters; yet what power is there!

What mightiness for evil and for good! Even so doth God protect us if we be Virtuous and wise. Winds blow, and waters roll.

Strength to the brave, and Power, and Deity;

Yet in themselves are nothing! One decree

Spake laws to them, and said that by the soul

Only, the Nations shall be great and free. 1802. 1807.

WRITTEN IN LONDON, SEPTEMBER, 1802

This was written immediately after my return from France to London, when I could not but be struck, as here described, with the vanity and parade of our own country, especially in great towns and cities, as contrasted with the quiet, and I may say the desolation, that the revolution had produced in France. This must be borne in mind, or else the reader may think that in this and the succeeding Sonnets I have exaggerated the mischief engendered and fostered among us by undisturbed wealth. It would not be easy to conceive with what a depth of feeling I entered into the struggle carried on by the Spaniards for their deliverance from the usurped power of the French. Many times have I gone from Allan Bank in Grasmere vale, where we were then residing, to the top of the Raise-gap as it is called, so late as two o'clock in the morning, to meet the carrier bringing the newspaper from Keswick. Imperfect traces of the state of mind in which I then was may be found in my Tract on the Convention of Cintra, as well as in these Sonnets. (Wordsworth.)

O FRIEND! I know not which way I must look

For comfort, being, as I am, opprest,
To think that now our life is only drest
For show; mean handy-work of craftsman, cook,

Or groom!—We must run glittering like a brook

In the open sunshine, or we are unblest:
The wealthiest man among us is the best:

No grandeur now in nature or in book Delights us. Rapine, avarice, expense This idolatry: and these we adore ' Plain living and high thinking are no more:

The homely beauty of the good old

The homely beauty of the good old cause

Is gone; our peace, our fearful innocence,

And pure religion breathing household laws. 1802. 1807.

LONDON, 1802

Milton! thou shouldst be living at this

England hath need of thee; she is a fen Of stagnant waters: altar, sword, and

Fireside, the heroic wealth of hall and bower.

Have forfeited their ancient English dower

Of inward happiness. We are selfish men;

Oh! raise us up, return to us again;
And give us manners, virtue, freedom,
power.

Thy soul was like a Star, and dwelt apart:

Thou hadst a voice whose sound was like the sea:

Pure as the naked heavens, majestic,

So didst thou travel on life's common

In cheerful godliness; and yet thy heart The lowliest duties on herself did lay.

GREAT MEN HAVE BEEN AMONG US

GREAT men have been among us; hands that penned

And tongues that uttered wisdom—better none:

The later Sidney, Marvel, Harrington, Young Vane, and others who called Milton friend.

These moralists could act and comprehend:

They knew how genuine glory was put on:

Taught us how rightfully a nation shone
In splendor: what strength was, that would not bend

But in magnanimous meekness. France, 'tis strange,

Hath brought forth no such souls as we had then.

Perpetual emptiness! unceasing change! No single volume paramount, no code, No master spirit, no determined road; But equally a want of books and men! 1802, 1807.

IT IS NOT TO BE THOUGHT OF

It is not to be thought of that the Flood

Of British freedom, which, to the open sea

Of the world's praise, from dark an tiquity

Hath flowed, "with pomp of waters, unwithstood."

Roused though it be full often to a mood Which spurns the check of salutary bands,

That this most famous stream in bogs and sands

Should perish; and to evil and to good Be lost for ever. In our halls is hung Armory of the invincible Knights of old:

We must be free or die, who speak the tongue

That Shakspeare spake; the faith and morals hold

Which Milton held.—In everything we are sprung

Of Earth's first blood, have titles manifold. 1802 or 1803. April 16, 1803.

WHEN I HAVE BORNE IN MEMORY

When I have borne in memory what has tamed

Great Nations, how ennobling thoughts depart

When men change swords for ledgers, and desert

The student's bower for gold, some fears unnamed

I had, my Country!—am I to be blamed?

Now, when I think of thee, and what thou art,

Verily, in the bottom of my heart, Of those unfilial fears I am ashamed. For dearly must we prize thee; we who find

In thee a bulwark for the cause of men:
And I by my affection was beguiled:
What wonder if a Poet now and then,
Among the many movements of his

Felt for thee as a lover or a child!

1802 or 1803. Sept. 17, 1803.

TO HARTLEY COLERIDGE

SIX YEARS OLD

O THOU! whose fancies from afar are brought:

Who of thy words dost make a mock apparel,

And fittest to unutterable thought
The breeze-like motion and the selfborn carol;

Thou faery voyager! that dost float In such clear water, that thy boat May rather seem

To brood on air than on an earthly stream;

Suspended in a stream as clear as sky, Where earth and heaven do make one imagery;

O blessed vision! happy child! Thou art so exquisitely wild. I think of thee with many fears For what may be thy lot in future years. I thought of times when Pain might be thy guest, Lord of thy house and hospitality; And Grief, uneasy lover! never rest But when she sate within the touch of

thee.

O too industrious folly! O vain and causeless melancholy! Nature will either end thee quite; Or, lengthening out thy season of delight, Preserve for thee, by individual right, A young lamb's heart among the fullgrown flocks.

What hast thou to do with sorrow, Or the injuries of to-morrow? Thou art a dew-drop, which the morn brings forth,

Ill fitted to sustain unkindly shocks, Or to be trailed along the soiling earth: A gem that glitters while it lives, And no forewarning gives; But, at the touch of wrong, without a strife

Slips in a moment out of life.

1802. 1807.

TO THE DAISY

In youth from rock to rock I went, From hill to hill in discontent Of pleasure high and turbulent,

Most pleased when most uneasy; But now my own delights I make,-My thirst at every rill can slake, And gladly Nature's love partake, Of Thee, sweet Daisy!

Thee Winter in the garland wears That thinly decks his few gray hairs; Spring parts the clouds with softest airs,

That she may sun thee; Whole Summer-fields are thine by right; And Autumn, melancholy Wight! Doth in thy crimson head delight When rains are on thee.

In shoals and bands, a morrice train, Thou greet'st the traveller in the lane: Pleased at his greeting thee again: Yet nothing daunted, Nor grieved if thou be set at nought: And oft alone in nooks remote We meet thee, like a pleasant thought, When such are wanted.

Be violets in their secret mews The flowers the wanton Zephyrs choose: Proud be the rose, with rains and dews Her head impearling;

Thou liv'st with less ambitious aim, Yet hast not gone without thy fame: Thou art indeed by many a claim The Poet's darling.

If to a rock from rains he fly. Or, some bright day of April sky, Imprisoned by hot sunshine lie Near the green holly,

And wearily at length should fare; He needs but look about, and there Thou art!—a friend at hand, to scare His melancholy.

A hundred times, by rock or bower. Ere thus I have lain couched an hour, Have I derived from thy sweet power

Some apprehension; Some steady love; some brief delight; Some memory that had taken flight: Some chime of fancy wrong or right; Or stray invention.

If stately passions in me burn. And one chance look to Thee should turn, I drink out of an humbler urn

A lowlier pleasure; The homely sympathy that heeds The common life our nature breeds; A wisdom fitted to the needs Of hearts at leisure.

Fresh-smitten by the morning ray, When thou art up, alert and gay, Then, cheerful Flower! my spirits play

With kindred gladness: And when, at dusk, by dews opprest Thou sink'st, the image of thy rest Hath often eased my pensive breast Of careful sadness.

And all day long I number vet. All seasons through, another debt, Which I, wherever thou art met,

To thee am owing; An instinct call it, a blind sense; A happy, genial influence, Coming one knows not how, nor whence

Nor whither going.

Child of the Year! that round dost run Thy pleasant course,—when day's begun As ready to salute the sun

As lark or leveret. Thy long-lost praise thou shalt regain: Nor be less dear to future men Than in old time: thou not in vain Art Nature's favorite. 1 1802. 1807.

TO THE SAME FLOWER

With little here to do or see Of things that in the great world be, Daisy! again I talk to thee,

For thou art worthy, Thou unassuming Common-place Of Nature, with that homely face, And yet with something of a grace, Which Love makes for thee!

Oft on the dappled turf at ease I sit, and play with similes, Loose types of things through all degrees.

Thoughts of thy raising: And many a fond and idle name I give to thee, for praise or blame, As is the humor of the game, While I am gazing.

A nun demure of lowly port: Or sprightly maiden, of Love's court, In thy simplicity the sport

Of all temptations; A queen in crown of rubies drest: A starveling in a scanty vest; Are all, as seems to suit thee best, Thy appellations.

A little cyclops, with one eye Staring to threaten and defy. That thought comes next—and instantly The freak is over,

The shape will vanish—and behold A silver shield with boss of gold, That spreads itself, some faery bold In fight to cover!

I see thee glittering from afar— And then thou art a pretty star; Not quite so fair as many are In heaven above thee! Yet like a star, with glittering crest, Self-poised in air thou seem'st to rest; May peace come never to his nest, Who shall reprove thee!

See, in Chaucer and the elder Poets, the honors formerly paid to this flow (Wordsworth.)

Bright Flower! for by that name at last, When all my reveries are past, I call thee, and to that cleave fast,

Sweet silent creature! That breath'st with me in sun and air, Do thou, as thou art wont, repair My heart with gladness, and a share Of thy meek nature! 1802. 1807.

TO THE DAISY

BRIGHT Flower! whose home is every where.

Bold in maternal Nature's care, And all the long year through, the heir

Of joy or sorrow; Methinks that there abides in thee Some concord with humanity, Given to no other flower I see The forest thorough!

Is it that Man is soon deprest? A thoughtless Thing! who, once unblest.

Does little on his memory rest, Or on his reason. And Thou would'st teach him how to find A shelter under every wind. A hope for times that are unkind And every season?

Thou wander'st the wide world about, Unchecked by pride or scrupulous doubt, With friends to greet thee, or without,

Yet pleased and willing; Meek, yielding to the occasion's call, And all things suffering from all, Thy function apostolical 1802. 1807. In peace fulfilling.

THE GREEN LINNET

BENEATH these fruit-tree boughs that

Their snow-white blossoms on my head, With brightest sunshine round me spread

Of spring's unclouded weather, In this sequestered nook how sweet To sit upon my orchard-seat! And birds and flowers once more to greet,

My last year's friends together.

One have I marked, the happiest guest In all this covert of the blest: Hail to Thee, far above the rest In joy of voice and pinion!

Thou, Linnet! in thy green array, Presiding Spirit here to-day, Dost lead the revels of the May;

And this is thy dominion.

While birds, and butterflies, and flow-

Make all one band of paramours, Thou, ranging up and down the bowers. Art sole in thy employment:

A Life, a Presence like the Air. Scattering thy gladness without care, Too blest with any one to pair;

Thyself thy own enjoyment.

Amid you tuft of hazel trees, That twinkle to the gusty breeze, Behold him perched in ecstasies,

Yet seeming still to hover; There! where the flutter of his wings Upon his back and body flings Shadows and sunny glimmerings,

That cover him all over.

My dazzled sight he oft deceives, A Brother of the dancing leaves; Then flits, and from the cottage-eaves Pours forth his song in gushes; As if by that exulting strain

He mocked and treated with disdain The voiceless Form he chose to feign, While fluttering in the bushes.

1803. 1807.

YEW-TREES

Compare the note on A Night-Piece.

THERE is a Yew-tree, pride of Lorton Vale.

Which to this day stands single, in the midst

Of its own darkness, as it stood of yore;

Not loth to furnish weapons for the bands

Of Umfraville or Percy ere they marched To Scotland's heaths; or those that crossed the sea

And drew their sounding bows at Azincour,

Perhaps at earlier Crecy, or Poictiers. Of vast circumference and gloom profound

This solitary Tree! a living thing Produced too slowly ever to decay; Of form and aspect too magnificent To be destroyed. But worthier still of note Are those fraternal Four of Borrowdale, Joined in one solemn and capacious grove;

Huge trunks; and each particular trunk

a growth
Of intertwisted fibres serpentine

Up-coiling, and inveterately convolved;
Nor uninformed with Phantasy, and looks

That threaten the profane;—a pillared shade.

Upon whose grassless floor of red-brown hue.

By sheddings from the pining umbrage tinged

Perennially—beneath whose sable roof Of boughs, as if for festal purpose, decked

With unrejoicing berries—ghostly Shapes

May meet at noontide; Fear and trembling Hope.

Silence and Foresight; Death the Skeleton

And Time the Shadow;—there to celebrate.

As in a natural temple controvel elem

As in a natural temple scattered o'er With altars undisturbed of mossy stone, United worship; or in mute repose To lie, and listen to the mountain flood Murmuring from Glaramara's inmost caves.

AT THE GRAVE OF BURNS

1803

SEVEN YEARS AFTER HIS DEATH

For illustration, see my Sister's Journal. (Wordsworth).

At thought of what I now behold:
As vapors breathed from dungeons

Strike pleasure dead,
So sadness comes from out the mould
Where Burns is laid.

cold.

And have I then thy bones so near, And thou forbidden to appear? As if it were thyself that's here I shrink with pain;

And both my wishes and my fear Alike are vain.

Off weight—nor press on weight.—away

Dark thoughts!—they came, but not to stay;

With chastened feelings would I pay
The tribute due

To him, and aught that hides his clay From mortal view.

Fresh as the flower, whose modest worth He sang, his genius "glinted" forth, Rose like a star that touching earth, For so it seems,

Doth glorify its humble birth With matchless beams.

The piercing eye, the thoughtful brow, The struggling heart, where be they now?—

Full soon the Aspirant of the plough,
The prompt, the brave,

Slept, with the obscurest, in the low And silent grave.

I mourned with thousands, but as one More deeply grieved, for He was gone Whose light I hailed when first it shone, And showed my youth

How Verse may build a princely throne On humble truth.

Alas! where'er the current tends, Regret pursues and with it blends,— Huge Criffel's hoary top ascends By Skiddaw seen.—

Neighbors we were, and loving friends We might have been;

True friends though diversely inclined; But heart with heart and mind with mind,

Where the main fibres are entwined, Through Nature's skill,

May even by contraries be joined More closely still.

The tear will start, and let it flow; Thou "poor Inhabitant below," At this dread moment—even so— Might we together

Have sate and talked where gowans blow,

Or on wild heather.

What treasures would have then been placed

Within my reach; of knowledge graced By fancy what a rich repast!

Oh! spare to sweep, thou mournful blast,

His grave grass-grown.

There, too, a Son, his joy and pride, (Not three weeks past the Stripling died,)

Lies gathered to his Father's side, Soul-moving sight!

Yet one to which is not denied Some sad delight:

For he is safe, a quiet bed Hath early found among the dead, Harbored where none can be misled, Wronged, or distrest;

And surely here it may be said That such are blest.

And oh for Thee, by pitying grace Checked oft-times in a devious race, May He who halloweth the place

Where Man is laid Receive thy Spirit in the embrace For which it prayed!

Sighing I turned away; but ere Night fell I heard, or seemed to hear, Music that sorrow comes not near, A ritual hymn.

Chanted in love that casts out fear By Seraphim.

TO A HIGHLAND GIRL

AT INVERSNEYDE, UPON LOCH LOMOND

This delightful creature and her demeanor are particularly described in my Sister's Journal. (Wordsworth.)

Sweet Highland Girl, a very shower Of beauty is thy earthly dower! Twice seven consenting years have shed Their utmost bounty on thy head: And these gray rocks; that household lawn;

Those trees, a veil just half withdrawn; This fall of water that doth make A murmur near the silent lake; This little bay; a quiet road That holds in shelter thy Abode-In truth together do ye seem Like something fashioned in a dream: Such Forms as from their covert peep When earthly cares are laid asleep! But, O fair Creature! in the light Of common day, so heavenly bright, I bless Thee, Vision as thou art I bless thee with a human heart; God shield thee to thy latest years! Thee neither know I, nor thy peers; And yet my eyes are filled with tears.

With earnest feeling I shall pray For thee when I am far away: For never saw I mien, or face, In which more plainly I could trace Benignity and home-bred sense Ripening in perfect innocence. Here scattered, like a random seed, Remote from men, Thou dost not need The embarrassed look of shy distress, And maidenly shamefacedness: Thou wear'st upon thy forehead clear The freedom of a Mountaineer: A free with gladness overspread ! Soft smiles, by human kindness bred! And seemliness complete, that swavs Thy courtesies, about thee plays; With no restraint, but such as springs From quick and eager visitings Of thoughts that lie beyon I the reach Of thy few words of English speech: A bondage sweetly brooked, a strife That gives thy gestures grace and life! So have I, not unmoved in mind, Seen birds of tempest-loving kind-Thus beating up against the wind.

What hand but would a garland cull For thee who art so beautiful? O happy pleasure! here to dwell Beside thee in some heathy dell; Adopt your homely ways, and dress, A Shepherd, thou a Shepherdess! But I could frame a wish for thee More like a grave reality: Thou art to me but as a wave Of the wild sea; and I would have Some claim upon thee, if I could, Though but of common neighborhood. What joy to hear thee, and to see! Thy elder Brother I would be, Thy Father--anything to thee! Now thanks to Heaven! that of its Hath led me to this lonely place. Joy have I had; and going hence I bear away my recompense. In spots like these it is we prize Our Memory, feel that she hath eyes: Then, why should I be loth to stir? I feel this place was made for her; To give new pleasure like the past, Continued long as life shall last. Noram I loth, though pleased at heart, Sweet Highland Girl! from thee to part: For I, methinks, till I grow old, As fair before me shall behold. As I do now, the cabin small, The lake, the bay, the waterfall; And Thee, the spirit of them all! 1803. 1807.

STEPPING WESTWARD

While my Fellow-traveller and I were walking by the side of Loch Ketterine, one fine evening after sunset, in our road to a Hut where, in the course of our Tour, we had been hospitably entertained some weeks before, we met, in one of the loneliest parts of that solitary region, two well-dressed Women, one of whom said to us by way of greeting, "What, you are stepping westward?" (Wordsworth.)

"What, you are stepping westward?"
-- Yea."

—'Twould be a wildish destiny,
If we, who thus together roam
In a strange Land, and far from home,
Were in this place the guests of Chance:
Yet who would stop, or fear to advance
Though home or shelter he had none,
With such a sky to lead him on?

The dewy ground was dark and cold; Behind, all gloomy to behold; And stepping westward seemed to be A kind of heavenly destiny: I liked the greeting; 't was a sound Of something without place or bound; And seemed to give me spiritual right To travel through that region bright.

The voice was soft, and she who spake Was walking by her native lake:
The salutation had to me
The very sound of courtesy:
Its power was felt; and while my eye
Was fixed upon the glowing Sky,
The echo of the voice enwrought
A human sweetness with the thought
Of travelling through the world that lay
Before me in my endless way.

1803. 1807.

THE SOLITARY REAPER

BEHOLD her, single in the field, Yon solitary Highland Lass! Reaping and singing by herself; Stop here, or gently pass! Alone she cuts and binds the grain, And sings a melancholy strain; O listen! for the Vale profound Is overflowing with the sound.

No Nightingale did ever chant
More welcome notes to weary bands
Of travellers in some shady haunt,
Among Arabian sands:
A voice so thrilling ne'er was heard
In spring-time from the Cuckoo-bird,
Breaking the silence of the seas
Among the farthest Hebrides.

Will no one tell me what she sings?—Perhaps the plaintive numbers flow For old, unhappy, far-off things, And battles long ago:
Or is it some more humble lay, Familiar matter of to-day?
Some natural serrow, loss, or pain, That has been, and may be again?

Whate'er the theme, the maiden sang As if her song could have no ending; I saw her singing at her work, And o'er the sickle bending:—
I listened, motionless and still; And, as I mounted up the hill
The music in my heart I bore,
Long after it was heard no more.

OM TIMINGTON

YARROW UNVISITED

See the various Poems the scene of which is laid upon the banks of the Yarrow; in particular, the exquisite Ballad of Hamilton beginning "Busk ye, busk ye, my bonny, bonny Bride Busk ye, busk ye, my winsome Marrow!—" (Wordsworth).

From Stirling castle we had seen The mazy Forth unravelled; Had trod the banks of Clyde, and Tay, And with the Tweed had travelled; And when we came to Clovenford, Then said my "winsome Marrow," "Whate'er betide, we'll turn aside, And see the Braes of Yarrow,"

"Let Yarrow folk, frae Selkirk town, Who have been buying, selling, Go back to Yarrow, 'tis their own; Each maiden to her dwelling! On Yarrow's banks let herons feed, Hares couch, and rabbits burrow! But we will downward with the Tweed, Nor turn aside to Yarrow.

"There's Galla Water, Leader Haughs, Both lying right before us; And Dryborough, where with chiming

Tweed
The lintwhites sing in chorus:
There's pleasant Tiviot-dale, a land
Made blithe with plough and harrow:
Why throw away a needful day
To go in search of Yarrow?

"What's Yarrow but a river bare, That glides the dark hills under? There are a thousand such elsewhere As worthy of your wonder." -Strange words they seemed of slight and scorn My True-love sighed for sorrow;

My True-love sighed for sorrow;
And looked me in the face, to think
I thus could speak of Yarrow!

"Oh! green," said I, "are Yarrow's holms,

And sweet is Yarrow flowing!
Fair hangs the apple frae the rock,
But we will leave it growing.
O'er hilly path, and open Strath,
We'll wander Scotland thorough;
But, though so near, we will not turn
Into the dale of Yarrow.

"Let beeves and home-bred kine partake The sweets of Burn-mill meadow; The swan on still St. Mary's Lake Float double, swan and shadow! We will not see them; will not go, To-day, nor yet to-morrow, Enough if in our hearts we know There's such a place as Yarrow.

"Be Yarrow stream unseen, unknown! It must, or we shall rue it: We have a vision of our own; Ah! why should we undo it? The treasured dreams of times long past, We'll keep them, winsome Marrow! For when we're there, although 'tis fair.' Twill be another Yarrow!

"If Care with freezing years should come,

And wandering seem but folly,—
Should we be loth to stir from home,
And yet be melancholy;
Should life be full and spirits low,
'Twill soothe us in our sorrow,
That earth has something yet to show,
The bonny holms of Yarrow!"

ODE

INTIMATIONS OF IMMORTALITY FROM REC-OLLECTIONS OF EARLY CHILDHOOD

"In my Ode on the Intinations of Immortality in Childhood, I do not profess to give a literal representation of the state of the affections and of the moral being in childhood. I record my own feetings at that time my absolute spirituality, my "all southess," if I may so speak. At that time I could not believe that I should lie down quietly in the grave, and that my body would moulder into dust." (Knight's Wordsworth, II, 326. See also, in the Encyclopadia Britannica, the article "Poetry.")

There was a time when meadow, grove, and stream,

The earth, and every common sight, To me did seem Apparelled in celestial light. The glory and the freshness of a dream. It is not now as it hath been of yore; -

Turn whereso'er I may. By night or day,

The things which I have seen I now can see no more.

The Rainbow comes and goes, And lovely is the Rose, The Moon doth with delight

Look round her when the heavens are

Waters on a starry night Are beautiful and fair: The sunshine is a glorious birth: But vet I know, where'er I go, That there hath past away a glory from the earth.

TII

Now, while the birds thus sing a joyous song,

And while the young lambs bound As to the tabor's sound,

To me alone there came a thought of grief;

A timely utterance gave that thought relief.

And I again am strong:

The cataracts blow their trumpets from the steep;

No more shall grief of mine the season wrong;

I hear the Echoes through the mountains throng.

The Winds come to me from the fields of sleep.

And all the earth is gay;

Land and sea Give themselves up to jollity,

And with the heart of May Doth every Beast keep holiday :-Thou Child of Joy,

Shout round me, let me hear thy shouts, thou happy Shepherd-boy!

Ye blessed Creatures, I have heard the call

Ye to each other make; I see

The heavens laugh with you in your jubilee;

My heart is at your festival, My head hath its coronal.

The fulness of your bliss, I feel I feel it all.

Oh evil day! if I were sullen While Earth herself is adorning. This sweet May-morning.

And the Children are culling On every side,

In a thousand valleys far and wide. Fresh flowers; while the sun shines

And the Babe leaps up on his Mother's

I hear, I hear, with joy I hear! -But there's a Tree, of many, one. A single Field which I have looked upon.

Both of them speak of something that is gone: The Pansy at my feet Doth the same tale repeat: Whither is fled the visionary gleam? Where is it now, the glory and the dream?

Our birth is but a sleep and a forget-

The Soul that rises with us, our life's Star. Hath had elsewhere its setting.

And cometh from afar: Not in entire forgetfulness, And not in utter nakedness,

But trailing clouds of glory do we come From God, who is our home: Heaven lies about us in our infancy!

Shades of the prison-house begin to close

Upon the growing Boy,

But he beholds the light, and whence it

He sees it in his joy:

The Youth, who daily farther from the

Must travel, still is Nature's Priest, And by the vision splendid Is on his way attended;

At length the Man perceives it die away.

And fade into the light of common day.

Earth fills her lap with pleasures of her own:

Yearnings she hath in her own natural kind.

And, even with something of a Mother's mind.

And no unworthy aim.

The homely Nurse doth all she can To make her Foster-child, her Inmate Man,

Forget the glories he hath known, And that imperial palace whence he came.

VII

Behold the Child among his new-born blisses,

A six years' Darling of a pigmy size!
See, where 'mid work of his own hand he lies.

Fretted by sallies of his mother's kisses, With light upon him from his father's

See, at his feet, some little plan or chart.

Some fragment from his dream of human life,

Shaped by himself with newly-learned art:

A wedding or a festival,

A mourning or a funeral; And this hath now his heart.

And unto this he frames his song:
Then will he fit his tongue

To dialogues of business, love, or strife; But it will not be long Ere this be thrown aside,

And with new joy and pride
The little Actor cons another part;

Filling from time to time his "bumorous stage"

With all the Persons, down to palsied Age,

That Life brings with her in her equipage;

As if his whole vocation Were endless imitation.

VIII

Thou, whose exterior semblance doth belie

Thy Soul's immensity;

Thou best Philosopher, who yet dost

Thy heritage, thou Eve among the blind,

That, deaf and silent, read'st the eternal deep,

Haunted for ever by the eternal mind,— Mighty Prophet! Seer blest! On whom those truths do rest.

Which we are toiling all our lives to

In darkness lost, the darkness of the grave;

Thou, over whom thy Immortality Broods like the Day, a Master o'er a Slave.

A Presence which is not to be put by;

Thou little Child, yet glorious in the might

Of heaven-born freedom on thy being's height,

Why with such earnest pains dost thou provoke

The years to bring the inevitable yoke.
Thus blindly with thy blessedness at strife?

Full soon thy Soul shall have her earthly freight,

And custom lie upon thee with a weight,

Heavy as frost, and deep almost as life!

IX

O joy! that in our embers Is something that doth live, That nature yet remembers What was so fugitive!

The thought of our past years in me doth breed

Perpetual benediction: not indeed

For that which is most worthy to be blest—

Delight and liberty, the simple creed Of Childhood, whether busy or at rest. With new-fledged hope still fluttering in his breast:—

Not for these I raise

The song of thanks and praise; But for those obstinate questionings

Of sense and outward things, Fallings from us, vanishings; Blank misgivings of a Creature

Moving about in worlds not realized, High instincts before which our mortal Nature

Did tremble like a guilty Thing surprised:

But for those first affections.

Those shadowy recollections,
Which, be they what they may,

Are yet the fountain light of all our day. Are yet a master light of all our seeing; Uphold us, cherish, and have power to make Our noisy years seem moments in the being

Of the eternal Silence: truths that wake,

To perish never;

Which neither listlessness, nor mad endeavor,

Nor Man nor Boy,

Nor all that is at enmity with joy, Can utterly abolish or destroy!

Hence in a season of calm weather Though inland far we be, Our Souls have sight of that immortal sea

Which brought us hither,

Can in a moment travel thither,
And see the Children sport upon the shore,

And hear the mighty waters rolling evermore.

X

Then sing, ye Birds, sing, sing a joyous song!

And let the young Lambs bound As to the tabor's sound!

We in thought will join your throng, Ye that pipe and ye that play, Ye that through your hearts to-day Feel the gladness of the May!

What though the radiance which was once so bright

Be now forever taken from my sight, Though nothing can bring back the

Of splender in the grass, of glory in the flower; We will grieve not, rather find Strength in what remains behind; In the primal sympathy

Which having been must ever be; In the soothing thoughts that spring Out of human suffering;

In the faith that looks through death.

In years that bring the philosophic mind.

IX

And O ye Fountains, Meadows, Hills, and Groves,

Forebode not any severing of our loves! Yet in my heart of hearts I feel your might;

I only have relinquished one delight
To live beneath your more habitual sway.

I love the Brooks which down their channels fret,

Even more than when I tripped lightly as they;

The innocent brightness of a new-born Day

Is lovely yet;

The Clouds that gather round the setting sun

Do take a soher coloring from an eye
That hath kept watch o'er man's mortality;

Another race hath been, and other palms are won.

Thanks to the human heart by which we live,

Thanks to its tenderness, its joys, and fears,

To me the meanest flower that blows can give

Thoughts that do often lie too deep for tears. 1803-6, 1807.

TO THE CUCKOO

O BLITHE New-comer! I have heard, I hear thee and rejoice.
O Cuckoo! shall I call thee Bird,
Or but a wandering Voice?

While I am lying on the grass Thy twofold shout I hear, From hill to hill it seems to pass, At once far off, and near.

Though babbling only to the Vale, Of sunshine and of flowers, Thou bringest unto me a tale Of visionary hours.

Thrice welcome, darling of the Spring! Even yet thou art to me No bird, but an invisible thing, A voice, a mystery;

The same whom in my school-boy days I listened to; that Cry Which made me look a thousand ways In bush, and tree, and sky.

To seek thee did I often rove Through woods and on the green; And thou wert still a hope, a love; Still longed for, never seen.

And I can listen to thee yet; Can lie upon the plain And listen, till I do beget That golden time again.

O blessèd Bird! the earth we pace Again appears to be An unsubstantial, faery place; That is fit home for Thee!

SHE WAS A PHANTOM OF DELIGHT

Written at Town-end, Grasmere. The germ of this poem was four lines composed as a part of the verses on the Highland Girl. Though beginning in this way, it was written from my heart, as is sufficiently obvious. (Wordsworth.)

SHE was a Phantom of delight
When first she gleamed upon my sight;

A lovely Apparition sent
To be a moment's ornament;
Her eyes asstars of Twilight fair;
Like Twilight's, too, her dusky hair;
But all things else about her drawn
From May-time and the cheerful Dawn;
A dancing Shape, an Image gay,
To haunt, to startle, and way-lay.

I saw her upon nearer view,
A Spirit, yet a Woman too!
Her household motions light and free,
And steps of virgin-liberty;
A countenance in which did meet
Sweet records, promises as sweet;
A Creature not too bright or good
For human nature's daily food;
For transient sorrows, simple wiles,
Praise, blame, love, kisses, tears and smiles.

And now I see with eye serene
The very pulse of the machine;
A Being breathing thoughtful breath,
A Traveller between life and death;
The reason firm, the temperate will,
Endurance, foresight, strength, and skill:

A perfect Woman, nobly planned, To warn, to comfort, and command; And yet a Spirit still, and bright With something of angelic light. 1804. 1807.

I WANDERED LONELY AS A CLOUD

Written at Town-end, Grasmere. The Daffodils grew and still grow on the margin of Ullswater, and probably may be seen to this day as beautiful in the month of March, nodding their golden heads beside the dancing and foaming waves. (Wordsworth.)

I WANDERED lonely as a cloud That floats on high o'er vales and hills, When all at once I saw a crowd, A host, of golden daffodils; Beside the lake, beneath the trees, Fluttering and dancing in the breeze.

Continuous as the stars that shine And twinkle on the milky way, They stretched in never-ending line Along the margin of a bay: Ten thousand saw Lat a glance, Tossing their heads in sprightly dance.

The waves beside them danced; but they
Out-did the sparkling waves in glee:
A poet could not but be gay,

In such a jocund company:
I gazed—and gazed—but little thought
What wealth the show to me had brought:

For oft, when on my couch I lie In vacant or in pensive mood, They flash upon that inward eye Which is the bliss of solitude; And then my heart with pleasure fills, And dances with the daffodils.

THE AFFLICTION OF MARGARET

Written at Town-end, Grasmere. This was taken from the case of a poor widow who lived in the town of Penrith. Her sorrow was well known to Mrs. Wordsworth, to my Sister, and, I believe, to the whole town. She kept a shop, and when she saw a stranger passing by, she was in the habit of going out into the street to sniquire of him after her son. (Wordsworth.)

Where art thou, my beloved Son, Where art thou, worse to me than dead? Oh find me, prosperous or undone! Or, if the grave be now thy bed, Why am I ignorant of the same, That I may rest, and neither blame Nor sorrow may attend thy name?

Seven years, alas! to have received No tidings of an only child; To have despaired, have hoped, believed, And been for evermore beguiled; Sometimes with thoughts of very bliss! I catch at them, and then I miss; Was ever darkness like to this?

He was among the prime in worth, An object beauteous to behold; Well born, well bred; I sent him forth Ingenuous, innocent, and bold: If things ensued that wanted grace, As hath been said, they were not base; And never blush was on my face.

Ah! little doth the young one dream, When full of play and childish cares, What power is in his wildest scream, Heard by his mother unawares! He knows it not, he cannot guess: Years to a mother bring distress; But do not make her love the less.

Neglect me! no. I suffered long From that ill thought; and, being blind, Said, "Prideshall help me in my wrong; Kind mother have I been, as kind As ever breathed:" and that is true; I've wet my path with tears like dew, Weeping for him when no one knew. My Son, if thou be humbled, poor, Hopeless of honor and of gain, Oh! do not dread thy mother's door; Think not of me with grief and pain: I now can see with better eyes; And worldly grandeur I despise, And fortune with her gifts and lies.

Alas! the fowls of heaven have wings, And blasts of heaven will aid their flight; They mount—how short a voyage brings The wanderers back to their delight! Chains tie us down by land and sea; And wishes, vain as mine, may be All that is left to comfort thee.

Perhaps some dungeon hears thee groan, Maimed, mangled by inhuman men; Or thou upon a desert thrown Inheritest the lion's den; Or hast been summoned to the deep, Thou, thou and all thy mates, to keep An incommunicable sleep.

I look for ghosts; but none will force Their way to me: 'tis falsely said That there was ever intercourse Between the living and the dead; For, surely, then I should have sight Of him I wait for day and night, With love and longings infinite.

My apprehensions come in crowds; I dread the rustling of the grass; The very shadows of the clouds Have power to shake me as they pass: I question things and do not find One that will answer to my mind; And all the world appears unkind.

Beyond participation lie
My troubles, and beyond relief:
If any chance to heave a sigh,
They pity me, and not my grief.
Then come to me, my Son, or send
Some tidings that my woes may end;
I have no other earthly friend!

ODE TO DUTY

Stern Daughter of the Voice of God!
O Duty! if that name thou love
Who art a light to guide, a rod
To check the erring, and reprove;
Thou, who art victory and law
When empty terrors overawe:
From vain temptations dost set free:
And calm'st the weary strife of frail humanity!

There are who ask not if thine eye
Be on them; who, in love and truth
Where no misgiving is, rely
Upon the genial sense of youth:
Glad Hearts! without reproach or blot
Who do thy work, and know it not:
Oh! if through confidence misplaced
They fail, thy saving arms, dread
Power! around them cast.

Serene will be our days and bright,
And happy will our nature be,
When love is an unerring light,
And joy its own security.
And they a blissful course may hold
Even now, who, not unwisely bold,
Live in the spirit of this creed;
Yet seek thy firm support, according to their need.

I, loving freedom, and untried,
No sport of every random gust,
Yet being to myself a guide,
Too blindly have reposed my trust:
And oft, when in my heart was heard
Thy timely mandate, I deferred
The task, in smoother walks to stray;
But thee I now would serve more strictly, if I may.

Through no disturbance of my soul,
Or strong compunction in me wrought,
I supplicate for thy control;
But in the quietness of thought:
Me this unchartered freedom tires;
I feel the weight of chance-desires:
My hopes no more must change their name.

I long for a repose that ever is the same.

Stern Lawgiver! yet thou dost wear
The Godhead's most benignant grace;
Nor know we anything so fair
As is the smile upon thy face:
Flowers laugh before thee on their beds
And fragrance in thy footing treads;
Thou dost preserve the stars from wrong;
And the most ancient heavens, through
Thee, are fresh and strong.

To humbler functions, awful Power! I call thee: I myself commend Unto thy guidance from this hour; Oh, let my weakness have an end! Give unto me, made lowly wise, The spirit of self-sacrifice; The confidence of reason give; And in the light of truth thy Bondman let me live! 1805. 1807.

TO A SKY-LARK

Up with me! up with me into the clouds! For thy song, Lark, is strong;

Up with me, up with me into the clouds! Singing, singing,

With clouds and sky about thee ringing Lift me, guide me till I find

That spot which seems so to thy mind!

1 have walked through wildernesses dreary

And to-day my heart is weary; Had I now the wings of a Faery,

Up to thee would I fly.

There is madness about thee, and joy divine

In that song of thine:

Lift me, guide me high and high To thy banqueting-place in the sky.

Joyous as morning
Thou art laughing and scorning;

Thou hast a nest for thy love and thy rest.

And, though little troubled with sloth, Drunken Lark! thou would'st be loth To be such a traveller as I.

Happy, happy Liver, With a soul as strong as a mountain

Pouring out praise to the Almighty Giver.

Joy and jollity be with us both!

Alas! my journey, rugged and uneven, Through prickly moors or dusty ways must wind;

But hearing thee, or others of thy kind, As full of gladness and as free of heaven,

I, with my fate contented, will plod on, And hope for higher raptures, when life's day is done. 1805. 1807.

ELEGIAC STANZAS

SUGGESTED BY A PICTURE OF PEELE CASTLE, IN A STORM, PAINTED BY SIR GEORGE BEAUMONT

I was thy neighbor once, thou rugged Pile!

Four summer weeks I dwelt in sight of thee:

I saw thee every day; and all the while Thy Form was sleeping on a glassy sea. So pure the sky, so quiet was the air! So like, so very like, was day to day! Whene'er I looked, thy Image still was there:

It trembled, but it never passed away.

How perfect was the calm! it seemed no sleep:

No mood, which season takes away, or brings:

I could have fancied that the mighty Deep

Was even the gentlest of all gentle Things.

Ah! THEN, if mine had been the Painter's hand,

To express what then I saw; and add the gleam,

The light that never was, on sea or land.

The consecration, and the Poet's dream;

I would have planted thee, thou hoary

Amid a world how different from this!
Beside a sea that could not cease to smile:

On tranquil land, beneath a sky of bliss.

Thou shouldst have seemed a treasurehouse divine

Of peaceful years; a chronicle of heaven:—

Of all the sunbeams that did ever shine.

The very sweetest had to thee been given.

A picture had it been of lasting ease, Elysian quiet, without toil or strife; No motion but the moving tide, a breeze, Or merely silent Nature's breathing life.

Such, in the fond illusion of my heart, Such Picture would I at that time have made:

And seen the soul of truth in every part, A steadfast peace that might not be betrayed.

So once it would have been,—'tis so no more;

I have submitted to a new control:

A power is gone, which nothing can restore;

A deep distress hath humanized my Soul.

Not for a moment could I now behold A smiling sea, and be what I have been: The feeling of my loss will ne'er be old; This, which I know, I speak with mind serene.

Then, Beau nont, Frient! who would have been the Friend,

If he had lived, of Him whom I deplore, This work of thine I blame not, but commend:

This sea in anger, and that dismal shore.

9 tis a passionate Work !—yet wise and well.

Well chosen in the spirit that is here:
That Hulk which labors in the deadly

This rueful sky, this pageantry of fear!

And this hage Castle, standing here sublime,

I love to see the look with which it braves.

ased in the unfeeling armor of old time.

The lightning, the flerce wind, and trampling waves.

Farewell, farewell the heart that lives alone,

House I in a dream, at distance from the Kind!

Such happiness, wherever it be known, Is to be pitied; for 't is surely blind.

But welcome fortitude, and patient cheer,

And frequent sights of what is to be borne!

Such sights, or worse, as are before me here.—

Not without hope we suffer and we mourn. 1807. 1807.

TO A YOUNG LADY

WHO HAD BEEN REPROACHED FOR TAK-ING LONG WALKS IN THE COUNTRY

DEAR Child of Nature, let them rail!

There is a nest in a green dale,
A harbor and a hold;

Where thou, a Wife and Friend, shalt

Thy own heart-stirring days, and be A light to young and old.

There, healthy as a shepherd boy, And treading among flowers of joy Which at no season fade, Thou, while thy babes around thee cling Shalt show us how divine a thing

A Woman may be made.

Thy thoughts and feelings shall not die Nor leave thee, when gray hairs are nigh A melancholy slave; But an old age serene and bright,

And lovely as a Lapland night, Shall lead thee to thy grave.

FRENCH REVOLUTION

AS IT APPEARED TO ENTHUSIASTS AT ITS COMMENCEMENT

An extract from the long poem of my own postical education. It was first published by Coloridge in his "Friend," which is the reason of its having hal a place in every edition of my poems since. (Wordsworth.) From The Prelude, Bk. XI.

On! pleasant exercise of hope and joy!
For mighty were the auxiliars which then stood

Upon our side, we who were strong in love!

Bliss was it in that dawn to be alive,
But to be young was very heaven!—
Oh! times.

In which the meagre, stale, forbidding ways

Of custom, law, and statute, took at once The attraction of a country in romance! When Reason seemed the most to assert her rights.

When most intent on making of herself A prime Enchantress—to assist the work, Which then was going forward in her

Not favored spots alone, but the whole

The beauty wore of promise, that which sets

(As at some moment might not be unfelt Among the bowers of paradise itself)

The budding rose above the rose full blown.

What temper at the prospect did not wake

To happiness unthought of? The inert Were roused, and lively natures rapt away!

They who had fed their childhood upon dreams.

The playfellows of fancy, who had made All powers of swiftness, subtilty, and strength Their ministers,—who in lordly wise had stirred

Among the grandest objects of the sense, And dealt with whatsoever they found there

As if they had within some lurking right To wield it;—they, too, who, of gentle mood,

Had watched all gentle motions, and to

Had fitted their own thoughts, schemers more mild.

And in the region of their peaceful selves;—

Now was it that both found, the meek and lofty

Did both find, helpers to their heart's desire,

And stuff at hand, plastic as they could wish:

Were called upon to exercise their skill, Not in Utopia, subterranean fields, Or some secreted island, Heaven knows where! But in the very world, which is the world

Of all of us.—the place where in the end

Of all of us,—the place where in the end We find our happiness, or not at all! 1804. October 26, 1809.

CHARACTER OF THE HAPPY WARRIOR

Suggested in part by an event which all England was lamenting—the death of Lord Nelson—and in part by the personal loss, which he still felt so keenly, his brother John's removal. On the 4th of February, 1806, Southey wrote thus to Sir Walter Scott:... Wordsworth was with me last week; he has been of late more employed in correcting his poems than in writting others; but one piece he has written, upon the ideal character of a soldier, than which I have never seen anything more full of meaning and sound thought. The subject was suggested by Nelson's most glorious death...? (Knight, Life of Wordsworth, 11, 46-7.)

Who is the happy Warrior? Who is he That every man in arms should wish to be?

-It is the generous Spirit, who, when brought

Among the tasks of real life, hath wrought

Upon the plan that pleased his boyish thought:

Whose high endeavors are an inward light

That makes the path before him always bright:

Who, with a natural instinct to discern

What knowledge can perform, is diligent to learn;

Abides by this resolve, and stops not there,

But makes his moral being his prime care:

Who, doomed to go in company with Pain,

And Fear, and Bloodshed, miserable train!

Turns his necessity to glorious gain; In face of these doth exercise a power

Which is our human nature's highest dower;

Controls them and subdues, transmutes, bereaves

Of their bad influence, and their good receives:

By objects, which might force the soul to abate

Her feeling, rendered more compassionate;

Is placable—because occasions rise So often that demand such sacrifice; More skilful in self-knowledge, even more pure,

As tempted more; more able to endure,
As more exposed to suffering and distress:

Thence, also, more alive to tenderness.

—Tis he whose law is reason; who depends

Upon that law as on the best of friends; Whence, in a state where men are tempted still

To evil for a guard against worse ill, And what in quality or act is best

Doth seldom on a right foundation rest, He labors good on good to fix, and owes To virtue every triumph that he knows: —Who, if he rise to station of command, Rises by open means; and there will stand

On honorable terms, or else retire,

And in himself possess his own desire; Who comprehends his trust, and to the same

Keeps faithful with a singleness of aim; And therefore does not stoop, nor lie in wait

For wealth, or honors, or for worldly state;

Whom they must follow; on whose head must fall,

Like showers of manna, if they come at all:

Whose powers shed round him in the common strife,

Or mild concerns of ordinary life,

A constant influence, a peculiar grace;
But who, if he be called upon to face
Some awful moment to which Heaven has joined

Great issues, good or bad for human kind.

Is happy as a Lover; and attired

With sudden brightness, like a Man inspired;

And, through the heat of conflict, keeps

In calmness made, and sees what he foresaw;

Or if an unexpected call succeed, Come when it will, is equal to the need: —He who, though thus endued as with a sense

And faculty for storm and turbulence, Is yet a Soul whose master-bias leans To homefelt pleasures and to gentle scenes:

Sweet images! which, wheresoe'er he

Are at his heart; and such fidelity
It is his darling passion to approve;
More brave for this, that he hath much to love:—

'Tis, finally, the Man, who, lifted high, Conspicuous object in a Nation's eye, Or left unthought-of in obscurity,—Who, with a toward or untoward lot, Prosperous or adverse, to his wish or

Plays, in the many games of life, that

Where what he most doth value must be won:

Whom neither shape of danger can dis-

Nor thought of tender happiness betray; Who, not content that former worth stand fast, Looks forward, persevering to the last, From well to better, daily self-surpast: Who, whether praise of him must walk

the earth
For ever, and to noble deeds give birth,
Or he must fall, to sleep without his

And leave a dead unprofitable name— Finds comfort in himself and in his cause;

And, while the moral mist is gathering, draws

His breath in confidence of Heaven's applause:

This is the happy Warrior; this is He That every Man in arms should wish to be 1806. 1807.

YES, IT WAS THE MOUNTAIN ECHO

YES, it was the mountain Echo, Solitary, clear, profound, Answering to the shouting Cuckoo, Giving to her sound for sound!

Unsolicited reply
To a babbling wanderer sent;
Like her ordinary cry,
Like—but oh, how different!

Hears not also mortal Life? Hear not we, unthinking Creatures! Slaves of folly, love, or strife— Voices of two different natures?

Have not we too?—yes, we have Answers, and we know not whence; Echoes from beyond the grave, Recognized intelligence!

Such rebounds our inward ear Catches sometimes from afar— Listen, ponder, hold them dear; For of God,—of God they are. 1806. 1807.

NUNS FRET NOT AT THEIR CON-VENT'S NARROW ROOM

In the cottage, Town-end, Grasmere, one aftermoon in 1801, my sister read to me the Sonnets of Milton. I had long been well acquainted with the n, but I was particularly struck on that occasion with the dignified simplicity and majestic harmony that runs through most of them,—in character so totally different from the Italian, and still more so from Shakspeare's fine Sonnets. I took fire, if I may be allowed to say so, and produced three Sonnets the same afternoon, the first I ever wrote except an irregular one at school. Of these three, the only one I distinctly remember is—"I grieved for Buonaparte." One was never written down: the third, which was, I believe, preserved, I cannot particularize. (Wordsworth.)

Nuns fret not at their convent's narrow room;

And hermits are contented with their cells:

And students with their pensive citadels; Maids at the wheel, the weaver at his loom,

Sit blithe and happy; bees that soar for bloom,

High as the highest Peak of Furness-fells, Will murmur by the hour in foxglove bells:

In truth the prison, unto which we doom Ourselves, no prison is: and hence for

In sundry moods, 'twas pastime to be bound Within the Sonnet's scanty plot of ground:

Pleased if some Souls (for such there needs must be) Who have felt the weight of too much liberty.

Should find brief solace there, as I have found. 1806 7 1807.

PERSONAL TALK

I AM not One who much or oft delight To season my fireside with personal talk-

Of friends, who live within an easy walk, Or neighbors, daily, weekly, in my sight: And, for my chance-acquaintance, ladies bright,

Sons, mothers, maidens withering on the stalk. These all wear out of me, like Forms, with chalk Painted on rich men's floors, for one feast-night. Better than such discourse doth silence long, Long, barren silence, square with my desire; To sit without emotion, hope, or aim. In the loved presence of my cottage-fire, And listen to the flapping of the flame, Or kettle whispering its faint undersong.

"Yet life," you say, "is life; we have seen and see,

And with a living pleasure we describe; And fits of sprightly malice do but bribe The languid mind into activity.

Sound sense, and love itself, and mirth and glee

Are fostered by the comment and the gibe."

Even be it so; yet still among your tribe.

Our daily world's true Worldlings, rank not me!

Children are blest, and powerful; their world lies

More justly balanced; partly at their

And part far from them: sweetest melodies

Are those that are by distance made more sweet:

Whose mind is but the mind of his own eves.

He is a Slave; the meanest we can meet !

Wings have we, - and as far as we can

We may find pleasure: wilderness and wood,

Blank ocean and mere sky, support that mood

Which with the lofty sanctifies the low. Dreams, books are each a world; and books, we know.

Are a substantial world, both pure and good:

Round these, with tendrils strong as flesh and blood.

Our pastime and our happiness will grow.

There find I personal themes, a plente ous store,

Matter wherein right voluble I am, To which I listen with a ready ear: Two shall be named, pre-eminently dear .-The gentle Lady married to the Moor; And heavenly Una with her milk-white Lamb.

Nor can I not believe but that hereby Great gains are mine; for thus I live remote

From evil-speaking; rancor, never sought.

Comes to me not; malignant truth, or

Hence have I genial seasons, hence have

Smooth passions, smooth discourse, and joyous thought:

And thus from day to day my little boat Rocks in its harbor, lodging peaceably. Blessings be with them-and eternal praise. Who gave us nobler loves, and nobler cares-

The Poets, who on earth have made us

Of truth and pure delight by heavenly lays!

Oh! might my name be numbered among theirs,

Then gladly would I end my mortal 1806 ? 1807. days.

THE WORLD IS TOO MUCH WITH US

THE world is too much with us; late and soon,

Getting and spending, we lay waste our powers:

Little we see in Nature that is ours;

We have given our hearts away, a sor did boon!

The Sea that bares her bosom to the moon;

The winds that will be howling at all hours,

And are up-gathered now like sleeping flowers;

For this, for everything, we are out of tune:

It moves us not.—Great God! I'd rather be

A Pagan suckled in a creed outworn;

So might I, standing on this pleasant lea,

Have glimpses that would make me less forlorn;

Have sight of Proteus rising from the sea;

Or hear old Triton blow his wreathed horn. 1806? 1807.

TO SLEEP

A FLOCK of sheep that leisurely pass by,

One after one; the sound of rain, and bees

Murmuring; the fall of rivers, winds and seas,

Smooth fields, white sheets of water, and pure sky;

I have thought of all by turns, and yet do lie

Sleepless! and soon the small birds' melodies

Must hear, first uttered from my orchard trees;

And the first cuckoo's melancholy cry. Even thus last night, and two nights more, I lay,

And could not win thee, Sleep! by any stealth:

So do not let me wear to-night away:
Without Thee what is all the morning's wealth?

Come, blessed barrier between day and day.

Dear mother of fresh thoughts and joyous health! 1806? 1807.

NOVEMBER, 1806

Another year!—another deadly blow! Another mighty Empire overthrown!

And We are left, or shall be left, alone; The last that dare to struggle with the Foe.

"Tis wall! from this day forward we

'Tis well! from this day forward we shall know

That in ourselves our safety must be sought;

That by our own right hands it must be wrought;

That we must stand unpropped, or be laid low.

O dastard whom such foretaste doth not cheer!

We shall exult, if they who rule the land

Be men who hold its many blessings dear,

Wise, upright, valiant; not a servile band,

Who are to judge of danger which they fear,
And honor which they do not under

And honor which they do not understand. 1806. 1807.

THOUGHT OF A BRITON ON THE SUBJUGATION OF SWITZERLAND

Two Voices are there; one is of the sea,

One of the mountains; each a mighty Voice:

In both from age to age thou didst rejoice,

They were thy chosen music, Liberty!
There came a Tyrant, and with holy glee

Thou fought'st against him; but hast vainly striven;

Thou from thy Alpine holds at length art driven,

Where not a torrent murmurs heard by thee.

Of one deep bliss thine ear hath been bereft:

Then cleave, O cleave to that which still is left:

For, high-souled Maid, what sorrow would it be

That mountain floods should thunder as before,

And Ocean bellow from his rocky shore.

And neither awful Voice be heard by thee? 1807. 1807.

HERE PAUSE: THE POET CLAIMS AT LEAST THIS PRAISE

HERE pause: the poet claims at least this praise,

That virtuous Liberty hath been the scope

Of his pure song, which did not shrink from hope

In the worst moment of these evil days: From hope, the paramount duty that Heaven lays,

For its own honor, on man's suffering Never may from our souls one truth depart-

That an accursed thing it is to gaze On prosperous tyrants with a dazzled ere:

Nor-touched with due abhorrence of their guilt

For whose dire ends tears flow, and bleod is spilt,

And justice labors in extremity--

Forget thy weakness, upon which is built O wretched man, the throne of tyranny! 1311. 1815.

LAODAMIA

Written at Rydal Mount. The incident of the trees growing and withering put the subject into mythoughts, and I wrote with the hope of giving it a loftier tone than, so far as I know, has been given to it by any of the Ancients who have treated of it. It cost me more trouble than almost anything of equal length I have ever writ-(Wordsworth.

ten. (Wordsworth.)
"Laodamia is a very original poem; I mean original with reference to your own manner. You have nothing like it. I should have seen to have nothing like it. I should have seen it in a strange place, and greatly admired it, but not suspected its derivation..." (Lamb to Wordsworth. Talfourd, Final Memories of Charles Lamb, p. 151.)

"With sacrifice before the rising morn

Vows have I made by fruitless hope inspired;

And from the infernal Gods, 'mid shades

Of night, my slaughtered Lord have I required:

C lestial pity I again implore:-

Restore him to my sight—great Jove, restore!"

So speaking, and by fervent love endowed

With faith, the Suppliant heavenward lifts her hands;

While, like the sun emerging from a cloud.

Her countenance brightens-and her eve expands:

Her bosom heaves and spreads, her statnre grows:

And she expects the issue in repose.

O terror! what hath she perceived?—O joy!

What doth she look on?—whom doth she behold?

Her Hero slain upon the beach of Troy? His vital presence? his corporeal mould! It is—if sense deceive her not—'tis He? And a God leads him, wingéd Mercury!

Mild Hermes spake—and touched her with his wand

That calms all fear; "Such grace hath crowned thy prayer, Laodamía! that at Jove's command

Thy Husband walks the paths of upper

He comes to tarry with thee three hours' space: Accept the gift, behold him face to face!

Forth sprang the impassioned Queen her Lord to clasp;

Again that consummation she essayed: But unsubstantial Form eludes her grasp As often as that eager grasp was made, The Phantom parts-but parts to re-unite, And re-assume his place before her sight.

"Protesilaus, lo! thy guide is gone! Confirm, I pray, the vision with thy voice:

This is our palace,—yonder is thy throne; Speak, and the floor thou tread'st on will rejoice.

Not to appal me have the gods bestowed This precious boon; and blest a sad abode."

"Great Jove, Laodamia! doth not leave His gifts imperfect :-- Spectre though I be.

I am not sent to scare thee or deceive; But in reward of thy fidelity.

And something also did my weath obtain; For fearless virtue bringeth boundless

"Thou knowest, the Delphic oracle fore-

That the first Greek who touched the Trojan strand

Should die; but me the threat could not withhold:

A generous cause a victim did demand; And forth I leapt upon the sandy plain; A self-devoted chief--by Hector slain."

"Supreme of Heroes—bravest, noblest, best!

Thy matchless courage I bewail no more, Which then, when tens of thousands were deprest

By doubt, propelled thee to the fatal shore:

Thou found'st—and I forgive thee—here thou art—

A nobler counsellor than my poor heart.

"But thou, though capable of sternest deed,

Wert kind as resolute, and good as brave:

And he, whose power restores thee, hath decreed

Thou should'st elude the malice of the grave:

Redundant are thy locks, thy lips as fair As when their breath enriched Thessalian air.

"No Spectre greets me,—no vain Shadow this;

Come, blooming Hero, place thee by my side!

Give, on this well-known couch, one nuptial kiss

To me, this day, a second time thy bride!"

Jove frowned in heaven: the conscious Parcæ threw Upon those roseate lips a Stygian hue.

"This visage tells thee that my doom is past:

Norshould the change be mourned, even if the joys

Of sense were able to return as fast
And surely as they vanish. Earth destroys

Those raptures duly—Erebus disdains; Calm pleasures there abide—majestic pains.

"Be taught, O faithful Consort, to control

Rebellious passion: for the Gods approve
The depth, and not the tumult, of the soul;

A fervent, not ungovernable, love.
Thy transports moderate; and meekly

When I depart, for brief is my sojourn-"

"Ah, wherefore?—Did not Hercules by force

Wrest from the guardian Monster of the tomb

Alcestis, a reanimated corse,

Given back to dwell on earth in vernal bloom?

Medea's spells dispersed the weight of years,

And Æson stood a youth 'mid youthful peers.

"The Gods to us are merciful—and they Yet further may relent: for mightier far

Than strength of nerve and sinew, or the sway

Of magic potent over sun and star,

Is love, though oft to agony distrest, And though his favorite seat be feeble woman's breast.

"But if thou goest, I follow—""Peace!" he said;—

She looked upon him and was calmed and cheered:

The ghastly color from his lips had fled; In his deportment, shape, and mien, appeared

Elysian beauty, melancholy grace,

Brought from a pensive though a happy place.

He spake of love, such love as Spirits feel

In worlds whose course is equable and pure;

No fears to beat away—no strife to heal—

The past unsighed for, and the future sure;

Spake of heroic arts in graver mood Revived, with finer harmony pursued;

Of all that is most beauteous—imaged there

In happier beauty; more pellucid streams,

An ampler ether, a diviner air,

And fields invested with purpureal gleams;

Climes which the sun, who sheds the brightest day

Earth knows, is all unworthy to survey.

Yet there the Soul shall enter which hath earned

That privilege by virtue. "Ill," said he "The end of man's existence I discerned, Who from ignoble games and revelry

Could draw, when we had parted, vain delight,

While tears were thy best pastime, day and night;

"And while my youthful peers before my eyes

(Each hero following his peculiar bent)
Prepared themselves for glorious enterprise

By martial sports,—or, seated in the tent,

Chieftains and kings in council were detained:

What time the fleet at Aulis lay enchained.

"The wished-for wind was given:—I then revolved

The oracle, upon the silent sea;

And, if no worthier led the way, resolved

That, of a thousand vessels, mine should be

The foremost prow in pressing to the strand.—

Mine the first blood that tinged the Trojan sand.

"Yet bitter, oft-times bitter was the pang
When of thy loss I thought, beloved

Wife!
On thee too fondly did my memory

hang,
And on the jovs we shared in mortal

life.—
The paths which we had trod—these fountains, flowers,

My new-planned cities, and unfinished towers.

"But should suspense permit the Foe to

Behold they tremble !—haughty their array,

Yet of their number no one dares to die?'

In soul I swept the indignity away:
Old frailties then recurred:—but lofty thought,

In act embodied, my deliverance

wrought.
"And Thou, though strong in love, art

all too weak
In reason, in self-government too slow;
I counsel thee by fortitude to seek

Our blest re-union in the shades below,

The invisible world with thee hath sympathized;

Be thy affections raised and solemnized.

"Learn, by a mortal yearning, to ascend-

Seeking a higher object. Love was given,

Encouraged, sanctioned, chiefly for that end;

For this the passion to excess was driven—
That self might be annulled; her bond-

The fetters of a dream, opposed to love."—

Aloud she shrieked! for Hermes reappears!

Round the dear Shade she would have clung—'t is vain:

The hours are past—too brief had they been years;

And him no mortal effort can detain: Swift, toward the realms that know not earthly day,

He through the portal takes his silent way,

And on the palace-floor a lifeless corse she lay.

Thus, all in vain exhorted and reproved, She perished; and, as for a wilful crime, By the just Gods whom no weak pity moved,

Was doomed to wear out her appointed time.

Apart from happy Ghosts, that gather flowers

Of blissful quiet 'mid unfading bowers.

—Yet tears to human suffering are due; And mortal hopes defeated and o'erthrown

Are mourned by man, and not by man alone.

As fondly he believes.—Upon the side Of Hellespont (such faith was entertained)

A knot of spiry trees for ages grew
From out the tomb of him for whom s

From out the tomb of him for whom she died;

And ever, when such stature they had gained

That Ilium's walls were subject to their view.

The trees' tall summits withered at the sight:

A constant interchange of growth and blight! 1814. 1815.

SEPTEMBER, 1814

As mentioned in my verses on the death of the Ettrick Shepherd, my first visit to Yarrow was in his company. We had lodged the night before at Traquhair, where Hogg had joined us. I seidom read or think of this poem without regretting that my dear Sister was not of the party, as she would have had so much delight in recalling the time when, travelling together in Scotland, we declined going in search of this celebrated stream, not altogether, I will frankly confess, for the reasons assigned in the poem on the occasion. (Wordsworth.)

And is this -Yarrow? -This the Stream Of which my fancy cherished, So faithfully, a waking dream? An image that hath perished! O that some Minstrel's harp were near, To utter notes of gladness, And chase this silence from the air, That fills my heart with sadness!

Yet why?—a silvery current flows With uncontrolled meanderings; Nor have these eyes by greener hills Been soothed, in all my wanderings. And, through her depths, Saint Mary's Lake Is visibly delighted;

For not a feature of those hills Is in the mirror slighted.

A blue sky bends o'er Yarrow vale, Save where that pearly whiteness Is round the rising sun diffused, A tender hazy brightness; Mild dawn of promise! that excludes All profitless dejection; Though not unwilling here to admit A pensive recollection.

Where was it that the famous Flower Of Yarrow Vale lay bleeding? His bed perchance was you smooth mound

On which the herd is feeding:
And haply from this crystal pool,
Now peaceful as the morning.
The Water-wraith ascended thrice—
And gave his doleful warning.

Delicious is the Lay that sings The haunts of happy Lovers, The path that leads them to the grove, The leafy grove that covers: And Pity sanctifies the Verse That paints, by strength of sorrow, The unconquerable strength of love; Bear witness, rueful Yarrow!

But thou, that didst appear so fair To fond imagination,
Dost rival in the light of day
Her delicate creation:
Meek loveliness is round thee spread.
A softness still and holy;
The grace of forest charms decayed,
And pastoral melancholy.

That region left, the vale unfolds
Rich groves of lofty stature,
With Yarrow winding through the pomp
Of cultivated nature;
And, rising from those lofty groves,
Behold a Ruin hoary!
The shattered fromt of Newark's Towers,

Renowned in Border story.

The brood of chaste affection.

Fair scenes for childhood's opening bloom,
For sportive youth to stray in;
For manhood to enjoy his strength;
And age to wear away in!
Yon cottage seems a bower of bliss,
A covert for protection
Of tender thoughts, that nestle there—

How sweet, on this autumnal day, The wild-wood fruits to gather, And on my True-love's forehead plant A crest of blooming heather! And what if I enwreathed my own! 'Twere no offence to reason; The sober Hills thus deck their brows To meet the wintry season.

I see—but not by sight alone.
Loved Yarrow, have I won thee;
A ray of fancy still survives—
Her sunshine plays upon thee!
Thy ever-youthful waters keep
A course of lively pleasure;
And gladsome notes my lips can breathe
Accordant to the measure.

The vapors linger round the Heights, They melt, and soon must vanish; One hour is theirs, nor more is mine—Sad thought, which I would banish, But that I know, where'er I go, Thy genuine image, Yarrow! Will dwell with me—to heighten joy, And cheer my mind in sorrow.

TO B. R. HAYDON

B. R. Haydon, the painter, was for many years a friend of Wordsworth. On November 27, 1815. Haydon wrote: "I have benefited and have been supported in the troubles of life by your poetry... I will bear want. pain, misery, and blindness; but I will never yield one step I have gained on the road I am determined to travel over." Wordsworth's answer to this letter was the following sonnet.

High is our calling, Friend !—Creative

(Whether the instrument of words she use.

Or pencil pregnant with ethereal hues.)
Demands the service of a mind and heart,
Though sensitive, yet, in their weakest part,

Heroically fashioned—to infuse

Faith in the whispers of the lonely Muse, While the whole world seems adverse to desert.

And, oh! when Nature sinks, as oft she

Through long-lived pressure of obscure distress.

Still to be strenuous for the bright reward,

And in the soul admit of no decay.

Brook no continuance of weak-mindedness—

Great is the glory, for the strife is hard!
1815. 1816.

NOVEMBER 1

How clear, how keen, how marvellously bright

The effluence from you distant mountain's head,
Which, strewn with snow smooth as the

Which, strewn with snow smooth as the sky can shed,
Shines like another sun—on mortal sight

Uprisen, as if to check approaching Night,

And all her twinkling stars. Who now would tread,

If so he might, you mountain's glittering head—

Terrestrial, but a surface, by the flight Of sad mortality's earth-sullying wing, Unswept, unstained? Nor shall the aërial Powers

Dissolve that beauty, destined to endure, White, radiant, spotless, exquisitely pure.

Through all vicissitudes, till genial

Has filled the laughing vales with welcome flowers. 1815. 1816.

SURPRISED BY JOY — IMPATIENT AS THE WIND

This was in fact suggested by my daughter Catherine long after her death. (Wordsworth.)

Surprised by joy—impatient as the Wind

I turned to share the transport—Oh!

But Thee, deep buried in the silent tomb.
That spot which no vicissitude can find?
Love, faithful love, recalled thee to my mind—

But how could I forget thee? Through what power,

Even for the least division of an hour, Have I been so beguiled as to be blind To my most grievous loss?—That thought's return

Was the worst pang that sorrow ever

Save one, one only, when I stood forlorn, Knowing my heart's best treasure was no more;

That neither present time, nor years unborn

Could to my sight that heavenly face restore. 1815? 1815.

HAST THOU SEEN, WITH FLASH INCESSANT

HAST thou seen, with flash incessant, Bubbles gliding under ice, Bodied forth and evanescent, No one knows by what device?

Such are thoughts!—A wind-swept meadow
Mimicking a troubled sea,
Such is life; and death a shadow

1818. 1820.

From the rock eternity!

COMPOSED UPON AN EVENING OF EXTRAORDINARY SPLENDOR AND BEAUTY

1

HAD this effulgence disappeared
With flying haste, I might have sent
Among the speechless clouds, a look
Of blank astonishment;
But 'tis endued with power to stay,
And sanctify one closing day,
That frail Mortality may see—
What is?—ah no, but what can be!
Time was when field and watery cove

With modulated echoes rang. While choirs of fervent Angels sang Their vespers in the grove; Or, crowning, star-like, each some sovereign height,

Warbled, for heaven above and earth below.

Strains suitable to both.—Such holy rite, Methinks, if audibly repeated now From hill or valley, could not move Sublimer transport, purer love, Than doth this silent spectacle - the gleam -

The shadow—and the peace supreme!

No sound is uttered,—but a deep And solemn harmony pervades The hollow vale from steep to steep, And penetrates the glades. Far-distant images draw nigh, Called forth by wondrous potency Of beamy radiance, that imbues, Whate'er it strikes, with gem-like hues! In vision exquisitely clear, Herds range along the mountain side; And glistening antlers are descried; And gilded flocks appear. Thine is the tranquil hour, purpureal

Eve!

But long as god-like wish, or hope divine,

Informs my spirit, ne'er can I believe That this magnificence is wholly thine! -From worlds not quickened by the sun A portion of the gift is won; An intermingling of Heaven's pomp is spread On ground which British shepherds

tread!

And, if there be whom broken ties Afflict, or injuries assail, You hazy ridges to their eyes Present a glorious scale, Climbing suffused with sunny air, To stop-no record hath told where! And tempting Fancy to ascend. And with immortal Spirits blend! -Wings at my shoulders seem to play; But, rooted here, I stand and gaze On those bright steps that heavenward

Their practicable way.

Come.forth, ye drooping old men, look abroad.

And see to what fair countries ye are bound!

And if some traveller, weary of his road. Hath slept since noontide on the grassy ground.

Ye Genii! to his covert speed; And wake him with such gentle keed As may attune his soul to meet the dower

Bestowed on this transcendent hour!

Such hues from their celestial Urn Were wont to stream before mine eve. Where'er it wandered in the morn Of blissful infancy.

This glimpse of glory, why renewed? Nay, rather speak with gratitude; For, if a vestige of those gleams Survived, 'twas only in my dreams. Dread Power! whom peace and calm ness serve

No less than Nature's threatening voice, If aught unworthy be my choice, From Thee if I would swerve;

Oh, let thy grace remind me of the light

Full early lost, and fruitlessly deplored: Which, at this moment, on my waking sight

Appears to shine, by miracle restored: My soul, though yet confined to earth, Rejoices in a second birth!

-'Tis past, the visionary splendour fades:

And night approaches with her shades. 1818. 1820.

SEPTEMBER, 1819

Departing summer hath assumed An aspect tenderly illumed, The gentlest look of spring; That calls from yonder leafy shade Unfaded, yet prepared to fade, A timely carolling.

No faint and hesitating trill, Such tribute as to winter chill The lonely redbreast pays! Clear, loud, and lively is the din, From social warblers gathering in Their harvest of sweet lays.

Nor doth the example fail to cheer Me, conscious that my leaf is sere, And yellow on the bough :-Fall, rosy garlands, from my head! Ye myrtle wreaths, your fragrance shed Around a younger brow!

Yet will I temperately rejoice; Wide is the range, and free the choice Of undiscordant themes; Which, haply, kindred souls may prize Not less than vernal ecstasies, And passion's feverish dreams.

For deathless powers to verse belong, And they like Demi-gods are strong On whom the Muses smile; But some their function have disclaimed,

Best pleased with what is aptliest framed

To enervate and defile.

Not such the initiatory strains Committed to the silent plains In Britain's earliest dawn: Trembled the groves, the stars grew pale,

While all-too-daringly the veil Of nature was withdrawn!

Nor such the spirit-stirring note When the live chords Alcaus smote, Inflamed by sense of wrong; Woe! woe to Tyrants! from the lyre Broke threateningly, in sparkles dire Of fierce vindictive song.

And not unhallowed was the page By wingèd Love inscribed, to assuage The pangs of vain pursuit; Love listening while the Lesbian Maid With finest touch of passion swayed Her own Æolian lute.

O ye, who patiently explore The wreck of Herculanean lore, What rapture! could ye seize Some Theban fragment, or unroll One precious, tender-hearted, scroll Of pure Simonides.

That were, indeed, a genuine birth Of poesy; a bursting forth Of genius from the dust; What Horace gloried to behold, What Maro loved, shall we enfold? Can haughty Time be just!

1819. 1820.

AFTER-THOUGHT

I THOUGHT of Thee, my partner and my guide,
As being past away.—Vain sympathies!
For, backward, Duddon, as I cast my eyes,

I see what was, and is, and will abide; Still glides the Stream, and shall for ever glide; The Form remains, the Function never dies:

While we, the brave, the mighty, and the wise, We Men, who in our morn of youth defied

The elements, must vanish;—be it so!
Enough if something from our hands

Enough, if something from our hands
have power

To live, and act, and serve the future hour;

And if, as toward the silent tomb we

Through love, through hope, and faith's transcendent dower.

We feel that we are greater than we know. 1820 1820.

MUTABILITY

From low to high doth dissolution climb,

And sink from high to low, along a scale

Of awful notes, whose concord shall not fail;

A musical but melancholy chime, Which they can hear who meddle not with crime,

Nor avarice, nor over-anxious care.

Truth fails not; but her outward forms

that bear

The length data do molt like frosty

The longest date do melt like frosty rime,

That in the morning whitened hill and plain

And is no more; drop like the tower sublime

Of yesterday, which royally did wear His crown of weeds, but could not even sustain

Some casual shout that broke the silent air,

Or the unimaginable touch of Time. 1821. 1822.

INSIDE OF KING'S COLLEGE CHAPEL, CAMBRIDGE

Tax not the royal Saint with vain expense.

With ill-matched aims the Architect who planned—

Albeit laboring for a scanty band

Of white-robed Scholars only—this im

And glorious Work of fine intelligence! Give all thou canst; high Heaven rejects the lore

Of nicely-calculated less or more;

So deemed the man who fashioned for the sense

These lofty pillars, spread that branching roof

Self-poised, and scooped into ten thousand cells,

Where light and shade repose, where music dwells

Lingering—and wandering on as loth to die;

Like thoughts whose very sweetness yieldeth proof

That they were born for immertality. 1820 or 1821. 1822.

MEMORY

A PEN -to register; a key— That winds through secret wards; Are well assigned to Memory By allegoric Bards.

As aptly, also, might be given A Pencil to her hand; That, softening objects, sometimes even Outstrips the heart's demand;

That smooths foregone distress, the lines

Of lingering care subdues, Long-vanished happiness refines, And clothes in brighter hues;

Yet, like a tool of Fancy, works Those Spectres to dilate That startle Conscience, as she lurks Within her lonely seat.

Oh! that our lives, which flee so fast, In purity were such, That not an image of the past Should fear that pencil's touch!

Retirement then might hourly look Upon a soothing scene, Age steal to his allotted nook Contented and serene;

With heart as calm as lakes that sleep, In frosty moonlight glistening; Or mountain rivers, where they creep Along a channel smooth and deep, To their own far-off murmurs listening. 1823. 1827.

TO A SKY-LARK

ETHEREAL minstrel! pilgrim of the sky; Dost thou despise the earth where cares abound?

Or, while the wings aspire, are heart and eye

Both with thy nest upon the dewy ground?

Thy nest which thou canst drop into at will.

Those quivering wings composed, that music still!

Leave to the nightingale her shady wood;

A privacy of glorious light is thine; Whence thou dost pour upon the world a flood

Of harmony, with instinct more divine;

Type of the wise who soar, but never roam;

roam;
True to the kindred points of Heaven and Home! 1825, 4827.

SCORN NOT THE SONNET

Composed, almost extempore, in a short walk on the western side of Rydal Lake. (Wordsworth.)

Scorn not the Sonnet; Critic, you have frowned,

Mindless of its just honors; with this key Shakspeare unlocked his heart: the melody Of this small lute gave ease to Petrarch's wound:

A thousand times this pipe did Tasso

Sound:
With it Cambons southed an evila's

With it Camöens soothed an exile's grief;

The Sonnet glittered a gay myrtle leaf Annal the cypress with which Dante crowned

His visionary brow: a glow-worm lamp, It cheered mild Spenser, called from Faeryland

To struggle through dark ways; and, when a damp

When a damp
Fell round the path of Milton, in his hand

The Thing became a trumpet; whence he blew

Soul-animating strains—alas, too few! 1837 * 1837.

THE PRIMROSE OF THE ROCK

Written at Rydal Mount. The Rock stands on the right hand a little way jeading up the middle road from Rydal to Grasmere. We have been in the habit of calling it the glow-worm rock from the number of glow-worms we have often seen hanging on it as described. The tuft of primrose has, I fear, been washed away by the heavy rains. (Wordsworth)

See Dorothy Wordsworth's Journal, April 24th, 1802

A Rock there is whose homely front The passing traveller slights; Yet there the glow-worms hang their lamps,

Like stars, at various heights; And one coy Primrose to that Rock The vernal breeze invites.

What hideous warfare bath been waged, What kingdoms overthrown,

Since first I spied that Primrose-tuft And marked it for my own;

A lasting link in Nature's chain From highest heaven let down!

The flowers, still faithful to the stems, Their fellowship renew; The stems are faithful to the root,

That worketh out of view: And to the rock the root adheres

In every fibre true.

Close clings to earth the living rock, Though threatening still to fall; The earth is constant to her sphere; And God upholds them all:

So blooms this lonely Plant, nor dreads

Her annual funeral.

Here closed the meditative strain; But air breathed soft that day, mountain-heights mere. hoarv cheered.

The sunny vale looked gay; And to the Primrose of the Rock I gave this after-lay.

I sang-Let myriads of bright flowers, Like Thee, in field and grove Revive unenvied; -mightier far, Than tremblings that reprove Our vernal tendencies to hope,

Is God's redeeming love;

That love which changed-for wan dis-

For sorrow that had bent O'er hopeless dust, for withered age-Their moral element, And turned the thistles of a curse

To types beneficent.

Sin-blighted though we are, we too. The reasoning Sons of Men. From one oblivious winter called Shall rise, and breathe again: And in eternal summer lose

Our threescore years and ten.

To humbleness of heart descends This prescience from on high, The faith that elevates the just, Before and when they die: And makes each soul a separate heaven

A court for Deity. 1831.

YARROW REVISITED

The following Stanzas are a memorial of a day passed with Sir Walter Scott and other Friends visiting the Banks of the Yarrow under his guidance, immediately before his departure from Abbotsford, for Naples.

The title Varrow Revisited will stand in no need of explanation for Readers acquainted with the Author's previous poems suggested by that celebrated Stream. (Wordsworth.)

THE gallant Youth, who may have gained,

Or seeks, a "winsome Marrow," Was but an Infant in the lap

When first I looked on Yarrow; Once more, by Newark's Castle-gate

Long left without a warder, I stood, looked, listened, and with Thee, Great Minstrel of the Border!

Grave thoughts ruled wide on that sweet day.

Their dignity installing

In gentle bosoms, while sere leaves Were on the bough, or falling;

played, and sunshine But breezes gleamed-

The forest to embolden; Reddened the fiery hues, and shot Transparence through the golden.

For busy thoughts the Stream flowed on In foamy agitation;

And slept in many a crystal pool For quiet contemplation:

No public and no private care The freeborn mind enthralling, We made a day of happy hours, Our happy days recalling.

Brisk Youth appeared, the Morn of vouth,

With freaks of graceful folly,— Life's temperate Noon, her sober Eve, Her Night not melancholy; Past, present, future, all appeared

In harmony united,

Like guests that meet, and some from far.

By cordial love invited.

And if, as Yarrow, through the woods And down the meadow ranging, Did meet us with unaltered face, Though we were changed and changing: If, then, some natural shadows spread Our inward prospect over, The soul's deep valley was not slow Its brightness to recover.

Eternal blessings on the Muse, And her divine employment! The blameless Muse, who trains her Sons For hope and calm enjoyment; Albeit sickness, lingering yet, Has o'er their pillow brooded; And Care waylays their steps--a Sprite

Not easily eluded. For thee, O Scott! compelled to change Green Eildon-hill and Cheviot

For warm Vesuvio's vine-clad slopes; And leave thy Tweed and Tiviot For mild Sorrento's breezy waves; May classic Fancy, linking

With native Fancy her fresh aid, Preserve thy heart from sinking!

Oh! while they minister to thee, Each vying with the other. May Health return to mellow Age With Strength, her venturous brother; And Tiber, and each brook and rill Renowned in song and story, With unimagined beauty shine, Nor lose one ray of glory!

For Thou, upon a hundred streams, By tales of love and sorrow, Of faithful love, undaunted truth, Hast shed the power of Yarrow:

And streams unknown, hills yet unseen, Wherever they invite Thee,

At parent Nature's grateful call, With gladness must requite Thee.

A gracious welcome shall be thine, Such looks of love and honor As thy own Yarrow gave to me When first I gazed upon her; Belield what I had feared to see, Unwilling to surrender

Dreams treasured up from early days, The holy and the tender.

And what, for this frail world, were all That mortals do or suffer,

Did no responsive harp, no pen, Memorial tribute offer? Yea, what were mighty Nature's self? Her features, could they win us, Unhelped by the poetic voice That hourly speaks within us?

Nor deem that localized Romance Plays false with our affections; Unsanctifies our tears—made sport For fanciful dejections: Ah, no! the visions of the past Sustain the heart in feeling Life as she is—our changeful Life, With friends and kindred dealing.

Bear witness, Ye, whose thoughts that dav

In Yarrow's groves were centred; Who through the silent portal arch Of mouldering Newark entered; And clomb the winding stair that once Too timidly was mounted

By the "last Minstrel," (not the last!) Ere he his Tale recounted.

Flow on for ever, Yarrow Stream! Fulfil thy pensive duty, Well pleased that future Bards should chant

For simple hearts thy beauty; To dream-light dear while yet unseen, Dear to the common sunshine, And dearer still, as now I feel,

To memory's shadowy moonshine! 1831. 1835.

THE TROSACHS

As recorded in my sister's Journal, I had first seen the Trosachs in her and Coleridge's company. The sentiment that runs through this Sonnet was natural to the season in which I again saw this beautiful spot; but this and some other sonnets that follow were colored by the remembrance of my recent visit to Sir Walter Scott, and the melancholy errand on which he was going. (Wordsworth.)

There's not a nook within this solemn

But were an apt confessional for One Taught by his summer spent, his autumn gone,

That Life is but a tale of morning grass Withered at eve. From scenes of art which chase

That thought away, turn, and with watchful eyes

Feed it 'mid Nature's old felicities, Rocks, rivers, and smooth lakes more clear than glass

Untouched, unbreathed upon. Thrice happy quest,

If from a golden perch of aspen spray (October's workmanship to rival May) The pensive warbler of the ruddy breast That moral sweeten by a heaven-taught lav.

Lulling the year, with all its cares, to rest! 1831, 1835.

IF THOU INDEED DERIVE THY LIGHT FROM HEAVEN

If thou indeed derive thy light from Heaven.

Then, to the measure of that heavenborn light.

Shine, Poet! in thy place, and be content: The stars pre-eminent in magnitude, And they that from the zenith dart their beams,

(Visible though they be to half the earth, Though half a sphere be conscious of their brightness)

Are yet of no diviner origin,

No purer essence, than the one that burns,

Like an untended watch-fire on the ridge Of some dark mountain; or than those which seem

Humbly to hang, like twinkling winter lamps,

Among the branches of the leafless trees. All are the undying offspring of one Sire: Then, to the measure of the light vouchsafed.

Shine, Poet! in thy place, and be content. 18.77. 1836.

IF THIS GREAT WORLD OF JOY AND PAIN

If this great world of joy and pain Revolve in one sure track;

If freedom, set, will rise again, And virtue, flown, come back; Woe to the purblind crew who fill

The heart with each day's care: Nor gain, from past or future, skill To bear, and to forbear!

1833. 1835.

"THERE!" SAID A STRIPLING, POINTING WITH MEET PRIDE

"THERE!" said a Stripling, pointing with meet pride

Towards a low roof with green trees half concealed.

"Is Mosgiel Farm; and that's the very

Where Burns ploughed up the Daisy."

A plain below stretched seaward, while.

Above sea-clouds, the Peaks of Arran 100000

And, by that simple notice, the repose Of earth, sky, sea and air, was vivified. Beneath "the random bield of clod or stone"

Myriads of daisies have shone forth in

Near the lark's nest, and in their natural

Have passed away; less happy than the

That, by the unwilling ploughshare, died to prove

The tender charm of poetry and love.

MOST SWEET IT IS WITH UN-UPLIFTED EYES

Most sweet it is with unuplifted eyes To pace the ground, if path be there or none.

While a fair region round the traveller

Which he forbears again to look upon; Pleased rather with some soft ideal scene, The work of Fancy, or some happy tone Of meditation, slipping in between

The beauty coming and the beauty gone. If Thought and Love desert us, from that

Let us break off all commerce with the Muse:

With Thought and Love companions of our way,

Whate'er the senses take or may refuse, The Mind's internal heaven shall shed her dews

Of inspiration on the humblest lay. 1833. 1835.

EXTEMPORE EFFUSION UPON THE DEATH OF JAMES HOGG1

When first, descending from the moor-I saw the Stream of Yarrow glide died Sept. 21, 1822 " July 25, 1834 Dec. 27, 1534 Geo. Crabbe . " May 10, 1834 Felicia Hemans

Along a bare and open valley, the Ettrick Shepherd was my guide.

When last along its banks I wandered Through groves that had begun to shed Their golden leaves upon the pathways, My steps the Border-minstrel led.

The mighty Minstrel breathes no longer, 'Mid mouldering ruins low he lies; And death upon the braes of Yarrow, Has closed the Shepherd-poet's eyes:

Nor has the rolling year twice measured, From sign to sign, its steadfast course, Since every mortal power of Coleridge Was frozen at its marvellous source;

The rapt One, of the godlike forehead, The heaven-eyed creature sleeps in earth:

And Lamb, the frolic and the gentle, Has vanished from his lonely hearth.

Like clouds that rake the mountainsummits,

Or waves that own no curbing hand, How fast has brother followed brother From sunshine to the sunless land!

Yet I, whose lids from infant slumber Were earlier raised, remain to hear A timid voice, that asks in whispers, "Who next will drop and disappear?"

Our haughty life is crowned with darkness,

Like London with its own black wreath, On which with thee, O Crabbe! forth looking.

I gazed from Hampstead's breezy heath.

As if but yesterday departed, Thou too art gone before; but why, O'er ripe fruit, seasonably gathered, Should frail survivors heave a sigh?

Mourn rather for that holy Spirit, Sweet as the spring, as ocean deep; For Her who, ere her summer faded, Has sunk into a breathless sleep.

No more of old romantic sorrows, For slaughtered Youth or love-lorn Maid!

With sharper grief is Yarrow smitten, And Ettrick mourns with her their Poet dea l. Nov. 1835. Dec. 1835.

A POET!—HE HATH PUT HIS HEART TO SCHOOL

A Poct!—He hath put his heart to school,

Nor dares to move unpropped upon the staff

Which Art hath lodged within his hand
--must laugh

By precept only, and shed tears by rule. Thy Art be Nature; the live current quaff,

And let the groveller sip his stagnant pool,

In fear that else, when Critics grave and cool

Have killed him, Scorn should write his epitaph.

How does the Mondow flower its bloom

How does the Meadow-flower its bloom unfold?

Because the lovely little flower is free Down to its root, and, in that freedom, bold;

And so the grandeur of the Forest-tree Comes not by casting in a formal mould, But from its own divine vitality.

SO FAIR, SO SWEET, WITHAL SO SENSITIVE

So fair, so sweet, withal so sensitive, Would that the little Flowers were born to live.

Conscious of half the pleasure which they give;

That to this mountain-daisy's self were known

The beauty of its star-shaped shadow, thrown

On the smooth surface of this naked stone!

And what if hence a bold desire should mount

High as the Sun, that he could take

Of all that issues from his glorious fount!

So might he ken how by his sovereign

These delicate companionships are made:

And how he rules the pomp of light and shade;

and were the Sister-power that shines by night privileged, what a countenance of delight

W.Fild through the clouds break forth on human sight!

Fond fancies! wheresoe'er shall turn thine eve

On earth, air, ocean, or the starry sky, Converse with Nature in pure sympathy;

All vain desires, all lawless wishes quelled,

Be Thou to love and praise alike impelled

Whatever boon is granted or withheld. 1844. 1845.

THE UNREMITTING VOICE OF NIGHTLY STREAMS

THE unremitting voice of nightly streams

That wastes so oft, we think, its tuneful powers,

If neither soothing to the worm that gleams

Through dewy grass, nor small birds hushed in bowers,

Nor unto silent leaves and drowsy flowers.-

That voice of unpretending harmony (For who what is shall measure by what seems

To be, or not to be,

Or tax high Heaven with prodigality?) Wants not a healing influence that can creep

Into the human breast, and mix with sleep

To regulate the motion of our dreams For kindly issues—as through every clime

Was felt near murmuring brooks in earliest time;

As at this day, the rudest swains who

Where torrents roar, or hear the tinkling knell

Of water-breaks, with grateful heart 1846. 1850. could tell.

SONNET

TO AN OCTOGENARIAN

Affections lose their object; Time brings forth

No successors; and, lodged in memory, If love exist no longer, it must die,-Wanting accustomed food, must pass from earth,

Or never hope to reach a second birth. This sad belief, the happiest that is left To thousands, share not Thou; howe'er bereft,

Scorned, or neglected, fear not such a dearth.

Though poor and destitute of friends thou art. Perhaps the sole survivor of thy race, One to whom Heaven assigns that mournful part The utmost solitude of age to face,

Still shall be left some corner of the heart

Where Love for living Thing can find a 1846. 1850. place.

LIFE

As late I journey'd o'er the extensive plain

Where native Otter sports his scanty stream.

Musing in torpid woe a sister's pain, The glorious prospect woke me from the dream.

At every step it widen'd to my sight. Wood, Meadow, verdant Hill, and dreary Steep.

Following in quick succession of delight. Till all—at once—did my eye ravish'd sweep!

May this (I cried) my course through Life portray!

New scenes of wisdom may each step display,

And knowledge open as my days advance!

Till what time Death shall pour the undarken'd ray,

My eve shall dart thro' infinite expanse,

And thought suspended lie in rapture's blissful trance.

LINES

ON AN AUTUMNAL EVENING

O THOU wild Fancy, check thy wing! No more Those thin white flakes, those purple clouds explore!

Nor there with happy spirits speed thy flight

The dates for Coleridge's poems are made up from the Shepherd-Prideaux and the Haney bibliographies, and from the excellent notes to Campbell's edition of the Poetical Works. Bathed in rich amber-glowing floods of light;

Nor in you gleam, where slow descends the day.

With western peasants hail the morning rav !

Ah! rather bid the perished pleasures move,

A shadowy train, across the soul of Love!

O'er disappointment's wintry desert fling Each flower that wreathed the dewy locks of Spring,

When blushing, like a bride, from Hope's trim bower

She leapt, awakened by the pattering shower. Now sheds the sinking Sun a deeper gleam, Aid, lovely Sorceress! aid thy Poet's dream ! With faery wand O bid the Maid arise,

Chaste Joyance dancing in her brightblue eyes:

As erst when from the Muses' calm abode

I came, with Learning's meed not unbestowed: When as she twined a laurel round my brow. And met my kiss, and half returned my vow, O'er all my frame shot rapid my thrilled heart. And every nerve confessed the electric dart.

O dear Deceit! I see the Maiden rise. Chaste Joyance dancing in her brightblue eyes! When first the lark high-soaring swells his throat,

Mocks the tired eye, and scatters the loud note,

I trace her footsteps on the accustomed lawn,

I mark her glancing mid the gleams of dawn.

When the bent flower beneath the nightdew weeps

And on the lake the silver lustre sleeps, Amid the paly radiance soft and sad,

She meets my lonely path in moonbeams clad.

With her along the streamlet's brink I rove;
With her I list the warblings of the

With her I list the warblings of the

And seems in each low wind her voice to float

Lone whispering Pity in each soothing note!

Spirits of Love! ye heard her name!

The powerful spell, and to my haunt repair.

Whether on clustering pinions ye are there.

Where rich snows blossom on the Myrtle-trees,

Or with fond languishment around my fair

Sigh in the loose luxuriance of her hair;

O heed the spell, and hither wing your way.

Like far-off music, voyaging the breeze!

Spirits! to you the infant Maid was given

Formed by the wondrous Alchemy of Heaven!

No fairer Maid does Love's wide empire

No fairer Maid e'er heaved the bosom's

A thousand Loves around her forehead fly:

A thousand Loves sit melting in her eye; Love lights her smile—in Joy's red nectar dips

His myrtle flower, and plants it on her

She speaks! and hark that passionwarbled song— Still, Fancy! still that voice, those notes, prolong,

As sweet as when that voice with rapturous falls

Shall wake the softened echoes of Heaven's Halls!

O (have I sigh'd) were mine the wizard's rod,

Or mine the power of Proteus, changeful God! 1

A flower-entangled Arbor I would seem To shield my Love from Noontide's sultry beam:

Or bloom a Myrtle, from whose odorous boughs

My Love might weave gay garlands for her brows.

When Twilight stole across the fading vale,

To fan my Love I'd be the Evening Gale;

Mourn in the soft folds of her swelling vest,

And flutter my faint pinions on her breast!

On Seraph wing I'd float a Dream by night,

To soothe my Love with shadows of delight:—

Or soar aloft to be the Spangled Skies, And gaze upon her with a thousand eyes!

As when the Savage, who his drowsy frame

Had basked beneath the Sun's unclouded flame,

Awakes amid the troubles of the air,
The skiev deluge, and white lightning

The skiey deluge, and white lightning's glare Aghast he scours before the tempest's sweep,

And sad recalls the sunny hour of sleep:— So tossed by storms along Life's wildering way.

Mine eye reverted views that cloudless day, When by my native brook I wont to rove, While Hope with kisses nursed the Infant Love.

Dear native brook! like Peace, so placidly

Smoothing through fertile fields thy current meek!

Dear native brook! where first young

Dear native brook! where first young Poesy

Stared wildly-cager in her moontide dream!

Where blameless pleasures dimple Quiet's cheek,

11 entreat the Public's pardon for having carelessly suffered to be printed such intolerable stuff as this and the thirteen following lines. They have not the merit even of originality; as every thought is to be found in the Greek Epigrams (From Coleridge's note in the Poems, 1796.) As water-lilies ripple thy slow stream!
Dear native haunts! where Virtue still is gay,

Where Friendship's fixed star sheds a mellowed ray,

Where Love a crown of thornless Roses wears.

Where soften'd Sorrow smiles within her tears;

And Memory, with a Vestal's chaste employ,

Unceasing feeds the lambent flame of joy!

No more your sky-larks melting from the sight

Shall thrill the attuned heart-string with delight—

No more shall deck your pensive Pleasures sweet

With wreaths of sober hue my evening seat.

Yet dear to Fancy's eye your varied scene

Of wood, hill, dale, and sparkling brook between!

Yet sweet to Fancy's ear the warbled song,

That soars on Morning's wing your vales among.

Scenes of my Hope! the aching eye ye leave

Like you bright hues that paint the clouds of eve!

Tearful and saddening with the saddened blaze

Mine eye the gleam pursues with wistful gaze:

Sees shades on shades with deeper tint impend,

Till chill and damp the moonless night descend. 1793. 1796.

OR THE CIRCASSIAN LOVE-CHANT

At midnight by the stream I roved, To forget the form I loved. Image of Lewti! from my mind Depart; for Lewti is not kind.

The Moon was high, the moonlight gleam

And the shadow of a star Heaved upon Tamaha's stream: But the rock shone brighter far, The rock half sheltered from my view By pendent boughs of tressy yew.— So shines my Lewti's forehead fair, Gleaming through her sable hair, Image of Lewti! from my mind Depart; for Lewti is not kind.

I saw a cloud of palest hue, Onward to the moon it passed; Still brighter and more bright it grew, With floating colors not a few,

Till it reach'd the moon at last: Then the cloud was wholly bright, With a rich and amber light! And so with many a hope I seek

And with such joy I find my Lewti; And even so my pale wan cheek

Drinks in as deep a flush of beauty!
Nay, treacherous image! leave my
mind,

If Lewti never will be kind.

The little cloud—it floats away, Away it goes; away so soon? Alas! it has no power to stay: Its hues are dim, its hues are gray Away it passes from the moon!

How mournfully it seems to fly,
Ever fading more and more,
To joyless regions of the sky—
And now 'tis whiter than before!
As white as my poor cheek will be,
When, Lewti! on my couch I lie,

A dying man for love of thee.

Nay, treacherous image! leave my
mind—

And yet, thou didst not look unkind.

I saw a vapor in the sky. Thin, and white, and very high; I ne'er beheld so thin a cloud: Perhaps the breezes that can fly Now below and now above,

Have snatched aloft the lawny shroud
Of Lady fair—that died for love.
For maids, as well as youths, hav

For maids, as well as youths, have perished

From fruitless love too fondly cherished.

Nay, treacherous image! leave my
mind—

For Lewti never will be kind.

Hush! my heedless feet from under Slip the crumbling banks for ever: Like echoes to a distant thunder,

They plunge into the gentle river.
The river-swans have heard my tread,
And startle from their reedy bed.
O beauteous birds! methinks ye measure

Your movements to some heavenly tune!

O beauteous birds! 'tis such a pleasure
To see you move beneath the moon,
I would it were your true delight
To sleep by day and wake all night.

I know the place where Lewti lies When silent night has closed her eyes: It is a breezy jasmine-bower,

The nightingale sings o'er her head:
Voice of the Night! had I the power
That leafy labyrinth to thread,

And creep, like thee, with soundless tread,

I then might view her bosom white Heaving lovely to my sight, As these two swans together heave On the gently-swelling wave.

Oh! that she saw me in a dream, And dreamt that I had died for care; All pale and wasted I would seem

Yet fair withal, as spirits are! I'd die indeed, if I might see Her bosom heave, and heave for me! Soothe, gentle image! soothe my mind! To-morrow Lewti may be kind.

1794. April 13, 1798.

LA FAYETTE

As when far off the warbled strains are heard

That soar on Morning's wing the vales among:

Within his cage the imprisoned matin bird

Swells the full chorus with a generous song:

He bathes no pinion in the dewy light, No Father's joy, no Lover's bliss he shares.

Yet still the rising radiance cheers his sight -

His fellows' freedom soothes the captive's cares!

Thou, FAYETTE! who didst wake with startling voice

Life's better sun from that long win try night,

Thus in thy Country's triumphs shalt rejoice

And mock with raptures high the dungeon's might:

For lo! the morning struggles into day, And Slavery's spectres shrick and vanish from the ray!

REFLECTIONS ON HAVING LEFT A PLACE OF RETIREMENT

Sermoni propriora.-nor.

Low was our pretty Cot: our tallest rose Peeped at the chamber-window. We could hear

At silent noon, and eve, and early morn, The sea's faint murmur. In the open air

Our myrtles blossom'd; and across the Thick jasmines twined: the little landscape round

Was green and woody, and refreshed the eye.

It was a spot which you might aptly call

The Valley of Seclusion! Once I saw Hallowing his Sabbath-day by quietness) A wealthy son of commerce saunter by, Bristowa's citizen: methought, it calmed His thirst of idle gold, and made him muse

With wiser feelings: for he paused, and looked

With a pleased sadness, and gazed all around,

Then eyed our Cottage, and gazed round again, And sighed, and said, it was a Blessed

Place.
And we were blessed. Oft with patient ear Long-listening to the viewless sky-lark's

Long-listening to the viewless sky-lark's note

(Viewless, or haply for a moment seen Gleaming on sunny wings) in whispered tones

I've said to my beloved, "Such, sweet girl!

The inobtrusive song of Happiness, Unearthly minstrelsy! then only heard When the soul seeks to hear; when all is hushed.

And the heart listens!"

But the time, when first From that low dell, steep up the stony mount

I climbed with perilous toil and reached the top,

Oh! what a goodly scene! Here the bleak mount,

The bare bleak mountain speckled thin with sheep;

Gray clouds, that shadowing spot the sunny fields;

And river, now with bushy rocks o'er browed.

Now winding bright and full, with naked banks:

And seats, and lawns, the abbey and the wood.

And cots, and hamlets, and faint cityspire:

The Channel there, the Islands and white sails.

Dim coasts, and cloud-like hills and shoreless Ocean—

It seem'd like Omnipresence! God, methought,

Had built him there a Temple: the whole World

Seemed imaged in its vast circumference:

No wish profaned my overwhelmed heart. Blest hour! It was a luxury,—to be!

Ah! quiet dell! dear cot, and mount sublime!

I was constrained to quit you. Was it right,

While my unnumbered brethren toiled and bled,

That I should dream away the entrusted hours

On rose-leaf beds, pampering the coward

With feelings all too delicate for use? Sweet is the tear that from some Howard's eye Drops on the cheek of one he lifts from

And he that works me good with un-

Does it but half: he chills me while he aids,

My benefactor, not my brother man!
Yet even this, this cold beneficence

Praise, praise it, O my Soul! oft as thou scann'st

The sluggard Pity's vision-weaving tribe!
Who sigh for wretchedness, yet shun
the wretched.

Nursing in some delicious solitude
Their slothful loves and dainty sympathies!

I therefore go, and join head, heart, and hand,

Active and firm, to fight the bloodless fight

Of science, freedom, and the truth in Christ.

Yet oft when after honorable toil Rests the tired mind, and waking loves to dream,

My spirit shall revisit thee, dear Cot!

Thy jasmine and thy window-peeping rose.

And myrtles fearless of the mild sea-air.
And I shall sigh fond wishes—sweet abode!

Ah!—had none greater! And that all had such!

It might be so—but the time is not yet. Speed it, O Father! Let thy Kingdom come! 1795. October, 1796.

TIME REAL AND IMAGINARY

AN ALLEGORY

On the wide level of a mountain's head, (I knew not where, but 'twas some faery place)

Their pinions, ostrich-like, for sails outspread,

Two lovely children run an endless race,
A sister and a brother!
This far outstript the other;

Yet ever runs she with reverted face, And looks and listens for the boy behind:

For he, alas! is blind! O'er rough and smooth with even ster he passed,

And knows not whether he be first collast. 1817.

THIS LIME-TREE BOWER MY PRISON

ADDRESSED TO CHARLES LAMB, OF THE INDIA HOUSE, LONDON

In the June of 1797 some long-expected friends paid a visit to the author's cottage; and on the morning of their arrival, he met with an accident, which disabled him from walking during the whole time of their stay. One evening, when they had left him for a few hours, he composed the following lines in the gardenbower. (Coleridge.)

Well, they are gone, and here must I remain,

This lime-tree bower my prison! I have lost

Beauties and feelings, such as would have been

Most sweet to my remembrance even when age

1 Included by Coleridge among his "Juvenile Poems," There is no other evidence to indicate at what date it was written, See, however, a manuscript note of 1811 on the same subject, given in Anima Poetae at the beginning of Chapter VIII.

Had dimmed mine eyes to blindness!
They, meanwhile,

Friends, whom I never more may meet again,

On springy heath, along the hill-top edge,

Wander in gladness, and wind down, perchance,

To that still roaring dell, of which I told:
The roaring dell, o'erwooded, narrow,
deep,

And only speckled by the mid-day sun; Where its slim trunk the ash from rock to rock

Flings arching like a bridge:—that branchless ash,

Unsunned and damp, whose few poor yellow leaves

Ne'er tremble in the gale, yet tremble still,

Fanned by the water-fall! and there my friends

Behold the dark green file of long lank weeds,

That all at once (a most fantastic sight!)
Still nod and drip beneath the drigging edge

Of the blue clay-stone.

Now, my friends emerge Beneath the wide wide Heaven—and view again

The many steepled tract magnificent Of hilly fields and meadows, and the sea,

With some fair bark, perhaps, whose sails light up

The slip of smooth clear blue betwixt

two Isles
Of purple shadow! Yes! they wander

In gladness all; but thou, methinks,

most glad,
My gentle-hearted Charles! for thou hast pined

And hungered after Nature, many a year.

In the great City pent, winning thy way With sad yet patient soul, through evil and pain

And strange calamity! Ah! slowly sink Behind the western ridge, thou glorious Sun!

Shine in the slant beams of the sinking orb.

Ye purple heath-flowers! richlier burn, ye clouds!

Live in the yellow light, ye distant groves!

And kindle, thou blue Ocean! So my friend

Struck with deep joy may stand, as I have stood,

Silent with swimming sense; yea, gazing round

On the wide landscape, gaze till all doth seem

Less gross than bodily; and of such hues

As veil the Almighty Spirit, when yet he makes

Spirits perceive his presence.

Comes sudden on my heart, and I am glad

As I myself were there! Nor in this bower,

This little lime-tree bower, have I not marked

Much that has soothed me. Pale beneath the blaze

Hung the transparent foliage; and I watched

Some broad and sunny leaf, and loved to see

The shadow of the leaf and stem above, Dappling its sunshine! And that walnut-tree was richly tinged, and a deep radiance

Full on the ancient ivy, which usurps Those fronting elms, and now, with blackest mass

Makes their dark branches gleam a lighter hue

Through the late twilight: and though now the bat

Wheels silent by, and not a swallow twitters,

Yet still the solitary humble-bee

Sings in the bean-flower! Henceforth I shall know

That Nature ne'er deserts the wise and pure;

No plot so narrow, be but Nature there, No waste so vacant, but may well employ

Each faculty of sense, and keep the

Awake to Love and Beauty! and some-

'Tis well to be bereft of promised good, That we may lift the soul, and contemplate

With lively joy the joys we cannot share.

My gentle-hearted Charles! when the last rook

Beat its straight path along the dusky

Homewards, I blest it! deeming, its black wing

(Now a dim speck, now vanishing in

Had cross'd the mighty orb's dilated glory,

While thou stood'st gazing; or when all was still.

Flew creeking o'er thy head, and had a charm

For thee, my gentle-hearted Charles, to whom

No sound is dissonant which tells of 1797. 1800.

KUBLA KHAN

In the summer of the year 1797, the Author, then in ill health, had retired to a lonely farm-house between Porlock and Linton, on the Exmoor confines of Somerset and Devonshire. consequence of a slight indisposition, an anodyne had been prescribed, from the effects of which he fell asleep in his chair at the moment that he was reading the following sentence, or words of the same substance, in Purchas's "Pilgrimage": "Here the Khan Kubla commanded a palace to "Here the Khan Kuola commanded a palace to be built, and a stately garden thereunto. And thus ten miles of fertile ground were inclosed with a wall." The Author continued for about three hours in a profound sleep, at least of the external senses, during which time he has the most tivil confidence, that he could not have composed less than from two to three hundred lines; if that indeed, can be called composition. lines; if that indeed can be called composition in which all the images rose up before him as things, with a parallel production of the correspondent expressions, without any sensation or consciousness of effort. On awaking he appeared to himself to have a distinct recollection of the whole, and taking his pen, ink, and paper, instantly and eagerly wrote down the lines that are here preserved. At this moment he was unfortunately called out by a person on business from Porlock, and detained by him above an hour, and on his return to his room, found, to his no small surprise and mortification, that though he still retained some vague and dim recollection of the general purport of the vision, yet, with the exception of some eight or ten scattered lines and images, all the rest had passed away, like the images on the surface of a stream into which a stone has been cast, but, alas I without the after restoration of the latter.

Then all the charm Is broken-all that phantom-world so fair Vanishes, and a thousand circlets spread, An I each misshapes the other. Stay awhile, Poor youth! who scarcely dar'st lift up thine

The stream will soon renew its smoothness, soon The visions will return? And lo, he stays, And soon the frazments dim of lovely forms Come trembling back, unite, and now once more

The pool becomes a mirror.

(From The Picture; or, the Lover's Resolution)
Yet from the still surviving recollections in his mind, the Author has frequently purposed to tinish for himself what had been originally, as it were, given to him. Αύριον άδιον άσω, but the to-morrow is yet to come. (Coleridge's note, 1816.)

In Xanadu did Kubla Khan A stately pleasure-dome decree: Where Alph, the sacred river, ran Through caverns measureless to man Down to a sunless sea.

So twice five miles of fertile ground

With walls and towers were girdled round:

And here were gardens bright with sinuous rills,

Where blossomed many an incense-bearing tree;

And here were forests ancient as the Enfolding sunny spots of greenery.

But oh! that deep romantic chasm which slanted

Down the green hill athwart a cedarn cover !

A savage place! as holy and enchanted As e'er beneath a waning moon was haunted

By woman wailing for her demon-lover! And from this chasm, with ceaseless turmoil seething,

As if this earth in fast thick pants were breathing, mighty fountain momently was forced:

Amid whose swift half-intermitted burst Huge fragments vaulted like rebounding

Or chaffy grain beneath the thresher's flail:

And 'mid these dancing rocks at once and ever

It flung up momently the sacred river. Five miles meandering with a mazy motion

Through wood and dale the sacred river ran,

Then reached the caverns measureless to

And sank in tumult to a lifeless ocean: And 'mid this tumult Kubla heard from Ancestral voices prophesying war!

The shadow of the dome of pleasure Floated midway on the waves; Where was heard the mingled measure

From the fountain and the caves. It was a miracle of rare device,

A sunny pleasure-dome with caves of ice!

A damsel with a dulcimer In a vision once I saw: It was an Abyssinian maid. And on her dulcimer she played, Singing of Mount Abora. Could I revive within me Her symphony and song. To such a deep delight twould win

That with music loud and long, I would build that dome in air. That sunny dome! those caves of ice! And all who heard should see them there. And all should cry, Beware! Beware! His flashing eyes, his floating hair! Weave a circle round him thrice, And close your eyes with holy dread, For he on honey-dew hath fed, And drunk the milk of Paradise.

SONG FROM OSORIO

HEAR, sweet spirit, hear the spell, Lest a blacker charm compel! So shall the midnight breezes swell With thy deep long-lingering knell.

And at evening evermore, In a Chapel on the shore, Shall the Chaunters sad and saintly, Yellow tapers burning faintly, Doleful Masses chaunt for thee, Miserere Domine!

Hark! the cadence dies away On the quiet moonlight sea: The boatmen rest their oars and say, Miserere Domine! 1797. 1813.

THE RIME OF THE ANCIENT MARINER¹

ARGUMENT 1

How a Ship having passed the Line was driven by storms to the cold Country towards the South Pole; and how from thence she made her course to the tropical Latitude of the Great Pacific Ocean; and of the strange things that befell; and in what manner the Ancyent Marinere came back to his own Country.

Part I

² It is an ancient Mariner. And he stoppeth one of three.

"By thy long gray beard and glittering

Now wherefore stopp'st thou me?

The Bridegroom's doors are opened wide.

And I am next of kin: The guests are met, the feast is set: May'st hear the merry din."

He holds him with his skinny hand. "There was a ship," quoth he.

"Hold off! unhand me, gray-beard loon!"

Eftsoons his hand dropt he.

³ He holds him with his glittering eve— The Wedding-Guest stood still, And listens like a three years' child: The Mariner hath his will.

third stanza, for instance, the original text has the two following:

But still he holds the wedding-guest—
"There was a Ship," quoth he—
"Nay, if thou'st got a laughsome tale,

Marinere! come with me.

He holds him with his skinny hand, Quoth he, "There was a Ship—" "Now get thee hence, thou gray-beard Loon! Or my Staff shall make thee skip.'

On the origin of the poem, see Biographia Literaria, Chap XIV, and Wordsworth's account of it, quoted and discussed in H. D. Traill's Life of Coleridge, pp. 47-50.

² An ancient Mariner meeteth three Gallants bidden to a wedding-feast, and detaineth one. This and the following notes, except those in brackets, are Coleridge's running Summary of the story, first printed in Sybilline Leaves, 1817.]

3 The Wedding-Guest is spell-bound by the eye of the old seafaring man, and constrained to hear his tale.

¹ The poem is here given in the text of 1829 which is Coleridge's final version, the result of several revisions, most of which are improvements over the first text of 1798. Instead of the

The Wedding-Guest sat on a stone: He cannot choose but hear: And thus spake on that ancient man, The bright eved Mariner

"The ship was cheered, the harbor cleared,
Merrily did we drop
Below the kirk, below the hill,
Below the lighthouse top.

1 The sun came up upon the left, Out of the sea came he! And he shone bright, and on the right Went down into the sea.

Higher and higher every day, Till over the mast at noon—" The Wedding-Guest here beat his breast, For he heard the loud bassoon.

² The bride hath paced into the hall, Red as a rose is she:
Nodding their heads before her goes
The merry minstrelsy.

The Wedding-Guest he beat his breast, Yet he cannot choose but hear: And thus spake on that ancient man. The bright-eyed Mariner.

³ "And now the Storm-blast came, and he Was tyrannous and strong: He struck with his o'ertaking wings, And chased us south along.

With sloping masts and dipping prow, As who pursued with yeil and blow Still treads the shadow of his foe, And forward bends his head, The ship drove fast, loud roared the blast, And southward aye we fled.

And now there came both mist and snow,

And it grew wondrous cold:
And ice, mast-high, came floating by,
As green as emerald.

The Mariner tells how the ship sailed south ward with a good wind and fair weather, till it reached the line.

² The West ag Guest heareth the bridal music; but the Mariner continueth his tage.

³ The ship drawn by a storm toward the south pole.

4 The land of ice, and of fearful sounds where to living the a way to be seen.

And through the drifts the snowy clifts
Did send a dismal sheen:
Nor shapes of men nor beasts we ken—
The ice was all between.

The ice was here, the ice was there,
The ice was all around:
It cracked and growled, and roared and howled,
Like voices in a swound!

At length did cross an Albatross, Thorough the fog it came:
As if it had been a Christian soul,
We hailed it in God's name.

It ate the food it ne'er had eat, And round and round it new. The ice did split with a thunder-fit; The helmsman steered us through!

And a good south wind sprung up behind;
 The Albatross did follow,
 And every day, for food or play,

Came to the mariner's hollo!

In mist or cloud, on mast or shroud,
It perched for vespers nine;
While all the night, through fog-smoke
white.

Glimmered the white moon-shine."

8 "God save thee, ancient Mariner! From the fiends, that plague thee thus!--Why look'st thou so?" —" With my cross-bow

I shot the Albatross.

PART II

"The Sun now rose upon the right: Out of the sea came he, Still hid in mist, and on the left Went down into the sea.

And the good south wind still blew be hind,

But no sweet bird did follow, Nor any day for food or play Came to the mariners' hollo!

- ¹ Till a great sea bird, called the acceives, came through the snow-fog, and was received with great joy and hospitality.
- ² And lo! the Albatross proveth a bird of good omen, and followeth the ship as it returned northward through fog and floating ice.
- 3 The ancient Mariner inhospitably killeth the pious bird of good omen.

And I had done an hellish thing, And it would work 'em woe: For all averred, I had killed the bird, That made the breeze to blow. Ah wretch! said they, the bird to slay, That made the breeze to blow!

² Nor dim nor red, like God's own head, The glorious Sun uprist: Then all averred, I had killed the bird That brought the fog and mist. "Twas right, said they, such birds to slay,

That bring the fog and mist.

The fair breeze blew, the white foam flew.

The furrow followed free; We were the first that ever burst Into that silent sea.

4 Down dropt the breeze, the sails dropt down,

Twas sad as sad could be; And we did speak only to break The silence of the sea!

All in a hot and copper sky, The bloody Sun, at noon, Right up above the mast did stand, No bigger than the Moon.

Day after day, day after day, We stuck, nor breath nor motion; As idle as a painted ship Upon a painted ocean.

⁵ Water, water, everywhere, And all the boards did shrink; Water, water, everywhere Nor any drop to drink.

The very deep did rot: O Christ!
That ever this should be!
Yea, slimy things did crawl with legs
Upon the slimy sea.

About, about, in reel and rout The death-fires danced at night; The water, like a witch's oils, Burnt green, and blue and white.

² But when the fog cleared off, they justify the same, and thus make themselves accomplices in the crime.

³ The fair breeze continues; the ship enters the Pacific Ocean, and sails northward, even till it reaches the Line.

⁴ The ship hath been suddenly becalmed.

5 And the Albatross begins to be avenged.

¹ And some in dreams assured were Of the Spirit that plagued us so; Nine fathom deep he had followed us From the land of mist and snow.

And every tongue, through utter drought,
Was withered at the root;
We could not speak, no more than if
We had been choked with soot.

² Ah! well a-day! what evil looks Had I from old and young! Instead of the cross, the Albatross About my neck was hung.

Part III

"There passed a weary time. Each throat
Was parched, and glazed each eye.
A weary time! a weary time!
How glazed each weary eye!—
When looking westward, I beheld
A something in the sky.

At first it seemed a little speck, And then it seemed a mist; It moved and moved, and took at last A certain shape, I wist.

A speck, a mist, a shape, I wist! And still it neared and neared: As if it dodged a water-sprite, It plunged and tacked and veered.

4 With throats unslaked, with black lips baked,

We could nor laugh nor wail;
Through utter drought all dumb we stood!

I bit my arm, I sucked the blood, And cried, A sail! a sail!

With throats unslaked, with black lips baked,

Agape they heard me call:

¹ A Spirit had followed them; one of the mysible inhabitants of this planet, neither departed souls nor angels; concerning whom the learned Jew, Josephus, and the Platonic Constantinopolitan, Michael Psellus, may be consulted. They are very numerous, and there is no climate or element without one or more.

² The shipmates, in their sore distress, would fain throw the whole guilt on the ancient Mariner: in sign whereof they hang the dead seabird round his neck.

3 The ancient Mariner beholdeth a sign in the element afar off.

⁴ At its nearer approach, it seemeth him to be a ship; and at a dear ransom he freeth his speech from the bonds of thirst.

Gramercy I they for joy did grin, And all at once their breath drew in, As they were drinking all.

"'See! see!' (I cried) 'she tacks no more!

Hither to work us weal, Without a breeze, without a tide, She steadies with upright keel!'

The western wave was all aflame. The day was well-nigh done! Almost upon the western wave Rested the broad bright Sun; When that strange shape drove suddenly Betwixt us and the Sun.

8 And straight the Sun was flecked with bars.

(Heaven's Mother send us grace!) As if through a dungeon-grate he peered With broad and burning face.

Alas! (thought I, and my heart beat loud)

How fast she nears and nears! Are those her sails that glance in the Sun.

Like restless gossameres?

- 4 Are those her ribs though which the Sun Did peer, as through a grate? And is that Woman all her crew? Is that a Death? and are there two? ⁶ Is Death that woman's mate?
- 6 Her lips were red, her looks were free, Her locks were vellow as gold: Her skin was as white as leprosy, The Night-mare Life-in-Death was she, Who thicks man's blood with cold.
- 7 The naked hulk alongside came, And the twain were casting dice: 'The game is done! I've won! I've won!' Quoth she, and whistles thrice.

A flash of joy.

the setting Sun.

- And horror follows. For can it be a ship that comes onward without wind or tide?
- 3 It seemeth him but the skeleton of a ship. And its ribs are seen as bars on the face of
- ⁵ The Spectre-Woman and her Death-mate, and no other on board the skeleton-ship.

⁶ Like vessel, like crew!

Death and Life in-Death have diced for the ship's crew, and she (the latter) winneth the ancient Mariner ¹The Sun's rim dips; the stars rush out. At one stride comes the dark : With far-heard whisper, o'er the sea, Off shot the spectre-bark.

² We listened and looked sideways up! Fear at my heart, as at a cup, My life-blood seemed to sip! The stars were dim, and thick the night, steersman's face by his lamp gleamed white;

From the sails the dew did drip-Till clomb above the eastern bar The horned Moon, with one bright star Within the nether tip.

³ One after one, by the star-dogged Moon, Too quick for groan or sigh, Each turned his face with a ghastly pang.

And cursed me with his eye.

⁴ Four times fifty living men, (And I heard nor sigh nor groan) With heavy thump, a lifeless lump, They dropped down one by one.

⁵ The souls did from their bodies fly.— They fled to bliss or woe! And every soul, it passed me by, Like the whizz of my cross-bow!"-

PART IV

6" I fear thee, ancient Mariner! I fear thy skinny hand And thou art long, and lank, and brown, As is the ribbed sea-sand.7

I fear thee and thy glittering eye. And thy skinny hand, so brown." 8 "Fear not, fear not, thou Wedding-Guest!

This body dropt not down.

- ¹ No twilight within the courts of the Sur
- ² At the rising of the Moon,

3 One after another

4 His shipmates drop down dead.

⁵ But Life-in-Death begins her work on the ancient Mariner.

⁶ The Wedding-Guest feareth that a Spirit is talking to him.

⁷ [For the last two lines of this stanza, I am indebted to Mr. Wordsworth. It was on a delightful walk from Nether Stowey to Dulverton, with him and his sister, in the autumn of 1797, that this poem was planned, and in part composed. (Note of Coleridge, first printed in Sibylline Leaves, 1817)]

⁸ But the ancient Mariner assureth him of his bodily life, and proceedeth to relate his horrible penance.

Alone, alone, all, all alone, Alone on a wide wide sea! And never a saint took pity on My soul in agony.

- ¹ The many men, so beautiful!
 And they all dead did lie:
 And a thousand thousand slimy things
 Lived on; and so did I.
- ² I looked upon the rotting sea, And drew my eyes away; I looked upon the rotting deck, And there the dead men lay,

I looked to heaven, and tried to pray; But or ever a prayer had gusht, A wicked whisper came, and made My heart as dry as dust.

I closed my lids, and kept them close, And the balls like pulses beat; For the sky and the sea, and the sea and the sky Lav like a load on my weary eye,

And the dead were at my feet.

³ The cold sweat melted from their limbs,

Nor rot nor reek did they:

The look with which they looked on me Had never passed away.

An orphan's curse would drag to hell
A spirit from on high;
But oh! more horrible than that
Is a curse in a dead man's eye!
Seven days, seven nights, I saw that curse.

And yet I could not die.

⁴ The moving Moon went up the sky, And nowhere did abide: Softly she was going up, And a star or two beside—

1 He despiseth the creatures of the calm.

And envieth that they should live, and so many lie dead.

³ But the curse liveth for him in the eye of the dead men.

⁴ In his loneliness and fixedness he yearneth towards the journeying Moon, and the stars that still sojourn, yet still move onward; and everywhere the blue sky belongs to them, and is their appointed rest, and their native country and their own natural homes, which they enter unannounced, as lords that are certainly expected, and yet there is a slient joy at their arrival.

Her beams bemocked the sultry main, Like April hoar-frost spread; But where the ship's huge shadow lay, The charmed water burnt alway A still and awful red.

¹ Beyond the shadow of the ship, I watched the water-snakes: They moved in tracks of sh'uing white, And when they reared, the elfish light Fell off in hoary flakes.

Within the shadow of the ship I watched their rich attire: Blue, glossy green, and velvet black, They coiled and swam; and every track Was a flash of golden fire.

- ² O hat py livings things! no tongue Their beauty might declare: A spring of love gushed from my heart ³ And I blessed them unaware: Sure my kind saint took pity on me, And I blessed them unaware.
- ⁴ The selfsame moment I could pray; And from my neck so free The Albatross fell off, and sank Like lead into the sea.

PART V

"Oh sleep! it is a gentle thing, Beloved from pole to pole! To Mary Queen the praise be given! She sent the gentle sleep from Heaven, That slid into my soul.

The silly buckets on the deck, That had so long remained. I dreamt that they were filled with dew; And when I awoke, it rained.

My lips were wet, my throat was cold, My garments all were dank; Sure I had drunken in my dreams, And still my body drank

I moved, and could not feel my limbs: I was so light—almost I thought that I had died in sleep, And was a blessed ghost.

- ¹ By the light of the Moon he beholdeth God's creatures of the great calm.
 - ² Their beauty and their happiness.
 - 3 He blesseth them in his heart.
 - 4 The spell begins to break.
- ⁵ By grace of the holy Mother, the ancient Mariner is refreshed with rain.

And soon I heard a roaring wind; It did not come anear; But with its sound it shook the sails, That were so thin and sere.

The upper air burst into life! And a bundred fire flags sheen, To and fro they were burried about! And to and fro, and in and out, The wan stars danced between.

And the coming wind did roar more

And the sails did sigh like sedge;
And the rain poured down from one black cloud;

The Moon was at its edge.

The thick black cloud was cleft, and still The Moon was at its side:
Like waters shot from some high crag,
The lightning fell with never a jag,
A river steep and wide.

² The loud wind never reached the ship,

Yet now the ship moved on! Beneath the lightning and the Moon The dead men gave a groan.

They groaned, they stirred, they all uprose,

Nor spake, nor moved their eyes; It had been strange, even in a dream, To have seen those dead men rise.

The helmsman steered, the ship moved

Yet never a breeze up blew;
The mariners all 'gan work the ropes,
Where they were wont to do;
They raised their limbs like lifeless tools—

We were a ghastly crew.

The body of my brother's son Stood by me, knee to knee:
The body and I pulled at one rope But he said nought to me."—

⁸ "I fear thee, ancient Mariner!"—
"Be calm, thou Wedding-Guest!

¹ He heareth sounds and seeth strange sights and commotions in the sky and the element.

² The bodies of the ship's crew are inspired, and the ship moves on;

*But not by the souls of the men, nor by lemons of earth or middle air, but by a blessed troop of an relic spirits, sent down by the invocation of the guardian saint. 'Twas not those souls that fled in pain. Which to their corses came again, But a troop of spirits blest:

For when it dawned—they dropped their arms,

And clustered round the mast; Sweet sounds rose slowly through their mouths,

And from their bodies passed.

Around, around, flew each sweet sound, Then darted to the Sun; Slowly the sounds came back again, Now mixed, now one by one.

Sometimes a-dropping from the sky I heard the sky-lark sing; Sometimes all little birds that are, How they seemed to fill the sea and air With their sweet jargoning!

And now 'twas like all instruments, Now like a lonely flute; And now it is an angel's song, That makes the heavens be mute.

It ceased; yet still the sails made on A pleasant noise till noon, A noise like of a hidden brook In the leafy month of June, That to the sleeping woods all night Singeth a quiet tune.

Till noon we quietly sailed on, Yet never a breeze did breathe: Slowly and smoothly went the ship, Moved onward from beneath.

1 Under the keel nine fathom deep, From the land of mist and snow, The spirit slid: and it was he That made the ship to go. The sails at noon left off their tune, And the ship stood still also.

The Sun, right up above the mast, Had fixed her to the ocean:
But in a minute she 'gan stir,
With a short uneasy motion—
Backwards and forwards half her lengt
With a short uneasy motion.

Then like a pawing horse let go, She made a sudden bound: It flung the blood into my head, And I fell down in a swound.

¹ The lonesome Spirit from the south-pole carries on the ship as fur as the Line, in obedience to the angelic troop, but still requireth vengeance.

1 How long in that same fit I lay, I have not to declare; But ere my living life returned, I heard and in my soul discerned Two voices in the air.

'Is it he?' quoth one, 'Is this the man? By him who died on cross, With his cruel bow he laid full low The harmless Albatross.

The spirit who bideth by himself
In the land of mist and snow,
He loved the bird that loved the man
Who shot him with his bow.'

The other was a softer voice,
As soft as honey-dew:
Quoth he, 'The man hath penance done,
And penance more will do.'

PART VI

FIRST VOICE

"" But tell me, tell me! speak again, Thy soft response renewing— What makes that ship drive on so fast? What is the ocean doing?

SECOND VOICE

'Still as a slave before his lord, The ocean hath no blast; His great bright eye most silently Up to the Moon is cast—

If he may know which way to go; For she guides him smooth or grim. See, brother, see! how graciously She looketh down on him.'

FIRST VOICE

2'But why drives on that ship so fast, Without or wave or wind?'

SECOND VOICE

'The air is cut away before, And closes from behind.

¹ The Polar Spirit's fellow-demons, the invisible inhabitants of the element, take part in his wrong; and two of them relate one to the other, that penance long and heavy for the ancient Mariner hath been accorded to the Polar Spirit, who returneth southward.

² The Mariner hath been cast into a trance; for the angelic power causeth the vessel to drive northward faster than human life could endure

Fly, brother, fly! more high, more high! Or we shall be belated:
For slow and slow that ship will go,
When the Mariner's trance is abated.'

¹ I woke, and we were sailing on As in a gentle weather: 'Twas night, calm night, the Moon was high, The dead men stood together.

All stood together on the deck, For a charnel-dungeon fitter: All fixed on me their stony eyes, That in the Moon did glitter.

The pang, the curse, with which they died,
Had never passed away:
I could not draw my eyes from theirs,
Nor turn them up to pray.

² And now this spell was snapt: once more
I viewed the ocean green,
And looked far forth, yet little saw

Like one, that on a lonesome road Doth walk in fear and dread, And having once turned round walks

And turns no more his head; Because he knows, a frightful fiend Doth close behind him tread.

Of what had else been seen-

But soon there breathed a wind on me, Nor sound nor motion made: Its path was not upon the sea, In ripple or in shade.

It raised my hair, it fanned my cheek Like a meadow-gale of spring— It mingled strangely with my fears, Yet it felt like a welcoming.

Swiftly, swiftly flew the ship, Yet she sailed softly too: Sweetly, sweetly blew the breeze— On me alone it blew.

⁸ Oh! dream of joy! is this indeed The light-house top I see? Is this the hill? is this the kirk? Is this mine own countree?

¹The supernatural motion is retarded; the Mariner awakes, and his penance begins anew.

² The curse is finally expiated.

3 And the ancient Mariner beholdeth his native country.

We drifted o'er the harbor-bar, And I with sobs did pray— 'O let me be awake, my God! Or let me sleep alway.'

The harbor-bay was clear as glass, So smoothly it was strewn! And on the bay the moonlight lay, And the shadow of the Moon.

The rock shone bright, the kirk no less, That stands above the rock: The moonlight steeped in silentness The steady weathercock.

And the bay was white with silent light Till rising from the same,

1 Full many shapes, that shadows were,
In crimson colors came.

² A little distance from the prow Those crimson shadows were: I turned my eyes upon the deck— Oh, Christ! what saw I there!

Each corse lay flat, lifeless and flat, And, by the holy rood! A man all light, a seraph-man, On every corse there stood.

This seraph-band, each waved his hand: It was a heavenly sight! They stood as signals to the land, Each one a lovely light;

This seraph-band, each waved his hand, No voice did they impart— No voice; but oh! the silence sank Like music on my heart.

But soon I heard the dash of oars, I heard the Pilot's cheer; My head was turned perforce away, And I saw a boat appear.

The Pilot and the Pilot's boy, I heard them coming fast: Dear Lord in Heaven! it was a joy The dead men could not blast.

I saw a third—I heard his voice: It is the Hermit good! He singeth loud his godly hymns That he makes in the wood. He'll shrieve my soul, he'll wash away The Albatross's blood.

PART VII

1 "This Hermit good lives in that wood Which slopes down to the sea. How loudly his sweet voice he rears! He loves to talk with marineres That come from a far countree.

He kneels at morn, and noon, and eve— He hath a cushion plump: It is the moss that wholly hides The rotted old oak-stump.

The skiff-boat neared: I heard them talk.

'Why, this is strange, I trow!
Where are those lights so many and fair,

That signal made but now?'

2 'Strange, by my faith!' the Hermit said-

'And they answered not our cheer!
The planks look warped! and see those sails.

How thin they are and sere! I never saw aught like to them, Unless perchance it were

Brown skeletons of leaves that lag My forest-brook along; When the ivy-tod is heavy with snow, And the owlet whoops to the wolf below, That eats the she-wolf's young.'

'Dear Lord! it hath a fiendish look'—
(The Pilot made reply)
'I am a-feared.'—'Push on, push on!'
Said the Hermit cheerily.

The boat came closer to the ship, But I nor spake nor stirred; The boat came close beneath the ship, And straight a sound was heard.

⁸ Under the water it rumbled on, Still louder and more dread: It reached the ship, it split the bay; The ship went down like lead.

4 Stunned by that loud and dreadful sound,
Which sky and ocean smote,

¹ The Hermit of the Wood,

² Approacheth the ship with wonder.

3 The ship suddenly sinketh.

⁴ The ancient Mariner is saved in the Pilot's boat.

¹ The angelic spirits leave the dead bodies,

² And appear in their own forms of light.

Like one that hath been seven days drowned
My body lay afloat;
But swift as dreams, myself I found
Within the Pilot's boat.

Upon the whirl, where sank the ship, The boat spun round and round; And all was still, save that the hill Was telling of the sound.

I moved my lips—the Pilot shrieked And fell down in a fit; The Holy Hermit raised his eyes, And prayed where he did sit.

I took the oars: The Pilot's boy Who now doth crazy go Laughed loud and long, and all the while His eyes went to and fro. 'Ha! ha!' quoth he, 'full plain I see, The Devil knows how to row.'

And now, all in my own countree, I stood on the firm land!
The Hermit stepped forth from the boat, And scarcely he could stand.

1 'O shrieve me, shrieve me, holy man!' The Hermit crossed his brow.
'Say quick,' quoth he, 'I bid thee say—What manner of man art thou?'

Forthwith this frame of mine was wrenched With a woful agony, Which forced me to begin my tale; And then it left ine free.

² Since then, at an uncertain hour, That agony returns:
And till my ghastly tale is told, This heart within me burns.

I pass, like night, from land to land; I have strange power of speech; That moment that his face I see, I know the man that must hear me: To him my tale I teach.

What loud uproar bursts from that door! The wedding-guests are there:
But in the garden-bower the bride
And bride-maids singing are:
And hark the little vesper bell,
Which biddeth me to prayer!

O Wedding-Guest! this soul hath been Alone on a wide wide sea: So lonely, 'twas, that God himself Scarce seemed there to be.

O sweeter than the marriage-feast, 'Tis sweeter far to me,
To walk together to the kirk,
With a goodly company!—

To walk together to the kirk, And all together pray. While each to his great Father bends, Old men, and babes, and loving friends And youths and maidens gay!

¹ Farewell, farewell! but this I tell To thee, thou Wedding-Guest! He prayeth well, who loveth well Both man and bird and beast.

He prayeth best, who loveth best All things both great and small; For the dear God who loveth us, He made and loveth all."

The Mariner, whose eye is bright, Whose beard with age is hoar, Is gone; and now the Wedding-Guest Turned from the bridegroom's door.

He went like one that hath been stunned,
And is of sense forlorn:
A sadder and a wiser man,
He rose the morrow morn.

CHRISTABEL

The first part of the following poem was writ ten in the year one thousand seven hundred and ninety-seven, at Stowey, in the county of Somerset. The second part, after my return from Germany, in the year one thousand eight hundred, at Keswick, Cumberland. Since the latter date, my poetic powers have been, till very lately, in a state of suspended animation. But as, in my very first conception of the tale, had the whole present to my mind, with the wholeness, no less than with the liveliness of a vision; I trust that I shall be able to embody in verse the three parts yet to come, in the course of the present year.... I have only to add, that the metre of the Christabel is not, properly speaking, irregular, though it may seem so from its being founded on a new principle: namely, that of counting in each line the accents, not the syllables. Though the latter may vary from seven to twelve, yet in each line the accents will be found

¹ The ancient Mariner earnestly entreateth the Hermit to shrieve him; and the penance of life falls on him.

² And ever and anon throughout his future life an agony constraineth him to travel from land toland,

¹ And to teach, by his own example, love and reverence to all things that God made and loveth.

to be only four. Nevertheless this occasional variation in number of syllables is not introduced wantonly, or for the mere ends of convenience, but in correspondence with some transition in the nature of the imagery or passion. (From Coleridge's Preface to the first edition.)

PART THE FIRST

'Tis the middle of night by the castle clock.

And the owls have awakened the crowing cock,

Tu-whit!——Tu-whoo!
And hark, again! the crowing cock,
How drowsily it crew.

Sir Leoline, the Baron rich,
Hath a toothless mastiff, which
From her kennel beneath the rock
Maketh answer to the clock,
Four for the quarters, and twelve for the hour;

Ever and aye, by shine and shower, Sixteen short howls, not over loud; Some say, she sees my lady's shroud.

Is the night chilly and dark?
The night is chilly, but not dark.
The thin gray cloud is spread on high,
It covers but not hides the sky.
The moon is behind, and at the full;
And yet she looks both small and dull.
The night is chill, the cloud is gray;
'Tis a month before the month of May.
And the Spring comes slowly up this way.

The lovely lady, Christabel,
Whom her father loves so well,
What makes her in the woods so late,
A furlong from the castle gate?
She had dreams all yesternight
Of her own betrothed knight;
And she in the midnight wood will pray
For the weal of her lover that's far away.

She stole along, she nothing spoke,
The sighs she heaved were soft and low,
And naught was green upon the oak
But moss and rarest misletoe:
She kneels beneath the huge oak tree,
And in silence prayeth she.

The lady sprang up suddenly,
The lovely lady, Christabel!
It moaned as near, as near can be,
But what it is she cannot tell.—
On the other side it seems to be,
Of the huge, broad-breasted, old oak tree.

The night is chill; the forest bare; Is it the wind that moaneth bleak? There is not wind enough in the air To move away the ringlet curl From the lovely lady's cheek—
There is not wind enough to twirl The one red leaf, the last of its clan, That dances as often as dance it can, Hanging so light, and hanging so high, On the topmost twig that looks up at the sky.

Hush, beating heart of Christabel!
Jesu, Maria, shield her well!
She folded her arms beneath her cloak,
And stole to the other side of the oak.
What sees she there?

There she sees a damsel bright,
Drest in a silken robe of white,
That shadowy in the moonlight shone:
The neck that made the white robe
wan,

Her stately neck, and arms were bare; Her blue-veined feet unsandal'd were, And wildly glittered here and there The gems entangled in her hair. I guess, 'twas frightful there to see A lady so richly clad as she— Beautiful exceedingly!

Mary mother, save me now! (Said Christabel,) And who art thou?

The lady strange made answer meet, And her voice was faint and sweet:— Have pity on my sore distress, I scarce can speak for weariness: Stretch forth thy hand, and have no

Said Christabel, How camest thou here? And the lady, whose voice was faint and sweet,

Did thus pursue her answer meet:

My sire is of a noble line,
And my name is Geraldine:
Five warriors seized me yestermorn,
Me, even me, a maid forlorn:
They choked my cries with force and fright,

And tied me on a palfrey white.
The palfrey was as fleet as wind,
And they rode furiously behind.
They spurred amain, their steeds were
white:

And once we crossed the shade of night. As sure as Heaven shall rescue me, I have no thought what men they be; Nor do I know how long it is

(For I have lain entranced I wis)
Since one, the tallest of the five,
Took me from the palfrey's back,
A weary woman, scarce alive.
Some muttered words his comrades
spoke:

He placed me underneath this oak; He swore they would return with haste; Whither they went I cannot tell— I thought I heard, some minutes past, Sounds as of a castle bell. Stretch forth thy hand (thus ended she).

And help a wretched maid to flee.

Then Christabel stretched forth her hand,

And comforted fair Geraldine:
O well, bright dame! may you command
The service of Sir Leoline;
And gladly our stout chivalry
Will he send forth and friends withal
To guide and guard you safe and free
Home to your noble father's hall.

She rose: and forth with steps they passed

That strove to be, and were not, fast. Her gracious stars the lady blest, And thus spake on sweet Christabel; All our household are at rest The hall as silent as the cell; Sir Leoline is weak in health, And may not well awakened be, But we will move as if in stealth, And I beseech your courtesy, This night, to share your couch with me.

They crossed the moat, and Christabel Took the key that fitted well;
A little door she opened straight,
All in the middle of the gate;
The gate that was ironed within and without,

Where an army in battle array had marched out.

The lady sank, belike through pain, And Christabel with might and main Lifted her up, a weary weight, Over the threshold of the gate: Then the lady rose again, And moved, as she were not in pain.

So free from danger, free from fear, They crossed the court; right glad they were.

And Christabel devoutly cried
To the lady by her side,
Praise we the Virgin all divine
Who hath rescued thee from thy distress!

Alas, alas! said Geraldine,
I cannot speak for weariness.
So free from danger, free from fear,
They crossed the court: right glad they were.

Outside her kennel, the mastiff old Lay fast asleep, in moonshine cold. The mastiff old did not awake, Yet she an angry moan did make! And what can ail the mastiff bitch? Never till now she uttered yell Beneath the eye of Christabel. Perhaps it is the owlet's scritch: For what can ail the mastiff bitch?

They passed the hall, that echoes still, Pass as lightly as you will!

The brands were flat, the brands were dying,

Amid their own white ashes lying;
But when the lady passed, there came
A tongue of light, a fit of flame;
And Christabel saw the lady's eye,
And nothing else saw she thereby,
Save the boss of the shield of Sir Leoline tall.

Which hung in a murky old niche in the wall.

O softly tread, said Christabel, My father seldom sleepeth well.

Sweet Christabel her feet doth bare, And jealous of the listening air They steal their way from stair to stair Now in glimmer, and now in gloom, And now they pass the Baron's room, As still as death, with stifled breath! And now have reached her chamber door:

And now doth Geraldine press down The rushes of the chamber floor.

The moon shines dim in the open air, And not a moonbeam enters here. But they without its light can see The chamber carved so curiously, Carved with figures strange and sweet, All made out of the carver's brain, For a lady's chamber meet; The lamp with twofold silver chain Is fastened to an angel's feet.

The silver lamp burns dead and dim; But Christabel the lamp will trim. She trimmed the lamp, and made it bright,

And left it swinging to and fro, While Geraldine, in wretched plight, Sank down upon the floor below. O weary lady, Geraldine, I pray you, drink this cordial wine! It is a wine of virtuous powers; My mother made it of wild flowers.

And will your mother pity me, Who am a maiden most forlorn? Christabel answered—Woe is me! She died the hour that I was born. I have heard the gray-haired friar tell How on her death-bed she did say, That she should hear the castle-bell Strike twelve upon my wedding-day. O mother dear! that thou wert here! I would, said Geraldine, she were!

But soon with altered voice, said she—
"Off, wandering mother! Peak and pine!

I have power to bid thee flee."
Alas! what ails poor Geraldine?
Why stares she with unsettled eye?
Can she the bodiless dead espy?
And why with hollow voice cries she,
"Off, woman, off! this hour is mine—
Though thou her guardian spirit be,
Off, woman, off! 'tis given to me."

Then Christabel knelt by the lady's side, And raised to heaven her eyes so blue— "Alas!" said she, "this ghastly ride— Dear lady! it hath wildered you!" The lady wiped her moist cold brow, And faintly said, "'tis over now!"

Again the wild-flower wine she drank: Her fair large eyes 'gan glitter bright, And from the floor whereon she sank, The lofty lady stood upright: She was most beautiful to see, Like a lady of a far countrée.

And thus the lofty lady spake—
"All they who live in the upper sky,
Do love you, holy Christabel!
And you love them, and for their sake
And for the good which me befel,
Even I in my degree will try,
Fair maiden, to requite you well.
But now unrobe yourself; for I
Must pray, ere yet in bed I lie."

Quoth Christabel, So let it be! And as the lady bade, did she. Her gentle limbs did she undress, And lay down in her loveliness.

But through her brain of weal and woo So many thoughts moved to and fro,

That vain it were her lids to close; So half-way from the bed she rose, And on her elbow did recline To look at the lady Geraldine.

Beneath the lamp the lady bowed, And slowly rolled her eyes around; Then drawing in her breath aloud, Like one that shuddered, she unbound The cincture from beneath her breast: Her silken robe, and inner vest, Dropt to her feet, and full in view, Behold! her bosom and half her

A sight to dream of, not to tell!
O shield her! shield sweet Christabel!

Yet Geraldine nor speaks nor stirs;
Ah! what a stricken look was hers!
Deep from within she seems half-way
To lift some weight with sick assay,
And eyes the maid and seeks delay;
Then suddenly, as one defied,
Collects herself in scorn and pride,
And lay down by the Maiden's side!—
And in her arms the maid she took,

Ah wel-a-day!
And with low voice and doleful look
These words did say:

"In the touch of this bosom there worketh a spell,

Which is lord of thy utterance, Christabel!

Thou knowest to-night, and wilt know to-morrow,

This mark of my shame, this seal of my sorrow;

But vainly thou warrest,
For this is alone in
Thy power to declare,
That in the dim forest

Thou heard'st a low moaning,
And found'st a bright lady, surpassingly
fair;

And didst bring her home with thee in love and in charity,

To shield her and shelter her from the damp air."

THE CONCLUSION TO PART THE FIRST

It was a lovely sight to see
The lady Christabel, when she
Was praying at the old oak tree.
Amid the jagged shadows
Of mossy leafless boughs,
Kneeling in the moonlight,
To make her gentle vows;

Her slender palms together prest, Heaving sometimes on her breast; Her face resigned to bliss or bale— Her face, oh call it fair not pale, And both blue eyes more bright than clear.

Each about to have a tear.

With open eyes (ah woe is me!)
Asleep, and dreaming fearfully,
Fearfully dreaming, yet, I wis,
Dreaming that alone, which is—
O sorrow and shame! Can this be she,
The lady, who knelt at the old oak tree?

And lo! the worker of these harms, That holds the maiden in her arms, Seems to slumber still and mild, As a mother with her child.

A star hath set, a star hath risen, O Geraldine! since arms of thine Have been the lovely lady's prison. O Geraldine! one hour was thine— Thou'st had thy will! By tairn and rill,

The night-birds all that hour were still,
But now they are jubilant anew,
From cliff and tower, tu—whoo! tu—whoo!

Tu-whoo! tu-whoo! from wood and fell!

And see! the lady Christabel Gathers herself from out her trance; Her limbs relax, her countenance Grows sad and soft; the smooth thin lids

Close o'er her eyes! and tears she sheds— Large tears that leave the lashes bright! And oft the while she seems to smile As infants at a sudden light!

Yea, she doth smile, and she doth weep.
Like a youthful hermitess,
Beauteous in a wilderness,
Who, praying always, prays in sleep.
And, if she move unquietly,
Perchance, 'tis but the blood so free
Comes back and tingles in her feet.
No doubt, she hath a vision sweet.
What if her guardian spirit 'twere,
What if she knew her mother near?
But this she knows, in joys and woes,

That saints will aid if men will call: For the blue sky bends over all!

PART THE SECOND

Each matin bell, the Baron saith, Knells us back to a world of death. These words Sir Leoline first said, When he rose and found his lady dead. These words Sir Leoline will say Many a morn to his dying day!

And hence the custom and law began That still at dawn the sacristan, Who duly pulls the heavy bell, Five and forty beads must tell Between each stroke—a warning knell, Which not a soul can choose but hear From Bratha Head to Wyndermere.

Saith Bracy the bard, So let it knell!
And let the drowsy sacristan
Still count as slowly as he can!
There is no lack of such, I ween,
As well fill up the space between.
In Langdale Pike and Witch's Lair,
And Dungeon-ghyll so foully rent,
With ropes of rock and bells of air
Three sinful sextons' ghosts are pent,
Who all give back, one after t'other,
The death-note to their living brother;
And oft too, by the knell offended,
Just as their one! two! three! is ended
The devil mocks the doleful tale
With a merry peal from Borrowdale.

The air is still! through mist and cloud That merry peal comes ringing loud; And Geraldine shakes off her dread, And rises lightly from the bed; Puts on her silken vestments white, And tricks her hair in lovely plight, And nothing doubting of her spell Awakens the lady Christabel. "Sleep you, sweet lady Christabel? I trust that you have rested well."

And Christabel awoke and spied The same who lay down by her side—O rather say, the same whom she Raised up beneath the old oak tree! Nay, fairer yet! and yet more fair! For she belike hath drunken deep Of all the blessedness of sleep! And while she spake, her looks, her air, Such gentle thankfulness declare, That (so it seemed) her girded vests Grew tight beneath her heaving breasts. "Sure I have sinn'd!" said Christabel. "Now heaven be praised if all be well!" And in long faltering tones, yet sweet Did she the lofty lady greet.

With such perplexity of mind As dreams too lively leave behind.

So quickly she rose, and quickly arrayed Her maiden limbs, and having prayed That He, who on the cross did groan, Might wash away her sins unknown, She forthwith led fair Geraldine To meet her sire, Sir Leoline.

The lovely maid and the lady tall
Are pacing both into the hall,
And pacing on through page and groom,
Enter the Baron's presence-room.

The Baron rose, and while he prest His gentle daughter to his breast, With cheerful wonder in his eyes The lady Geraldine espies, And gave such welcome to the same, As might beseem so bright a dame!

But when he heard the lady's tale, And when she told her father's name, Why waxed Sir Leoline so pale, Murmuring o'er the name again, Lord Roland de Vaux of Tryermaine?

Alas! they had been friends in youth;
But whispering tongues can poison

And constancy lives in realms above;
And life is thorny; and youth is vain;
And to be wroth with one we love
Doth work like madness in the brain.
And thus it chanced, as I divine,
With Roland and Sir Leoline.
Each spake words of high disdain
And insult to his heart's best brother:
They parted—ne'er to meet again!
But never either found another
To free the hollow heart from pain-

They stood aloof, the scars remaining, Like cliffs which had been rent asunder; A dreary sea now flows between. But neither heat, nor frost, nor thunder, Shall wholly do away, I ween, The marks of that which once hath been.

Sir Leoline, a moment's space, Stood gazing on the damsel's face; And the youthful Lord of Tryermaine Came back upon his heart again.

O then the Baron forgot his age, His noble heart swelled high with rage; He swore by the wounds in Jesu's side He would proclaim it far and wide, With trump and solemn heraldry,
That they, who thus had wronged the dame

Were base as spated infamy!

"And if they dare deny the same,
My herald shall appoint a week,
And let the recreant traitors seek
My tourney court—that there and then
I may dislodge their reptile souls
From the bodies and forms of men!"
He spake: his eye in lightning rolls!
For the lady was ruthlessly seized; and he kenned

In the beautiful lady the child of his friend!

And now the tears were on his face,
And fondly in his arms he took
Fair Geraldine, who met the embrace,
Prolonging it with joyous look.
Which when she viewed, a vision fell
Upon the soul of Christabel,
The vision of fear, the touch and pain!
She shrunk and shuddered, and saw
again—

(Ah, woe is me! Was it for thee, Thou gentle maid! such sights to see?) Again she saw that bosom old, Again she felt that bosom cold, And drew in her breath with a hissing sound:

Whereat the Knight turned wildly round,
And nothing saw, but his own sweet maid

With away upraised, as one that proved

With eyes upraised, as one that prayed.

The touch, the sight, had passed away, And in its stead that vision blest, Which comforted her after-rest, While in the lady's arms she lay, Had put a rapture in her breast, And on her lips and o'er her eyes Spread smiles like light!

With new surprise, "What ails then my beloved child?"
The Baron said.—His daughter mild Made answer, "All will yet be well!"
I ween, she had no power to tell Aught else: so mighty was the spell.

Yet he, who saw this Geraldine, Had deemed her sure a thing divine. Such sorrow with such grace she blended,

As if she feared she had offended Sweet Christabel, that gentle maid! And with such lowly tones she prayed She might be sent without delay Home to her father's mansion. "Nay!

Nay, by my soul!" said Leoline. "Ho! Bracy the bard, the charge be thine Go thou, with music sweet and loud, And take two steeds with trappings proud.

And take the youth whom thou lov'st best To bear thy harp, and learn thy song, And clothe you both in solemn vest, And over the mountains haste along, Lest wandering folk, that are abroad, Detain you on the valley road.

"And when he has crossed the Irthing flood.

My merry bard! he hastes, he hastes Up Knorren Moor, through Halegarth

And reaches soon that castle good Which stands and threatens Scotland's wastes.

Bard Bracy! bard Bracy! your horses are fleet.

Ye must ride up the hall, your music so

More loud than your horses' echoing feet! And loud and loud to Lord Roland call, Thy daughter is safe in Langdale hall! Thy beautiful daughter is safe and free— Sir Leoline greets thee thus through me. He bids thee come without delay With all thy numerous array; and take thy lovely daughter home: And he will meet thee on the way With all his numerous array White with their panting palfreys' foam: And, by mine honor! I will say, That I repent me of the day When I spake words of fierce disdain To Roland de Vaux of Tryermaine!— -For since that evil hour hath flown, Many a summer's sun hath shone; Yet ne'er found I a friend again Like Roland de Vaux of Tryermaine."

The lady fell, and clasped his knees, Her face upraised, her eyes o'erflowing; And Bracy replied, with faltering voice, His gracious hail on all bestowing; "Thy words, thou sire of Christabel, Are sweeter than my harp can tell; Yet might I gain a boon of thee, This day my journey should not be, So strange a dream hath come to me: That I had vowed with music loud To clear you wood from thing unblest, Warn'd by a vision in my rest!

For in my sleep I saw that dove, That gentle bird, whom thou dost love, And call'st by thy own daughter's name-

Sir Leoline! I saw the same, Fluttering, and uttering fearful moan, Among the green herbs in the forest alone.

Which when I saw and when I heard. I wonder'd what might ail the bird; For nothing near it could I see, Save the grass and green herbs underneath the old tree.

"And in my dream, methought, I went To search out what might there be found: And what the sweet bird's trouble meant, That thus lay fluttering on the ground. I went and peered, and could descry No cause for her distressful cry: But yet for her dear lady's sake I stooped, methought, the dove to take. When lo! I saw a bright green snake Coiled around its wings and neck. Green as the herbs on which it couched. Close by the dove's its head it crouched; And with the dove it heaves and stirs, Swelling its neck as she swelled hers! I woke; it was the midnight hour, The clock was echoing in the tower; But though my slumber was gone by, This dream it would not pass away-It seems to live upon my eye! And thence I vowed this self-same day With music strong and saintly song To wander through the forest bare, Lest aught unholy loiter there."

Thus Bracy said: the Baron, the while, Half-listening heard him with a smile; Then turned to Lady Geraldine, His eyes made up of wonder and love; And said in courtly accents fine, "Sweet maid, Lord Roland's beauteous dove,

With arms more strong than harp of song,

Thy sire and I will crush the snake!" He kissed her forehead as he spake, And Geraldine in maiden wise Casting down her large bright eyes, With blushing cheek and courtesy fine She turned her from Sir Leoline; Softly gathering up her train, That o'er her right arm fell again; And folded her arms across her chest, And couched her head upon her breast, And looked askance at Christabel—— Jesu, Maria, shield her well!

A snake's small eye blinks dull and shy. And the lady's eyes they shrunk in her head.

Each shrunk up to a serpent's eye.

And with somewhat of malice, and more

At Christabel she look'd askance!—
One moment—and the sight was fled!
But Christabel in dizzy trance
Stumbling on the unsteady ground
Shuddered aloud, with a hissing sound;
And Geraldine again turned round,
And like a thing, that sought relief,
Full of wonder and full of grief,
She rolled her large bright eyes divine
Wildly on Sir Leoline.

The maid, alas! her thoughts are gone, She nothing sees-no sight but one! The maid, devoid of guile and sin, I know not how, in fearful wise. So deeply had she drunken in That look, those shrunken serpent eyes, That all her features were resigned To this sole image in her mind: And passively did imitate That look of dull and treacherous hate! And thus she stood, in dizzy trance, Still picturing that look askance With forced unconscious sympathy Full before her father's view-As far as such a look could be In eyes so innocent and blue!

And when the trance was o'er, the maid Paused awhile, and inly prayed:
Then falling at the Baron's feet,
"By my mother's soul do I entreat
That thou this woman send away!"
She said: and more she could not say:
For what she knew she could not tell,
O'er mastered by the mighty spell.

Why is thy cheek so wan and wild,
Sir Leoline? Thy only child
Lies at thy feet, thy joy, thy pride,
So fair, so innocent, so mild;
The same, for whom thy lady died!
O by the pangs of her dear mother,
Think thou no evil of thy child!
For her, and thee, and for no other,
She prayed the moment ere she died:
Prayed that the babe for whom she died Might prove her dear lord's joy and pride!

That prayer her deadly pangs beguiled, Sir Leoline!

And wouldst thou wrong thy only child,

Her child and thine?

Within the Baron's heart and brain
If thoughts, like these, had any share,
They only swelled his rage and pain,
And did but work confusion there.
His heart was cleft with pain and rage,
His cheeks they quivered, his eyes were wild,

Dishonor'd thus in his old age;
Dishonor'd by his only child,
And all his hospitality
To the insulted daughter of his friend
By more than woman's jealousy
Brought thus to a disgraceful end—
He rolled his eye with stern regard
Upon the gentle minstrel bard,
And said in tones abrupt, austere—
"Why, Bracy! dost thou loiter here?
I bade thee hence!" The bard obeyed;
And turning from his own sweet maid,
The aged knight, Sir Leoline,
Led forth the lady Geraldine!

THE CONCLUSION TO PART THE SECOND

A little child, a limber elf, Singing, dancing to itself, A fairy thing with red round cheeks, That always finds, and never seeks, Makes such a vision to the sight As fills a father's eyes with light; And pleasures flow in so thick and fast Upon his heart, that he at last Must needs express his love's excess With words of unmeant bitterness. Perhaps 'tis pretty to force together Thoughts so all unlike each other; To mutter and mock a broken charm, To dally with wrong that does no harm. Perhaps 'tis tender too and pretty At each wild word to feel within A sweet recoil of love and pity. And what, if in a world of sin (O sorrow and shame should this be true !)

Such giddiness of heart and brain Comes seldom save from rage and pain, So talks as it's most used to do.

FRANCE: AN ODE

Ι

YE Clouds! that far above me float and pause,

Whose pathless march no mortal may control!

Ye Ocean Waves! that, wheresoe'er ye roll,

Yield homage only to eternal laws!

Ye Woods! that listen to the nightbird's singing,

Midway the smooth and perilous slope reclined.

Save when your own imperious branches swinging,

Have made a solemn music of the wind!

Where, like a man beloved of God,

Through glooms, which never woodman

How oft, pursuing fancies holy, My moonlight way o'er flowering weeds

I wound. Inspired beyond the guess of folly,

By each rude shape and wild unconquerable sound!

O ye loud Waves! and O ye Forests high!

And O ye Clouds that far above me soared!

Thou rising sun! thou blue rejoicing Sky!

Yea, every thing that is and will be

Bear witness for me, wheresoe'er ye

With what deep worship I have still adored

The spirit of divinest Liberty.

When France in wrath her giant-limbs upreared,

And with that oath which smote air, earth and sea.

Stamped her strong foot and said she would be free,

Bear witness for me, how I hoped and feared!

With what a joy my lofty gratulation Unawed I sang, amid a slavish band: And when to whelm the disenchanted nation.

Like fiends embattled by a wizard's wand.

The Monarchs marched in evil day, And Britain join'd the dire array;

Though dear her shores and circling

Though many friendships, many youthful loves

Had swoln the patriot emotion

And flung a magic light o'er all her hills and groves;

Yet still my voice, unaltered, sang defeat

To all that braved the tyrant-quelling lance.

And shame too long delay'd and vain retreat!

For ne'er, O Liberty! with partial aim I dimmed thy light or damped thy holy

But blessed the pæans of delivered France,

And hung my head and wept at Britain's name.

"And what," I said, "though Blasphemy's loud scream

With that sweet music of deliverance strove!

Though all the fierce and drunken passions wove A dance more wild than e'er was maniac's dream! Ye storms, that round the dawning east assembled, The Sun was rising, though ye hid his light! And when to soothe my soul, that hoped and trembled,

The dissonance ceased, and all seemed calm and bright:

When France her front deep-scarr'd and gorv

Concealed with clustering wreaths of glory;

When insupports bly advancing, Her arm made mockery of the warrior's ramp :

While timid looks of fury glancing, Domestic treason, crushed beneath her fatal stamp, Writhed like a wounded dragon in his gore;

Then I reproached my fears that would not flee;

"And soon," I said, "shall Wisdom teach her lore

In the low huts of them that toil and groan;

And, conquering by her happiness alone.

Shall France compel the nations to be

Till Love and Joy look round, and call the earth their own."

Forgive me, Freedom! O forgive those dreams!

I hear thy voice, I hear thy loud lament.

From bleak Helvetia's icy caverns sent—

I hear thy groans upon her blood-stained streams!

Heroes, that for your peaceful country perished.

And ye, that fleeing, spot your mountain snows

With bleeding wounds; forgive me, that I cherished

One thought that ever blessed your cruel foes!

To scatter rage and traitorous guilt Where Peace her jealous home had

A patriot-race to disinherit

Of all that made their stormy wilds so dear;

And with inexpiable spirit

To taint the bloodless freedom of the mount; tineer

O France, that mockest Heaven, adulterous, blind,

And patriot only in pernicious toils! Are these thy boasts, Champion of human kind?

To mix with Kings in the low lust of

Yell in the hunt, and share the murderous prey;

To insult the shrine of Liberty with spoils
From freemen torn; to tempt and to betray?

1

The Sensual and the Dark rebel in vain,

Slaves by their own compulsion! In mad game

They burst their manacles and wear the name

Of Freedom, graven on a heavier chain!

O Liberty! with profitless endeavor Have I pursued thee, many a weary hour:

But thou nor swell'st the victor's strain

Didst breathe thy soul in forms of human power.

Alike from all, howe'er they praise thee,

(Nor prayer, nor boastful name delays thee)

Alike from Priestcraft's harpy minions,

And factious Blasphemy's obscener slaves,

Thou speedest on thy subtle pinions, The guide of homeless winds, and playmate of the waves!

And then I felt thee !—on that sea-cliff's verge,

Whose pines, scarce travelled by the breeze above,

Had made one murmur with the distant surge!

Yes, while I stood and gazed, my temples bare,

And shot my being through earth, sea and air, Possessing all things with intensest love, O Liberty! my spirit felt thee there. February, 1798, April 16, 1798.

FROST AT MIDNIGHT

THE Frost performs its secret ministry, Unhelped by any wind. The owlet's cry

Came loud—and hark, again! loud as before.

The inmates of my cottage, all at rest, Have left me to that solitude, which Abstruser musings: save that at my

My cradled infant slumbers peacefully. Tis calm indeed! so calm, that it disturbs

And vexes meditation with its strange And extreme silentness. Sea, hill, and wood,

This populous village! Sea, and hill, and wood,

With all the numberless goings-on of life,

Inaudible as dreams! the thin blue flame

Lies on my low-burnt fire, and quivers not;

Only that film, which fluttered on the grate,

Still flutters there, the sole unquiet thing.

Methinks, its motion in this hush of nature

Gives it dim sympathies with me who live,

Making it a companionable form, Whose puny flaps and freaks the idling

Spirit
By its own moods interprets, everywhere
Echo or mirror seeking of itself,
And makes a toy of Thought.

But O! how oft. How oft, at school, with most believing

mind.

Presageful, have I gazed upon the bars. To watch that fluttering stranger! and as oft

With unclosed lids, already had I dreamt

Of my sweet birth-place, and the old church-tower.

Whose bells the poor man's only music

From morn to evening, all the hot Fairday, sweetly, that they stirred and haunted me

With a wild pleasure, falling on mine

Most like articulate sounds of things to come!

So gazed I, till the soothing things, I dreamt,

Lulled me to sleep, and sleep prolonged my dreams!

And so I boded all the following morn, Awed by the stern preceptor's face, mine eye

Fixed with mock study on my swimming book:

Save if the door half opened, and I snatched A hasty glance, and still my heart leaped

For still I hoped to see the stranger's face. Townsman, or aunt, or sister more beloved,

My play-mate when we both were clothed alike!

Dear Babe, that sleepest cradled by my side,

Whose gentle breathings, heard in this deep calm,

Fill up the interspersed vacancies

And momentary pauses of the thought! My babe so beautiful! it thrills my

With tender gladness, thus to look at

And think that thou shalt learn far other lore.

And in far other scenes! For I was reared

In the great city, pent 'mid cloisters dim.

And saw nought lovely but the sky and stars.

But thou, my babe! shalt wander like a breeze

By lakes and sandy shores, beneath the crags

Of ancient mountain, and beneath the clouds.

Which image in their bulk both lakes and shores

And mountain crags: so shalt thou see and hear

The lovely shapes and sounds intelligi-

Of that eternal language, which thy

Utters, who from eternity doth teach Himself in all, and all things in himself. Great universal Teacher! he shall mould Thy spirit, and by giving make it ask.

Therefore all seasons shall be sweet to

Whether the summer clothe the general

With greenness, or the redbreast sit and sing

Betwixt the tufts of snow on the bare branch

Of mossy apple-tree, while the nigh thatch

Smokes in the sun-thaw; whether the eave-drops fall

Heard only in the trances of the blast, Or if the secret ministry of frost Shall hang them up in silent icicles. Quietly shining to the quiet Moon. February, 1798. 1798.

LOVE

ALL thoughts, all passions, all delights. Whatever stirs this mortal frame. All are but ministers of Love. And feed his sacred flame.

Oft in my waking dreams do I Live o'er again that happy hour, When midway on the mount I lav. Beside the ruined tower.

The moonshine, stealing o'er the scene Had blended with the lights of eve: And she was there, my hope, my joy My own dear Genevieve!

She leant against the armed man, The statue of the armed knight; She stood and listened to my lay, Amid the lingering light.

Few sorrows hath she of her own, My hope! my joy! my Genevieve! She loves me best, whene'er I sing

The songs that make her grieve.

I played a soft and doleful air, I sang an old and moving story-An old rude song, that suited well That ruin wild and hoary.

She listened with a flitting blush, With downcast eyes and modest grace; For well she knew, I could not choose But gaze upon her face.

I told her of the Knight that wore Upon his shield a burning brand; And that for ten long years he wooed The Lady of the Land.

I told her how he pined: and ah! The deep, the low, the pleading tone With which I sang another's love, Interpreted my own.

She listened with a flitting blush, With downcast eyes, and modest grace And she forgave me, that I gazed Too fondly on her face!

But when I told the cruel scorn That crazed that bold and lovely Knight, And that he crossed the mountainwoods.

Nor rested day nor night;

That sometimes from the savage den, And sometimes from the darksome shade And sometimes starting up at once In green and sunny glade,—

There came and looked him in the face An angel beautiful and bright; And that he knew it was a Fiend, This miserable Knight!

And that unknowing what he did, He leaped amid a murderous band, And saved from outrage worse than death

The Lady of the Land!

And how she wept, and clasped his knees: And how she tended him in vain-

And ever strove to expiate The scorn that crazed his brain:—

And that she nursed him in a cave; And how his madness went away, When on the yellow forest-leaves A dying man he lay :--

His dying words -but when I reached That tenderest strain of all the ditty, My faltering voice and pausing harp Disturbed her soul with pity!

All impulses of soul and sense Had thrilled my guileless Genevieve; The music and the doleful tale. The rich and balmy eve;

And hopes, and fears that kindle hope, An undistinguishable throng. And gentle wishes long subdued, Subdued and cherished long!

She wept with pity and delight, She blushed with love, and virginshame:

And like the murmur of a dream, I heard her breathe my name.

Her bosom heaved—she stepped aside, As conscious of my look she stepped— Then suddenly, with timorous eye She fled to me and wept.

She half enclosed me with her arms, She pressed me with a meek embrace: And bending back her head, looked up, And gazed upon my face.

'Twas partly love, and partly fear, And partly 'twas a bashful art, That I might rather feel, than see, The swelling of her heart.

I calmed her fears, and she was calm, And told her love with virgin pride; And so I won my Genevieve,

My bright and beauteous Bride, 1798-1799. December 21, 1799.

THE BALLAD OF THE DARK LADIÉ

A FRAGMENT

BENEATH you birch with silver bark, And boughs so pendulous and fair, The brook falls scatter'd down the rock: And all is mossy there!

And there upon the moss she sits, The Dark Ladié in silent pain; The heavy tear is in her eye, And drops and swells again.

Three times she sends her little page Up the castled mountain's breast, If he might find the Knight that wears The Griffin for his crest.

The sun was sloping down the sky, And she had linger'd there all day, Counting moments, dreaming fears-Oh wherefore can he stay?

She hears a rustling o'er the brook, She sees far off a swinging bough! "'Tis He! 'Tis my betrothed Knight! Lord Falkland, it is Thou!"

She springs, she clasps him round the neck.

She sobs a thousand hopes and fears, Her kisses glowing on his cheeks She quenches with her tears.

"My friends with rude ungentle words They scoff and bid me fly to thee! O give me shelter in thy breast! O shield and shelter me!

"My Henry, I have given thee much, I gave what I can ne'er recall.
I gave my heart, I gave my peace,
O Heaven! I gave thee all."

The Knight made answer to the Maid, While to his heart he held her hand, "Nine castles hath my noble sire, None statelier in the land.

"The fairest one shall be my love's,
The fairest castle of the nine!
Wait only till the stars peep out,
The fairest shall be thine:

"Wait only till the hand of eve Hath wholly closed you western bars, And through the dark we two will steal Beneath the twinkling stars!"—

"The dark? the dark? No! not the

The twinkling stars? How, Henry?

How?
O God! 'twas in the eye of noon
He pledged his sacred vow!

"And in the eye of noon my love Shall lead me from my mother's door, Sweet boys and girls all clothed in white Strewing flowers before:

"But first the nodding minstrels go With music meet for lordly bowers, The children next in snow-white vests, Strewing buds and flowers!

"And then my love and I shall pace, My jet black hair in pearly braids, Between our comely bachelors And blushing bridal maids."

LINES

WRITTEN IN THE ALBUM AT ELBINGERODE,
IN THE HARTZ FOREST

I stoop on Brocken's sovran height, and saw

Woods crowding upon woods, hills over hills,

A surging scene, and only limited By the blue distance. Heavily my way

By the blue distance. Heavily my way Downward I dragged through fir groves evermore,

Where bright green moss heaves in sepulchral forms

Speckled with sunshine; and, but seldom heard,

The sweet bird's song became an hollow sound:

And the breeze, murmuring indivisibly, Preserved its solemn murmur most distinct

From many a note of many a waterfall, And the brook's chatter; 'mid whose islet-stones

The dingy kidling with its tinkling bell Leaped frolicsome, or old romantic goat Sat, his white beard slow waving. I moved on

In low and languid mood: for I had found

That outward forms, the loftiest, still receive

Their finer influence from the Life within;—

Fair cyphers else: fair, but of import vague

Or unconcerning, where the heart not finds

History or prophecy of friend, or child, Or gentle maid, our first and early love, Or father, or the venerable name

Of our adored country! O thou Queen, Thou delegated Deity of Earth.

Thou delegated Deity of Earth, O dear, dear England! how my longing

Turned westward, shaping in the steady clouds

Thy sands and high white cliffs!

My native Land! Filled with the thought of thee this heart was proud, Yea, mine eye swam with tears: that all the view From sovran Brocken, woods and woody

Floated away, like a departing dream,

Feeble and dim! Stranger, these impulses

Blame thou not lightly; nor will I pro-

ODE TO TRANQUILLITY

TRANQUILLITY! thou better name Than all the family of Fame! Thou ne'er wilt leave my riper age To low intrigue, or factious rage; For oh! dear child of thoughtful Truth.

To thee I gave my early youth,
And left the bark, and blest the steadfast shore.

Ere yet the tempest rose and scared me with its roar.

Who late and lingering seeks thy shrine.

On him but seldom, Power divine, Thy spirit rests! Satiety

And Sloth, poor counterfeits of thee, Mock the tired worldling. Idle Hope And dire Remembrance interlope,

To vex the feverish slumbers of the mind:

The bubble floats before, the spectre stalks behind.

But me thy gentle hand will lead

At morning through the accustomed mead:

And in the sultry summer's heat

Will build me up a mossy seat;
And when the gust of Autumn

erowds,
And breaks the busy moonlight

Thou best the thought canst raise, the Light as the busy clouds, calm as the gliding moon.

The feeling heart, the searching soul,

To thee I dedicate the whole! And while within myself I trace
The greatness of some future race,
Aloof with hermit-eve I scan

The present works of present man—A wild and dream-like trade of blood and guile,

Too foolish for a tear, too wicked for a smile! 1801. December 4, 1801.

DEJECTION: AN ODE 1

Late, late yestreen I saw the new Moon, With the old Moon in her arms; And I fear, I fear, my master dear! We shall have a deadly storm. Ballad of Sir Patrick Spence,

1

Well! If the Bard was weather-wise, who made

The grand old ballad of Sir Patrick Spence, This night, so tranquil now, will not go hence Unroused by winds, that ply a busier trade

Than those which mould you cloud in lazy flakes,

Or the dull sobbing draft, that moans

and rakes
Upon the strings of this Æolian

lute, Which better far were mute.

For lo! the New-moon winter-bright! And overspread with phantom light, (With swimming phantom light o'er-spread

But rimmed and circled by a silver thread)

I see the old Moon in her lap, foretelling The coming-on of rain and squally blast,

And oh! that even now the gust were swelling,

And the slant night-shower driving loud and fast!

Those sounds which oft have raised me, whilst they awed,

And sent my soul abroad,

Might now perhaps their wonted impulse give,

Might startle this dull pain, and make it move and live!

1 This Ode was originally written to William Wordsworth, who was addressed as "Edmund" in the poem when first printed, on the day of Wordsworth's marriage, October 4, 1802. In that copy, the name "Edmund" occurs at every point where "Lady" is found in the later versions and also where the name "Otway" occurs, in the seventh stanza; there is a corresponding difference of the personal pronouns, and some other slight differences of text, the most important of which is in the conclusion, as noted below.

TT

A grief without a pang, void, dark, and

A stifled, drowsy, unimpassioned grief, Which finds no natural outlet, no relief.

In word, or sigh, or tear-

O Lady! in this wan and heartless mood, To other thoughts by yonder throstle woo'd.

All this long eve, so balmy and serene, Have I been gazing on the western sky, And its peculiar tint of yellow green ;

And still I gaze—and with how blank an eve!

And those thin clouds above, in flakes and bars,

That give away their motion to the stars: Those stars, that glide behind them or between.

Now sparkling, now bedimmed, but alwavs seen:

You crescent Moon, as fixed as if it grew In its own cloudless, starless lake of blue; I see them all so excellently fair,

I see, not feel, how beautiful they are!

My genial spirits fail; And what can these avail

To lift the smothering weight from off my breast?

It were a vain endeavor,

Though I should gaze for ever On that green light that lingers in the west:

I may not hope from outward forms to

The passion and the life, whose fountains are within.

ΙV

O Lady! we receive but what we give, And in our life alone does Nature live; Ours is her wedding-garment, ours her shroud!

And would we aught behold, of higher

worth,

Than that inanimate cold world allowed To the poor loveless ever-anxious crowd, Ah! from the soul itself must issue

forth A light, a glory, a fair luminous cloud

Enveloping the Earth-And from the soul itself must there be

A sweet and potent voice, of its own

Of all sweet sounds the life and element!

v

O pure of heart! thou need'st not ask of me

What this strong music in the soul may

What, and wherein it doth exist.

This light, this glory, this fair luminous beautiful and beauty-making This power.

Joy, virtuous Lady! Joy that ne'er was given,

Save to the pure, and in their purest hour.

Life, and Life's effluence, cloud at once and shower,

Joy, Lady! is the spirit and the power, Which wedding Nature to us gives in dower,

A new Earth and new Heaven,

Undreamt of by the sensual and the proud-

Joy is the sweet voice, Joy the luminous cloud-

We in ourselves rejoice!

And thence flows all that charms or ear or sight,

All melodies the echoes of that voice, All colors a suffusion from that light.

There was a time when, though my path was rough,

This joy within me dallied with distress.

And all misfortunes were but as the stuff Whence Fancy made me dreams of happiness:

For hope grew round me, like the twining vine,

And fruits, and foliage, not my own, seemed mine.

But now afflictions bow me down to earth:

Nor care I that they rob me of my mirth;

But oh! each visitation

Suspends what nature gave me at my

My shaping spirit of Imagination.

For not to think of what I needs must

But to be still and patient, all I can; And haply by abstruse research to steal From my own nature all the natural man-

This was my sole resource, my only plan;

Till that which suits a part infects the whole.

And now is almost grown the habit of my soul.

VII

Hence, viper thoughts, that coil around my mind,

Reality's dark dream!

I turn from you, and listen to the wind, Which long has raved unnoticed. What a scream

Of agony by torture lengthened out That lute sent forth! Thou Wind, that rav'st without.

Bare crag, or mountain-tairn, or blasted tree,

Or pine-grove whither woodman never clomb,

Or lonely house, long held the witches' home.

Methinks were fitter instruments for thee.

Mad Lutanist! who in this month of showers.

Of dark-brown gardens, and of peeping flowers,

Mak'st Devils' yule, with worse than wintry song,

The blossoms, buds, and timorous leaves

Thou Actor, perfect in all tragic sounds!

Thou mighty Poet, even to frenzy bold! What tell'st thou now about?

'Tis of the rushing of an host in rout, With groans of trampled men, with smarting wounds-

At once they groan with pain, and shudder with the cold!

But hush! there is a pause of deepest silence!

And all that noise, as of a rushing crowd.

With groans, and tremulous shudderings –all is over–

It tells another tale, with sounds less deep and loud!

A tale of less affright, And tempered with delight,

As Otway's 1 self had framed the tender lay.

1 In the first printed copy, "Edmund's," referring to Wordsworth. The following lines are evidently an allusion to Wordsworth's Lucy Gray. The conclusion is as follows in the first printed copy :

With light heart may he rise, Gay fancy, cheerful eye An I sing his lofty song, and teach me to rejoice ! 'Tis of a little child Upon a lonesome wild,

Not far from home, but she hath lost her

And now moans low in bitter grief and

And now screams loud, and hopes to make her mother hear.

VIII

'Tis midnight, but small thoughts have I of sleep:

Full seldom may my friend such vigils keep!

Visit her, gentle Sleep! with wings of healing, And may this storm be but a mountain-birth. May all the stars hang bright above her dwelling, Silent as though they watched the sleeping Earth! With light heart may she rise,

Gay fancy, cheerful eyes, Joy lift her spirit, joy attune her voice:

To her may all things live, from pole to pole.

Their life the eddying of her living soul! O simple spirit, guided from above, Dear Lady! friend devoutest of my choice, Thus mayest thou ever, evermore re-

HYMN BEFORE SUNRISE, IN THE VALE OF CHAMOUNI

Besides the Rivers Arve and Arveiron, which have their sources in the foot of Mont Blanc, five conspicuous torrents rush down its sides; and within a few paces of the glaciers the Gentiana Major grows in immense numbers, with its "flowers of loveliest blue." (Coleridge.)

HAST thou a charm to stay the morning-

In his steep course? So long he seems to pause

O EDMUND, friend of my devoutest choice, O rais'd from anxious dread and busy care, By the immenseness of the good and fair By the immenseness of the good and fair Which thou see'st everywhere,
Joy lifts thy spirit, joy attunes thy voice,
To thee do all things live from pole to pole,
Their life the eddying of thy living soul!
O simple spirit, guided from above,
O lofty Poet, full of life and love,
Brother and friend of my devoutest choice,
Thus may'st Thou ever, evermore rejoice!

On thy bald awful head, O sovran BLANC!

The Arve and Arveiron at thy base

Rave ceaselessly; but thou, most awful Form!

Risest from forth thy silent sea of pines, How silently! Around thee and above Deep is the air and dark, substantial, black,

An ebon mass: methinks thou piercest it.

As with a wedge! But when I look again,

It is thine own calm home, thy crystal shrine,

Thy habitation from eternity!

O dread and silent Mount! I gazed upon thee,

Till thou, still present to the bodily sense,

Didst vanish from my thought: entranced in prayer

I worshipped the Invisible alone.

Yet, like some sweet beguiling melody, So sweet, we know not we are listening to it,

Thou, the meanwhile, wast blending with my Thought,

Yea, with my Life and Life's own secret

Till the dilating Soul, enrapt, transfused.
Into the mighty vision passing—there
As in her natural form, swelled vast to Heaven!

Awake, my soul! not only passive praise

Thou owest! not alone these swelling tears.

Mute thanks and secret ecstasy! Awake, Voice of sweet song! Awake, my heart, awake!

Green vales and icy cliffs, all join my Hymn.

Thou first and chief, sole sovereign of the Vale!

O struggling with the darkness all the night,

And visited all night by troops of stars, Or when they climb the sky or when they sink:

Companion of the morning-star at dawn, Thyself Earth's rosy star, and of the dawn

Co-herald: wake, O wake, and utter praise!

Who sank thy sunless pillars deep in Earth?

Who fill'd thy countenance with rosy light?

Who made thee parent of perpetual streams?

And you, ye five wild torrents fiercely glad!

Who called you forth from night and utter death,

From dark and icy caverns called you forth,

Down those precipitous, black, jagged rocks,

For ever shattered and the same for ever?

Who gave you your invulnerable life, Your strength, your speed, your fury,

and your joy,
Unceasing thunder and eternal foam?

And who commanded (and the silence came).

Here let the billows stiffen, and have rest?

Ye Ice-falls! ye that from the mountain's brow

Adown enormous ravines slope amain— Torrents, methinks, that heard a mighty voice,

And stopped at once amid their maddest plunge!

Motionless torrents! silent cataracts!
Who made you glorious as the Gates of
Heaven

Beneath the keen full moon? Who bade the sun

Clothe you with rainbows? Who, with living flowers

Of loveliest blue, spread garlands at your feet?—

Gop! let the torrents, like a shout of nations,

Answer! and let the ice-plains echo,
Gop!
Gop!

God! sing ye meadow-streams with gladsome voice!

Ye pine-groves, with your soft and soullike sounds!

And they too have a voice, you piles of snow,

And in their perilous fall shall thunder,
Gop!

Ye living flowers that skirt the eternal frost!

Ye wild goats sporting round the eagle's nest!

Ye eagles, play-mates of the mountainstorm! Ye lightnings, the dread arrows of the clouds!

Ye signs and wonders of the element!
Utter forth God, and fill the hills with praise!

Thou too, hoar Mount! with thy skypointing peaks,

Oft from whose feet the avalanche, un-

Shoots downward, glittering through the pure serene

Into the depth of clouds, that veil thy breast—

Thou too again, stupendous Mountain!

That as I raise my head, awhile bowed low

In adoration, upward from thy base
Slow travelling with dim eyes suffused with tears,

Solemnly seemest, like a vapory cloud, To rise before me—Rise, O ever rise, Rise like a cloud of incense from the Earth!

Thou kingly Spirit throned among the hills.

Thou dread ambassador from Earth to Heaven.

Great Hierarch! tell thou the silent sky,

And tell the stars, and tell you rising

Earth, with her thousand voices, praises God.

THE GOOD, GREAT MAN

"How seldom, friend! a good great man inherits

Honor or wealth with all his worth and pains!

It sounds like stories from the land of spirits

If any man obtain that which he merits

Or any merit that which he obtains."

REPLY TO THE ABOVE

For shame, dear friend, renounce this canting strain!

What would'st thou have a good great

Place? titles? salary? a gilded chain? Or throne of corses which his sword had slain?

Greatness and goodness are not means, but ends!

Hath he not always treasures, always friends,

The good great man? three treasures, LOVE, and LIGHT,

And CALM THOUGHTS, regular as infant's breath:

And three firm friends, more sure than day and night,

HIMSELF, his MAKER, and the ANGEL DEATH!

THE PAINS OF SLEEP

ERE on my bed my limbs I lay, It hath not been my use to pray With moving lips or bended knees; But silently, by slow degrees, My spirit I to Love compose, In humble trust mine eyelids close, With reverential resignation, No wish conceived, no thought exprest, Only a sense of supplication; A sense o'er all my soul imprest That I am weak, yet not unblest, Since in me, round me, everywhere Eternal Strength and Wisdom are.

But yester-night I pray'd aloud In anguish and in agony, Up-starting from the fiendish crowd Of shapes and thoughts that tortured

A lurid light, a trampling throng,
Sense of intolerable wrong,
And whom I scorned, those only strong!
Thirst of revenge, the powerless will Still baffled, and yet burning still!
Desire with loathing strangely mixed
On wild or hateful objects fixed.
Fantastic passions! maddening brawl!
And shame and terror over all!
Deeds to be hid which were not hid,
Which all confused I could not know
Whether I suffered, or I did:
For all seem'd guilt, remorse or woe,
My own or others still the same
Life-stifling fear, soul-stifling shame!

So two nights passed: the night's dismay

Saddened and stunned the coming day. Sleep, the wide blessing, seemed to me Distemper's worst calmity.

The third night, when my own loud scream

Had waked me from the fiendish dream O'ercome with sufferings strange and wild,

I wept as I had been a child: And having thus by tears subdued My anguish to a milder mood, Such punishments, I said, were due To natures deepliest stained with sin: For ave entempesting anew The unfathomable hell within The horror of their deeds to view. To know and loathe, yet wish and do! Such griefs with such men well agree, But wherefore, wherefore fall on me? To be beloved is all I need. And whom I love, I love indeed. 1803. 1816.

TO WILLIAM WORDSWORTH

COMPOSED ON THE NIGHT AFTER HIS RE-CITATION OF A POEM ON THE GROWTH OF AN INDIVIDUAL MIND

FRIEND of the wise! and Teacher of the Good 1

Into my heart have I received that Lay More than historic, that prophetic Lay Wherein (high theme by thee first sung aright)

Of the foundations and the building up Of a Human Spirit thou hast dared to tell

What may be told, to the understanding

Revealable; and what within the mind By vital breathings secret as the soul Of vernal growth, oft quickens in the heart

Thoughts all too deep for words!— Theme hard as high!

Of smiles spontaneous, and mysterious (The first-born they of Reason and twin-birth), Of tides obedient to external force, And currents self-determined, as might seem, Or by some inner Power; of moments awful,

Now in thy inner life, and now abroad, When power streamed from thee, and thy soul received

The light reflected, as a light bestowed-Of fancies fair, and milder hours of youth,

Hyblean murmurs of poetic thought Industrious in its joy, in vales and glens Native or outland, lakes and famous hills !

Or on the lonely high-road, when the stars

Were rising: or by secret mountainstreams.

The guides and the companions of thy way!

Of more than Fancy, of the Social Sense Distending wide, and man beloved as man,

Where France in all her towns lay vibrating

Like some becalmed bark beneath the burst

Of Heaven's immediate thunder, when no cloud

Is visible, or shadow on the main.

For thou wert there, thine own brows garlanded.

Amid the tremor of a realm aglow. Amid a mighty nation jubilant,

When from the general heart of humankind

Hope sprang forth like a full-born Deity!

-Of that dear Hope afflicted and struck down.

So summoned homeward, thenceforth calın and sure

From the dread watch-tower of man's absolute self

With light unwaning on her eyes, to

Far on—herself a glory to behold,

The angel of the vision! Then (last strain)

Of Duty, chosen Laws controlling choice, Action and joy !- An orphic song indeed.

A song divine of high and passionate thoughts

To their own music chanted!

O great Bard! Ere yet that last strain dying awed the air,

With steadfast eye I viewed thee in the choir

Of ever-enduring men. The truly great Have all one age, and from one visible space

Shed influence! They, both in power and act.

Are permanent, and Time is not with

Save as it worketh for them, they in it. Nor less a sacred Roll than those of old, And to be placed, as they, with gradual fame

Among the archives of mankind, thy work

Makes audible a linked lay of Truth, Of Truth profound a sweet continuous

Not learnt, but native, her own natural notes!

1 Ah! as I listen'd with a heart forlorn, The pulses of my being beat anew:

And even as life returns upon the drowned.

Life's joy rekindling roused a throng of

Keen pangs of Love, awakening as a babe

Turbulent, with an outcry in the heart; And fears self-willed, that shunned the eve of hope;

And hope that scarce would know itself from fear;

Sense of past youth, and manhood come in vain.

And genius given, and knowledge won in vain;

And all which I had culled in woodwalks wide.

And all which patient toil had reared. and all

Commune with thee had opened outbut flowers

Strewed on my corse, and borne upon my bier.

In the same coffin, for the self-same grave!

That way no more! and ill beseems it me.

Who came a welcomer in herald's guise, Singing of glory, and futurity, To wander back on such unhealthful road. Plucking the poisons of self-harm! And

Such intertwine beseems triumphal wreaths

1 In place of this line and the next, there stood the manuscript copy of January 1307 the following lines:

Dear shall it be to every human heart, To me how more than dearest! me, on whom Comfort from thee, and utterance of thy love, Came with such heights and depths of harmony, Such sense of wings unlifting, that its might Scatter'd and quell'd me, till my thoughts be-

A bodily tumult; and thy faithful hopes, Thy hopes of me, dear Friend, by me unfelt! Were troublous to me, almost as a voice, Familiar once, and more than musical As a dear woman's voice to one cast forth, A wanderer with a worn-out heart forlorn, Mid strangers pining with untended wounds. O Friend, too well thou know'st, of what sad

The long suppression had benumb'd my soul. . . .

Strew'd before thy advancing!

Nor do thou. Sage Bard! impair the memory of that hour

Of thy communion with my nobles mind

By pity or grief, already felt too long! Nor let my words import more blame than needs.

The tumult rose and ceased: for Peace is nigh

Where wisdom's voice has found a listening heart. Amid the howl of more than wintry storms.

The halcyon hears the voice of vernal hours

Already on the wing.

Eve following eve, Dear tranquil time, when the sweet sense of Home

Is sweetest! moments for their own sake

And more desired, more precious, for thy song, silence listening, like a devout child.

My soul lay passive, by thy various

Driven as in surges now beneath the stars,

With momentary stars of my own birth,

Fair constellated foam, still darting off Into the darkness; now a tranquil

Outspread and bright, yet swelling to the moon.

And when—O Friend! my comforter and guide!

Strong in thyself, and powerful to give strength!-

Thy long sustained Song finally closed, And thy deep voice had ceased-yet thou thyself

Wert still before my eyes, and round us both

That happy vision of beloved faces-Scarce conscious, and yet conscious of its close

I sate, my being blended in one thought (Thought was it? or aspiration? or resolve?)

Absorbed, yet hanging still upon the sound-

And when I rose, I found myself in praver.

January, 1807. 1817.

SONG FROM ZAPOLYA

A SUNNY shaft did I behold, From sky to earth it slanted: And poised therein a bird so bold— Sweet bird, thou wert enchanted!

He sunk, he rose, he twinkled, he trolled Within that shaft of sunny mist; His eyes of fire, his beak of gold, All else of amethyst!

And thus he sang: Adieu! adieu! Love's dreams prove seldom true. The blossoms they make no delay: The sparkling dew-drops will not stay. Sweet month of May,

We must away;

Far far away! To-day! to-day! 1815. 1817.

YOUTH AND AGE

VERSE, a breeze mid blossoms straying. Where Hope clung feeding, like a bee—Both were mine! Life went a-maying With Nature, Hope, and Poesy,

When I was young!

When I was young?—Ah, woeful When! Ah! for the change 'twixt Now and Then!

This breathing house not built with hands.

This body that does me grievous wrong, O'er aery cliffs and glittering sands, How lightly then it flashed along:-Like those trim skiffs, unknown of yore, On winding lakes and rivers wide, That ask no aid of sail or oar, That fear no spite of wind or tide!

Nought cared this body for wind or weather

When Youth and I lived in't together. Flowers are lovely; Love is flower-like; Friendship is a sheltering tree; O! the joys, that came down shower-like, Of Friendship, Love, and Liberty,

Ere I was old! Ere I was old? Ah woeful Ere, Which tells me, Youth's no longer here! O, Youth! for years so many and sweet, 'Tis known, that Thou and I were one, I'll think it but a fond conceit—

It cannot be that Thou art gone! Thy vesper-bell hath not yet toll'd:-And thou wert ave a masker bold! What strange disguise hast now put on,

To make believe, that thou art gone? I see these locks in silvery slips,

This drooping gait, this altered size: But Spring-tide blossoms on thy lips. And tears take sunshine from thine eyes! Life is but thought: so think I will That Youth and I are house-mates still. Dew-drops are the gems of morning. But the tears of mournful eve! Where no hope is, life 's a warning That only serves to make us grieve.

When we are old: That only serves to make us grieve With oft and tedious taking-leave Like some poor nigh-related guest. That may not rudely be dismist; Yet hath out-stay'd his welcome while. And tells the jest without the smile. 1823—April, 1832. 1828—June, 1832.

WORK WITHOUT HOPE

ALL Nature seems at work. Slugs leave their lair—

The bees are stirring-birds are on the

And Winter slumbering in the open air. Wears on his smiling face a dream of Spring!

And I the while, the sole unbusy thing. Nor honey make, nor pair, nor build, nor sing.

Yet well I ken the banks where amaranths blow.

Have traced the fount whence streams of nectar flow.

Bloom, O ve amaranths! bloom for whom ye may, For me ye bloom not! Glide, rich streams, away!

With lips unbrightened, wreathless brow, I stroll:

And would you learn the spells that drowse my soul?

Work without Hope draws nectar in a sieve,

And Hope without an object cannot live. February, 1827. 1828.

THE GARDEN OF BOCCACCIO

OF late, in one of those most weary hours.

When life seems emptied of all genial powers,

A dreary mood, which he who ne'er has known

May bless his happy lot. I sate alone: And, from the numbing spell to win regrief.

Call'd on the Past for thought of glee or

In vain! bereft alike of grief and glee, I sate and cow'r'd o'er my own vacancy! And as I watched the dull continuous

Which, all else slumbering, seem'd alone to wake;

O Friend! long wont to notice yet con-

And soothe by silence what words cannot heal,

I but half saw that quiet hand of thine Place on my desk this exquisite design, Boccaccio's Garden and its faery,

The love, the joyaunce, and the gallantry!

An Idyll, with Boccaccio's spirit warm, Framed in the silent poesy of form.

Like flocks a-down a newly-bathed steep Emerging from a mist: or like a stream Of music soft, that not dispels the sleep, But casts in happier moulds the slumberer's dream.

Gazed by an idle eye with silent might The picture stole upon my inward sight.

A tremulous warmth crept gradual o'er my chest,

As though an infant's finger touch'd my breast.

And one by one (I know not whence) were brought

All spirits of power that most had stirr'd my thought

In selfless boyhood, on a new world tost Of wonder, and in its own fancies lost; Or charm'd my youth, that, kindled from above.

Loved ere it loved, and sought a form

for love;

Or lent a lustre to the earnest scan

Of manhood, musing what and whence is man!

Wild strain of Scalds, that in the seaworn caves

Rehearsed their war-spell to the winds and waves;

Or fateful hymn of those prophetic

That call'd on Hertha in deep forest glades;

Or minstrel lay, that cheer'd the baron's feast; Or rhyme of city pomp, of monk and priest,

Judge, mayor, and many a guild in long

To high-church pacing on the great saint's day.

And many a verse which to myself I sang,

That woke the tear yet stole away the pang.

Of hopes which in lamenting I renew'd. And last, a matron now, of sober mien, Yet radiant still and with no earthly sheen.

Whom as a facry child my childhood woo'd

Even in my dawn of thought-Philosophy: Though then unconscious of herself. pardie.

She bore no other name than Poesy; And, like a gift from heaven, in lifeful

That had but newly left a mother's knee. Prattled and play'd with bird and flower, and stone,

As if with elfin playfellows well known. And life reveal'd to innocence alone.

Thanks, gentle artist! now I can descry Thy fair creation with a mastering eye, And all awake! And now in fix'd gaze stand.

Now wander through the Eden of thy hand:

Praise the green arches, on the fountain See fragment shadows of the crossing deer: And with that serviceable nymph I stoop

The crystal from its restless pool to scoop.

I see no longer! I myself am there, Sit on the ground-sward, and the banquet share.

'Tis I, that sweep that lute's love-echoing strings.

And gaze upon the maid who gazing sings;

Or pause and listen to the tinkling bells Frow the high tower, and think that there she dwells.

With old Boccaccio's soul I stand possest, And breathe an air like life, that swells my chest.

The brightness of the world, O thou once free,

And always fair, rare land of courtesy! O Florence! with the Tuscan fields and hills

And famous Arno, fed with all their

Thou brightest star of star-bright Italy! Rich, ornate, populous, all treasures thine,

The golden corn, the olive, and the vine,

Fair cities, gallant mansions, castles old. And forests, where beside his leafy hold The sullen boar hath heard the distant horn.

And whets his tusks against the gnarled

Palladian palace with its storied halls; Fountains, where Love lies listening to their falls:

Gardens, where flings the bridge its airy

And Nature makes her happy home with man:

Where many a gorgeous flower is duly fed

With its own rill, on its own spangled bed. And wreathes the marble urn, or leans its head. A mimic mourner, that with veil withdrawn Weeps liquid gems, the presents of the dawn: Thine all delights, and every muse is thine; And more than all, the embrace and intertwine Of all with all in gay and twinkling dance!

Mid gods of Greece and warriors of romance.

See ! Boccace sits, unfolding on his knees

The new found roll of old Mæonides: But from his mantle's fold, and near the

Peers Ovid's Holy Book of Love's sweet smart!1

O all-enjoying and all-blending sage, Long be it mine to con thy mazy page, Where half conceal'd, the eye of fancy views

Fauns, nymphs, and winged saints, all gracious to thy muse!

1 I know few more striking or more interesting proofs of the overwhelming influence which the study of the Greek and Roman classics exercised on the judgments, feelings, and imaginations of the literati of Europe at the commencement of the restoration of literature, than the passage in the Filocopo of Boccaccio, where the sage instructor, Racheo, as soon as the young prince and the beautiful girl Biancofiore had learned their letters, sets them to study the Holy Book, Ovid's Art of Love. "Incominciò Racheo a mettere il suo officio in esecuzione con intera sollectudine. E loro, in breve tempo, insegnato a conoscer le lettere, fece leggere il santo libro d'Ovridio, nel quale il sommo poeta mostra, come i santi fuochi di Venere si debbano ne' freddi cuori accendere." — (Coleridge.) Still in thy garden let me watch their pranks.

And see in Dian's vest between the ranks Of the trim vines, some maid that half believes The vestal fires, of which her lover grieves.

With that sly satyr peeping through the leaves! 1828. 1829.

SCOTT

WILLIAM AND HELEN

Imitated from Bürger's Lenore. See Lockhart's Life of Scott, Volume I, Chap. 7.

From heavy dreams fair Helen rose, And eyed the dawning red: "Alas, my love, thou tarriest long! O art thou false or dead?"

With gallant Frederick's princely power He sought the bold crusade, But not a word from Judah's wars Told Helen how he sped.

With Paynim and with Saracen At length a truce was made, And every knight returned to dry The tears his love had shed.

Our gallant host was homeward bound With many a song of joy; Green waved the laurel in each plume, The badge of victory.

And old and young, and sire and son,
To meet them crowd the way,
With shouts and mirth and melody,
The debt of love to pay.

Full many a maid her true-love met, And sobbed in his embrace, And fluttering joy in tears and smiles Arrayed full many a face.

Nor joy nor smile for Helen sad, She sought the host in vain; For none could tell her William's fate, If faithless or if slain.

The martial band is past and gone;
She rends her raven hair,
And in distraction's bitter mood
She weeps with wild despair.

"O, rise, my child," her mother said,
"Nor sorrow thus in vain;

A perjured lover's fleeting heart No tears recall again." "O, Mother, what is gone is gone, What's lost forever lorn: Death, death alone can comfort me; O had I ne'er been born!

"O, break, my heart, O, break at once Drink my life-blood, Despair! No joy remains on earth for me, For me in heaven no share."

"O, enter not in judgment, Lord!"
The pious mother prays;
"Impute not guilt to thy frail child!
She knows not what she says.

"O, say thy pater-noster, child!
O, turn to God and grace!
His will, that turned thy bliss to bale,
Can change thy bale to bliss."

"O mother, mother, what is bliss?
O mother, what is bale?
My William's love was heaven on earth,
Without it earth is hell.

"Why should I pray to ruthless Heaven, Since my loved William's slain? I only prayed for William's sake, And all my prayers were vain."

"O, take the sacrament, my child, And check these tears that flow; By resignation's humble prayer, O, hallowed be thy woe!"

"No sacrament can quench this fire, Or slake this scorching pain; No sacrament can bid the dead Arise and live again.

"O, break, my heart, O, break at once! Be thou my god, Despair! Heaven's heaviest blow has fallen on me, And vain each fruitless prayer."

"O, enter not in judgment, Lord, With thy frail child of clay! She knows not what her tongue has spoke; Impute it not, I pray!

"Forbear, my child, this desperate woe, And turn to God and grace;

Well can devotion's heavenly glow Convert thy bale to bliss."

"O mother, mother, what is bliss?
O mother, what is bale?
Without my William what were heaven,
Or with him what were hell?"

Wild she arraigns the eternal doom, Upbraids each sacred power, Till, spent. she sought her silent room, All in the lonely tower.

She beat her breast, she wrung her hands,
Till sun and day were o'er,

And through the glimmering lattice shone

The twinkling of the star.

Then, crash! the heavy drawbridge fell. That o'er the moat was hung; And, clatter! clatter! on its boards. The hoof of courser rung.

The clank of echoing steel was heard
As off the rider bounded;
And slowly on the winding stair.
A heavy footstep sounded.

At length a whispering voice.

And hark! and hark! a knock — tap!
A rustling stifled noise;—
Door-latch and tinkling staples ring;

"Awake, awake, arise, my love! How, Helen, dost thou fare? Wak'st thou, or sleep'st! laugh'st thou, or weep'st?

Hast thought on me, my fair?"

"My love! my love!—so late by night!— I waked, I wept for thee; Much have I borne since dawn of morn; Where, William, coulds thou be?"

"We saddle late—from Hungary
I rode since darkness fell;
And to its bourne we both return
Before the matin-bell."

"O, rest this night within my arms,
And warm thee in their fold!
Chill howls through hawthorn bush the wind:—
My love is deadly cold."

"Let the wind howl through hawthorn bush!
This night we must away;

The steed is wight, the spur is bright;
I cannot stay till day."

"Busk, busk, and boune! Thou mount'st behind

Upon my black barb steed:
O'er stock and stile, a hundred miles,
We haste to bridal bed."

"To-night—to-night a hundred miles!— O dearest William, stay! The bell strikes twelve—dark, dismal hour!

O, wait, my love, till day!"

"Look here, look here—the moon shines clear—

Full fast I ween we ride:
Mount and away! for ere the day
We reach our bridal bed.

"The black barb snorts, the bridle rings;

Haste, busk, and boune, and seat thee!
The feast is made, the chamber spread,
The bridal guests await thee."

Strong love prevailed: she busks, she bounes,

She mounts the barb behind, And round her darling William's waist Her lily arms she twined.

And, hurry! hurry! off they rode,
As fast as fast might be;
Spurned from the courser's thundering heels
The flashing pebbles flee.

And on the right and on the left,
Ere they could snatch a view,
Fast, fast each mountain, mead, and plain,
And cot and castle flew.

"Sit fast—dost fear?—The moon shines clear—

Fleet goes my barb—keep hold! Fear'st thou?"—"O no!" she faintly said;

"But why so stern and cold?

"What yonder rings? what yonder sings?
Why shrieks the owlet gray?"

"T is death-bell's clang, 't is funeral song,

The body to the clay.

"With song and clang at morrow's dawn

Ye may inter the dead:

To-night I ride with my young bride To deck our bridal bed.

"Come with thy choir, thou coffined guest,

To swell our nuptial song!

Come, priest, to bless our marriage feast!

Come all, come all along!"

Ceased clang and song; down sunk the bier;

The shrouded corpse arose:

And hurry! hurry! all the train The thundering steed pursues.

And forward! forward! on they go;
High snorts the straining steed;
Thick pants the rider's laboring breath,
As headlong on they speed.

"O William, why this savage haste! And where thy bridal bed?"

"Tis distant far, low, damp, and chill,
And narrow, trustless maid."

"No room for me?"—"Enough for both;—

Speed, speed, my barb, thy course!"
O'er thundering bridge, through boiling

He drove the furious horse.

Tramp! tramp! along the land they rode,

Splash! splash! along the sea; The scourge is wight, the spur is bright, The flashing pebbles flee.

Fled past on right and left how fast Each forest, grove, and bower! On right and left fled past how fast Each city, town, and tower!

"Dost fear? dost fear? The moon shines clear,

Dost fear to ride with me?—

Hurrah! hurrah! the dead can ride!"—
"O William, let them be!—

"See there, see there! What yonder swings

And creaks, mid whistling rain?"—
"Gibbet and steel, the accursed wheel;
A murderer in his chain.—

"Hollo! thou felon, follow here:
To bridal bed we ride;

And thou shalt prance a fetter dance Before me and my bride."

And, hurry! hurry! clash, clash; The wasted form descends;

And fleet as wind through hazel bush The wild career attends.

Tramp! tramp! along the land they rode,

Splash! splash! along the sea;

The scourge is red, the spur drops blood, The flashing pebbles flee.

How fled what moonshine faintly showed!

How fled what darkness hid! How fled the earth beneath their feet, The Heaven above their head!

"Dost fear? dost fear? The moon shines clear,

And well the dead can ride;
Dost, faithful Helen, fear for them?"—
"O leave in peace the dead!"—

"Barb! Barb! methinks I hear the cock, The sand will soon be run: Barb! Barb! I smell the morning air;

Barb! Barb! I smell the morning air; The race is well-nigh done."

Tramp! tramp! along the land they rode,

Splash! splash! along the sea; The scourge is red, the spur drops blood, The flashing pebbles flee.

"Hurrah! hurrah! well ride the dead;
The bride, the bride is come;
And soon we reach the bridal bed,
For, Helen, here's my home."

Reluctant on its rusty hinge Revolved an iron door,

And by the pale moon's setting beam Were seen a church and tower.

With many a shriek and cry whiz round The birds of midnight scared; And rustling like autumnal leaves Unhallowed ghosts were heard.

O'er many a tomb and tombstone pale He spurred the fiery horse, Till suddenly at an open grave He checked the wondrous course. The falling gauntlet quits the rein,
Down drops the casque of steel,
The cuirass leaves his shrinking side,
The spur his gory heel.

The eyes desert the naked skull,
The mouldering flesh the bone,
Till Helen's lily arms entwine
A ghastly skeleton.

The furious barb snorts fire and foam,
And with a fearful bound
Dissolves at once in empty air,
And leaves her on the ground.

Half seen by fits, by fits half heard,
Pale spectres flit along,
Wheel round the maid in dismal dance,
And howl the funeral song;

"E'en when the heart's with anguish cleft

Revere the doom of Heaven, Her soul is from her body reft; Her spirit be forgiven!"

THE VIOLET

See Lockhart's life of Scott, Vol I, Chapter 8, and the Century Magazine, July, 1899.

The violetin her green-wood bower,
Where birchen boughs with hazels mingle,

May boast itself the fairest flower In glen or copse or forest dingle.

Though fair her gems of azure hue, Beneath the dewdrop's weight reclining;

I've seen an eye of lovelier blue,
More sweet through watery lustre shining.

The summer sun that dew shall dry
Ere yet the day be past its morrow,
Wor longer in my false love's eye
Remained the tear of parting sorrow.

TO A LADY

WITH FLOWERS FROM A ROMAN WALL

TAKE these flowers which, purple waving.

On the ruined rampart grew, Where, the sons of freedom braving, Rome's imperial standards flew. Warriors from the breach of danger Pluck no longer laurels there; They but yield the passing stranger Wild-flower wreaths for Beauty's hair.

THE EVE OF SAINT JOHN

The Baron of Smaylho'me rose with day,

He spurred his courser on,
Without stop or stay, down the rocky

way,

That leads to Brotherstone.

He went not with the bold Buccleuch

His banner broad to rear; He went not 'gainst the English yew To lift the Scottish spear.

Yet his plate-jack was braced and his helmet was laced,

And his vaunt-brace of proof he wore; At his saddle-gerthe was a good steel sperthe,

Full ten pound weight and more.

The baron returned in three days' space
And his looks were sad and sour;
And weary was his courser's pace
As he reached his rocky tower.

He came not from where Ancram Moor Ran red with English blood; Where the Douglas true and the bold Buccleuch 'Gainst keen Lord Evers stood.

Yet was his helmet hacked and hewed, His acton pierced and tore, His axe and his dagger with blood im-

brued,—
But it was not English gore.

He lighted at the Chapellage,
He held him close and still;
And he whistled thrice for his little foot-page,
His name was English Will.

"Come thou hither, my little foot-page, Come hither to my knee; Though thou art young and tender of age,

I think thou art true to me.

"Come, tell me all that thou hast seen, And look thou tell me true! Since I from Smaylho'me tower have

What did thy lady do?"

"My lady, each night, sought the lonely light

That burns on the wild Watchfold; For from height to height the beacons bright

Of the English foemen told.

"The bittern clamored from the moss, The wind blew loud and shrill; Yet the craggy pathway she did cross

To the eiry Beacon Hill.

"I watched her steps, and silent came Where she sat her on a stone;—

No watchman stood by the dreary flame,

It burned all alone.

"The second night I kept her in sight Till to the fire she came,

And, by Mary's might! an armed knight

Stood by the lonely flame.

"And many a word that warlike lord
Did speak to my lady there;
But the rain fell fast and loud blew the blast,

And I heard not what they were.

"The third night there the sky was fair, And the mountain-blast was still,

As again I watched the secret pair On the lonesome Beacon Hill.

"And I heard her name the midnight hour,

And name this holy eve;

And say, 'Come this night to thy lady's bower;

Ask no bold baron's leave.

"' 'He lifts his spear with the bold Buccleuch;

His lady is all alone;

The door she 'll undo to her knight so true

On the eve of good Saint John.'

"I cannot come; I must not come; I dare not come to thee:

On the eve of Saint John I must wander alone:

In thy bower I may not be.'

""Now, out on thee, faint-hearted knight!

Thou shouldst not say me nay;

For the eve is sweet, and when lovers meet

Is worth the whole summer's day.

"' And I'll chain the blood-hound, and the warder shall not sound,

And rushes shall be strewed on the stair;

So, by the black rood-stone and by holy Saint John,

I conjure thee, my love, to be there!'

"Though the blood-hound be mute and the rush beneath my foot,

And the warder his bugle should not blow,

Yet there sleepeth a priest in the chamber to the east,

And my footstep he would know.'

"'O, fear not the priest who sleepeth to the east,

For to Dryburgh the way he has ta'en; And there to say mass, till three days do

For the soul of a knight that is slayne.'

"He turned him around and grimly he frowned

Then he laughed right scornfully—
'He who says the mass-rite for the soul of that knight

May as well say mass for me:

" 'At the lone midnight hour when bad spirits have power

In thy chamber will I be .- '

With that he was gone and my lady left alone,

And no more did I see."

Then changed, I trow, was that bold baron's brow

From the dark to the blood-red high; "Now, tell me the mien of the knight thou hast seen,

For, by Mary, he shall die!"

"His arms shone full bright in the beacon's red light;

His plume it was scarlet and blue; On his shield was a hound in a silver leash bound,

And his crest was a branch of the yew."

"Thou liest, thou liest, thou little foot-page,

Loud dost thou lie to me!

For that knight is cold and low laid in mould,

All under the Eildon-tree."

"Yet hear but my word, my noble lord! For I heard her name his name;

And that lady bright, she called the knight

Sir Richard of Coldinghame."

The bold baron's brow then changed, I

From high blood-red to pale-

"The grave is deep and dark—and the corpse is stiff and stark—
So I may not trust thy tale.

"Where fair Tweed flows round holy Melrose,

And Eildon slopes to the plain,
Full three nights ago by some secret foe
That gay gallant was slain.

"The varying light deceived thy sight,
And the wild winds drowned the
name;

For the Dryburgh bells ring and the white monks do sing

For Sir Richard of Coldinghame!"

He passed the court-gate and he oped the tower-gate,

And he mounted the narrow stair
To the bartizan-seat where, with maids that on her wait,

He found his lady fair.

That lady sat in mournful mood;
Looked over hill and vale;
Over Tweed's fair flood and Mertoun's

wood,

And all down Teviotdale.

"Now hail, now hail, thou lady bright!"
"Now hail, thou baron true!

What news, what news, from Ancram fight?

What news from the bold Buccleuch!"

"The Ancram moor is red with gore, For many a Southern fell;

And Buccleuch has charged us evermore To watch our beacons well."

The lady blushed red, but nothing she said:

Nor added the baron a word:

Then she stepped down the stair to her chamber fair,

And so did her moody lord.

In sleep the lady mourned, and the baron tossed and turned,

And oft to himself he said,—

"The worms around him creep, and his bloody grave is deep— It cannot give up the dead!"

It was near the ringing of matin-bell,
The night was well-nigh done,
When a heavy sleep on that baron fell,
On the eve of good Saint John.

The lady looked through the chamber fair,

By the light of a dying flame;
And she was aware of a knight stood
there—

Sir Richard of Coldinghame!

"Alas! away, away!" she cried,
"For the holy Virgin's sake!"

"Lady, I know who sleeps by thy side; But, lady, he will not awake.

"By Eildon-tree for long nights three
In bloody grave have I lain;
The mass and the death-prayer are said
for me,

But, lady, they are said in vain.

"By the baron's brand, near Tweed's fair strand,

Most foully slain I fell;

And my restless sprite on the beacon's height

For a space is doomed to dwell.

"At our trysting-place, for a certain space,

I must wander to and fro;

But I had not had power to come to thy bower

Hadst thou not conjured me so."

Love mastered fear—her brow she crossed;

"How, Richard, hast thou sped? And art thou saved or art thou lost?" The vision shook his head!

"Who spilleth life shall forfeit life: So bid thy brd believe:

That lawless love is guilt above,
This awful sign receive."

He laid his left palm on an oaken beam
His right upon her hand;

The lady shrunk and fainting sunk, For it scorched like a fiery brand.

The sable score of fingers four Remains on that board impressed; And forevermore that lady wore A covering on her wrist. There is a nun in Dryburgh bower Ne'er looks upon the sun; There is a monk in Melrose tower He speaketh word to none.

That nun who ne'er beholds the day,
That monk who speaks to none—
That nun was Smaylho'me's lady gay,
That monk the bold baron.

CADYOW CASTLE

When princely Hamilton's abode Ennobled Cadyow's Gothic towers, The song went round, the goblet flowed, And revel sped the laughing hours.

Then, thrilling to the harp's gay sound, So sweetly rung each vaulted wall, And echoed light the dancer's bound, As mirth and music cheered the hall.

But Cadyow's towers in ruins laid, And vaults by ivy mantled o'er, Thrill to the music of the shade, Or echo Evan's hoarser roar.

Yet still of Cadyow's faded fame You bid me tell a minstrel tale, And tune my harp of Border frame On the wild banks of Evandale.

For thou, from scenes of courtly pride, From pleasure's lighter scenes, canst turn,

To draw oblivion's pall aside And mark the long-forgotten urn.

Then, noble maid! at thy command Again the crumbled halls shall rise; Lo! as on Evan's banks we stand, The past returns—the present flies.

Where with the rock's wood-covered side Were blended late the ruins green, Rise turrets in fantastic pride And feudal banners flaunt between:

Where the rude torrent's brawling course
Was shagged with thorn and tangling
sloe,

The ashler buttress braves its force And ramparts frown in battled row.

'Tis night—the shade of keep and spire Obscurely dance on Evan's stream; And on the wave the warder's fire Is checkering the moonlight beam. Fades slow their light; the east is gray; The weary warder leaves his tower; Steeds snort, uncoupled stag-hounds bay, And merry hunters quit the bower.

The drawbridge falls—they hurry out— Clatters each plank and swinging chain,

As, dashing o'er, the jovial rout Urge the shy steed and slack the rein.

First of his troop, the chief rode on;
His shouting merry-men throng behind:

The steed of princely Hamilton Was fleeter than the mountain wind.

From the thick copse the roebucks bound,

The startled red-deer scuds the plain, For the hoarse bugle's warrior-sound Has roused their mountain haunts again.

Through the huge oaks of Evandale,
Whose limbs a thousand years have worn,

What sullen roar comes down the gale
And drowns the hunter's pealing horn?

Mightiest of all the beasts of chase That roam in woody Caledon, Crashing the forest in his race, The Mountain Bull comes thundering on.

Fierce on the hunter's quivered band He rolls his eyes of swarthy glow, Spurns with black hoof and horn the

And tosses high his mane of snow.

Aimed well the chieftain's lance has flown;

Struggling in blood the savage lies; His roar is sunk in hollow groan— Sound, merry huntsmen! sound the pryse!

'Tis noon—against the knotted oak
The hunters rest the idle spear;
Curls through the trees the slender smoke,

Where yeomen dight the woodland cheer.

Proudly the chieftain marked his clan, On greenwood lap all careless thrown. Yet missed his eye the boldest man That bore the name of Hamilton,

"Why fills not Bothwellhaugh his place, Still wont our weal and woe to share? Why comes he not our sport to grace? Why shares he not our hunter's fare?"

Stern Claud replied with darkening face

Gray Paisley's haughty lord was he-"At merry feast or buxom chase No more the warrior wilt thou see.

"Few suns have set since Woodhouselee Saw Bothwellhaugh's bright goblets foam.

When to his hearths in social glee The war-worn soldier turned him

"There, wan from her maternal throes, His Margaret, beautiful and mild, Sate in her bower, a pallid rose, And peaceful nursed her new-born child.

"Ochange accursed! past are those days; False Murray's ruthless spoilers came, And, for the hearth's domestic blaze, Ascends destruction's volumed flame.

"What sheeted phantom wanders wild Where mountain Eske through woodland flows,

Her arms enfold a shadowy child-O! is it she, the pallid rose?

"The wildered traveller sees her glide, And hears her feeble voice with awe-'Revenge,' she cries, 'on Murray's pride!

And woe for injured Bothwellhaugh!""

He ceased—and cries of rage and grief Burst mingling from the kindred band, And half arose the kindling chief. And half unsheathed his Arran brand.

But who o'er bush, o'er stream and rock, Rides headlong with resistless speed, Whose bloody poniard's frantic stroke Drives to the leap his jaded steed;

Whose cheek is pale, whose eyeballs glare,

As one some visioned sight that saw,

Whose hands are bloody, loose his hair 2-'Tis he! 'tis he! 'tis Bothwellhaugh.

From gory selle and reeling steed Sprung the fierce horseman with a bound,

And, reeking from the recent deed, He dashed his carbine on the ground.

Sternly he spoke—"Tis sweet to hear In good greenwood the bugle blown, But sweeter to Revenge's ear To drink a tyrant's dying groan.

"Your slaughtered quarry proudly trode At dawning morn o'er dale and down. But prouder base-born Murray rode Through old Linlithgow's crowded town.

"From the wind Border's humbled side, In haughty triumph marched he, While Knox relaxed his bigot pride And smiled the traitorous pomp to see

"But can stern Power, with all his vaunt, Or Pomp, with all her courtly glare, The settled heart of Vengeance daunt, Or change the purpose of Despair?

"With hackbut bent, my secret stand, Dark as the purposed deed, I chose, And marked where mingling in his band Trooped Scottish pipes and English bows.

"Dark Morton, girt with many a spear, Murder's foul minion, led the van: And clashed their broadswords in the rear

The wild Macfarlanes' plaided clan.

"Glencairn and stout Parkhead were nigh,

Obsequious at their Regent's rein, And haggard Lindesay's iron eye, That saw fair Mary weep in vain.

"Mid pennoned spears, a steely grove, Proud Murray's plumage floated high;

Scarce could his trampling charger move, So close the minions crowded nigh.

"From the raised vizor's shade his eye, Dark-rolling, glanced the ranks along, And his steel truncheon, waved on high, Seemed marshalling the iron throng.

"But yet his saddened brow confessed A passing shade of doubt and awe; Some fiend was whispering in his breast, "Beware of injured Bothwellhaugh!"

"The death-shot parts! the charger springs;

Wild rises tumult's startling roar!
Aud Murray's plumy helmet rings—
Rings on the ground to rise no more.

"What joy the raptured youth can feel, To hear her love the loved one tell-Or he who broaches on his steel The wolf by whom his infant fell.

"But dearer to my injured eye
To see in dust proud Murray roll;
And mine was ten times trebled joy
To hear him groan his felon soul.

"My Margaret's spectre glided near.
With pride her bleeding victim saw,
And shrieked in his death-deafened ear,
'Remember injured Bothwellhaugh!'

"Then speed thee, noble Chatlerault!
Spread to the wind thy bannered tree!
Each warrior bend his Clydesdale bow—
Murray is fallen and Scotland free!"

Vaults every warrior to his steed;
Loud bugles join their wild acclaim—
"Murray is fallen and Scotland freed!
Couch, Arran, couch thy spear of flame!"

But see! the minstrel vision fails—
The glimmering spears are seen no
more;

The shouts of war die on the gales, Or sink in Evan's lonely roar.

For the loud bugle pealing high,
The blackbird whistles down the vale,
And sunk in ivied ruins lie
The bannered towers of Evandale,

For chiefs intent on bloody deed,
And Vengeance shouting o'er the slain,
Lo! high-born Beauty rules the steed,
Or graceful guides the silken rein.

And long may Peace and Pleasure own The maids who list the minstrel's tale; Nor e'er a ruder guest be known On the fair banks of Evandale! 1801. 1803. THE MAID OF NEIDPATH

O, LOVERS' eyes are sharp to see,
And lovers' ears in hearing;
And love in life's extremity
Can lend an hour of cheering.
Disease had been in Mary's bower,
And slow decay from mourning,

Though now she sits on Neidpath's tower

To watch her love's returning.

All sunk and dim her eyes so bright,
Her form decayed by pining,
Till through her wasted hand at night
You saw the taper shining;
By fits, a sultry hectic hue
Across her cheek was flying;
By fits, so ashy pale she grew,
Her maidens thought her dying.

Yet keenest powers to see and hear Seemed in her frame residing; Before the watch-dog pricked his ear, She heard her lover's riding; Ere scarce a distant form was kenned, She knew, and waved to greet him; And o'er the battlement did bend, As on the wing to meet him.

He came—he passed—an heedless gaze, As o'er some stranger glancing; Her welcome, spoke in faltering phrase, Lost in his courser's prancing— The castle arch, whose hollow tone Returns each whisper spoken, Could scarcely catch the feeble moan Which told her heart was broken.

HUNTING SONG

Waken, lords and ladies gay,
On the mountain dawns the day,
All the jolly chase is here,
With hawk and horse and hunting spear!
Hounds are in their couples yelling,
Hawks are whistling, horns are knelling.
Merrily, merrily, mingle they,

Waken, lords and ladies gay, The mist has left the mountain gray, Springlets in the dawn are steaming, Diamonds on the brake are gleaming: And foresters have busy been To track the buck in thicket green; Now we come to chant our lay, "Waken, lords and ladies gay."

"Waken, lords and ladies gay."

Waken, lords and ladies gay,
To the green-wood haste away;
We can show you where he lies,
Fleet of foot and tall of size;
We can show the marks he made,
When 'gainst the oak his antlers frayed;
You shall see him brought to bay,
"Waken, lords and ladies gay."

Louder, louder chant the lay,
Waken, lords and ladies gay!
Tell them youth and mirth and glee
Run a course as well as we;
Time, stern huntsman, who can balk,
Stanch as hound and fleet as hawk?
Think of this and rise with day,
Gentle lords and ladies gay.

MARMION

A TALE OF FLODDEN FIELD

See Lockhart's Life of Scott, Vol. III, Chap. 16.

. CANTO FIRST

THE CASTLE

DAY set on Norham's castled steep,
And Tweed's fair river, broad and deep,
And Cheviot's mountains lone;
The battled towers, the donjon keep,
The loophole grates where captives
weep,

The flanking walls that round it sweep,
In yellow lustre shone.
The warriors on the turrets high,
Moving athwart the evening sky,
Seemed forms of giant height;
Their armor, as it caught the rays,

Flashed back again the western blaze, In lines of dazzling light.

Saint George's banner, broad and gay,

Now faded, as the fading ray Less bright, and less, was flung; The evening gale had scarce the power To wave it on the donjon tower, So heavily it hung.

The scouts had parted on their search,
The castle gates were barred;
Above the gloomy portal arch,
Timing his footsteps to a march,

The warder kept his guard, Low humming, as he paced along, Some ancient Border gathering song.

A distant trampling sound he hears; He looks abroad, and soon appears, O'er Horncliff-hill, a plump of spears Beneath a pennon gay; A horseman, darting from the crowd Like lightning from a summer cloud, Spurs on his mettled courser proud, Before the dark array.

Beneath the sable palisade
That closed the castle barricade,
His bugle-horn he blew;
The warder hasted from the wall,
And warned the captain in the hall,

For well the blast he knew; And joyfully that knight did call To sewer, squire, and seneschal.

"Now broach ye a pipe of Malvoisie, Bring pasties of the doe, And quickly make the entrance free, And bid my heralds ready be, And every minstrel sound his glee,

And all our trumpets blow; And, from the platform, spare ye not To fire a noble salvo-shot;

Lord Marmion waits below!"
Then to the castle's lower ward
Sped forty yeomen tall,
The iron-studded gates unbarred,
Raised the portcullis' ponderous guard
The lofty palisade unsparred,

And let the drawbridge fall.

Along the bridge Lord Marmion rode, Proudly his red-roan charger trode, His helm hung at the saddle bow; Well by his visage you might know He was a stalworth knight and keen, And had in many a battle been; The scar on his brown cheek revealed A token true of Bosworth field; His eyebrow dark and eye of fire Showed spirit proud and prompt to ire, Yet lines of thought upon his cheek Did deep design and counsel speak. His forehead, by his casque worn bare, His thick moustache and curly hair, Coal-black, and grizzled here and there, But more through toil than age,

His square-turned joints and strength of limb.

Showed him no carpet knight so trim, But in close fight a champion grim, In camps a leader sage.

Well was he armed from head to heel, In mail and plate of Milan steel; But his strong helm, of mighty cost, Was all with burnished gold embossed. Amid the plumage of the crest A falcon hovered on her nest, With wings outspread and forward

breast;
E'en such a falcon, on his shield,
Soared sable in an azure field:
The golden legend bore aright,
"Who checks at me, to death is dight."
Blue was the charger's broidered rein;
Blue ribbons decked his arching mane;
The knightly housing's ample fold
Was velvet blue and trapped with gold.

Behind him rode two gallant squires, Of noble name and knightly sires: They burned the gilded spurs to claim, For well could each a war-horse tame, Could draw the bow, the sword could

And lightly bear the ring away; Nor less with courteous precepts stored, Could dance in hall, and carve at board, And frame love-ditties passing rare, And sing them to a lady fair.

Four men-at-arms came at their backs, With halbert, bill, and battle-axe; They bere Lord Marmion's lance so strong And led his sumpter-mules along, And ambling palfrey, when at need Him listed ease his battle-steed. The last and trustiest of the four On high his forky pennon bore; Like swallow's tail in shape and hue, Fluttered the streamer glossy blue, Where, blazoned sable, as before, The towering falcon seemed to soar. Last, twenty yeomen, two and two In hosen black and jerkins blue, With falcons broidered on each breast, Attended on their lord's behest. Each, chosen for an archer good, Knew hunting-craft by lake or wood; Each one a six-foot bow could bend, And far a cloth-yard shaft could send; Each held a boar-spear tough and strong, And at their belts their quivers rung. Their dusty palfreys and array Showed they had marched a weary way. 'Tis meet that I should tell you now, How fairly armed, and ordered how,

The soldiers of the guard,
With musket, pike, and morion,
To welcome noble Marmion,
Stood in the castle-yard;
Minstrels and trumpeters were there,
The gunner held his linstock yare,
For welcome-shot prepared:

For welcome-shot prepared:
Entered the train, and such a claug
As then through all his turrets rang
Old Norham never heard.

The guards their morrice-pikes advanced,
The trumpets flourished brave,
The cannon from the ramparts glanced,
And thundering welcome gave.

A blithe salute, in martial sort,
The minstrels well might sound,
For, as Lord Marmion crossed the court,
He scattered angels round.

"Welcome to Norham, Marmion! Stout heart and open hand! Well dost thou brook thy gallant roar,

Two purewisents, whom tabards deck

Two pursuivants, whom tabards deck, With silver scutcheon round their neck, Stood on the steps of stone By which you reach the donjon gate, And there, with herald pomp and state,

They hailed Lord Marmion:
They hailed him Lord of Fontenaye,
Of Lutterward, and Scrivelbaye,
Of Tamworth tower and town;

Of Tamworth tower and town;
And he, their courtesy to requite,
Gave them a chain of twelve marks weight,

All as he lighted down. "Now, largesse, largesse, Lord Marmion,

Knight of the crest of gold!

A blazoned shield, in battle won,
Ne'er guarded heart so bold."

They marshalled him to the castle-hall Where the guests stood all aside, And loudly flourished the trumpet-call, And the heralds loudly cried,—
"Room, lordings, room for Lord Mar

mion,
With the crest and helm of gold!
Full well we know the trophies won

In the lists at Cottiswold:
There, vainly Ralph de Wilton strove
'Gainst Marmion's force to stand;
To him he lost his lady-love,

And to the king his land.
Ourselves beheld the listed field,
A sight both sad and fair;

We saw Lord Marmion pierce his shield. And saw his saddle bare: We saw the victor win the crest He wears with worthy pride, And on the gibbet tree, reversed. His foeman's scutcheon tied. Place, nobles, for the Falcon-Knight! Room, room, ye gentles gay. For him who conquered in the right,

Then stepped, to meet that noble lord, Sir Hugh the Heron bold. Baron of Twisell and of Ford, And Captain of the Hold: He led Lord Marmion to the deas, Marmion of Fontenave!"

Raised o'er the pavement high, And placed him in the upper place— They feasted full and high: The whiles a Northern harper rude

Chanted a rhyme of deadly feud,

"How the fierce Thirwalls, and Ridleys all,

Stout Willimondswick, And Hardriding Dick,

And Hughie of Hawdon, and Will o' the Wall.

Have set on Sir Albany Featherstonhaugh,

And taken his life at the Dead-man'sshaw."

Scantly Lord Marmion's ear could

The harper's barbarous lay, Yet much he praised the pains he took, And well those pains did pay; For lady's suit and minstrel's strain By knight should ne'er be heard in vain.

" Now good Lord Marmion," Heron says, " Of your fair courtesy, I pray you bide some little space

In this poor tower with me. Here may you keep your arms from rust, May breathe your war-horse well; Seldom hath passed a week but joust

Or feat of arms befell.

The Scots can rein a mettled steed, Bnd love to couch a spear; Saint George! a stirring life they lead That have such neighbors near!

Then stay with us a little space, Our Northern wars to learn; I pray you for your lady's grace!" Lord Marmion's brow grew stern.

The Captain marked his altered look,

And gave the squire the sign; A mighty wassail-bowl he took,

And crowned it high with wine. " Now pledge me here, Lord Marmion; But first I pray thee fair. Where hast thou left that page of thine That used to serve thy cup of wine, Whose beauty was so rare?

When last in Raby-towers we met. The boy I closely eyed,

And often marked his cheeks were wet With tears he fain would hide. His was no rugged horse-boy's hand, To burnish shield or sharpen brand,

Or saddle battle-steed, But meeter seemed for lady fair. To fan her cheek, or curl her hair, Or through embroidery, rich and rare,

The slender silk to lead; His skin was fair, his ringlets gold,

His bosom—when he sighed, The russet doublet's rugged fold Could scarce repel its pride!

Say, hast thou given that lovely youth To serve in lady's bower?

Or was the gentle page, in sooth, A gentle paramour?"

Lord Marmion ill could brook such jest; He rolled his kindling eye, With pain his rising wrath suppressed,

Yet made a calm reply; "That boy thou thought so goodly fair, He might not brook the Northern air. More of his fate if thou wouldst learn. I left him sick in Lindisfarne. Enough of him.—But, Heron, say, Why does thy lovely lady gay Disdain to grace the hall to-day?

Or has that dame, so fair and sage, Gone on some pious pilgrimage? "— He spoke in covert scorn, for fame Whispered light tales of Heron's dame.

Unmarked, at least unrecked, the taunt Careless the knight replied: "No bird whose feathers gaily flaunt

Delights in cage to bide Norham is grim and grated close, Hemmed in by battlement and fosse,

And many a darksome tower, And better loves my lady bright To sit in liberty and light

In fair Queen Margaret's bower. We hold our greyhound in our hand, Our falcon on our glove.

But where shall we find leash or band For dame that loves to rove?

Let the wild falcon soar her swing, She 'll stoop when she has tried her wing."---

"Nay, if with Royal James's bride
The lovely Lady Heron bide,
Behold me here a messenger,
Your tender greetings prompt to bear;
For, to the Scottish court addressed,
I journey at our king's behest,
And pray you, of your grace, provide
For me and mine a trusty guide.
I have not ridden in Scotland since
James backed the cause of that mock prince,

prince,
Warbeck, that Flemish counterfeit,
Who on the gibbet paid the cheat.
Then did I march with Surrey's power,
What time we razed old Ayton tower."—

"For such-like need, my lord, I trow, Norham can find you guides enow; For here be some have pricked as far On Scottish grounds as to Dunbar, Have drunk the monks of Saint Bethan's ale.

And driven the beeves of Lauderdale, Harried the wives of Greenlaw's goods, And given them light to set their hoods."

"Now, in good sooth," Lord Marmion cried.

"Were I in warlike-wise to ride,
A better guard I would not lack
Than your stout forayers at my back;
But as in form of peace I go,
A friendly messenger, to know,
Why, through all Scotland, near and far,

Their king is mustering troops for war, The sight of plundering Border spears Might justify suspicious fears, And deadly feud or thirst of spoil Break out in some unseemly broil. A herald were my fitting guide; Or friar, sworn in peace to bide; Or pardoner, or travelling priest, Or strolling pilgrim, at the least."

The Captain mused a little space,
And passed his hand across his face.—
"Fain would I find the guide you want,
But ill may spare a pursuivant,
The only men that safe can ride
Mine errands on the Scottish side:
And though a bishop built this fort,
Few holy brethren here resort;
Even our good chaplain, as I ween,
Since our last siege we have not seen,
The mass he might not sing or say
Upon one stinted meal a day;
So, safe he sat in Durham aisle,

And prayed for our success the while. Our Norham vicar, woe betide, Is all too well in case to ride: The priest of Shoreswood-he could rein The wildest war-horse in your train, But then no spearman in the hall Will sooner swear, or stab, or brawl. Friar John of Tillmouth were the man: A blithesome brother at the can. A welcome guest in hall and bower. He knows each castle, town, and tower. In which the wine and ale is good, 'Twixt Newcastle and Holy-Rood. But that good man, as ill befalls, Hath seldom left our castle walls, Since, on the vigil of Saint Bede, In evil hour he crossed the Tweed. To teach Dame Alison her creed. Old Bughtrig found him with his wife, And John, an enemy to strife, Sans frock and hood, fled for his life. The jealous churl hath deeply sworn That, if again he venture o'er He shall shrieve penitent no more. Little he loves such risks, I know. Yet in your guard perchance will go."

Young Selby, at the fair hall-board.
Carved to his uncle and that lord,
And reverently took up the word:
"Kind uncle, woe were we each one,
If harm should hap to brother John.
He is a man of mirthful speech,
Can many a game and gambol teach;
Full well at tables can he play,
And sweep at bowls the stake away.
None can a lustier carol bawl,
The needfullest among us all,
When time hangs heavy in the hall,
And snow comes thick at Christmas
tide,

And we can neither hunt nor ride
A foray on the Scottish side.
The vowed revenge of Bughtrig rude
May end in worse than loss of hood,
Let friar John in safety still
In chimney-corner snore his fill,
Roast hissing crabs, or flagons swill;
Last night, to Norham there came one
Will better guide Lord Marmion."—
"Nephew," quoth Heron, "by my fay,
Well hast thou spoke; say forth thy sax."—

"Here is a holy Palmer come, From Salem first, and last from Rome; One that hath kissed the blessed tomb, And visited each holy shrine In Araby and Palestine; On hills of Armenie hath been, Where Noah's ark may yet be seen; By that Red Sea, too, hath he trod, Which parted at the Prophet's rod; In Sinai's wilderness he saw The Mount where Israel heard the law, Mid thunder-dint, and flashing levin, And shadows, mists, and darkness, given.

He shows Saint James's cockle-shell, Of fair Montserrat, too, can tell; And of that Grot where Olives nod, Where, darling of each heart and eye,

From all the youth of Sicily, Saint Rosalie retired to God.

"To stout Saint George of Norwich merry,

Saint Thomas, too, of Canterbury, Cuthbert of Durham and Saint Bede, For his sins' pardon hath he prayed. He knows the passes of the North, And seeks far shrines beyond the Forth; Little he eats, and long will wake, And drinks but of the stream or lake. This were a guide o'er moor and dale; But when our John hath quaffed his ale, As little as the wind that blows, And warms itself against his nose, Kens he, or cares, which way he goes."—

"Gramercy!" quoth Lord Marmion,
"Full loath were I that Friar John,
That venerable man, for me
Were placed in fear or jeopardy:
If this same Palmer will me lead
From horsest Hall me

From hence to Holy-Rood, Like his good saint, I'll pay his meed, Instead of cockle-shell or bead,

With angels fair and good.

I love such holy ramblers; still
They know to charm a weary hill
With song, romance, or lay:
Some jovial tale, or glee, or jest,

Some lying legend, at the least, They bring to cheer the way."—

"Ah! noble sir," young Selby said, And finger on his lip he laid, "This man knows much, perchance e'en

Than he could learn by holy lore.
Still to himself he's muttering,
And shrinks as at some unseen thing.
Last night we listened at his cell;
Strange sounds we heard, and, sooth to tell,

He murmured on till morn, howe'er No living mortal could be near. Sometimes I thought I heard it plain,
As other voices spoke again.
I cannot tell—I like it not—
Friar John hath told us it is wrote,
No conscience clear and void of wrong
Can rest awake and pray so long.
Himself still sleeps before his beads
Have marked ten aves and two creeds,"—

"Let pass," quoth Marmion; "by my

This man shall guide me on my way, Although the great arch-fiend and he Had sworn themselves of company. So please you, gentle youth, to call This Palmer to the castle-hall." The summoned Palmer came in place: His sable cowl o'erhung his face; In his black mantle was he clad, With Peter's keys, in cloth of red,

On his broad shoulders wrought; The scallop shell his cap did deck; The crucifix around his neck

Was from Loretto brought; His sandals were with travel tore. Staff, budget, bottle, scrip, he wore; The faded palm-branch in his hand Showed pilgrim from the Holy Land.

When as the Palmer came in hall, Nor lord nor knight was there more tall, Or had a statelier step withal,

Or looked more high and keen; For no saluting did he wait, But strode across the hall of state, And fronted Marmion where he sate, As he his peer had been.

But his gaunt frame was worn with toil:

His cheek was sunk, alas the while! And when he struggled at a smile

His eye looked haggard wild: Poor wretch, the mother that him bare, If she had been in presence there, In his wan face and sunburnt hair

She had not known her child.

Danger, long travel, want, or woe,

Soon change the form that best we know—

For deadly fear can time outgo,
And blanch at once the hair;
Hard toil can roughen form and face,
And want can quench the eye's bright
grace,

Nor does old age a wrinkle trace More deeply than despair. Happy whom none of these befall, But this poor Palmer knew them all, SCOTT

Lord Marmion then his boon did ask; The Palmer took on him the task, So he would march with morning tide, To Scottish court to be his guide. "But I have solemn vows to pay, And may not linger by the way,

To fair Saint Andrew's bound, Within the ocean-cave to pray, Where good Saint Rule his holy lay, From midnight to the dawn of day,

Sung to the billows' sound; Thence to Saint Fillan's blessed well, Whose spring can frenzied dreams dispel

And the crazed brain restore. Saint Mary grant that cave or spring Could back to peace my bosom bring, Or bid it throb no more!"

And now the midnight draught of sleep, Where wine and spices richly steep, In massive bowl of silver deep,

The page presents on knee. Lord Marmion drank a fair good rest, The Captain pledged his noble guest, The cup went through among the rest,

Who drained it merrily Alone the Palmer passed it by, Though Selby pressed him courteously. This was a sign the feast was o'er; It hushed the merry wassail roar,

The minstrels ceased to sound. Soon in the castle nought was heard But the slow footstep of the guard Pacing his sober round.

With early dawn Lord Marmion rose: And first the chapel doors unclose; Then, after morning rites were done-A hasty mass from Friar John-And knight and squire had broke their fast

On rich substantial repast, Lord Marmion's bugle blew to horse. Then came the stirrup-cup in course: Between the baron and his host, No point of courtesy was lost; High thanks were by Lord Marmion paid, Solemn excuse the Captain made, Till, filing from the gate, had passed That noble train, their lord the last. Then loudly rung the trumpet call; Thundered the cannon from the wall,

And shook the Scottish shore; Around the castle eddied slow Volumes of smoke as white as snow

And hid its turrets hoar, Till they rolled forth upon the air, And met the river breezes there, Which gave again the prospect fair.

CANTO SECOND

PII

THE CONVENT

THE breeze which swept away the smoke Round Norham Castle rolled, When all the loud artillery spoke With lightning-flash and thunder-stroke, As Marmion left the Hold.—

It curled not Tweed alone, that breeze, For, far upon Northumbrian seas,

It freshly blew and strong, Where, from high Whitby's cloistered pile,

Bound to Saint Cuthbert's Holy Isle,

It bore a bark along.

Upon the gale she stooped her side, And bounded o'er the swelling tide, As she were dancing home;

The merry seamen laughed to see Their gallant ship so lustily Furrow the green sea-foam.

joyed they in their honored Much freight:

For, on the deck, in chair of state, The Abbess of Saint Hilda placed, With five fair nuns, the galley graced.

"T was sweet to see these holy maids, Like birds escaped to greenwood shades,

Their first flight from the cage, How timid, and how curious too, For all to them was strange and new, And all the common sights they view

Their wonderment engage. One eyed the shrouds and swelling sail, With many a benedicite;

One at the rippling surge grew pale, And would for terror pray,

Then shrieked because the sea-dog nigh His round black head and sparkling eye

Reared o'er the foaming spray; And one would still adjust her veil Disordered by the summer gale, Perchance lest some more worldly eye Her dedicated charms might spy, Perchance because such action graced Her fair-turned arm and slender waist. Light was each simple bosom there, Save two, who ill might pleasure share,-The Abbess and the Novice Clare.

The Abbess was of noble blood, But early took the veil and hood, Ere upon life she cast a look, Or knew the world that she forsook. Fair too she was, and kind had been As she was fair, but ne'er had seen For her a timid lover sigh, Nor knew the influence of her eye.

Love to her ear was but a name, Combined with vanity and shame; Her hopes, her fears, her joys, were all Bounded within the cloister wall; The deadliest sin her mind could reach Was of monastic rule the breach, And her ambition's highest aim To emulate Saint Hilda's fame. For this she gave her ample dower To raise the convent's eastern tower; For this, with carving rare and quaint, She decked the chapel of the saint, And gave the relic-shrine of cost, With ivory and gems embossed. The poor her convent's bounty blest, The pilgrim in its halls found rest.

Black was her garb, her rigid rule Reformed on Benedictine school; Her cheek was pale, her form was spare; Vigils and penitence austere Had early quenched the light of youth: But gentle was the dame, in sooth; Though, vain of her religious sway, She loved to see her maids obey. Yet nothing stern was she in cell, And the nuns loved their Abbess well. Sad was this voyage to the dame; Summoned to Lindisfarne, she came, There, with Saint Cuthbert's Abbot old And Tynemouth's Prioress, to hold A chapter of Saint Benedict, For inquisition stern and strict On two apostates from the faith, And, if need were, to doom to death.

Nought say I here of Sister Clare, Save this, that she was young and fair; As yet a novice unprofessed, Lovely and gentle, but distressed, She was betrothed to one now dead, Or worse, who had dishonored fled. Her kinsmen bade her give her hand To one who loved her for her land; Herself, almost heart-broken now, Was bent to take the vestal vow, And shroud within Saint Hilda's gloom Her blasted hopes and withered bloom.

She sate upon the galley's prow,
And seemed to mark the waves below;
Nay, seemed, so fixed her look and eye,
To count them as they glided by;
She saw them not—'t was seeming all—
Far other scene her thoughts recall—,
A sun-scorched desert, waste and bare;
Nor waves nor breezes murmured there;
There saw she where some careless hand
O'er a dead corpse had heaped the sand,

To hide it till the jackals come To tear it from the scanty tomb.— See what a woful look was given, As she raised up her eyes to heaven!

Lovely, and gentle, and distressed—
These charms might tame the fiercest
breast:

Harpers have sung and poets told
That he, in fury uncontrolled,
The shaggy monarch of the wood,
Before a virgin, fair and good,
Hath pacified his savage mood.
But passions in the human frame
Oft put the lion's rage to shame;
And jealousy, by dark intrigue,
With sordid avarice in league,
Had practised with their bowl and knife
Against the mourner's harmless life.
This crime was charged gainst those who lay

Prisoned in Cuthbert's islet gray.

And now the vessel skirts the strand Of mountainous Northumberland; Towns, towers, and halls successive rise, And catch the nuns' delighted eyes. Monk-Wearmouth soon behind them lay, And Tynemouth's priory and bay; They marked amid her trees the hall of lofty Seaton-Delaval; They saw the Blythe and Wansbeck floods

Rush to the sea through sounding woods:

They passed the tower of Widderington, Mother of many a valiant son;
At Coquet-isle their beads they tell
To the good saint who owned the cell;
Then did the Alne attention claim,
And Warkworth, proud of Percy's
name;

And next they crossed themselves to hear

The whitening breakers sound so near, Where, boiling through the rocks, they

On Dunstanborough's caverned shore; Thy tower, proud Bamborough, marked they there, King Ida's castle, huge and square,

King Ida's castle, huge and square, From its tall rock look grimly down, And on the swelling ocean frown; Then from the coast they bore away And reached the Holy Island's bay.

The tide did now its flood-mark gain. And girdled in the Saint's domain; For, with the flow and ebb, its style

Varies from continent to isle: Dry shod, o'er sands, twice every day The pilgrims to the shrine find way; Twice every day the waves efface Of staves and sandalled feet the trace. As to the port the galley flew, Higher and higher rose to view. The castle with its battled walls, The ancient monastery's halls, A solemn, huge, and dark-red pile, Placed on the margin of the isle.

In Saxon strength that abbey frowned, With massive arches broad and round,

That rose alternate, row and row. On ponderous columns, short and low, Built ere the art was known, By pointed aisle and shafted stalk The arcades of an alleyed walk

To emulate in stone.

On the deep walls the heathen Dane Had poured his impious rage in vain; And needful was such strength to these, Exposed to the tempestuous seas, Scourged by the winds' eternal sway, Open to rovers fierce as they,

Which could twelve hundred years withstand

Winds, waves, and northern pirates' hand.

Not but that portions of the pile, Rebuilded in a later style, Showed where the spoiler's hand had been; Not but the wasting sea-breeze keen Had worn the pillar's carving quaint, And mouldered in his niche the saint, And rounded with consuming power The pointed angles of each tower; Yet still entire the abbey stood, Like veteran, worn, but unsubdued.

Soon as they neared his turrets strong, The maidens raised Saint Hilda's song, And with the sea-wave and the wind Their voices, sweetly shrill, combined

And made harmonious close: Then, answering from the sandy shore, Half-drowned amid the breakers' roar,

According chorus rose: Down to the haven of the Isle The monks and nuns in order file From Cuthbert's cloisters grim;

Banner, and cross, and relics there, To meet Saint Hilda's maids, they bare; And, as they caught the sounds on air,

They echoed back the hymn. The islanders in joyous mood Rushed emulously through the flood

To hale the bark to land: Conspicuous by her veil and hood, Signing the cross, the Abbess stood, And blessed them with her hand.

Suppose we now the welcome said, Suppose the convent banquet made: All through the holy dome,

Through cloister, aisle, and gallery, Wherever vestal maid might pry, Nor risk to meet unhallowed eye,

The stranger sisters roam; Till fell the evening damp with dew, And the sharp sea-breeze coldly blew, For there even summer night is chill. Then, having strayed and gazed their fill,

They closed around the fire; And all, in turn, essayed to paint The rival merits of their saint,

A theme that ne'er can tire A holy maid, for be it known That their saint's honor is their own.

Then Whitby's nuns exulting told How to their house three barons bold Must menial service do.

While horns blow out a note of shame, And monks cry, "Fie upon your name! In wrath, for loss of sylvan game, Saint Hilda's priest ye slew."— "This, on Ascension-day, each year While laboring on our harbor-pier, Must Herbert, Bruce, and Percy hear." They told how in their convent-cell A Saxon princess once did dwell,

The lovely Edelfled; And how, of thousand snakes, each one Was changed into a coil of stone

When holy Hilda prayed; Themselves, within their holy bound, Their stony folds had often found. They told how sea-fowls' pinions fail As over Whitby's towers they sail, And, sinking down, with flutterings faint.

They do their homage to the saint.

Nor did Saint Cuthbert's daughters fail To vie with these in holy tale; His body's resting-place, of old, How oft their patron changed, they told; How, when the rude Dane burned their pile,

The monks fled forth from Holy Isle; O'er northern mountain, marsh, and moor,

From sea to sea, from shore to shore, Seven years Saint Cuthbert's corpse they They rested them in fair Melrose; But though, alive, he loved it well, Not there his relics might repose; For, wondrous tale to tell!

In his stone coffin forth he rides, A ponderous bark for river tides, Yet light as gossamer it glides Downward to Tilmouth cell. Nor long was his abiding there,

For southward did the saint repair; Chester-le-Street and Ripon saw His holy corpse ere Wardilaw

Hailed him with joy and fear; And, after many wanderings past, He chose his lordly seat at last Where his cathedral, huge and vast,

Looks down upon the Wear. There, deep in Durham's Gothic shade,

His relics are in secret laid; But none may know the place, Save of his holiest servants three, Deep sworn to solemn secrecy, Who share that wondrous grace.

Who may his miracles declare? Even Scotland's dauntless king and heir-

Although with them they led Galwegians, wild as ocean's gale, And Loden's knights, all sheathed in mail.

And the bold men of Teviotdale-Before his standard fled. 'Twas he, to vindicate his reign, Edged Alfred's falchion on the Dane, And turned the Conqueror back again, When, with his Norman bowver band. He came to waste Northumberland.

But fain Saint Hilda's nuns would learn If on a rock, by Lindisfarne, Saint Cuthbert sits, and toils to frame The sea-born beads that bear his name: Such tales had Whitby's fishers told, And said they might his shape behold,

And hear his anvil sound; A deadened clang,—a huge dim form, Seen but, and heard, when gathering

And night were closing round. But this, as tale of idle fame, The nuns of Lindisfarne disclaim.

While round the fire such legends go, Far different was the scene of woe Where, in a secret aisle beneath, Council was held of life and death. It was more dark and long, that vault, Than the worst dungeon cell;

Old Colwulf built it, for his fault In penitence to dwell.

When he for cowl and beads laid

The Saxon battle-axe and crown. This den, which, chilling every sense Of feeling, hearing, sight, Was called the Vault of Penitence,

Excluding air and light, Was by the prelate Sexhelm made A place of burial for such dead As, having died in mortal sin, Might not be laid the church within. 'Twas now a place of punishment; Whence if so loud a shrick were sent

As reached the upper air. The hearers blessed themselves, and said The spirits of the sinful dead Bemoaned their torments there.

But though, in the monastic pile, Did of this penitential pile, Some vague tradition go, Few only, save the Abbot, knew Where the place lay, and still more few Were those who had from him the clew

To that dread vault to go. Victim and executioner Were blindfold when transported there. In low dark rounds the arches hung. From the rude rock the side-walls sprung The gravestones, rudely sculptured o'er, Half sunk in earth, by time half wore, Were all the pavement of the floor; The mildew drops fell one by one, With tinkling plash, upon the stone. A cresset, in an iron chain, Which served to light this drear domain, With damp and darkness seemed to strive, As if it scarce might keep alive; And yet it dimly served to show The awful conclave met below.

There, met to doom in secrecy, Were placed the heads of convents three, All servants of Saint Benedict, The statutes of whose order strict On iron table lay; In long black dress, on seats of stone,

Behind were these three judges shown

By the pale crescent's ray. The Abbess of Saint Hilda's there Sat for a space with visage bare, Until, to hide her bosom's swell, And tear-drops that for pity fell,

She closely drew her veil; You shrouded figure, as I guess, By her proud mien and flowing dress, Is Tynemouth's haughty Prioress, And she with awe looks pale; And he, that ancient man, whose sight Has long been quenched by age's night, Upon whose wrinkled brow alone Nor ruth nor mercy's trace is shown,

Whose look is hard and stern,— Saint Cuthbert's Abbot is his style, For sanctity called through the isle

The Saint of Lindisfarne.

Before them stood a guilty pair;
But, though an equal fate they share,
Yet one alone deserves our care.
Her sex a page's dress belied;
The cloak and doublet, loosely tied,
Obscured her charms, but could not hide.

Her cap down o'er her face she drew;
And, on her doublet breast,
She tried to hide the badge of blue,

Lord Marmion's falcon crest.
But, at the prioress' command,
A monk undid the silken band
That tied her tresses fair,
And raised the bonnet from her head,
And down her slender form they spread

In ringlets rich and rare.
Constance de Beverley they know,
Sister professed of Fontevraud,
Whom the Church numbered with the dead,

For broken vows and convent fled.

When thus her face was given to view,—

Although so pallid was her hue,
It did a ghastly contrast bear
To those bright ringlets glistering
fair,—

Her look composed, and steady eye, Bespoke a matchless constancy; And there she stood so calm and pale That, but her breathing did not fail, And motion slight of eye and head, And of her bosom, warranted That neither sense nor pulse she lacks, You might have thought a form of wax, Wrought to the very life, was there; So still she was, so pale, so fair.

Her comrade was a sordid soul, Such as does murder for a meed; Who, but of fear, knows no control, Because his conscience, seared and foul,

Feels not the import of his deed; One whose brute-feeling ne'er aspires Beyond his own more brute desires. Such tools the Tempter ever needs To do the savagest of deeds;
For them no visioned terrors daunt,
Their nights no fancied spectres haunt;
One fear with them, of all most base,
The fear of death, alone finds place.
This wretch was clad in frock and cowl,
And shamed not loud to moan and how!,
His body on the floor to dash,
And crouch, like hound beneath the lash:

While his mute partuer, standing near Waited her doom without a tear.

Yet well the luckless wretch might shriek,

Well might her paleness terror speak! For there were seen in that dark wall Two niches, narrow, deep, and tall;—Who enters at such grisly door Shall ne'er, I ween, find exit more. In each a slender meal was laid, Of roots, of water, and of bread; By each, in Benedictine dress, Two haggard monks stood motionless, Who, holding high a blazing torch, Showed the grim entrance of the porch; Reflecting back the smoky beam, The dark-red walls and arches gleam. Hewn stones and cement were displayed,

And building tools in order laid.

These executioners were chose, As men who were with mankind foes, And, with despite and envy fired, Into the cloister had retired,

Or who, in desperate doubt of grace, Strove by deep penance to efface Of some foul crime the stain;

Of some foul crime the stain; For, as the vassals of her will, Such men the Church selected still As either joyed in doing ill,

Or thought more grace to gain
If in her cause they wrestled down
Feelings their nature strove to own.
By strange device were they brought
there,

They knew not how, and knew not where.

And now that blind old abbot rose, To speak the Chapter's doom On those the wall was to enclose

Alive within the tomb, But stopped because that woful maid, Gathering her powers, to speak essayed: Twice she essayed, and twice in vain, Her accents might no utterance gain; Nought but imperfect murmurs slip From her convulsed and quivering lip; 'Twixt each attempt all was so still, You seemed to hear a distant rill—'T was ocean's swells and falls; For though this vault of sin and fear Was to the sounding surge so near, A tempest there you scarce could hear, So massive were the walls.

At length, an effort sent apart
The blood that curdled to her heart,
And light came to her eye,
And color dawned upon her cheek,
A hectic and a fluttered streak,
Like that left on the Cheviot peak
By Autumn's stormy sky;
And when her silence broke at length,
Still as she spoke she gathered strength,

And armed herself to bear.
It was a fearful sight to see
Such high resolve and constancy
In form so soft and fair.

"I speak not to implore your grace, Well know I for one minute's space Successless might I sue: Nor do I speak your prayers to gain; For if a death of lingering pain To cleanse my sins be penance vain,

Vain are your masses too.—
I listened to a traitor's tale,
I left the convent and the veil;
For three long years I bowed my pride,
A horse-boy in his train to ride;
And well my folly's meed he gave,
Who forfeited, to be his slave,
All here, and all beyond the grave.
He saw young Clara's face more fair,
He knew her of broad lands the heir,
Forgot his vows, his faith forswore,
And Constance was beloved no more.

'T is an old tale, and often told;
But did my fate and wish agree,
Ne'er had been read, in story old,
Of maiden true betrayed for gold,
That loved, or was avenged, like me!

"The king approved his favorite's aim; In vain a rival barred his claim,

Whose fate with Clare's was plight, For he attaints that rival's fame With treason's charge—and on they came

In mortal lists to fight.
Their oaths are said,

Their prayers are said,
Their prayers are prayed,
Their lances in the rest are laid,
They meet in mortal shock;
And hark! the throng, with thundering
cry,

Shout 'Marmior, Marmion! to the sky
De Wilton to the block!'
Say, ye who preach Heaven shall decide
When in the lists two champions ride,
Say, was Heaven's justice here?
When, loyal in his love and faith,
Wilton found overthrow or death
Beneath a traitor's spear?
How false the charge, how true he fell,
This guilty packet best can tell."
Then drew a packet from her breast,
Paused, gathered voice, and spoke the rest.

"Still was false Marmion's bridal stayed;
To Whitby's convent fled the maid,
The hated match to shun.

'Ho! shifts she thus?' King Henry cried,

'Sir Marmion, she shall be thy bride, If she were sworn a nun.'
One way remained—the king's command Sent Marmion to the Scottish land; I lingered here, and rescue planned For Clara and for me:

This caitiff monk for gold did swear
He would to Whitby's shrine repair,
And by his drugs my rival fair
A saint in heaven should be;
But ill the dastard kept his oath,

Whose cowardice hath undone us both.

"And now my tongue the secret tells, Not that remorse my boson swells, But to assure my soul that none Shall ever wed with Marmion.
Had fortune my last hope betrayed. This packet, to the king conveyed, Had given him to the headsman's stroke, Although my heart that instant broke.—Now, men of death, work forth your

For I can suffer, and be still; And come he slow, or come he fast, It is but Death who comes at last.

"Yet dread me from my living tomb, Ye vassal slaves of bloody Rome! If Marmion's late remorse should wake, Full soon such vengeance will he take That you shall wish the fiery Dane Had rather been your guest again. Behind, a darker hour ascends! The altars quake, the crosier bends, The ire of a despotic king Rides forth upon destruction's wing; Then shall these vaults, so strong and deep,

Burst open to the sea-wind's sweep;

Some traveller then shall find my bones Whitening amid disjointed stones, And, ignorant of priests' cruelty, Marvel such relics here should be."

Fixed was her look and stern her air:

Back from her shoulders streamed her
hair:

The locks that wont her brow to shade Stared up erectly from her head; Her figure seemed to rise more high; Her voice despair's wild energy Had given a tone of prophecy.

Appalled the astonished conclave sate; With stupid eyes, the men of fate Gazed on the light inspired form, And listened for the avenging storm; The judges felt the victim's dread; No hand was moved, no word was said,

Till thus the abbot's doom was given, Raising his sightless balls to heaven: "Sister, let thy sorrows cease; Sinful brother, part in peace!"

From that dire dungeon, place of doom,

Of execution too, and tomb,
Paced forth the judges three;
Sorrow it were and shame to tell
The butcher-work that there befell,
When they had glided from the cell
Of sin and misery.

An hundred winding steps convey That conclave to the upper day; But ere they breathed the fresher air They heard the shrickings of despair,

And many a stifled groan.

With speed their upward way they take,—

Such speed as age and fear can make,—
And crossed themselves for terror's sake,

As hurrying, tottering on,
Even in the vesper's heavenly tone
They seemed to hear a dying groan,
And bade the passing knell to toll
For welfare of a parting soul.
Slow o'er the midnight wave it swung,
Northumbrian rocks in answer rung;
To Warkworth cell the echoes rolled,
His beads the wakeful hermit told;
The Bamborough peasant raised his head.

But slept ere half a prayer he said; So far was heard the mighty knell, The stag sprung up on Cheviot Fell, Spread his broad nostrils to the wind, Listed before, aside, behind, Then couched him down beside the hind, And quaked among the mountain fern, To hear that sound so dull and stern.

CANTO THIRD

THE HOSTEL, OR INN

THE livelong day Lord Marmion rode: The mountain path the Palmer showed By glen and streamlet winded still, Where stunted birches hid the rill. They might not choose the lowland road. For the Merse foravers were abroad. Who, fired with hate and thirst of prev. Had scarcely failed to bar their way; Oft on the trampling band from crown Of some tall cliff the deer looked down; On wing of jet from his repose In the deep heath the blackcock rose: Sprung from the gorse the timid roe. Nor waited for the bending bow; And when the stony path began By which the naked peak they wan, Up flew the snowy ptarmigan. The noon had long been passed before They gained the height of Lammermoor;

Thence winding down the northern way,

Before them at the close of day.

Before them at the close of day Old Gifford's towers and hamlet lay.

No summons calls them to the tower, To spend the hospitable hour. To Scotland's camp the lord was gone; His cautious dame, in bower alone, Dreaded her castle to unclose, So late, to unknown friends or foes.

On through the hamlet as they paced, Before a porch whose front was graced, With bush and flagon trimly placed,

Lord Marmion drew his rein:
The village inn seemed large, though rude;

Its cheerful fire and hearty food
Might well relieve his train.

Down from their seats the horsemen

sprung,
With jingling spurs the court-yard rung:
They bind their horses to the stall,
For forage, food, and firing call,
And various clamor fills the hall:
Weighing the labor with the cost,
Toils everywhere the bustling host.

Soon, by the chimney's merry blaze, Through the rude hostel might you gaze. Might see where in dark nook aloof The rafters of the sooty roof Bore wealth of winter cheer;

Of sea-fowl dried, and solands store, And gammons of the tusky boar, And savory haunch of deer.

The chimney arch projected wide; Above, around it, and beside,

Were tools for housewives' hand Nor wanted, in that martial day, The implements of Scottish fray,

The buckler, lance, and brand. Beneath its shade, the place of state. On oaken settle Marmion sate, And viewed around the blazing hearth His followers mix in noisy mirth; Whom with brown ale, in jolly tide, From ancient vessels ranged aside Full actively their host supplied.

Theirs was the glee of martial breast. And laughter theirs at little jest: And oft Lord Marmion deigned to aid, And mingle in the mirth they made; For though, with men of high degree, The proudest of the proud was he, Yet, trained in camps, he knew the

To win the soldier's hardy heart. They love a captain to obey, Boisterous as March, yet fresh as May; With open hand and brow as free, Lover of wine and minstrelsy; Ever the first to scale a tower, As venturous in a lady's bower: -Such buxom chief shall lead his host From India's fires to Zembla's frost.

Resting upon his pilgrim staff, Right opposite the Palmer stood. His thin dark visage seen but half, Half hidden by his hood. Still fixed on Marmion was his look, Which he, who ill such gaze could brook, Strove by a frown to quell: But not for that, though more than once Full met their stern encountering glance, The Palmer's visage fell.

By fits less frequent from the crowd Was heard the burst of laughter loud; For still, as squire and archer stared On that dark face and matted beard,

Their glee and game declined. All gazed at length in silence drear, Unbroke save when in comrade's ear Some yeoman, wondering in his fear, Thus whispered forth his mind:

"Saint Mary! saw'st thou e'er such sight?

How pale his cheek, his eye how bright Whene'er the firebrand's fickle light, Glances beneath his cowl! Full on our lord he sets his eye;

For his best palfrey would not I Endure that sullen scowl."

But Marmion, as to chase the awe Which thus had quelled their hearts who saw

The ever-varying firelight show That figure stern and face of woe. Now called upon a squire:

"Fitz-Eustace, know'st thou not some lay,
To speed the lingering night away?

We slumber by the fire.

"So please you," thus the youth rejoined "Our choicest-minstrel's left behind. Ill may we hope to please your ear. Accustomed Constant's strains to hear. The harp full deftly can be strike, And wake the lover's lute alike; To dear Saint Valentine no thrush Sings livelier from a springtide bush, No nightingale her lovelorn tune More sweetly warbles to the moon. Woe to the cause, whate'er it be, Detains from us his melody, Lavished on rocks and billows stern, Or duller monks of Lindisfarne. Now must I venture as I may, To sing his favorite roundelay."

A mellow voice Fitz-Eustace had, The air he chose was wild and sad; Such have I heard in Scottish land Rise from the busy, harvest band, When falls before the mountaineer On Lowland plains the ripened ear. Now one shrill voice the notes prolong, Now a wild chorus swells the song: Oft have I listened and stood still As it came softened up the hill, And deemed it the lament of men Who languished for their native glen, And thought how sad would be such

On Susquehanna's swampy ground, Kentucky's wood-encumbered brake, Or wild Ontario's boundless lake, Where heart-sick exiles in the strain Recalled fair Scotland's hills again!

SONG

Where shall the lover rest. Whom the fates sever From his true maiden's breast, Parted forever? Where, through groves deep and high Sounds the far billow, Where early violets die, Under the willow.

CHORUS

Eleu loro, etc. Soft shall be his pillow.

There, through the summer day, Cool streams are laving;
There, while the tempests sway, Scarce are boughs waving;
There thy rest shalt thou take, Parted forever,
Never again to wake,
Never, O never!

CHORUS

Eleu loro, etc. Never, O never!

Where shall the traitor rest,
He the deceiver,
Who could win maiden's breast,
Ruin and leave her?
In the lost battle,
Borne down by the flying,
Where mingles war's rattle
With groans of the dying.

CHORUS

Eleu loro, etc. There shall be be lying.

Her wing shall the eagle flap
O'er the false-hearted;
His warm blood the wolf shall lap,
Ere life be parted.
Shame and dishonor sit
By his grave ever;
Blessing shall hallow it,—
Never, O never!

CHORUS

Eleu loro, etc. Never, O never!

It ceased, the melancholy sound, And silence sunk on all around. The air was sad; but sadder still It fell on Marmion's ear, And plained as if disgrace and ill, And shameful death, were near. He drew his mantle past his face, Between it and the band, And rested with his head a space Reclining on his hand. His thoughts I scan not; but I ween

That, could their import have been seen,
The meanest groom in all the hall,
That e'er tied courser to a stall,

That e'er tied courser to a stall, Would scarce have wished to be their prev.

For Lutterward and Fontenaye.

High minds, of native pride and force, Most deeply feel thy pangs, Remorse! Fear, for their scourge, mean villains have,

Thou art the torturer of the brave!
Yet fatal strength they boast to steel
Their minds to bear the wounds they feel.

Even while they writhe beneath the

Of civil conflict in the heart.
For soon Lord Marmion raised his head,
And smiling to Fitz-Eustace said:
"Is it not strange that, as ye sung,
Seemed in mine ear a death-peal rung,
Such as in nunneries they toll
For some departing sister's soul!
Say, what may this portend?'
Then first the Palmer silence broke,—
The livelong day he had not spoke,—
"The death of a dear friend."

Marmion, whose steady heart and eye Ne'er changed in worst extremity; Marmion, whose soul could scantly brook

Even from his king a haughty look;
Whose accent of command controlled
In camps the boldest of the bold—
Thought, look, and utterance failed him
now.

Fallen was his glance and flushed his brow:

For either in the tone, Or something in the Palmer's look, So full upon his conscience strook, That appears he found none.

That answer he found none.
Thus oft it haps that when within
They shrink at sense of secret sin,
A feather daunts the brave;

A fool's wild speech confounds the wise, And proudest princes veil their eyes Before their meanest slave.

Well might he falter!—By*his aid
Was Constance Beverley betrayed.
Not that he augured of the doom
Which on the living closed the tomb:
But, tired to hear the desperate maid
Threaten by turns, beseech, upbraid,
And wroth because in wild despair
She practised on the life of Clare,
Its fugitive the Church he gave,
Though not a victim, but a slave,
And deemed restraint in convent strange

Would hide her wrongs and her revenge. Himself, proud Henry's favorite peer, Held Romish thunders idle fear; Secure his pardon he might hold For some slight mulct of penance-gold. Thus judging, he gave secret way When the stern priests surprised their prey.

His train but deemed the favorite page Was left behind to spare his age; Or other if they deemed, none dared To mutter what he thought and heard: Woe to the vassal who durst pry Into Lord Marmion's privacy!

His conscience slept—he deemed her well,

And safe secured in distant cell;
But wakened by her favorite lay,
And that strange Palmer's boding say,
That fell so ominous and drear
Full on the object of his fear,
To aid remorse's venomed throes,
Dark tales of convent-vengeance rose;
And Constance, late betrayed and scorned,

All lovely on his soul returned;
Lovely as when at treacherous call
She left her convent's peaceful wall,
Crimsoned with shame, with terror mute.

Dreading alike escape, pursuit, Till love, victorious o'er alarms, Hid fears and blushes in his arms.

"Alas!" he thought, "how changed that mien!

How changed these timid looks have been,

Since years of guilt and of disguise Have steeled her brow and armed her eyes!

No more of virgin terror speaks
The blood that mantles in her cheeks;
Fierce and unfeminine are there,
Frenzy for joy, for grief despair;
And I the cause—for whom were given
Her peace on earth, her hopes in heaven!—

Would," thought he, as the picture grows,

"I on its stalk had left the rose!
Oh, why should man's success remove
The very charms that wake his love?—
Her convent's peaceful solitude
Is now a prison harsh and rude;
And, pent within the narrow cell,
How will her spirit chafe and swell!
How brook the stern monastic laws!
The penance how—and I the cause!—
Vigil and scourge—perchance even worse!

And twice he rose to cry, "To horse!"
And twice his sovereign's mandate came,
Like damp upon a kindling flame;
And twice he thought, "Gave I not charge?
She should be safe, though not at large?

They durst not, for their island, shred
One golden ringlet from her head."

While thus in Marmion's bosom strove Repentance and reviving love, Like whirlwinds whose contending sway I've seen Loch Vennachar obey, Their host the Palmer's speech had heard,

And talkative took up the word:

"Ay, reverend pilgrim, you who stray
From Scotland's simple land away,
To visit realms afar,
I'ull often learn the art to know
Of future weal or future woe,
By word, or sign, or star;
Yet might a knight his fortune hear,
If, Knight-like, he despises fear,
Not far from hence;—if fathers old
Aright our hamlet legend told."
These broken words the menials move,—
For marvels still the vulgar love,—
And, Marmion giving license cold,

THE HOST'S TALE

His tale the host thus gladly told :-

"A clerk could tell what years have Since Alexander filled our throne.— Third monarch of that warlike name,-And eke the time when here he came To seek Sir Hugo, then our lord: A braver never drew a sword; A wiser never, at the hour Of midnight, spoke the word of power; The same whom ancient records call The founder of the Goblin-Hall. I would, Sir Knight, your longer stay Gave you that cavern to survey. Of lofty roof and ample size, Beneath the castle deep it lies: To hew the living rock profound, The floor to pave, the arch to round, There never toiled a mortal arm, It all was wrought by word and charm: And I have heard my grandsire say That the wild clamor and affray Of those dread artisans of hell, Who labored under Hugo's spell, Sounded as loud as ocean's war Among the caverns of Dunbar.

"The king Lord Gifford's castle sought, Deep laboring with uncertain thought. Even then he mustered all his host, To meet upon the western coast: For Norse and Danish galleys plied Their oars within the Firth of Clyde. There floated Haco's banner trim Above Norweyan warriors grim, Savage of heart and large of limb, Threatening both continent and isle, Bute, Arran, Cunninghame, and Kyle. Lord Gifford, deep beneath the ground, Heard Alexander's bugle sound, And tarried not his garb to change, But, in his wizard habit strange, Came forth,—a quaint and fearful sight: His mantle lined with fox-skins white; His high and wrinkled forehead bore A pointed cap, such as of yore Clerks say that Pharaoh's Magi wore: His shoes were marked with cross and spell.

Upon his breast a pentacle; His zone of virgin parchment thin, Or, as some tell, of dead man's skin, Bore many a planetary sign, Combust, and retrogade, and trine; And in his hand he held prepared A naked sword without a guard.

"Dire dealings with the fiendish race Had marked strange lines upon his face; Vigil and fast had worn him grim, His eyesight dazzled seemed and dim, As one unused to upper day Even his own menials with dismay Beheld, Sir Knight, the grisly sire In this unwonted wild attire; Unwonted, for traditions run He seldom thus beheld the sun. 'I know,' he said,—his voice was hoarse And broken seemed its hollow force,-'I know the cause, although untold, Why the king seeks his vassal's hold: Vainly from me my liege would know His kingdom's future weal or woe; But yet, if strong his arm and heart, His courage may do more than art.

"'Of middle air the demons proud, Who ride upon the racking cloud, Can read in fixed or wandering star The issue of events afar, But still their sullen aid withhold. Save when by mightier force controlled. Such late I summoned to my hall; And though so potent was the call That scarce the deepest nook of hell I deemed a refuge from the spell,

Yet, obstinate in silence still, The haughty demon mocks my skill. But thou, -who little know'st thy might As born upon that blessed night When yawning graves and dying groan Proclaimed hell's empire overthrown,— With untaught valor shalt compel Response denied to magic spell. Gramercy,' quoth our monarch free,
'Place him but front to front with me, And, by this good and honored brand, The gift of Cœur-de-Lion's hand. Soothly I swear that, tide what tide, The demon shall a buffet bide. His bearing bold the wizard viewed, And thus, well pleased, his speech renewed:

'There spoke the blood of Malcolm!—

Forth pacing hence at midnight dark,
The rampart seek whose circling crown
Crests the ascent of yonder down:
A southern entrance shalt thou find;
There halt, and there thy bugle wind,
And trust thine elfin foe to see
In guise of thy worst enemy.
Couch then thy lance and spur thy steed—

Upon him! and Saint George to speed!
If he go down, thou soon shalt know
Whate'er these airy sprites can show;
If thy heart fail thee in the strife,
I am no warrant for thy life.'

"Soon as the midnight bell did ring, Alone and armed, forth rode the king To that old camp's deserted round. Sir Knight, you well might mark the mound

Left hand the town,—the Pictish race
The trench, long since, in blood did trace;

The moor around is brown and bare, The space within is green and fair. The spot our village children know, For there the earliest wild-flowers grow; But woe betide the wandering wight That treads its circle in the night! The breadth across, a bowshot clear, Gives ample space for full career; Opposed to the four points of heaven, By four deep gaps are entrance given. The southernmost our monarch passed, Halted, and blew a gallant blast: And on the north, within the ring, Appeared the form of England's king, Who then, a thousand leagues afar, In Palestine waged holy war: Yet arms like England's did he wield;

Alike the leopards in the shield, Alike his Syrian courser's frame, The rider's length of limb the same. Long afterwards did Scotland know Fell Edward was her deadliest foe.

"The vision made our monarch start, But soon he manned his noble heart, And in the first career they ran, The Elfin Knight fell. horse and man; Yet did a splinter of his lance Through Alexander's visor glance, And razed the skin—a puny wound. The king, light leaping to the ground, With naked blade his phantom foe Compelled the future war to show.

Of Largs he saw the glorious plain, Where still gigantic bones remain, Memorial of the Danish war; Himself he saw, amid the field,

On high his brandished war-axe wield And strike proud Haco from his car, While all around the shadowy kings Denmark's grim ravens cowered their wings.

'T is said that in that awful night Remoter visions met his sight, Foreshowing future conquest far, When our sons' sons wage Northern war:

A royal city, tower and spire, Reddened the midnight sky with fire, And shouting crews her navy bore Triumphant to the victor shore. Such signs may learned clerks explain, They pass the wit of simple swain.

"The joyful king turned home again, Headed his host, and quelled the Dane; But yearly, when returned the night Of his strange combat with the sprite,

His wound must bleed and smart; Lord Gifford then would gibing say, 'Bold as ye were, my liege, ye pay The penance of your start.'

Long since, beneath Dunfermline's nave, King Alexander fills his grave,

Our Lady give him rest! Yet still the knightly spear and shield The Elfin Warrior doth wield

Upon the brown hill's breast,
And many a knight hath proved his chance

In the charmed ring to break a lance, But all have foully sped; Save two. as legends tell, and they

Were Wallace wight and Gilbert
Hav.—

Gentles, my tale is said."

The quaighs were deep, the liquor strong,

And on the tale the yeoman-throng Had made a comment sage and long, But Marmion gave a sign.

But Marmion gave a sign, And with their lord the squires retire, The rest around the hostel fire

Their drowsy limbs recline; For pillow, underneath each head The quiver and the targe were laid. Deep slumbering on the hostel floor, Oppressed with toil and ale, they snore; The dying flame, in fitful change, Threw on the group its shadows strange.

Apart, and nestling in the hay
Of a waste loft, Fitz-Eustace lay;
Scarce by the pale moonlight were seen
The foldings of his mantle green:
Lightly he dreamt, as youth will dream,
Of sport by thicket, or by stream,
Of hawk or hound, or ring or glove,
Or, lighter yet, of lady's love.
A cautious tread his slumber broke,
And, close beside him when he woke,
In moonbeam half, and half in gloom,
Stood a tall form with nodding plume;
But, ere his dagger Eustace drew,
His master Marmion's voice he knew:

"Fitz-Eustace! rise,—I cannot rest;
You churl's wild legend haunts my
breast,

And graver thoughts have chafed my mood;

The air must cool my feverish blood,
And fain would I ride forth to see
The scene of elfin chivalry.
Arise, and saddle me my steed;
And, gentle Eustace, take good heed
Thou dost not rouse these drowsy
slaves:

I would not that the prating knaves
Had cause for saying, o'er their ale,
That I could credit such a tale."
Then softly down the steps they slid,
Eustace the stable door undid,
And, darkling, Marmion's steed arrayed,
While, whispering, thus the baron
said:—

"Didst never, good my youth, hear tell
That on the hour when I was born
Saint George, who graced my sire's chapelle,

Descriptions him thead of morphs fell

Down from his steed of marble fell, A weary wight forlorn? The flattering chaplains all agree The champion left his steed to me I would, the omen's truth to show,
That I could meet this elfin foe!
Blithe would I battle for the right
To ask one question at the sprite.—
Vain thought! for elves, if elves there

An empty race, by fount or sea
To dashing waters dance and sing,
Or round the green oak wheel their ring."

Thus speaking, he his steed bestrode, And from the hostel slowly rode.

Fitz-Eustace followed him abroad, And marked him pace the village road, And listened to his horse's tramp,

Till, by the lessening sound,
He judged that of the Pictish camp
Lord Marmion sought the round.
Wonder it seemed, in the squire's eyes,
That one, so wary held and wise,—
Of whom 'twas said, he scarce received
For gospel what the Church believed,—

Should, stirred by idle tale, Ride forth in silence of the night, As hoping half to meet a sprite, Arrayed in plate and mail.

For little did Fitz-Eustace know
That passions in contending flow
Unfix the strongest mind;
We aried from doubt to doubt to flee,
We welcome fond credulity,
Guide confident, though blind.

Little for this Fitz-Eustace cared, But patient waited till he heard At distance, pricked to utmost speed, The foot-tramp of a flying steed

Come townward rushing on; First, dead, as if on turf it trode, Then, clattering on the village road,— In other pace than forth he yode,

Returned Lord Marmion, Down hastily he sprung from selle, And in his haste wellnigh he fell; To the squire's hand the rein he threw, And spoke no word as he withdrew: But yet the moonlight did betray The falcon-crest was soiled with clay; And plainly might Fitz Eustace see, By stains upon the charger's knee And his left side, that on the moor He had not kept his footing sure. Long musing on these wondrous signs, At length to rest the squire reclines, Broken and short; for still between Would dreams of terror intervene: Eustace did ne'er so blithely mark The first notes of the morning lark.

CANTO FOURTH

THE CAMP

EUSTACE, I said, did blithely mark
The first notes of the merry lark.
The lark sang shrill, the cock he crew,
And loudly Marmion's bugles blew,
And with their light and lively call
Brought groom and yeoman to the stall.
Whistling they came and free of heart.

But soon their mood was changed; Complaint was heard on every part Of some thing disarranged. Some clamored loud for armor lost;

Some clamored loud for armor lost; Some brawled and wrangled with the host;

'By Becket's bones,' cried one, 'I fear That some false Scot has stolen my spear!'

Young Blount, Lord Marmion's second squire, squire,

Found his steed wet with sweat and mire,
Although the rated horse-boy sware
Last night he dressed him sleek and fair.
While chafed the impatient squire like

Old Hubert shouts in fear and wonder,—Help, gentle Blount! help. comrades all! Bevis lies dying in his stall;
To Marmion who the plight dare tell Of the good steed he loves so well?' Gaping for fear and ruth, they saw The charger panting on his straw; Till one, who would seem wisest, cried, "What else but evil could betide, With that cursed Palmer for our guide? Better we had through mire and bush Been lantern-led by Friar Rush."

Fitz-Eustace, who the cause but guessed,

Nor wholly understood, His comrades' clamorous plaints suppressed:

He knew Lord Marmion's mood.

Him, ere he issued forth, he sought,

And found deep plunged in gloomy
thought,

And did his tale display Simply as if he knew of nought

To cause such disarray.
Lord Marmion gave attention cold,
Nor marvelled at the wonders told,—
Passed them as accidents of course,
And bade his clarions sound to horse.

Young Henry Blount, meanwhile, the cost
Had reckoned with their Scottish host;

And, as the charge he cast and paid, "Ill thou deserv'st thy hire," he said; "Dost see, thou knave, my horse's plight? Fairies have ridden him all the night, And left him in a foam!

I trust that soon a conjuring band, With English cross and blazing brand, Shall drive the devils from this land

To their infernal home;
For in this haunted den, I trow,
All night they trampled to and fro."
The laughing host looked on the hire:
"Gramercy, gentle southern squire,
And if thou com'st among the rest,
With Scottish broadsword to be bleest,
Sharp be the brand, and sure the blow,
And short the pang to undergo."
Here stayed their talk, for Marmion
Gave now the signal to set on.
The Palmer showing forth the way,
They journeyed all the morning-day.

The greensward way was smooth and good,

Through Humbie's and through Saltoun's wood;

A forest glade, which, varying still, Here gave a view of dale and hill There narrower closed till overhead A vaulted screen the branches made. "A pleasant path," Fitz-Eustace said; "Such as where errant knights might see

Adventures of high chivalry,
Might meet some damsel flying fast,
With hair unbound and looks aghast;
And smooth and level course were here,
In her defence to break a spear.
Here, too, are twilight nooks and dells;
And oft in such, the story tells,
The damsel kind, from danger freed,
Did grateful pay her champion's meed."
He spoke to cheer Lord Marmion's mind,
Perchance to show his lore designed;

For Eustace much had pored
Upon a huge romantic tome,
In the hall-window of his home,
Imprinted at the antique dome
Of Caxton or de Worde,

Therefore he spoke,—but spoke in vain, For Marmion answered nought again.

Now sudden, distant trumpets shrill, In notes prolonged by wood and hill, Were heard to echo far; Each ready archer grasped his bow, But by the flourish soon they know They breathed no point of war. Yet cautious, as in foeman's land,

Lord Marmion's order speeds the band Some opener ground to gain; And scarce a furlong had they rode, When thinner trees receding showed A little woodland plain.

Just in that advantageous glade The halting troop a line had made, As forth from the opposing shade Issued a gallant train.

First came the trumpets, at whose clang So late the forest echoes rang; On prancing steeds they forward pressed, With scarlet mantle, azure vest; Each at his trump a banner wore, Which Scotland's royal scutcheon bore: Heralds and pursuivants, by name Bute, Islay, Marchmount, Rothsay, came,

In painted tabards, proudly showing Gules, argent, or, and azure glowing.
Attendant on a king-at-arms,
Whose hand the armorial truncheon

That feudal strife had often quelled When wildest its alarms.

He was a man of middle age, In aspect manly, grave, and sage,

As on king's errand come;
But in the glances of his eye
A penetrating, keen, and sly
Expression found its home;
The flash of that satiric rage

The flash of that satisfic rage Which, bursting on the early stage, Branded the vices of the age,
And broke the keys of Rome.

On milk-white palfrey forth he paced, His cap of maintenance was graced With the proud heron-plume.

From his steed's shoulder, loin, and breast,

Silk housings swept the ground, With Scotland's arms, device, and crest, Embroidered round and round. The double tressure might you see,

First by Achaius borne,
The thistle and the fleur-de-lis,

And gallant unicorn.
So bright the king's armorial coat
That scarce the dazzled eye could note,

In living colors blazoned brave,
The Lion, which his title gave;
A train, which well beseemed his state
But all unarmed, around him wait.

Still is thy name in high account, And still thy verse has charms, Sir David Lindesay of the Mount, Lord Lion King-at-arms! Down from his horse did Marmion spring Soon as he saw the Lion-King; For well the stately baron knew To him such courtesy was due Whom royal James himself had crowned, And on his temples placed the round Of Scotland's ancient diadem,

And wet his brow with hallowed wine, And on his finger given to shine The emblematic gem.

Their mutual greetings duly made,
The Lion thus his message said:—
'Though Scotland's King hath deeply swore

Ne'er to knit faith with Henry more, And strictly hath forbid resort From England to his royal court, Yet, for he knows Lord Marmion's name And honors much his warlike fame, My liege hath deemed it shame and lack

Of courtesy to turn him back; And by his order I, your guide, Must lodging fit and fair provide Till finds King James meet time to see The flower of English chivalry."

Though inly chafed at this delay, Lord Marmion bears it as he may. The Palmer, his mysterious guide, Beholding thus his place supplied,

Sought to take leave in vain; Strict was the Lion-King's command That none who rode in Marmion's band

Should sever from the train.
"England has here enow of spies
In Lady Heron's witching eyes:"
To Marchmount thus apart he said,
But fair pretext to Marmion made.
The right-hand path they now decline,
And trace against the stream the Tyne.

At length up that wild dale they wind, Where Crichtoun Castle crowns the bank;

For there the Lion's care assigned
A lodging meet for Marmion's rank.

That castle rises on the steep Of the green vale of Tyne; And far beneath, where slow they creep From pool to eddy, dark and deep, Where alders moist and willows weep,

You hear her streams repine.
The towers in different ages rose,
Their various architecture shows
The builders' various hands;

The builders' various hands; A mighty mass, that could oppose, When deadliest hatred fired its foes, The vengeful Douglas bands. Crichtoun! though now thy miry court But pens the lazy steer and sheep.

Thy turrets rude and tottered keep Have been the minstrel's loved resort. Oft have I traced, within thy fort,

Of mouldering shields the mystic sense,

Scutcheons of honor or pretence, Quartered in old armorial sort, Remains of rude magnificence. Nor wholly yet hath time defaced Thy lordly gallery fair, Nor yet the stony cord unbraced

Whose twisted knots, with roses laced,
Adorn thy ruined stair.
Still rises unimpaired below
The court-yard's graceful portico;
Above its cornice, row and row

The court-yard's graceful portico;
Above its cornice, row and row
Of fair-hewn facets richly show
Their pointed diamond form,

Though there but houseless cattle go,
To shield them from the storm.
And, shuddering, still may we explore,
Where oft whilom were captives pent,

The darkness of thy Massy More,
Or, from thy grass-grown battlement,
May trace in undulating line
The sluggish mazes of the Tyne.

Another aspect Crichtoun showed
As through its portal Marmion rode;
But yet't was melancholy state
Received him at the outer gate,
For none were in the castle then
But women, boys, or aged men.
With eyes scarce dried, the sorrowing
dame

To welcome noble Marmion came;
Her son, a stripling twelve years old,
Proffered the baron's rein to hold;
For each man that could draw a sword
Had marched that morning with their lord.

Earl Adam Hepburn,—he who died On Flodden by his sovereign's side. Long may his lady look in vain! She ne'er shall see his gallant train Come sweeping back through Crichtoun Dean.

'T was a brave race before the name Of hated Bothwell stained their fame.

And here two days did Marmion rest,
With every right that honor claims,
Attended as the king's own guest;—
Such the command of Royal James,
Who marshalled then his land's array,
Upon the Borough-moor that lay.
Perchance he would not foeman's eye

Upon his gathering host should pry, Till full prepared was every band To march against the English land. Here while they dwelt, did Lindesay's

Oft cheer the baron's moodier fit;
And, in his turn, he knew to prize
Lord Marmion's powerful mind and wise.—

Trained in the lore of Rome and Greece, And policies of war and peace.

It chanced, as fell the second night,
That on the battlements they walked,
And by the slowly fading light
Of varying topics talked:
And, unaware, the herald-bard
Said Marmion might his toil have spared
In travelling so far,
For that a messenger from heaven
In vain to James had counsel given

Against the English war; And, closer questioned, thus he told A tale which chronicles of old In Scottish story have enrolled:—

SIR DAVID LINDESAY'S TALE

"Of all the palaces so fair, Built for the royal dwelling In Scotland, far beyond compare Linlithgow is excelling; And in its park, in jovial June, How sweet the merry linnet's tune,

How blithe the blackbird's lay! The wild buck bells from ferny brake, The coot dives merry on the lake, The saddest heart might pleasure take

To see all nature gay.
But June is to our sovereign dear
The heaviest month in all the year;
Too well his cause of grief you know,
June saw his father's overthrow.
Woe to the traitors who could bring
The princely boy against his king!
Still in his conscience burns the sting.
In offices as strict as Lent
King James's June is ever spent.

"When last this ruthful month was come,

And in Linlithgow's holy dome
The king, as wont, was praying;
While for his royal father's soul
The chanters sung, the bells did toll,

The bishop mass was saying—
For now the year brought round again
The day the luckless king was slain—
In Catherine's aisle the monarch knelt,
With sackcloth shirt and iron belt,

And eyes with sorrow streaming;
Around him in their stalls of state
The Thistle's Knight-Companions sate,
Their banners o'er them beaming.
I too was there, and, sooth to tell,
Bedeafened with the jangling knell,

Was watching where the sunbeams fell, Through the stained casement gleaming;

But while I marked what next befell
It seemed as I were dreaming,
Stepped from the crowd a ghostly wight,
In azure gown, with cincture white;
His forehead bald, his head was bare,
Down hung at length his yellow hair.—
Now, mock me not when, good my lord,
I pledge to you my knightly word
That when I saw his placid grace,
His simple majesty of face,
His solemn bearing, and his pace
So stately gliding on,—
Seemed to me ne'er did limner paint

Seemed to me ne'er did limner paint So just an image of the saint Who propped the Virgin in her faint, The loved Apostle John!

"He stepped before the monarch's chair, And stood with rustic plainness there, And little reverence made; Nor head, nor body, bowed, nor bent, But on the desk his arm he leant, And words like these he said,

In a low voice,—but never tone
So thrilled through vein, and nerve, and bone:—

'My mother sent me from afar,
Sir King, to warn thee not to war,—
Woe waits on thine array:

Woe waits on thine array; If war thou wilt, of woman fair, Her witching wiles and wanton snare, James Stuart, doubly warned, beware:

God keep thee as He may!'—
The wondering monarch seemed to seek
For answer, and found none;
And when he raised his head to speak

And when he raised his head to speak,
The monitor was gone.
The marshal and myself had cast
To stop him as he outward passed;

But, lighter than the whirlwind's blast, He vanished from our eyes, Like sunbeam on the billow cast, That glances but, and dies."

While Lindesay told his marvel strange
The twilight was so pale,
He marked not Marmion's color change
While listening to the tale;
But, after a suspended pause,
The baron spoke: "Of Nature's laws

So strong I held the force, That never superhuman cause Could e'er control their course,

And, three days since, had judged your aim

Was but to make your guest your game;

But I have seen, since past the Tweed, What much has changed my sceptic creed.

And made me credit aught."—He stayed, And seemed to wish his words unsaid, But, by that strong emotion pressed Which prompts us to unload our breast

Even when discovery's pain, To Lindesay did at length unfold The tale his village host had told,

At Gifford, to his train.

Nought of the Palmer says he there.

And nought of Constance or of Clare;

The thoughts which broke his sleep he seems

To mention but as feverish dreams.

"In vain," said he, "to rest I spread My burning limbs and couched my head; Fantastic thoughts returned,

And, by their wild dominion led,
My heart within me burned.
So sore was the delirious goad,
I took my steed and forth I rode,
And, as the moon shone bright and
cold,

Soon reached the camp upon the wold. The southern entrance I passed through, And halted, and my bugle blew. Methought an answer met my ear,—Yet was the blast so low and drear, So hollow, and so faintly blown, It might be echo of my own.

"Thus judging, for a little space I listened ere I left the place,

But scarce could trust my eyes, Nor yet can think they serve me true, When sudden in the ring I view, In form distinct of shape and hue,

A mounted champion rise.—
I've fought, Lord-Lion, many a day,
In single fight and mixed affray,
And ever, I myself may say,

Have borne me as a knight;
But when this unexpected foe
Seemed starting from the gulf below,—
I care not though the truth I show,—

I trembled with affright;
And as I placed in rest my spear,
My hand so shook for very fear,
I scarce could couch it right.

"Why need my tongue the issue tell? We ran our course,—my charger fell;—What could he 'gainst the shock of hell?

I rolled upon the plain.

High o'er my head with threatening

The spectre shook his naked brand,—Yet did the worst remain:
My dazzled eyes I upward cast,—

My dazzled eyes I upward cast,—
Not opening hell itself could blast
Their sight like what I saw!
Full on his face the moonboom street

Full on his face the moonbeam strook!—
A face could never be mistook!
I knew the stern vindictive look,
And held my breath for awe.

I saw the face of one who, fled
To foreign climes, has long been dead,—
I well believe the last;

For ne'er from visor raised did stare A human warrior with a glare

So grimly and so ghast.
Thrice o'er my head he shook the blade;
But when to good Saint George I prayed,
—The first time e'er I asked his aid,—

He plunged it in the sheath,
And, on his courser mounting light,
He seemed to vanish from my sight:
The moonbeam drooped, and deepest
night

Sunk down upon the heath.—
'T were long to tell what cause I have
To know his face that met me there,
Called by his hatred from the grave

To cumber upper air; Dead or alive, good cause had he To be my mortal enemy."

Marvelled Sir David of the Mount; Then, learned in story, gan recount Such chance had happed of old, When once, near Norham, there did fight

A spectre fell of fiendish might,
In likeness of a Scottish knight,
With Brian Bulmer bold,
And trained him nigh to disallow
The aid of his baptismal vow,
"And such a phantom, too,' t is said,
With Highland broadsword, targe, and
plaid,

And fingers red with gore, Is seen in Rothiemurcus glade, Or where the sable pine-trees shade Dark Tomantoul, and Auchnaslaid, Dromouchty, or Glenmore.

And yet, what'er such legends say
Of warlike demon, ghost, or fay,
On mountain, moor, or plain,

Spotless in faith, in bosom bold,
True son of chivalry should hold
These midnight terrors vain;
For seldom have such spirits power
To harm, save in the evil hour
When guilt we meditate within
Or harbor unrepented sin."—
Lord Marmion turned him half aside,
And twice to clear his voice he tried,
Then pressed Sir David's hand,—

Then pressed Sir David's hand,— But nought, at length, in answer said; And here their further converse stayed,

Each ordering that his band Should bowne them with the rising day, To Scotland's camp to take their way,— Such was the king's command.

Early they took Dun-Edin's road,
And I could trace each step they trode;
Hill, brook, nor dell, nor rock, nor stone,
Lies on the path to me unknown.
Much might it boast of storied lore;
But, passing such digression o'er,
Suffice it that their route was laid
Across the furzy hills of Braid.
They passed the glen and scanty rill,
And climbed the opposing bank, until
They gained the top of Blackford Hill.

Blackford! on whose uncultured breast, Among the broom and thorn and whin, A truant-boy, I sought the nest, Or listed, as I lay at rest, While rese on broogs thin

While rose on breezes thin
The murmur of the city crowd,
And, from his steeple jangling loud,
Saint Giles's mingling din.
Now, from the summit to the plain,

Waves all the hill with yellow grain;
And o'er the landscape as I look,
Nought do I see unchanged remain,
Save the rude cliffs and chiming brook.

To me they make a heavy moan Of early friendships past and gone.

But different far the change has been, Since Marmion from the crown Of Blackford saw that martial scene Upon the bent so brown: Thousand pavilions, white as snow, Spread all the Bonnigh mean below.

Spread all the Borough-moor below,
Upland, and dale, and down.
A thousand did I say? I ween,
Thousands on thousands there were seen.

That checkered all the heath between
The streamlet and the town,
In crossing ranks extending far,
Forming a camp irregular;
Oft giving way where still there stood

Some relics of the old oak wood, That darkly huge did intervene And tamed the glaring white with green In these extended lines there lay A martial kingdom's vast array.

For from Hebudes, dark with rain,
To eastern Lodon's fertile plain,
And from the southern Redswire edge
To furthest Rosse's rocky ledge,
From west to east, from south to north,
Scotland sent all her warriors forth.
Marmion might hear the mingled hum
Of myriads up the mountain come,—
The horses' tramp and tinkling clank,
Where chiefs reviewed their vassal rank,
And charger's challing resists.

And charger's shrilling neigh,—
And see the shifting lines advance,
While frequent flashed from shield and lance

The sun's reflected ray.

Thin curling in the morning air,
The wreaths of failing smoke declare
To embers now the brands decayed,
Where the night-watch their fires had made.

They saw, slow rolling on the plain,
Full many a baggage-cart and wain,
And dire artillery's clumsy car,
By sluggish oxen tugged to war;
And there were Borthwick's Sisters
Seven.

And culverins which France had given. Ill-omened gift! the guns remain The conqueror's spoil on Flodden plain.

Nor marked they less where in the air A thousand streamers flaunted fair; Various in shape, device, and hue, Green, sanguine, purple, red, and blue,

Broad, narrow, swallow-tailed, and square,
Scroll, pennon, pencil, bandrol, there

O'er the pavilions flew. Highest and midmost, was descried The royal banner floating wide;

The staff, a pine-tree, strong and straight,

Pitched deeply in a massive stone, Which still in memory is shown, Yet bent beneath the standard's weight, Whene'er the western wind unrolled With toil the huge and cumbrous fold.

And gave to view the dazzling field, Where in proud Scotland's royal shield The ruddy lion ramped in gold, Lord Marmion viewed the landscape

He viewed it with a chief's delight, Until within him burned his heart, And lightning from his eye did part, As on the battle-day;

Such glance did falcon never dart When stooping on his prey. "Oh! well, Lord-Lion, hast thou said,

Thy king from warfare to dissuade

Were but a vain essay;

For, by Saint George, were that host

Not power infernal nor divine Should once to peace my soul incline, Till I had dimmed their armor's shine In glorious battle-fray!"

Answered the bard, of milder mood: 'Fair is the sight,—and yet 'twere

That kings would think withal, When peace and wealth their land has blessed,

"T is better to sit still at rest Than rise, perchance to fall."

Still on the spot Lord Marmion stayed, For fairer scene he ne'er surveyed. When sated with the martial show That peopled all the plain below; The wandering eye could o'er it go, And mark the distant city glow

With gloomy splendor red; For on the smoke-wreaths, huge and slow.

That round her sable turrets flow, The morning beams were shed, And tinged them with a lustre proud, Like that which streaks a thundercloud.

Such dusky grandeur clothed the height Where the huge castle holds its state, And all the steep slope down,

Whose ridgy back heaves to the sky, Piled deep and massy, close and high. Mine own romantic town!

But northward far, with purer blaze, On Ochil mountains fell the rays, And as each heathy top they kissed, It gleamed a purple amethyst. Yonder the shores of Fife you saw, Here Preston-Bay and Berwick-law;

And, broad between them rolled, The gallant Firth the eye might note, Whose islands on its bosom float,

Like emeralds chased in gold. Fitz-Eustace' heart felt closely pent; As if to give his rapture vent, The spur he to his charger lent,

And raised his bridle hand. And making demi-volt in air,

Cried, "Where's the coward that would not dare

To fight for such a land!" The Lindesay smiled his joy to see, Nor Marmion's frown repressed his glee

Thus while they looked, a flourish proud. Where mingled trump, and clarion loud,

And fife, and kettle-drum, And sackbut deep, and psaltery, And war-pipe with discordant cry, And cymbal clattering to the sky, Making wild music bold and high, Did up the mountain come;

The whilst the bells with distant chime Merrily tolled the hour of prime,

And thus the Lindesay spoke: "Thus clamor still the war-notes when The king to mass his way has ta'en, Or to Saint Catherine's of Sienne, Or Chapel of Saint Rocque.

To you they speak of martial fame, But me remind of peaceful game, When blither was their cheer,

Thrilling in Falkland-woods the air, In signal none his steed should spare. But strive which foremost might repair

To the downfall of the deer.

"Nor less," he said, "when looking forth I view you Empress of the North Sit on her hilly throne, Her palace's imperial bowers,

Her castle, proof to hostile powers.

Her stately halls and holy towers—
Nor less," he said, "I moan
To think what woe mischance may bring,

And how these merry bells may ring The death-dirge of our gallant king,

Or with their larum call The burghers forth to watch and ward, 'Gainst Southern sack and fires to guard Dun-Edin's leaguered wall.— But not for my presaging thought,

Dream conquest sure or cheaply bought! Lord Marmion, I say nay

God is the guider of the field, He breaks the champion's spear and shield:

But thou thyself shalt say, When joins you host in deadly stowre, That England's dames must weep in

Her monks the death-mass sing;

For never saw'st thou such a power

Led on by such a king."

And now, down winding to the plain, The barriers of the camp they gain,

And there they made a stay. There stays the Minstrel till he fling His hand o'er every Border string, And fit his harp the pomp to sing Of Scotland's ancient court and king, In the succeeding lav.

CANTO FIFTH

THE COURT

THE train has left the hills of Braid: The barrier guard have open made-So Lindesay bade—the palisade

That closed the tented ground; Their men the warders backward drew, And carried pikes as they rode through

Into its ample bound.

Fast ran the Scottish warriors there. Upon the Southern band to stare, And envy with their wonder rose, To see such well-appointed foes; Such length of shafts, such mighty bows.

So huge, that many simply thought But for a vaunt such weapons wrought, And little deemed their force to feel Through links of mail and plates of steel When, rattling upon Flodden vale, The cloth-yard arrows flew like hail.

Nor less did Marmion's skilful view Glance every line and squadron through, And much he marvelled one small land Could marshal forth such various band;

For men-at-arms were here, Heavily sheathed in mail and plate, Like iron towers for strength and weight On Flemish steeds of bone and height,

With battle-axe and spear. Young knights and squires, a lighter train,

Practised their charges on the plain, By aid of leg, of hand, and rein,

Each warlike feat to show. To pass, to wheel, the croupe to gain, And high curvet, that not in vain The sword-sway might descend amain

On foeman's casque below He saw the hardy burghers there March armed on foot with faces bare, For visor they wore none,

Nor waving plume, nor crest of knight; burnished were their corselets But bright,

Their brigantines and gorgets light

Like very silver shone. Long pikes they had for standing fight, Two-handed swords they wore. And many wielded mace of weight, And bucklers bright they bore.

On foot the yeoman too, but dressed In his steel-jack, a swarthy vest. With iron quilted well;

Each at his back—a slender store— His forty days' provision bore, As feudal statutes tell.

His arms were halbert, axe, or spear, A crossbow there, a hagbut here,

A dagger-knife, and brand. Sober he seemed and sad of cheer, As loath to leave his cottage dear And march to foreign strand,

Or musing who would guide his steer To till the fallow land.

Yet deem not in his thoughtful eye Did aught of dastard terror lie; More dreadful far his ire

Than theirs who, scorning danger's name In eager mood to battle came. Their valor like light straw on flame,

A fierce but fading fire.

Not so the Borderer:-bred to war, He knew the battle's din afar, And joyed to hear it swell.

His peaceful day was slothful ease; Nor harp nor pipe his ear could please Like the loud slogan yell.

On active steed, with lance and blade, The light-armed pricker plied his trade,— Let nobles fight for fame;

Let vassals follow where they lead, Burghers, to guard their townships. bleed.

But war's the Borderers' game. Their gain, their glory, their delight, To sleep the day, maraud the night,

O'er mountain, moss and moor; Joyful to fight they took their way, Scarce caring who might win the day, Their booty was secure.

These, as Lord Marmion's train passed

Looked on at first with careless eye, Nor marvelled aught, well taught to

The form and force of English bow. But when they saw the lord arrayed In splendid arms and rich brocade, Each Borderer to his kinsman said,—

'Hist, Ringan! seest thou there! Canst guess which road they'll homeward ride?

Oh! could we but on Border side, By Eusedale glen, or Liddell's tide,

Beset a prize so fair!
That fangless Lion, too, their guide,
Might chance to lose his glistering hide;
Brown Maudlin of that doublet pied
Could make a kirtle rare."

Next, Marmion marked the Celtic race, Of different language, form, and face,

A various race of man; Just then the chiefs their tribes arrayed, And wild and garish semblance made The checkered trews and belted plaid. And varying notes the war-pipes brayed

To every varying clan.
Wild through their red or sable hair
Looked out their eyes with savage stare

On Marmion as he passed; Their legs above the knee were bare; Their frame was sinewy, short, and spare,

And hardened to the blast;
Of taller race, the chiefs they own
Were by the eagle's plumage known.
The hunted red-deer's undressed hide
Their hairy buskins well supplied;
The graceful bonnet decked their head;
Back from their shoulders hung the
plaid;

A broadsword of unwieldy length,
A dagger proved for edge and strength,
A studded targe they wore,

And quivers, bows, and shafts,—but, oh!

Short was the shaft and weak the bow
To that which England bore.
The Isles-men carried at their backs
The ancient Danish battle-axe.
They raised a wild and wondering cry,
As with his guide rode Marmion by,
Loud were their clamoring tongues, as when

The clanging sea-fowl leave the fen And, with their cries discordant mixed, Grumbled and yelled the pipes betwixt.

Thus through the Scottish camp they passed,

And reached the city gate at last, Where all around, a wakeful guard, Armed burghers kept their watch and ward.

Well had they cause of jealous fear,
When lay encamped in field so near
The Borderer and the Mountaineer.
As through the bustling streets they go,
All was alive with martial show;
At every turn with dinning clang

The armorer's anvil clashed and rang,
Or toiled the swarthy smith to wheel
The bar that arms the charger's heel,
Or axe or falchion to the side
Of jarring grindstone was applied,
Page, groom, and squire, with hurrying
pace,

Through street and lane and marketplace,

Bore lance or casque or sword;
While burghers, with important face,
Described each new-come lord.
Discussed his lineage, told his name,
His following, and his warlike fame.
The Lion led to lodging meet,
Which high o'erlooked the crowded street;

There must the baron rest
Till past the hour of vesper tide,
And then to Holy-Rood must ride,—

Such was the king's behest. Meanwhile the Lion's care assigns A banquet rich and costly wines

To Marmion and his train;
And when the appointed hour succeeds,
The baron dons his peaceful weeds,
And following Lindesay as he leads.
The palace halls they gain.

Old Holy-Rood rung merrily
That night with wassail, mirth, and glee:

King James within her princely bower Feasted the chiefs of Scotland's power, Summoned to spend the parting hour; For he had charged that his array Should southward march by break of day.

Well loved that splendid monarch aye
The banquet and the song,
By day the tourney, and by night
The merry dance, traced fast and light,
The maskers quaint, the pageant bright,

The revel loud and long.
This feast outshone his banquets past;
It was his blithest—and his last.
The dazzling lamps from gallery gay
Cast on the court a dancing ray;
Here to the harp did minstrels sing,
There ladies touched a softer string;
With long-eared cap and motley vest,
The licensed fool retailed his jest;
His magic tricks the juggler plied;
At dice and draughts the gallants vied:
While some, in close recess apart,
Courted the ladies of their heart,

Nor courted them in vain; For often in the parting hour Victorious Love asserts his power O'er coldness and disdain;
And flinty is her heart can view
To battle march a lover true-Can hear, perchance, his last adieu,
Nor own her share of pain.

Through this mixed crowd of glee and game

The king to great Lord Marmion came, While, reverent, all made room.

An easy task it was, I trow,
King James's manly form to know,
Although, his courtesy to show,
He doffed to Marmion bending low
His broidered cap and plume.

For royal were his garb and mien:
His cloak of crimson velvet piled,
Trimmed with the fur of marten wild,
His vest of changeful satin sheen,

The dazzled eye beguiled;
His gorgeous collar hung adown,
Wrought with the badge of Scotland's
crown,

The thistle brave of old renown;
His trusty blade, Toledo right,
Descended from a baldric bright;
White were his buskins, on the heel
His spurs inlaid of gold and steel;
His bonnet, all of crimson fair,
Was buttoned with a ruby rare:
And Marmion deemed he ne'er had seen
A prince of such a noble mien.

The monarch's form was middle size, For feat of strength or exercise

Shaped in proportion fair;
And hazel was his eagle eye,
And auburn of the darkest dye
His short curled beard and hair.
Light was his footstep in the dance,

And firm his stirrup in the lists; And, oh! he had that merry glance

That seldom lady's heart resists.
Lightly from fair to fair he flew,
And loved to plead, lament and sue,—
Suit lightly won and short-lived pain,
For monarchs seldom sigh in vain.

I said he joyed in banquet bower; But, mid his mirth, 't was often strange How suddenly his cheer would change,

His look o'ercast and lower,
If in a sudden turn he felt
The pressure of his iron belt,
That bound his breast in penance pain,
In memory of his father slain.
Even so 't was strange how evermore,
Soon as the passing pang was o'er,
Forward he rushed with double glee
Into the stream of revelry.

Thus dim-seen object of affright Startles the courser in his flight, And half he halts, half springs aside, But feels the quickening spur applied, And, straining on the tightened rein, Scours doubly swift o'er hill and plain.

O'er James's heart, the courtiers say, Sir Hugh the Heron's wife held sway; To Scotland's court she came, To be a hostage for her lord,

Who Cessford's gallant heart had gored, And with the king to make accord

Had sent his lovely dame.

Nor to that lady free alone

Did the gay king allegiance own;

For the fair Queen of France Sent him a turquoise ring and glove, And charged him, as her knight and love, For her to break a lance

For her to break a lance,
And strike three strokes with Scottish brand.

And march three miles on Southron land And bid the banners of his band

In English breezes dance.
And thus for France's queen he drest
His manly limbs in mailed vest,
And thus admitted English fair
His inmost councils still to share,
And thus for both he madly planned
The ruin of himself and land!

And yet, the sooth to tell,
Nor England's fair nor France's queen
Were worth one pearl-drop, bright and sheen,

From Margaret's eyes that fell,— His own Queen Margaret, who in Lithgow's bower All lonely sat and wept the weary hour.

The queen sits lone in Lithgow pile,
And weeps the weary day
The war against her native soil,
Her monarch's risk in battle broil,—
And in gay Holy-Rood the while Dame Heron rises with a smile
Upon the harp to play.

Fair was her rounded arm, as o'er
The strings her fingers flew;
And as she touched and tuned them all,

Ever her bosom's rise and fall
Was plainer given to view;
For, all for heat, was laid aside
Her wimple, and her hood untied.
And first she pitched her voice to sing,
Then glanced her dark eye on the king.
And then around the silent ring,
And laughed, and blushed, and oft did

say

Her pretty oath, by yea and nay, She could not, would not, durst not play! At length, upon the harp, with glee, Mingled with arch simplicity, A soft yet lively air she rung, While thus the wily lady sung:—

LOCHINVAR

LADY HERON'S SONG

Oh! young Lochinvar is come out of the west,

Through all the wide Border his steed was the best;

And save his good broadsword he weapons had none.

He rode all unarmed and he rode all alone.

So faithful in love and so dauntless in war,

There never was knight like the young Lochinvar.

He stayed not for brake and he stopped not for stone,

He swam the Eske river where ford there was none,

But ere he alighted at Netherby gate
The bride had consented, the gallant came late:

For a laggard in love and a dastard in war

Was to wed the fair Ellen of brave Lochinvar.

So boldly he entered the Netherby Hall, Among bridesmen, and kinsmen, and brothers, and all:

Then spoke the bride's father, his hand on his sword.—

For the poor craven bridegroom said never a word,—

'Oh! come ye in peace here, or come ye in war,

Or to dance at our bridal, young Lord Lochinvar?'—

'I long wooed your daughter, my suit you denied;

Love swells like the Solway, but ebbs like its tide—

And now am I come, with this lost love of mine,

To lead but one measure, drink one cup of wine.

There are maidens in Scotland more lovely by far,

That would gladly be bride to the young Lochinvar.'

The bride kissed the goblet; the knight took it up,

He quaffed off the wine, and he threw down the cup.

She looked down to blush, and she looked up to sigh,

With a smile on her lips and a tear in her eye.

He took her soft hand ere her mother could bar,—

'Now tread we a measure!' said young Lochinvar.

So stately his form, and so lovely her face,

That never a hall such a galliard did grace;

While her mother did fret, and her father did fume,

And the bridegroom stood dangling his bonnet and plume;

And the bride-maidens whispered "Twere better by far

To have matched our fair cousin with young Lochinvar.'

One touch to her hand and one word in her ear,

When they reached the hall-door, and the charger stood near;

So light to the croupe the fair lady he swung,

So light to the saddle before her he sprung!

'She is won! we are gone, over bank, bush, and scaur;

They'll have fleet steeds that follow,' quoth young Lochinvar.

There was mounting 'mong Græmes of the Netherby clan;

Forsters, Fenwicks, and Musgraves, they rode and they ran:

There was racing and chasing on Cannobie Lee, But the lost bride of Netherby ne'er did they see.

So daring in love and so dauntless in war,

Have ye e'er heard of gallant like young Lochinvar?

The monarch o'er the siren hung, And beat the measure as she sung; And, pressing closer and more near, He whispered praises in her ear. In loud applause the courtiers vied, And ladies winked and spoke aside.

The witching dame to Marmion threw

A glance, where seemed to reign The pride that claims applauses due, And of her royal conquest too

A real or feigned disdain: Familiar was the look, and told Marmion and she were friends of old. The king observed their meeting eyes With something like displeased surprise ;

For monarchs ill can rivals brook. Even in a word, or smile, or, look. Straight took he forth the parchment broad

Which Marmion's high commission showed:

"Our Borders sacked by many a raid, Our peaceful liege-men robbed," he said, "On day of truce our warden slain, Stout Barton killed, his vessels ta'en-Unworthy were we here to reign, Should these for vengeance cry in vain; Our full defiance, hate, and scorn, Our herald has to Henry borne."

He paused, and led where Douglas stood And with stern eye the pageant viewed; I mean that Douglas, sixth of yore, Who coronet of Angus bore, And, when his blood and heart were

Did the third James in camp defy, And all his minions led to die

On Lauder's dreary flat. Princess and favorites long grew tame, And trembled at the homely name

Of Archibald Bell-the-Cat; The same who left the dusky vale Of Hermitage in Liddisdale,

Its dungeons and its towers, Where Bothwell's turrets brave the air, And Bothwell bank is blooming fair,

To fix his princely bowers. Though now in age he had laid down His armor for the peaceful gown, And for a staff his brand,

Yet often would flash forth the fire That could in youth a monarch's ire And minion's pride withstand;

And even that day at council board, Unapt to scothe his sovereign's mood, Against the war had Angus stood,

And chafed his royal lord.

His giant-form, like ruined tower, Though fallen its muscles' brawny vaunt, Huge-boned, and tall, and grim, and gaunt,

Seemed o'er the gaudy scene to lower; His locks and beard in silver grew, His evebrows kept their sable hue.

Near Douglas when the monarch stood. His bitter speech he thus pursued: "Lord Marmion, since these letters say That in the North you needs must stay

While slightest hopes of peace remain, Uncourteous speech it were and stern To say—Return to Lindisfarne,

Until my herald come again. Then rest you in Tantallon hold; Your host shall be the Douglas bold,--A chief unlike his sires of old. He wears their motto on his blade, Their blazon o'er his towers displayed. Yet loves his sovereign to oppose More than to face his country's foes.

And, I bethink me, by Saint Stephen. But e'en this morn to me was given A prize, the first fruits of the war, Ta'en by a galley from Dunbar,

A bevy of the maids of heaven. Under your guard these holy maids Shall safe return to cloister shades. And, while they at Tantallon stay, Requiem for Cochran's soul may say." And with the slaughtered favorite's name

Across the monarch's brow there came A cloud of ire, remorse, and shame.

In answer nought could Angus speak. His proud heart swelled well-nigh to break:

He turned aside, and down his cheek A burning tear there stole. His hand the monarch sudden took, That sight his kind heart could not brook: "Now, by the Bruce's soul, Angus, my hasty speech forgive! For sure as doth his spirit live, As he said of the Douglas old, I well may say of you,-

That never king did subject hold, In speech more free, in war more bold More tender and more true;

Forgive me, Douglas, once again."— And, while the king his hand did strain The old man's tears fell down like rain To seize the moment Marmion tried, And whispered to the king aside: "Oh! let such tears unwonted plead For respite short from dubious deed! A child will weep a bramble's smart, A maid to see her sparrow part, A stripling for a woman's heart; But woe awaits a country when She sees the tears of bearded men. Then, oh! what omen, dark and high, When Douglas wets his manly eye!"

Displeased was James that stranger viewed

And tampered with his changing mood.
"Laugh those that can, weep those that may,"

Thus did the fiery monarch say, "Southward I march by break of day; And if within Tantallon strong The good Lord Marmion tarries long. Perchance our meeting next may fall At Tamworth in his castle-hall."-The haughty Marmion felt the taunt, And answered grave the royal vaunt: "Much honored were my humble home, If in its halls King James should come; But Nottingham has archers good, And Yorkshire men are stern of mood, Northumbrian prickers wild and rude. On Derby Hills the paths are steep, In Ouse and Tyne the fords are deep; And many a banner will be torn, And many a knight to earth be borne, And many a sheaf of arrows spent, Ere Scotland's king shall cross the Trent: Yet pause, brave prince, while yet you may!"-

The monarch lightly turned away,
And to his nobles loud did call,
"Lords, to the dance,—a hall! a hall!"
Himself his cloak and sword flung by,
And led Dame Heron gallantly;
And minstrels, at the royal order,
Rung out 'Blue Bonnets o'er the Border.'

Leave we these revels now to tell What to Saint Hilda's maids befell, Whose galley, as they sailed again To Whitby, by a Scot was ta'en. Now at Dun-Edin did they bide Till James should of their fate decide,

And soon by his command
Were gently summoned to prepare
To journey under Marmion's care,
As escort honored, safe, and fair,
Again to English land.

The abbess told her chaplet o'er,
Nor knew which Saint she should implore;

For, when she thought of Constance, sore
She feared Lord Marmion's mood.
And judge what Clara must have felt!
The sword that hung in Marmion's belt
Had drunk De Wilton's blood.

Had drunk De Wilton's blood. Unwittingly King James had given, As guard to Whitby's shades, The man most dreaded under heaven

By these defenceless maids; Yet what petition could avail, Or who would listen to the tale Of woman, prisoner, and nun, Mid bustle of a war begun? They deemed it hopeless to avoid The convoy of their dangerous guide.

Their lodging, so the king assigned, To Marmion's as their guardian, joined; And thus it fell that, passing nigh, The Palmer caught the abbess' eye,

Who warned him by a scroll She had a secret to reveal That much concerned the Church's weal

And health of sinner's soul;
And, with deep charge of secrecy,
She named a place to meet.

She named a place to meet Within an open balcony,

That hung from dizzy pitch and high Above the stately street, To which, as common to each home, At night they might in secret come.

At night in secret there they came, The Palmer and the holy dame. The moon among the clouds rode high, And all the city hum was by. Upon the street, where late before Did din of war and warriors roar,

You might have heard a pebble fall, A beetle hum, a cricket sing, An owlet flap his boding wing On Giles's steeple tall.

The antique buildings, climbing high,
Whose Gothic frontlets sought the sky,
Were here wrapt deep in shade;

There on their brows the moonbeam broke

Through the faint wreaths of silvery smoke,

And on the casements played.
And other light was none to see,
Save torches gliding far,
Before some chieftain of degree
Who left the royal revelry
To bowne him for the war.—
A solemn scene the abbess chose.
A solemn hour, her secret to disclose.

"O holy Palmer!" she began,—
"For sure he must be sainted man.
Whose blessed feet have trod the ground
Where the Redeemer's tomb is found,—
For his dear Church's sake, my tale
Attend, nor deem of light avail,
Though I must speak of worldly love,—
How vain to those who wed above!—
De Wilton and Lord Marmion wooed
Clara de Clare, of Gloster's blood;—
Idle it were of Whitby's dame
To say of that same blood I came;—

And once, when jealous rage was high, Lord Marmion said despiteously, Wilton was traitor in his heart, And had made league with Martin Swart

When he came here on Simnel's part,
And only cowardice did restrain
His rebel aid on Stokefield's plain,—
And down he threw his glove. The thing

Was tried, as wont, before the king; Where frankly did De Wilton own That Swart in Guelders he had known, And that between them there went.

Some scroll of courteous compliment.
For this he to his castle sent;
But when his messenger returned,
Judge how De Wilton's fury burned!
For in his packet there were laid
Letters that claimed disloyal aid
And proved King Henry's cause betrayed.

His fame, thus blighted, in the field He strove to clear by spear and shield;-

To clear his fame in vain he strove,
For wondrous are His ways above!
Perchance some form was unobserved,
Perchance in prayer or faith he swerved,

Else how could guiltless champion quail, Or how the blessed ordeal fail?

"His squire, who now De Wilton saw As recreant doomed to suffer law, Repentant, owned in vain

That while he had the scrolls in care
A stranger maiden, passing fair,
Had drenched him with a beverage

rare

His words no faith could gain.
With Clare alone he credence won,
Who, rather than wed Marmion,
Did to Saint Hilda's shrine repair,
To give our house her livings fair
And die a vestal votaress there.
The impulse from the earth was given,
But bent her to the paths of heaven.
A purer heart, a lovelier maid,
Ne'er sheltered her in Whitby's shade,
No, not since Saxon Edelfled;
Only one trace of earthly stain,
That for her lover's loss

She cherishes a sorrow vain,
And murmurs at the cross.—
And then her heritage:—it goes
Along the banks of Tame;

Deep fields of grain the reaper mows,

In meadows rich the heifer lows, The falconer and huntsman knows

Its woodlands for the game.
Shame were it to Saint Hilda dear,
And I, her humble votaress here,
Should do a deadly sin,

Her temple spoiled before mine eyes, If this false Marmion such a prize

By my consent should win; Yet hath our boisterous monarch sworn That Clare shall from our house be torn, And grievous cause have I to fear Such mandate doth Lord Marmion bear.

"Now, prisoner, helpless, and betrayed To evil power, I claim thine aid,

By every step that thou hast trod To holy shrine and grotto dim, By every martyr's tortured limb, By angel, saint, and seraphim, And by the Church of God!

For mark: when Wilton was betrayed, And with his squire forged letters laid, She was, alas! that sinful maid

By whom the deed was done,—
Oh! shame and horror to be said!
She was—a perjured nun!
No clerk in all the land like her
Traced quaint and varying character.
Perchance you may a marvel deem,

That Marmion's paramour—
For such vile thing she was—should scheme

Her lover's nuptial hour;
But o'er him thus she hoped to gain,
As privy to his honor's stain,
Illimitable power.

For this she secretly retained
Each proof that might the plot reveal,
Instructions with his hand and seal;

And thus Saint Hilda deigned, Through sinners' perfidy impure, Her house's glory to secure And Clare's immortal weal.

"T were long and needless here to tell How to my hand these papers fell; With me they must not stay.

Saint Hilda keep her abbess true!
Who knows what outrage he might de

While journeying by the way?—
O blessed Saint, if e'er again
I venturous leave thy calm domain,
To travel or by land or main,

Now, saintly Palmer, mark my prayer: I give this packet to thy care,
For thee to stop they will not dare;

Deep penance may I pay!—

And oh! with cautious speed

To Wolsey's hand the papers bring,
That he may show them to the king:
And for thy well-earned meed,
Thou holy man, at Whitby's shrine
A weekly mass shall still be thine
While priest can sing and read.—
What ail'st thou?—Speak!"—For as he

The charge a strong emotion shook His frame, and ere reply They heard a faint yet shrilly tone,

Like distant clarion feebly blown,
That on the breeze did die;

And loud the abbess shrieked in fear, "Saint Withold, save us!—What is here; Look at you City Cross!

See on its battled tower appear Phantoms, that scutcheons seem to rear And blazoned banners toss!"—

Dun-Edin's Cross, a pillared stone, Rose on a turret octagon;— But now is razed that monument, Whence royal edict rang, And voice of Scotland's law was sent

In glorious trumpet-clang.

Oh! be his tomb as lead to lead
Upon its dull destroyers head!—
A minstrel's malison is said.—
Then on its battlements they saw
A vision, passing Nature's law,

Strange, wild, and dimly seen; Figures that seemed to rise and die, Gibber and sign, advance and fly, While nought confirmed could ear or eye

Discern of sound or mien.
Yet darkly did it seem as there
Heralds and pursuivants prepare,
With trumpet sound and blazon fair,

A summons to proclaim;
But indistinct the pageant proud,
As fancy forms of midnight cloud
When flings the moon upon her shroud

A wavering tinge of flame; It flits, expands, and shifts, till loud, From midmost of the spectre crowd, This awful summons came:—

"Prince, prelate, potentate, and peer, Whose names I now shall call, Scottish or foreigner, give ear! Subjects of him who sent me here, At his tribunal to appear

I summon one and all:
I cite you by each deadly sin
That e'er hath soiled your hearts within;
I cite you by each brutal lust
That e'er defiled your earthly dust,—

By wrath, by pride, by fear,

By each o'ermastering passion's tone, By the dark grave and dying groan! When forty days are passed and gone, I cite you, at your monarch's throne

To answer and appear."—
Then thundered forth a roll of names:—
The first was thine, unhappy James!

Then all thy nobles came; Crawford, Glencairn, Montrose, Argyle, Ross, Bothwell, Forbes, Lennox, Lyle,— Why should I tell their separate style? Each chief of birth and fame,

Of Lowland, Highland, Border, Isle, Foredoomed to Flodden's carnage pile,

Was cited there by name:
And Marmion, Lord of Fontenaye,
Of Lutterward, and Scrivelbaye;
De Wilton, erst of Aberley,
The self-same thundering voice did sav.—

But then another spoke:
"Thy fatal summons I deny
And thine infernal lord defy,
Appealing me to Him on high,
Who burst the sinner's yoke."

Who burst the sinner's yoke."
At that dread accent, with a scream,
Parted the pageant like a dream,

The summoner was gone.
Prone on her face the abbess fell.
And fast, and fast, her beads did tell;
Her nuns came, startled by the yell,

And found her there alone. She marked not, at the scene aghast, What time or how the Palmer passed.

Shift we the scene.—The camp doth move;

Dun-Edin's streets are empty now, Save when, for weal of those they love, To pray the prayer and vow the vow, The tottering child, the anxious fair, The gray-haired sire, with pious care, To chapels and to shrines repair.—
Where is the Palmer now? and where The abbess, Marmion, and Clare?—
Bold Douglas! to Tantallon fair

They journey in thy charge: Lord Marmion rode on his right hand, The Palmer still was with the band; Angus, like Lindesay, did command

That none should roam at large. But in that Palmer's altered mien A wondrous change might now be seen;

Freely he spoke of war, Of marvels wrought by single hand When lifted for a native land, And still looked high, as if he planned

Some desperate deed afar. His courser would he feed and stroke, And, tucking up his sable frock, Would first his mettle bold provoke, Then soothe or quell his pride. Old Hubert said that never one He saw, except Lord Marmion, A steed so fairly ride.

Some half-hour's march behind there

A troop escorting Hilda's dame,
With all her nuns and Clare.
No audience had Lord Marmion sought;
Ever he feared to aggravate
Clara de Clare's suspicious hate;

And safer 't was, he thought,

To wait till, from the nuns removed, The influence of kinsmen loved, And suit by Henry's self approved, Her slow consent had wrought. His was no flickering flame, that dies Unless when fanned by looks and sighs And lighted oft at lady's eyes; He longed to stretch his wide command O'er luckless Clara's ample land: Besides, when Wilton with him vied, Although the pang of humbled pride

The place of jealousy supplied,
Yet conquest, by that meanness won
He almost loathed to think upon,
Led him, at times, to hate the cause
Which made him burst through honor's laws.

If e'er he loved, 'twas her alone Who died within that vault of stone.

And now, when close at hand they saw North Berwick's town and lofty Law, Fitz-Eustace bade them pause awhile Before a venerable pile

Whose turrets viewed afar The lofty Bass, the Lambie Isle,

The ocean's peace or war.

At tolling of a bell, forth came
The convent's venerable dame,
And prayed Saint Hilda's abbess rest
With her, a loved and honored guest,
Till Douglas should a bark prepare
To waft her back to Whitby fair.
Glad was the abbess, you may guess,
And thanked the Scottish prioress;
And tedious were to tell, I ween,
The courteous speech that passed between.

O'erjoyed the nuns their palfreys leave;

But when fair Clara did intend, Like them, from horseback to descend, Fitz-Eustace said: "I grieve, Fair lady, grieve e'en from my heart, Such gentle company to part;—

Think not discourtesy,

But lords' commands must be obeyed, And Marmion and the Douglas said

That you must wend with me. Lord Marmion hath a letter broad, Which to the Scottish earl he showed, Commanding that beneath his care Without delay you shall repair To your good kinsman, Lord Fitz-Clare."

The startled abbess loud exclaimed; But she at whom the blow was aimed Grew pale as death and cold as lead,— She deemed she heard her death-doom

"Cheer thee, my child!" the abbess said,
"They dare not tear thee from my hand,
To ride alone with armed band."—
"Nay holy mother, nay."

"Nay, holy mother, nay,"
Fitz Eustace said, "the lovely Clare
Will be in Lady Angus' care,
In Scotland while we stay;

In Scotland while we stay;
And when we move an easy ride
Will bring us to the English side,
Female attendance to provide
Refitting Gloster's heir:

Befitting Gloster's heir;
Nor thinks nor dreams my noble lord,
By slightest look, or act, or word,
To be read Lody Clore.

To harass Lady Clare. Her faithful guardian he will be, Nor sue for slightest courtesy That e'en to stranger falls, Till he shall place her safe and free Within her kinsman's halls." He spoke, and blushed with earnest

grace;
His faith was painted on his face,
And Clare's worst fear relieved,
The Lady Abbess loud exclaimed
On Henry, and the Douglas blamed,

Entreated, threatened, grieved,
To martyr, saint, and prophet prayed,
Against Lord Marmion inveighed,
And called the prioress to aid,
To curse with candle, bell, and book.
Her head the grave Cistertian shook:
"The Douglas and the king," she said,
"In their commands will be obeyed;
Grieve not, nor dream that harm can

The maiden in Tantallon Hall."

The abbess, seeing strife was vain, Assumed her wonted state again,— For much of state she had,— Composed her veil, and raised her head, And "Bid," in solemn voice she said,

"Thy master, bold and bad, The records of his house turn o'er, And, when he shall there written see That one of his own ancestry Drove the monks forth of Coventry, Bid him his fate explore!

Prancing in pride of earthly trust, His charger hurled him to the dust. And, by a base plebeian thrust,

He died his band before.

God judge 'twixt Marmion and me: He is a chief of high degree,

And I a poor recluse,

Yet oft in holy writ we see Even such weak minister as me May the oppressor bruise:

For thus, inspired, did Judith slay The mighty in his sin,

And Jael thus, and Deborah "-Here hasty Blount broke in: "Fitz-Eustace, we must march our band; Saint Anton fire thee! wilt thou stand

All day, with bonnet in thy hand, To hear the lady preach?
By this good light! if thus we stay, Lord Marmion for our fond delay

Will sharper sermon teach. Come, don thy cap and mount thy horse; The dame must patience take perforce."

"Submit we then to force," said Clare, "But let this barbarous lord despair

His purposed aim to win; Let him take living, land, and life, But to be Marmion's wedded wife In me were deadly sin: And if it be the king's decree That I must find no sanctuary In that inviolable dome

Where even a homicide might come And safely rest his head,

Though at its open portals stood, Thirsting to pour forth blood for blood, The kinsmen of the dead,

Yet one asylum is my own Against the dreaded hour,-A low, a silent, and a lone,

Where kings have little power. One victim is before me there.-Mother, your blessing, and in prayer Remember your unhappy Clare!" Loud weeps the abbess, and bestows Kind blessings many a one;

Weeping and wailing loud arose,

Round patient Clare, the clamorous woes Of every simple nun.

His eyes the gentle Eustace dried, And scarce rude Blount the sight could bide.

Then took the squire her rein, And gently led away her steed, And by each courteous word and deed To cheer her strove in vain.

But scant three miles the band had rode. When o'er a height they passed,

And, sudden, close before them showed His towers Tantallon vast,

Broad, massive, high, and stretching far. And held impregnable in war. On a projecting rock they rose, And round three sides the ocean flows. The fourth did battled walls enclose

And double mound and fosse. By narrow drawbridge, outworks strong, Through studded gates, an entrance long,

To the main court they cross. It was a wide and stately square; Around were lodgings fit and fair,

And towers of various form. Which on the court projected far And broke its lines quadrangular. Here was square keep, there turret high, Or pinnacle that sought the sky. Whence oft the warder could descry The gathering ocean-storm.

Here did they rest.—The princely care Of Douglas why should I declare, Or say they met reception fair ?

Or why the tidings say, Which varying to Tantallon came, By hurrying posts or fleeter fame, With every varying day?

And, first, they heard King James had

Etall, and Wark, and Ford; and then, That Norham Castle strong was ta'en. At that sore marvelled Marmion, And Douglas hoped his monarch's hand Would soon subdue Northumberland:

But whispered news there came, That while his host inactive lay, And melted by degrees away, King James was dallying off the day

With Heron's wily dame. Such acts to chronicles I yield; Go seek them there and see: Mine is a tale of Flodden Field,

And not a history.-At length they heard the Scottish host On that high ridge had made their post

Which frowns o'er Millfield Plain; And that brave Surrey many a band Had gathered in the Southern land, And marched into Northun.berland, And camp at Wooler ta'en.

Marmion, like charger in the stall, That hears, without, the trumpet-call,

Began to chafe and swear:—
"A sorry thing to hide my head
In castle, like a fearful maid,
When such a field is near.

When such a field is near.
Needs must I see this battle-day;
Death to my fame if such a fray
Were fought, and Marmion away!

The Douglas, too, I wot not why, Hath bated of his courtesy;
No longer in his halls I'll stay:"
Then bade his band they should array
For march against the dawning day.

CANTO SIXTH

THE BATTLE

WHILE great events were on the gale, And each hour brought a varying tale, And the demeanor, changed and cold, Of Douglas fretted Marmion bold, And, like the impatient steed of war, He snuffed the battle from afar, And hopes were none that back again Herald should come from Terouenne, Where England's king in leaguer lay, Before decisive battle-day,— While these things were, the mournful

Clare

Did in the dame's devotions share; For the good countess ceaseless prayed To Heaven and saints her sons to aid, And with short interval did pass From prayer to book, from book to mass, And all in high baronial pride,—A life both dull and dignified; Yet, as Lord Marmion nothing pressed Upon her intervals of rest, Dejected Clara well could bear The formal state, the lengthened prayer, Though dearest to her wounded heart The hours that she might spend apart.

I said Tantallon's dizzy steep
Hung o'er the margin of the deep.
Many a rude tower and rampart there
Repelled the insult of the air,
Which, when the tempest vexed the sky,
Half breeze, half spray, came whistling
by.

Above the rest a turret square
Did o'er its Gothic entrance bear,
Of sculpture rude, a stony shield;
The Bloody Heart was in the field,
And in the chief three mullets stood,
The cognizance of Douglas blood.
The turret held a narrow stair,
Which, mounted, gave you access where

A parapet's embattled row
Did seaward round the castle go.
Sometimes in dizzy steps descending,
Sometimes in narrow circuit bending,
Sometimes in platform broad extending
Its varying circle did combine
Bulwark, and bartizan, and line,
And bastion, tower, and vantage-coign
Above the booming ocean leant
The far-projecting battlement;
The billows burst in ceaseless flow
Upon the precipice below.
Where'er Tantallon faced the land,
Gate-works and walls were strongly manned;

No need upon the sea-girt side: The steepy rock and frantic tide Approach of human step denied, And thus these lines and ramparts rude Were left in deepest solitude.

And, for they were so lonely, Clare Would to these battlements repair, And muse upon her sorrows there,

And list the sea-bird's cry,
Or slow, like noontide ghost, would glide

Along the dark-gray bulwarks' side,
And ever on the heaving tide
Look down with weary eye.
Oft did the cliff and swelling main
Recall the thoughts of Whitby's fane,—
A home she ne'er might see again;

For she had laid adown, So Douglas bade, the hood and veil, And frontlet of the cloister pale,

And Benedictine gown:
It were unseemly sight, he said,
A novice out of convent shade.—
Now her bright locks with sunny glow
Again adorned her brow of snow;
Her mantle rich, whose borders round
A deep and fretted broidery bound,
In golden foldings sought the ground;
Of holy ornament, alone
Remained a cross with ruby stone;

And often did she look On that which in her hand she bore, With velvet bound and broidered o'er,

Her breviary book.
In such a place, so lone, so grim,
At dawning pale or twilight dim,
It fearful would have been

To meet a form so richly dressed,
With book in hand, and cross on breast,
And such a woful mien.

And such a worul mien.
Fitz-Eustace, loitering with his bow,
To practise on the gull and crow,
Saw her at distance gliding slow,

And did by Mary swear Some lovelorn fay she might have been, Or in romance some spell-bound queen, For ne'er in work-day world was seen A form so witching fair.

Once walking thus at evening tide It chanced a gliding sail she spied, And sighing thought-" The abbess there Perchance does to her home repair; Her peaceful rule, where Duty free Walks hand in hand with Charity, Where oft Devotion's tranced glow Can such a glimpse of heaven bestow That the enraptured sisters see High vision and deep mystery,-The very form of Hilda fair, Hovering upon the sunny air. And smiling on her votaries' prayer. Oh! wherefore to my duller eye Did still the Saint her form deny? Was it that, seared by sinful scorn, My heart could neither melt nor burn? Or lie my warm affections low With him that taught them first to glow?

Yet, gentle abbess, well I knew To pay thy kindness grateful due, And well could brook the mild command

That ruled thy simple maiden band. How different now, condemned to bide My doom from this dark tyrant's pride!—But Marmion has to learn ere long That constant mind and hate of wrong Descended to a feeble girl From Red de Clare, stout Gloster's Earl; Of such a stem a sapling weak, He ne'er shall bend, although he break.

"But see!—what makes this armor here?"—

For in her path there lay Targe, corselet, helm; she viewed them near.—

"The breastplate pierced !—Ay, much I fear.

Weak fence wert thou 'gainst foeman's spear

That hath made fatal entrance here,

As these dark blood-gouts say.— Thus Wilton! Oh! not corslet's ward, Not truth, as diamond pure and hard, Could be thy manly bosom's guard

On you disastrous day!"—
She raised hereyes in mournful mood,—
Wilton himself before her stood!
It might have seemed his passing ghost,
For every youthful grace was lost,

And joy unwonted and surprise Gave their strange wildness to his eyes.—

Expect not, noble dames and lords, That I can tell such scene in words: What skillful limner e'er would choose To paint the rainbow's varying hues, Unless to mortal it were given To dip his brush in dyes of heaven? Far less can my weak line declare

Each changing passion's shade:
Brightening to rapture from despair,
Sorrow, surprise, and pity there,
And joy with her angelic air,
And hope that paints the future fair

Their varying hues displayed; Each o'er its rival's ground extending, Alternate conquering, shifting, blend-

Till all fatigued the conflict yield,
And mighty love retains the field.
Shortly I tell what then he said,
By many a tender word delayed,
And modest blush, and bursting sigh,
And question kind, and fond reply;—

DE WILTON'S HISTORY

"Forget we that disastrous day
When senseless in the lists I lay.
Thence dragged,—but how I cannot know

For sense and recollection fled,—
I found me on a pallet low
Within my ancient beadsman's shed.
Austin,—remember'st thou, my Clare,
How thou didst blush when the old man,
When first our infant love began,
Said we would make a matchless

pair?—
Menials and friends and kinsmen fled
From the degraded traitor's bed—
He only held my burning head,
And tended me for many a day
While wounds and fever held their sway.
But far more needful was his care
When sense returned to wake despair

For I did tear the closing wound, And dash me frantic on the ground, If e'er I heard the name of Clare. At length, to calmer reason brought. Much by his kind attendance wrought,

With him I left my native strand, And, in a palmer's weeds arrayed My hated name and form to shade, I journeyed many a land,

No more a lord of rank and birth, But mingled with the dregs of earth. Oft Austin for my reason feared, When I would sit, and deeply brood On dark revenge and deeds of blood,

Or wild mad schemes upreared.

My friend at length fell sick, and said
God would remove him soon;

And while upon his dying bed
He begged of me a boon—
If e'er my deadliest enemy
Beneath my brand should conquered lie,
Even then my mercy should awake
And spare his life for Austin's sake.

"Still restless as a second Cain, To Scotland next my route was ta'en,

Full well the paths I knew.
Fame of my fate made various sound,
That death in pilgrimage I found,
That I had perished of my wound,—

None cared which tale was true;
And living eye could never guess
De Wilton in his palmer's dress,
For now that sable slough is shed,
And trimmed my shaggy beard and
head,

I scarcely know me in the glass. A chance most wondrous did provide That I should be that baron's guide—

I will not name his name!— Vengeance to God alone belongs; But, when I think on all my wrongs,

My blood is liquid flame!
And ne'er the time shall I forget
When, in a Scottish hostel set,
Dark looks we did exchange:

What were his thoughts I cannot tell, But in my bosom mustered Hell Its plans of dark revenge.

"A word of vulgar augury
That broke from me, I scarce knew
why,

Brought on a village tale,
Which wrought upon his moody sprite,
And sent him armed forth by night.
I borrowed steel and mail

And weapons from his sleeping band;
And, passing from a postern door,
We not and countered band to hand

We met and countered, hand to hand,—
He fell on Gifford-moor.

For the doubt stroke my broad I drow

For the death-stroke my brand I drew,—
Oh! then my helmed head he knew,
The palmer's cowl was gone —

The palmer's cowl was gone,—
Then had three inches of my blade
The heavy debt of vengeance paid,—
My hand the thought of Austin stayed;

I left him there alone,—
O good old man! even from the grave
Thy spirit could thy master save:
If I had slain my foeman, ne'er

Had Whitby's abbess in her fear Given to my hand this packet dear, Of power to clear my injured fame And vindicate De Wilton's name.— Perchance you heard the abbess tell Of the strange pageantry of hell

That broke our secret speech—
It rose from the infernal shade,
Or featly was some juggle played,
A tale of peace to teach.
A preal to Heaven I judged was best

A tale of peace to teach.

Appeal to Heaven I judged was best

When my name came among the rest.

"Now here within Tantallon hold
To Douglas late my tale I told,
To whom my house was known of old.
Won by my proofs, his falchion bright
This eve anew shall dub me knight.
These were the arms that once did turn
The tide of fight on Otterburne,
And Harry Hotspur forced to yield
When the Dead Douglas won the field.
These Angus gave—his armorer's care
Ere morn shall every breach repair;
For nought, he said, was in his halls,
But ancient armor on the walls,
And aged chargers in the stalls,
And women, priests, and gray-haired men."

men;
The rest were all in Twisel glen.
And now I watch my armor here,
By law of arms, till midnight's near;
Then, once again a belted knight,
Seek Surrey's camp with dawn of light.

"There soon again we meet, my Clare! This baron means to guide thee there: Douglas reveres his king's command, Else would he take thee from his band. And there thy kinsman Surrey, too, Will give De Wilton justice due. Now meeter far for martial broil, Firmer my limbs and strung by toil, Once more"—"O Wilton! must we then Risk new-found happiness again,

Trust fate of arms once more? And is there not an humble glen Where we, content and poor,

Where we, content and poor, Might build a cottage in the shade, A shepherd thou, and I to aid

Thy task on dale and moor?— That reddening brow!—too well I know Not even thy Clare can peace bestow While falsehood stains thy name:

While falsehood stains thy name:
Go then to fight! Clare bids thee go!
Clare can a warrior's feelings know
And weep a warrior's shame,

Can Red Earl Gilbert's spirit feel, Buckle the spurs upon thy heel And belt thee with thy brand of steel, And send thee forth to fame!"

That night upon the rocks and bay
The midnight moonbeam slumbering

And poured its silver light and pure Through loophole and through embrasure

Upon Tantallon tower and hall: But chief where arched windows wide Illuminate the chapel's pride

The sober glances fall.

Much was there need; though seamed

with scars,

Two veterans of the Douglas' wars,
Though two gray priests were there,
And each a blazing torch held high,
You could not by their blaze descry
The chapel's carving fair.
Amid that dim and smoky light.

Checkering the silvery moonshine bright,

A bishop by the altar stood, A noble lord of Douglas blood, With mitre sheen and rochet white. Yet showed his meek and thoughtful eye But little pride of prelacy; More pleased that in a barbarous age He gave rude Scotland Virgil's page Than that beneath his rule he held The bishopric of fair Dunkeld. Beside him ancient Angus stood, Doffed his furred gown and sable hood; O'er his huge form and visage pale He wore a cap and shirt of mail And leaned his large and wrinkled hand Upon the huge and sweeping brand Which wont of yore in battle fray His foeman's limbs to shred away, As wood-knife lops the sapling spray.

He seemed as, from the tombs around Rising at judgment-day,

Some giant Douglas may be found

In all his old array; So pale his face, so huge his limb, So old his arms, his look so grim.

Then at the altar Wilton kneels, And Clare the spurs bound on his heels; And think what next he must have felt At buckling of the falchion belt!

And judge how Clara changed her hue While fastening to her lover's side A friend, which, though in danger tried,

He once had found untrue!
Then Douglas struck him with his blade:
"Saint Michael and Saint Andrew aid,
I dub thee knight.

Arise, Sir Ralph, De Wilton's heir!

For king, for church, for lady fair. See that thou fight."

And Bishop Gawain, as he rose, Said: "Wilton! grieve not for thy woes Disgrace, and trouble;

For He who honor best bestows
May give thee double."

De Wilton sobbed, for sob he must:
"Where'er I meet a Douglas, trust
That Douglas is my brother!"

"Nay, nay," old Angus said, "not so: To Surrey's camp thou now must go,

Thy wrongs no longer smother.

I have two sons in yonder field;
And, if thou meet'st them under shield,
Upon them bravely—do thy worst,
And foul fall him that blenches first!"

Not far advanced was morning day When Marmion did his troop array To Surrey's camp to ride; He had safe-conduct for his band Beneath the royal seal and hand,

And Douglas gave a guide.
The ancient earl with stately grace
Would Clara on her palfrey place,
And whispered in an undertone,
"Let the hawk stoop, his prey is flown."
The train from out the castle drew,
But Marmion stopped to bid adieu:

"Though something I might plain," he said.

"Of cold respect to stranger guest, Sent hither by your king's behest,

While in Tantallon's towers I stayed,
Part we in friendship from your land,
And, noble earl, receive my hand."—
But Douglas round him drew his cloak,
Folded his arms, and thus he spoke:—
"My manors, halls, and bowers shall still
Be open at my sovereign's will
To each one whom he lists, howe'er
Unmeet to be the owner's peer.
My castles are my king's alone,
From turret to foundation-stone—
The hand of Douglas is his own,
And never shall in friendly grasp
The hand of such as Marmion clasp."

Burned Marmion's swarthy cheek like

And shook his very frame for ire, And—"This to me!" he said, "An 't were not for thy hoary beard, Such hand as Marmion's had not spared

To cleave the Douglas' head! And first I tell thee, haughty peer, He who does England's message here, Although the meanest in her state, May well, proud Angus, be thy mate; And, Douglas, more I tell thee here,

Even in thy pitch of pride, Here in thy hold, thy vassals near.— Nay, never look upon your lord, And lay your hands upon your sword,—

I tell thee, thou 'rt defied!
And if thou saidst I am not peer
To any lord in Scotland here,
Lowland or Highland, far or near,

Lord Angus, thou hast lied!"
On the earl's cheek the flush of rage
O'ercame the ashen hue of age:
Fierce he broke forth,—" And darest thou

To beard the lion in his den, The Douglas in his hall?

And hopest thou hence unscathed to go?—

No, by Saint Bride of Bothwell, no! Up drawbridge, grooms—what, warder, ho!

Let the portcullis fall,-"

Lord Marmion turned,—well was his

And dashed the rowels in his steed, Like arrow through the archway sprung The ponderous grate behind him rung; To pass there was such scanty room, The bars descending razed his plume.

The steed along the drawbridge flies
Just as it trembled on the rise;
Not lighter does the swallow skim
Along the smooth lake's level brim;
And when Lord Marmion reached his band,

He halts, and turns with clenched hand, And shout of loud defiance pours, And shook his gauntlet at the towers. "Horse! horse!" the Douglascried, "and chase!"

chase!"

But soon he reined his fury's pace:
"A royal messenger he came,
Though most unworthy of the name.

Though most unworthy of the name.—
A letter forged! Saint Jude to speed!
Did ever knight so foul a deed?

1 Lest the reader should partake of the Earl's astonishment and consider the crime as inconsistent with the manners of the period, I have to remind him of the numerous forgeries (partly executed by a female assistant) devised by Robert of Artois, to forward his suit against the Countess Matilda; which, being detected, occasioned his flight into England, and proved the remote cause of Edward the Third's memorable wars in France. John Harding, also, was expressly hired by Edward IV. to forge such documents as might appear to establish the claim of fealty asserted over Scotland by the English monarchs. (Scott's note.)

At first in heart it liked me ill When the king praised his clerkly skill Thanks to Saint Bothan, son of mine, Save Gawain, ne'er could pen a line; So swore I, and I swear it still, Let my boy-bishop fret his fill.— Saint Mary mend my fiery mood! Old age ne'er cools the Douglas blood, I thought to slay him where he stood. 'T is pity of him too," he cried: "Bold can he speak and fairly ride, I warrant him a warrior tried." With this his mandate he recalls, And slowly seeks his castle halls.

The day in Marmion's journey wore: Yet, ere his passion's gust was o'er, They crossed the heights of Stanrig-moor, His troop more closely there he scanned, And missed the Palmer from the band. "Palmer or not," young Blount did say, "He parted at the peep of day; Good sooth, it was in strange array." "In what array?" said Marmion quick. "My lord, I ill can spell the trick; But all night long with clink and bang Close to my couch did hammers clang: At dawn the falling drawbridge rang, And from a loophole while I peep, Old Bell-the-Cat came from the keep. Wrapped in a gown of sables fair, As fearful of the morning air; Beneath, when that was blown aside. A rusty shirt of mail I spied, By Archibald won in bloody work Against the Saracen and Turk; Last night it hung not in the hall; I thought some marvel would befall. And next I saw them saddled lead Old Cheviot forth, the earl's best steed, A matchless horse, though something old, Prompt in his paces, cool and bold. I heard the Sheriff Sholto say The earl did much the Master pray To use him on the battle-day, But he preferred "-" Nay, Henry, cease! Thou sworn horse-courser, hold thy peace.-

Eustace, thou bear'st a brain—I pray, What did Blount see at break of day?"—

"In brief, my lord, we both descried— For then I stood by Henry's side— The Palmer mount and outwards ride

Upon the earl's own favourite steed. All sheathed he was in armour bright, And much resembled that same knight Subdued by you in Cotswold fight; Lord Angus wished him speed."— The instant that Fitz-Eustace spoke, A sudden light on Marmion broke :-"Ah! dastard fool, to reason lost!" He muttered; "'T was nor fay nor ghost I met upon the moonlight wold, But living man of earthly mould.

O dotage blind and gross! Had I but fought as wont, one thrust Had laid De Wilton in the dust,

My path no more to cross.-How stand we now ?-he told his tale To Douglas, and with some avail;

'T was therefore gloomed his rugged brow.-

Will Surrey dare to entertain 'Gainst Marmion charge disproved and Small risk of that, I trow.

Yet Clare's sharp questions must I shun, Must separate Constance from the nun-Oh! what a tangled web we weave When first we practise to deceive! A Palmer too !-- no wonder why I felt rebuked beneath his eye; I might have known there was but one Whose look could quell Lord Marmion."

Stung with these thoughts, he urged to speed

His troop, and reached at eve the Tweed, Where Lennel's convent closed their march.

There now is left but one frail arch, Yet mourn thou not its cells; Our time a fair exchange has made: Hard by, in hospitable shade

A reverend pilgrim dwells, Well worth the whole Bernardine brood That e'er wore sandal, frock, or hood. Yet did Saint Bernard's abbot there Give Marmion entertainment fair, And lodging for his train and Clare. Next morn the baron climbed the tower, To view afar the Scottish power,

Encamped on Flodden edge: The white pavilions made a show Like remnants of the winter snow

Along the dusky ridge. Long Marmion looked:-at length his Unusual movement might descry Amid the shifting lines; The Scottish host drawn out appears, For, flashing on the hedge of spears,

The eastern sunbeam shines. Their front now deepening, now extending,

Their flank inclining, wheeling, bending,

Now drawing back, and now descend-

The skilful Marmion well could know They watched the motions of some foe Who traversed on the plain below.

Even so it was. From Flodden ridge The Scots beheld the English host Leave Barmore-wood, their evening

And heedful watched them as they crossed

The Till by Twisel Bridge.1

High sight it is and haughty, while They dive into the deep defile; Beneath the caverned cliff they fall, Beneath the castle's airy wall. By rock, by oak, by hawthorn-tree.

Troop after troop are disappearing; Troop after troop their banners rear-

Upon the eastern bank you see: Still pouring down the rocky den

Where flows the sullen Till, And rising from the dim-wood glen, Standards on standards, men on men,

In slow succession still, And sweeping o'er the Gothic arch, And pressing on, in ceaseless march,

To gain the opposing hill. That morn, to many a trumpet clang, Twisel! thy rock's deep echo rang, And many a chief of birth and rank, Saint Helen! at thy fountain drank. Thy hawthorn glade, which now we see In spring-tide bloom so lavishly, Had then from many an axe its doom, To give the marching columns room. And why stands Scotland idly now, Dark Flodden! on thy airy brow, ¹ On the evening previous to the memorable battle of Flodden, Surrey's head-quarters were at Barmore-wood, and King James held an inaccessible position on the ridge of Flodden-hill, accessible position on the ridge of Flodden-hill, one of the last and lowest eminences detached from the ridge of Cheviot. The Till, a deep and slow river, winded between the armies. On the morning of the 9th September, 1513, Surrey marched in a northwesterly direction, and crossed the Till, with his van and artillery, at Twifel-bridge, nigh where that river joins the Tweed, his rear-guard column passing about a mile higher, by a ford. This movement had the double effect of placing his army between King James and his supplies from Scotland and of striking the Scottish monarch with surand of striking the Scottish monarch with surprise, as he seems to have relied on the depth of the river in his front. But as the passage, both over the bridge and through the ford, was difficult and slow, it seems possible that the English might have been attacked to great advantage, while struggling with these natural obstacles.—(Scott).

Since England gains the pass the while, And struggles through the deep defile? What checks the fiery soul of James? Why sits that champion of the dames Inactive on his steed,

And sees, between him and his land, Between him and Tweed's southern strand,

His host Lord Surrey lead? What vails the vain knight-errant's brand?—

O Douglas, for thy leading wand!
Fierce Randolph, for thy speed!
Oh! for one hour of Wallace wight,
Or well-skilled Bruce, to rule the fight
And cry, "Saint Andrew and our right!"
Another sight had seen that morn,
From Fate's dark book a leaf been torn,
And Flodden had been Bannockbourne!—

The precious hour has passed in vain, And England's host has gained the plain, Wheeling their march and circling still Around the base of Flodden hill.

Ere yet the bands met Marmion's eye, Fitz-Eustace shouted loud and high, "Hark! hark! my lord, an English drum! And see ascending squadrons come Between Tweed's river and the hill, Foot, horse, and cannon! Hap what hap, My basnet to a prentice cap,

Lord Surrey's o'er the Till!—
Yet more! yet more!—how fair arrayed
They file from out the hawthorn shade,
And sweep so gallant by!

With all their banners bravely spread,
And all their armor flashing high,
Saint George might waken from the dead,

To see fair England's standards fly."—
"Stint in thy prate," quoth Blount,
"thou'dst best,

And listen to our lord's behest."—
With kindling brow Lord Marmion said,
'This instant be our band arrayed;
The river must be quickly crossed,
That we may join Lord Surrey's host.
If fight King James,—as well I trust
That fight he will, and fight he must,—
The Lady Clare behind our lines
Shall tarry while the battle joins."

Himself he swift on horseback threw, Scarce to the abbot bade adieu, Far less would listen to his prayer To leave behind the helpless Clare. Down to the Tweed his band he drew, And muttered as the flood they view, "The pheasant in the falcon's claw, He scarce will yield to please a daw; Lord Angus may the abbot awe, So Clare shall bide with me."

So Clare shall bide with me."
Then on that dangerous ford and deep
Where to the Tweed Leat's eddies creep,

He ventured desperately:
And not a moment will he bide
Till squire or groom before him ride;
Headmost of all he stems the tide,
And stems it gallantly.

Eustace held Clare upon her horse, Old Hubert led her rein,

Stoutly they braved the current's course, And, though far downward driven perforce,

The southern bank they gain.
Behind them straggling came to shore,
As best they might, the train:
Each o'er his head his vew-bow bore,

A caution not in vain; Deep need that day that every string, By wet unharmed, should sharply ring. A moment then Lord Marmion stayed, And breathed his steed, his men arrayed,

Then forward moved his band, Until, Lord Surrey's rear-guard won, He halted by a cross of stone, That on a hillock standing lone

Did all the field command.

Hence might they see the full array
Of either host for deadly fray;
Their marshalled lines stretched east and west,

And fronted north and south,
And distant salutation passed
From the loud cannon mouth;
Not in the close successive rattle
That breathes the voice of modern battle,

But slow and far between.

The hillock gained, Lord Marmion staved:

"Here, by this cross," he gently said,
"You well may view the scene.
Here shalt thou tarry, lovely Clare:
Oh! think of Marmion in thy prayer!—
Thou wilt not?—well, no less my care
Shall, watchful, for thy weal prepare.—
You, Blount and Eustace, are her guard,
With ten right developes of my train.

With ten picked archers of my train; With England if the day go hard, To Berwick speed amain.— But if we conquer, cruel maid,

Wy spoils shall at your feet be laid,
When here we meet again."
He waited not for answer there,

And would not mark the maid's despair, Nor heed the discontented look From either squire, but spurred amain, And, dashing through the battle-plain, His way to Surrey took.

"The good Lord Marmion, by my life! Welcome to danger's hour!—
Short greeting serves in time of strife.—
Thus have I ranged my power:
Myself will rule this central host,
Stout Stanley fronts their right,
My sons command the vaward post,

With Brian Tunstall, stainless knight; Lord Dacre, with his horsemen light, Shall be in rearward of the fight, And succor those that need it most.

Now, gallant Marmion, well I know, Would gladly to the vanguard go; Edmund, the Admiral, Tunstall there, With thee their charge will blithely share:

There fight thine own retainers too Beneath De Burg, thy steward true." "Thanks, noble Surrey!" Marmion said, Nor further greeting there he paid, But, parting like a thunderbolt, First in the vanguard made a halt,

Where such a shout there rose Of "Marmion! Marmion!" that the cry, Up Flodden mountain shrilling high, Startled the Scottish foes.

Blount and Fitz-Eustace rested still With Lady Clare upon the hill, On which—for far the day was spent—The western sunbeams now were bent; The cry they heard, its meaning knew, Could plain their distant comrades view:

Sadly to Blount did Eustace say, "Unworthy office here to stay! No hope of gilded spurs to-day.—But see! look up—on Flodden bent The Scottish foe has fired his tent." And sudden, as he spoke,

From the sharp ridges of the hill, All downward to the banks of Till, Was wreathed in sable smoke.

Volumed and vast, and rolling far, The cloud enveloped Scotland's war As down the hill they broke;

Nor martial shout, nor minstrel tone, Amounced their march; their tread alone,

At times one warning trumpet blown, At times a stifled hum.

Told England, from his mountain-throne King James did rushing come. Scarce could they hear or see their foes

Until at weapon-point they close.—
They close in clouds of smoke and dust,

With sword-sway and with lance's thrust:

And such a yell was there,
Of sudden and portentous birth,
As if men fought upon the earth,
And flends in upper air:
Oh! life and death were in the shout,
Recoil and rally, charge and rout,
And triumph and despair

And triumph and despair.

Long looked the anxious squires; their

Could in the darkness nought descry.

At length the freshening western blast
Aside the shroud of battle cast;
And first the ridge of mingled spears
Above the brightening cloud appears,
And in the smoke the pennons flew,
As in the storm the white seamew.
Then marked they, dashing broad and far.

The broken billows of the war, And plumed crests of chieftains brave Floating like foam upon the wave;

But nought distinct they see:
Wide raged the battle on the plain;
Spears shook and falchions flashed amain:

Fell England's arrow-flight like rain; Crests rose, and stooped, and rose again, Wild and disorderly.

Amid the scene of tumult, high They saw Lord Marmion's falcon fly; And stainless Tunstall's banner white, And Edmund Howard's lion bright, Still bear them bravely in the fight,

Although against them come
Of gallant Gordons many a one,
And many a stubborn Badenoch-man,
And many a rugged Border clan,
With Huntly and with Home.—

Far on the left, unseen the while, Stanley broke Lennox and Argyle, Though there the western mountaineer Rushed with bare bosom on the spear, And flung the feeble targe aside. And with both hands the broadsword plied.

'T was vain.—But Fortune, on the right,
With fickle smile cheered Scotland's fight.

Then fell that spotless banner white,
The Howard's lion fell;
Yet still Lord Marmion's falcon flew
With wavering flight, while fiercer grew

Around the battle-yell.

The Border slogan rent the sky!

A Home! a Gordon! was the cry:

Loud were the clanging blows;
Advanced,—forced back,—now low,
now high.

The pennon sunk and rose;
As bends the bark's mast in the gale,

When rent are rigging, shrouds, and sail,
It wavered mid the foes.

No longer Blount the view could bear:
"By heaven and all its saints! I swear
I will not see it lost!

Fitz-Eustace, you with Lady Clare
May bid your beads and patter prayer,—
I gallop to the host."

And to the fray he rode amain, Followed by all the archer train. The fiery youth, with desperate charge, Made for a space an opening large,—

The rescued banner rose,—
But darkly closed the war around,
Like pine-tree rooted from the ground
It sank among the foes.

Then Eustace mounted too,—yet stayed,
As loath to leave the helpless maid,
When fact as shaft can fly

When, fast as shaft can fly, Bloodshot his eyes, his nostrils spread, The loose rein dangling from his head, Housing and saddle bloody red, Lord Marmion's steed rushed by;

Lord Marmion's steed rushed by;
And Eustace, maddening at the sight,
A look and sign to Clara cast

To mark he would return in haste, Then plunged into the fight.

Ask me not what the maiden feels, Left in that dreadful hour alone: Perchance her reason stoops or reels; Perchance a courage, not her own,

Braces her mind to desperate tone.—
The scattered van of England wheels;—
She only said, as loud in air

The tumult roared. "Is Wilton there?"—
They fly, or, maddened by despair,
Fight but to die,—"Is Wilton there?"
With that, straight up the hill there rode
Two horsemen drenched with gore,
And in their arms, a helpless load,

A wounded knight they bore.

His hand still strained the broken brand;
His arms where smeared with blood and sand.

Dragged from among the horses' feet, With dinted shield and helmet beat, The falcon-crest and plumage gone, Can that be haughty Marmion!... Young Blount his armor did unlace, And, gazing on his ghastly face,

Said, "By Saint George, he's gone! That spear-wound has our master sped, And see the deep cut on his head! Good-night to Marmion."—
"Unnurtured Blount! thy brawling cease:

He opes his eyes," said Eustace; "peace!"

When, doffed his casque, he felt free air, Around gan Marmion wildly stare: "Where's Harry Blount? Fitz-Eustace where?

Linger ye here, ye hearts of hare!
Redeem my pennon,—charge again!
Cry, 'Marmion to the rescue!'—Vain!
Last of my race, on battle-plain
That shout shall ne'er be heard again!—
Yet my last thought is England's—fly,

To Dacre bear my signet-ring:
Tell him his squadrons up to bring.—
Fitz-Eustace, to Lord Surrey hie:
Tuestal lies dead upon the field

Tunstall lies dead upon the field, His lifeblood stains the spotless shield Edmund is down; my life is reft; The Admiral alone is left.

Let Stanley charge with spur of fire,—With Chester charge, and Lancashire, Full upon Scotland's central host, Or victory and England's lost.—
Must I bid twice?—hence, varlets! fly!—

Leave Marmion here alone—to die."
They parted, and alone he lay;
Clare drew her from the sight away,
Till pain wrung forth a lowly moan,
And half he murmured, "Is there none

Of all my halls have nurst,
Page, squire, or groom, one cup to bring
Of blessed water from the spring,
To slake my dying thirst!"

O Woman! in our hours of ease
Uncertain, coy, and hard to please,
And variable as the shade
By the light quivering aspen made;
When pain and anguish wring the brows,

A ministering angel thou!— Scarce were the piteous accents said, When with the baron's casque the maid

To the nigh streamlet ran: Forgot were hatred, wrongs, and fears; The plaintive voice alone she hears,

Sees but the dying man. She stooped her by the runnel's side But in abhorrence backward drew; For, oozing from the mountain's side

Where raged the war, a dark-red tide
Was curdling in the streamlet blue.
Where shall she turn?—behold her mark

A little fountain cell,

Where water, clear as diamond spark, In a stone basin fell.

Above, some half-worn letters say, Drink. weary. pilgrim. drink. and. pray.

for the kind soul of, Sibyl Grey. Who built this cross and well. She filled the helm and back she hied,

And with surprise and joy espied A monk supporting Marmion's head; A pious man, whom duty brought

To dubious verge of battle fought,
To shrive the dying, bless the dead.

Deep drank Lord Marmion of the wave, And, as she stooped his brow to lave— "Is it the hand of Clare," he said, "Or injured Constance, bathes my head?"

Then, as remembrance rose,—
"Speak not to me of shrift or prayer!

I must redress her woes.

Short space, few words, are mine to spare;

Forgive and listen, gentle Clare!"
"Alas!" she said, "the while.—
Oh! think of your immortal weal!

Oh! think of your immortal weal! In vain for Constance is your zeal! She—died at Holy Isle."—

Lord Marmion started from the ground As light as if he felt no wound, Though in the action burst the tide In torrents from his wounded side. "Then it was truth," he said—"I knew That the dark presage must be true.— I would the Fiend, to whom belongs The vengeance due to all her wrongs,

Would spare me but a day! For wasting fire, and dying groan, And priests slain on the altar stone,

Might bribe him for delay.

It may not be !—this dizzy trance—
Curse on yon base marauder's lance,
And doubly cursed my failing brand!
A sinful heart makes feeble hand."
Then fainting down on earth he sunk,
Supported by the trembling monk.

With fruitless labor Clara bound
And strove to stanch the gushing
wound:

The monk with unavailing cares Exhausted all the Church's prayers. Ever, he said, that, close and near, A lady's voice was in his ear, And that the priest he could not hear;

For that she ever sung.
"In the lost battle borne down by the flying,

Where mingles war's rattle with groans of the dying!"

So the notes rung.—

"Avoid thee, Fiend!—with cruel hand Shake not the dying sinner's sand!— Oh! look, my son, upon yon sign Of the Redeemer's grace divine;

Oh! think on faith and bliss!— By many a death-bed I have been, And many a sinner's parting seen,

But never aught like this."
The war, that for a space did fail,
Now trebly thundering swelled the

And "Stanley!" was the cry.—
A light on Marmion's visage spread,
And fired his glazing eye;
With dying hand above his head
He shook the fragment of his blade,
And shouted "Victory!—

Charge, Chester, charge! On, Stanley, on!"

Were the last words of Marmion.

By this, though deep the evening fell, Still rose the battle's deadly swell, For still the Scots around their king, Unbroken, fought in desperate ring. Where's now their victor vaward wing,

Where Huntley, and where Home?—Oh! for a blast of that dread horn,
On Fontarabian echoes borne,

That to King Charles did come, When Rowland brave, and Olivier, And every paladin and peer, On Roncesvalles died!

Such blasts might warn them, not in vain,

To quit the plunder of the slain And turn the doubtful day again, While yet on Flodden side

Afar the Royal Standard flies, And round it toils and bleeds and dies

Our Caledonian pride! In vain the wish—for far away, While spoil and havoc mark their way, Near Sibyl's Cross the plunderers stray.— "O lady," cried the monk, "away!"

And led her to the chapel fair

Of Tilmouth upon Tweed. There all the night they spent in prayer, And at the dawn of morning there She met her kinsman, Lord Fitz-Clare.

But as they left the darkening heath More desperate grew the strife of death. The English shafts in volleys hailed, In headlong charge their horse assailed; Front, flank, and rear, the squadrons sweep

To break the Scottish circle deep That fought around their king.

But yet, though thick the shafts as snow, Though charging knights like whirlwinds go.

Though billmen ply the ghastly blow, Unbroken was the ring;

The stubborn spearmen still made good Their dark impenetrable wood,

Each stepping where his comrade stood

The instant that he fell.

No thought was there of dastard flight; Linked in the serried phalanx tight, Groom fought like noble, squire like knight.

As fearlessly and well,

Till utter darkness closed her wing O'er their thin host and wounded king. Then skilful Surrey's sage commands Led back from strife his shattered bands;

And from the charge they drew, As mountain-waves from wasted lands Sweep back to ocean blue.

Then did their loss his foemen know; Their king, their lords, their mightiest low,

They melted from the field, as snow, When streams are swoln and south winds

Dissolves in silent dew.

Tweed's echoes heard the ceaseless plash, While many a broken band

Disordered through her currents dash,
To gain the Scottish land;

To town and tower, to down and dale,
To tell red Flodden's dismal tale,
And raise the universal wail.
Tradition, legend, tune, and song
Shall many an age that wail prolong;
Still from the sire the son shall hear

Of the stern strife and carnage drear Of Flodden's fatal field. Where shivered was fair Scotland's spear And broken was her shield!

Day dawns upon the mountain's side.— There, Scotland! lay thy bravest pride, Chiefs, knights, and nobles, many a one; The sad survivors all are gone.— View not that corpse mistrustfully, Defaced and mangled though it be; Nor to yon Border castle high Look northward with upbraiding eye;

Nor cherish hope in vain That, journeying far on foreign strand, The Royal Pilgrim to his land

May yet return again,

He saw the wreck his rashness wrought Reckless of life, he desperate fought,

And fell on Flodden plain: And well in death his trusty brand, Firm clenched within his manly hand, Beseemed the monarch slain.

But oh! how changed since yon blithe night!—

Gladly I turn me from the sight Unto my tale again.

Short is my tale:—Fitz-Eustace' care
A pierced and mangled body bare
To moated Lichfield's lofty pile;
And there, beneath the southern aisle
A tomb with Gothic sculpture fair
Did long Lord Marmion's image bear.—
Now vainly for its site you look;
'T was levelled when fanatic Brook
The fair cathedral stormed and took,
But, thanks to Heaven and good Saint Chad.

A guerdon meet the spoiler had!— There erst was martial Marmion found, His feet upon a couchant hound,

His hands to heaven upraised; And all around, on scutcheon rich, And tablet carved, and fretted niche, His arms and feats were blazed.

And yet, though all was carved so fair, And priests for Marmion breathed the prayer,

The last Lord Marmion lay not there. From Ettrick woods a peasant swain Followed his lord to Flodden plain,—
One of those flowers whom plaintive lay In Scotland mourns as "wede away:"
Sore wounded, Sibyl's Cross he spied,
And dragged him to its foot, and died Close by the noble Marmion's side,
The spoilers stripped and gashed the

And thus their corpses were mista'en; And thus in the proud baron's tomb The lowly woodsman took the room.

Less easy task it were to show Lord Marmion's nameless grave and low They dug his grave e'en where he lay, But every mark is gone:

Time's wasting hand has done away The simple Cross of Sibyl Grey,

And broke her font of stone; But yet from out the little hill Oozes the slender springlet still. Oft halts the stranger there. For thence may best his curious eye The memorable field descry;

And shepherd boys repair

To seek the water-flag and rush, And rest them by the hazel bush,

And plait their garlands fair,

Nor dream they sit upon the grave

That holds the bones of Marmion brave.—

When thou shalt find the little hill, With thy heart commune and be still. If ever in temptation strong Thou left'st the right path for the wrong.

If every devious step thus trod
Still led thee further from the road.
Dread thou to speak presumptuous doom
On noble Marmion's lowly tomb;
But say, "He died a gallant knight,
With sword in hand, for England's right."

I do not rhyme to that dull elf Who cannot image to himself That all through Flodden's dismal night Wilton was foremost in the fight, That when brave Surrey's steed was slain

'Twas Wilton mounted him again; 'Twas Wilton's brand that deepest hewed Amid the spearmen's stubborn wood: Unnamed by Holinshed or Hall, He was the living soul of all; That, after fight, his faith made plain. He won his rank and lands again, And charged his old paternal shield, With bearings won on Flodden Field. Nor sing I to that simple maid To whom it must in terms be said That king and kinsmen did agree To bless fair Clara's constancy; Who cannot, unless I relate. Paint to her mind the bridal's state,— That Wolsey's voice the blessing spoke, More, Sands, and Denny, passed the joke; That bluff King Hal the curtain drew, And Katherine's hand the stocking threw:

And afterwards, for many a day,
That it was held enough to say,
In blessing to a wedded pair,
"Love they like Wilton and like Clare!"

SOLDIER, REST! THY WARFARE O'ER

Soldier, rest! thy warfare o'er, Sleep the sleep that knows not breaking;

Dream of battled fields no more,

Days of danger, nights of waking. In our isle's enchanted hall,

Hands unseen thy couch are strewing, Fairy strains of music fall,

Every sense in slumber dewing.
Soldier, rest! thy warfare o'er,
Dream of fighting fields no more;
Sleep the sleep that knows not breaking,
Morn of toil, nor night of waking.

No rude sound shall reach thine ear, Armor's clang, or war-steed champing, Trump nor pibroch summon here

Mustering clan or squadron tramping.
Yet the lark's shrill fife may come
At the daybreak from the fallow,

And the bittern sound his drum,
Booming from the sedgy shallow.
Ruder sounds shall none be near,
Guards nor warders challenge here,
Here's no war-steed's neigh and champing.

Shouting clans or squadrons stamping.

Huntsman, rest! thy chase is done;
While our slumbrous spells assail ye,
Dream not, with the rising sun,
Bugles here shall sound reveillé.

Sleep! the deer is in his den;
Sleep! thy hounds are by thee lying:

Sleep! nor dream in yonder glen
How thy gallant steed lay dying.
Huntsman, rest! thy chase is done;
Think not of the rising sun,
For at dawning to assail ye
Here no bugles sound reveillé.
From The Lady of the Lake, 1810.

HAIL TO THE CHIEF WHO IN TRIUMPH ADVANCES!

Hall to the Chief who in triumph advances!

Honored and blessed be the ever-green Pine!

Long may the tree, in his banner that glances,

Flourish, the shelter and grace of our line!

Heaven send it happy dew, Earth lend it sap anew,

Gayly to bourgeon and broadly to grow, While every Highland glen

Sends our shout back again.

"Roderigh Vich Alpine dhu, ho! ieroe!"

Ours is no sapling, chance-sown by the fountain,

Blooming at Beltane, in winter to fade:

When the whirlwind has stripped every leaf on the mountain.

The more shall Clan-Alpine exult in her shade.

Moored in the rifted rock, Proof to the tempest's shock,

Firmer he roots him the ruder it blow; Menteith and Breadalbane, then Echo his praise again,

"Roderigh Vich Alpine dhu, ho! ieroe!"

Proudly our pibroch has thrilled in Glen Fruin.

And Bannochar's groans to our slogan replied:

Glen-Luss and Ross-dhu, they are smoking in ruin,

And the best of Loch Lomond lie dead on her side.

Widow and Saxon maid Long shall lament our raid,

Think of Clan-Alpine with fear and with woe;

Lennox and Leven-glen

Shake when they hear again, "Roderigh Vich Alpine dhu, ho! ieroe!"

Row, vassals, row, for the pride of the Highlands!

Stretch to your oars for the ever-green Pine !

O that the rosebud that graces you islands

Were wreathed in a garland around him to twine!

O that some seedling gem, Worthy such noble stem

Honored and blessed in their shadow might grow!

Loud should Clan-Alpine then Ring from her deepmost glen,

"Roderigh Vich Alpine dhu, ho! ieroe!"

From The Lady of the Lake.

CORONACH

HE is gone on the mountain, He is lost to the forest. Like a summer-dried fountain. When our need was the sorest. The font, reappearing, From the rain-drops shall borrow,

But to us comes no cheering,

To Duncan no morrow!

The hand of the reaper Takes the ears that are hoary, But the voice of the weeper Wails manhood in glory. The autumn winds rushing Waft the leaves that are searest.

But our flower was in flushing,

When blighting was nearest.

Fleet foot on the correi, Sage counsel in cumber. Red hand in the foray, How sound is thy slumber! Like the dew on the mountain.

Like the foam on the river, Like the bubble on the fountain, Thou art gone, and forever!

From The Lady of the Lake.

HARP OF THE NORTH, FAREWELL!

HARP of the North, farewell! The hills grow dark.

On purple peaks a deeper shade descending;

In twilight copse the glow-worm lights her spark,

The deer, half-seen, are to the covert wending.

Resume thy wizard elm! the fountain lending,

And the wild breeze, thy wilder minstrelsy;

Thy numbers sweet with nature's vespers blending.

With distant echo from the fold and

And herd-boy's evening pipe, and hum of housing bee.

Yet, once again, farewell, thou Minstrel Harp!

Yet, once again, forgive my feeble sway,

And little reck I of the censure sharp May idly cavil at an idle lay.

Much have I owed thy strains on life's long way,

Through secret woes the world has never known,

When on the weary night dawned wearier day,

And bitterer was the grief devoured alone.-

That I o'erlive such woes, Enchantress! is thine own.

Hark! as my lingering footsteps slow retire.

Some spirit of the Air has waked thy string!

T'is now a seraph bold, with touch of fire,

'Tis now the brush of Fairy's frolic wing.

Receding now, the dying numbers ring Fainter and fainter down the rugged dell;

And now the mountain breezes scarcely bring

A wandering witch-note of the distant spell—

And now, 'tis silent all !—Enchantress, fare thee well!

Conclusion of The Lady of the Lake.

BRIGNALL BANKS

During the composition of Rokeby Scott wrote to Morritt: "There are two or three Songs, and particularly one in Praise of Brignall Banks, which I trust you will like—because, entre nous, I like them myself. One of them is a little dashing banditti song, called and entitled Allen-a-Dale."

O, Brignall banks are wild and fair, And Greta woods are green.

And you may gather garlands there
Would grace a summer queen.
And as I rode by Dalton-hall.

Beneath the turrets high, A maiden on the castle wall Was singing merrily:

"O, Brignall banks are fresh and fair, And Greta woods are green;

I'd rather rove with Edmund there Than reign our English queen."

"If, maiden, thou wouldst wend with me,

To leave both tower and town, Thou first must guess what life lead we

That dwell by dale and down.

And if thou canst that riddle read,

As read full well you may, Then to the greenwood shalt thou speed,

As blithe as Queen of May."
Yet sung she, "Brignall banks are fair,
And Greta woods are green;

I'd rather rove with Edmund there Than reign our English queen.

"I read you, by your bugle horn,
And by your palfrey good,

I read you for a ranger sworn
To keep the king's greenwood."
'A ranger, lady, winds his horn,

And 't is at peep of light; His blast is heard at merry morn, And mine at dead of night." Yet sung she, "Brignall banks are fair, And Greta woods are gay;

I would I were with Edmund there, To reign his Queen of May!

"With burnished brand and musketoon So gallantly you come,

I read you for a bold dragoon, That lists the tuck of drum."

"I list no more the tuck of drum,
No more the trumpet hear;
But when the beetle sounds his hum,

My comrades take the spear.

And O, though Brignall banks be fair,

And Greta woods be gay,
Yet mickle must the maiden dare
Would reign my Queen of May!

"Maiden! a nameless life I lead,

A nameless death I'll die; The fiend whose lantern lights the mead Were better mate than I!

Were better mate than I!
And when I'm with my comrades met
Beneath the greenwood bough,

What once we were we all forget, Nor think what we are now.

Yet Brignall banks are fresh and fair, And Greta woods are green,

And you may gather garlands there Would grace a summer queen."

From Rokeby, 1813.

ALLEN-A-DALE

ALLEN-a-Dale has no fagot for burning, Allen-a-Dale has no furrow for turning, Allen a-Dale has no fleece for the spinning,

Yet Allen-a-Dale has red gold for the winning.

Come, read me my riddle! come, hearken my tale!

And tell me the craft of bold Allen-a-Dale.

The Baron of Ravensworth prances in pride,

And he views his domains upon Arkindale side.

The mere for his net and the land for his game, The chase for the wild and the park for

The chase for the wild and the park for the tame:

Yet the fish of the lake and the deer of the vale

Are less free to Lord Dacre than Allena-Dale!

Allen-a-Dale was ne'er belted a knight, Though his spur be as sharp and his blade be as bright; Allen-a-Dale is no baron or lord. Yet twenty tall yeomen will draw at his word:

And the best of our nobles his bonnet will vail.

Who at Rere-cross on Stanmore meets Allen-a-Dale!

Allen-a-Dale to his wooing is come; The mother, she asked of his household and home:

"Though the castle of Richmond stand fair on the hill, My hall," quoth bold Allen, "shows gallanter still;

'Tis the blue vault of heaven, with its crescent so pale

And with all its bright spangles!" said Allen-a-Dale.

The father was steel and the mother was stone:

They lifted the latch and they bade him be gone;

But loud on the morrow their wail and their cry:

He had laughed on the lass with his bonny black eye,

And she fled to the forest to hear a love-

And the youth it was told by was Allena-dale!

From Rokeby, 1813.

HIE AWAY, HIE AWAY

HIE away, hie away, Over bank and over brae, Where the copsewood is the greenest, Where the fountains glisten sheenest. Where the lady-fern grows strongest, Where the morning dew lies longest, Where the black-cock sweetest sips it, Where the fairy latest trips it:

Hie to haunts right seldom seen. Lovely, lonesome, cool, and green, Over bank and over brae. Hie away, hie away.

From Waverley, 1814.

TWIST YE, TWINE YE! EVEN SO

Twist ye, twine ye! even so, Mingle shades of joy and woe, Hope and fear and peace and strife. In the thread of human life.

While the mystic twist is spinning, And the infant's life beginning,

Dimly seen through twilight bending. Lo, what varied shapes attending!

Passions wild and follies vain, Pleasures soon exchanged for pain: Doubt and jealousy and fear, In the magic dance appear.

Now they wax and now they dwindle. Whirling with the whirling spindle. Twist ye, twine ye! even so Mingle human bliss and woe.

From Guy Mannering, 1815.

WASTED, WEARY. WHEREFORE STAY

Wasted, weary, wherefore stay, Wrestling thus with earth and clay? From the body pass away ;-Hark! the mass is singing.

From thee doff thy mortal weed, Mary Mother be thy speed, Saints to help thee at thy need;— Hark! the knell is ringing.

Fear not snow-drift driving fast, Sleet or hail or levin blast; Soon the shroud shall lap thee fast. And the sleep be on thee cast That shall ne'er know waking.

Haste thee, haste thee, to be gone, Earth flits fast, and time draws on,-Gasp thy gasp, and groan thy groan, Day is near the breaking. From Guy Mannering.

JOCK O' HAZELDEAN

"Why weep ye by the tide, ladie? Why weep ye by the tide? I'll wed ye to my youngest son, And ye sall be his bride: And ye sall be his bride, ladie, Sae comely to be seen "-But ave she loot the tears down fa' For Jock o' Hazeldean.

"Now let this wilfu' grief be done, And dry that cheek so pale; Young Frank is chief of Errington And lord of Langley-dale; His step is first in peaceful ha', His sword in battle keen "-But aye she loot the tears down fa' For Jock o' Hazeldean.

"A chain of gold ye sall not lack, Nor braid to bind your hair; Nor mettled hound, nor managed hawk.

Nor palfrey fresh and fair; And you, the foremost o' them a', Shall ride our forest queen."—

But aye she loot the tears down fa'
For Jock o' Hazeldean.

The kirk was decked at morning-tide, The tapers glimmered fair; The priest and bridegroom wait the bride.

And dame and knight are there.

They sought her baith by bower and ha':

The ladie was not seen!
She's o'er the Border and awa'
Wi' Jock o' Hazeldean. 1816.

PIBROCH OF DONALD DHU

PIBROCH of Donuil Dhu,
Pibroch of Donuil,
Wake thy wild voice anew,
Summon Clan Conuil.
Come away, come away,
Hark to the summons!
Come in your war array,
Gentles and commons.

Come from deep glen and From mountain so rocky, The war-pipe and pennon Are at Inverlochy. Come every hill-plaid and True heart that wears one, Come every steel blade and Strong hand that bears one.

Leave untended the herd,
The flock without shelter;
Leave the corpse uninterred,
The bride at the altar;
Leave the deer, leave the steer,
Leave nets and barges:
Come with your fighting gear,
Broadswords and targes.

Come as the winds come when Forests are rended; Come as the waves come when Navies are stranded: Faster come, faster come, Faster and faster, Chief, vassal, page and groom, Tenant and master. Fast they come, fast they come; See how they gather! Wide waves the eagle plume, Blended with heather. Cast your plaids, draw your blades,

Forward each man set!
Pibroch of Donuil Dhu,

Knell for the onset! 1816.

TIME

"Why sit'st thou by that ruined hall, Thou aged carle so stern and gray? Dost thou its former pride recall, Or ponder how it passed away?"

"Know'st thou not me?" the Deep Voice cried:

"So long enjoyed, so oft misused— Alternate, in thy fickle pride, Desired, neglected, and accused!

"Before my breath, like blazing flax, Man and his marvels pass away! And changing empires wane and wax, Are founded, flourish, and decay.

"Redeem mine hours—the space is brief—

While in my glass the sand-grains shiver,

And measureless thy joy or grief, When Time and thou shalt part forever!"

From The Antiquary, 1816.

CAVALIER SONG

AND what though winter will pinch severe

Through locks of gray and a cloak that 's old,

Yet keep up thy heart, bold cavalier.
For a cup of sack shall fence the cold.

For time will rust the brightest blade, And years will break the strongest bow;

Was never wight so starkly made, But time and years would overthrow. From Old Mortality, 1816.

CLARION

Sound, sound the clarion, fill the fife!
To all the sensual world proclaim,
One crowded hour of glorious life
Is worth an age without a name.
From Old Mortality, 1816.

THE SUN UPON THE WEIRDLAW HILL

"It was while struggling with such languor, on one lovely evening of this autumn [1817], that he composed the following beautiful verses. That he composed the rolowing occurrent verses. They mark the very spot of their birth,—namely, the then naked height overhanging the northern side of the Cauldshields Loch, from which Metrose Abbey to the eastward, and the hills of Ettrick and Yarrow to the west, are now visible over a wide range of rich woodland,—all the work of the poet's hand." Lockhart's Life of Scott, Chapter 39.

THE sun upon the Weirdlaw Hill In Ettrick's vale is sinking sweet; The westland wind is hush and still, The lake lies sleeping at my feet. Yet not the landscape to mine eye

Bears those bright hues that once it bore.

Though evening with her richest dye Flames o'er the hills of Ettrick's shore.

With listless look along the plain I see Tweed's silver current glide, And coldly mark the holy fane Of Melrose rise in ruined pride. The quiet lake, the balmy air, The hill, the stream, the tower, the

Are they still such as once they were. Or is the dreary change in me?

Alas! the warped and broken board, How can it bear the painter's dye? The harp of strained and tuneless chord, How to the minstrel's skill reply? To aching eyes each landscape lowers, To feverish pulse each gale blows chill;

And Araby's or Eden's bowers Were barren as this moorland hill. 1817.

PROUD MAISIE

PROUD Maisie is in the wood, Walking so early; Sweet Robin sits on the bush, Singing so rarely.

"Tell me, thou bonny bird, When shall I marry me?" "When six braw gentlemen Kirkward shall carry ye."

"Who makes the bridal bed, Birdie, say truly?" "The gray-headed sexton That delves the grave duly. "The glow-worm o'er grave and stone Shall light thee steady.

The owl from the steeple sing, 'Welcome, proud lady.'" From The Heart of Midlothian, 1818.

TRUE-LOVE, AN THOU BE TRUE

TRUE-LOVE, an thou be true. Thou hast ane kittle part to play, For fortune, fashion, fancy, and thou Maun strive for many a day.

I've kend by mony a friend's tale, Far better by this heart of mine, What time and change of fancy avail, A true love-knot to untwine. From The Bride of Lammermoor, 1819.

REBECCA'S HYMN

When Israel of the Lord beloved Out from the land of bondage came, Her fathers' God before her moved, An awful guide in smoke and flame. By day, along the astonished lands

The cloudy pillar glided slow; By night, Arabia's crimsoned sands Returned the fiery column's glow.

There rose the choral hymn of praise, And trump and timbrel answered keen,

And Zion's daughters poured their lays, With priest's and warrior's voice between.

No portents now our foes amaze, Forsaken Israel wanders lone: Our fathers would not know Thy ways. And Thou hast left them to their own.

But present still, though now unseen, When brightly shines the prosperous day,

Be thoughts of Thee a cloudy screen To temper the deceitful ray! And O, when stoops on Judah's path In shade and storm the frequent night,

Be Thou, long-suffering, slow to wrath, A burning and a shining light!

Our harps we left by Babel's streams, The tyrant's jest, the Gentile's scorn; No censer round our altar beams, And mute are timbrel, harp, and horn But Thou hast said, The blood of goat The flesh of rams I will not prize;

A contrite heart, a humble thought, Are mine accepted sacrifice. From Ivanhoe, 1818.

BORDER BALLAD

MARCH, march, Ettrick and Teviotdale, Why the deil dinna ve march forward in order?

March, march, Eskdale and Liddesdale. All the Blue Bonnets are bound for the border.

> Many a banner spread. Flutters above your head,

Many a crest that is famous in story, Mount and make ready then. Sons of the mountain glen,

Fight for the Queen and our old Scottish glory.

Come from the hills where your hirsels are grazing,

Come from the glen of the buck and the roe:

Come to the crag where the beacon is blazing.

Come with the buckler, the lance, and the bow.

> Trumpets are sounding. War-steeds are bounding.

Stand to your arms and march in good order:

England shall many a day Tell of the bloody fray, When the Blue Bonnets came over the

the Border. From The Monastery, 1820.

LIFE

Youth! thou wear'st to manhood now: Darker lip and darker brow, Statelier step, more pensive mien. In thy face and gait are seen: must now brook midnight watches, Take thy food and sport by snatches!

For the gambol and the jest Thou wert wont to love the best, Graver follies must thou follow. But as senseless, false, and hollow. From The Abbot. 1820.

COUNTY GUY

AH! County Guy, the hour is nigh, The sun has left the lea, The orange flower perfumes the bower, The breeze is on the sea.

The lark his lay who thrilled all day Sits hushed his partner nigh: Breeze, bird, and flower confess the hour.

But where is County Guy?

The village maid steals through the shade.

Her shepherd's suit to hear: To beauty shy by lattice high, Sings high-born Cavalier.

The star of Love, all stars above Now reigns o'er earth and sky; And high and low the influence know-But where is County Guy?

From Quentin Durward, 1823.

BONNY DUNDEE

To the Lords of Convention 't was Claver'se who spoke.

"Ere the King's crown shall fall there are crowns to be broke:

So let each Cavalier who loves honor and me.

Come follow the bonnet of Bonny Dun-

Come fill up my cup, come fill up my can,

Come saddle your horses and call up your men;

Come open the West Port and let me gang free.

And it's room for the bonnets of Bonny Dundee!"

Dundee he is mounted, he rides up the street.

The bells are rung backward, the drums they are beat;

But the Provost, douce man, said, "Just e'en let him be,

The Gude Town is weel quit of that Deil of Dundee."

Come fill up my cup, etc.

As he rode down the sanctified bends of the Bow,

Ilk carline was flyting and shaking her pow:

But the young plants of grace they looked couthie and slee,

Thinking luck to thy bonnet, thou Bonny Dundee! Come fill up my cup, etc.

With sour-featured Whigs the Grassmarket was crammed,

As if half the West had set tryst to be hanged:

There was spite in each look, there was fear in each e'e.

As they watched for the bonnets of Bonny Dundee.

Come fill up my cup, etc.

These cowls of Kilmarnock had spits and had spears,

And lang-hafted gullies to kill cavaliers:

But they shrunk to close-heads and the causeway was free,

At the toss of the bonnet of Bonny Dundee.

Come fill up my cup, etc.

He spurred to the foot of the proud Castle rock,

And with the gay Gordon he gallantly spoke;

"Let Mons Meg and her marrows speak twa words or three.

For the love of the bonnet of Bonny Dundee."

Come fill up my cup, etc.

The Gordon demands of him which way he goes -

"Where'er shall direct me the shade of Montrose!

Your Grace in short space shall hear tidings of me.

Or that low lies the bonnet of Bonny Dundee.

Come fill up my cup, etc.

"There are hills beyond Pentland and lands beyond Forth,

If there's lords in the Lowlands, there's chiefs in the North;

There are wild Duniewassals three thousand times three,

Will cry hoigh! for the bonnet of Bonny Dundee. Come fill up my cup, etc.

"There's brass on the target of barkened bull-hide: There's steel in the scabbard that dangles beside:

The brass shall be burnished, the steel shall flash free.

At a toss of the bonnet of Bonny Dun-

Come fill up my cup, etc.

"Away to the hills, to the caves, to the rocks-

Ere I own an usurper, I'll couch with the fox:

And tremble, false Whigs, in the midst of your glee,

You have not seen the last of my bonnet and me!"

Come fill up my cup, etc.

He waved his proud hand and the trumpets were blown,

The kettle-drums clashed and the horsemen rode on.

Till on Ravelston's cliffs and on Clermiston's lee

Died away the wild war-notes of Bonny Dundee.

Come fill up my cup, come fill up my can,

Come saddle the horses and call up the men.

Come open your gates and let me gae free, For it's up with the bonnets of Bonny Dundee! December, 1825, 1830.

HERE'S A HEALTH TO KING CHARLES

Bring the bowl which you boast. Fill it up to the brim; 'T is to him we love most, And to all who love him. Brave gallants, stand up, And avaunt ye, base carles! Were there death in the cup, Here's a health to King Charles.

Though he wanders through dangers, Unaided, unknown, Dependent on strangers, Estranged from his own; Though 't is under our breath, Amidst forfeits and perils, Here's to honor and faith,

And a health to King Charles!

Let such honors abound As the time can afford, The knee on the ground, And the hand on the sword: But the time shall come round When, 'mid Lords, Dukes, and Earls The loud trumpet shall sound, Here's a health to King Charles!

From Woodstock, 1826.

BYRON

LACHIN Y GAIR

AWAY, ye gay landscapes, ye gardens of roses!

In you let the minions of luxury rove; Restore me the rocks, where the snowflake reposes,

Though still they are sacred to freedom and love:

Yet, Caledonia, beloved are thy mountains,

Round their white summits though elements war:

Though cataracts foam 'stead of smoothflowing fountains,

I sigh for the valley of dark Loch na Garr.

Ah! there my young footsteps in infancy wander'd;

My cap was the bonnet, my cloak was the plaid;

On chieftains long perish'd my memory ponder'd,

As daily I strode through the pinecover'd glade;

I sought not my home till the day's dying glory

Gave place to the rays of the bright polar star;

For fancy was cheer'd by traditional story,

Disclosed by the natives of dark Loch na Garr.

"Shades of the dead! have I not heard your voices

Rise on the night-rolling breath of the gale?"

Surely the soul of the hero rejoices,

And rides on the wind, o'er his own Highland vale.

Round Loch na Garr while the stormy mist gathers,

Winter presides in his cold icy car: Clouds there encircle the forms of my fathers;

They dwell in the tempests of dark Loch na Garr. "Ill-starr'd, though brave, did no visions foreboding

Tell you that fate had forsaken your cause?"

Ah! were you destined to die at Culloden, Victory crown'd not your fall with applause:

Still were you happy in death's earthly slumber,

You rest with your clan in the caves of Braemar:

The pibroch resounds, to the piper's loud number,

Your deeds on the echoes of dark Loch na Garr.

Years have roll'd on, Loch na Garr, since I left you,

Years must elapse ere I tread you again:

Nature of verdure and flow'rs has bereft you,

Yet still are you dearer than Albion's plain.

England! thy beauties are tame and domestic

To one who has roved o'er the mountains afar:

Oh for the crags that are wild and majestic!

The steep frowning glories of dark Loch na Garr. 1807.1

MAID OF ATHENS, ERE WE PART

Ζώη μοῦ, σᾶς ἀγαπῶ

MAID of Athens, ere we part, Give, oh, give me back my heart! Or, since that has left my breast, Keep it now, and take the rest! Hear my vow before I go, $Z\dot{\omega}\eta \ \mu\sigma\ddot{\nu}$, $\sigma\ddot{\alpha}\varsigma \ \dot{a}\gamma a\pi\ddot{\omega}$.

¹The dates for Byron's poems are made up chiefly from the very full accounts of their writing and publication given in the notes to E. H. Coleridge's splendid edition.

By those tresses unconfined, Woo'd by each Ægean wind; By those lids whose jetty fringe Kiss thy soft cheeks' blooming tinge; By those wild eyes like the roe. Ζώη μου, σάς άγαπω.

By that lip I long to taste; By that zone-encircled waist; By all the token-flowers that tell What words can never speak so well; By love's alternate joy and woe. Ζώη μοῦ, σᾶς άγαπω.

Maid of Athens! I am gone: Think of me, sweet! when alone. Though I fly to Istambol, Athens holds my heart and soul; Can I cease to love thee? No! 1810. 1812. Ζώη μου, σάς άγαπω.

AND THOU ART DEAD, AS YOUNG AND FAIR

" Heu, quanto minus est cum reliquis versari quam tui meminisse!'

AND thou art dead, as young and fair As aught of mortal birth : And form so soft, and charms so rare, Too soon return'd to Earth! Though Earth received them in her bed And o'er the spot the crowd may tread In carelessness or mirth, There is an eye which could not brook

A moment on that grave to look.

I will not ask where thou liest low, Nor gaze upon the spot; There flowers or weeds at will may grow, So I behold them not: It is enough for me to prove That what I loved, and long must love, Like common earth can rot; To me there needs no stone to tell, 'Tis Nothing that I loved so well.

Yet did I love thee to the last As fervently as thou, Who didst not change through all the past,

And canst not alter now. The love where Death has set his seal, Nor age can chill, nor rival steal, Nor falsehood disavow:

And, what were worse, thou canst not Or wrong, or change, or fault in me.

lowers,

Shall never more be thine. The silence of that dreamless sleep I envy now too much to weep;

The better days of life were ours:

The worst can be but mine:

Nor need I to repine, That all those charms have pass'd away: I might have watch'd through long

The sun that cheers, the storm that decav. The flower in ripen'd bloom unmatch'd Must fall the earliest prey; Though by no hand untimely snatch'd, The leaves must drop away;

And yet it were a greater grief To watch it withering leaf by leaf, Than see it pluck'd to-day; Since earthly eye but ill can bear To trace the change to foul from fair.

I know not if I could have borne To see thy beauties fade; The night that follow'd such a morn Had worn a deeper shade;

Thy day without a cloud hath pass'd, And thou wert lovely to the last; Extinguish'd, not decay'd; As stars that shoot along the sky

Shine brightest as they fall from high.

As once I wept, if I could weep, My tears might well be shed, To think I was not near to keep One vigil o'er thy bed; To gaze, how fondly! on thy face, To fold thee in a faint embrace, Uphold thy drooping head; And show that love, however vain, Nor thou nor I can feel again.

Yet how much less it were to gain, Though thou hast left me free, The loveliest things that still remain, Than thus remember thee! The all of thine that cannot die Through dark and dread Eternity Returns again to me, And more thy buried love endears Than aught except its living years.

February, 1812. 1812.

WHEN WE TWO PARTED

When we two parted In silence and tears, Half broken-hearted To sever for years,

Pale grew thy cheek and cold, Colder thy kiss: Truly that hour foretold Sorrow to this.

The dew of the morning Sunk chill on my brow-It felt like the warning Of what I feel now. Thy vows are all broken,

And light is thy fame: I hear thy name spoken, And share in its shame.

They name thee before me. A knell to mine ear: A shudder comes o'er me-Why wert thou so dear? They know not I knew thee, Who knew thee too well: Long, long shall I rue thee, Too deeply to tell.

In secret we met-In silence I grieve, That thy heart could forget. Thy spirit deceive. If I should meet thee After long years, How should I greet thee?— With silence and tears. ? 1816.

THE BRIDE OF ABYDOS

A TURKISH TALE

Had we never loved so kindly, Had we never loved so blindly, Never met or never parted We had ne'er been broken-hearted."-BURNS.

CANTO THE FIRST

Know ye the land where the cypress and myrtle

Are emblems of deeds that are done in their clime?

Where the rage of the vulture, the love of the turtle.

Now melt into sorrow, now madden to crime!

Know ye the land of the cedar and vine, Where the flowers ever blossom, the beams ever shine:

Where the light wings of Zephyr, oppress'd with perfume,

Wax faint o'er the gardens of Gul in her bloom:

Where the citron and olive are fairest of fruit.

And the voice of the nightingale never is mute:

Where the tints of the earth, and the hues of the sky. In color though varied, in beauty may

And the purple of ocean is deepest in dve:

Where the virgins are soft as the roses they twine,

And all, save the spirit of man, is divine? 'T is the clime of the East; 't is the land of the Sun-

Can he smile on such deeds as his children have done?

Oh! wild as the accents of lovers' fare-

Are the hearts which they bear, and the tales which they tell.

Begirt with many a gallant slave, Apparell'd as becomes the brave, Awaiting each his lord's behest To guide his steps, or guard his rest, Old Giaffir sate in his Divan: Deep thought was in his aged eye;

And though the face of Mussulman Not oft betrays to standers by The mind within, well skill'd to hide All but unconquerable pride, His pensive cheek and pondering brow Did more than he was wont avow.

"Let the chamber be clear'd."—The train disappear'd.—

"Now call me the chief of the Haram guard."

With Giaffir is none but his only son, And the Nubian awaiting the sire's award.

"Haroun-when all the crowd that wait Are pass'd beyond the outer gate, (Woe to the head whose eye beheld My child Zuleika's face unveil'd!) Hence, lead my daughter from her tower;

Her fate is fix'd this very hour: Yet not to her repeat my thought; By me alone be duty taught!"

"Pacha! to hear is to obey." No more must slave to despot say— Then to the tower had ta'en his way, But here young Selim silence brake,

First lowly rendering reverence meet; And downcast look'd and gently spake, Still standing at the Pacha's feet: For son of Moslem must expire, Ere dare to sit before his sire!

"Father! for fear that thou shouldst chide

My sister, or her sable guide, Know-for the fault, if fault there be, Was mine, then fall thy frowns on me-So lovelily the morning shone,

That—let the old and weary sleep— I could not; and to view alone

The fairest scenes of land and deep, With none to listen and reply To thoughts with which my heart beat high Were irksome—for whate'er my mood, In sooth I love not solitude;

I on Zuleika's slumber broke, And, as thou knowest that for me Soon turns the Haram's grating key, Before the guardian slaves awoke We to the cypress groves had flown, And made earth, main, and heaven our

There linger'd we, beguiled too long With Mejnoun's tale, or Sadi's song; Till I, who heard the deep tambour Beat thy Divan's approaching hour, To thee, and to my duty true, Warn'd by the sound, to greet thee flew But there Zuleika wanders vet-Nay, Father, rage not-nor forget That none can pierce that secret bower But those who watch the woman's tower."

"Son of a slave"—the Pacha said— "From unbelieving mother bred, Vain were a father's hope to see Aught that beseems a man in thee. Thou, when thine arm should bend the bow.

And hurl the dart, and curb the steed, Thou, Greek in soul if not in creed, Must pore where babbling waters flow, And watch unfolding roses blow. Would that you orb, whose matin glow Thy listless eves so much admire, Would lend thee something of his fire! Thou, who wouldst see this battlement By Christian cannon piecemeal rent; Nay, tamely view old Stambol's wall Before the dogs of Moscow fall, Nor strike one stroke for life and death Against the curs of Nazareth! Go-let thy less than woman's hand Assume the distaff—not the brand. But, Haroun!—to my daughter speed! And hark—of thine own head take heed— If thus Zuleika oft takes wing— Thou see'st you bow—it hath a string!"

No sound from Selim's lip was heard, At least that met old Giaffir's ear. But every frown and every word

Pierced keener than a Christian's sword. "Son of a slave!--reproach'd with Those gibes had cost another dear. Son of a slave !—and who my sire?"

Thus held his thoughts their dark career:

And glances ev'n of more than ire Flash forth, then faintly disappear. Old Giaffir gazed upon his son

And started; for within his eye He read how much his wrath had done;

He saw rebellion there begun:

"Come hither, boy—what, no reply? I mark thee—and I know thee too: But there be deeds thou dar'st not do: But if thy beard had manlier length. And if thy hand had skill and strength, I'd joy to see thee break a lance, Albeit against my own perchance."

As sneeringly these accents fell, On Selim's eve he fiercely gazed: That eye return'd him glance for glance And proudly to his sire's was raised,

Till Giaffir's quail'd and shrunk askance-

And why—he felt, but durst not tell. "Much I misdoubt this wayward boy Will one day work me more annoy: I never loved him from his birth, And—but his arm is little worth, And scarcely in the chase could cope With timid fawn or antelope, Far less would venture into strife Where man contends for fame and life— I would not trust that look or tone: No—nor the blood so near my own. That blood-he hath not heard-no

I'll watch him closer than before. He is an Arab to my sight, Or Christian crouching in the fight— But hark !—I hear Zuleika's voice;

Like Houris' hymn it meets mine ear; She is the offspring of my choice;

Oh! more than ev'n her mother dear, With all to hope, and nought to fear— My Peri! ever welcome here! Sweet, as the desert fountain's wave To lips just cool'd in time to save-

Such to my longing sight art thou. Nor can they waft to Mecca's shrine More thanks for life, than I for thine,

Who blest thy birth and bless thee

now."

Fair, as the first that fell of womankind, When on that dread yet lovely serpent smiling.

Whose image then was stamp'd upon her mind--

But once beguil'd—and ever more beguiling;
Dazzling, as that, oh! too transcendent vision

To Sorrow's phantom-peopled slumber given,

When heart meets heart again in dreams Elysian,

And paints the lost on Earth revived in Heaven:

Soft, as the memory of buried love; Pure, as the prayer which Childhood wafts above

Was she—the daughter of that rude old Chief.

Who met the maid with tears—but not of grief.

Who hath not proved how feebly words essay

To fix one spark of Beauty's heavenly ray?

Who doth not feel, until his failing sight

Faints into dimness with its own delight,

His changing cheek, his sinking heart confess

The might, the majesty of Loveliness? Such was Zuleika, such around her

The nameless charms unmark'd by her alone—

The light of love, the purity of grace,
The mind, the Music breathing from her face,

The heart whose softness harmonized the whole,

And oh! that eye was in itself a Soul!

Her graceful arms in meekness bending Across her gently budding breast; At one kind word those arms extending To clasp the neck of him who blest His child caressing and carest, Zuleika came—and Giaffir felt His purpose half within him melt: Not that against her fancied weal His heart though stern could ever feel; Affection chain'd her to that heart; Ambition tore the links apart.

"Zuleika! child of gentleness! How dear this very day must tell, When I forget my own distress,
In losing what I love so well,
To bid thee with another dwell:
Another! and a braver man
Was never seen in battle's van.
We Moslem reck not much of blood;
But yet the line of Carasman

Unchanged, unchangeable hath stood First of the bold Timariot bands That won and well can keep their lands. Enough that he who comes to woo Is kinsman of the Bey Oglou: His years need scarce a thought employ; I would not have thee wed a boy. And thou shalt have a noble dower: And his and my united power Will laugh to scorn the death-firman, Which others tremble but to scan, And teach the messenger what fate The bearer of such boon may wait. And now thou know'st thy father's will.

All that thy sex hath need to know:
'T was mine to teach obedience still—
The way to love, thy lord may show.'

In silence bow'd the virgin's head;
And if her eye was fill'd with tears
That stifled feeling dare not shed,
And changed her cheek from pale to red,

And red to pale, as through her ears Those winged words like arrows sped, What could such be but maiden fears '

So bright the tear in Beauty's eye, Love half regrets to kiss it dry; So sweet the blush of Bashfulness, Even Pity scarce can wish it less! Whate'er it was the sire forgot; Or if remember'd, mark'd it not; Thrice clapp'd his hands, and call'd his steed.

Resign'd his gem-adorn'd chibouque, And mounting featly for the mead, With Maugrabee and Mamaluke,

His way amid his Delis took.
To witness many an active deed
With sabre keen, or blunt jerreed.
The Kislar only and his Moors
Watch well the Haram's massy doors.

His head was leant upon his hand, His eye look'd o'er the dark blue water

That swiftly glides and gently swells Between the winding Dardanelles; But yet he saw nor sea nor strand, Nor even his Pacha's turban'd band Mix in the game of mimic slaughter,

Careering cleave the folded felt,

With sabre stroke right sharply dealt: Nor mark'd the javelin-darting crowd Nor heard their Ollahs wild and loudthought but of old Giaffir's daughter!

No word from Selim's bosom broke; One sigh Zuleika's thought bespoke: Still gazed he through the lattice grate, Pale, mute, and mournfully sedate. To him Zuleika's eye was turn'd, But little from his aspect learn'd: Equal her grief, yet not the same; Her heart confess'd a gentler flame: But yet that heart, alarm'd or weak, She knew not why, forbade to speak. Yet speak she must—but when essay? "How strange he thus should tuen awav! Not thus we e'er before have met: Nor thus shall be our parting yet." Thrice paced she slowly through the room,

And watch'd his eve-it still was fix'd: She snatch'd the urn wherein was

The Persian Atar-gul's perfume, And sprinkled all its odors o'er The pictured roof and marble floor: The drops, that through his glittering vest

The playful girl's appeal address'd, Unheeded o'er his bosom flew, As if that breast were marble too. "What, sullen yet? it must not be-Oh! gentle Selim, this from thee!" She saw in curious order set

The fairest flowers of eastern land-"He loved them once: may touch them yet.

If offer'd by Zuleika's hand."

The childish thought was hardly brea-

Before the rose was pluck'd and wreathed:

The next fond moment saw her seat Her fairy form at Selim's feet: "This rose to calm my brother's cares A message from the Bulbul bears; It says to-night he will prolong For Selim's ear his sweetest song; And though his note is somewhat sad, He'll try for once a strain more glad, With some faint hope his alter'd lay May sing these gloomy thoughts away.

"What! not receive my foolish flower? Nay then I am indeed unblest: On me can thus thy forehead lower? And know'st thou not who loves thee

Oh, Selim dear! oh, more than dearest! Say, is it me thou hat'st or fearest? Come, lay thy head upon my breast. And I will kiss thee into rest. Since words of mine, and songs must fail.

Ev'n from my fabled nightingale. I knew our sire at times was stern. But this from thee had yet to learn: Too well I know he loves thee not; But is Zuleika's love forgot? Ah! deem I right? the Pacha's plan-This kinsman Bey of Carasman Perhaps may prove some foe of thine. If so, I swear by Mecca's shrine,— If shrines that ne'er approach allow To woman's step, admit her vow,— Without thy free consent, command, The Sultan should not have my hand! Think'st thou that I could bear to part With thee, and learn to halve my heart? Ah! were I sever'd from thy side, Where were thy friend-and who my guide? Years have not seen, Time shall not see, The hour that tears my soul from thee: Ev'n Azrael, from his deadly quiver

When flies that shaft, and fly it must, That parts all else, shall doom for ever Our hearts to undivided dust!"

He lived, he breathed, he moved, he felt; He raised the maid from where she knelt:

His trance was gone, his keen eye shone With thoughts that long in darkness dwelt:

With thoughts that burn-in rays that melt.

As the stream late conceal'd By the fringe of its willows, When it rushes reveal'd In the light of its billows:

As the bolt bursts on high From the black cloud that bound it,

Flash'd the soul of that eve Through the long lashes round it. A war-horse at the trumpet's sound, A lion roused by heedless hound, A tyrant waked to sudden strife By graze of ill-directed knife, Starts not to more convulsive life Than he, who heard that vow, display'd, And all, before repress'd, betray'd: "Now thou art mine, for ever mine,

With life to keep, and scarce with life

resign;

Now thou art mine, that sacred oath, Though sworn by one, hath bound us both,

Yes, fondly, wisely hast thou done; That yow hath saved more heads than

But blench not thou—thy simplest tress Claims more from me than tenderness: I would not wrong the slenderest hair That clusters round thy forehead fair, For all the treasures buried far Within the caves of Istakar. This morning clouds upon me lower'd, Reproaches on my head were shower'd. And Giaffir almost call'd me coward! Now I have motive to be brave; The son of his neglected slave, Nay, start not, 'twas the term he gave, May show, though little apt to vaunt, A heart his words nor deeds can daunt. His son, indeed!—yet, thanks to thee, Perchance I am, at least shall be; But let our plighted secret vow Be only known to us as now. I know the wretch who dares demand From Giaffir thy reluctant hand; More ill-got wealth, a meaner soul Holds not a Musselim's control: Was he not bred in Egripo? A viler race let Israel show! But let that pass—to none be told Our oath; the rest shall time unfold. To me and mine leave Osman Bey; I've partisans for peril's day: Think not I am what I appear; I've arms, and friends, and vengeance near."

"Think not thou art what thou appearst!
My Selim, thou art sadly changed:
This morn I saw thee gentlest, dearest;
But now thou'rt from thyself estranged.

My love thou surely knew'st before,

It ne'er was less, nor can be more.

To see thee, hear thee, near thee stay,
And hate the night I know not why,
Saye that we meet not but by day.

Save that we meet not but by day;
With thee to live, with thee to die,
I dare not to my hope deny:

Thy cheek, thine eyes, thy lips to kiss, Like this—and this—no more than this; For, Allah! sure thy lips are flame:

What fever in thy veins is flushing? My own have nearly caught the same, At least I feel my cheek, too, blushing. To soothe thy sickness, watch thy health, Partake, but never waste thy wealth.

Or stand with smiles unmurmuring by,

And lighten half thy poverty;
Do all but close thy dying eye,
For that I could not live to try;
To these alone my thoughts aspire:
More can I do? or thou require?
But, Selim, thou must answer why
We need so much of mystery?
The cause I cannot dream nor tell,
But be it, since thou say'st 'tis well;
Yet what thou mean'st by 'arms' and
'friends,'
Beyond my weeker some extends

Beyond my weaker sense extends.

I meant that Giaffir should have heard
The very vow I plighted thee;
His wrath would not revoke my word:
But surely he would leave me free.
Can this fond wish seem strange in

o me,
To be what I have ever been?
What other hath Zuleika seen
From simple childhood's earliest hour?
What other can she seek to see
Than thee, companion of her bower,
The partner of her infancy?
These cherish'd thoughts with life begun,

Say, why must I no more avow?
What change is wrought to make me shun

The truth; my pride, and thine till now?

To meet the gaze of stranger's eves Our law, our creed, our God denies; Nor shall one wandering thought of mine At such, our Prophet's will, repine: No! happier made by that decree, He left me all in leaving thee. Deep were my anguish, thus compell'd To wed with one I ne'er beheld: This wherefore should I not reveal? Why wilt thou urge me to conceal? I know the Pacha's haughty mood To thee hath never boded good; And he so often storms at nought, Allah! forbid that e'er he ought! And why I know not, but within My heart concealment weighs like sin. If then such secrecy be crime,

And such it feels while lurking here; Oh, Selim! tell me yet in time,

Nor leave me thus to thoughts of fear. Ah! yonder see the Tchocadar, My father leaves the mimic war; I tremble now to meet his eye— Say, Selim, canst thou tell me why?"

"Zuleika—to thy tower's retreat Betake thee—Giaffir I can greet! And now with him I fain must prate Of firmans, imposts, levies, state. There's fearful news from Danube's banks,

Our Vizier nobly thins his ranks, For which the Giaour may give him thanks!

Our Sultan hath a shorter way Such costly triumph to repay. But, mark me, when the twilight drum

Hath warn'd the troops to food and sleep,

Unto thy cell will Selim come:
Then softly from the Haram creep
Where we may wander by the deep:
Our garden battlements are steep;
Nor these will rash intruder climb
To list our words, or stint our time;
And if he doth, I want not steel
Which some have felt, and more may feel.

Then shalt thou learn of Selim more Than thou hast heard or thought before: Trust me, Zuleika—fear not me! Thou know'st I hold a Haram key." "Fear thee, my Selim! ne'er till now Did word like this—"

"Delay not thou:
I keep the key—and Haroun's guard
Have some, and hope of more reward.
To-night, Zuleika, thou shalt hear
My tale, my purpose, and my fear:
I am not, love! what I appear."

CANTO THE SECOND

THE winds are high on Helle's wave, As on that night of stormy water When Love, who sent, forgot to save The young, the beautiful, the brave.

The lonely hope of Sestos' daughter.
Oh! when alone along the sky
Her turret-torch was blazing high,
Though rising gale, and breaking foam,
And shrieking sea-birds warn'd him

home;
And clouds aloft and tides below,
With signs and sounds, forbade to go,
He could not see, he would not hear,
Or sound or sign foreboding fear;
His eye but saw that light of love,
The only star it hail'd above;
His ear but rang with Hero's song,
"Ye waves, divide not loverslong!"—
That tale is old, but love anew
May nerve young hearts to prove as true.

The winds are high, and Helle's tide Rolls darkly heaving to the main; And Night's descending shadows hide That field with blood bedew'd in vain.

The desert of old Priam's pride;
The tombs, sole relics of his reign,
All—save immortal dreams that could beguile

The blind old man of Scio's rocky isle!

Oh! yet—for there my steps have been; These feet have press'd the sacred shore,

These limbs that buoyant wave hath

Minstrel! with thee to muse, to mourn, To trace again those fields of yore, Believing every hillock green

Contains no fabled hero's ashes, And that around the undoubted scene Thine own "broad Hellespont" still dashes,

Be long my lot! and cold were he Who there could gaze denying thee!

The night hath closed on Helle's stream, Nor yet hath risen on Ida's hill That moon, which shone on his high theme:

No warrior chides her peaceful beam
But conscious shepherds bless it still.
Their flocks are grazing on the mound
Of him who felt the Dardan's arrow:
That mighty heap of gather'd ground
Which Ammon's son ran proudly round,
By nations raised, by monarchs crown'd,
Is now a lone and nameless barrow!
Within—thy dwelling-place how narrow! Without—can only strangers breathe The name of him that was beneath:

Dust long outlasts the storied stone; But Thou—thy very dust is gone!

Late, late to-night will Dian cheer
The swain, and chase the boatman's
fear;

Till then—no beacon on the cliff
May shape the course of struggling skiff;
The scatter'd lights that skirt the bay,
All, one by one, have died away;
The only lamp of this lone hour
Is glimmering in Zuleika's tower.
Yes! there is light in that lone chamber,
And o'er her silken ottoman

Are thrown the fragrant beads of amber, O'er which her fairy fingers ran; Near these, with emerald rays beset, (How could she thus that gem forget?) Her mother's sainted amulet, Whereon engraved the Koorsee text, Could smooth this life, and win the next:

And by her comboloio lies
A Koran of illumined dyes;
And many a bright emblazon'd rhyme
By Persian scribes redeem'd from time;
And o'er those scrolls, not oft so mute,
Reclines her now neglected lute;
And round her lamp of fretted gold
Bloom flowers in urns of China's mould;
The richest work of Iran's loom,
And Sheeraz, tribute of perfume;
All that can eye or sense delight
Are gather'd in that gorgeous room;

Are gather'd in that gorgeous room:
But yet it hath an air of gloom
She, of this Peri cell the sprite,
What doth she hence, and on so rude a night?

---6---

Wrapt in the darkest sable vest,
Which none save noblest Moslem wear,
To guard from winds of heaven the
breast

As heaven itself to Selim dear,
With cautious steps the thicket threading,

And starting oft, as through the glade
The gust its hollow moanings made,
Till on the smoother pathway treading,
More free her timid bosom beat,

The maid pursued her silent guide;
And though her terror urged retreat,
How could she quit her Selim's side?
How teach her tender lips to chide?

They reach'd at length a grotto, hewn By nature, but enlarged by art, Where oft her lute she wont to tune,

And oft her Koran conn'd apart;
And oft in youthful reverie
She dream'd what Paradise might be:
Where woman's parted soul shall go
Her Prophet had disdain'd to show;
But Selim's mansion was secure,
Nor deem'd she, could he long endure
His bower in other worlds of bliss
Without her, most beloved in this!
Oh! who so dear with him could dwell?
What Houri soothe him half so well?

Since last she visited the spot Some change seem'd wrought within the grot:

grot:
It might be only that the night
Disguised things seen by better light:
That brazen lamp but dimly threw
A ray of no celestial hue;
But in a nook within the cell

Her eye on stranger objects fell. There arms were piled, not such as wield The turban'd Delis in the field; But brands of foreign blade and hilt, And one was red—perchance with guilt! Ah! how without can blood be spilt? A cup too on the board was set That did not seem to hold sherbet. What may this mean? she turn'd to see Her Selim—"Oh! can this be he?"

His robe of pride was thrown aside, His brow no high-crown'd turban bore, But in its stead a shawl of red,

Wreathed lightly round, his temples wore:

That dagger, on whose hilt the gem
Were worthy of a diadem,
No longer glitter'd at his waist,
Where pistols unadorn'd were braced;
And from his belt a sabre swung,
And from his shoulder loosely hung
The cloak of white, the thin capote
That decks the wandering Candiote;
Beneath—his golden plated vest
Clung like a cuirass to his breast;
The greaves below his knee that wound
With silvery scales were sheathed and bound.

But were it not that high command Spake in his eye, and tone, and hand, All that a careless eye could see In him was some young Galiongée.¹

"I said I was not what I seem'd;
And now thou see'st my words were
true:

I have a tale thou hast not dream'd,
If sooth—its truth must others rue.
My story now 't were vain to hide,
I must not see thee Osman's bride:
But had not thine own lips declared
How much of that young heart I shared,
I could not, must not, yet have shown
The darker secret of my own.
In this I speak not now of love;
That, let time, truth, and peril prove:
But first—Oh! never wed another—
Zuleika! I am not thy brother!"

"Oh! not my brother!—yet unsay—God! am I left alone on earth
To mourn—I dare not curse—the day
That saw my solitary birth?
Oh! thou wilt love me now no more
My sinking heart foreboded ill;
But know me all I was before,

Thy sister—friend—Zuleika still. Phou led'st me here perchance to kill; If thou hast cause for vengeance, see! My breast is offer'd—take thy fill!

Far better with the dead to be
Than live thus nothing now to thee!
Perhaps far worse, for now I know
Why Giaffir alway seem'd thy foe;
And I, alas! am Giaffir's child,
For whom thou wert contemn'd, reviled.
If not thy sister—wouldst thou save

"My slave, Zuleika!—nay, I'm thine:
But, gentle love, this transport calm,
Thy lot shall yet be link'd with mine;
I swear it by our Prophet's shrine,
And be that thought thy sorrow's

My life, oh! bid me be thy slave!"

balm.

So may the Koran verse display'd Upon its steel direct my blade, In danger's hour to guard us both, As I preserve that awful oath! The name in which thy heart hath properties of the steel of the steel

The name in which thy heart hath prided Must change; but, my Zuleika, know, That tie is widen'd, not divided,

Although thy Sire's my deadliest foe. My father was to Giaffir all

That Selim late was deem'd to thee: That brother wrought a brother's fall,

But spared, at least, my infancy; And lull'd me with a vain deceit That yet a like return may meet. He rear'd me, not with tender help,

But like the nephew of a Cain; He watched me like a lion's whelp, That gnaws and yet may break his chain.

My father's blood in every vein Is boiling; but for thy dear sake No present vengeance will I take;

Though here I must no more remain. But first, beloved Zuleika! hear How Giaffir wrought this deed of fear.

"How first their strife to rancor grew, If love or envy made them foes, It matters little if I knew; In fiery spirits, slights, though few

And thoughtless, will disturb repose.
In war Abdallah's arm was strong,
Remember'd yet in Bosniac song,
And Paswan's rebel hordes attest
How little love they bore such guest:
His death is all I need relate,
The stern effect of Giaffir's hate;
And how my birth disclosed to me,
Whate'er beside it makes, hath made me
free.

"When Paswan, after years of strife, At last for power, but first for life, In Widdin's walls too proudly sate, Our Pachas rallied round the state; Nor last nor least in high command, Each brother led a separate band; They gave their horse-tails 1 to the wind, And mustering in Sophia's plain

Their tents were pitch'd, their post assign'd;

To one, alas! assign'd in vain! What need of words! the deadly bowl, By Giaffir's order drugged and given, With venom subtle as his soul,

Dismiss'd Abdallah's hence to heaven. Reclined and feverish in the bath, He, when the hunter's sport was up,

But little deem'd a brother's wrath
To quench his thirst had such a cup:
The bowl a bribed attendant bore;
He drank one draught, nor needed more!
If thou my tale, Zuleika, doubt,
Call Haroun—he can tell it out.

"The deed once done, and Paswan's feud In part suppress'd, though ne'er subdued, Abdallah's Pachalick was gain'd:— Thou know'st not what in our Divan Can' wealth procure for worse than man—

Abdallah's honors were obtain'd By him a brother's murder stain'd; 'T is true, the purchase nearly drain'd His ill got treasure, soon replaced. Wouldst question whence? Survey the waste,

And ask the squalid peasant how
His gains repay his broiling brow!—
Why me the stern usurper spared,
Why thus with me his palace shared,
I know not. Shame, regret, remorse,
And little fear from infant's force;
Besides, adoption as a son
By him whom Heaven accorded none,
Or some unknown cabal, caprice,
Preserved me thus;—but not in peace:
He cannot curb his haughty mood,
Nor I forgive a father's blood.

"Within thy father's house are foes; Not all who break his bread are true; To these should I my birth disclose,

His days, his very hours were few;
They only want a heart to lead,
A hand to point them to the deed,
But Haroun only knows, or knew,
This tale, whose close is almost nigh;

1" Horse-tail," the standard of a pacha. (Byron.)

He in Abdallah's palace grew,
And held that post in his Serai
Which holds he here—he saw him die;
But what could single slavery do?
Avanga his lord? ales! too late;

Avenge his lord? alas! too late; Or save his son from such a fate? He chose the last, and when elate

With foes subdued, or friends betray'd, Proud Giaffir in high triumph sate, He led me helpless to his gate, And not in vain it seems essay'd

To save the life for which he pray'd.
The knowledge of my birth secured
From all and each, but most from me;

Thus Giaffir's safety was insured.

Removed he too from Roumelie

To this our Asiatic side,

Far from our seats by Danube's tide, With none but Haroun, who retains Such knowledge—and that Nubian feels

A tyrant's secrets are but chains, From which the captive gladly steals, And this and more to me reveals: Such still to guilt just Alla sends— Slaves, tools, accomplices—no friends!

"All this, Zuleika, harshly sounds;
But harsher still my tale must be:
Howe'er my tongue thy softness wounds,
Yet I must prove all truth to thee.
I saw thee start this garb to see,
Yet is it one I oft have worn,

And long must wear: this Galiongée, To whom thy plighted vow is sworn, Is leader of those pirate hordes,

Whose laws and lives are on their swords;

To hear whose desolating tale
Would make thy waning cheek more pale:

Those arms thou see'st my band have brought.

The hands that wield are not remote; This cup too for the rugged knaves Is fill'd—once quaff'd, they ne'er repine: Our prophet might forgive the slaves; They're only infidels in wine.

"What could I be? Proscribed at home, And taunted to a wish to roam; And listless left—for Giaffir's fear Denied the courser and the spear—Though oft—Oh, Mahomet!how oft—In full Divan the despot scoff'd, As if my weak unwilling hand Refused the bridle or the brand: He ever went to war alone, And pent me here untried—unknown; To Haroun's care with women left,

By hope unblest, of fame bereft, While thou—whose softness long endear'd,

Though it unmann'd me, still had cheer'd—

To Brusa's walls for safety sent, Awaited'st there the field's event. Haroun, who saw my spirit pining

Beneath inaction's sluggish yoke, His captive, though with dread resign

My thraldom for a season broke,
On promise to return before
The 'ay when Giaffir's charge was o'er.
'T is vain—my tongue cannot impart
My almost drunkenness of heart,
When first this liberated eye
Survey'd Earth, Ocean, Sun, and Sky,
As if my spirit pierced them through,
And all their inmost wonders knew!
One word alone can paint to thee
That more than feeling—I was Free!
E'en for thy presence ceased to pine;
The World—nay, Heaven itself was mine!

"The shallop of a trusty Moor Convey'd me from this idle shore; I long'd to see the isles that gem Old Ocean's purple diadem: I sought by turns, and saw them all; But, when and where I join'd the

But when and where I join'd the crew,
With whom I'm pledged to rise or fall,

With whom I'm pledged to rise or fall, When all that we design to do Is done, 't will then be time more meet To tell thee, when the tale's complete.

"'T is true, they are a lawless brood,
But rough in form, nor mild in mood;
And every creed, and every race,
With them hath found—may find a
place;

But open speech, and ready hand,
Obedience to their chief's command;
A soul for every enterprise,
That never sees with terror's eyes;
Friendship for each, and faith to all,
And vengeance vow'd for those who fall,
Have made them fitting instruments
For more than ev'n my own intents.
And some—and I have studied all

Distinguish'd from the vulgar rank, But chiefly to my council call _The wisdom of the cautious Frank—

And some to higher thoughts aspire,
The last of Lambro's patriots there
Anticipated freedom share
And oft around the cavern fire

On visionary schemes debate.

To snatch the Rayahs from their fate.

So let them ease their hearts with prate Of equal rights, which man ne'er knew:

I have a love for freedom too.

Ay! let me like the ocean-Patriarch roam Or only know on land the Tartar's home! My tent on shore, my galley on the sea, Are more than cities and Serais to me: Borne by my steed, or wafted by my sail, Across the desert, or before the gale,

Bound where thou wilt, my barb! or glide, my prow!

But be the star that guides the wanderer, Thou!

Thou, my Zuleika, share and bless my bark:

The Dove of peace and promise to mine

Or, since that hope denied in worlds of strife. Be thou the rainbow to the storms of life!

The evening beam that smiles the clouds

away.

And tints to-morrow with prophetic ray! Blest—as the Muezzin's strain from Mecca's wall

To pilgrims pure and prostrate at his

call:

Soft—as the melody of youthful days, That steals the trembling tear of speechless praise:

Dear—as his native song to Exile's ears. Shall sound each tone thy long-loved voice endears.

For thee in those bright isles is built a

Blooming as Aden in its earliest hour. A thousand swords, with Selim's heart and hand,

Wait—wave—defend—destroy—at thy command!

Girt by my band, Zuleika at my side, The spoil of nations shall bedeck my bride.

The Haram's languid years of listless ease Are well resign'd for cares—for joys like these:

Not blind to fate, I see, where'er I rove, Unnumber'd perils—but one only love! Yet well my toils shall that fond breast repay.

Though fortune frown, or falser friends betrav.

How dear the dream in darkest hours of ill,

Should all be changed, to find thee faithful still!

Be but thy soul, like Selim's, firmly shown:

To thee be Selim's tender as thine own: To soothe each sorrow: share in each delight.

Blend every thought, do all-but disunite!

Once free, 'tis mine our horde again to guide:

Friends to each other, foes to aught be-

Yet there we follow but the bent assign'd By fatal Nature to man's warring kind: Mark! where his carnage and his conquests cease!

He makes a solitude, and calls it—peace! I, like the rest, must use my skill or strength,

But ask no land beyond my sabre's length:

Power sways but by division—her resource The blest alternative of fraud or force! Ours be the last; in time deceit may come When cities cage us in a social home:

There ev'n thy soul might err-how oft the heart

Corruption shakes which peril could not

And woman, more than man, when death or woe,

Or even Disgrace, would lav her lover Sunk in the lap of Luxury will shame—

Away suspicion!—not Zuleika's name! But life is hazard at the best; and here No more remains to win, and much to fear:

Yes, fear! the doubt, the dread of losing thee.

By Osman's power, and Giaffir's stern decree.

That dread shall vanish with the favouring gale.

Which Love to-night hath promised to my sail:

No danger daunts the pair his smile hath blest,

Their steps still roving, but their hearts at rest.

With thee all toils are sweet, each clime hath charms;

Earth—sea alike—our world within our arms!

Av—let the loud winds whistle o'er the deck,

So that those arms cling closer round mv neck:

The deepest murmur of this lip shall be, No sigh for safety, but a prayer for thee! The war of elements no fears impart To Love, whose deadliest bane is human

Art:

There lie the only rocks our course can check;

Here moments menace—there are years of wreck!

But hence ye thoughts that rise in Horror's shape!

This hour bestows, or ever bars, escape. Few words remain of mine my tale to close:

Of thine but one to waft us from our foes;

Yea—foes—to me will Giaffir's hate decline?

And is not Osman, who would part us, thine?

"His head and faith from doubt and death

Return'd in time my guard to save;
Few heard, none told, that o'er the wave
From isle to isle I roved the while;
And since, though parted from my band,
Too seldom now I leave the land,
No deed they've done, nor deed shall do,
Ere I have heard and doom'd it too:
I form the plan, decree the spoil,
'Tis fit I oftener share the toil.
But now too long I've held thine ear;
Time presses, floats my bark, and here
We leave behind but hate and fear.
To-morrow Osman with his train
Arrives—to-night must break thy chain:
And wouldst thou save that haughty

Bey,—
Perchance his life who gave thee

With me this hour away—away!
But yet, though thou art plighted

Wouldst thou recall thy willing vow, Appall'd by truths imparted now, Here rest I – not to see thee wed: But be that peril on my head!"

Zuleika, mute and motionless, Stood like that statue of distress, When, her last hope for ever gone, The mother harden'd into stone: All in the maid that eye could see Was but a younger Niobè. But ere her lip, or even her eye, Essay'd to speak, or look reply, Beneath the garden's wicket porch Far flash'd on high a blazing torch! Another—and another—and another—
"Oh! fly—no more—yet now my more than brother!"

Far, wide, through every thicket spread The fearful lights are gleaming red; Nor these alone—for each right hand Is ready with a sheathless brand. They part, pursue, return, and wheel With searching flambeau, shining steel; And last of all, his sabre waving, Stern Giaffir in his fury raving:

And now almost they touch the cave-Oh! must that grot be Selim's grave?

Dauntless he stood—"Tis come—soon

One kiss, Zuleika—'tis my last:
But yet my band not far from shore
May hear this signal, see the flash;
Yet now too few—the attempt were rash:

No matter—yet one effort more." Forth to the cavern mouth he stept; His pistol's echo rang on high,

Zuleika started not, nor wept,

Despair benumb'd her breast and eye!—

"They hear me not, or if they ply
Their oars 'tis but to see me die;
That sound hath drawn my foes more nigh. Then forth my father's scimitar, Thou ne'er hast seen less equal war! Farewell, Zuleika!—sweet! retire:

Yet stay within—here linger safe, At thee his rage will only chafe. Stir not—lest even to thee perchance Some erring blade or ball should glance. Fear'st thou for him?—may I expire If in this strife I seek thy sire! No—though by him that poison pour'd; No—though again he call me coward! But tamely shall I meet their steel? No—as each crest save his may feel!"

One bound he made, and gain'd the sand:

Already at his feet hath sunk
The foremost of the prying band,
A gasping head, a quivering trun

A gasping head, a quivering trunk:
Another falls—but round him close
A swarming circle of his foes;
From right to left his path he cleft,

And almost met the meeting wave:
His boat appears—nct five oars' length—
His comrades strain with desperate strength—

Oh! are they yet in time to save? His feet the foremost breakers lave; His band are plunging in the bay, Their sabres glitter through the spray: Wet-wild-unwearied to the strand They struggle-now they touch the land! They come-'tis but to add to slaughter-His heart's best blood is on the water.

Escaped from shot, unharm'd by steel. Or scarcely grazed its force to feel, Had Selim won, betray'd, beset, To where the strand and billows met; There as his last step left the land-And the last death-blow dealt his hand-Ah! wherefore did he turn to look

For her his eye but sought in vain? That pause, that fatal gaze he took,

Hath doom'd his death, or fix'd his chain.

Sad proof, in peril and in pain, How late will Lover's hope remain! His back was to the dashing spray: Behind, but close, his comrades lav, When, at the instant, hiss'd the ball-"So may the foes of Giaffir fall!"

Whose voice is heard? whose carbine

Whose bullet through the night-air sang, Too nearly, deadly aim'd to err? 'Tis thine-Abdallah's Murderer! The father slowly rued thy hate. The son hath found a quicker fate: Fast from his breast the blood is bub-

The whiteness of the sea-foam troubling-

If aught his lips essay'd to groan, The rushing billows choked the tone!

Morn slowly rolls the clouds away; Few trophies of the fight are there: The shouts that shook the midnight-bay Are silent; but some signs of fray

That strand of strife may bear. And fragments of each shiver'd brand Steps stamp'd; and dash'd into the sand The print of many a struggling hand

May there be mark'd; nor far remote A broken torch, an oarless boat:

And tangled on the weeds that heap The beach where sinds ing to the deep There lies a white capote!

'T is rent in twain-one dark-red stain The wave yet ripples o'er in vain;

But where is he who wore? Ye! who would o'er his relies weep. Go, seek them where the surges sweep Their burthen round Sigæum's steep

And cast on Lemmos shore : The sea-bird- shrick above the prey, O'er which their hungry beaks delay. As shaken on his restless pillow. His head heaves with the heaving billow:

That hand, whose motion is not life. Yet feebly seems to menace strife, Flung by the tossing tide on high, Then levell'd with the wave-

What recks it, though that corse shall lie

Within a living grave? The bird that tears that prostrate form Hath only robb'd the meaner worm; The only heart, the only eye Had bled or wept to see him die. Had seen those scatter'd limbs composed,

And mourn'd above his turban-stone, That heart hath burst-that eve was 010561]-

Yea—closed before his own!

By Helle's stream there is a voice of wail! And woman's eye is wet-man's cheek is pale:

Zuleika! last of Giaffir's race, Thy destined lord is come too late: He sees not-ne'er shall see thy face!

Can he not hear

The loud Wul-wulleh warn his distant ear?

Thy handmaids weeping at the gate, The Koran-chanters of the hymn of fate, The silent slaves with folded arms that wait.

Sighs in the hall, and shrieks upon the gale.

Tell him thy tale! Thou didst not view thy Selim fall! That fearful moment when he left the cave

Thy heart grew chill: He was the hope-the joy-the lovethine all.

And that last thought on him thou culdst not save

Sufficed to kill:

Burst forth in one wild cry-and all was

Peace to thy broken heart, and virgin grave!

Ah! happy! but of life to lose the worst! That grief-though deep-though fatalwas thy first!

Thrice happy ne'er to feel nor fear the

Of absence, shame, pride, hate, revenge, T - 1110 F - 6 !

And, oh! that pang where more than madues lies!

The worm that will not sleep—and never dies:

Thought of the gloomy day and ghastly night,

That dreads the darkness, and yet loathes the light,

That winds around, and tears the quivering heart!

Ah! wherefore not consume it—and depart!

Woe to thee, rash and unrelenting chief!
Vainly thou heap'st the dust upon thy
head,

Vainly the sackcloth o'er thy limbs dost spread:

By that same hand Abdallah—Selim: bled.

Now let it tear thy beard in idle grief.
Thy pride of heart, thy bride for Osman's bed.

She, whom thy sultan had but seen to Thy Daughter's dead!

Hope of thine age, thy twilight's lonely beam,

The Star hath set that shone on Helle's stream.

What quench'd its ray?—the blood that thou hast shed!

Hark!to the hurried question of Despair; "Where is my child?"—an Echo answers—"Where?"

Within the place of thousand tombs
That shine beneath, while dark above
The sad but living cypress glooms

And withers not, though branch and leaf

Are stamp'd with an eternal grief, Like early unrequited Love, One spot exists, which ever blooms, Ev'n in that deadly grove—

A single rose is shedding there
Its lonely lustre, meek and pale:
It looks as planted by Despair—
So white—so faint—the slightest gale

Might whirl the leaves on high:
And yet, though storms and blight
assail,

And hands more rude than wintry sky
May wring it from the stem—in vain—
To-morrow sees it bloom again:

The stalk some spirit gently rears, And waters with celestial tears,

For well may maids of Helle deem
That this can be no earthly flower,
Which mocks the tempest's withering
hour,

And buds unshelter'd by a bower;

Nor droops though Spring refuse ber shower,

Nor woos the summer beam:
To it the livelong night there sings
A bird unseen—but not remote:

Invisible his airy wings, But soft as harp that Houri strings His long entrancing note!

It were the Bulbul; but his throat, Though mournful, pours not such a strain:

For they who listen cannot leave
The spot, but linger there and grieve,

As if they loved in vain!
And yet so sweet the tears they shed,
'Tis sorrow so unmix'd with dread,
They scarce can bear the morn to break

That melancholy spell,
And longer yet would weep and wake,

He sings so wild and well!
But when the day-blush bursts from high

Expires that magic melody. And some have been who could believe, (So fondly youthful dreams deceive, Yet harsh be they that blame,)

That note so piercing and profound
Will shape and syllable its sound
Into Zuleika's name.

'Tis from her cypress summit heard,
That melts in air the liquid word:
'T is from her lowly virgin earth
That white rose takes its tender birth.
There late was laid a marble stone;
Eve saw it placed—the Morrow gone!
It was no mortal arm that bore
That deep-fix'd pillar to the shore;
For there, as Helle's legends tell,
Next morn'twas found where Selim fell;
Lash'd by the tumbling tide, whose wave
Denied his bones a holier grave;
And there by night, reclined, 't is said,
Is seen a ghastly turban'd head:

And hence extended by the billow,
'Tis named the "Pirate-phantom's pillow!"

Where first it lay that mourning flower Hath flourish'd; flourisheth this hour, Alone and dewy, coldly pure and pale; As weeping Beauty's cheek at Sorrow's tale!

ODE TO NAPOLEON BUONAPARTE

"Expende Annibalem:—quot libras in duce summo Invenies?"—Juvenal, Sat. x.

'T is done—but yesterday a King! And arm'd with Kings to striveAnd now thou art a nameless thing:
So abject—yet alive!
Is this the man of thousand thrones,
Who strew'd our earth with hostile bones,

And can he thus survive? Since he, miscalled the Morning Star, Nor man nor fiend hath fallen so far.

Ill-minded man! why scourge thy kind Who bow'd so low the knee? By gazing on thyself grown blind, Thou taught'st the rest to see. With might unquestion'd,—power to save.—

Thine only gift hath been the grave, To those that worshipp'd thee; Nor till thy fall could mortals guess Ambition's less than littleness!

Thanks for that lesson—It will teach
To after-warriors more,
Than high Philosophy can preach,
And vainly preach'd before.
That spell upon the minds of men
Breaks never to unite again,
That led them to adore
Those Pagod things of salve sway

Those Pagod things of sabre sway With fronts of brass, and feet of clay.

The triumph and the vanity,
The rapture of the strife—
The earthquake voice of Victory,
To thee the breath of life;
The sword, the sceptre, and that sway
Which man seem'd made but to obey,
Wherewith renown was rife—
All quell'd!—Dark Spirit! what must be
The madness of thy memory!

The Desolator desolate!
The Victor overthrown!
The Arbiter of others' fate
A Suppliant for his own!
Is it some yet imperial hope
That with such change can calmly cope?
Or dread of death alone?
To die a prince—or live a slave—
Thy choice is most ignobly brave!

He who of old would rend the oak,
Dream'd not of the rebound:
Chain'd by the trunk he vainly broke—
Alone—how look'd he round?
Thou, in the sternness of thy strength,
An equal deed hast done at length,
And darker fate hast found:
He fell, the forest prowlers' prey;
But thou must eat thy heart away!

The Roman, when his burning heart
Was slaked with blood of Rome,
Threw down the dagger—dared depart,
In savage grandeur, home—
He dared depart in utter scorn
Of men that such a yoke had borne,
Yet left him such a doom!
His only glory was that hour
Of self-upheld abandon'd power.

The Spaniard, when the lust of sway Had lost its quickening spell, Cast crowns for rosaries away, An empire for a cell; A strict accountant of his beads, A subtle disputant on creeds, His dotage trifled well: Yet better had he neither known A bigot's shrine, nor despot's throne.

But thou—from thy reluctant hand
The thunderbolt is wrung—
Too late thou leav'st the high command
To which thy weakness clung;
All Evil Spirit as thou art,
It is enough to grieve the heart
To see thine own unstrung;
To think that God's fair world hath been
The footstool of a thing so mean;

And Earth hath spilt her blood for him,
Who thus can hoard his own!
And Monarchs bow'd the trembling limb,

And thank'd him for a throne!
Fair Freedom! we may hold thee dear.
When thus thy mightiest foes their fear
In humblest guise have shown.
Oh! ne'er may tyrant leave behind
A brighter name to lure mankind!

Thine evil deeds are writ in gore
Nor written thus in vain—
Thy triumphs tell of fame no more,
Or deepen every stain:
If thou hadst died as honor dies
Some new Napoleon might arise,
To shame the world again—
But who would soar the solar height,
To set in such a starless night?

Weigh'd in the balance, hero dust
Is vile as vulgar clay;
Thy scales, Mortality! are just
To all that pass away:
But yet methought the living great
Some higher sparks should animate
To dazzle and dismay;

And she, proud Austria's mournful flower,

Thy still imperial bride:

bears her breast the torturing

Still clings she to thy side? Must she too bend, must she too share Thy late repentance, long despair, Thou throneless Homicide? If still she loves thee, hoard that gem,-

'T is worth thy vanish'd diadem!

Then haste thee to thy sullen Isle. And gaze upon the sea; That element may meet thy smile-It ne'er was ruled by thee! Or trace with thine all idle hand In loitering mood upon the sand That Earth is now as free! That Corinth's pedagogue 1 hath now Transferr'd his by-word to thy brow.

Thou Timour! in his captive's cage What thoughts will there be thine, While brooding in thy prison'd rage? But one-"The world was mine!" Unless, like he of Babylon, All sense is with thy sceptre gone, Life will not long confine That spirit pour'd so widely forth— So long obev'd—so little worth!

SHE WALKS IN BEAUTY

SHE walks in beauty, like the night Of cloudless climes and starry skies; And all that's best of dark and bright Meet in her aspect and her eyes: Thus mellow'd to that tender light Which heaven to gaudy day denies.

One shade the more, one ray the less, Had half impair'd the nameless grace Which waves in every raven tress, Or softly lightens o'er her face; Where thoughts serenely sweet express How pure, how dear their dwellingplace.

And on that cheek, and o'er that brow, So soft, so calm, yet eloquent, The smiles that win, the tints that glow,

But tell of days in goodness spent, A mind at peace with all below, A heart whose love is innocent! June 12, 1814. 1815.

OH! SNATCH'D AWAY IN BEAUTY'S BLOOM

OH! snatch'd away in beauty's bloom, On thee shall press no ponderous tomb; But on thy furf shall roses rear Their leaves, the earliest of the year; And the wild cypress wave in tender gloom:

And oft by you blue gushing stream Shall Sorrow lean her drooping head,

And feed deep thought with many a dream.

And lingering pause and lightly tread:

Fond wretch! as if her step disturb'd the dead!

Away! we know that tears are vain. That death nor heeds nor hears dis-

THE DESTRUCTION OF SENNACHERIB

1814 or 1815. April 23, 1815.

THE Assyrian came down like the wolf on the fold.

And his cohorts were gleaming in purple and gold;

And the sheen of their spears was like stars on the sea,

When the blue wave rolls nightly on deep Galilee.

Like the leaves of the forest when Summer is green,

That host with their banners at sunset were seen:

Like the leaves of the forest when Autumn hath blown,

That host on the morrow lay wither'd and strown.

For the Angel of Death spread his wings on the blast.

And breathed in the face of the foe as he pass'd;

And the eyes of the sleepers wax'd deadly and chill,

And their hearts but once heaved, and for ever grew still!

And there lay the steed with his nostril all wide.

But through it there roll'd not the breath of his pride;

And the foam of his gasping lay white on the turf.

And cold as the spray of the rock-beating surf.

And there lay the rider distorted and pale.

With the dew on his brow, and the rust on his mail:

And the tents were all silent, the banners alone.

The lances unlifted, the trumpet unblown.

And the widows of Ashur are loud in their wail.

And the idols are broke in the temple of Baal:

And the might of the Gentile, unsmote by the sword,

Hath melted like snow in the glance of the Lord!

Heed not the corse, though a king's, in your path:

Should the soldiers of Saul look away from the foe.

STANZAS FOR MUSIC

"O Lachrymarum fons, tenero sacros Ducentium ortus ex animo : quater Felix! in imo qui scatentem Pectore te, pia Nympha, sensit."
GRAY'S Poemata.

THERE'S not a joy the world can give like that it takes away,

When the glow of early thought declines in feeling's dull decay;

'T is not on youth's smooth cheek the blush alone, which fades so fast,

But the tender bloom of heart is gone, ere youth itself be past.

Then the few whose spirits float above the wreck of happiness

Are driven o'er the shoals of guilt or ocean of excess:

The magnet of their course is gone, or only points in vain

The shore to which their shiver'd sail shall never stretch again.

Then the mortal coldness of the soul like death itself comes down;

It cannot feel for others' woes, it dare not dream its own;

That heavy chill has frozen o'er the fountain of our tears,

And though the eye may sparkle still, 't is where the ice appears.

Though wit may flash from fluent lips, and mirth distract the breast,

Through midnight hours that yield no more their former hope of rest; 'T is but as ivy-leaves around the ruin'd turret wreath,

All green and wildly fresh without, but worn and gray beneath.

Oh could I feel as I have felt,—or be what I have been,

Or weep as I could once have wept o'er many a vanish'd scene;

As springs in deserts found seem sweet, all brackish though they be,

So, midst the wither'd waste of life, those tears would flow to me.

Murch, 1815. 1816.

FARE THEE WELL

"Alas! they had been friends in youth; But whispering tongues can poison truth And constancy lives in realms above; And life is thorny; and youth is vain; And to be wroth with one we love, Doth work like madness in the brain;

But never either found another
To free the hollow heart from paining—
They stood aloof, the scars remaining,
Like cliffs which had been rent asunder;
A dreary sea now flows between,
But neither heat, not frost, nor thunder,
Shall wholly do away, I ween,
The marks of that which once hath been."

COLERIDE'S Christabel.

FARE thee well! and if for ever, Still for ever, fare thee well: Even though unforgiving, never 'Gainst thee shall my heart rebel.

Would that breast were bared before thee Where thy head so oft hath lain, While that placid sleep came o'er thee Which thou ne'er canst know again: Would that breast, by thee glanced over, Every immost thought could show! Then thou wouldst at last discover Twas not well to spurn it so.

Though the world for this commend thee-

Though it smile upon the blow, Even its praises must offend thee, Founded on another's woe:

Though my many faults defaced me, Could no other arm be found, Than the one which once embraced me, To inflict a cureless wound?

Yet, oh yet, thyself deceive not; Love may sink by slow decay, But by sudden wrench, believe not Hearts can thus be torn away:

Still thine own its life retaineth,
Still must mine, though bleeding, beat;
And the undying thought which paineth
Is—that we no more may meet.

These are words of deeper sorrow
Than the wail above the dead;
Both shall live, but every morrow
Wake us from a widow'd bed.

And when thou wouldst solace gather, When our child's first accents flow, Wilt thou teach her to say "Father!" Though his care she must forego?

When her little hands shall press thee,
When her lip to thine is press'd,
Think of him whose prayer shall bless
thee,
Think of him thy love had bless'd!

Should her lineaments resemble
Those thou never more may'st see,
Then thy heart will softly tremble
With a pulse yet true to me.

All my faults perchance thou knowest,
All my madness none can know;
All my hopes, where'er thou goest,
Wither, yet with thee they go.

Every feeling hath been shaken;
Pride, which not a world could bow,
Bows to thee—by thee forsaken,
Even my soul forsakes me now:

But 't is done—all words are idle— Words from me are vainer still; But the thoughts we cannot bridle Force their way without the will. Fare thee well! thus disunited,
Torn from every nearer tie,
Sear'd in heart, and lone, and blighted,
More than this I scarce can die.

STANZAS FOR MUSIC

THERE be none of Beauty's daughters
With a magic like thee;
And like music on the waters
Is thy sweet voice to me:
When, as if its sound were causing
The charmed ocean's pausing,
The waves lie still and gleaming,
And the lull'd winds seem dreaming:

And the midnight moon is weaving
Her bright chain o'er the deep;
Whose breast is gently heaving,
As an infant's asleep:
So the spirit bows before thee,
To listen and adore thee;
With a full but soft emotion,
Like the swell of Summer's ocean.

CHILDE HAROLD'S PILGRIMAGE CANTO THE THIRD

"Afin que cette application vous forçât de penser à autre chose ; il n'y a eu vérité de remède que celui-là et le temps." Lettre du Roi de Prusse à D'Alembert, Sept. 7, 1776.

Is thy face like thy mother's, my fair child!

ADA! sole daughter of my house and heart?

When last I saw thy young blue eyes they smiled,

And then we parted,—not as now we part,

But with a hope.—

Awaking with a start,
The waters heave around me; and on high

The winds lift up their voices: I depart, Whither I know not; but the hour's gone by,

When Albion's lessening shores could grieve or glad mine eye.

Once more upon the waters! yet once more!

And the waves bound beneath me as a steed

That knows his rider. Welcome to their roar!

Swift be their guidance, wheresoe'er it lead!

Though the strain'd mast should quiver as a reed,

And the rent canvas fluttering strew the gale,

Still must I on; for I am as a weed, Flung from the rock, on Ocean's foam to Where'er the surge may sweep, the tempest's breath prevail.

In my youth's summer I did sing of One, The wandering outlaw of his own dark mind;

Again I seize the theme, then but begun, And bear it with me, as the rushing wind

Bears the cloud onwards: in that Tale I

The furrows of long thought, and driedup tears.

Which, ebbing, leave a sterile track be-

O'er which all heavily the journeying years

Plod the last sands of life,—where not a flower appears.

Since my young days of passion—joy, or pain,

Perchance my heart and harp have lost a string,

And both may jar: it may be, that in vain I would essay as I have sung to sing.

Yet, though a dreary strain, to this I cling;

So that it wean me from the weary dream Of selfish grief or gladness—so it fling Forgetfulness around me—it shall seem To me, though to none else, a not ungrateful theme.

He, who grown aged in this world of woe,

In deeds, not years, piercing the depths of life.

So that no wonder waits him; nor below Can love or sorrow, fame, ambition, strife.

Cut to his heart again with the keen

Of silent, sharp endurance: he can tell Why thought seeks refuge in lone caves, yet rife

With airy images, and shapes which dwell

Still unimpair'd, though old, in the soul's haunted cell.

T is to create, and in creating live A being more intense that we endow With form our fancy, gaining as we give The life we image, even as I do now. What am I? Nothing: but not so art thou.

Soul of my thought! with whom I traverse earth.

Invisible but gazing, as I glow Mix'd with thy spirit, blended with thy

And feeling still with thee in my crush'd feelings' dearth.

Yet must I think less wildly :- I have thought

Too long and darkly, till my brain became.

In its own eddy boiling and o'erwrought, A whirling gulf of phantasy and flame: And thus, untaught in youth my heart to tame,

My springs of life were poison'd. 'T is too late!

Yet am I changed; though still enough the same

In strength to bear what time cannot abate.

And feed on bitter fruits without accusing Fate.

Something too much of this:-but now 't is past.

And the spell closes with its silent seal. Long absent HAROLD re-appears at last; He of the breast which fain no more would feel.

Wrung with the wounds which kill not but ne'er heal:

Yet Time, who changes all, had alter'd him

In soul and aspect as in age: years steal Fire from the mind as vigor from the

And life's enchanted cup but sparkles near the brim.

His had been quaff'd too quickly, and he found

The dregs were wormwood,-but he fill'd again,

And from a purer fount, on holier ground And deem'd its spring perpetual: but in vain!

Still round him clung invisibly a chain Which gall'd for ever, fettering though

And heavy though it clank'd not; worn with pain,

Which pined although it spoke not, and grew keen,

Entering with every step he took through many a scene.

Secure in guarded coldness, he had mix'd Again in fancied safety with his kind. And deem'd his spirit now so firmly fix'd And sheath'd with an invulnerable mind, That, if no joy, no sorrow lurk'd behind;

And he, as one, might 'midst the many stand

Unheeded, searching through the crowd to find

Fit speculation; such as in strange land He found in wonder-works of God and Nature's hand.

But who can view the ripen'd rose, nor seek

To wear it? who can curiously behold The smoothness and the sheen of beauty's cheek.

Nor feel the heart can never all grow old?

Who can contemplate Fame through clouds unfold

The star which rises o'er her steep, nor climb?

Harold, once more within the vortex, roll'd

On with the giddy circle, chasing Time, Yet with a nobler aim than in his youth's fond prime.

But soon he knew himself the most unfit Of men to herd with Man: with whom he

Little in common; untaught to submit His thoughts to others, though his soul was quell'd

In youth by his own thoughts; still uncompell'd,

He would not yield dominion of his mind

To spirits against whom his own rebell'd; Proud though in desolation; which could find

A life within itself, to breathe without mankind.

Where rose the mountains, there to him were friends:

Where roll'd the ocean, thereon was his home:

Where a blue sky, and glowing clime, extends.

He had the passion and the power to roam:

The desert, forest, cavern, breaker's foam, Were unto him companionship; they spake

A mutual language, clearer than the tome

Of his land's tongue, which he would oft forsake

For Nature's pages glass'd by sunbeams on the lake.

Like the Chaldean, he could watch the stars,

Till he had peopled them with beings bright

As their own beams; and earth, and earthborn jars,

And human frailties, were forgotten quite:

Could he have kept his spirit to that flight He had been happy; but this clay will sink

Its spark immortal, envying it the light To which it mounts, as if to break the

That keeps us from yon heaven which woos us to its brink.

But in Man's dwellings he became a thing

Restless and worn, and stern and wearisome, .

Droop'd as a wild-born falcon with clipt wing,

To whom the boundless air alone were home:

Then came his fit again, which to o'ercome,

As eagerly the barr'd-up bird will beat His breast and beak against his wiry dome

Till the blood tinge his plumage, so the

Of his impeded soul would through his bosom eat.

Self-exiled Harold wanders forth again, With nought of hope left, but with less of gloom;

The very knowledge that he lived in vain,
That all was over on this side the tomb,
Had made Despair a smilingness assume,
Which, though 't were wild,—as on the plunder'd wreck

When mariners would madly meet their doom

With draughts intemperate on the sinking deck,—

Did yet inspire a cheer, which he forbore to check.

Stop!—for thy tread is on an Empire's dust!

An Earthquake's spoil is sepulchred below!

Is the spot mark'd with no colossal bust? Nor column trophied for triumphal show? None; but the moral's truth tells simpler

As the ground was before, thus let it be:—

How that red rain hath made the harvest grow!

And is this all the world has gain'd by thee,

Thou first and last of fields! king-making Victory?

And Harold stands upon this place of skulls,

The grave of France, the deadly Water-loo!

How in an hour the power which gave annuls

Its gifts, transferring fame as fleeting too;

In "pride of place" here last the eagle flew,

Then tore with bloody talon the rent plain,

Pierced by the shaft of banded nations through;

Ambition's life and labors all were vain; He wears the shatter'd links of the world's broken chain.

Fit retribution! Gaul may champ the

And foam in fetters;—but is Earth more free?

Did nations combat to make One submit;

Or league to teach all kings true sovereignty?

What! shall reviving Thraldom again be

The patch'd-up idol of enlighten'd days? Shall we, who struck the Lion down, shall we

Pay the Wolf homage? proffering lowly gaze

And servile knees to thrones? No; prove before ye praise!

If not, o'er one fallen despot boast no more!

In vain fair cheeks were furrow'd with hot tears

For Europe's flowers long rooted up before

The trampler of her vineyards; in vain years

Of death, depopulation, bondage, fears, Have all been borne, and broken by the accord

Of roused-up millions; all that most endears

Glory, is when the myrtle wreathes a sword

Such as Harmodius drew on Athens' tyrant lord.

There was a sound of revelry by night And Belgium's capital had gather'd then

Her Beauty and her Chivalry, and bright The lamps shone o'er fair women and brave men:

A thousand hearts beat happily; and when

Music arose with its voluptuous swell, Soft eyes look'd love to eyes which spake again,

And all went merry as a marriage bell; But hush! hark! a deep sound strikes like a rising knell!

Did ye not hear it?—No; 'twas but the wind.

Or the car rattling o'er the stony street;

On with the dance! let joy be unconfined;

No sleep till morn, when Youth and Pleasure meet

To chase the glowing Hours with flying feet— But hark!—that heavy sound breaks in

once more,

As if the clouds its echo would repeat; And nearer, clearer, deadlier than before!

Arm! Arm! it is—it is—the cannon's opening roar!

Within a window'd niche of that high

Sate Brunswick's fated chieftain; he did hear

That sound the first amidst the festival.

And caught its tone with Death's prophetic ear;

And when they smiled because he deem'd it near,

His heart more truly knew that peal too well

Which stretch'd his father on a bloody bier,

And roused the vengeance blood alone could quell;

He rush'd into the field, and, foremost fighting, fell.

Ah! then and there was hurrying to and fro,

And gathering tears, and tremblings of distress,

And cheeks all pale, which but an hour ago

Blush'd at the praise of their own loveliness;

And there were sudden partings, such as press
The life from out young hearts, and choking sighs

Which ne'er might be repeated; who could guess

If ever more should meet those mutual eyes, Since upon night so sweet such awful morn could rise!

And there was mounting in hot haste:

the steed,
The mustering squadron, and the clat-tering car,

Went pouring forward with impetuous speed,

And swiftly forming in the ranks of war:

And the deep thunder peal on peal afar; And near, the beat of the alarming drum

Roused up the soldier ere the morning star;

While throng'd the citizens with terror dumb,

Or whispering, with white lips—"The foe, they come! they come!"

And wild and high the "Cameron's gathering" rose!
The war-note of Lochiel, which Albyn's

hills
Have heard, and heard, too, have her

Saxon foes:—
How in the noon of night that pibroch

thrills,
Savage and shrill! But with the breath which fills Their mountain-pipe, so fill the mountaineers

With the fierce native daring which instils

The stirring memory of a thousand years,

And Evan's, Donald's fame rings in each clansman's ears:

And Ardennes waves above them her green leaves.

Dewy with nature's tear-drops as they

pass

Grieving, if aught inanimate e'er grieves, Over the unreturning brave,—alas! Ere evening to be trodden like the grass Which now beneath them, but above

shall grow

In its next verdure, when this fiery mass. Of living valor, rolling on the foe

And burning with high hope shall moulder cold and low.

Last noon beheld them full of lusty life, Last eve in Beauty's circle proudly gay, The midnight brought the signal-sound of strife.

The morn the marshalling in arms,-

the day

Battle's magnificently stern array!

The thunder-clouds close o'er it, which when rent

The earth is cover'd thick with other clay,

Which her own clay shall cover, heap'd and pent,

Rider and horse,—friend, foe,—in one red burial blent!

Their praise is hymn'd by loftier harps than mine:

Yet one I would select from that proud throng,

Partly because they blend me with his line,

And partly that I did his sire some wrong, And partly that bright names will hallow song:

And his was of the bravest, and when shower'd

The death-bolts deadliest the thinn'd files along, Even where the thickest of war's tempest lower'd,

They reach'd no nobler breast than thine,
young gallant Howard!

There have been tears and breaking hearts for thee,

And mine were nothing had I such to give;

But when I stood beneath the fresh green tree,

Which living waves where thou didst cease to live,

And saw around me the wide field revive With fruits and fertile promise, and the Spring Came forth her work of gladness to contrive,

With all her reckless birds upon the wing,

I turn'd from all she brought to those she could not bring.

I turn'd to thee, to thousands, of whom each

And one as all a ghastly gap did make In his own kind and kindred, whom to teach

Forgetfulness were mercy for their sake;
The Archangel's trump, not Glory's, must awake

Those whom they thirst for; though the sound of Fame

May for a moment soothe, it cannot slake

The fever of vain longing, and the name So honor'd but assumes a stronger, bitterer claim.

They mourn, but smile at length; and, smiling, mourn:

The tree will wither long before it fall;
The hull drives on, though mast and sail be torn;

The roof-tree sinks, but moulders on the hall

In massy hoariness; the ruin'd wall Stands when its wind-worn battlements are gone;

The bars survive the captive they enthral;

The day drags through, though storms keep out the sun;

And thus the heart will break, yet brokenly live on:

Even as a broken mirror, which the glass In every fragment multiplies; and makes A thousand images of one that was,

The same, and still the more, the more it breaks;

And thus the heart will do which not forsakes,

Living in shatter'd guise; and still, and cold,

And bloodless, with its sleepless sorrow aches,

Yet withers on till all without is old, Showing no visible sign, for such things are untold.

There is a very life in our despair, Vitality of poison,—a quick root Which feeds these deadly branches; for it were As nothing did we die : but Life will suit Itself to Sorrow's most detested fruit,

Like to the apples on the Dead Sea's

All ashes to the taste: Did man compute Existence by enjoyment, and count o'er Such hours 'gainst years of life,—say, would he name threescore?

The Psalmist number'd out the years of

They are enough; and if thy tale be true.

Thou, who didst grudge him even that fleeting span,

More than enough, thou fatal Waterloo! Millions of tongues record thee, and

Their children's lips shall echo them. and sav-

"Here, where the sword united nations

Our countrymen were warring on that day!"

And this is much, and all which will not pass away.

There sunk the greatest, nor the worst of men.

Whose spirit, antithetically mixt,

One moment of the mightiest, and again On little objects with like firmness fixt: Extreme in all things! hadst thou been betwixt,

Thy throne had still been thine, or never been:

For daring made thy rise as fall: thou seek'st

Even now to re-assume the imperial mien.

And shake again the world, the Thunderer of the scene!

Conqueror and captive of the earth art thou!

She trembles at thee still, and thy wild

Was ne'er more bruited in men's minds than now

That thou art nothing, save the jest of Fame,

Who woo'd thee once, thy vassal, and became

The flatterer of thy fierceness, till thou wert

A god unto thyself; nor less the same To the astounded kingdoms all inert.

Who deem'd thee for a time whate'er thou didst assert.

Oh, more or less than man-in high or

Battling with nations, flying from the field:

Now making monarchs' necks thy footstool, now More than thy meanest soldier taught to yield:

An empire thou couldst crush, command, rebuild.

But govern not thy pettiest passion, nor, However deeply in men's spirits skill'd. Look through thine own, nor curb the lust of war. Nor learn that tempted Fate will leave the loftiest star. Yet well thy soul hath brook'd the turning tide

With that untaught innate philosophy, Which, be it wisdom, coldness, or deep pride.

Is gall and wormwood to an enemy.

When the whole host of hatred stood hard by,

To watch and mock thee shrinking, thou hast smiled

With a sedate and all-enduring eye: When Fortune fled her spoil'd and favorite child,

He stood unbow'd beneath the ills upon him piled.

Sager than in thy fortunes; for in them Ambition steel'd thee on too far to show That just habitual scorn, which could contemn

Men and their thoughts; 'twas wise to feel, not so

To wear it ever on thy lip and brow,

And spurn the instruments thou wert to

Till they were turn'd unto thine overthrow:

'Tis but a worthless world to win or lose; So hath it proved to thee, and all such lot who choose.

If, like a tower upon a headland rock, Thou hadst been made to stand or fall alone. Such scorn of man had help'd to brave

the shock

But men's thoughts were the steps which paved thy throne,

Their admiration thy best weapon shone; The part of Philip's son was thine, not then

(Unless aside thy purple had been thrown)

Like stern Diogenes to mock at men;
For sceptred cynics earth were far too wide a den.

But quiet to quick bosoms is a hell, And there hath been thy bane; there is a

And motion of the soul which will not

In its own narrow being, but aspire Beyond the fitting medium of desire;

And, but once kindled, quenchless evermore,

Preys upon high adventure, nor can tire Of aught but rest; a fever at the core, Fatal to him who bears, to all who ever bore.

This makes the madmen who have made men mad

By their contagion; Conquerors and Kings,

Founders of sects and systems, to whom add

Sophists, Bards, Statesmen, all unquiet things

Which stir too strongly the soul's secret springs.

And are themselves the fools to those they fool;

Envied, yet how unenviable! what stings Are theirs! One breast laid open were a school

Which would unteach mankind the lust to shine or rule:

Their breath is agitation, and their life A storm whereon they ride, to sink at last,

And yet so nursed and bigoted to strife, That should their days, surviving perils

Melt to calm twilight, they feel overcast With sorrow and supineness, and so die; Even as a flame unfed, which runs to waste

With its own flickering, or a sword laid by,

Which eats into itself, and rusts ingloriously.

He who ascends to mountain-tops, shall find

The loftiest peaks most wrapt in clouds and snow;

He who surpasses or subdues mankind

Must look down on the hate of those below.

Though high above the sun of glory glow,

And far beneath the earth and ocean spread,

Round him are icy rocks, and loudly blow Contending tempests on his naked head, And thus reward the toils which to those summits led.

Away with these! true Wisdom's world will be

Within its own creation, or in thine, Maternal Nature! for who teems like

Thus on the banks of thy majestic Rhine? There Harold gazes on a work divine,

A blending of all beauties; streams and dells.

Fruit, foliage, crag, wood, cornfield, mountain, vine,

And chiefless castles breathing stern farewells

From gray but leafy walls, where Ruin greenly dwells.

And there they stand, as stands a lofty mind,

Worn, but unstooping to the baser crowd, All tenantless, save to the crannying wind,

Or holding dark communion with the cloud.

There was a day when they were young and proud;

Banners on high, and battles pass'd below;

But they who fought are in a bloody shroud,

And those which waved are shredless dust ere now,

And the bleak battlements shall bear no future blow.

Beneath those battlements, within those walls,

Power dwelt amidst her passions; in proud state

Each robber chief upheld his armed halls, Doing his evil will, nor less elate

Than mightier heroes of a longer date.
What want these outlaws conquerors should have

But history's purchased page to call them great?

A wider space, an ornamented grave?
Their hopes were not less warm, their souls were full as brave.

In their baronial feuds and single fields, What deeds of prowess unrecorded died! And Love, which lent a blazon to their shields. With emblems well devised by amorous pride.

Through all the mail of iron hearts would glide;

But still their flame was fierceness, and drew on

Keen contest and destruction near allied. And many a tower for some fair mischief won.

Saw the discolor'd Rhine beneath its ruin run.

But Thou, exulting and abounding river!

Making thy waves a blessing as they flow

Through banks whose beauty would endure for ever

Could man but leave thy bright creation so.

Nor its fair promise from the surface mow

With the sharp scythe of conflict,then to see

Thy valley of sweet waters, were to Earth paved like Heaven; and to seem such to me, Even now what wants thy stream? that it should Lethe be.

A thousand battles have assail'd thy banks.

But these and half their fame have pass'd away, And Slaughter heap'd on high his welter-

ing ranks: Their very graves are gone, and what are they? Thy tide wash'd down the blood of yesterday, And all was stainless, and on thy clear

Glass'd, with its danc he earht, the sunny ray; But o'er the blacken'd memory's builded ing dream

Thy waves would vainly roll, all sweeping as they seem.

Thus Harold inly said, and pass'd along, Yet not insensible to all which here

Awoke the jocund birds to early song In glens which might have made even exile dear:

Though on his brow were graven lines austere,

And tranquil sternness, which had ta'en the place

Of feelings fierier far but less severe. Joy was not always absent from his face. But o'er it in such scenes would steal with transient trace.

Nor was all love shut from him, though his days

Of passion had consumed themselves to dust.

It is in vain that we would coldly gaze On such as smile upon us; the heart

Leap kindly back to kindness, though disgust Hath wean'd it from all worldlings: thus he felt.

For there was soft remembrance, and sweet trust

In one fond breast, to which his own would melt.

And in its tenderer hour on that his bosom dwelt.

And he had learn'd to love,—I know not why,

For this in such as him seems strange of mood.-

The helpless looks of blooming infancy, Even in its earliest nurture; what subdued, To change like this, a mind so far imbued

With scorn of man, it little boots to know:

But thus it was: and though in solitude Small power the nipp'd affections have to grow.

In him this glow'd when all beside had ceased to glow.

And there was one soft breast, as hath been said.

Which unto his was bound by stronger ties

Than the church links withal; and, though unwed,

Inc. love was pure, and, far above disguise,

Had stood the test of mortal enmities Still undivided, and cemented more

By peril, dreaded most in female eyes; But this was firm, and from a foreign shore Well to that heart might his these absent greetings pour!

The castled crag of Drachenfels Frowns o'er the wide and winding Rhine,

Whose breast of waters broadly swells Between the banks which bear the vine.

And hills all rich with blossom'd trees, And fields which promise corn and wine.

And scatter'd cities crowning these, Whose far white walls along them shine.

Have strew'd a scene, which I should

With double joy wert thou with me.

And peasant girls, with deep blue eyes,

And hands which offer early flowers, Walk smiling o'er this paradise; Above, the frequent feudal towers Through green leaves lift their walls of gray;

And many a rock which steeply lowers,

And noble arch in proud decay, Look o'er this vale of vintage-bowers; But one thing want these banks of

Rhine,—
Thy gentle hand to clasp in mine!

I send the lilies given to me;
Though long before thy hand they touch,

I know that they must wither'd be, But yet reject them not as such; For I have cherish'd them as dear, Because they yet may meet thine eye, And guide thy soul to mine even here, When thou behold'st them drooping nigh,

And know'st them gather'd by the Rhine.

And offer'd from my heart to thine!

The river nobly foams and flows, The charm of this enchanted ground, And all its thousand turns disclose Some fresher beauty varying rous. The haughtiest breast its wish might bound

Through life to dwell delighted here; Nor could on earth a spot be found To nature and to me so dear, Could thy dear eyes in following mine Still sweeten more these banks of Rhine!

By Coblentz, on a rise of gentle ground, There is a small and simple pyramid, Crowning the summit of the verdant mound; Beneath its base are heroes' ashes hid, Our enemy's—but let not that forbid

Honor to Marceau! o'er whose early tomb

Tears, big tears, gush'd from the rough soldier's lid,

Lamenting and yet envying such a doom,

Falling for France, whose rights he battled to resume.

Brief, brave, and glorious was his young

His mourners were two hosts, his friends and foes;

And fitly may the stranger lingering here

Pray for his gallant spirit's bright repose; For he was Freedom's champion, one of those,

The few in number, who had not o'erstept

The charter to chastise which she bestows

On such as wield her weapons; he had kept

The whiteness of his soul, and thus men o'er him wept.

Here Ehrenbreitstein, with her shatter'd wall

Black with the miner's blast, upon her height

Yet shows of what she was, when shell and ball

Rebounding idly on her strength did light:

A tower of victory! from whence the flight

Of baffled foes was watch'd along the plain:

And laifoud st proud roofs bare to Sumacn robb's rain—

In which the iron shower for years had pour'd in vain.

Adieu to thee, fair Rhine! How long delighted

The stranger fain would linger on his way!

Thine is a scene alike where souls united Or lonely Contemplation thus might stray;

And could the ceaseless vultures cease to prey

On self-condemning bosoms, it were here,

Where Nature, nor too sombre nor too

Wild but not rude, awful yet not austere, Is to the mellow Earth as Autumn to the year.

Adieu to thee again! a vain adieu!
There can be no farewell to scene like thine:

The mind is color'd by thy every hue; And if reluctantly the eyes resign

Their cherish'd gaze upon thee, lovely Rhine!

'T is with the thankful heart of parting praise;

More mighty spots may rise, more glaring shine,

But none unite in one attaching maze
The brilliant, fair, and soft,—the glories of old days,

The negligently grand, the fruitful bloom

Of coming ripeness, the white city's sheen,

The rolling stream, the precipice's gloom,

The forest's growth, and Gothic walls between.

The wild rocks shaped as they had turrets been,

In mockery of man's art; and these withal

A race of faces happy as the scene, Whose fertile bounties here extend to all, Still springing o'er thy banks, though Empires near them fall.

But these recede. Above me are the Alps,

The palaces of Nature, whose vast walls Have pinnacled in clouds their snowy scalps,

And throned Eternity in icy halls
Of cold sublimity, where forms and falls
The avalanche—the thunderbolt of snow!

All that expands the spirit, yet appalls, Gather around these summits, as to show

How Earth may pierce to Heaven, yet leave vain man below.

But ere these matchless heights I dare to scan,

There is a spot should not be pass'd in vain.—

Morat! the proud, the patriot field! where man

May gaze on ghastly trophies of the slain, Nor blush for those who conquer'd on that plain;

Here Burgundy bequeath'd his tombless host,

A bony heap, through ages to remain, Themselves their monument; — the Stygian coast

Unsepulchred they roam'd, and shriek'd each wandering ghost.

While Waterloo with Cannæ's carnage vies,

Morat and Marathon twin names shall stand;

They were true Glory's stainless victories,

Won by the unambitious heart and hand

Of a proud, brotherly, and civic band, All unbought champions in no princely

Of vice-entail'd Corruption; they no land

Doom'd to bewail the blasphemy of laws

Making kings' rights divine, by some Draconic clause.

By a lone wall a lonelier column rears
A gray and grief-worn aspect of old days;

'T is the last remnant of the wreck of years,

And looks as with the wild-bewilder'd gaze

Of one to stone converted by amaze, Yet still with consciousness; and there it stands

Making a marvel that it not decays, When the coeval pride of human hands, Levell'd Adventicum, hath strew'd her subject lands.

And there—oh! sweet and sacred be the name!—

Julia—the daughter, the devoted—gave Her youth to Heaven; her heart, beneath a claim

Nearest to Heaven's, broke o'er a father's grave.

Justice is sworn 'gainst tears, and hers would crave

The life she lived in; but the judge was

And then she died on him she could not save.

¹The Roman capital of Helvetia; now Aven-

Their tomb was simple, and without

And held within their urn one mind, one heart, one dust.

But these are deeds which should not pass away,

And names that must not wither, though the earth

Forgets her empires with a just decay, The enslavers and the enslaved, their death and birth:

The high, the mountain-majesty of worth Should be, and shall, survivor of its woe, And from its immortality look forth In the sun's face, like yonder Alpine

snow,
Imperishably pure beyond all things
below.

Lake Leman woos me with its crystal face,

The mirror where the stars and mountains view

The stillness of their sspectin each trace
Its clear depth yields of their far height and hue;

There is too much of man here, to look through

With a fit mind the might which I behold;

But soon in me shall Loneliness renew Thoughts hid, but not less cherish'd than of old,

Ere mingling with the herd had penn'd me in their fold.

To fly from, need not be to hate, mankind:

All are not fit with them to stir and toil, Nor is it discontent to keep the mind Deep in its fountain, lest it overboil In the hot throng, where we become the spoil

Of our infection, till too late and long We may deplore and struggle with the coil,

In wretched interchange of wrong for wrong

Midst a contentious world, striving where none are strong.

There, in a moment we may plunge our years

In fatal penitence, and in the blight
Of our own soul turn all our blood to tears,

And color things to come with hues of Night;

The race of life becomes a hopeless flight

To those who walk in darkness: on the sea

The boldest steer but where their ports invite;

But there are wanderers o'er Eternity Whose bark drives on and on, and anchor'd ne'er shall be.

Is it not better, then, to be alone,
And love Earth only for its earthly sake?
By the blue rushing of the arrowy Fhone,
Or the pure bosom of its nursing lake,
Which feeds it as a mother who doth

A fair but froward infant her own care, Kissing its cries away as these awake;—Is it not better thus our lives to wear, Than join the crushing crowd, doom'd to inflict or bear?

I live not in myself, but I become Portion of that around me; and to me High mountains are a feeling, but the hum

Of human cities torture: I can see Nothing to loathe in nature, save to be A link reluctant in a fleshly chain, Class'd among creatures, when the soul can flee,

And with the sky, the peak, the heaving

Of ocean, or the stars, mingle, and not in vain.

And thus I am absorb'd, and this is life: I look upon the peopled desert past, As on a place of agony and strife,

Where, for some sin, to sorrow I was cast,

To act and suffer, but remount at last
With a fresh pinion; which I feel to spring,

Though young, yet waxing vigorous as the blast

Which it would cope with, on delighted wing,

Spurning the clay-cold bonds which round our being cling.

And when, at length, the mind shall be all free

From what it hates in this degraded form.

Reft of its carnal life, save what shall be Existent happier in the fly and worm—When elements to elements conform. And dust is as it should be, shall I not Feel all I see, less dazzling, but more warm?

The bodiless thought? the Spirit of each

Of which, even now, I share at times the immortal lot?

Are not the mountains, waves, and skies. a part

Of me and of my soul, as I of them? Is not the love of these deep in my heart With a pure passion? should I not con-

All objects, if compared with these? and stem

A tide of suffering, rather than forego Such feelings for the hard and worldly phlegm

Of those whose eyes are only turn'd below,

Gazing upon the ground, with thoughts which dare not glow?

But this is not my theme; and I return To that which is immediate, and require Those who find contemplation in the urn, To look on One, whose dust was once all fire,

A native of the land where I respire The clear air for a while—a passing guest Where he became a being,—whose desire Was to be glorious; 't was a foolish quest.

The which to gain and keep, he sacrificed

all rest.

Here the self-torturing sophist, wild Rousseau.

The apostle of affliction, he who threw Enchantment over passion, and from woe Wrung overwhelming eloquence, first drew

The breath which made him wretched; vet he knew

How to make madness beautiful and cast O'er erring deeds and thoughts a heavenly hue

Of words, like sunbeams, dazzling as they past

The eyes, which o'er them shed tears feelingly and fast.

His love was passion's essence :—as a tree On fire by lightning, with ethereal flame Kindled he was, and blasted; for to be Thus, and enamor'd, were in him the same.

But his was not the love of living dame, Nor of the dead who rise upon our dreams,

But of ideal beauty, which became In him existence, and o'erflowing teems Along his burning page, distemper'd though it seems.

This breathed itself to life in Julie, this Invested her with all that's wild and sweet:

This hallow'd, too, the memorable kiss Which every morn his fever'd lip woul | greet,

From hers, who but with friendship his would meet;

But to that gentle touch through brain and breast

Flash'd the thrill'd spirit's love-devouring heat:

In that absorbing sigh perchance more blest

Than vulgar minds may be with all they seek possest.

His life was one long war with selfsought foes.

Or friends by him self-banish'd; for his mind

Had grown Suspicion's sanctuary, and chose.

For its own cruel sacrifice, the kind, 'Gainst whom he raged with fury strange and blind. But he was phrensied,—wherefore, who may know? Since cause might be which skill could never find:

But he was phrensied by disease or woe, To that worst pitch of all, which wears a reasoning show.

For then he was inspired, and from him came.

As from the Pythian's mystic cave of yore,

Those oracles which set the world in flame,

Nor ceased to burn till kingdoms were no more:

Did he not this for France? which lay before

Bow'd to the inborn tyranny of years? Broken and trembling to the yoke she bore.

Till by the voice of him and his compeers Roused up to too much wrath, which follows o'ergrown fears?

They made themselves a fearful monument!

wreck of old opinions - things The which grew.

Breathed from the birth of time: the veil they rent,
And what behind it lay, all earth shall view.

But good with ill they also overthrew, Leaving but ruins, wherewith to rebuild Upon the same foundation, and renew Dungeons and thrones, which the same hour refill'd,

As heretofore, because ambition was selfwill'd.

But this will not endure, nor be endured! Mankind have felt their strength, and made it felt.

They might have used it better, but,

allured

By their new vigor, sternly have they

On one another: pity ceased to melt

With her once natural charities. But they.

Who in oppression's darkness caved had dwelt,

They were not eagles, nourish'd with the day: What marvel then, at times, if they mistook their prey?

What deep wounds ever closed without a scar?

The heart's bleed longest, and but heal to wear

That which disfigures it; and they who

With their own hopes, and have been vanquish'd, bear

Silence, but not submission: in his lair

Fix'd Passion holds his breath, until the hour

Which shall atone for years; none need despair:

It came, it cometh, and will come. the power

To punish or forgive-in one we shall be slower.

Clear, placid Leman! thy contrasted lake,

With the wild world I dwelt in, is a thing

Which warns me, with its stillness, to forsake

Earth's troubled waters for a purer spring.

This quiet sail is as a noiseless wing To waft me from distraction; once I loved

Torn ocean's roar, but thy soft murmuring

Sounds sweet as if a Sister's voice re proved,

That I with stern delights should e'er have been so moved.

It is the hush of night, and all between Thy margin and the mountains, dusk, yet clear,

Mellow'd and mingling, yet distinctly

Save darken'd Jura, whose capt heights appear Precipitously steep; and drawing near, There breathes a living fragrance from the shore. Of flowers yet fresh with childhood; on the ear

Drops the light drip of the suspended

oar. Or chirps the grasshopper one goodnight carol more;

He is an evening reveller, who makes His life an infancy, and sings his fill; At intervals, some bird from out the brakes

Starts into voice a moment, then is

There seems a floating whisper on the hill,

But that is fancy, for the starlight dews All silently their tears of love instil,

Weeping themselves away, till they infuse

Deep into nature's breast the spirit of her hues.

Ye stars! which are the poetry of heaven!

If in your bright leaves we would read the fate

Of men and empires,-'tis to be forgiven,

That in our aspirations to be great, Our destinies o'erleap their mortal state,

And claim a kindred with you; for ye

A beauty and a mystery, and create In us such love and reverence from afar,

That fortune, fame, power, life, have named themselves a star.

All heaven and earth are still—though not in sleep,

But breathless, as we grow when feeling most:

And silent, as we stand in thoughts too deep:—

All heaven and earth are still: From the high host

Of stars, to the hull'd lake and mountain coast,

All is concenter'd in a life intense, Where not a beam, nor air, nor leaf is lost, But hath a part of being, and a sense Of that which is of all Creator and defence.

Then stirs the feeling infinite, so felt In solitude, where we are least alone; A truth, which through our being then doth melt,

And purifies from self: it is a tone,
The soul and source of music, which makes known

Eternal harmony, and sheds a charm Like to the fabled Cytherea's zone, Binding all things with beauty:—

't would disarm

The spectre Death, had he substantial power to harm.

Not vainly did the early Persian make His altar the high places, and the peak Of earth-o'ergazing mountains, and thus take

A fit and unwall'd temple, there to seek The Spirit, in whose honor shrines are weak,

Uprear'd of human hands. Come, and compare

Columns and idol-dwellings, Goth or Greek,

With Nature's realms of worship, earth and air,

Nor fix on fond abodes to circumscribe thy prayer!

The sky is changed !—and such a change!
Oh night,

And storm, and darkness, ye are wondrous strong,

Yet lovely in your strength, as is the light

Of a dark eye in woman! Far along, From peak to peak, the rattling crags among Leaps the live thunder! Not from one lone cloud,

But every mountain now hath found a tongue,

And Jura answers, through her misty shroud.

Back to the joyous Alps, who call to her aloud!

And this is in the night:—Most glorious night!

Thou wert not sent for slumber! let me be

A sharer in thy fierce and far delight,— A portion of the tempest and of thee!

How the lit lake shines, a phosphoric sea,

And the big rain comes dancing to the earth!

And now again 'tis black,—and now, the

Of the loud hills shakes with its mountain-mirth,

As if they did rejoice o'er a young earthquake's birth.

Now, where the swift Rhone cleaves his way between

Heights which appear as lovers who have parted

In hate, whose mining depths so intervene,

That they can meet no more, though broken-hearted;
Though in their souls, which thus each other thwarted,

Love was the very root of the fond rage Which blighted their life's bloom, and then departed:

Itself expired, but leaving them an age Of years all winters,—war within themselves to wage:

Now, where the quick Rhone thus hath cleft his way,

The mightiest of the storms hath ta'en his stand:

For here, not one, but many, make their play,

And fling their thunder-bolts from hand to hand,

Flashing and cast around; of all the band,

The brightest through these parted hills hath fork'd

His lightnings,—as if he did understand, That in such gaps as desolation work'd. There the hot shaft should blast whatever therein lurk'd.

Sky, mountains, river, winds, lake, lightnings! ye!

With night, and clouds, and thunder, and a soul

To make these felt and feeling, well may be

Things that have made me watchful; the far roll

Of your departing voices, is the knoll Of what in me is sleepless,—if I rest.

But where of ye, O tempests! is the

Are ye like those within the human breast?

Or do ye find, at length, like eagles, some high nest?

Could I embody and unbosom now

That which is most within me,—could I wreak

My thoughts upon expression, and thus throw

Soul, heart, mind, passions, feelings, strong or weak,

All that I would have sought, and all I seek.

Bear, know, feel, and yet breathe—into one word,

And that one word were Lightning, I would speak;

But as it is, I live and die unheard, With a most voiceless thought, sheathing it as a sword.

The morn is up again, the dewy morn,
With breath all incense, and with cheek all bloom,

Laughing the clouds away with playful scorn,

And living as if earth contain'd no tomb,—

And glowing into day: we may resume
The march of our existence: and thus I,
Still on thy shores, fair Leman! may find room

And food for meditation, nor pass by Much, that may give us pause, if ponder'd fittingly.

Clarens! sweet Clarens, birthplace of deep Love!

Thine air is the young breath of passionate thought:

Thy trees take root in Love; the snows above

The very Glaciers have his colors caught,

And sunset into rose-hues sees them wrought

By rays which sleep there lovingly; the rocks.

The permanent crags, tell here of Love, who sought

In them a refuge from the worldly shocks,

Which stir and sting the soul with hope that woos, then mocks.

Clarens! by heavenly feet thy paths are trod,—

Undying Love's, who here ascends a throne

To which the steps are mountains; where the god

Is a pervading life and light,—so shown Not on those summits solely, nor alone In the still cave and forest; o'er the flower

His eye is sparkling, and his breath hath blown,

His soft and summer breath, whose tender power

Passes the strength of storms in their most desolate hour.

All things are here of him; from the black pines,

Which are his shade on high, and the loud roar

Of torrents, where he listeneth, to the vines

Which slope his green path downward to the shore,

Where the bow'd waters meet him, and adore.

Kissing his feet with murmurs; and the wood.

The covert of old trees, with trunks all hoar.

But light leaves, young as joy, stands where it stood,

Offering to him, and his, a populous solitude;

A populous solitude of bees and birds, And fairy-form'd and many color'd things,

Who worship him with notes more sweet than words,

And innocently open their glad wings, Fearless and full of life: the gush of springs,

And fall of lofty fountains, and the bend Of stirring branches, and the bud which brings

The swiftest thought of beauty, here extend,

Mingling, and made by Love, unto one mighty end.

He who hath loved not, here would learn that lore.

And make his heart a spirit; he who

That tender mystery, will love the more: For this is Love's recess, where vain men's woes,

And the world's waste, have driven him far from those,

For 't is his nature to advance or die; He stands not still, but or decays, or grows

Into a boundless blessing, which may vie With the immortal lights, in its eternity!

'T was not for fiction chose Rousseau this spot,

Peopling it with affections; but he found It was the scene which Passion must allot To the mind's purified beings; 't was the ground

Where early Love his Psyche's zone unbound.

And hallow'd it with loveliness; 't is lone, And wonderful, and deep, and hath a sound,

And sense, and sight of sweetness; here the Rhone

Hath spread himself a couch, the Alps have rear'd a throne.

Lausanne! and Ferney! ye have been the abodes

Of names which unto you bequeath'd a name:

Mortals, who sought and found, by dangerous roads,

A path to perpetuity of fame:

They were gigantic minds, and their steep aim

Was, Titan-like, on daring doubts to pile Thoughts which should call down thunder, and the flame

Of Heaven again assail'd, if Heaven the

On man and man's research could deign do more than smile.

The one 1 was fire and fickleness, a child Most mutable in wishes, but in mind

A wit as various,—gay, grave, sage, or wild,— Historian, bard, philosopher, combined;

He multiplied himself among mankind,
The Proteus of their talents: But his own Breathed most in ridicule,—which, as the wind,

Blew where it listed, laying all things prone,—

Now to o'erthrow a fool, and now to shake a throne.

The other,² deep and slow, exhausting thought,

Voltaire. Gibbon

And hiving wisdom with each studious year,

In meditation dwelt, with learning wrought,

And shaped his weapon with an edge severe, Sapping a solemn creed with solemn sneer;

The lord of irony,—that master-spell, Which stung his foes to wrath, which grew from fear,

And doom'd him to the zealot's ready Hell,

Which answers to all doubts so eloquently well.

Yet, peace be with their ashes,—for by them,

If merited, the penalty is paid;

It is not ours to judge,—far less condemn;

The hour must come when such things shall be made

Known unto all, or hope and dread allay'd

By slumber, on one pillow, in the dust, Which, thus much we are sure, must lie decay'd;

And when it shall revive, as is our trust,

'T will be to be forgiven, or suffer what is just.

But let me quit man's works, again to read

His Maker's, spread around me, and suspend

This page, which from my reveries I feed, Until it seems prolonging without end. The clouds above me to the white Alps tend,

And I must pierce them, and survey
whate'er

May be permitted, as my steps I bend To their most great and growing region, where

The earth to her embrace compels the powers of air.

Italia! too, Italia! looking on thee,
Full flashes on the soul the light of ages,
Since the fierce Carthaginian almost won thee,

To the last halo of the chiefs and sages
Who glorify thy consecrated pages;
They want the throne and grays

Thou wert the throne and grave of empires; still,

The fount at which the panting mind assuages

Her thirst of knowledge, quaffing there her fill,

Flows from the eternal source of Rome's imperial hill.

Thus far have I proceeded in a theme Renew'd with no kind auspices: to feel We are not what we have been, and to

We are not what we should be, and to steel

The heart against itself; and to conceal, What a proud caution, love, or hate, or aught.—

Passion or feeling, purpose, grief or zeal,—

Which is the tyrant spirit of our thought,

Is a stern task of soul:—No matter,—it is taught.

And for these words, thus woven into song,

It may be that they are a harmless wile,—

The coloring of the scenes which fleet along,

Which I would seize, in passing, to beguile

My breast, or that of others, for a while. Fame is the thirst of youth, but I am not

So young as to regard men's frown or smile,

As loss or guerdon of a glorious lot:

I stood and stand alone,—remember'd or forgot.

I have not loved the world, nor the world me;

I have not flatter'd its rank breath, nor bow'd

To its idolatries a patient knee,

Nor coin'd my cheek to smiles, nor cried aloud

In worship of an echo; in the crowd They could not deem me one of such; I stood

Among them, but not of them; in a shroud

Of thoughts which were not their thoughts, and still could,

Had I not filed my mind, which thus itself subdued.

I have not loved the world, nor the world me,—

But let us part fair foes; I do believe, Though I have found them not, that there may be Words which are things, hopes which will not deceive,

And virtues which are merciful, nor weave

Snares for the failing; I would also deem O'er others' griefs that some sincerely

O'er others' griefs that some sincerely grieve;

That two, or one, are almost what they seem,

That goodness is no name, and happiness no dream

My daughter! with thy name this song begun;

My daughter! with thy name thus much shall end;

I see thee not, I hear thee not, but none Can be so wrapt in thee; thou art the friend

To whom the shadows of far years extend;

Albeit my brow thou never shouldst behold,

My voice shall with thy future visions blend,

And reach into thy heart, when mine is cold,

A token and a tone, even from thy father's mould.

To aid thy mind's development, to watch Thy dawn of little joys, to sit and see Almost thy very growth, to view thee catch

Knowledge of objects,—wonders yet to

thee!
To hold thee lightly on a gentle knee.

And print on thy soft cheek a parent's kiss,—

This, it should seem, was not reserved for me;

Yet this was in my nature: as it is, I know not what is there, yet something like to this.

Yet, though dull Hate as duty should be taught,

I know that thou wilt love me; though my name

Should be shut from thee, as a spell still fraught

With desolation, and a broken claim; Though the grave closed between us,—

't were the same,
I know that thou wilt love me; though to drain

My blood from out thy being were an aim.

And an attainment,—all would be in vain .--

Still thou wouldst love me, still that more than life retain.

The child of love, though born in bitterness.

And nurtured in convulsion. Of thy sire These were the elements, and thine no

As yet such are around thee, but thy fire Shall be more temper'd, and thy hope far higher.

Sweet be thy cradled slumbers! O'er the sea.

And from the mountains where I now respire.

Fain would I waft such blessing upon

As with a sigh, I deem thou might'st have been to me.

SONNET ON CHILLON.

ETERNAL Spirit of the chainless Mind! Brightest in dungeons, Liberty! thouart, For there thy habitation is the heart-The heart which love of thee alone can

And when thy sons to fetters are con-

To fetters, and the damp vault's dayless gloom,

Their country conquers with their martyrdom,

And Freedom's fame finds wings on every wind.

Chillon! thy prison is a holy place, And thy sad floor an altar-for 't was

Until his very steps have left a trace Worn, as if thy cold pavement were a sod. By Bonnivard! May none those marks efface!

For they appeal from tyranny to God. June, 1816. December 5, 1816.

THE PRISONER OF CHILLON

My hair is gray, but not with years, Nor grew it white In a single night,

As men's have grown from sudden fears: My limbs are bow'd, though not with

But rusted with a vile repose,

For they have been a dungeon's spoil, And mine has been the fate of those To whom the goodly earth and air Are bann'd, and barr'd-forbidden fare But this was for my father's faith I suffer'd chains and courted death: That father perish'd at the stake For tenets he would not forsake: And for the same his lineal race In darkness found a dwelling-place: We were seven—who now are one. Six in youth, and one in age, Finish'd as they had begun, Proud of Persecution's rage: One in fire, and two in field Their belief with blood have seal'd, Dying as their father died, For the God their foes denied: Three were in a dungeon cast, Of whom this wreck is left the last.

There are seven pillars of Gothic mould, In Chillon's dungeons deep and old, There are seven columns, massy and gray, Dim with a dull imprison'd ray, A sunbeam which hath lost its way And through the crevice and the cleft Of the thick wall is fallen and left; Creeping o'er the floor so damp, Like a marsh's meteor lamp: And in each pillar there is a ring,

And in each ring there is a chain; That iron is a cankering thing, For in these limbs its teeth remain,

With marks that will not wear away, Till I have done with this new day, Which now is painful to these eyes, Which have not seen the sun so rise For years—I cannot count them o'er, I lost their long and heavy score, When my last brother droop'd and died And I lay living by his side.

They chain'd us each to a column stone And we were three—yet, each alone, We could not move a single pace, We could not see each other's face, But with that pale and livid light That made us strangers in our sight: And thus together—yet apart, Fetter'd in hand, but join'd in heart, 'T was still some solace, in the dearth Of the pure elements of earth, To hearken to each other's speech, And each turn comforter to each With some new hope, or legend old. Or song heroically bold; But even these at length grew cold. Our voices took a dreary tone, An echo of the dungeon stone,

A grating sound, not full and free, As they of yore were wont to be; It might be fancy, but to me They never sounded like our own.

I was the eldest of the three,
And to uphold and cheer the rest
I ought to do—and did my best—
And each did well in his degree.

The youngest, whom my father loved, Because our mother's brow was given To him, with eyes as blue as heaven—

For him my soul was sorely moved; And truly might it be distress'd To see such bird in such a nest; For he was beautiful as day—

(When day was beautiful to me As to young eagles, being free)— A polar day, which will not see A sunset till its summer's gone, Its sleepless summer of long light,

The snow-clad offspring of the sun:
And thus he was as pure and bright,
And in his natural spirit gay,
With tears for nought but others' ills,
And then they flow'd like mountain rills,
Unless he could assuage the woe
Which he abhorr'd to view below.

The other was as pure of mind,
But form'd to combat with his kind;
Strong in his frame, and of a mood
Which 'gainst the world in war had stood,

And perish'd in the foremost rank
With joy:—but not in chains to pine:
His spirit wither'd with their clank,

I saw it silently decline— And so perchance in sooth did mine: But yet I forced it on to cheer Those relics of a home so dear. He was a hunter of the hills,

Had follow'd there the deer and wolf;
To him his dungeon was a gulf,
And fetter'd feet the worst of ills.

Lake Leman lies by Chillon's walls: A thousand feet in depth below Its massy waters meet and flow; Thus much the fathom-line was sent From Chillon's snow-white battlement.

Which round about the wave inthrals: A double dungeon wall and wave Have made—and like a living grave Below the surface of the lake
The dark vault lies wherein we lay,
We heard it ripple night and day;

Sounding o'er our heads it knock'd; And I have felt the winter's spray Wash though the bars when winds were high

And wanton in the happy sky;
And then the very rock hathrock'd,
And I have felt it shake, unshock'd
Because I could have smiled to see
The death that would have set me free.

I said my nearer brother pined, I said his mighty heart declined, He loathed and put away his food: It was not that 'twas coarse and rude, For we were used to hunter's fare, And for the like had little care: The milk drawn from the mountain goat Was changed for water from the moat, Our bread was such as captives' tears Have moisten'd many a thousand years. Since man first pent his fellow men Like brutes within an iron den: But what were these to us or him? These wasted not his heart or limb; My brother's soul was of that mould Which in a palace had grown cold, Had his free breathing been denied The range of the steep mountain's side; But why delay the truth?—he died. I saw, and could not hold his head, Nor reach his dying hand—nor dead,— Though hard I strove, but strove in vain To rend and gnash my bonds in twain. He died, and they unlock'd his chain, And scoop'd for him a shallow grave Even from the cold earth of our cave, I begg'd them as a boon to lay His corse in dust whereon the day Might shine—it was a foolish thought, But then within my brain it wrought, That even in death his freeborn breast In such a dungeon could not rest. I might have spared my idle prayer— They coldly laugh'd, and laid him there: The flat and turfless earth above The being we so much did love; His empty chain above it leant. Such murder's fitting monument!

But he, the favorite and the flower, Most cherish'd since his natal hour, His mother's image in fair face, The infant love of all his race, His martyr'd father's dearest thought My latest care, for whom I sought To hoard my life, that his might be Less wretched now, and one day free; He, too, who yet had held untired A spirit natural or inspired—He, too, was struck, and day by day Was wither'd on the stalk away.

Oh, God! it is a fearful thing To see the human soul take wing In any shape, in any mood: I've seen it rushing forth in blood. I've seen it on the breaking ocean Strive with a swoln convulsive motion, I've seen the sick and ghastly bed Of Sin delirious with its dread; But these were horrors—this was woe Unmix'd with such—but sure and slow: He faded, and so calm and meek. So softly worn, so sweetly weak, So tearless, yet so tender, kind, And grieved for those he left behind; With all the while a cheek whose bloom Was as a mockery of the tomb, Whose tints as gently sunk away As a departing rainbow's ray; An eye of most transparent light, That almost made the dungeon bright, And not a word of murmur, not A groan o'er his untimely lot,-A little talk of better days, A little hope my own to raise, For I was sunk in silence—lost In this last loss, of all the most; And then the sighs he would suppress Of fainting nature's feebleness, More slowly drawn, grew less and less: I listen'd, but I could not hear ; I call'd, for I was wild with fear: I knew 't was hopeless, but my dread Would not be thus admonished; I call'd, and thought I heard a sound-I burst my chain with one strong bound, And rush'd to him :—I found him not, I only stirr'd in this black spot, I only lived, I only drew The accursed breath of dungeon-dew: The last, the sole, the dearest link Between me and the eternal brink, Which bound me to my failing race, Was broken in this fatal place. One on the earth, and one beneath— My brothers—both had ceased to breathe: I took that hand which lay so still, Alas! my own was full as chill; I had not strength to stir, or strive, But felt that I was still alive-A frantic feeling, when we know That what we love shall ne'er be so. I know not why I could not die.

I had no earthly hope but faith. And that forbade a selfish death.

What next befell me then and there I know not well--I never knew-First came the loss of light, and air,

And then of darkness too: I had no thought, no feeling-none-Among the stones I stood a stone. And was, scarce conscious what I wist, As shrubless crags within the mist; For all was blank, and bleak, and gray; It was not night, it was not day; It was not even the dungeon-light. So hateful to my heavy sight, But vacancy absorbing space, And fixedness without a place; There were no stars, no earth, no time, No check, no change, no good, no crime, But silence, and a stirless breath Which neither was of life nor death: A sea of stagnant idleness, Blind, boundless, mute, and motionless!

A light broke in upon my brain,— It was the carol of a bird; It ceased, and then it came again, The sweetest song ear ever heard, And mine was thankful till my eyes Ran over with the glad surprise, And they that moment could not see I was the mate of misery; But then by dull degrees came back My senses to their wonted track; I saw the dungeon walls and floor Close slowly round me as before, I saw the glimmer of the sun Creeping as it before had done, But through the crevice where it came That bird was perch'd, as fond and tame,

And tamer than upon the tree; A lovely bird, with azure wings, And song that said a thousand things,

And seem'd to say them all for me! I never saw its like before, I ne'er shall see its likeness more: It seem'd like me to want a mate, But was not half so desolate, And it was come to love me when None lived to love me so again, And cheering from my dungeon's brink. Had brought me back to feel and think. I know not if it late were free,

Or broke its cage to perch on mine, But knowing well captivity, Sweet bird! I could not wish for thine!

Or if it were, in winged guise, A visitant from Paradise; For—Heaven forgive that thought! the while Which made me both to weep and smile-

I sometimes deem'd that it might be My brother's soul come down to me; But then at last away it flew,

And then 'twas mortal well I knew, For he would never thus have flown, And left me twice so doubly lone, Lone as the corse within its shroud, Lone as a solitary cloud,—

A single cloud on a sunny day,
While all the rest of heaven is clear,
A frown upon the atmosphere,
That hath no business to appear
When skies are blue, and earth is gay.

A kind of change came in my fate. My keepers grew compassionate; I know not what had made them so, They were inured to sights of woe, But so it was:-my broken chain With links unfasten'd did remain. And it was liberty to stride Along my cell from side to side. And up and down, and then athwart, And tread it over every part: And round the pillars one by one, Returning where my walk begun, Avoiding only, as I trod, My brothers' graves without a sod: For if I thought with heedless tread My step profaned their lowly bed, My breath came gaspingly and thick, And my crush'd heart fell blind and sick.

I made a footing in the wall,
It was not therefrom to escape,
For I had buried one and all

Who loved me in a human shape; And the whole earth would henceforth

A wider prison unto me:
No child, no sire, no kin had I,
No partner in my misery;
I thought of this, and I was glad,
For thought of them had made me mad;
But I was curious to ascend
To my barr'd windows, and to bend
Once more, upon the mountains high,
The quiet of a loving eye.

I saw them, and they were the same,
They were not changed like me in frame;
I saw their thousand years of snow
On high—their wide long lake below,
And the blue Rhone in fullest flow;
I heard the torrents leap and gush
O'er channell'd rock and broken bush;
I saw the white-wall'd distant town,
And whiter sails go skimming down;
And then there was a little isle,
Which in my very face did smile,

The only one in view;

A small green isle, it seem'd no more, Scarce broader than my dungeon floor, But in it there were three tall trees, And o'er it blew the mountain breeze, And by it there were waters flowing, And on it there were young flowers growing,

Of gentle breath and hue.
The fish swam by the castle wall,
And they seem'd joyous each and all;
The eagle rode the rising blast,
Methought he never flew so fast
As then to me he seem'd to fly;
And then new tears came in my eye,
And I felt troubled—and would fain
I had not left my recent chain;
And when I did descend again,
The darkness of my dim abode
Fell on me as a heavy load;
It was as is a new-dug grave,
Closing o'er one we sought to save,—
And yet my glance, too much opprest,
Had almost need of such a rest.

It might be months, or years, or days, I kept no count, I took no note, I had no hope my eyes to raise,

And clear them of their dreary mote;
At last men came to set me free;
Lack'd not rely and reck'd net release.

I ask'd not why, and reck'd not where: It was at length the same to me, Fetter'd or fetterless to be,

I learn'd to love despair. And thus when they appear'd at last, And all my bonds aside were cast, These heavy walls to me had grown A hermitage—and all my own! And half I felt as they were come To tear me from a second home: With spiders I had friendship made, And watch'd them in their sullen trade Had seen the mice by moonlight play, And why should I feel less than they? We were all inmates of one place, And I, the monarch of each race, Had power to kill—yet, strange to tell! In quiet we had learn'd to dwell; My very chains and I grew friends, So much a long communion tends To make us what we are :--even I Regain'd my freedom with a sigh. June 27-29-July 10, 1816. STANZAS TO AUGUSTA

Though the day of my destiny's over, And the star of my fate hath declined, Thy soft heart refused to discover The faults which so many could find. Though thy soul with my grief was acquainted.

It shrunk not to share it with me, And the love which my spirit hath painted

It never bath found but in thee.

Then when nature around me is smiling. The last smile which answers to mine, I do not believe it beguiling,

Because it reminds me of thine: And when winds are at war with the ocean.

As the breasts I believed in with me, If their billows excite an emotion, It is that they bear me from thee.

Though the rock of my last hope is shiver'd.

And its fragments are sunk in the wave,

Though I feel that my soul is deliver'd To pain—it shall not be its slave.

There is many a pang to pursue me: They may crush, but they shall not contemn;

They may torture, but shall not subdue

'Tis of thee that I think-not of them.

Though human, thou didst not deceive

Though woman, thou didst not forsake, Though loved, thou forborest to grieve

Though slander'd, thou never couldst shake:

Though trusted, thou didst not disclaim

Though parted, it was not to fly, Though watchful, 'twas not to defame

Nor, mute, that the world might belie.

Yet I blame not the world, nor despise it, Nor the war of the many with one: If my soul was not fitted to prize it,

'Twas folly not sooner to shun: And if dearly that error hath cost me. And more than I once could foresee,

I have found that, whatever it lost me, It could not deprive me of thee.

From the wreck of the past, which hath perish'd,

Thus much I at least may recall, It hath taught me that what I most cherish'd

Deserved to be dearest of all:

In the desert a fountain is springing. In the wide waste there still is a tree And a bird in the solitude singing,

Which speaks to my spirit of thee. July 24, 1816. December 5, 1816.

EPISTLE TO AUGUSTA

My sister! my sweet sister! if a name Dearer and purer were, it should be thine:

Mountains and seas divide us, but I claim No tears, but tenderness to answer mine: Go where I will, to me thou art the same-

A loved regret which I would not resign. There yet are two things in my destin".

A world to roam through, and a home with thee.

The first were nothing—had I still the

It were the haven of my happiness: But other claims and other ties thou hast. And mine is not the wish to make them less.

A strange doom is thy father's son's, and past

Recalling, as it lies beyond redress; Reversed for him our grandsire's fate of vore,-

He had no rest at sea, nor I on shore.

If my inheritance of storms hath been In other elements, and on the rocks Of perils, overlook'd or unforeseen, I have sustain'd my share of worldly shocks,

The fault was mine; nor do I seek to screen

My errors with defensive paradox: I have been cunning in mine overthrow, The careful pilot of my proper woe.

Mine were my faults, and mine be their reward.

My whole life was a contest, since the

That gave me being, gave me that which marr'd

The gift,—a fate, or will, that walk'd astray;

And I at times have found the struggle hard,

And thought of shaking off my bonds of clay:

But now I fain would for a time survive, If but to see what next can well arrive. Kingdoms and empires in my little day I have outlived, and yet I am not old; And when I look on this, the petty spray Of my own years of trouble, which have roll'd

Like a wild bay of breakers, melts away: Something—I know not what—does still uphold

A spirit of slight patience;—not in vain, Even for its own sake, do we purchase pain.

Perhaps the workings of defiance stir Within me—or perhaps a cold despair, Brought on when ills habitually recur,-Perhaps a kinder clime, or purer air, (For even to this may change of soul refer,

And with light armor we may learn to bear.)

Have taught me a strange quiet, which was not

The chief companion of a calmer lot.

I feel almost at times as I have felt In happy childhood: trees, and flowers. and brooks.

Which do remember me of where I dwelt Ere my young mind was sacrificed to Come as of yore upon me, and can melt My heart with recognition of their looks; And even at moments I could think I

Some living thing to love—but none like thee.

Here are the Alpine landscapes which create

A fund for contemplation;—to admire Is a brief feeling of a trivial date; But something worthier do such scenes inspire:

Here to be lonely is not desolate, For much I view which I could most de-

And, above all, a lake I can behold Lovelier, not dearer, than our own of old.

Oh that thou wert but with me!-but I grow

The fool of my own wishes, and forget The solitude which I have vaunted so Has lost its praise in this but one regret; There may be others which I less may show!-

I am not of the plaintive mood, and yet I feel an ebb in my philosophy, And the tide rising in my alter'd eye.

I did remind thee of our own dear Lake By the old Hall which may be mine no

Leman's is fair: but think not I forsake The sweet remembrance of a dearer shore:

Sad havoc Time must with my memory make,

Ere that or thou can fade these eyes before;

Though, like all things which I have loved, they are

Resign'd for ever, or divided far.

The world is all before me: I but ask Of Nature that with which she will comply-

It is but in her summer's sun to bask, To mingle with the quiet of her sky, To see her gentle face without a mask, And never gaze on it with apathy. She was my early friend, and now shall he

My sister—till I look again on thee.

I can reduce all feelings but this one: And that I would not;—for at length

Such scenes as those wherein my life begun.

The earliest—even the only paths for me-

Had I but sooner learnt the crowd to shun,

I had been better than I now can be; The passions which have torn me would have slept:

I had not suffer'd and thou hadst not wept.

With false Ambition what had I to do? Little with Love, and least of all with Fame:

And yet they came unsought, and with me grew,

And made me all which they can make -a name.

Yet this was not the end I did pursue; Surely I once beheld a nobler aim. But all is over—I am one the more To baffled millions which have gone before.

And for the future, this world's future may

From me demand but little of my care: I have outlived myself by many a day; Having survived so many things that were:

My years have been no slumber, but the

Of ceaseless vigils; for I had the share Of life which might have fill'd a century, Before its fourth in time had pass'd me by.

And for the remnant which may be to

I am content; and for the past I feel Not thankless,-for within the crowded

Of struggles, happiness at times would steal.

And for the present, I would not benumb My feelings further.—Nor shall I conceal That with all this I still can look around. And worship Nature with a thought profound.

For thee, my own sweet sister, in thy

I know myself secure, as thou in mine; We were and are—I am, even as thou art-

Beings who ne'er each other can resign: It is the same, together or apart.

From life's commencement to its slow

We are entwined—let death come slow or fast.

The tie which bound the first endures the last! July, 1816, 1830.

STANZAS FOR MUSIC

THEY say that Hope is happiness: But genuine Love must prize the past, And Memory wakes the thoughts that bless:

They rose the first—they set the last:

And all that Memory loves the most Was once our only Hope to be, And all that Hope adored and lost Hath melted into Memory.

Alas! it is delusion all: The future cheats us from afar, Nor can we be what we recall, Nor dare we think on what we are. ?. . . 1829.

DARKNESS

I HAD a dream, which was not all a dream.

The bright sun was extinguish'd, and the stars

Did wander darkling in the eternal space,

Rayless, and pathless, and the icy earth Swung blind and blackening in the moonless air:

Morn came and went-and came, and brought no day,

And men forgot their passions in the dread

Of this their desolation: and all hearts Were chill'd into a selfish prayer for light; And they did live by watchfires-and the thrones,

The palaces of crowned kings—the huts. The habitations of all things which dwell,

Were burnt for beacons: cities were consumed.

And men were gather'd round their blazing homes

To look once more into each other's face:

Happy were those who dwelt within the Of the volcanos, and their mountain-torch: A fearful hope was all the world contain'd; Forests were set on fire—but hour by

They fell and faded—and the crackling trunks

Extinguish'd with a crash—and all was black.

The brows of men by the despairing light Wore an unearthly aspect, as by fits

The flashes fell upon them; some lav

And hid their eyes and wept; and some did rest

Their chins upon their clenched hands, and smiled;

And others hurried to and fro, and fed Their funeral piles with fuel, and look'd

With mad disquietude on the dull sky, The pall of a past world; and then again With curses cast them down upon the dust,

And gnash'd their teeth and howl'd: the wild birds shriek'd

And, terrified, did flutter on the ground. And flap their useless wings; the wildest brutes

Came tame and tremulous; and vipers crawl'd

And twined themselves among the muititude.

Hissing, but stingless—they were slain for food!

And War, which for a moment was no more.

Did glut himself again:—a meal was bought

With blood, and each sate sullenly apart Gorging himself in gloom: no love was left:

All earth was but one thought—and that was death

Immediate and inglorious; and the pang Of famine fed upon all entrails—men

Died, and their bones were tombless as their flesh;

The meagre by the meagre were devour'd,

Even dogs assail'd their masters, all save one,

And he was faithful to a corse, and kept

The birds and beasts and famish'd men at bay,

Till hunger clung them, or the dropping dead

Lured their lank jaws; himself sought out no food,

But with a piteous and perpetual moan, And a quick desolate cry, licking the hand

Which answer'd not with a caress—he died.

The crowd was famish'd by degrees; but

Of an enormous city did survive,
And they were enemies: they met beside
The dying embers of an altar-place
Where had been heap'd a mass of holy things

For an unholy usage; they raked up, And shivering scraped with their cold skeleton hands

The feeble ashes, and their feeble breath Blew for a little life, and made a flame Which was a mockery; then they lifted

Their eyes as it grew lighter, and beheld Each other's aspects—saw, and shriek'd, and died—

Even of their mutual hideousness they died.

Unknowing who he was upon whose

Famine had written Fiend. The world was void,

The populous and the powerful was a lump, lump, Seasonless, herbless, treeless, manless, lifeless, A lump of death—a chaos of hard clay. The rivers, lakes, and ocean all stood still,

And nothing stirr'd within their silent depths;

Ships sailorless lay rotting on the sea, And their masts fell down piecemeal: as they dropp'd

They slept on the abyss without a

The waves were dead; the tides were in their grave,

The moon, their mistress, had expired before:

The winds were wither'd in the stagnant air,

And the clouds perish'd; Darkness had no need

Of aid from them—She was the Universe.

PROMETHEUS

TITAN! to whose immortal eyes
The sufferings of mortality,
Seen in their sad reality,
Were not as things that gods despise;
What was thy pity's recompense?
A silent suffering, and intense;
The rock, the vulture, and the chain,
All that the proud can feel of pain,
The agony they do not show,
The suffocating sense of woe,

Which speaks but in its loneliness, And then is jealous lest the sky Should have a listener, nor will sigh Until its voice is echoless.

Titan! to thee the strife was given
Between the suffering and the will,
Which torture where they cannot kill:

kill;
And the inexorable Heaven,
And the deaf tyranny of Fate,
The ruling principle of Hate,
Which for its pleasure doth create
The things it may annihilate,
Refused thee even the boon to die;
The wretched gift eternity
Was thine—and thou hast borne it well.
All that the Thunderer wrung from

thee
Was but the menace which flung back
On him the torments of thy rack;
The fate thou didst so well foresee,
But would not to appease him tell;
And in thy Silence was his Sentence.
And in his Soul a vain repentance,

And evil dread so ill dissembled,
That in his hand the lightnings trembled.

Thy Godlike crime was to be kind,
To render with thy precepts less
The sum of human wretchedness,
And strengthen Man with his own mind;
But baffled as thou wert from high,
Still in thy patient energy,
In the endurance, and repulse
Of thine impenetrable Spirit,

Which Earth and Heaven could not convulse,

A mighty lesson we inherit: Thou art a symbol and a sign To Mortals of their fate and

To Mortals of their fate and force; Like thee, Man is in part divine,

A troubled stream from a pure source; And Man in portions can foresee His own funereal destiny; His wretchedness, and his resistance, And his sad unallied existence; To which his Spirit may oppose Itself—and equal to all woes,

And a firm will, and a deep sense, Which even in torture can descry Its own concenter'd recompense, Triumphant where it dare defy, And making Death a Victory.

SONNET TO LAKE LEMAN

Rousseau—Voltaire—our Gibbon—and De Staël—

Leman! these names are worthy of thy shore,

Thy shore of names like these! wert thou no more

Their memory thy remembrance would recall:

To them thy banks were lovely as to all.

But they have made them lovelier, for the lore

Of mighty minds doth hallow in the

Of human hearts the ruin of a wall
Where dwelt the wise and wondrous;
but by thee

How much more, Lake of Beauty! do we feel.

In sweetly gliding o'er thy crystal sea, The wild glow of that not ungentle zeal, Which of the heirs of immortality Is proud, and makes the breath of glory

The Scene of the Drama is amongst the Higher Alps—partly in the Castle of Manfred, and partly in the Mountains.

ACT I

Scene I.—Manfred alone.—Scene, a Gothic Gallery.—Time, Midnight.

Man. The lamp must be replenish'd, but even then

It will not burn so long as I must watch:
My slumbers—if I slumber—are not sleep,
But a continuance of enduring thought,
Which then I can resist not: in my heart
There is a vigil, and these eyes but close
To look within; and yet I live, and bear
The aspect and the form of breathing men.
But grief should be the instructor of the wise:

Sorrow is knowledge: they who know the most

Must mourn the deepest o'er the fatal truth.

The Tree of Knowledge is not that of Life.

Philosophy and science, and the springs Of wonder, and the wisdom of the world, I have essay'd, and in my mind there is A power to make these subject to itself— But they avail not: I have done men good, And I have met with good even among

But this avail'd not: I have had my foes, And none have baffled, many fallen be fore me-

But this avail'd not: -Good, or evil, life, Powers, passions, all I see in other beings. Have been to me as rain unto the sands, Since that all-nameless hour. I have no dread.

And feel the curse to have no natural fear, Nor fluttering throb, that beats with hopes or wishes,

Or lurking love of something on the earth. Now to my task .-

Mysterious agency! Ye spirits of the unbounded Universe! Whom I have sought in darkness and in light-

Ye, who do compass earth about, and

In subtler essence—ye, to whom the tops Of mountains inaccessible are haunts, And earth's and ocean's caves familiar things-I call upon ye by the written charm Which gives me power upon you—Rise!

Appear! [A pause.]They come not yet.-Now by the voice of him

Who is the first among you—by this sign, Which makes you tremble—by the claims

Who is undying,—Rise! Appear!—— Appear! [A pause.]If it be so-Spirits of earth and air, Ye shall not thus elude me: by a power, Deeper than all yet urged, a tyrant-spell, Which had its birthplace in a star condemn'd.

The burning wreck of a demolish'd world,

A wandering hell in the eternal space; By the strong curse which is upon my soul,

The thought which is within me and around me.

I do compel ye to my will—Appear! A star is seen at the darker end of the gallery: it is stationary; and a voice is heard singing.

FIRST SPIRIT

Mortal! to thy bidding bow'd, From my mansion in the cloud, Which the breath of twilight builds, And the summer's sunset gilds With the azure and vermilion, Which is mix'd for my pavilion; Though thy quest may be forbidden, On a star-beam I have ridden: To thine adjuration bow'd, Mortal—be thy wish avow'd!

SECOND SPIRIT

Mont Blanc is the monarch of moun-

They crown'd him long ago On a throne of rocks, in a robe of clouds, With a diadem of snow.

Around his waist are forests braced, The Avalanche in his hand:

But ere it fall, that thundering ball Must pause for my command.

The Glacier's cold and restless mass Moves onward day by day:

But I am he who bids it pass, Or with its ice delay. I am the spirit of the place. Could make the mountain bow

And quiver to his cavern'd base—

And what with me wouldst Thou?

THIRD SPIRIT

In the blue depth of the waters, Where the wave hath no strife, Where the wind is a stranger, And the sea-snake hath life. Where the Mermaid is decking Her green hair with shells, Like the storm on the surface Came the sound of thy spells; O'er my calm Hall of Coral The deep echo roll'd-To the Spirit of Ocean Thy wishes unfold!

FOURTH SPIRIT

Where the slumbering earthquake Lies pillow'd on fire, And the lakes of bitumen Rise boilingly higher; Where the roots of the Andes Strike deep in the earth, As their summits to heaven Shoot soaringly forth; I have quitted my birthplace, Thy bidding to bide-Thy spell hath subdued me, Thy will be my guide!

FIFTH SPIRIT

I am the Rider of the wind, The stirrer of the storm; The hurricane I left behind Is yet with lightning warm; To speed to thee, o'er shore and sea I swept upon the blast: The fleet I met sail'd well, and yet 'Twill sink ere night be past.

SIXTH SPIRIT

My dwelling is the shadow of the night, Why doth thy magic torture me with light?

SEVENTH SPIRIT

The star which rules thy destiny Was ruled, ere earth began, by me: It was a world as fresh and fair As e'er revolved round sun in air: Its course was free and regular, Space bosom'd not a lovelier star. The hour arrived—and it became A wandering mass of shapeless flame, A pathless comet, and a curse, The menace of the universe; Still rolling on with innate force, Without a sphere, without a course. A bright deformity on high, The monster of the upper sky! And thou! beneath its influence born-Thou worm! whom I obey and scorn-Forced by a power (which is not thine, And lent thee but to make thee mine) For this brief moment to descend. Where these weak spirits round thee bend And parley with a thing like thee-What wouldst thou, Child of Clay! with me?

The SEVEN SPIRITS

Earth, ocean, air, night, mountains, winds, thy star,
Are at thy beck and bidding, Child of Clay!

Before thee at thy quest their spirits are—

What wouldst thou with us, son of mortals—say?

Man. Forgetfulness-

First Spirit. Of what—of whom—and why?

Man. Of that which is within me; read it there —

Ye know it, and I cannot utter it.

Spirit. We can but give thee that which we possess:

Ask of us subjects, sovereignty, the

power
O'er earth—the whole or portion—or a

O'er earth—the whole, or portion—or a sign

Which shall control the elements, whereof

We are the dominators,—each and all, These shall be thine.

Man. Oblivion, self-oblivion!

Can ye not wring from out the hidden realms

Ye offer so profusely what I ask?

Spirit. It is not in our essence, in our skill:

But-thou may'st die.

Man. Will death bestow it on me? Spirit. We are immortal, and do not forget:

We are eternal; and to us the past Is, as the future, present. Art thou answer'd?

Man. Ye mock me—but the power which brought ye here Hath made you mine. Slaves, scoff not at my will!

The mind, the spirit, the Promethean spark,

The lightning of my being, is as bright,
Perveding, and for dorting as your own

Pervading, and far darting as your own, And shall not yield to yours, though coop'd in clay!

Answer, or I will teach you what I am.

Spirit. We answer as we answer'd;

our reply

Is even in thine own words.

Man. Why say ye so?
Spirit. If, as thou say'st, thine essence be as ours,

We have replied in telling thee, the thing Mortals call death hath nought to do with us.

Man. I then have call'd ye from your realms in vain;

Ye cannot, or ye will not, aid me.

Spirit. Say,
What we possess we offer; it is thine:
Bethink ere thou dismiss us; ask again;
Kingdom, and sway, and strength, and length of days—

Man. Accursed! what have I to do with days?

They are too long already.—Hence—begone!

Spirit. Yet pause: being here, our will would do thee service;

Bethink thee, is there then no other gift Which we can make not worthless in thine eyes?

Man. No, none: yet stay—one moment, ere we part,

I would behold ye face to face. I hear Your voices, sweet and melancholy sounds,

As music on the waters; and I see
The steady aspect of a clear large star;
But nothing more. Approach me as ye

Or one, or all, in your accustom'd forms.

Spirit. We have no forms, beyond the elements

Of which we are the mind and principle: But choose a form—in that we will appear.

Man. I have no choice; there is no form on earth

Hideous or beautiful to me. Let him, Who is most powerful of ye, take such

As unto him may seem most fitting—

Seventh Spirit (appearing in the shape of a beautiful female figure). Behold!

Man. Oh God! if it be thus, and thou Art not a madness and a mockery, I yet might be most happy, I will clasp thee.

And we again will be-

[The figure vanishes.
My heart is crush'd!
[Manfred falls senseless.

(A voice is heard in the Incantation which follows.)

When the moon is on the wave,
And the glow-worm in the grass,
And the meteor on the grave,
And the wisp on the morass;
When the falling stars are shooting,
And the answer'd owls are hooting,
And the silent leaves are still
In the shadow of the hill,
Shall my soul be upon thine,
With a power and with a sign.

Though thy slumber may be deep
Yet thy spirit shall not sleep;
There are shades which will not vanish,
There are thoughts thou canst not banish;
By a power to thee unknown,
Thou canst never be alone;

Thou art wrapt as with a shroud, Thou art gather'd in a cloud; And for ever shalt thou dwell In the spirit of this spell.

Though thou seest me not pass by,
Thou shalt feel me with thine eye
As a thing that, though unseen,
Must be near thee, and hath been;
And when in that secret dread
Thou hast turn'd around thy head,
Thou shalt marvel I am not
As thy shadow on the spot,
And the power which thou dost feel
Shall be what thou must conceal.

And a magic voice and verse
Hath baptized thee with a curse;
And a spirit of the air
Hath begirt thee with a snare;
In the wind there is a voice
Shall forbid thee to rejoice;
And to thee shall nightdeny
All the quiet of her sky;
And the day shall have a sun,
Which shall make thee wish it done.

217

From thy false tears I did distil
An essence which hath strength to kill;
From thy own heart I then did wring
The black blood in its blackest spring;
From thy own smile I snatch'd the snake,

For there it coil'd as in a brake; From thy own lip I drew the charm Which gave all these their chiefest harm:

In proving every poison known, I found the strongest was thine own.

By thy cold breast and serpent smile, By thy unfathom'd gulfs of guile, By that most seeming virtuous eye, By thy shut soul's hypocrisy; By the perfection of thine art Which pass'd for human thine own heart;

By thy delight in others' pain, And by thy brotherhood of Cain, I call upon thee! and compel Thyself to be thy proper Hell!

And on thy head I pour the vial
Which doth devote thee to this trial;
Nor to slumber, nor to die,
Shall be in thy destiny;
Though thy death shall still seem near
To thy wish, but as a fear;
Lo! the spell now works around thee,
And the clankless chain hath bound thee;
O'er thy heart and brain together
Hath the word been pass'd—now wither!

Scene II

The Mountain of the Jungfrau.—Time.
Morning.—Manfred alone upon the Cliffs.

Man. The spirits I have raised abandon me,

The spells which I have studied baffle me,
The remedy I reck'd of tortured me;
I lean no more on superhuman aid;
It hath no power upon the past, and f.
The future, till the past be gulf'd indexenses,

It is not of my search. My mother Earth!

And thou fresh breaking Day, and you,

ye Mountains,

Why are ye beautiful? I cannot love ye. And thou, the br ght eve of the universe. That openest over all, and unto all

Art a delight—thou shin'st not on my heart.

And you, ye crags, upon whose extreme edge

I stand, and on the torrent's brink beneath

Behold the tall pines dwindled as to

In dizziness of distance; when a leap, A stir, a motion, even a breath, would bring

My breast upon its rocky bosom's bed To rest for ever—wherefore do I pause? I feel the impulse—vet I do not plunge: I see the peril—yet do not recede;

And my brain reels—and yet my foot is firm:

There is a power upon me which withholds, And makes it my fatality to live,-If it be life to wear within myself This barrenness of spirit, and to be My own soul's sepulchre, for I have ceased To justify my deeds unto myself— The last infirmity of evil. Ay, Thou winged and cloud-cleaving minis-[An eagle passes. Whose happy flight is highest into heaven. Well may'st thou swoop so near me-I should be

Thy prey, and gorge thine eaglets; thou art gone

Where the eye cannot follow thee; but

Yet pierces downward, onward, or above, With a pervading vision.—Beautiful! How beautiful is all this visible world! How glorious in its action and itself!

But we, who name ourselves its sovereigns, we, Half dust, half deity, alike unfit

To sink or soar, with our mix'd essence make

A conflict of its elements, and breathe The breath of degradation and of pride, Contending with low wants and lofty

Till our mortality predominates, And men are-what they name not to themselves,

And trust not to each other. Hark!the [The Shepherd's pipe in note. the distance is heard. The natural music of the mountain reed-

For here the patriarchal days are not A pastoral fable—pipes in the liberal air. Mix'd with the sweet bells of the sauntering herd;

My soul would drink those echoes. Oh.

that I were

The viewless spirit of a lovely sound, A living voice, a breathing harmony, A bodiless enjoyment—born and dying With the blest tone which made me!

Enter from below a Chamois Hunter.

Chamois Hunter. This way the chamois leapt: her nimble Have baffled me; my gains to-day will scarce

Repay my break-neck travail.—What is here?

Who seems not of my trade, and vet hath reach'd

A height which none even of our mountaineers,

Save our best hunters, may attain: his garb

Is goodly, his mien manly, and his air Proud as a free-born peasant's, at this distance:

I will approach him nearer.

Man. (not perceiving the other). To be thus-

Gray-hair'd with anguish, like these blasted pines,

Wrecks of a single winter, barkless, branchless.

A blighted trunk upon a cursed root, Which but supplies a feeling to decay— And to be thus, eternally but thus, Having been otherwise! now furrow'd o'er With wrinkles, plough'd by moments,—

not by years,-And hours, all tortured into ages-hours Which I outlive!—Ye toppling crags of ice! Ye avalanches, whom a breath draws down In mountainous o'erwhelming, come and crush me! I hear ye momently above, beneath,

Crash with a frequent conflict; but ve pass,

And only fall on things that still would live;

On the young flourishing forest, or the hut

And hamlet of the harmless villager.

C. Hun. The mists begin to rise from up the valley;

I'll warn him to descend, or he may chance

To lose at once his way and life together.

Man. The mists boil up around the glaciers; clouds

Rise curling fast beneath me, white and sulphury,

Like foam from the roused ocean of deep Hell,

Whose every wave breaks on a living shore,

Heap'd with the damn'd like pebbles.—
I am giddy.

C. Hun. I must approach him cautiously; if near,

A sudden step will startle him, and he Seems tottering already.

Man. Mountains have fallen, Leaving a gap in the clouds. and with the shock

Rocking their alpine brethren; filling up

The ripe green valleys with destruction's splinters;

Damming the rivers with a sudden dash, Which crush'd the waters into mist and made

Their fountains find another channel—thus.

Thus, in its old age, did Mount Rosenberg—

Why stood I not beneath it?

C. Hun. Friend! have a care, Your next step may be fatal!—for the

Of him who made you, stand not on that brink!

Man. (not hearing him). Such would have been for me a fitting tomb;

My bones had then been quiet in their depth;
They had not then been strewn upon the rocks

For the wind's pastime—as thus—thus they shall be—

In this one plunge.--Farewell, ye opening heavens!

You were not meant for me—Earth!

[As Manfred is in act to spring from the cliff, the Chamois Hunter seizes and retains him with a sudden grasp.

C. Hun. Hold, madman!—though aweary of thy life,

Stain not our pure vales with thy guilty blood:

Away with me——I will not quit my

Away with me——I will not quit my hold.

Man. I am most sick at heart—nay, grasp me not—

I am all feebleness—the mountains whirl

Spinning around me—I grow blind—What art thou?

C. Hun. I'll answer that anon. Away with me-

The clouds grow thicker—there—now lean on me—

Place your foot here—here, take this staff, and cling

A moment to that shrub—now give me your hand,

And hold fast by my girdle—softly—well—

The Chalet will be gain'd within an hour: Come on, we'll quickly find a surer footing,

And something like a pathway, which the torrent

Hath wash'd since winter.—Come. 't is bravely done—

You should have been a hunter.—Follow me.

(As they descend the rocks with difficulty, the scene closes.

ACT II

Scene I.—A Cottage amongst the Bernese Alps.

Manfred and the Chamois Hunter.

C. Hun. No, no—yet pause—thou must not yet go forth:

Thy mind and body are alike unfit
To trust each other, for some hours, at least;

When thou art better, I will be thy guide—

But whither?

Man. It imports not: I do know My route full well, and need no further guidance

C. Hun. Thy garb and gait bespeak thee of high lineage—

One of the many chiefs, whose castled crags

Look o'er the lower valleys—which of these

May call thee lord? I only know their portals;

My way of life leads me but rarely down To bask by the huge hearths of those old halls.

Carousing with the vassals; but the paths, Which step from out our mountains to their doors.

I know from childhood-which of these is thine?

Man. No matter.

Well, sir, pardon me the C. Hun. question,

And be of better cheer. Come, taste my

'Tis of an ancient vintage; many a day 'T has thaw'd my veins among our glaciers

Let it do thus for thine—Come, pledge me fairly.

Man. Away, away! there's blood upon the brim! Will it then never—never sink in the earth? C. Hun. What dost thou mean? thy senses wander from thee. Man. I say 'tis blood—my blood! the pure warm stream

Which ran in the veins of my fathers, and in ours

When we were in our youth, and had one heart,

And loved each other as we should not

And this was shed: but still it rises up, Coloring the clouds, that shut me out from heaven,

Where thou art not-and I shall never be. C. Hun. Man of strange words, and some half-maddening sin,

Which makes thee people vacancy, whate'er

Thy dread and sufferance be, there's comfort yet-

The aid of holy men, and heavenly patience-

Patience and patience! Hence—that word was made

For brutes of burthen, not for birds of prey; Preach it to mortals of a dust like thine .-

I am not of thine order.

Thanks to heaven! I would not be of thine for the free fame Of William Tell; but whatsoe'er thine ill.

It must be borne, and these wild starts are useless.

Man. Do I not bear it?—Look on me— I live.
C. Hun. This is convulsion, and no healthful life.

Man. I tell thee, man! I have lived many years,

Many long years, but they are nothing now

To those which I must number: ages ages-

Space and eternity—and consciousness. With the fierce thirst of death—and still unslaked!

C. Hun. Why, on thy brow the seal of middle age

Hath scarce been set; I am thine elder far.

Think'st thou existence doth Man.depend on time?

It doth; but actions are our epochs: mine Have made my days and nights imperishable,

Endless, and all alike, as sands on the shore.

Innumerable atoms; and one desert. Barren and cold, on which the wild waves break.

But nothing rests, save carcasses and wrecks.

Rocks and the salt-surf weeds of bitterness.

C. Hun. Alas! he's mad-but vet I must not leave him.

Man. I would I were—for then the things I see

Would be but a distemper'd dream. What is it $C.\ Hun.$

That thou dost see, or think thou look'st upon?

Man. Myself, and thee—a peasant of the Alps-

Thy humble virtues, hospitable home. And spirit patient, pious, proud, and free:

Thy self-respect, grafted on innocent thoughts:

The days of health, and nights of sleep; thy toils,

By danger dignified, yet guiltless; hopes Of cheerful old age and a quiet grave,

With cross and garland over its green turf,

And thy grandchildren's love for epitaph;

This do I see—and then I look within— It matters not-my soul was scorch'd already!

C. Hun. And wouldst thou then exchange thy lot for mine?

Man. No, friend! I would not wrong thee, nor exchange

My lot with living being: I can bear— However wretchedly, 'tis still to bear— In life what others could not brook to dream,

But perish in their slumber.

C. Hun. And with this— This cautious feeling for another's pain, Canst thou be black with evil?—say not so.

Can one of gentle thoughts have wreak'd revenge

Upon his enemies?

Man. Oh! no, no, no!

My injuries came down on those who loved me—

On those whom I best loved: I never quelled

An enemy, save in my just defence— But my embrace was fatal.

C. Hun. Heaven give thee rest!

And penitence restore thee to thyself;

My prayers shall be for thee.

Man. I need them not—But can endure thy pity. I depart—
'Tis time farawell!—Here's gold and

'Tis time—farewell!—Here's gold, and thanks for thee—

No words—it is thy due.—Follow me

I know my path—the mountain peril's past:

And once again I charge thee, follow not! [Exit Manfred.

SCENE II

A lower Valley in the Alps.—A Cataract.

Enter Manfred.

It is not noon—the sunbow's rays still arch

The torrent with the many hues of heaven,

And roll the sheeted silver's waving column

O'er the crag's headlong perpendicular, And fling its lines of foaming light along, And to and fro, like the pale courser's tail.

The Giant steed, to be bestrode by Death, As told in the Apocalypse. No eyes But mine now drink this sight of loveliness:

I should be sole in this sweet solitude, And with the Spirit of the place divide The homage of these waters.—I will call her. [Manfred takes some of the water into the palm of his hand, and flings it into the air, muttering the adjuration. After a pause, the WITCH OF THE ALPS rises beneath the arch of the sunbow of the torrent.

Beautiful Spirit! with thy hair of light, And dazzling eyes of glory, in whose form

The charms of earth's least mortal daughters grow

To an unearthly stature, in an essence Of purer elements; while the hues of youth,—

Carnation'd like a sleeping infant's cheek,

Rock'd by the beating of her mother's heart,

Or the rose tints, which summer's twilight leaves

Upon the lofty glacier's virgin snow,
The blush of earth embracing with her
heaven—

Tinge thy celestial aspect, and make tame

The beauties of the sunbow which bends o'er thee.

Beautiful Spirit! in thy calm clear brow, Wherein is glass'd serenity of soul, Which of itself shows immortality,

I read that thou wilt pardon to a Son
Of Earth, whom the abstruser powers permit

At times to commune with them—if that he

Avail him of his spells—to call thee thus,

And gaze on thee a moment.

Witch. Son of Earth!

I know thee, and the powers which give thee power;

I know thee for a man of many thoughts, And deeds of good and ill, extreme in both,

Fatal and fated in thy sufferings.

I have expected this—what wouldst thou with me?

Man. To look upon thy beauty—nothing further.

The face of the earth hath madden'd me, and I

Take refuge in her mysteries, and pierce
To the abodes of those who govern her—But they can nothing aid me. I have sought

From them what they could not bestow, and now

I search no further,

Witch. What could be the quest Which is not in the power of the most powerful.

The rulers of the invisible?

Man. A boon; But why should I repeat it? 'twere in vain.

Witch. I know not that; let thy lips utter it.

Man. Well, though it torture me, 'tis but the same;

My pang shall find a voice. From my youth upwards

My spirit walk'd not with the souls of men.

Nor look'd upon the earth with human eves;

The thirst of their ambition was not mine,

The aim of their existence was not mine:

My joys, my griefs, my passions, and my powers,

Made me a stranger; though I wore the form,

I had no sympathy with breathing flesh, Nor midst the creatures of clay that girded me

Was there but one who—but of her anon. I said with men, and with the thoughts of

I held but slight communion; but instead
My joy was in the wilderness,—to breathe

The difficult air of the iced mountain's top.

Where the birds dare not build, nor insect's wing

Flit o'er the herbless granite; or to plunge Into the torrent, and to roll along On the swift whirl of the new breaking

wave
Of river-stream, or ocean, in their flow.
In these my early strength explicate or

Of river-stream, or ocean, in their flow. In these my early strength exulted; or To follow through the night the moving moon,

The stars and their development; or catch

The dazzling lightnings till my eyes grew dim;

Or to look, list'ning, on the scattered leaves,

While Autumn winds were at their evening song.

These were my pastimes, and to be alone; For if the beings, of whom I was one,— Hating to be so,—cross'd me in my path, I felt myself degraded back to them,

And was all clay again. And then I dived,

In my lone wanderings, to the caves of death.

Searching its cause in its effect; and drew

From wither'd bones, and skull, and heap'd up dust,

Conclusions most forbidden. Then I pass'd

The nights of years in sciences untaught Save in the old time; and with time and toil,

And terrible ordeal, and such penance As in itself hath power upon the air,

And spirits that do compass air and earth,

Space, and the peopled infinite, I made Mine eyes familiar with Eternity,

Such as, before me, did the Magi, and He who from out their fountain dwellings raised

Eros and Anteros, at Gadara,

As I do thee ;—and with my knowledge

The thirst of knowledge, and the power and joy

Of this most bright intelligence, until—Witch. Proceed.

Man. Oh! I but thus prolong'd my words,

Boasting these idle attributes, because As I approach the core of my heart's grief—

But to my task, I have not named to thee Father or mother, mistress, friend, or being,

With whom I wore the chain of human ties;

If I had such, they seem'd not such to me; Yet there was one—

Witch. Spare not thyself--proceed.

Man. She was like me in lineaments;
her eyes.

Her hair, her features, all, to the very tone

Even of her voice, they said were like to mine;

But soften'd all, and temper'd into beauty:

She had the same lone thoughts and wanderings,

The quest of hidden knowledge, and a mind

To comprehend the universe: nor these Alone, but with them gentler powers than mine,

Pity, and smiles, and tears—which I had not;

And tenderness—but that I had for her: Humility—and that I never had.

Her faults were mine-her virtues were her own-

I loved her, and destroy'd her!

Witch. With thy hand? Man. Not with my hand, but heart, which broke her heart:

It gazed on mine, and wither'd. I have

Blood, but not hers—and vet her blood was shed;

I saw-and could not stanch it.

And for this-A being of the race thou dost despise,

The order, which thine own would rise above,

Mingling with us and ours,—thou dost forego The gifts of our great knowledge, and shrink'st back To recreant mortality—Away!

Man. Daughter of Air! I tell thee, since that hour-

But words are breath—look on me in my

Or watch my watchings-Come and sit by me!

My solitude is solitude no more,

But peopled with the Furies; -I have gnash'd

My teeth in darkness till returning morn, Then cursed myself till sunset;—I have pray'd

For madness as a blessing—'tis denied

I have affronted death—but in the war Of elements the waters shrunk from me, And fatal things pass'd harmless; the cold hand

Of an all-pitiless demon held me back, Back by a single hair, which would not break

In fantasy, imagination, all

The affluence of my soul—which one day

A Crossus in creation—I plunged deep But, like an ebbing wave, it dash'd me

Into the gulf of my unfathom'd thought. I plunged amidst mankind-Forgetful-

I sought in all, save where 'tis to be found,

And that I have to learn; my sciences, My long-pursued and superhuman art, Is mortal here: I dwell in my despair-And live-and live for ever.

Witch. It may be

That I can aid thee.

To do this thy power Man.

Must wake the dead, or lay me low with them.

Do so—in any shape—in any hour—

With any torture—so it be the last.

Witch. That is not in my province: but if thou

Wilt swear obedience to my will, and do My bidding, it may help thee to thy wishes.

Man. I will not swear—Obey! and whom? the spirits

Whose presence I command, and be the slave

Of those who served me—Never!

Is this all? Witch.Hast thou no gentler answer?—Yet bethink thee,

And pause ere thou rejectest.

I have said it. Witch. Enough! I may retire thensay!

Retire! Man.

Man. (alone). We are the fools of time and terror: Days

Steal on us, and steal from us; yet we live, Loathing our life, and dreading still to die. In all the days of this detested yoke-

This vital weight upon the struggling heart.

Which sinks with sorrow, or beats quick with pain, Or joy that ends in agony or faintness-

In all the days of past and future, for In life there is no present, we can number How few-how less than few-wherein the soul

Forbears to pant for death, and yet draws back

As from a stream in winter, though the

Be but a moment's. I have one resource Still in my science—I can call the dead, And ask them what it is we dread to be; The sternest answer can but be the Grave, And that is nothing. If they answer

The buried Prophet answered to the Hag Of Endor; and the Spartan Monarch drew

From the Byzantine maid's unsleeping

An answer and his destiny—he slew

That which he loved, unknowing what he slew,

And died unpardon'd—though he call'd in aid

The Phyxian Jove, and in Phigalia roused

The Arcadian Evocators to compel The indignant shadow to depose her

Or fix her term of vengeance—she replied In words of dubious import, but fulfill'd. If I had never lived, that which I love Had still been living; had I never loved, That which I love would still be beautiful.

Happy and giving happiness. What is she?

What is she now?--a sufferer for my sins-A thing I dare not think upon-or nothing. Within few hours I shall not call in

Yet in this hour I dread the thing I dare: Until this hour I never shrunk to gaze On spirit, good or evil-now I tremble,

And feel a strange cold thaw upon my heart.

But I can act even what I most abhor, And champion human fears.—The night approaches. $\Gamma Exit.$

SCENE III

The Summit of the Jungfrau Mountain.

Enter FIRST DESTINY.

The moon is rising broad, and round, and bright;

And here on snows, where never human foot

Of common mortal trod, we nightly tread.

And leave no traces: o'er the savage sea, The glassy ocean of the mountain ice, We skim its rugged breakers, which put

The aspect of a tumbling tempest's foam, Frozen in a moment—a dead whirlpool's image:

And this most steep fantastic pinnacle, The fretwork of some earthquake-where the clouds

Pause to repose themselves in passing

Is sacred to our revels, or our vigils; Here do I wait my sisters, on our way To the Hall of Arimanes, for to-night Is our great festival—'t is strange they come not.

A Voice without, singing.

The Captive Usurper. Hurl'd down from the throne, Lay buried in torpor. Forgotten and lone; I broke through his slumbers. I shiver'd his chain.

I leagued him with numbers— He's Tyrant again!

With the blood of a million he'll answer my care,

With a nation's destruction—his flight and despair.

Second Voice, without.

The ship sail'd on, the ship sail'd fast, But I left not a sail, and I left not a mast:

There is not a plank of the hull or the deck.

And there is not a wretch to lament o'er his wreck;

Save one, whom I held, as he swam, by the hair, And he was a subject well worthy my

A traitor on land, and a pirate at sea,— But I saved him to wreak further havoc for me!

FIRST DESTINY, answering.

The city lies sleeping: The morn, to deplore it, May dawn on it weeping: Sullenly, slowly,

The black plague flew o'er it-Thousands lie lowly;

Tens of thousands shall perish; The living shall fly from The sick they should cherish;

But nothing can vanquish The touch that they die from. Sorrow and anguish,

And evil and dread, Envelop a nation; The blest are the dead,

Who see not the sight Of their own desolation; This work of a night-

This wreck of a realm—this deed of my doing-

For ages I've done, and shall still be renewing!

Enter the Second and Third Destinies

The Three.

Our hands contain the hearts of men, Our footsteps are their graves; We only give to take again The spirits of our slaves!

First Des. Welcome !-Where's Nemesis ?

Second Des. At some great work; But what I know not, for my hands were full Third Des. Behold she cometh.

Enter Nemesis.

First Des. Say, where hast thou been? My sisters and thyself are slow to-night. Nem. I was detain'd repairing shatter'd thrones.

Marrying fools, restoring dynasties, Avenging men upon their enemies, And making them repent their own revenge;

Goading the wise to madness; from the dull

Shaping out oracles to rule the world Afresh, for they were waxing out of date, And mortals dared to ponder for them-

To weigh kings in the balance, and to speak

Of freedom, the forbidden fruit.—Away! We have outstay'd the hour-mount we our clouds! [Exeunt.

SCENE IV

The Hall of Arimanes—Arimanes on his Throne, a Globe of Fire, surrounded by the Spirits.

Hymn of the Spirits.

Hail to our Master!-Prince of Earth and Air!

Who walks the clouds and waters—in his hand

The sceptre of the elements, which tear Themselves to chaos at his high command!

He breatheth—and a tempest shakes the sea;

He speaketh—and the clouds reply in thunder;

He gazeth-from his glance the sunbeams flee;

He moveth-earthquakes rend the world asunder.

Beneath his footsteps the volcanoes rise: His shadow in the Pestilence; his path The comets herald through the crackling skies:

And planets turn to ashes at his wrath. To him War offers daily sacrifice;

To him Death pays his tribute; Life is his,

With all its infinite of agonies-And his the spirit of whatever is!

Enter the Destinies and Nemesis.

First Des. Glory to Arimanes! on the earth

His power increaseth—both my sisters

His bidding, nor did I neglect my duty! Second Des. Glory to Arimanes! we who bow

The necks of men, bow down before his throne!

Third Des. Glory to Arimanes! we await His nod!

Nem. Sovereign of Sovereigns! we are

And all that liveth, more or less, is ours, And most things wholly so; still to increase

Our power, increasing thine, demands our care.

And we are vigilant. Thy late commands Have been fulfill'd to the utmost.

Enter. Manfred.

A Spirit. What is here? A mortal!-Thou most rash and fatal wretch.

Bow down and worship!

Second Spirit. I do know the man-A Magian of great power, and fearful skill!

Third Spirit. Bow down and worship, slave!-

What, know'st thou not

Thine and our Sovereign?-Tremble, and obey!

All the Spirits. Prostrate thyself, and thy condemned clay,

Child of the Earth! or dread the worst. I know it;

And yet ye see I kneel not.

Fourth Spirit. 'T will be taught thee. Man. 'T is taught already;—many a night on the earth,

On the bare ground, have I bow'd down my face,

And strew'd my head with ashes; I have known

The fulness of humiliation, for

I sunk before my vain despair, and knelt To my own desolation.

Fifth Spirit. Dost thou dare Refuse to Arimanes on his throne

What the whole earth accords, behold ing not

The terror of his glory?—Crouch, I say.

Man. Bid him bow down to that which is above him,

The overruling Infinite—the Maker
Who made him not for worship—let him kneel.

And we will kneel together.

The Spirits. Crush the worm!

Tear him in pieces !-

First Des. Hence! avaunt! - he s

Prince of the Powers invisible! This man

Is of no common order, as his port
And presence here denote; his sufferings
Have been of an immortal nature, like
Our own; his knowledge, and his powers and will.

As far as is compatible with clay,

Which clogs the ethereal essence, have been such

As clay hath seldom borne; his aspirations

Have been beyond the dwellers of the earth,

And they have only taught him what we know—

That knowledge is not happiness, and science

But an exchange of ignorance for that Which is another kind of ignorance.

This is not all—the passions, attributes

This is not all—the passions, attributes
Of earth and heaven, from which no power, nor being,

Nor breath from the worm upwards is exempt,

Have pierced his heart, and in their consequence

Made him a thing which I, who pity not, Yet pardon those who pity. He is mine, And thine, it may be; be it so, or not, No other Spirit in this region hath

A soul like his—or power upon his soul.

Nem. What doth he here then?

First Des. Let him answer that.

Man. Ye know what I have known;

and without power

I could not be amongst ye: but there are Powers deeper still beyond—I come in

Of such, to answer unto what I seek. Nem. What wouldst thou?

Man. Thou canst not reply to me.
Call up the dead—my question is for them.

Nem. Great Arimanes, doth thy will avouch

The wishes of this mortal?

Nem. Whom wouldst thou Uncharnel?

Man. One without a tomb—call up

Nemesis

Shadow! or Spirit!
Whatever thou art,
Which still doth inherit
The whole or a part
Of the form of thy birth,
Of the mould of thy clay,
Which return'd to the earth,
Re-appear to the day!
Bear what thou borest,
The heart and the form,
And the aspect thou worest

Redeem from the worm.
Appear!—Appear!

Who sent thee there requires thee here ! [The Phantom of ASTARTE rises and stands in the midst.

Man. Can this be death? there's bloom upon her cheek;
But now I see it is no living hue,

But a strange hectic—like the unnatural red

Which Autumn plants upon the perish'd leaf.

It is the same! Oh, God! that I should dread

To look upon the same—Astarte!—No. I cannot speak to her—but bid her speak—

Forgive me or condemn me.

NEMESIS

By the power which hath broken The grave which enthrall'd thee, Speak to him who hath spoken, Or those who have call'd thee!

Man. She is silent,
And in that silence I am more than answer'd.

Nem. My power extends no further, Prince of Air!

It rests with thee alone—command her voice.

Ari. Spirit—obey this sceptre!
Nem. Silent still!
She is not of our order, but belongs

To the other powers. Mortal! thy quest is vain,

And we are baffled also.

Man. Hear me, hear me—
Astarte! my beloved! speak to me:
I have so much endured—so much nave so much endured—so muce endureLook on me! the grave hath not changed thee more

Than I am changed for thee. Thou

Too much, as I loved thee: we were not made

To torture thus each other, though it were

The deadliest sin to love as we have loved.

Say that thou loath's tme not—that I do bear $^{\circ}$

This punishment for both—that thou wilt be

One of the blessed—and that I shall die; For hitherto all hateful things conspire To bind me in existence—in a life

Which makes me shrink from immor-

A future like the past. I cannot rest. I know not what I ask, nor what I seek; I feel but what thou art, and what I am; And I would hear yet once before I perish The voice which was my music—Speak to me!

For I have call'd on thee in the still night.

Startled the slumbering birds from the hush'd boughs,

And woke the mountain wolves, and made the caves

Acquainted with thy vainly echoed name,

Which answer'd me — many things answer'd me—

Spirits and men—but thou wert silent all.

Yet speak to me! I have outwatch'd the stars,

And gazed o'er heaven in vain search of thee.

Speak to me! I have wander'd o'er the earth.

And never found thy likeness—Speak to Look on the fiends around—they feel for me:

I fear them not, and feel for thee alone— Speak to me! though it be in wrath; but say—

I reck not what — but let me hear thee

This once—once more!

Phantom of Astarte. Manfred. Say on, say on—

I live but in the sound—it is thy voice!

Phan. Manfred! To-morrow ends thine earthly ills.

Farewell!

Man. Yet one word more—am I for given?

Phan. Farewell!

Man. Say, shall we meet again? Phan. Farewell!

Man. One word for mercy! Say, thou lovest me.

Phan. Manfred!

[The Spirit of ASTARTE disappears. Nem. She's gone, and will not be recall'd:

Her words will be fulfill'd. Return to the earth.

A Spirit. He is convulsed.—This is to be a mortal

And seek the things beyond mortality.

Another Spirit. Yet, see, he mastereth himself, and makes

His torture tributary to his will. Had he been one of us, he would have

Had he been one of us, he would have made

An awful spirit.

Nem. Hast thou further question Of our great sovereign, or his worshippers?

Man. None.

Nem. Then for a time farewell.

Man. We meet then! where? On the

Even as thou wilt: and for the grace accorded

I now depart a debtor. Fare ye well! [Exit Manfred.

ACT III

Scene I.-A Hall in the Castle of Manfred.

MANFRED and HERMAN.

Man. What is the hour?

Her. It wants but one till sunset, And promises a lovely twilight.

Man. Say, Are all things so disposed of in the tower As I directed?

Her. All, my lord, are ready:

Here is the key and casket.

Man. It is well:
Thou may'st retire. [Exit HERMAN.
Man. (alone). There is a calm upon me-

Man. (alone). There is a calm upon melinexplicable stillness! which till now Did not belong to what I knew of life. If that I did not know philosophy

To be of all our vanities the motliest, The merest word that ever fool'd the ear From out the schoolman's jargon, I should deem

The golden secret, the sought "Kalon,"

found.

And seated in my soul. It will not last, But it is well to have known it, though but once:

It hath enlarged my thoughts with a new sense.

And I within my tablets would note

That there is such a feeling. Who is there?

Re-enter Herman.

Her. My lord, the abbot of St. Maurice craves

To greet your presence.

Enter the Abbot of St. Maurice.

Abbot. Peace be with Count Manfred!

Man. Thanks, holy father! welcome to these walls:

Thy presence honors them, and blesseth

Who dwell within them.

Abbot. Would it were so, Count!-But I would fain confer with thee alone. Man. Herman, retire.—What would my reverend guest?

Abbot. Thus, without prelude :-- Age and zeal, my office.

And good intent, must plead my privilege;

Our near, though not acquainted neighborhood,

May also be my herald. Rumors strange,

And of unholy nature, are abroad,

And busy with thy name; a noble name For centuries: may he who bears it now Transmit it unimpair'd!

Man. Proceed,—I listen. Abbot. 'T is said thou holdest converse with the things

Which are forbidden to the search of man:

That with the dwellers of the dark abodes,

The many evil and unheavenly spirits Which walk the valley of the shade of death,

Thou communest. I know that with mankind.

Thy fellows in creation, thou dost rarely Exchange thy thoughts, and that thy solitude

Is as an anchorite's, were it but holy.

Man. And what are they who do avouch these things?

Abbot. My pious brethren-the scared peasantry--

Even thy own vassals—who do look on thee

With most unquiet eyes. Thy life's in peril.

Man. Take it.

Abbot. I come to save, and not des-

I would not pry into thy secret soul: But if these things be sooth, there still is time For penitence and pity: reconcile thee

With the true church, and through the church to heaven.

Man. I hear thee. This is my reply: whate'er

I may have been, or am, doth rest between

Heaven and myself. I shall not choose a mortal

To be my mediator. Have I sinn'd

Against your ordinances? prove and punish!

Abbot. My son! I did not speak of punishment.

But penitence and pardon; -with myself The choice of such remains—and for the last.

Our institutions and our strong belief Have given me power to smooth the path from sin

To higher hope and better thoughts: the first

I leave to heaven,—"Vengeance is mine alone!"

So saith the Lord, and with all humble-

His servant echoes back the awful word. Man. Old man! there is no power in holy men,

Nor charm in prayer, nor purifying form Of penitence, nor outward look, nor fast, Nor agony—nor, greater than all these, The innate tortures of that deep despair, Which is remorse without the fear of hell.

But all in all sufficient to itself

Would make a hell of heaven-can exorcise

From out the unbound spirit the quick

Of its own sins, wrongs, sufferance, and revenge

Upon itself; there is no future pang Can deal that justice on the self-condemn'd

He deals on his own soul.

Abbot. All this is well: For this will pass away, and be succeeded By an auspicious hope, which shall look

With calm assurance to that blessed

place.

Which all who seek may win, whatever

Their earthly errors, so they be atoned: And the commencement of atonement is The sense of its necessity. Say on-

And all our church can teach thee shall be taught:

And all we can absolve thee shall be pardon'd.

Man.When Rome's sixth emperor was near his last.

The victim of a self-inflicted wound. To shun the torments of a public death From senates once his slaves, a certain soldier,

With show of loyal pity, would have stanch'd

The gushing throat with his officious robe:

The dying Roman thrust him back, and said-

Some empire still in his expiring glance— "It is too late—is this fidelity?

Abbot. And what of this?

Man. I answer with the Roman-"It is too late!"

Abbot.It never can be so, To reconcile thyself with thy own soul, And thy own soul with heaven. Hast thou no hope?

'Tis strange-even those who do despair above.

Yet shape themselves some fantasy on earth, To which frail twig they cling, like drowning men. Man. Ay-father! I have had those earthly visions,

And noble aspirations in my youth,

To make my own the mind of other men,

The enlightener of nations; and to rise I knew not whither—it might be to fall; But fall, even as the mountain-cataract, Which having leapt from its more dazzling height,

Even in the foaming strength of its abyss, (Which casts up misty columns that be-Clouds raining from the re-ascended skies,)

Lies low but mighty still.—But this is past,

My thoughts mistook themselves.

Abbot.And wherefore so? Man. I could not tame my nature down: for he Must serve who fain would sway; and soothe, and sue,

And watch all time, and pry into all place.

And be a living lie, who would become A mighty thing amongst the mean, and such

The mass are: I disdain'd to mingle with A herd, though to be leader-and of wolves.

The lion is alone, and so am I.

Abbot. And why not live and act with other men?

Man. Because my nature was averse from life:

And yet not cruel; for I would not make, But find a desolation. Like the wind,

The red-hot breath of the most lone simoom.

Which dwells but in the desert, and sweeps o'er

The barren sands which bear no shrubs to blast,

And revels o'er their wild and arid waves,

And seeketh not, so that it is not sought. But being met is deadly,—such hath

The course of my existence; but there came

Things in my path which are no more. Abbot.I 'gin to fear that thou art past all aid.

From me and from my calling; yet so young,

I still would-

Look on me! there is an order Of mortals on the earth, who do become Old in their youth, and die ere middle age,

Without the violence of warlike death: Some perishing of pleasure, some of study,

Some worn with toil, some of mere weariness,

Some of disease, and some insanity,

And some of wither'd or of broken hearts:

For this last is a malady which slavs

More than are number'd in the lists of Fate.

Taking all shapes, and bearing many names.

Look upon me! for even of all these

Have I partaken; and of all these things, One were enough; then wonder not that I Am what I am, but that I ever was, Or having been, that I am still on earth. Abbot. Yet, hear me still-

Old man! I do respect Thine order, and revere thine years; I deem

Thy purpose pious, but it is in vain: Think me not churlish; I would spare thyself,

Far more than me, in shunning at this time

All further colloguy—and so—farewell. Exit Manfred.

Abbot. This should have been a noble creature; he Hath all the energy which would have

A goodly frame of glorious elements, Had they been wisely mingled; as it is, It is an awful chaos-light and darkness, And mind and dust, and passions and pure thoughts

Mix'd, and contending without end or order.-

All dormant or destructive: he will perish.

And yet he must not; I will try once more

For such are worth redemption; and my dutv

Is to dare all things for a righteous end. I'll follow him—but cautiously, though surely. [Exit Abbot.

SCENE II

Another Chamber.

MANFRED and HERMAN.

Her. My lord, you bade me wait on vou at sunset:

He sinks behind the mountain.

Man. Doth he so? I will look on him. [Manfred advances to the Window of the Hall. Glorious Orb! the idol

Of early nature, and the vigorous race Of undiseased mankind, the giant sons Of the embrace of angels, with a sex More beautiful than they, which did

draw down

The erring spirits who can ne'er return .--Most glorious orb! that wert a worship,

The mystery of thy making was reveal'd!

Thou earliest minister of the Almighty, Which gladden'd, on their mountain tops, the hearts

Of the Chaldean shepherds, till they pour'd

Themselves in orisons! Thou material

And representative of the unknown— Who chose thee for his shadow! Thou chief star!

Centre of many stars! which mak'st our

Endurable, and temperest the hues And hearts of all who walk within thy ravs : Sire of the seasons! Monarch of the climes. And those who dwell in them! for near or far,

Our inborn spirits have a tint of thee Even as our outward aspects; -thou dost

And shine, and set in glory. Fare thee

I ne'er shall see thee more. As my first glance

Of love and wonder was for thee, then

My latest look: thou wilt not beam on To whom the gifts of life and warmth have been

Of a more fatal nature. He is gone: I follow. [Exit Manfred.

SCENE III

The Mountains—The Castle of Manfred at some distance—A Terrace before a Tower—Time, Twilight.

HERMAN, MANUEL and other Dependents of Manfred.

Her. 'Tis strange enough; night after night, for years,

He hath pursued long vigils in this tower, Without a witness. I have been within it.-

So have we all been oft-times; but from it, Or its contents, it were impossible To draw conclusions absolute, of aught His studies tend to. To be sure, there is One chamber where none enter: I would give The fee of what I have to come these three years,

To pore upon its mysteries.

'Twere dangerous; Manuel.Content thyself with what thou know'st already.

Her. Ah! Manuel! thou art elderly and wise.

And couldst say much; thou hast dwelt within the castle-

How many years is't?

Manuel. Ere Count Manfred's birth. I served his father, whom he nought resembles.

There be more sons in like predicament.

But wherein do they differ?

I speak not Manuel. Of features or of form, but mind and habits:

Count Sigismund was proud, but gay and free .-

A warrior and a reveller: he dwelt not With books and solitude, nor made the

A gloomy vigil, but a festal time, Merrier than day; he did not walk the

And forests like a wolf, nor turn aside

From men and their delights.

Beshrew the hour. But those were jocund times! I would that such

Would visit the old walls again; they look

As if they had forgotten them.

Manuel. These walls Must change their chieftain first. Oh! I have seen

Some strange things in them, Herman. Come, be friendly; Relate me some to while away our watch:

I've heard thee darkly speak of an event Which happen'd hereabouts, by this same tower.

Manuel. That was a night indeed! I do remember

'Twas twilight, as it may be now, and

Another evening; -you red cloud, which rests

On Eigher's pinnacle, so rested then,— So like that it might be the same; the wind

Was faint and gusty, and the mountain Snows

Began to glitter with the climbing moon; Count Manfred was, as now, within his tower .-

How occupied, we knew not, but with

The sole companion of his wanderings And watchings-her, whom of all earthly things

That lived, the only thing he seem'd to love.-

As he, indeed, by blood was bound to do The lady Astarte, his-

Hush! who comes here?

Enter the ABBOT.

Abbot.Where is your master?

Her. Yonder in the tower. Abbot. I must speak with him.

Tis impossible; Manuel. He is most private, and must not be thus Intruded on.

Abbot.Upon myself I take The forfeit of my fault, if fault there be-

But I must see him.

Her. Thou hast seen him once This eve already.

Abbot.Herman! I command thee, Knock, and apprize the Count of my approach.

Her. We dare not.

Abbot. Then it seems I must be herald Of my own purpose.

Reverend father, stop-Manuel. I pray you pause.

Why so? Abbot.

But step this way, Manuel. And I will tell you further. \cdot [Exeunt.

Scene IV

Interior of the Tower,

Manfred alone.

The stars are forth, the moon above the tops

Of the snow-shining mountains.—Beautiful!

I linger yet with Nature, for the Night Hath been to me a more familiar face

Than that of man; and in her starry shade

Of dim and solitary loveliness,

I learn'd the language of another world. I do remember me, that in my youth,

When I was wandering, -upon such a night

I stood within the Coliseum's wall, 'Midst the chief relics of almighty Rome: The trees which grew along the broken arches

Waved dark in the blue midnight, and the stars

Shone through the rents of ruin; from

The watch-dog bay'd beyond the Tiber: and

More near from out the Cæsars' palace

The owl's long cry, and, interruptedly, Of distant sentinels the fitful song Begun and died upon the gentle wind. Some cypresses beyond the time-worn breach

Appear'd to skirt the horizon, yet they

Within a bowshot. Where the Casars dwelt, And dwell the tuneless birds of night, amidst

A grove which springs through levell'd battlements.

And twines its roots with the imperial hearths,

Ivy usurps the laurel's place of growth; But the gladiators' bloody Circus stands, A noble wreck in ruinous perfection, While Cæsar's chambers, and the Au-gustan halls.

Grovel on earth in indistinct decay. And thou didst shine, thou rolling moon,

All this, and cast a wide and tender light, Which soften'd down the hoar austerity Of rugged desolation, and fill'd up,

As 'twere anew, the gaps of centuries; Leaving that beautiful which still was so, And making that which was not, till the

place

Became religion, and the heart ran o'er With silent worship of the great of old, -The dead but sceptred sovereigns, who still rule

Our spirits from their urns.

'Twas such a night! 'T is strange that I recall it at this time; But I have found our thoughts take wildest flight

Even at the moment when they should arrav

Themselves in pensive order.

Enter the Abbot.

Abbot. My good lord! I crave a second grace for this approach; But yet let not my humble zeal offend By its abruptness - all it hath of ill Recoils on me; its good in the effect May light upon your head - could I say heart -

Could I touch that, with words or prayers,

I should

Recall a noble spirit which hath wander'd;

But is not yet all lost.

Man.Thou know'st me not; My days are number'd, and my deeds recorded:

Retire, or 'twill be dangerous—Away!

Abbot. Thou dost not mean to menace

Man. Not I: I simply tell thee peril is at hand,

And would preserve thee. Abbot.What dost thou mean?

Man.What dost thou see?

Nothing. Abbot.

Look there I say. Man.And steadfastly:—now tell me what thou seest?

Abbot. That which should shake me.

Look there!

but I fear it not:

I see a dusk and awful figure rise, Like an infernal god, from out the earth; His face wrapt in a mantle, and his form Robed as with angry clouds: he stands between

Thyself and me - but I do fear him not. Man. Thou hast no cause—he shall not harm thee—but

His sight may shock thine old limbs into palsy.

I say to thee-Retire!

Abbot. And I reply—

Never-till I have battled with this fiend :-

What doth he here:

Man. Why-ay-what doth he here? I did not send for him,—he is unbidden. Abbot. Alas! lost mortal! what with guests like these Hast thou to do? I tremble for thy sake: Why doth he gaze on thee, and thou on him?

Ah! he unveils his aspect: on his brow The thunder-scars are graven: from his

Glares forth the immortality of hell-Avaunt!-

Man. Pronounce—what is thy mission? Spirit. Come!— Abbot. What art thou, unknown being?

answer!-speak! Spirit. The genius of this mortal.-

Come! 'tis time.

Man. I am prepared for all things, but denv

The power which summons me. Who sent thee here?

Spirit. Thou'lt know anon-Come! Come!

I have commanded Things of an essence greater far than thine.

And striven with thy masters. Get thee hence !

Spirit. Mortal! thine hour is come-

Away! I say.

Man. I knew, and know my hour is come, but not

To render up my soul to such as thee: Away! I'll die as I have lived-alone. Spirit. Then I must summon up my brethren.—Rise!

Other Spirits rise up. Abbot. Avaunt! ye evil ones! -

Avaunt! I say:

Ye have no power where piety hath power.

And I do charge ye in the name-

Old man! Spirit. We know ourselves, our mission, and thine order;

Waste not thy holy words on idle uses. It were in vain: this man is forfeited. Once more I summon him-Away! Away!

Man. I do defy ye,—though I feel my

Is ebbing from me, yet I do defy ye; Nor will I hence, while I have earthly breath

To breathe my scorn upon ye—earthly strength

To wrestle, though with spirits; what ye take

Shall be ta'en limb by limb.

Spirit. Reluctant mortal! Is this the Magian who would so pervade The world invisible, and make himself Almost our equal? Can it be that thou Art thus in love with life? the very life Which made thee wretched!

Thou false fiend, thou liest! My life is in its last hour,—that I know. Nor would redeem a moment of that hour ;

I do not combat against death, but thee And thy surrounding angels; my past power.

Was purchased by no compact with thy

But by superior science—penance, daring.

And length of watching, strength of mind, and skill

In knowledge of our fathers—when the earth

Saw men and spirits walking side by side,

TO THOMAS MOORE

My boat is on the shore,
And my bark is on the sea;
But, before I-go, Tom Moore,
Here's a double health to thee!

Here's a sigh to those who love me, And a smile to those who hate; And, whatever sky's above me, Here's a heart for every fate.

Though the ocean roar around me,
Yet it still shall bear me on;
Though a desert should surround me,
It hath springs that may be won.

Were't the last drop in the well, As I gasp'd upon the brink, Ere my fainting spirit fell, 'Tis to thee that I would drink.

With that water, as this wine,
The libation I would pour
Should be—peace with thine and mine,
And a health to thee, Tom Moore.

FROM CHILDE HAROLD. CANTO IV

I stood in Venice, on the Bridge of Sighs; [Stanza 1 A palace and a prison on each hand: I saw from out the wave her structures

As from the stroke of the enchanter's wand:

A thousand years their cloudy wings expand

Around me, and a dying Glory smiles O'er the far times, when many a subject land

Look'd to the winged Lion's marble piles, Where Venice sate in state, throned on her hundred isles!

She looks a sea Cybele, fresh from ocean, Rising with her tiara of proud towers At airy distance, with majestic motion, A ruler of the waters and their powers; And such she was;—her daughters had their dowers

From spoils of nations, and the exhaustless East

Pour'd in her lap all gems in sparkling showers.

In purple was she robed, and of her feast Monarchs partook, and deem'd their dignity increased, In Venice Tasso's echoes are no more, And silent rows the songless gondolier; Her palaces are crumbling to the shore, And music meets not always now the ear:

Those days are gone—but Beauty still is

States fall, arts fade—but Nature doth not die,

Nor yet forget how Venice once was dear,

The pleasant place of all festivity,
The revel of the earth, the masque of Italy!

But unto us she hath a spell beyond Her name in story, and her long array Of mighty shadows, whose dim forms despond

Above the dogeless city's vanish'd sway; Ours is a trophy which will not decay With the Rialto; Shylock and the Moor, And Pierre, cannot be swept or worn away—

The keystones of the arch! though all were o'er,

For us repeopled were the solitary shore.

The beings of the mind are not of clay; Essentially immortal, they create And multiply in us a brighter ray And more beloved existence: that which

Prohibits to dull life, in this our state
Of mortal bondage, by these spirits supplied,

First exiles, then replaces what we hate; Watering the heart whose early flowers have died,

And with a fresher growth replenishing the void.

When Athens' armies fell at Syracuse, And fetter'd thousands bore the yoke of war, [St. 16

And bids him thank the bard for freedom and his strains.

Thus, Venice, if no stronger claim were thine,

Were all thy proud historic deeds forgot, Thy choral memory of the Bard divine, Thy love of Tasso, should have cut the knot

Which ties thee to thy tyrants; and thy

Abandon Ocean's children; in the fall Of Venice think of thine, despite thy watery wall.

I loved her from my boyhood; she to me Was as a fairy city of the heart,

Rising like water-columns from the sea, Of joy the sojourn, and of wealth the mart;

And Otway, Radcliffe, Schiller, Shakespeare's art,

Had stamp'd her image in me, and even so,

Although I found her thus, we did not part,

Perchance even dearer in her day of woe, Than when she was a boast, a marvel and a show.

And meditation chasten'd down, enough;
And more, it may be, than I hoped or

There are some feelings Time cannot benumb,

Which was the mightiest in its old command,

And is the loveliest, and must ever be The master-mould of Nature's heavenly hand;

Wherein were cast the heroic and the free.

The beautiful, the brave, the lords of earth and sea,

The commonwealth of kings, the men of Rome!

And even since, and now, fair Italy!
Thou art the garden of the world, the

Of all Art yields, and Nature can decree;

Even in thy desert, what is like to thee? Thy very weeds are beautiful, thy waste More rich than other climes' fertility; Thy wreck a glory, and thy ruin graced With an immaculate charm which cannot be defaced.

The moon is up, and yet it is not night; Sunset divides the sky with her; a sea Of glory streams along the Alpine height

Of blue Friuli's mountains; Heaven is

From clouds, but of all colors seems to be.—

Melted to one vast Iris of the West,— Where the Day joins the past Eternity, While, on the other hand, meek Dian's crest

Floats through the azure air—an island of the blest!

A single star is at her side, and reigns With her o'er half the lovely heaven; but still

Yon sunny sea heaves brightly, and remains

Roll'd o'er the peak of the far Rhætian hill,

As Day and Night contending were, until

Nature reclaim'd her order:—gently flows

The deep-dyed Brenta, where their hues instil

The odorous purple of a new-born rose, Which streams upon her stream, and glass'd within it glows,

Fill'd with the face of heaven, which, from afar,

Comes down upon the waters; all its hues,

From the rich sunset to the rising star, Their magical variety diffuse:

And now they change; a paler shadow strews

Its mantle o'er the mountains; parting

Dies like the dolphin, whom each pang imbues

With a new color as it gasps away,

The last still loveliest,—till—'t is gone -and all is gray.

Italia! oh Italia! thou who hast [St. 42] The fatal gift of beauty, which became A funeral dower of present woes and past,

On thy sweet brow is sorrow plough'd by shame.

And annals graved in characters of flame.

Oh, God! that thou wert in thy naked-

Less lovely or more powerful, and couldst claim

Thy right, and awe the robbers back, who press

To shed thy blood, and drink the tears of thy distress;

Then might'st thou more appal; or, less desired.

Be homely and be peaceful, undeplored For thy destructive charms; then, still untired.

Would not be seen the armed torrents pour'd

Down the deep Alps; nor would the hostile horde

Of many-nation'd spoilers from the Po Quaff blood and water; nor the stranger's

Be thy sad weapon of defence, and so, Victor or vanquish'd, thou the slave of friend or foe.

Italy! through other [St. 47] Thy wrongs should ring, and shall, from

Was then our guardian, and is still our guide;

Parent of our religion! whom the wide Nations have knelt to for the keys of heaven!

Europe, repentant of her parricide, Shall yet redeem thee, and, all backward driven,

Roll the barbarian tide, and sue to be forgiven.

The cypress, hear the owl, and plod your

Whose agonies are evils of a day—

A world is at our feet as fragile as our clay.

The Niobe of nations! there she stands, Childless and crownless, in her voiceless

An empty urn within her wither'd hands.

Whose holy dust was scatter'd long ago; The Scipios' tomb contains no ashes now: The very sepulchres lie tenantless

Of their heroic dwellers: dost thou flow, Old Tiber! through a marble wilderness?

Rise, with thy vellow waves, and mantle her distress.

The Goth, the Christian, Time, War, Flood, and Fire,

Have dealt upon the seven-hill'd city's pride;

She saw her glories star by star expire. And up the steep barbarian monarchs ride.

Where the car climb'd the Capitol; far and wide

Chaos of ruins! who shall trace the void, O'er the dim fragments cast a lunar light,

And say, "here was, or is," where all is doubly night?

Can tyrants but by tyrants conquer'd be. And Freedom find no champion and no child

Such as Columbia saw arise when she Sprung forth a Pallas, arm'd and undefiled?

Or must such minds be nourish'd in the wild.

Deep in the unpruned forest, 'midst the

Of cataracts, where nursing Nature smiled

On infant Washington? Has Earth no more

Such seeds within her breast, or Europe no such shore?

Where is the rock of Triumph, the high place St. 112 Where Rome embraced her heroes?

where the steep

Cured all ambition. Did the conquerors heap

Their spoils here? Yes; and in you field below, A thousand years of silenced factions sleep--The Forum, where the immortal accents glow,

And still the eloquent air breathesburns with Cicero!

Arches on arches! as it were that Rome. Collecting the chief trophies of her line. Would build up all her triumphs in one dome.

Her Coliseum stands: the moonbeams

shine

As 'twere its natural torches, for divine Should be the light which streams here to illume This long-explored but still exhaustless

mine

Of contemplation and the azure gloom Of an Italian night, where the deep skies assume

Hues which have words, and speak to ye of heaven,

Floats o'er this vast and wondrous monument.

And shadows forth its glory. There is

Unto the things of earth, which Time hath bent.

A spirit's feeling, and where he hath leant

His hand, but broke his scythe, there is a power

And magic in the ruin'd battlement. For which the palace of the present hour Must yield its pomp, and wait till ages are its dower. And here the buzz of eager nations ran.

In murmur'd pity, or loud-roar'd applause, As man was slaughter' by his fellow-

And wherefore slaughter'd? wherefore, but because

Such were the bloody Circus' genial laws.

And the imperial pleasure.—Wherefore not?

What matters where we fall to fill the maws

Of worms—on battle-plains or listed spot?

Both are but theatres where the chief actors rot.

I see before me the Gladiator lie [St. 140] He leans upon his hand-his manly

Consents to death, but conquers agony, And his droop'd head sinks gradually

And through his side the last drops, ebbing slow

From the red gash, fall heavy, one by one.

Like the first of a thunder-shower: and now The arena swims around him-he is gone, Ere ceased the inhuman shout which hail'd the wretch who won.

He heard it, but he heeded not—his eves Were with his heart, and that was far away;

He reck'd not of the life he lost nor prize. But where his rude hut by the Danube lay,

There were his young barbarians all at play,

There was their Dacian mother-he, their sire, Butcher'd to make a Roman holiday—

All this rush'd with his blood-Shall he expire

And unavenged? Arise! ve Goths, and glut your ire!

But here, where Murder breathed her bloody steam;

And here, where buzzing nations choked the ways,

And roar'd or murmur'd like a mountain stream

Dashing or winding as its torrent strays; Here, where the Roman million's blame or praise

Was death or life, the playthings of a crowd,

My voice sounds much-and fall the stars' faint rays

On the arena void—seats crush'd, walls bow'd-

And galleries, where my steps seem echoes strangely loud.

A ruin-yet what ruin! from its mass Walls, palaces, half-cities, have been rear'd:

Yet oft the enormous skeleton ye pass, And marvel where the spoil could have appear'd.

Hath it indeed been plunder'd, or but clear'd?

Alas! developed, opens the decay,

When the colossal fabric's form is near'd: It will not bear the brightness of the day, Which streams too much on all years, man, have reft away.

But when the rising moon begins to climb

Its topmost arch, and gently pauses there:

When the stars twinkle through the loops of time,

And the low night-breeze waves along the air

The garland-forest, which the gray walls wear.

Like laurels on the bald first Cæsar's head:

When the light shines serene but doth not glare,

Then in this magic circle raise the dead: Heroes have trod this spot-'tis on their dust ye tread.

But where is he, the Pilgrim of my song, The being who upheld it through the past? ΓSt. 164 Methinks he cometh late and tarries long.

He is no more-these breathings are his

His wanderings done, his visions ebbing

And he himself as nothing:—if he was Aught but a phantasy, and could be class'd

With forms which live and suffer-let that pass-

His shadow fades away into Destruction's mass,

Which gathers shadow, substance, life, and all

That we inherit in its mortal shroud, And spreads the dim and universal pall Through which all things grow phantoms: and the cloud

Between us sinks, and all which ever glow'd.

Till Glory's self is twilight, and displays A melancholy halo scarce allow'd

To hover on the verge of darkness; rays

Sadder than saddest night, for they distract the gaze.

And send us prying into the abyss. To gather what we shall be when the frame

Shall be resolved to something less than

Its wretched essence; and to dream of

And wipe the dust from off the idle name We never more shall hear,—but never

Oh, happier thought! can we be made the same:

It is enough in sooth that once we bore These fardels of the heart—the heart whose sweat was gore.

But I forget.—My Pilgrim's shrine is won. And he and I must part,—so let it be-His task and mine alike are nearly done; Yet once more let us look upon the sea; The midland ocean breaks on him and

And from the Alban Mount we now behold

Our friend of youth, that Ocean, which when we

Beheld it last by Calpe's rock unfold Those waves, we follow'd on till the dark Euxine roll'd

Upon the blue Symplegades: long years— Long, though not very many-since have done [St. 176

Their work on both; some suffering and some tears

As if there were no man to trouble what is clear.

With one fair Spirit for my minister, That I might all forget the human race, And, hating no one, love but only her! Ye elements !—in whose ennobling stir I feel myself exalted—Can ye not Accord me such a being! Do I err In deeming such inhabit many a spot? Though with them to converse can rare ly be our lot.

There is a pleasure in the pathless woods,
There is a rapture on the lonely shore,
There is society, where none intrudes,
By the deep Sea, and music in its roar:
I love not Man the less, but Nature more,
From these our interviews, in which I steal

From all I may be, or have been before, To mingle with the Universe, and feel What I can ne'er express, yet cannot all conceal.

Roll on, thou deep and dark blue Ocean —roll!

Ten thousand fleets sweep over thee in vain;

Man marks the earth with ruin—his control

Stops with the shore; upon the watery plain

The wrecks are all thy deed, nor doth remain

A shadow of man's ravage, save his own, When, for a moment, like a drop of rain, He sinks into thy depths with bubbling groan,

Without a grave, unknell'd, uncoffin'd, and unknown.

His steps are not upon thy paths—thy fields

Are not a spoil for him,—thou dost arise And shake him from thee; the vile strength he wields

For earth's destruction thou dost all despise.

Spurning him from thy bosom to the skies,

And send'st him, shivering in thy playful spray

And howling, to his Gods, where haply lies

His petty home in some near port or bay And dashest him again to earth:—there let him lay.

The armaments which thunderstrike the walls,

Of rock-built cities, bidding nations quake,

And monarchs tremble in their capitals, The oak leviathans, whose huge ribs make

Their clay creator the vain title take Of lord of thee, and arbiter of war— These are thy toys, and, as the snowy flake,

They melt into thy yeast of waves, which mar

Alike the Armada's pride or spoils of Trafalgar.

Thy shores are empires, changed in all save thee—

Assyria, Greece, Rome, Carthage, what are they?

Thy waters wash'd them power while they were free,

And many a tyrant since; their shores obey

The stranger, slave, or savage; their de-

Has dried up realms to deserts: not so thou;—

Unchangeable, save to thy wild waves'

Time writes no wrinkle on thine azure brow:

Such as creation's dawn beheld, thou rollest now.

Thou glorious mirror, where the Almighty's form

Glasses itself in tempests; in all time,—Calm or convulsed, in breeze, or gale, or storm,

Icing the pole, or in the torrid clime Dark-heaving—boundless, endless, and sublime.

The image of eternity, the throne
Of the Invisible; even from out thy slime
The monsters of the deep are made;

each zone
Obeys thee; thou goest forth, dread, fathomless, alone.

And I have loved thee, Ocean! and my joy

Of youthful sports was on thy breast to be

Borne, like thy bubbles, onward; from a boy

I wanton'd with thy breakers—they to me

Were a delight; and if the freshening sea Made them a terror—'twas a pleasing fear.

For I was as it were a child of thee, And trusted to thy billows far and near,

And trusted to thy billows far and near,
And laid my hand upon thy mane—as I do here.

My task is done, my song hath ceased,
my theme
Hes died into an eaboutit is 6t

Has died into an echo; it is fit

The spell should break of this protracted dream.

The torch shall be extinguish'd which hath lit

My midnight lamp—and what is writ, is writ;

Would it were worthier! but I am not

That which I have been—and my visions flit

Less palpably before me—and the glow Which in my spirit dwelt is fluttering, faint, and low,

Farewell! a word that must be, and hath been—

A sound which makes us linger;—yet—farewell!

Ye! who have traced the Pilgrim to the scene

Which is his last, if in your memories

dwell
A thought which once was his, if on ye swell

A single recollection, not in vain

He wore his sandal-shoon and scallopshell;

Farewell! with him alone may rest the pain.

If such there were—with you, the moral of his strain.

DON JUAN

DEDICATION

BOB SOUTHEY! You're a poet—Poet-laureate,

And representative of all the race;
Although 't is true that you turn'd out a Tory at

Last,—yours has lately been a common case;

And now, my Epic Renegade! what are ye at?

ye at?
With all the Lakers, in and out of place?

A nest of tuneful persons, to my eye Like "four and twenty Blackbirds in a pye;

'Which pye being open'd they began to

(This old song and new simile holds good),

'A dainty dish to set before the King,"
Or Regent, who admires such kind of food;—

And Coleridge, too, has lately taken wing,

But like a hawk encumber'd with his hood,—

Explaining metaphysics to the nation— I wish he would explain his Explanation.

You, Bob! are rather insolent, you know,

At being disappointed in your wish To supersede all warblers here below.

And be the only Blackbird in the dish; And then you overstrain yourself, or so, And tumble downward like the flying

Gasping on deck, because you soar too high, Bob,

And fall for lack of moisture quite a-dry, Bob!

And Wordsworth, in a rather long "Excursion"

(I think the quarto holds five hundred pages),

Has given a sample from the vasty version of his new system to perplex the sages;

'T is poetry—at least by his assertion, And may appear so when the dog-star

And he who understands it would be able To add a story to the Tower of Babel.

You—Gentlemen! by dint of long seclusion

From better company, have kept your own

At Keswick, and through still continued

fusion
Of one another's minds, at last have grown

To deem as a most logical conclusion,

That poesy has wreaths for you alone;
There is a narrowness in such a notion,
Which makes me wish you'd change your lakes for ocean.

I would not imitate the petty thought,
Nor coin my self-love to so base a vice.
For all the glory your conversion
brought,

Since gold alone should not have been its price,

You have your salary; was 't for that you wrought?

And Wordsworth has his place in the Excise.

You're shabby fellows—true—but poets still,

And duly seated on the immortal hill.

Your bays may hide the baldness of your brows-

Perhaps some virtuous blushes;—let them go—

To you I envy neither fruit nor boughs—And for the fame you would engross below,

The field is universal, and allows

Scope to all such as feel the inherent glow;

Scott, Rogers, Campbell, Moore and Crabbe will try

'Gainst you the question with posterity.

For me, who, wandering with pedestrian Muses,

Contend not with you on the winged steed.

I wish your fate may yield ye, when she

The fame you envy, and the skill you need;

And recollect a poet nothing loses

In giving to his brethren their full meed

Of merit, and complaint of present days Is not the certain path to future praise.

He that reserves his laurels for posterity
(Who does not often claim the bright reversion)

Has generally no great crop to spare it,

Being only injured by his own assertion;

And although here and there some glorious rarity

Arise like Titan from the sea's immersion,

The major part of such appellants go
To—God knows where—for no one else
can know.

If, fallen in evil days on evil tongues, Milton appealed to the Avenger, Time, If Time, the Avenger, execrates his wrongs,

And makes the word "Miltonic" mean
"sublime,"

He deign'd not to belie his soul in songs, Nor turn his very talent to a crime;

He did not loathe the Sire to laud the Son,

But closed the tyrant-hater he begun.

Think'st thou, could he—the blind Old Man,—arise.

Like Samuel from the grave, to freeze once more

The blood of monarchs with his prophecies.

Or be alive again—again all hoar With time and trials, and those helpless

And heartless daughters—worn—and pale—and poor;

Would he adore a sultan? he obey
The intellectual eunuch Castlereagh?

Cold-blooded, smooth-faced, placid miscreant!

Dabbling its sleek young hands in Erin's gore

And thus for wider carnage taught to pant,

Transferr'd to gorge upon a sister shore,

The vulgarest tool that Tyranny could want,
With just enough of talent, and no

more,
To lengthen fetters by another fix'd,

And offer poison long already mix'd.

An orator of such set trash of phrase Ineffably—legitimately vile,

That even its grossest flatterers dare not praise,

Nor foes—all nations—condescend to smile;

Not even a sprightly blunder's spark can blaze

From that Ixion grindstone's ceaseless toil,

That turns and turns to give the world a notion

Of endless torments and perpetual motion.

A bungler even in its disgusting trade,
And botching, patching, leaving still behind

Something of which its masters are afraid,

States to be curb'd, and thoughts to be confined,

Conspiracy or Congress to be made— Cobbling at manacles for all mankind—

A tinkering slave-maker, who mends old chains,

With God and man's abhorrence for its gains.

If we may judge of matter by the mind, Emasculated to the marrow It

Hath but two objects, how to serve, and bind.

Deeming the chain it wears even men may fit,

Eutropius of its many masters—blind
To worth as freedom, wisdom as to wit,
Fearless—because no feeling dwells in

Its very courage stagnates to a vice.

Where shall I turn me not to view its bonds,

For I will never feel them;—Italy!
Thy late reviving Roman soul desponds
Beneath the lie this State-thing breathed o'er thee—

Thy clanking chain, and Erin's yet green wounds.

wounds,

Have voices—tongues to cry aloud for me. Europe has slaves, allies, kings, armies still,

And Southey lives to sing them very ill.

Meantime, Sir Laureate, I proceed to dedicate.

In honest simple verse, this song to you.

And, if in flattering strains I do not predicate,

'T is that I still retain my "buff and blue;"

My politics as yet are all to educate:
Apostasy's so fashionable, too,

To keep one creed's a task grown quite Herculean:

Is it not so, my Tory, Ultra-Julian? September, 1818. July 15, 1819.

POETICAL COMMANDMENTS

If ever I should condescend to prose, I'll write poetical commandments, which [St. 204

That went before; in these I shall enrich

My text with many things that no one knows,

And carry precept to the highest pitch: I'll call the work "Longinus o'er a Bottle, Or, Every Poet his own Aristotle."

Thou shalt believe in Milton, Dryden, Pope;

Thou shalt not set up Wordsworth, Coleridge, Southey;

Because the first is crazed beyond all hope,

The second drunk, the third so quaint and mouthy:

With Crabbe it may be difficult to cope, And Campbell's Hippocrene is some what drouthy:

Thou shalt not steal from Samuel Rogers,

Commit—flirtation with the muse of Moore.

Thou shalt not covet Mr. Sotheby's Muse,

His Pegasus, nor anything that's his; Thou shalt not bear false witness like "the Blues"—

(There's one, at least, is very fond of this);

Thou shalt not write, in short, but what I choose:

This is true criticism, and you may kiss--

Exactly as you please, or not—the rod; But if you don't, I'll lay it on, by G—d!

Now, like Friar Bacon's brazen head, I've spoken,

"Time is, Time was, Time's past: "-a chymic treasure

Is glittering youth, which I have spent betimes-

My heart in passion, and my head on rhymes.

What is the end of fame? 't is but to fill A certain portion of uncertain paper: Some liken it to climbing up a hill

Whose summit, like all hills, is lost in vapor;

For this men write, speak, preach, and heroes kill,

And bards burn what they call their "midnight taper,"

To have, when the original is dust,

A name, a wretched picture, and worse bust.

Canto I. September, 1818. July 15, 1819.

FROM CANTO II

THE SHIPWRECK

'Twas twilight, and the sunless day went down [St. 49. Over the waste of waters; like a veil,

Which, if withdrawn, would but disclose the frown

Of one whose hate is mask'd but to assail. Thus to their hopeless eyes the night was

And grimly darkled o'er the faces pale, And the dim desolate deep: twelve days had Fear

Been their familiar, and now Death was here.

Some trial had been making at a raft,

With little hope in such a rolling sea. A sort of thing at which one would have laugh'd,

If any laughter at such times could be, Unless with people who too much have quaff'd.

And have a kind of wild and horrid

Half epileptical, and half hysterical: Their preservation would have been a miracle.

At half-past eight o'clock, booms, hencoops, spars,

And all things, for a chance, had been cast loose

That still could keep affoat the struggling tars, For yet they strove, although of no great use:

There was no light in heaven but a few stars,

The boats put off o'ercrowded with their crews:

She gave a heel, and then a lurch to port, And, going down head-foremost-sunk, in short.

Then rose from sea to sky the wild farewell-

Then shriek'd the timid, and stood still the brave-

Then some leap'd overboard with dreadful yell,

As eager to anticipate their grave;

And the sea yawn'd around her like a hell.

And down she suck'd with her the whirling wave,

Like one who grapples with his enemy, And strives to strangle him before he die.

And first one universal shrick there rush'd.

Louder than the loud ocean, like a

Of echoing thunder; and then all was hush'd.

Save the wild wind and the remorseless dash

Of billows; but at intervals there gush'd, Accompanied with a convulsive splash, A solitary shriek, the bubbling cry

Of some strong swimmer in his agony.

HAIDEE

How long in his damp trance young Juan lay [St. 111. He knew not, for the earth was gone for him.

And time had nothing more of night nor day

For his congealing blood, and senses dim;

And how this heavy faintness pass'd away

He knew not, till each painful pulse and limb.

And tingling vein, seem'd throbbing back to life,

For Death, though vanquish'd, still retired with strife.

His eyes he open'd, shut, again unclosed, For all was doubt and dizziness; he thought

He still was in the boat, and had but dozed. And felt again with his despair o'er-wrought, And wish'd it death in which he had reposed.

And then once more his feelings back were brought,

And slowly by his swimming eyes was

A lovely female face of seventeen.

'Twas bending close o'er his, and the small mouth

Seem'd almost prying into his for breath;

And chafing him, the soft warm hand of youth

Recall'd his answering spirits back from death;

And, bathing his chill temples, tried to soothe

Each pulse to animation, till beneath Its gentle touch and trembling care, a

To these kind efforts made a low reply.

Then was the cordial pour'd, and mantle flung

Around his scarce-clad limbs; and the fair arm

Raised higher the faint head which o'er it hung;

And her transparent cheek, all pure and warm,

Pillow'd his death-like forehead; then she wrung

His dewy curls, long drench'd by every storm;

And watch'd with eagerness each throb that drew

A sigh from his heaved bosom—and hers, too.

And lifting him with care into the cave, The gentle girl, and her attendant,—

Young, yet her elder, and of brow less grave,

And more robust of figure—then begun To kindle fire, and as the new flames

Light to the rocks that roof'd them. which the sun

Had never seen, the maid, or whatsoe'er She was, appear'd distinct, and tall, and fair.

Her brow was overhung with coins of gold,

That sparkled o'er the auburn of her hair,

Her clustering hair, whose longer locks were roll'd

In braids behind; and though her stature were

Even of the highest for a female mould, They nearly reach'd her heel; and in her air

There was a something which bespoke command,

As one who was a lady in the land.

Her hair, I said, was auburn; but her eyes

Were black as death, their lashes the same hue,

Of downcast length, in whose silk shadow lies

Deepest attraction; for when to the

Forth from its raven fringe the full glance flies,

Ne'er with such force the swiftest arrow flew:

'Tis as the snake late coil'd, who pours his length,

And hurls at once his venom and his strength.

Her brow was white and low, her cheek's pure dye

Like twilight rosy still with the set sun;

Short upper lip—sweet lips! that make us sigh

Ever to have seen such; for she was one

Fit for the model of a statuary

(A race of mere impostors, when all's done—

I've seen much finer women, ripe and real,

Than all the nonsense of their stone ideal).

I'll tell you why I say so, for 't is just One should not rail without a decent cause:

There was an Irish lady, to whose bust I ne'er saw justice done, and yet she was

A frequent model; and if e'er she must Yield to stern Time and Nature's wrinkling laws,

They will destroy a face which mortal thought

Ne'er compass'd, nor less mortal chisel wrought.

And such was she, the lady of the cave: Her dress was very different from the Spanish,

Simpler, and yet of colors not so grave; For, as you know, the Spanish women banish

Bright hues when out of doors, and yet, while wave

Around them (what I hope will never vanish)

The basquina and the mantilla, they Seem at the same time mystical and gay.

But with our damsel this was not the case:

Her dress was many-color'd, finely spun;

Her locks curl'd negligently round her face,

But through them gold and gems profusely shone:

Her girdle sparkled, and the richest lace Flow'd in her veil, and many a precious stone

Flash'd on her little hand; but, what was shocking,

Her small snow feet had slippers, but no stocking.

The other female's dress was not unlike,
But of inferior materials: she

Had not so many ornaments to strike, Her hair had silver only, bound to be Her dowry; and her veil, in form alike, Was coarser; and her air, though firm, less free; Her hair was thicker, but less long; her eyes As black, but quicker, and of smaller size.

And these two tended him, and cheer'd him both

With food and raiment, and those soft attentions,

Which are—(as I must own)—of female growth,

And have ten thousand delicate inventions:

They made a most superior mess of broth,
A thing which poesy but seldom mentions,

But the best dish that e'er was cook'd since Homer's

Achilles order'd dinner for new comers.

The coast—I think it was the coast that I Was just describing—Yes, it was the coast—
[St. 181]

Lay at this period quiet as the sky, The sands untumbled, the blue waves untost,

And all was stillness, save the sea-bird's cry,

And dolphin's leap, and little billow crost

By some low rock or shelve, that made it fret

Against the boundary it scarcely wet.

And forth they wander'd, her sire being gone,

As I have said, upon an expedition; And mother, brother, guardian, she had

Save Zoe, who, although with due precision She waited on her lady with the sun.

Thought daily service was her only mission.

Bringing warm water, wreathing her long tresses,

And asking now and then for cast-off dresses.

It was the cooling hour, just when the rounded Red sun sinks down behind the azure

Which then seems as if the whole earth it bounded.

Circling all nature, hush'd, and dim, and still.

With the far mountain-crescent half surrounded

On one side, and the deep sea calm and chill.

Upon the other, and the rosy sky,

With one star sparkling through it like an eve.

And thus they wander'd forth, and hand in hand.

Over the shining pebbles and the shells. Glided along the smooth and harden'd sand.

And in the worn and wild receptacles Work'd by the storms, yet work'd as it were plann'd,

In hollow halls, with sparry roofs and cells,

They turn'd to rest; and, each clasp'd by an arm,

Yielded to the deep twilight's purple charm.

They look'd up to the sky, whose floating glow Spread like a rosy ocean, vast and bright;

They gazed upon the glittering sea below,

Whence the broad moon rose circling into sight;

They heard the waves splash, and the wind so low.

And saw each other's dark eyes darting light

Into each other—and, beholding this, Their lips drew near, and clung into a kiss:

A long, long kiss, a kiss of youth, and

And beauty, all concentrating like rays Into one focus, kindled from above:

Such kisses as belong to early days. Where heart, and soul, and sense, in concert move.

And the blood's lava, and the pulse a blaze.

Each kiss a heart-quake,-for a kiss's strength,

I think it must be reckon'd by its length.

By length I mean duration; theirs endured

Heaven knows how long-no doubt they never reckon'd:

And if they had, they could not have secured

The sum of their sensations to a second: They had not spoken; but they felt allured.

As if their souls and lips each other beckon'd.

Which, being join'd, like swarming bees they clung-

Their hearts the flowers from whence the honey sprung.

They were alone, but not alone as they Who shut in chambers think it loneliness:

The silent ocean, and the starlight bay, The twilight glow, which momently grew less.

The voiceless sands, and dropping caves, that lav

Around them, made them to each other

As if there were no life beneath the sky Save theirs, and that their life could never die.

They fear'd no eyes nor ears on that lone beach.

They felt no terrors from the night; they were

All in all to each other; though their speech

Was broken words, they thought a language there,-

And all the burning tongues the passions

Found in one sigh the best interpreter Of nature's oracle—first love,—that all

Which Eve has left her daughters since her fall.

Alas! the love of women! it is known To be a lovely and a fearful thing;

For all of theirs upon that die is thrown, And if 't is lost, life hath no more to bring

To them but mockeries of the past alone, And their revenge is as the tiger's spring,

Deadly, and quick, and crushing; yet, as real

Torture is theirs, what they inflict they feel.

They are right; for man, to man so oft unjust,

Is always so to women: one sole bond Awaits them, treachery is all their trust; Taught to conceal, their bursting hearts despond

Over their idol, till some wealthier lust Buys them in marriage—and what rests beyond?

A thankless husband, next a faithless lover.

Then dressing, nursing, praying, and all's over.

Some take a lover, some take drams or , prayers,

Some mind their household, others dissipation,

Some run away, and but exchange their cares,

Losing the advantage of a virtuous station;

Few changes e'er can better their affairs, Theirs being an unnatural situation,

From the dull palace to the dirty hovel: Some play the devil, and then write a novel.

Haidée was Nature's bride, and knew not this:

Haidée was Passion's child, born where the sun

Showers triple light, and scorches even the kiss

Of his gazelle-eved daughters: she was Made but to love, to feel that she was

Who was her chosen: what was said or done

Elsewhere was nothing. She had nought to fear.

Hope, care, nor love beyond,—her heart beat here.

And oh! that quickening of the heart, that beat !

How much it costs us! yet each rising

Is in its cause as its effect so sweet, That wisdom, ever on the watch to rob Joy of its alchemy, and to repeat

Fine truths; even Conscience, too, has a tough job

To make us understand each good old maxim,

So good—I wonder Castlereagh don't tax

And now 't was done—on the lone shore were plighted

Their hearts; the stars, their nuptial torches, shed Beauty upon the beautiful they lighted: Ocean their witness, and the cave their bed, By their own feelings hallow'd and united.

Their priest was Solitude, and they were wed:

And they were happy, for to their young eves

Each was an angel, and earth paradise.

Oh, Love! of whom great Cæsar was the suitor,

Titus the master, Antony the slave,

Horace, Catullus, scholars, Ovid tutor, Sappho the sage blue-stocking, in whose grave

All those may leap who rather would be neuter-

(Leucadia's rock still overlooks the wave)-

Oh, Love! thou art the very god of evil, For, after all, we cannot call thee devil.

Thou mak'st the chaste connubial state precarious,

And jestest with the brows of mightiest men:

Cæsar and Pompey, Mahomet, Belisarius, Have much employ'd the muse of history's pen:

Their lives and fortunes were extremely various.

Such worthies Time will never see again;

Yet to these four in three things the same luck holds.

They all were heroes, conquerors, and cuckolds.

Thou mak'st philosophers; there's Epicurus

And Aristippus, a material crew!

Who to immoral courses would allure us By theories quite practicable too; If only from the devil they would insure

How pleasant were the maxim (not quite new),

"Eat, drink, and love; what can the rest avail us?"

So said the royal sage Sardanapalus.

But Juan! had he quite forgotten Julia?
And should he have forgotten her so soon?

I can't but say it seems to me most truly a

Perplexing question; but, no doubt, the moon

Does these things for us, and whenever newly a

Strong palpitation rises, 't is her boon, Else how the devil is it that fresh features

Have such a charm for us poor human creatures?

I hate inconstancy—I loathe, detest, Abhor, condemn, abjure the mortal made

Of such quicksilver clay that in his breast

No permanent foundation can be laid; Love, constant love, has been my constant guest,

And yet last night, being at a masquerade,

I saw the prettiest creature, fresh from Milan,

Which gave me some sensations like a villain.

But soon Philosophy came to my aid, And whisper'd, "Think of every sacred tie!"

"I will, my dear Philosophy!" I said,
"But then her teeth, and then, oh,
Heaven! her eye!

I'll just inquire if she be wife or maid, Or neither—out of curiosity."

"Stop!" cried Philosophy, with air so Grecian

(Though she was masqued then as a fair Venetian);

"Stop!" so I stopp'd.—But to return:

Men call inconstancy is nothing more Than admiration due where nature's rich

Profusion with young beauty covers o'er

Some favor'd object; and as in the niche A lovely statue we almost adore, This sort of adoration of the real

Is but a heightening of the "beau ideal."

'T is the perception of the beautiful, A fine extension of the faculties,

Platonic, universal, wonderful,

Drawn from the stars, and filter'd through the skies,

Without which life would be extremely dull;

In short, it is the use of our own eyes, With one or two small senses added, just To hint that flesh is form'd of flery dust.

Yet 't is a painful feeling, and unwilling, For surely if we always could perceive In the same object graces quite as killing

As when she rose upon us like an Eve,
'T would save us many a heart-ache,
many a shilling

(For we must get them anyhow, or grieve),

Whereas, if one sole lady pleased forever,

How pleasant for the heart, as well as liver.

The heart is like the sky, a part of heaven,

But changes night and day, too, like the sky;

Now o'er it clouds and thunder must be driven,

And darkness and destruction as on high:
But when it hath been scorch'd, and pierced, and riven, Its storms expire in water-drops; the eye

Pours forth at last the heart's blood

turn'd to tears,

Which make the English climate of our years.

The liver is the lazaret of bile,

But very rarely executes its function, For the first passion stays there such a while,

That all the rest creep in and form a junction,

Like knots of vipers on a dunghill's soil, Rage, fear, hate, jealousy, revenge, compunction,

So that all mischiefs spring up from this entrail.

Like earthquakes from the hidden fire call'd "central."

In the mean time, without proceeding more

In this anatomy. I've finish'd now

Two hundred and odd stanzas as before, That being about the number I'll allow

Each canto of the twelve, or twenty-

And, laying down my pen, I make my

Leaving Don Juan and Haidée to plead For them and theirs with all who deign to read.

Canto II., December, 1818, January, 1819. July 15, 1819.

FROM CANTO III

THE ISLES OF GREECE

The isles of Greece, the isles of Greece! Where burning Sappho loved and sung,

Where grewthe arts of war and peace,— Where Delos rose, and Phœbus sprung!

Eternal summer gilds them yet, But all, except their sun, is set.

The Scian and the Teian muse,
The hero's harp, the lover's lute,
Have found the fame your shores refuse:
Their place of birth alone is mute
To sounds which echo further west
Than your sires' "Islands of the Blest."

The mountains look on Marathon—
And Marathon looks on the sea;
And musing there an hour alone,
I dream'd that Greece might still be
free;

For standing on the Persians' grave, I could not deem myself a slave.

A king sate on the rocky brow
Which looks o'er sea-born Salamis;
And ships, by thousands, lay below,
And men in nations;—all were his!
He counted them at break of day—
And when the sun set, where were they?

And where are they? and where art thou,
My country? On thy voiceless shore
The heroic lay is tuneless now—

The heroic bosom beats no more! And must thy lyre, so long divine, Degenerate into hands like mine?

'Tis something, in the dearth of fame,
Though link'd among a fetter'd race,
To feel at least a patriot's shame,
Even as I sing, suffuse my face;
For what is left the poet here?
For Greeks a blush—for Greece a tear.

Must we but weep o'er days more blest?
Must we but blush?—Our fathers bled.
Earth! render back from out thy breast
A remnant of our Spartan dead!
Of the three hundred grant but three,
To make a new Thermopylæ!

What, silent still? and silent all?
Ah! no;—the voices of the dead
Sound like a distant torrent's fall,
And answer, "Let one living head,
But one arise,—we come, we come!"
'Tis but the living who are dumb.

In vain—in vain: strike other chords; Fill high the cup with Samian wine! Leave battles to the Turkish hordes, And shed the blood of Scio's vine!

And shed the blood of Scio's vine! Hark! rising to the ignoble call— How answers each bold Bacchanal!

You have the Pyrrhic dance as yet;
Where is the Pyrrhic phalanx gone?
Of two such lessons, why forget
The nobler and the manlier one?
You have the letters Cadmus gave—
Think ye he meant them for a slave?

Fill high the bowl with Samian wine!
We will not think of themes like these!
It made Anacreon's song divine;
He served—but served Polycrates—
A tyrant; but our masters then
Were still, at least, our countrymen.

The tyrant of the Chersonese
Was freedom's best and bravest
friend;
That tyrant was Miltiades!
Oh! that the present hour would lend
Another despot of the kind!

Such chains as his were sure to bind.

Fill high the bowl with Samian wine!

On Suli's rock, and Parga's shore,
Exists the remnant of a line

Such as the Poric mothers here:

Such as the Doric mothers bore; And there, perhaps, some seed is sown, The Heracleidan blood might own. Trust not for freedom to the Franks,

They have a king who buys and sells; In native swords and native ranks,
The only hope of courage dwells:
But Turkish force, and Latin fraud,
Would break your shield, however broad.

Fill high the bowl with Samian wine!
Our virgins dance beneath the shade—
I see their glorious black eyes shine;
But gazing on each glowing maid,

My own the burning tear-drop laves, To think such breasts must suckle slaves.

Place me on Sunium's marbled steep, Where nothing, save the waves and I, May hear our mutual murmurs sweep; There, swan-like, let me sing and die:

A land of slaves shall ne'er be mine— Dash down you cup of Samian wine!

Thus sung, or would, or could, or should have sung, St. 87

The modern Greek, in tolerable verse; If not like Orpheus quite, when Greece was young,

Yet in these times he might have done much worse:

His strain display'd some feeling—right or wrong;

And feeling, in a poet, is the source Of others' feeling; but they are such

And take all colors—like the hands of dyers.

But words are things, and a small drop of ink.

Falling like dew, upon a thought, produces

That which makes thousands, perhaps millions, think:

'Tis strange, the shortest letter which man uses

Instead of speech, may form a lasting link

Of ages; to what straits old Time reduces

Frail man when paper—even a rag like this,

Survives himself, his tomb, and all that's his!

And when his bones are dust, his grave a blank,

His station, generation, even his nation,

Become a thing, or nothing, save to rank In chronological commemoration, Some dull MS. oblivion long has sank,

Or graven stone found in a barrack's station

In digging the foundation of a closet, May turn his name up, as a rare deposit.

And glory long has made the sages smile; 'Tis something, nothing, words, ilusion wind—

Depending more upon the historian's style

Than on the name a person leaves behind:

Troy owes to Homer what whist owes to Hoyle;

The present century was growing blind To the great Marlborough's skill in giving knocks,

Until his late Life by Archdeacon Coxe.

Milton's the prince of poets—so we say;
A little heavy, but no less divine:

An independent being in his day— Learn'd, pious, temperate in love and wine;

But his life falling into Johnson's way.

We're told this great high priest of all the Nine
Was whint at college a harsh size

Was whipt at college—a harsh sire—odd spouse,

For the first Mrs. Milton left his house.

All these are, certes, entertaining facts, Like Shakspeare's stealing deer, Lord Bacon's bribes;

Like Titus' youth, and Cæsar's earliest acts;

Like Burns (whom Doctor Currie well describes);

Like Cromwell's pranks;—but although truth exacts

These amiable descriptions from the scribes,

As most essential to their hero's story, They do not much contribute to his glory.

All are not moralists, like Southey, when He prated to the world of "Pantisocrasy:"

Or Wordsworth unexcised, unhired, who

Season'd his pedlar poems with democracy;

Or Coleridge, long before his flighty pen Let to the Morning Post its aristocracy;

When he and Southey, following the same path,

Espoused two partners (milliners of Bath).

Such names at present cut a convict figure,

Their royal treason, renegado rigor,
Are good manure for their more bare biography.

Wordsworth's last quarto, by the way,

is bigger

Than any since the birthday of typography;

A drowsy frowzy poem, call'd the "Excursion,"

Writ in a manner which is my aversion.

He there builds up a formidable dyke Between his own and others' intellect:

But Wordsworth's poem, and his followers, like

Joanna Southcote's Shiloh, and her sect,

Are things which in this century don't strike

The public mind,—so few are the elect;
And the new births of both their stale virginities

Have proved but dropsies, taken for divinities.

But let me to my story: I must own,
If I have any fault, it is digression.

If I have any fault, it is digression, Leaving my people to proceed alone, While I soliloquize beyond expression:

But these are my addresses from the throne,

Which put off business to the ensuing session:

Forgetting each omission is a loss to The world, not quite so great as Ariosto.

I know that what our neighbors call "longueurs,"

(We've not so good a word, but have the thing,

In that complete perfection which insures

An epic from Bob Southey every Spring—)

Form not the true temptation which allures

The reader; but 't would not be hard to bring

Some fine examples of the epopée, To prove its grand ingredient is ennui.

We learn from Horace, "Homer sometimes sleeps;"

We feel without him, Wordsworth sometimes wakes,—

To show with what complacency he creeps,

With his dear "Wagoners," around his lakes.

He wishes for "a boat" to sail the

Of ocean?—No, of air; and then he makes

Another outcry for "a little boat," And drivels seas to set it well afloat.

If he must fain sweep o'er the ethereal plain,

And Pegasus runs restive in his "Wagon,"

Could he not beg the loan of Charles's Wain?

Or pray Medea for a single dragon? Or if, too classic for his vulgar brain,

He fear'd his neck to venture such a nag on,

And he must needs mount nearer to the moon.

Could not the blockhead ask for a balloon?

"Pedlars," and "Boats," and "Wagons!" Oh! ye shades

Of Pope and Dryden, are we come to this?

That trash of such sort not alone evades Contempt, but from the bathos' vast abyss

Floats scumlike uppermost, and these Jack Cades

Of sense and song above your graves may hiss—

The "little boatman" and his "Peter Bell"

Can sneer at him who drew "Achito-phel!"

T' our tale.—The feast was over, the slaves gone,

The dwarfs and dancing girls had all retired;

The Arab lore and poet's song were done,

And every sound of revelry expired; The lady and her lover, left alone,

The rosy flood of twilight's sky admired;

Ave Maria! o'er the earth and sea,

That heavenliest hour of Heaven is worthiest thee!

Ave Maria! blessed be the hour!

The time, the clime, the spot, where I so oft

Have felt that moment in its fullest power

power
Sink o'er the earth so beautiful and soft.

While swung the deep bell in the distant tower.

Or the faint dying day-hymn stole aloft,

And not a breath crept through the rosy

And yet the forest leaves seem'd stirr'd with prayer.

Ave Maria!'t is the hour of prayer! Ave Maria! 't is the hour of love!

Ave Maria! may our spirits dare Look up to thine and to thy Son's above!

Ave Maria! oh that face so fair!

Those downcast eyes beneath the Almighty dove-

What though 'tis but a pictured image strike.

That painting is no idol,—'t is too like.

Some kinder casuists are pleased to say, In nameless print—that I have no devotion:

But set those persons down with me to

And you shall see who has the properest notion Of getting into heaven the shortest way;

My altars are the mountains and the ocean,

Earth, air, stars,—all that springs from the great Whole,

Who hath produced, and will receive the soul.

Sweet hour of twilight!—in the solitude Of the pine forest, and the silent shore Which bounds Ravenna's immemorial wood,

Rooted where once the Adrian wave flow'd o'er,

To where the last Cæsarean fortress stood. Evergreen forest! which Boccaccio's

And Dryden's lay made haunted ground to me. How have I loved the twilight hour and thee!

The shrill cicalas, people of the pine, Making their summer lives one ceaseless song, Were the sole echoes, save my steed's and mine,

And vesper bell's that rose the boughs along

The spectre huntsman of Onesti's line, His hell-dogs, and their chase, and the fair throng

Which learn'd from this example not to

From a true lover,—shadow'd my mind's

Oh, Hesperus! thou bringest all good things-

Home to the weary, to the hungry cheer.

To the young bird the parent's brooding wings,

The welcome stall to the o'erlabor'd

Whate'er of peace about our hearthstone clings,

Whate'er our household gods protect of dear, Are gather'd round us by thy look of

rest:

Thou bring'st the child, too, to the mother's breast.

Soft hour! which wakes the wish and melts the heart

Of those who sail the seas, on the first

When they from their sweet friends are torn apart; Or fills with love the pilgrim on his

As the far bell of vesper makes him start,

Seeming to weep the dying day's decay:

Is this a fancy which our reason scorns? Ah! surely nothing dies but something mourns!

When Nero perish'd by the justest doom Which ever the destroyer yet destroy'd, Amidst the roar of liberated Rome,

Of nations freed, and the world overiov'd.

Some hands unseen strew'd flowers upon his tomb:

Perhaps the weakness of a heart not Of feeling for some kindness done, when

Had left the wretch an uncorrupted hour.

But I'm digressing; what on earth has Nero.

Or any such like sovereign buffoons, To do with the transactions of my hero, More than such madmen's fellow-man —the moon's?

Sure my invention must be down at zero, And I grown one of many "wooden spoons"

Of verse (the name with which we Cantabs please

To dub the last of honors in degrees).

I feel this tediousness will never do— 'T is being too epic, and I must cut down

(In copying) this long canto into two; They'll never find it out, unless I own The fact, excepting some experienced

And then as an improvement 't will be shown:

I'll prove that such the opinion of the critic is

Canto III. 1819–1820. August 8, 1821.

FROM CANTO IV

NOTHING so difficult as a beginning [St. 1 In poesy, unless perhaps the end;

For oftentimes when Pegasus seems winning

The race, he sprains a wing, and down we tend,

Like Lucifer when hurl'd from heaven for sinning;

Our sin the same, and hard as his to mend,

Being pride, which leads the mind to soar too far,

Till our own weakness shows us what we

But time, which brings all beings to their level.

And sharp Adversity, will teach at last Man,—and, as we would hope,—perhaps the devil.

That neither of their intellects are vast: While youth's hot wishes in our red veins revel.

We know not this—the blood flows on too fast:

But as the torrent widens towards the

We ponder deeply on each past emotion.

As boy, I thought myself a clever fellow, And wish'd that others held the same opinion;

They took it up when my days grew more mellow,

And other minds acknowledged my dominion:

Now my sere fancy "falls into the yellow Leaf," and Imagination droops her pinion,

And the sad truth which hovers o'er my desk

Turns what was once romantic to burlesque. And if I laugh at any mortal thing,
'T is that I may not weep; and if I weep, 'T is that our nature cannot always bring

Itself to apathy, for we must steep Our hearts first in the depths of Lethe's spring, Ere what we least wish to behold will

Sleep:
Thetis baptized her mortal son in Styx:
A mortal mother would on Lethe fix.

Some have accused me of a strange design Against the creed and morals of the land,

And trace it in this poem every line;

I don't pretend that I quite understand My own meaning when I would be very fine;

But the fact is that I have nothing plann'd,

Unless it were to be a moment merry, A novel word in my vocabulary.

To the kind reader of our sober clime

This way of writing will appear exotic; Pulci was sire of the half-serious rhyme, Who sang when chivalry was more Quixotic,

And revell'd in the fancies of the time,
True knights, chaste dames, huge giant kings despotic:

But all these, save the last, being obsolete, I chose a modern subject as more meet.

How I have treated it, I do not know;
Perhaps no better than they have treated me.

Who have imputed such designs as show Not what they saw, but what they wish'd to see;

But if it gives them pleasure, be it so, This is a liberal age, and thoughts are free:

Meantime Apollo plucks me by the ear,
And tells me to resume my story here.

And let the Babel round run as it may, And look on as a mourner, or a scorner Or an approver, or a mere spectator, Yawning a little as the night grows later.

But this won't do, save by and by; and he Who, like Don Juan, takes an active share,

Must steer with care through all that glittering sea

Of gems and plumes and pearls and silks, to where

He deems it is his proper place to be;
Dissolving in the waltz to some soft
air,

Or proudlier prancing with mercurial skill.

Where Science marshals forth her own quadrille.

Or, if he dance not, but hath higher views

Upon an heiress or his neighbor's bride,

Let him take care that that which he pursues

Is not at once too palpably descried.
Full many an eager gentleman oft rues
His haste; impatience is a blundering
guide,

Amongst a people famous for reflection, Who like to play the fool with circumspection.

But, if you can contrive, get next at supper;

Or if forestall'd, get opposite and ogle:—

Oh, ye ambrosial moments! always upper

In mind, a sort of sentimental bogle, Which sits for ever upon memory's crupper,

The ghost of vanish'd pleasures once in vogue! Ill

Can tender souls relate the rise and fall Of hopes and fears which shake a single ball.

But these precautionary hints can touch. Only the common run, who must pursue.

Before he can escape from so much danger

As will environ a conspicuous man.

Talk about poetry, and "rack and manger,"

And ugliness, disease, as toil and trouble:—

They are young, but know not youth it is anticipated;

Their cash comes from, their wealth goes to a Jew;

Both senates see their nightly votes participated

Between the tyrant's and the tribunes' crew;

And having voted, dined, drank, gamed, and whored,

The family vault receives another lord.

THE VISION OF JUDGMENT,1

BY

QUEVEDO REDIVIVUS

SUGGESTED BY THE COMPOSITION SO EN-TITLED BY THE AUTHOR OF "WAT TYLER"

"A Daniel come to judgment! yea, a Daniel! I thank thee, Jew, for teaching me that word."

PREFACE

It hath been wisely said, that "One fool makes many;" and it hath been poetically observed-

"That fools rush in where angels fear to tread."-POPE.

If Mr. Southey had not rushed in where he had no business, and where he never was before, and never will be again, the following poem would not have been written. It is not impossiwould not have been written. It's not impossible that it may be as good as his own, seeing that it cannot, by any species of stupidity, natural or acquired, be worse. The gross flattery, the dull impudence, the renegado intolerance, and impious cant, of the poem by the author of "Wat Tyler," are something so stupendous as to form the sublime of himself-containing the quintessence of his own attributes.

So much for his poem-a word on his preface. In this preface it has pleased the magnanimous Laureate to draw the picture of a supposed "Satanic School," the which he doth recommend to the notice of the legislature; thereby adding to his other laurels the ambition of those of an informer. If there exists anywhere except in his imagination, such a School, is he not sufficiently armed against it by his own intense vanity? The truth is, that there are certain writers whom Mr. S. imagines, like Scrub, to have "talked of him; for they laughed consumedly.

I think I know enough of most of the writers to whom he is supposed to allude, to assert, that they, in their individual capacities, have done more good, in the charities of life, to their fellow-creatures, in any one year, than Mr. Southey has done harm to himself by his absurdities in his whole life; and this is saying a great deal.
But I have a few questions to ask.
1stly, Is Mr. Southey the author of "Wat Tyler"?

Was he not refused a remedy at law by the highest judge of his beloved England, because it was a blasphemous and seditious publication ?

3dly, Was he not entitled by William Smith, in full parliament, "a rancorous renegado?" 4thly, Is he not poet laureate, with his own lines on Martin the regicide staring him in the

And, 5thly, Putting the four preceding items together, with what conscience dare he call the attention of the laws to the publications of others, be they what they may?

I say nothing of the cowardice of such a proceeding, its meanness speaks for itself; but I wish to touch upon the motive, which is neither more nor less than that Mr. S. has been laughed at a little in some recent publications, as he was of yore in the "Anti-Jacobin," by his present patrons. Hence all this "skimble-scamble stuff" about "Satanic," and so forth. However, it is worthy of him—"qualis ab incepto."

If there is anything objoryous to the political

If there is anything obnoxious to the political opinions of a portion of the public in the followopinions of a portion of the public in the following poem, they may thank Mr. Southey. He might have written hexameters, as he has written everything else, for aught that the writer cared—had they been upon another subject. But to attempt to canonize a monarch, who, whatever were his household virtues, was neither a successful nor a patriot king,—inasmuch as several years of his reign passed in war with America and Ireland, to say nothing of the with America and Ireland, to say nothing of the aggression upon France,—like all other exaggeration, necessarily begets opposition. In whatever manner he may be spoken of in this new ¹Southey published in 1821 a poem called "A Vision of Judgment," in which he extolled George III. for his personal virtues, and de-scribed his reception into heaven. In the Preface of this poem he bitterly attacked Byron for immorality in his writings. See full accounts of the affair in the biographies of Byron and Southey. The briefest and best treatment of it is in Nichol's Life of Byron, toward the end of Chapter VIII.

"Vision," his public career will not be more favorably transmitted by history. Of his private virtues (although a little expensive to the nation) there can be no doubt.

With regard to the supernatural personages treated of, I can only say that I know as much about them, and (as an honest man) have a betabout them, and (as an holdest many have a better right to talk of them than Robert Southey. I have also treated them more tolerantly. The way in which that poor insane creature, the Laureate, deals about his judgments in the next world, is like his own judgment in this. If it was not completely ludicrous, it would be something worse. I don't think that there is much more to say at present

With such rapidity of vice and woe, That he had stripp'd off both his wings in quills,

And yet was in arrear of human ills.

His business so augmented of late years, That he was forced, against his will no doubt,

(Just like those cherubs, earthly ministers,)

For some resource to turn himself about.

And claim the help of his celestial peers, To aid him ere he should be quite worn out

By the increased demand for his remarks:

Six angels and twelve saints were named his clerks.

This was a handsome board—at least for heaven:

And yet they had even then enough to do.

So many conquerors' cars were daily driven,

So many kingdoms fitted up anew; Each day too slew its thousands six or

Till at the crowning carnage, Water-

They threw their pens down in divine disgust-

The page was so besmear'd with blood and dust.

This by the way; 't is not mine to record What angels shrink from: even the very devil

On this occasion his own work abhorr'd. So surfeited with the infernal revel: Though he himself had sharpen'd every sword, It almost quench'd his innate thirst of evil. (Here Satan's sole good work deserves insertion-

'T is, that he has both generals in reversion.)

Let's skip a few short years of hollow peace,

Which peopled earth no better, hell as wont,

And heaven none—they form the tyrant's

With nothing but new names subscribed upon 't;

'T will one day finish: meantime they increase,

"With seven heads and ten horns," and all in front,

Like Saint John's foretold beast; but ours are born

Less formidable in the head than horn.

In the first year of freedom's second dawn

Died George the Third; although no tyrant, one

Who shielded tyrants, till each sense withdrawn

Left him nor mental nor external sun; A better farmer ne'er brush'd dew from lawn.

A worse king never left a realm undone!

He died—but left his subjects still behind,

One half as mad—and t'other no less blind.

He died! his death made no great stir on earth:

His burial made some pomp; there was profusion

Of velvet, gilding, brass, and no great dearth

Of aught but tears—save those shed by collusion.

For these things may be bought at their true worth;

Of elegy there was the due infusion— Bought also; and the torches, cloaks, and banners,

Heralds, and relics of old Gothic manners,

Form'd a sepulchral melodrame. Of all The fools who flock'd to swell or see the show,

Who cared about the corpse? The funeral

Made the attraction, and the black

the woe.

There throbb'd not there a thought which pierced the pall;

And when the gorgeous coffin was laid low,

It seem'd the mockery of hell to fold The rottenness of eighty years in gold.

So mix his body with the dust! It might Return to what it must far sooner, were The natural compound left alone to fight Its way back into earth, and fire, and

But the unnatural balsams merely blight
What nature made him at his birth, as bare

As the mere million's base unmummied clay—

Yet all his spices but prolong decay.

He's dead—and upper earth with him has done;

He's buried; save the undertaker's bill, Or lapidary scrawl, the world is gone For him, unless he left a German will; But where's the proctor who will ask his son?

In whom his qualities are reigning still,

Except that household virtue, most uncommon,

Of constancy to a bad, ugly woman.

"God save the king!" It is a large economy

In God to save the like: but if he will Besaving, all the better; for not one am I Of those who think damnation better still:

I hardly know too if not quite alone am I Inthis small hope of bettering future ill By circumscribing, with some slight restriction,

The eternity of hell's hot jurisdiction.

I know this is unpopular; I know
'Tis blasphemous; I know one may be damn'd

For hoping no one else may e'er be so; I know my catechism; I know we're cramm'd

With the best doctrines till we quite o'erflow;

I know that all save England's church have shamm'd.

And that the other twice two hundred churches

And synagogues have made a damn'd bad purchase.

God help us all! God help me too! I am, God knows, as helpless as the devil can wish,

And not a whit more difficult to damn,
Than is to bring to land a late-hook'd fish.

Or to the butcher to purvey the lamb; Not that I'm fit for such a noble dish, As one day will be that immortal fry Of almost everybody born to die.

Saint Peter sat by the celestial gate, And nodded o'er his keys; when, lo! there came

A wondrous noise he had not heard of late—

A rushing sound of wind, and stream, and flame;

In short, a roar of things extremely great,

Which would have made aught save a saint exclaim;

But he, with first a start and then a wink, [think!

Said, "There's another star gone out, I

But ere he could return to his repose,

A cherub flapp'd his right wing o'er his eyes

At which St. Peter yawn'd, and rubb'd his nose:

"Saint porter," said the angel, "pri-thee rise!"

Waving a goodly wing, which glow'd, as glows

An earthly peacock's tail, with heavenly dyes:

To which the saint replied, "Well, what's the matter?

"Is Lucifer come back with all this clatter?"

"No," quoth the cherub; "George the Third is dead."

"And who is George the Third?" replied the apostle:

"What George? what Third?" "The king of England," said
The angel. "Well! he won't find kings to jostle

Him on his way; but does he wear his head?

Because the last we saw here had a tustle.

And ne'er would have got into heaven's good graces,

Had he not flung his head in all our faces.

"He was, if I remember, king of France: That head of his, which could not keep a crown

On earth, yet ventured in my face to advance

A claim to those of martyrs—like my

If I had had my sword, as I had once When I cut ears off, I had cut him down:

But having but my keys, and not my brand.

I only knock'd his head from out his hand.

"And then he set up such a headless howl.

That all the saints came out and took him in:

And there he sits by St. Paul, cheek by

That fellow Paul—the parvenù! The

Of St. Bartholomew, which makes his

In heaven, and upon earth redeem'd his sin,

So as to make a martyr, never sped Better than did this weak and wooden head.

"But had it come up here upon its shoulders.

There would have been a different tale to tell:

The fellow-feeling in the saints' beholders Seems to have acted on them like a spell,

And so this very foolish head heaven solders

Back on its trunk: it may be very well. And seems the custom here, to overthrow Whatever has been wisely done below."

The angel answer'd, "Peter! do not pout:

The king who comes has head and all entire.

And never knew much what it was about-

He did as doth the puppet—by its wire, And will be judged like all the rest, no doubt:

My business and your own is not to inquire

Into such matters, but to mind our cue-Which is to act as we are bid to do."

While thus they spake, the angelic cara-

Arriving like a rush of mighty wind, Cleaving the fields of space, as doth the

Some silver stream (say Ganges, Nile or Inde,

Or Thames, or Tweed), and 'midst them an old man

With an old soul, and both extremely blind.

Halted before the gate, and in his shroud Seated their fellow traveller on a cloud.

But bringing up the rear of this bright

A Spirit of a different aspect waved His wings, like thunder-clouds above some coast

Whose barren beach with frequent wrecks is paved;

His brow was like the deep when tempest-toss'd;

Fierce and unfathomable thoughts engraved

Eternal wrath on his immortal face,

And where he gazed a gloom pervaded space.

As he drew near, he gazed upon the gate Ne'er to be enter'd more by him or Sin,

With such a glance of supernatural hate,
As made Saint Peter wish himself
within:

He patter'd with his keys at a great rate, And sweated through his apostolic skin:

Of course his perspiration was but ichor, Or some such other spiritual liquor.

The very cherubs huddled all together,
Like birds when soars the falcon; and they felt

A tingling to the tip of every feather, And form'd a circle like Orion's belt Around their poor old charge; who scarce knew whither His guards had led him, though they gently dealt

With royal manes (for by many stories, And true, we learn the angels all are Tories).

As things were in this posture, the gate

Asunder, and the flashing of its hinges Flung over space an universal hue

Of many-color'd flame, until its tinges Reach'd even our speck of earth, and made a new

Aurora borealis spread its fringes

O'er the North Pole; the same seen, when ice-bound,

By Captain Parry's crew, in "Melville's Sound."

And from the gate thrown open issued beaming

A beautiful and mighty Thing of Light,

Radiant with glory, like a banner streaming

Victorious from some world-o'erthrowing fight:

My poor comparisons must needs be teeming

With earthly likenesses, for here the night

Of clay obscures our best conceptions, saving

Johanna Southcote, or Bob Southey raving.

'Twas the archangel Michael; all men know

The make of angels and archangels, since

There's scarce a scribbler has not one to show.

From the fiends' leader to the angels' prince;

There also are some altar-pieces, though I really can't say that they much evince One's inner notions of immortal spirits; But let the connoisseurs explain their merits.

Michael flew forth in glory and in good; A goodly work of him from whomall glory

And good arise; the portal past—he stood;

Before him the young cherubs and saints hoary—

(I say young, begging to be understood By looks, nct years; and should be very sorry

To state, they were not older than St. Peter,

But merely that they seem'd a little sweeter).

The cherubs and the saints bow'd down before

That arch-angelic hierarch, the first Of essences angelical, who wore

The aspect of a god; but this ne'er nursed

Pride in his heavenly bosom, in whose core

No thought, save for his Master's service, durst

Intrude, however glorified and high; He knew him but the viceroy of the sky.

He and the sombre, silent Spirit met—
They knew each other both for good and ill;

Such was their power, that neither could forget

His former friend and future foe; but still

There was a high, immortal, proud regret

In either's eye, as if 't were less their will

Than destiny to make the eternal years Their date of war, and their "champ clos" the spheres.

But here they were in neutral space: we know

From Job, that Satan hath the power to pay

A heavenly visit thrice a year or so;

And that the "sons of God," like those of clay,

Must keep him company; and we might

From the same book, in how polite a

Way

The dialogue is held between the Powers Of Good and Evil—but 'twould take up hours,

And this is not a theologic tract,

To prove with Hebrew and with Arabic,

If Job be allegory or a fact.

But a true narrative; and thus I pick From out the whole but such and such an act

As sets aside the slightest thought of trick.

'Tis every tittle true, beyond suspicion, And accurate as any other vision.

The spirits were in neutral space, before
The gate of heaven; like eastern thresholds is

The place where Death's grand cause is argued o'er,

And souls despatch'd to that world or to this;

And therefore Michael and the other wore

A civil aspect: though they did not kiss,

Yet still between his Darkness and his Brightness

There pass'd a mutual glance of great politeness.

The Archangel bow'd, not like a modern beau,

But with a graceful Oriental bend, Pressing one radiant arm just where below

The heart in good men is supposed to tend;

He turn'd as to an equal, not too low,
But kindly; Satan met his ancient friend

With more hauteur, as might an old

Poor noble meet a mushroom rich civilian.

He merely bent his diabolic brow

An instant; and then raising it, he stood

In act to assert his right or wrong, and show

Cause why King George by no means could or should

Make out a case to be exempt from woe Eternal, more than other kings, endued

With better sense and hearts, whom his tory mentions,

Who long have "paved hell with their good intentions."

Michael began: "What wouldst thou with this man,

Now dead, and brought before the Lord? What ill

Hath he wrought since his mortal race began,

That thou canst claim him? Speak! and do thy will,

If it be just: if in this earthly span
He hath been greatly failing to fulfil
His duties as a king and mortal, say,

And he is thine; if not, let him have way."

"Michael!" replied the Prince of Air, even here,

Before the Gate of him thou servest, must

I claim my subject: and will make appear

That as he was my worshipper in dust, So shall he be in spirit, although dear

To thee and thine, because nor wine nor lust

Were of his weaknesses; yet on the

He reign'd o'er millions to serve me alone.

"Look to our earth, or rather mine; it was,

Once, more thy Master's: but I triumph not

In this poor planet's conquest; nor, alas!
Need he thou servest envy me my lot:
With all the myriads of bright worlds which pass

In worship round him, he may have forgot

You weak creation of such paltry things: I think few worth damnation save their kings,—

"And these but as a kind of quit-rent, to Assert my right as lord: and even had

I such an inclination, it were (as you Well know) superfluous; they are grown so bad,

That hell has nothing better left to do
Than leave them to themselves: so much more mad

And evil by their own internal curse, Heaven cannot make them better, nor 1 worse. "Look to the earth, I said, and say again: When this old, blind, mad, helpless, weak, poor worm

Began in youth's first bloom and flush to reign.

The world and he both wore a different form.

And much of earth and all the watery plain

Of ocean call'd him king: through many a storm

His isles had floated on the abyss of time: For the rough virtues chose them for their clime.

"He came to his sceptre young; he leaves it old:

Look to the state in which he found his realm.

And left it; and his annals too behold. How to a minion first he gave the helm;

How grew upon his heart a thirst for gold. The beggar's vice, which can but overwhelm

The meanest hearts; and for the rest, but glance

Thine eye along America and France.

"Tis true, he was a tool from first to last (I have the workmen safe;) but as a tool So let him be consumed. From out the

Of ages, since mankind have known the rule

Of monarchs-from the bloody rolls amass'd

Of sin and slaughter—from the Cæsar's school.

Take the worst pupil; and produce a

More drench'd with gore, more cumber'd with the slain.

"He ever warr'd with freedom and the free:

Nations as men, home subjects, foreign

So that they utter'd the word 'Liberty!' Found George the Third their first Whose opponent.

History was ever stain'd as his will be With national and individual woes?

I grant his household abstinence: I grant His neutral virtues, which most monarchs want:

"I know he was a constant consort; own He was a decent sire, and middling lord.

All this is much, and most upon a throne; As temperance, if at Apicius' board, Is more than at an anchorite's supper shown.

I grant him all the kindest can accord: And this was well for him, but not for those

Millions who found him what oppression chose.

"The New World shook him off: the Old vet groans

Beneath what he and his prepared, if

Completed: he leaves heirs on many thrones

To all his vices, without what begot Compassion for him—his tame virtues:

Who sleep, or despots who have now forgot

A lesson which shall be re-taught them, wake

Upon the thrones of earth; but let them quake!

"Five millions of the primitive, who hold The faith which makes ye great on earth, implored

A part of that vast all they held of old,— Freedom to worship—not alone your

Michael, but you, and you, Saint Peter!

Must be your souls, if you have not abhor'd

The foe to Catholic participation In all the license of a Christian nation.

"True! he allow'd them to pray God; but as

A consequence of prayer, refused the law

Which would have placed them upon the same base

With those who did not hold the saints in awe."

But here Saint Peter started from his

And cried, "You may the prisoner withdraw:

Ere heaven shall ope her portals to this Guelph.

While I am guard, may I be damn'd myself!

"Sooner will I with Cerberus exchange My office (and his is no sinecure) Than see this royal Bedlam bigot range

The azure fields of heaven, of that be sure!"

"Saint!" replied Satan, "you do well to avenge

The wrongs he made your satellites endure;

And if to this exchange you should be given,

I'll try to coax our Cerberus up to heaven!"

Here Michael interposed: "Good saint! and devil!

Pray, not so fast; you both outrun discretion.

Saint Peter! you were wont to be more civil!

Satan, excuse this warmth of his expression,

And condescension to the vulgar's level:
Even saints sometimes forget themselves in session.

Have you got more to say?"—"No."—
"If you please,

I'll trouble you to call your witnesses."

Then Satan turn'd and waved his swarthy hand,

Which stirr'd with its electric qualities Clouds farther off than we can understand,

Although we find him sometimes in our skies:

Infernal thunder shook both sea and land In all the planets, and hell's batteries Let off the artillery, which Milton men-

As one of Satan's most sublime inventions.

This was a signal unto such damned souls
As have the privilege of their damnation

Extended far beyond the mere controls
Of worlds past, present, or to come;
no station

Is theirs particularly in the rolls

Of hell assign'd; but where their inclination

Or business carries them in search of game,

They may range freely—being damn'd the same.

They're proud of this—as very well they may.

It being a sort of knighthood, or gilt key

Stuck in their loins; or like to an "entré"

Up the back stairs, or such freemasonry.

I borrow my comparisons from clay, Being clay myself. Let not those spirits be Offended with such base low likenesses; We know their posts are nobler far than these.

When the great signal ran from heaven to hell—

About ten million times the distance reckon'd

From our sun to its earth, as we can tell
How much time it takes up, even to a second,

For every ray that travels to dispel
The fogs of London, through which,

dimly beacon'd

The weathercocks are gilt some thrice a year,

If that the summer is not too severe:

I say that I can tell—'twas half a minute:

I know the solar beams take up more time

Ere, pack'd up for their journey, they begin it;

But then their telegraph is less subblime,

And if they ran a race, they would not win it

'Gainst Satan's courier's bound for their own clime.

The sun takes up some years for every ray

To reach its goal—the devil not half a day.

Upon the verge of space, about the size Of half-a-crown, a little speck appear'd

(I've seen a something like it in the skies In the Ægean, ere a squall); it near'd, And, growing bigger, took another guise;

Like an aërial ship it tack'd, and steer'd.

Or was steer'd (I am doubtful of the grammar

Of the last phrase, which makes the stanza stammer;—

But take your choice): and then it grew a cloud

And so it was—a cloud of witnesses. But such a cloud! No land e'er saw a crowd Of locusts numerous as the heavens saw these;

They shadowed with their myriads space; their loud

And varied cries were like those of wild geese

(If nations may be liken'd to a goose), And realized the phrase of "hell broke loose."

Here crashed a sturdy oath of stout John Bull,

Who damned away his eyes as heretofore:

There Paddy brogued "By Jasus!"—
"What's your wull?"

The temperate. Scot exclaimed: the French ghost swore

In certain terms I shan't translate in full,

As the first coachman will; and 'midst the war,

The voice of Jonathan was heard to express,

"Our president is going to war, I guess."

Besides there were the Spaniard, Dutch, and Dane;

In short, an universal shoal of shades, From Otaheite's isle to Salisbury Plain, Of all climes and professions, years and trades.

Ready to swear against the good king's reign,

Bitter as clubs in cards are against spades:

All summon'd by this grand "subpoena," to

Try if kings mayn't be damn'd like me or you.

When Michael saw this host, he first grew pale,

As angels can; next, like Italian twilight,

He turn'd all colors—as a peacock's tail, Or sunset streaming through a Gothic skylight

In some old abbey, or a trout not stale, Or distant lightning on the horizon by night.

Or a fresh rainbow, or a grand review Of thirty regiments in red, green and blue.

Then he address'd himself to Satan:

My good old friend, for such I deem you, though

Our different parties make us fight so shy.

I ne'er mistake you for a personal foe; Our difference is political, and I Trust that, whatever may occur below, You know my great respect for you: and this Makes me regret whate'er you do amiss—

"Why, my dear Lucifer, would you abuse

My call for witnesses? I did not mean That you should half of earth and hell produce;

'Tis even superfluous, since two honest, clean,

True testimonies are enough: we lose Our time, nay, our eternity, between The accusation and defence: if we Hear both, 'twill stretch our immortality."

Satan replied, "To me the matter is Indifferent, in a personal point of view:

I can have fifty better souls than this
With far less trouble than we have gone through

Already; and I merely argued his Late Majesty of Britain's case with you

Upon a point of form: you may dispose Of him; I've kings enough below, God knows!"

Thus spoke the Demon (late call'd "multi-faced"

By multo-scribbling Southey). "Then we'll call

One or two persons of the myriads placed Around our congress, and dispense with all

The rest," quoth Michael: "Who may be so graced

As to speak first? there's choice enough—who shall

It be?" Then Satan answer'd, "There are many;

But you may choose Jack Wilkes as well as any."

A merry, cock-eyed, curious-looking sprite

Upon the instant started from the throng,

Dress'd in a fashion now forgotten quite;
For all the fashions of the flesh stick long

By people in the next world; where unite

All the costumes since Adam's, right or wrong.

From Eve's fig-leaf down to the petticoat.

Almost as scanty, of days less remote.

The spirit look'd around upon the crowds Assembled, and exclaim'd, "My friends of all

The spheres, we shall catch cold amongst these clouds;

So let's to business: why this general call?

If those are freeholders I see in shrouds. And 'tis for an election that they bawl, Behold a candidate with unturn'd coat! Saint Peter, may I count upon your vote?"

"Sir," replied Michael, "you mistake; these things

Are of a former life, and what we do Above is more august; to judge of kings Is the tribunal met: so now you know."

"Then I presume those gentlemen with wings."

Said Wilkes, "are cherubs; and that soul below

Looks much like George the Third, but to my mind

A good deal older—Bless me! is he blind?"

"He is what you behold him, and his

Depends upon his deeds," the Angel said:

"If you have aught to arraign in him, the tomb

Gives license to the humblest beggar's head

To lift itself against the loftiest."— "Some,"
Said Wilkes, "don't wait to see them

laid in lead,

For such a liberty—and I, for one,

Have told them what I thought beneath the sun."

"Above the sun repeat, then, what thou hast

To urge against him," said the Archangel. "Why,"

Replied the spirit, "since old scores are past,

Must I turn evidence? In faith, not I. Besides, I beat him hollow at the last,

With all his Lords and Commons: in the sky

I don't like ripping up old stories, since His conduct was but natural in a prince.

"Foolish, no doubt, and wicked, to oppress

A poor unlucky devil without a shilling; But then I blame the man himself much

Than Bute and Grafton, and shall be unwilling

To see him punish'd here for their excess, Since they were both damn'd long ago, and still in Their place below: for me. I have forgiven, vote his 'habeas corpus' into And heaven."

"Wilkes," said the Devil, "I understand all this:

You turn'd to half a courtier ere you died.

And seem to think it would not be amiss To grow a whole one on the other side Of Charon's ferry; you forget that his

Reign is concluded; whatsoe'er betide, He won't be sovereign more: you've lost your labor,

For at the best he will but be your neigh-

"However, I knew what to think of it. When I beheld you in your jesting way, Flitting and whispering round about the spit

Where Belial, upon duty for the day, With Fox's lard was basting William Pitt, His pupil; I knew what to think, I say:

That fellow even in hell breeds farther

I'll have him gagg'd—'twas one of his own bills.

"Call Junius!" From the crowd shadow stalk'd,

And at the name there was a general squeeze,

So that the very ghosts no longer walk'd In comfort, at their own aërial ease,

But were all ramm'd, and jamm'd (but to be balk'd.

As we shall see), and jostled hands and knees,

Like wind compress'd and pent within a bladder.

Or like a human colic, which is sadder.

The shadow came—a tall, thin, grayhair'd figure,

That look'd as it had been a shade on earth;

Quick in its motions, with an air of vigor, But naught to mark its breeding or its birth;

Now it wax'd little, then again grew bigger,

With now an air of gloom, or savage mirth:

But as you gazed upon its features, they Changed every instant—to what, none could say.

The more intently the ghosts gazed, the less

Could they distinguish whose the features were;

The Devil himself seem'd puzzled even to guess;

They varied like a dream—now here, now there:

And several people swore from out the press,

They knew him perfectly; and one could swear

He was his father: upon which another Was sure he was his mother's cousin's brother:

Another, that he was a duke, or knight, An orator, a lawyer, or a priest,

A nabob, a man-midwife; but the wight Mysterious changed his countenance at least

As oft as they their minds; though in full sight

He stood, the puzzle only was increased:

The man was a phantasmagoria in Himself—he was so volatile and thin.

The moment that you had pronounced him one,

Presto! his face changed, and he was another;

And when that change was hardly well put on,

It varied, till I don't think his own mother

(If that he had a mother) would her son Have known, he shifted so from one to t'other:

Till guessing from a pleasure grew a task, At this epistolary "Iron Mask."

For sometimes he like Cerberus would seem—

"Three gentlemen at once" (as sagely says

Good Mrs. Malaprop); then you might deem

That he was not even one; now many rays

Were flashing round him; and now a thick steam

Hid him from sight—like fogs on Lon-

Hid him from sight—like fogs on London days:

Now Burke, now Tooke, he grew to people's fancies,

And certes often like Sir Philip Francis.

I've an hypothesis—'tis quite my own;
I never let it out till now, for fear

Of doing people harm about the throne, And injuring some minister or peer,

On whom the stigma might perhaps be blown;

It is—my gentle public, lend thine ear!
Tis that what Junius we are wont to call

Was really, truly, nobody at all.

I don't see wherefore letters should not be

Written without hands, since we daily view

Them written without heads; and books, we see,

Are fill'd as well without the latter too: And really till we fix on somebody

For certain sure to claim them as his due,

Their author, like the Niger's mouth, will bother

The world to say if there be mouth or author.

"And who and what art thou?" the Archangel said.

"For that you may consult my titlepage,"

Replied this mighty shadow of a shade:
"If I have kept my secret half an age,
I scarce shall tell it now."—" Canst thou

I scarce shall tell it now."—" Canst thou upbraid," Continued Michael, "George Rex, or allege Aught further?" Junius answer'd, "You had better

First ask him for his answer to my letter:

"My charges upon record will outlast
The brass of both his epitaph and tomb."

"Repent'st thou not," said Michael, "of some past

Exaggeration? something which may doom

Thyself if false, as him if true? Thou wast

Too bitter—is it not so?—in thy gloom Of passion?"—"Passion!" cried the phantom dim,

"I loved my country, and I hated him.

"What I have written, I have written:

The rest be on his head or mine!" so spoke

spoke
'' Nominis Umbra;" and while speaking yet,

Away he melted in celestial smoke. Then Satan said to Michael, "Don't forget

To call George Washington, and John

Horne Tooke,

And Franklin; "—but at this time there was heard

A cry for room, though not a phantom stirr'd.

At length with jostling, elbowing, and the aid

Of cherubim appointed to that post, The devil Asmodeus to the circle made His way, and look'd as if his journey

cost
Some trouble. When his burden down

he laid,
"What's this?" cried Michael; "why,
'tis not a ghost?"

"I know it," quoth the incubus; "but he Shall be one, if you leave the affair to me.

"Confound the renegado! I have sprain'd My left wing, he's so heavy; one would think

Some of his works about his neck were chain'd.

But to the point; while hovering o'er the brink

Of Skiddaw (where as usual it still rain'd),

I saw a taper, far below me, wink, And stooping, caught this fellow at a libel—

No less on history than the Holy Bible.

"The former is the devil's scripture, and The latter yours, good Michael: so the affair

Belongs to all of us, you understand.

I snatch'd him up just as you see him
there.

And brought him off for sentence out of hand:

I've scarcely been ten minutes in the

At least a quarter it can hardly be: I dare say that his wife is still at tea."

Here Satan said, "I know this man of old,

And have expected him for some time here;

A sillier fellow you will scarce behold, Or more conceited in his petty sphere:

But surely it was not worth while to fold Such trash below your wing, Asmodeus dear:

We had the poor wretch safe (without being bored

With carriage) coming of his own accord.

"But since he's here, let's see what he has done."

"Done!" cried Asmodeus, "he anticipates

The very business you are now upon,
And scribbles as if head clerk to the Fates.

Who knows to what his ribaldry may

When such an ass as this, like Balaam's, prates?"

"Let's hear," quoth Michael, "what he has to say:

You know we're bound to that in every way."

Now the bard, glad to get an audience,

By no means often was his case below, Began to cough, and hawk, and hem, and pitch

His voice into that awful note of woe To all unhappy hearers within reach

Of poets when the tide of rhyme's in flow:

But stuck fast with his first hexameter, Not one of all whose gouty feet would stir.

But ere the spavin'd dactyls could be spurr'd

Into recitative, in great dismay

Both cherubim and seraphim were heard To murmur loudly through their long array:

And Michael rose ere he could get a word Of all his founder'd verses under way, And cried, "For God's sake stop, my friend! 'twere best—

Non Di, non homines—you know the

A general bustle spread throughout the throng,

Which seem'd to hold all verse in detestation:

The angels had of course enough of song When upon service; and the generation Of ghosts had heard too much in life, not

Before, to profit by a new occasion: The monarch, mute till then, exclaim'd, "What! what!

Pye come again? No more—no more of that !

The tumult grew; an universal cough Convulsed the skies, as during a debate,

When Castlereagh has been up long enough

(Before he was first minister of state, I mean—the slaves hear now); some cried "Off, off!"

As at a farce; till, grown quite desperate,

The bard Saint Peter pray'd to interpose (Himself an author) only for his prose.

The varlet was not an ill-favor'd knave; A good deal like a vulture in the face, With a hook nose and a hawk's eye, which gave

A smart and sharper-looking sort of grace

To his whole aspect, which, though rather grave,

Was by no means so ugly as his case; But that, indeed, was hopeless as can be, Quite a poetic felony "de se."

Then Michael blew his trump, and still'd the noise

With one still greater, as is yet the mode On earth besides; except some grumbling voice,

Which now and then will make a slight inroad

Upon decorous silence, few will twice Lift up their lungs when fairly overcrow'd:

And flow the bard could plead his own bad cause,

With all the attitudes of self-applause.

He said—(I only give the heads)—he said. He meant no harm in scribbling; 'twas his way

Upon all topics; 'twas, besides, his bread,

Of which he butter'd both sides; 'twould delay

Too long the assembly (he was pleased to dread).

And take up rather more time than a

To name his works—he would but cite a few-

"Wat Tyler "-" Rhymes on Blenheim "-" Waterloo."

He had written praises of a regicide:

He had written praises of all kings whatever;

He had written for republics far and wide.

And then against them bitterer than ever:

For pantisocracy he once had cried

Aloud, a scheme less moral than 'twas clever;

Then grew a hearty anti-Jacobin-

Had turn'd his coat—and would have turn'd his skin.

He had sung against all battles, and again

In their high praise and glory; he had call'd

Reviewing "the ungentle craft," and then

Become as base a critic as e'er crawl'd-Fed, paid, and pamper'd by the very men By whom his muse and morals had been maul'd:

He had written much blank verse, and blanker prose,

And more of both than anybody knows,

He had written Wesley's life: here turning round

To Satan, "Sir, I'm ready to write yours,

In two octavo volumes, nicely bound. With notes and preface, all that most allures

The pious purchaser; and there's no ground

For fear, for I can choose my own reviewers:

So let me have the proper documents, That I may add you to my other saints."

Satan bow'd, and was silent. "Well,

if you, With amiable modesty, decline

My offer, what says Michael? There are few

Whose memoirs could be render'd more divine. Mine is a pen of all work; not so new

As it was once, but I would make you shine

Like your own trumpet. By the way,

Has more of brass in it, and is as well blown.

"But talking about trumpets, here's my Vision!

Now you shall judge, all people; yes, you shall

Judge with my judgment, and by my decision

Be guided who shall enter heaven or fall.

I settle all these things by intuition,

Times present, past, to come, heaven, hell, and all,

Like King Alfonso. When I thus see double,

I save the Deity some worlds of trouble."

He ceased, and drew forth an MS.; and Persuasion on the part of devils, saints, Or angels, now could stop the torrent;

He read the first three lines of the contents:

But at the fourth, the whole spiritual show

Had vanish'd, with variety of scents, Ambrosial and sulphureous, as they sprang,

Like lightning, off from his "melodious twang."

Those grand heroics acted as a spell:

The angels stopp'd their ears and
plied their pinions;

The devils ran howling, deafen'd, down

to hell:

The ghosts fled, gibbering, for their own dominions—

(For 'tis not yet decided where they dwell,

And I leave every man to his opinions); Michael took refuge in his trump—but, lo!

His teeth were set on edge, he could not blow!

Saint Peter, who has hitherto been known

For an impetuous saint, upraised his keys.

And at the fifth line knock'd the poet down;

Who fell like Phaëton, but more at ease,

Into his lake, for there he did not drown; A different web being by the Destinies Woven for the Laurente's final wreath, whene'er

Reform shall happen either here or there.

He first sank to the bottom—like his works,

But soon rose to the surface—like himself:

For all corrupted things are buoy'd like corks,

By their own rottenness, like as an elf, Or wisp that flits o'er a morass: he lurks.

It may be, still, like dull books on a shelf,

In his own den, to scrawl some "Life" or "Vision,"

As Welborn says—"the devil turn'd precisian."

As for the rest, to come to the conclusion

Of this true dream, the telescope is gone

Which kept my optics free from all delusion,
And show'd me what I in my turn have shown;

All I saw farther, in the last confusion,
Was, that King George slipp'd into heaven for one;

And when the tumult dwindled to a calm,

I left him practising the hundredth psalm.

IMPROMPTUS 1

STRAHAN, Tonson, Lintot of the times, Patron and publisher of rhymes, For thee the bard up Pindus climbs, My Murray.

To thee, with hope and terror dumb, The unfledged MS. authors come; Thou printest all—and sellest some— My Murray.

Upon thy table's baize so green
The last new Quarterly is seen,—
But where is thy new Magazine,
My Murray?

¹ From letters addressed to Mr. Murray, or to Thomas Moore.

Along thy sprucest bookshelves shine
The works thou deemest most divine—
The "Art of Cookery," and mine,
My Murray.

Tours, Travels, Essays, too, I wist, And Sermons, to thy mill bring grist; And then thou hast the "Navy List," My Murray.

And Heaven forbid I should conclude Without "the Board of Longitude," Although this narrow paper would, My Murray.

April 11, 1818. 1830.

When a man hath no freedom to fight for at home,

Let him combat for that of his neighbors:

Let him think of the glories of Greece and of Rome,

And get knock'd on the head for his labors.

To do good to mankind is the chivalrous plan,

And is always as nobly requited; Then battle for freedom wherever you

And, if not shot or hang'd, you'll get knighted.

November 5, 1820. 1824.

So we'll go no more a roving So late into the night, Though the heart be still as loving, And the moon be still as bright.

For the sword outwears its sheath, And the soul wears out the breast, And the heart must pause to breathe, And love itself have rest.

Though the night was made for loving, And the day returns too soon, Yet we'll go no more a roving

By the light of the moon.

THE world is a bundle of hay,
Mankind are the asses who pull;
Each tugs it a different way,
And the greatest of all is John Bull.
November 5, 1820. 1830.

Who kill'd John Keats?
"I," says the Quarterly,
So savage and Tartarly;
"'Twas one of my feats."

Who shot the arrow?
"The poet-priest Milman
(So ready to kill man),
Or Southey, or Barrow."

July 30, 1821. 1830.

For Orford and for Waldegrave
You give much more than me you gave
Which is not fairly to behave.

My Murray.

Because if a live dog, 'tis said,
Be worth a lion fairly sped,
A live lord must be worth two dead,
My Murray.

And if, as the opinion goes,
Verse hath a better sale than prose,— Certes, I should have more than those,
My Murray.

But now this sheet is nearly cramm'd, So, if you will, I shan't be shamm'd, And if you won't, you may be damn'd, My Murray.

STANZAS WRITTEN ON THE ROAD BETWEEN FLORENCE AND PISA

OH, talk not to me of a name great in story;

The days of our youth are the days of our glory;

And the myrtle and ivy of sweet twoand-twenty

Are worth all your laurels, though ever so plenty.

What are garlands and crowns to the brow that is wrinkled?

'Tis but as a dead flower with May-dew be-sprinkled.

Then away with all such from the head that is hoary!

What care I for the wreaths that can only give glory!

Oh, FAME!—if I e'er took delight in thy praises,

Twas less for the sake of thy high-sounding phrases,

Than to see the bright eyes of the dear one discover,

She thought that I was not unworthy to love her.

There chiefly I sought thee, there only I found thee:

Her glance was the best of the rays that surround thee;

When it sparkled o'er aught that was bright in my story,

I knew it was love, and I felt it was glory.

November, 1821. 1830.

ON THIS DAY I COMPLETE MY THIRTY-SIXTH YEAR

TIS time this heart should be unmoved, Since others it hath ceased to move: Yet, though I cannot be beloved, Still let me love!

My days are in the yellow leaf;
The flowers and fruits of love are gone;

The worm, the canker, and the grief
Are mine alone!

The fire that on my bosom preys
Is lone as some volcanic isle;
No torch is kindled at its blaze—
A funeral pile.

The hope, the fear, the jealous care.
The exalted portion of the pain
And power of love, I cannot share,
But wear the chain.

But 'tis not thus—and 't is not here—Such thoughts should shake my soul nor now,

Where glory decks the hero's bier, Or binds his brow.

The sword, the banner, and the field, Glory and Greece, around me see! The Spartan, borne upon his shield, Was not more free.

Awake! (not Greece—she is awake!)
Awake, my spirit! Think through whom

Thy life-blood tracks its parent lake, And then strike home!

Tread those reviving passions down, Unworthy manhood!—unto thee Indifferent should the smile or frown Of beauty be,

If thou regrett'st thy youth, why live?
The land of honorable death
Is here:—up to the field, and give Away thy breath!

Seek out—less often sought than found— A soldier's grave, for thee the best; Then look around, and choose thy ground And take thy rest.

STANZAS-April, 1814 1

Away! the moor is dark beneath the moon,

Rapid clouds have drank the last pale beam of even:

Away! the gathering winds will call the darkness soon,

And profoundest midnight shroud the serene lights of heaven.

Pause not! The time is past! Every voice cries, Away!

Tempt not with one last tear thy friend's ungentle mood:

Thy lover's eye, so glazed and cold, dares not entreat thy stay:

Duty and dereliction guide thee back to solitude.

Away, away! to thy sad and silent home;

Pour bitter tears on its desolated hearth;

Watch the dim shades as like ghosts they go and come,

And complicate strange webs of melancholy mirth.

The leaves of wasted autumn woods shall float around thine head:

The blooms of dewy spring shall gleam beneath thy feet:

But thy soul or this world must fade in the frost that binds the dead,

Ere midnight's frown and morning's smile, ere thou and peace may meet.

The cloud shadows of midnight possess their own repose,

For the weary winds are silent, or the moon is in the deep:

Some respite to its turbulence unresting ocean knows;

Whatever moves, or toils, or grieves, hath its appointed sleep.

Thou in the grave shalt rest—yet till the phantoms flee

Which that house and heath and garden made dear to thee erewhile,

Thy remembrance, and repentance, and deep musings are not free

From the music of two voices and the light of one sweet smile.

TO COLERIDGE 1

ΔΑΚΡΥΣΙ ΔΙΟΙΣΩ ΠΟΤΜΟΝ 'ΑΠΟΤΜΟΝ

OH! THERE are spirits of the air,
And genii of the evening breeze,
And gentle ghosts, with eyes as fair
As star-beams among twilight trees:—
Such lovely ministers to meet

Oft hast thou turned from men thy lonely feet.

With mountain winds, and babbling springs,

And moonlight seas, that are the voice Of these inexplicable things

Thou didst hold commune, and rejoice When they did answer thee; but they Cast, like a worthless boon, thy love away.

And thou hast sought in starry eyes
Beams that were never meant for
thine,

¹ The poem beginning "Oh, there are spirits in the air" was addressed in idea to Coleridge, whom he never knew; and at whose character he could only guess imperfectly, through his writings, and accounts he heard of him from some who knew him well. He regarded his change of opinions as rather an act of will than conviction, and believed that in his inner heart he would be haunted by what Shelley considered the better and holier aspirations of his youth. (From Mrs. Shelley's Note on the Early Poems.) See also Dowden's Life of Shelley, Vol. I., p. 472 and note.

Another's wealth:—tame sacrifice
To a fond faith! still dost thou pine?
Still dost thou hope that greeting hands,
Voice, looks, or lips, may answer thy demands?

Ah! wherefore didst thou build thine hope

On the false earth's inconstancy? Did thine own mind afford no scope Of love, or moving thoughts to thee? That natural scenes or human smiles

Could steal the power to wind thee in their wiles.

Yes, all the faithless smiles are fled Whose falsehood left thee brokenhearted;

The glory of the moon is dead;

Night's ghosts and dreams have now departed;

Thine own soul still is true to thee,
But changed to a foul fiend through misery.

This fiend, whose ghastly presence ever Beside thee like thy shadow hangs,

Dream not to chase;—the mad endeavor

Would scourge thee to severer pangs. Be as thou art. Thy settled fate, Dark as it is, all change would aggravate.

ALASTOR,

OR

THE SPIRIT OF SOLITUDE

PREFACE

The poem entitled Alastor may be considered as allegorical of one of the most interesting situations of the human mind. It represents a youth of uncorrupted feelings and adventurous genius led forth by an imagination inflamed and purified through familiarity with all that is excellent and majestic, to the contemplation of the universe. He drinks deep of the fountains of knowledge, and is still insatiate. The magnificence and beauty of the external world sinks profoundly into the frame of his conceptions, and affords to their modifications a variety not to be exhausted. So long as it is possible for his desires to point towards objects thus infinite and unmeasured, he is joyous, and tranquil, and self-possessed. But the period arrives when these objects cease to suffice. His mind is at length suddenly awakened and thirsts for intercourse with an intelligence similar to itself. He images to himself the Being whom he loves. Conversant with speculations of the sublimest and most perfect natures, the vision in which he embodies his own imaginations unites all of wonderful, or wise, or beautiful, which the poet, the philosopher, or the lover could depicture. The intellectual faculties, the imagination, the functions of sense, have their respective requisitions on the sympathy of corresponding powers in other human beings. The Poet is represented as uniting these requisitions, and attaching them to a single image. He seeks in vain for a prototype of his conception. Blasted by his disappointment, he descends to an untimely grave.

The picture is not barren of instruction to ac-

The picture is not barren of instruction to actual men. The Poet's self-centred seclusion was avenged by the furies of an irresistible passion pursuing him to speedy ruin. But that Power which strikes the luminaries of the world with sudden darkness and extinction, by awakening them to too exquisite a perception of its influences, dooms to a slow and poisonous decay those meaner spirits that dare to abjure its dominion. Their destiny is more abject and inglorious as their delinquency is more contemptible and pericious. They who, deluded by no generous error, instigated by no sacred thirst of doubtful knowledge, duped by no illustrious superstition, loving nothing on this earth, and cherishing no hopes beyond, yet keep aloof from sympathies with their kind, rejoicing neither in human joy nor mourning with human grief; these, and such as they, have their apportioned curse. They languish, because none feel with them their common nature. They are morally dead. They are neither friends, nor lovers, nor fathers, nor citizens of the world, nor benefactors of their country. Among those who attempt to exist without human sympathy, the pure and tender-hearted perish through the intensity and passion of their search after its communities, when the vacancy of their spirit suddenly makes itself felt. All else, selfish, blind, and torpid, are those unforeseeing multitudes who constitute, together with their own, the lasting misery and loneliness of the world. Those who love not heir fellow-beings live unfruitful lives, and prepare for their old age a miserable grave.

"The good die first,
And those whose hearts are dry as summer dust,
Burn to the socket!"

Nondum amabam, et amare amabam, quærebam quid amarem, amans amare.—Confess. St. August.

EARTH, ocean, air, beloved brotherhood! If our great Mother has imbued my soul With aught of natural piety to feel

Your love, and recompense the boon with mine;

If dewy morn, and odorous noon, and even.

With sunset and its gorgeous ministers, And solemn midnight tingling silentness:

If autumn's hollow sighs in the sere wood.

And winter robing with pure snow and crowns

Of starry ice the gray grass and bare boughs;

If spring's voluptuous pantings when she breathes

Her first sweet kisses, have been dear to

If no bright bird, insect, or gentle beast I consciously have injured, but still loved

And cherished these my kindred; then forgive

This boast, beloved brethren, and withdraw

No portion of your wonted favor now!

Mother of this unfathomable world! Favor my solemn song, for I have loved Thee ever, and thee only; I have watched

Thy shadow, and the darkness of thy steps,

And my heart ever gazes on the depth Of thy deep mysteries. I have made mv bed

In charnels and on coffins, where black death

Keeps record of the trophies won from thee.

Hoping to still these obstinate questionings

Of thee and thine, by forcing some lone ghost.

Thy messenger, to render up the tale Of what we are. In lone and silent hours. When night makes a weird sound of its own stillness. Like an inspired and desperate alchy-mist Staking his very life on some dark hope, Have I mixed awful talk and asking looks With my most innocent love, until strange tears

Uniting with those breathless kisses.

made Such magic as compels the charmed night

To render up thy charge: . . . and, though ne'er yet

Thou hast unveiled thy inmost sanctuary,

Enough from incommunicable dream, And twilight phantasms, and deep noonday thought.

Has shone within me, that serenely now And moveless, as a long-forgotten lyre Suspended in the solitary dome

Of some mysterious and deserted fane, I wait thy breath, Great Parent, that my strain

May modulate with murmurs of the air. And motions of the forests and the sea. And voice of living beings, and woven

Of night and day, and the deep heart of man.

There was a Poet whose untimely

No human hands with pious reverence reared.

But the charmed eddies of autumnal winds

Built o'er his mouldering bones a pyra-

Of mouldering leaves in the waste wilderness:-

A lovely youth,—no mourning maiden decked

With weeping flowers, or votive cypress wreath.

lone couch of his everlasting sleep :-

Gentle, and brave, and generous, -no lorn bard

Breathed o'er his dark fate one melodious sigh:

He lived, he died, he sung, in solitude. Strangers have wept to hear his passionate notes.

And virgins, as unknown he passed, have pined

And wasted for fond love of his wild eves.

The fire of those soft orbs has ceased to

And Silence, too enamored of that voice, Locks its mute music in her rugged cell.

By solemn vision, and bright silver dream.

His infancy was nurtured. Every sight And sound from the vast earth and ambient air

Sent to his heart its choicest impulses. The fountains of divine philosophy

Fled not his thirsting lips, and all of great,

Or good, or lovely, which the sacred past In truth or fable consecrates, he felt And knew. When early youth had pass'd, he left

His cold fireside and alienated home

To seek strange truths in undiscovered lands.

Many a wide waste and tangled wilder

Has lured his fearless steps; and he has bought

With his sweet voice and eyes, from savage men,

His rest and food. Nature's most secret steps

He like her shadow has pursued, where'er The red volcano overcanopies

Its fields of snow and pinnacles of ice With burning smoke, or where bitumen lakes

On black bare pointed islets ever beat With sluggish surge, or where the secret

Rugged and dark, winding among the springs

Of fire and poison, inaccessible
To avarice or pride, their starry domes
Of diamond and of gold expand above
Numberless and immeasurable halls,
Frequent with crystal column, and clear shrines

Of pearl, and thrones radiant with chrysolite.

Nor had that scene of ampler majesty Than gems or gold, the varying roof of heaven

And the green earth lost in his heart its

To love and wonder; he would linger long

In lonesome vales, making the wild his home.

Until the doves and squirrels would partake

From his innocuous hand his bloodless

From his innocuous hand his bloodless food,

Lured by the gentle meaning of his looks,

And the wild antelope, that starts whene'er

The dry leaf rustles in the brake, suspend Her timid steps to gaze upon a form More graceful than her own.

His wandering step Obedient to high thoughts, has visited The awful ruins of the days of old: Athens, and Tyre, and Balbee, and the

waste

Stupendous columns, and wild images
Of more than man, where marble demons watch

The Zodiac's brazen mystery, and dead men

Hang their mute thoughts on the mute walls around,

He lingered, poring on memorials
Of the world's youth, through the long burning day

Gazed on those speechless shapes, nor, when the moon

Filled the mysterious halls with floating shades

Suspended he that task, but ever gazed And gazed, till meaning on his vacant

Flashed like strong inspiration, and he

The thrilling secrets of the birth of time.

Meanwhile an Arab maiden brought his food,

Her daily portion, from her father's tent, And spread her matting for his couch, and stole

From duties and repose to tend his steps:—

Enamored, yet not daring for deep awe To speak her love:—and watched his nightly sleep,

Sleepless herself, to gaze upon his lips Parted in slumber, whence the regular breath

Of innocent dreams arose: then, when red morn

Made paler the pale moon, to her cold home

Wildered, and wan, and panting, she returned.

The Poet wandering on, through Arabie

And Persia, and the wild Carmanian waste,

And o'er the aërial mountains which pour down

Indus and Oxus from their icy caves, In joy and exultation held his way; Till in the vale of Cashmire, far within Its loneliest dell, where odorous plants entwine

Beneath the hollow rocks a natural bower,

Beside a sparkling rivulet he stretched His languid limbs. A vision on his sleer There came, a dream of hopes that never

Had flushed his cheek. He dreamed a veilèd maid

Sate near him, talking in low solemn tones.

Her voice was like the voice of his own soul

Heard in the calm of thought; its music long,

Like woven sounds of streams and breezes, held

His inmost sense suspended in its web
Of many-colored woof and shifting hues.

Knowledge and truth and virtue were her theme,

And lofty hopes of divine liberty,

Thoughts the most dear to him, and poesy,

Herself a poet. Soon the solemn mood Of her pure mind kindled through all her frame

A permeating fire: wild numbers then She raised, with voice stifled in tremulous sobs

Subdued by its own pathos: her fair hands

Were bare alone, sweeping from some strange harp

Strange symphony, and in their branching veins

The eloquent blood told an ineffable tale. The beating of her heart was heard to fill The pauses of her music, and her breath Tumultuously accorded with those fits Of intermitted song. Sudden she rose, As if her heart impatiently endured

Its bursting burthen: at the sound he turned.

And saw by the warm light of their own life

Her glowing limbs beneath the sinuous veil

Of woven wind, her outspread arms now bare,

Her dark locks floating in the breath of night,

Her beamy bending eyes, her parted lips Outstretched, and pale, and quivering eagerly.

His strong heart sunk and sickened with excess

Of love. He reared his shuddering limbs and quelled

His gasping breath, and spread his arms to meet

Her panting bosom: . . . she drew back a while.

Then, yielding to the irresistible joy.

With frantic gesture and short breathless cry

Folded his frame in her dissolving arms. Now blackness veiled his dizzy eyes, and night Involved and swallowed up the vision; sleep,

Like a dark flood suspended in its course, Rolled back its impulse on his vacant brain.

Roused by the shock he started from his trance—

The cold white light of morning, the blue moon

Low in the west, the clear and garish hills.

The distinct valley and the vacant woods, Spread round him where he stood. Whither have fled

The hues of heaven that canopied his bower

Of yesternight? The sounds that soothed his sleep,

The mystery and the majesty of Earth, The joy, the exultation? His wan eyes Gaze on the empty scene as vacantly

As ocean's moon looks on the moon in heaven.

The spirit of sweet human love has sent A vision to the sleep of him who spurned Her choicest gifts. He eagerly pursues Beyond the realms of dream that fleeting shade;

He overleaps the bounds. Alas! alas! Were limbs, and breath, and being intertwined

Thus treacherously? Lost, lost, for ever lost,

In the wide pathless desert of dim sleep, That beautiful shape! Does the dark gate of death

Conduct to thy mysterious paradise, O Sleep? Does the bright arch of rainbow clouds,

And pendent mountains seen in the calm lake,

Lead only to a black and watery depth, While death's blue vault, with loathliest vapors hung,

Where every shade which the foul grave exhales

Hides its dead eye from the detested day, Conduct, O Sleep, to thy delightful realms?

This doubt with sudden tide flowed on his heart;

The insatiate hope which it awakened stung

His brain even like despair.

While daylight held The sky, the Poet kept mute conference With his still soul. At night the passion came,

Like the fierce fiend of a distempered dream

And shook him from his rest, and led

Into the darkness.—As an eagle, grasped In folds of the green serpent, feels her breast

Burn with the poison, and precipitates
Through night and day, tempest, and calm, and cloud,

Frantic with dizzying anguish, her blind flight

night

O'er the wide aëry wilderness: thus driven

By the bright shadow of that lovely dream,

Beneath the cold glare of the desolate night,

Through tangled swamps and deep precipitous dells,

Startling with careless step the moonlight snake,

He fled. Red morning dawned upon his flight.

Shedding the mockery of its vital hues Upon his cheek of death. He wandered

Till vast Aornos seen from Petra's steep,

Hung o'er the low horizon like a cloud; Through Balk, and where the desolated tombs

Of Parthian kings scatter to every wind Their wasting dust, wildly he wandered

Day after day, a weary waste of hours, Bearing within his life the brooding care That ever fed on its decaying flame.

And now his limbs were lean; his scattered hair

Sered by the autumn of strange suffering

Sung dirges in the wind; his listless hand

Hung like dead bone within its withered skin:

Life, and the lustre that consumed it, shone

As in a furnace burning secretly

From his dark eyes alone. The cottagers,

Who ministered with human charity His human wants, beheld with wondering awe

Their fleeting visitant. The mountaineer,

Encountering on some dizzy precipice That spectral form, deemed that the Spirit of wind With lightning eyes, and eager breath, and feet

Disturbing not the drifted snow, had paused

In its career: the infant would conceal Histroubled visage in his mother's robe In terror at the glare of those wild eyes. To remember their strange light in many a dream

Of after-times; but youthful maidens, taught

By nature, would interpret half the woe That wasted him, would call him with false names

Brother, and friend, would press his pallid hand

At parting, and watch, dim through tears, the path

Of his departure from their father's door.

At length upon the lone Chorasmian shore

He paused, a wide and melancholy waste
Of putrid marshes. A strong impulse urged

His steps to the sea-shore. A swan was there,

Beside a sluggish stream among the reeds.

It rose as he approached, and with strong wings

Scaling the upward sky, bent its bright course

High over the immeasurable main.

His eyes pursued its flight, —"Thou hast a home,

Beautiful bird; thou voyagest to thine home,

Where thy sweet mate will twine her downy neck

With thine, and welcome thy return with eyes

Bright in the lustre of their own fond joy.

And what am I that I should linger here,

With voice far sweeter than thy dying notes,

Spirit more vast than thine, frame more attuned

To beauty, wasting these surpassing powers

In the deaf air, to the blind earth, and heaven

That echoes not my thoughts?" A gloomy smile

Of desperate hope wrinkled his quivering lips.

For sleep, he knew, kept most relentlessly

Its precious charge, and silent death exposed,

Faithless perhaps as sleep, a shadowy

With doubtful smile mocking its own strange charms.

Startled by his own thoughts he looked around.

There was no fair fiend near him, not a sight

Or sound of awe but in his own deep mind.

A little shallop floating near the shore Caught the impatient wandering of his gaze.

It had been long abandoned, for its sides Gaped wide with many a rift, and its frail joints

Swayed with the undulations of the tide.

A restless impulse urged him to embark

And meet lone Death on the drear ocean's waste:

For well he knew that mighty Shadow loves

The slimy caverns of the populous deep.

The day was fair and sunny, sea and sky

Drank its inspiring radiance, and the

Swept strongly from the shore, blackening the waves.

Following his eager soul, the wanderer Leaped in the boat, he spread his cloak aloft

On the bare mast, and took his lonely seat,

And felt the boat speed o'er the tranquil sea

Like a torn cloud before the hurricane.

As one that in a silver vision floats
Obedient to the sweep of odorous winds
Upon resplendent clouds, so rapidly
Along the dark and ruffled waters fled
The straining boat.—A whirlwind swept it on.

With fierce gusts and precipitating force, Through the white ridges of the chafed

The waves arose. Higher and higher still

Their fierce necks writhed beneath the tempest's scourge

Like serpents struggling in a vulture's grasp.

Calm and rejoicing in the fearful war Of wave ruining on wave, and blast on blast

Descending, and black flood on whirlpool driven

With dark obliterating course, he sate: As if their genii were the ministers

Appointed to conduct him to the light Of those beloved eyes, the Poet sate

Holding the steady helm. Evening came on,

The beams of sunset hung their rainbow hues

High 'mid the shifting domes of sheeted spray

That canopied his path o'er the waste deep;
Twilight ascending slowly from the

Twilight, ascending slowly from the east,
Entwined in duskier wreaths her braided locks

O'er the fair front and radiant eves of

day;
Night followed, clad with stars. On every side

More horribly the multitudinous streams

More norribly the multitudinous streams
Of ocean's mountainous waste to mutual
war

Rushed in dark tumult thundering, as to mock
The calm and spangled sky. The little boat

Still fled before the storm; still fled,

like foam Down the steep cataract of a wintry river; Now pausing on the edge of the riven

Now leaving far behind the bursting mass

That fell, convulsing ocean. Safely fled—

As if that frail and wasted human form, Had been an elemental god.

At midnight
The moon arose: and lo! the ethereal

Of Caucasus, whose icy summits shone
Among the stars like sunlight, and around

Whose caverned base the whirlpools and the waves

Bursting and eddying irresistibly Rage and resound for ever.—Who shall save?—

The boat fled on,—the boiling torrent drove,—

The crags closed round with black and jagged arms,

The shattered mountains overhung the sea.

And faster still, beyond all human speed, Suspended on the sweep of the smooth wave.

The little boat was driven. A cavern

Yawned, and amid its slant and winding depths

Ingulfed the rushing sea. The boat fled on

With unrelaxing speed.—"Vision and Love!"

The Poet cried aloud, "I have beheld The path of thy departure. Sleep and death Shall not divide us long!"

The windings of the cavern. Daylight shone

At length upon that gloomy river's flow;
Now, where the fiercest war among the waves

Is calm, on the unfathomable stream

The boat moved slowly. Where the mountain, riven,

Exposed those black depths to the azure sky.

Ere yet the flood's enormous volume fell Even to the base of Caucasus, with sound That shook the everlasting rocks, the mass

Filled with one whirlpool all that ample chasm:

Stair above stair the eddying water rose, Circling immeasurably fast, and laved With alternating dash the gnarled roots Of mighty trees, that stretched their giant arms

In darkness over it. I' the midst was left, Reflecting, yet distorting every cloud, A pool of treacherous and tremendous calm.

Seized by the sway of the ascending stream,

With dizzy swiftness, round, and round, and round,

Ridge after ridge the straining boat arose,

Till on the verge of the extremest curve, Where, through an opening of the rocky bank,

The waters overflow, and a smooth spot Of glassy quiet mid those battling tides Is left, the boat paused shuddering.— Shall it sink

Down the abyss? Shall the reverting stress

Of that resistless gulf embosom it?

Now shall it fall?—A wandering stream of wind,

Breathed from the west, has caught the expanded sail,

And, lo! with gentle motion, between banks

Of mossy slope, and on a placid stream, Beneath a woven grove it sails, and hark! The ghastly torrent mingles its far roar, With the breeze murmuring in the musical woods.

Where the embowering trees recede, and leave

A little space of green expanse, the cove Is closed by meeting banks, whose yellow flowers

For ever gaze on their own drooping eyes, Reflected in the crystal calm. The wave Of the boat's motion marred their pensive task,

Which nought but vagrant bird, or wanton wind,

Or falling spear-grass, or their own decay

Had e'er disturbed before. The Poet longed

To deck with their bright hues his withered hair,

But on his heart its solitude returned, And he forebore. Not the strong impulse hid

In those flushed cheeks, bent eyes, and shadowy frame

Had yet performed its ministry: it hung Upon his life, as lightning in a cloud Gleams, hovering ere it vanish, ere the floods

Of night close over it.

The noonday sun Now shone upon the forest, one vast mass

Of mingling shade, whose brown magnificence.

A narrow vale embosoms. There, huge caves,

Scooped in the dark base of their aëry rocks

Mocking its moans, respond and roar for

The meeting boughs and implicated leaves

Wove twilight o'er the Poet's path, as led By love, or dream, or god, or mightier Death,

He sought in Nature's dearest haunt, some bank,

Her cradle, and his sepulchre. More dark And dark the shades accumulate. The oak, Expanding its immense and knotty arms, Embraces the light beech. The pyramids

Of the tall cedar overarching frame
Most solemn domes within, and far below.

Like clouds suspended in an emerald sky, The ash and the acacia floating hang

Tremulous and pale. Like restless serpents, clothed

In rainbow and in fire, the parasites, Starred with ten thousand blossoms, flow around

The gray trunks, and, as gamesome infants' eyes.

With gentle meanings, and most innocent wiles,

Fold their beams round the hearts of those that love,

These twine their tendrils with the wedded boughs

Uniting their close union; the woven

Make network of the dark blue light of day,

And the night's noontide clearness, mutable

As shapes in the weird clouds. Soft mossy lawns

Beneath these canopies extend their swells.

Fragrant with perfumed herbs, and eyed with blooms

Minute yet beautiful. One darkest glen Sends from its woods of musk-rose, twined with jasmine,

A soul-dissolving odor, to invite

To some more lovely mystery. Through the dell,

Silence and Twilight here, twin-sisters, keep

Their noonday watch, and sail among the shades,

Like vaporous shapes half seen; beyond, a well,

Dark, gleaming, and of most translucent wave.

Images all the woven boughs above, And each depending leaf, and every speck

Of azure sky, darting between their chasms;

Nor aught else in the liquid mirror laves Its portraiture, but some inconstant star Between one foliaged lattice twinkling fair,

Or painted bird, sleeping beneath the moon,

Or gorgeous insect floating motionless,

Unconscious of the day, ere yet his wings Have spread their glories to the gaze of noon.

Hither the Poet came. His eyes beheld

Their own wan light through the reflected lines

Of his thin hair, distinct in the dark depth

Of that still fountain; as the human heart,

Gazing in dreams over the gloomy grave, Sees its own treacherous likeness there. He heard

The motion of the leaves, the grass that sprung

Startled and glanced and trembled even to feel

An unaccustomed presence, and the sound
Of the sweet brook that from the secret springs

Of that dark fountain rose. A Spirit seemed

To stand beside him—clothed in no bright

Of shadowy silver or enshrining light, Borrowed from aught the visible world of grace, or majesty, or mystery;—

But undulating woods, and silent well,
And leaping rivulet, and evening gloom
Now deepening the dark shades, for speech assuming, Held commune with him, as if he and it Were all that was,—only . . . when his regard

Was raised by intense pensiveness, . . . two eyes,

Two starry eyes, hung in the gloom of thought,

And seemed with their serene and azure smiles

To beckon him.

Obedient to the light

That shone within his soul, he went, pursuing

The windings of the dell.—The rivulet Wanton and wild, through many a green ravine

Beneath the forest flowed. Sometimes it fell

Among the moss with hollow harmony Dark and profound. Now on the polished stones

It danced; like childhood laughing as it went:

Then through the plain in tranquil wanderings crept,

Reflecting every herb and drooping bud That overhung its quietness.-"O stream! Whose source is inaccessibly profound. Whither do thy mysterious waters tend? Thou imagest my life. Thy darksome stillness.

Thy dazzling waves, thy loud and hollow gulfs.

Thy searchless fountain, and invisible course

Have each their type in me: and the wide sky,

And measureless ocean may declare as

What oozy cavern or what wandering cloud

Contains thy waters, as the universe Tell where these living thoughts reside, when stretched

Upon thy flowers my bloodless limbs shall waste

I' the passing wind!"

Beside the grassy shore Of the small stream he went; he did impress On the green moss his tremulous step,

that caught Strong shuddering from his burning limbs. As one Roused by some joyous madness from the couch Of fever, he did move; yet not like him Forgetful of the grave, where, when the flame Of his frail exultation shall be spent, He must descend. With rapid steps he went Beneath the shade of trees, beside the

Of the wild babbling rivulet: and now

forest's solemn canopies were changed

For the uniform and lightsome evening

Gray rocks did peep from the spare moss, and stemmed

The struggling brook: tall spires of windlestrae

Threw their thin shadows down the rugged slope,

And nought but gnarled roots of ancient pines

Branchless and blasted, clenched with grasping roots

The unwilling soil. A gradual change was here,

Yet ghastly. For, as fast years flow away, The smooth brow gathers, and the hair grows thin

And white, and where irradiate dewy

Had shone, gleam stony orbs:—so from his steps

Bright flowers departed, and the beautiful shade

Of the green groves, with all their odorous winds

And musical motions. Calm. he still pursued

The stream, that with a larger volume

Rolled through the labyrinthine dell. and there

Fretted a path through its descending curves

With its wintry speed. On every side now rose

Rocks, which, in unimaginable forms, Lifted their black and barren pinnacles In the light of evening, and, its precipice Obscuring the ravine, disclosed above, Mid toppling stones, black gulfs and yawning caves,

Whose windings gave ten thousand various tongues

To the loud stream. Lo! where the pass expands

Its stony jaws, the abrupt mountain breaks.

And seems, with its accumulated crags. To overhang the world: for wide expand Beneath the wan stars and descending moon

Islanded seas, blue mountains, mighty streams, tracts and vast, robed in the lustrous gloom

Of leaden-colored even, and fiery hills Mingling their flames with twilight, on the verge

Of the remote horizon. The near scene. In naked and severe simplicity,

Made contrast with the universe. pine.

Rock-rooted, stretched athwart vacancy

Its swinging boughs, to each inconstant blast

Yielding one only response, at each pause In most familiar cadence, with the howl The thunder and the hiss of homeless streams

Mingling its solemn song, whilst the broad river.

Foaming and hurrying o'er its rugged path,

Fell into that immeasurable void

Scattering its waters to the passing winds.

Yet the gray precipice and solemn pine

And forrent were not all;—one silent nook

Was there. Even on the edge of that vast mountain.

Upheld by knotty roots and fallen rocks, It overlooked in its serenity

The dark earth, and the bending vault of stars.

It was a tranquil spot, that seemed to smile

Even in the lap of horror. Ivy clasped
The fissured stones with its entwining

arms,
And did embower with leaves for ever green,

And berries dark, the smooth and even space

Of its inviolated floor, and here

The children of the autumnal whirlwind bore.

In wanton sport, those bright leaves, whose decay,

Red, yellow, or ethereally pale,

Rivals the pride of summer. 'Tis the haunt

Of every gentle wind, whose breath can teach

The wilds to love tranquillity. One step,

One human step alone, has ever broken The stillness of its solitude:—one voice Alone inspired its echoes;—even that

Which hither came, floating among the winds.

And led the loveliest among human

To make their wild haunts the deposi-

Of all the grace and beauty that endued Its motions, render up its majesty,

Scatter its music on the unfeeling storm.

And to the damp leaves and blue cavern mould,

Nurses of rainbow flowers and branching moss,

Commit the colors of that varying cheek,

That snowy breast, those dark and drooping eyes.

The dim and horned moon hung low, and poured

A sea of lustre on the horizon's verge That overflowed its mountains. Yellow mist

Filled the unbounded atmosphere, and drank

Wan moonlight even to fulness: not a star

Shone, not a sound was heard; the very winds,

Danger's grim playmates, on that preci

Slept, clasped in his embrace.—O, storm of death!

Whose sightless speed divides this sullen

night:
And thou, colossal Skeleton, that, still

Guiding its irresistible career In thy devastating omnipotence.

Art king of this frail world, from the red field

Of slaughter, from the reeking hospital,

The patriot's sacred couch, the snowy

Of innocence, the scaffold and the throne,

A mighty voice invokes thee. Ruin calls

His brother Death. A rare and regal

He hath prepared, prowling around the world;

Glutted with which thou mayst repose, and men

Go to their graves like flowers or creeping worms,

Nor ever more offer at thy dark shrine The unheeded tribute of a broken heart.

When on the threshold of the green recess

The wanderer's footsteps fell, he knew that death

Was on him. Yet a little, ere it fled, Did he resign his high and holy soul To images of the majestic past,

That paused within his passive being now,

Like winds that bear sweet music, when they breathe

Through some dim latticed chamber.
He did place

His pale lean hand upon the rugged trunk

Of the old pine. Upon an ivied stone Reclined his languid head, his limbs did rest, Diffused and motionless, on the smooth brink

Of that obscurest chasm; -and thus he

Surrendering to their final impulses

The hovering powers of life. Hope and despair.

The torturers, slept; no mortal pain or fear

Marred his repose, the influxes of sense, And his own being unalloyed by pain. Yet feebler and more feeble, calmly fed The stream of thought, till he lay breathing there

At peace, and faintly smiling:—his last sight

Was the great moon, which o'er the western line

Of the wide world her mighty horn suspended,

With whose dun beams inwoven darkness seemed

To mingle. Now upon the jaggèd hills It rests, and still as the divided frame Of the vast meteor sunk, the Poet's blood, That ever beat in mystic sympathy

With nature's ebb and flow, grew feebler still:

Still :

And when two lessening points of light alone

Gleamed through the darkness, the alternate gasp

Of his faint respiration scarce did stir
The stagnate night:—till the minutest ray

Was quenched, the pulse yet lingered in his heart.

It paused—it fluttered. But when heaven remained

Utterly black, the murky shades involved

An image, silent, cold, and motionless, As their own voiceless earth and vacant air.

Even as a vapor fed with golden beams That ministered on sunlight, ere the west Eclipses it, was now that wondrous frame—

No sense, no motion, no divinity-

A fragile lute, on whose harmonious strings

The breath of heaven did wander—a bright stream

Once fed with many-voiced waves—a dream

Of youth, which night and time have quenched forever,

Still, dark, and dry, and unremembered now.

O, for Medea's wondrous alchemy,

Which wheresoe'er it fell made the earth gleam

With bright flowers, and the wintry boughs exhale

From vernal blooms fresh fragrance!
O, that God,

Profuse of poisons, would concede the chalice

Which but one living man has drained, who now

Vessel of deathless wrath, a slave that feels

No proud exemption in the blighting curse

He bears, over the world wanders for ever,

Lone as incarnate death! O, that the

Of dark magician in his visioned cave, Raking the cinders of a crucible

For life and power, even when his feeble hand

Shakes in its last decay, were the true law

Of this so lovely world! But thou art fled

Like some frail exhalation; which the dawn

Robes in its golden beams,—ah! thou hast fled!

The brave, the gentle, and the beautiful,
The child of grace and genius. Heartless things

Are done and said i' the world, and many worms And beasts and men live on, and mighty

Earth
From sea and mountain city and wilder-

From sea and mountain, city and wilderness,

In vesper low or joyous orison,

Lifts still its solemn voice:—but thou art fled—

Thou canst no longer know or love the shapes

Of this phantasmal scene, who have to thee

Been purest ministers, who are, alas! Now thou art not. Upon those pallid

So sweet even in their silence, on those

That image sleep in death, upon that form

Yet safe from the worm's outrage, let no tear

Be shed-not even in thought. Nor when those hues

Are gone, and those divinest lineaments

Worn by the senseless wind, shall live alone

In the frail pauses of this simple strain, Let not high verse, mourning the memory

Of that which is no more, or painting's

woe

Or sculpture, speak in feeble imagery
Their own cold powers. Art and eloquence,

And all the shows o' the world are frail

and vain

To weep a loss that turns their lights to shade. It is a woe too " deep for tears," when

It is a woe too "deep for tears," when

Is reft at once, when some surpassing Spirit,

Whose light adorned the world around it, leaves

Those who remain behind, not sobs or groans.

The passionate tumult of a clinging hope; But pale despair and cold tranquillity,

Nature's vast frame, the web of human things.

Birth and the grave, that are not as they were. 1 1815. March, 1816.

I None of Shelley's poems is more characteristic than this. The scient spirit that release throughout the worship of the majesty of nature, the brookings of a poet's heart in softune—the mingling of the excitation with the salari stringling parts with the house parts and a salari stringling parts as the salari stringling parts as hall in his lonely musings, soothed his soul to peace. The versification sustains the solemn spirit which breathes throughout: it is peculiarly melodious. The poem ought rather to be considered didactic than narrative; it was the outporting of his salari stringling in the purest form he could conceive, painted in the purest form he could conceive, painted in the purest form he could conceive, painted in the price of the salari stringling that the salari stringling the salari stringling that the salari stringling that the salari stringling that the salari stringling the salari stringling the salari stringling that the salari stringling the salari stringling the salari stringling the salari stringling that the salari stringling that salari stringling the salari stringling th

The day becomes more solemn and serene When noon is past—there is a harmony

In autumn, and a lustre in its sky, Which thro' the summer is not heard or seen,

As if it could not be, as if it had not been!
Thus let thy power, which like the truth

Descended, to my onward life supply
Its calm—to one who worships thee,
And every form containing thee,
Whom, Spirit fair, thy spells did bind

To fear himself, and love all human kind.

MONT BLANC 1

LINES WRITTEN IN THE VALE OF CHAMOUNI

THE everlasting universe of things Flows through the mind, and rolls its rapid waves,

1 Mont Blanc was inspired by a view of that mountain and its surrounding peaks and valleys, as he lingered on the Bridge of Arve on his way through the Valley of Chamouni. Shelley makes the following mention of this poem in his publication of the History of a Six Weeks' Tour, and Letters from Switzerland; "The poem entitled Mont Blanc is written by the author of the two letters from Chamouni and Vevai. It was composed under the immediate impression of the deep and powerful feelings excited by the objects which it attempts to describe; and, as an undisciplined overflowing of the soul, restits claim to approbation on an attempt to imitate the untamable wildness and inaccessible solemnity from which those feelings sprang." (From Mrs. Shelley's Note on the Poems of 1816.) Compare Coleridge's Hymn before Sunrise in

Now dark—now glittering—now reflecting gloom—

Now lending splendor, where from secret springs

The source of human thought its tribute brings

Of waters,—with a sound but half its own,

Such as a feeble brook will oft assume In the wild woods, among the mountains

Where waterfalls around it leap for ever, Where woods and winds contend, and a vast river

Over its rocks ceaselessly bursts and raves.

Thus thou, Ravine of Arve—dark, deep Ravine—

Thou many-colored, many-voicèd vale, Over whose pines, and crags, and caverns sail

Fast cloud shadows and sunbeams: awful scene,

Where Power in likeness of the Arve comes down

From the ice gulfs that gird his secret throne,

Bursting through these dark mountains like the flame

Of lightning thro' the tempest;—thou dost lie,

Thy giant brood of pines around thee clinging,

Children of elder time, in whose devotion The chainless winds still come and ever came

To drink their odors, and their mighty swinging

To hear—an old and solemn harmony;
Thine earthly rainbows stretched across the sweep

Of the ethereal waterfall, whose veil Robes some unsculptured image; the strange sleep Which when the voices of the desert fail Wraps all in its own deep eternity;—

Thy caverns echoing to the Arve's commotion,

A loud, lone sound no other sound can tame:

Thou art pervaded with that ceaseless motion.

Thou art the path of that unresting sound—

the Vale of Chamouni (p. 96). Coleridge had never been in the Vale of Chamouni, and drew the suggestion and part of the substance of his Hymn from a poem by Frederike Brun. Dizzy Ravine! and when I gaze on thee I seem as in a trance sublime and strange To muse on my own separate phantasy, My own, my human mind, which passively Now renders and receives fast influenc-ings, Holding an unremitting interchange

With the clear universe of things around; One legion of wild thoughts, whose wandering wings

Now float above thy darkness, and now rest

Where that or thou art no unbidden guest,

In the still cave of the witch Poesy,

Seeking among the shadows that pass
by
Chests of all things that are some shado

Ghosts of all things that are, some shade of thee,

Some phantom, some faint image; till the breast
From which they fled recalls them, thou art there!

Some say that gleams of a remoter world
Visit the soul in sleep,—that death is slumber,

And that its shapes the busy thoughts

outnumber
Of those who wake and live.—I look on

high;
Has some unknown omnipotence unfurled

The veil of life and death? or do I lie In dream, and does the mightier world of sleep

Spread far around and inaccessibly
Its circles? For the very spirit fails,

Driven like a homeless cloud from steep to steep

That vanishes among the viewless gales! Far, far above, piercing the infinite sky, Mont Blanc appears,—still, snowy, and serene—

Its subject mountains their unearthly forms

Pile around it, ice and rock; broad vales between

Of frozen floods, unfathomable deeps, Blue as the overhanging heaven, that spread

And wind among the accumulated steeps;

A desert peopled by the storms alone, Save when the eagle brings some hunter's bone,

And the wolf tracks her there—how hideously

Its shapes are heaped around! rude, bare, and high,

Ghastly, and scarred, and riven.—Is this the scene

Where the old Earthquake-demon taught her young

Ruin? Were these their toys? or did

Of fire envelope once this silent snow? None can reply—all seems eternal now. The wilderness has a mysterious tongue Which teaches awful doubt, or faith so mild.

So solemn, so serene, that man may be But for such faith with nature reconciled;

Thou hast a voice, great Mountain, to repeal

Large codes of fraud and woe; not understood

By all, but which the wise, and great, and good

Interpret, or make felt, or deeply feel.

The fields, the lakes, the forests, and the streams.

Ocean, and all the living things that dwell

Within the dædal earth; lightning and rain,

Earthquake, and fiery flood, and hurricane,
The torpor of the year when feeble dreams

Visit the hidden buds, or dreamless sleep Holds every future leaf and flower; the bound

With which from that detested trance they leap;

The works and ways of man, their death and birth,

And that of him and all that his may be; All things that move and breathe with toil and sound

Are born and die; revolve, subside and swell.

Power dwells apart in its tranquillity Remote, serene, and inaccessible:

And this, the naked countenance of earth,

On which I gaze, even these primeval mountains

Teach the adverting mind. The glaciers creep

Like snakes that watch their prey, from their far fountains,

Slow rolling on; there, many a precipice, Frost and the Sun in scorn of mortal power Have piled: dome, pyramid, and pinnacle, A city of death, distinct with many a tower

And wall impregnable of beaming ice.
Yet not a city, but a flood of ruin

Is there, that from the boundaries of the sky

Rolls its perpetual stream; vast pines are strewing

Its destined path, or in the mangled soil Branchless and shattered stand; the rocks, drawn down

From you remotest waste, have overthrown

The limits of the dead and living world, Never to be reclaimed. The dwellingplace

Of insects, beasts, and birds, becomes its spoil;

Their food and their retreat for ever gone,

So much of life and joy is lost. The race Of man, flies far in dread; his work and dwelling

Vanish, like smoke before the tempest's stream,

And their place is not known. Below, vast caves

Shine in the rushing torrents' restless gleam,

Which from those secret chasms in tumult welling

Meet in the vale, and one majestic River, The breath and blood of distant lands, for ever

Rolls its loud waters to the ocean waves, Breathes its swift vapors to the circling air.

Mont Blanc yet gleams on high:—the power is there,

The still and solemn power of many sights,

And many sounds, and much of life and death.

In the calm darkness of the moonless nights,

In the lone glare of day, the snows descend

Upon that Mountain; none beholds them there,

Nor when the flakes burn in the sinking sun,

Or the star-beams dart through them:
—Winds contend

Silently there, and heap the snow with breath

Rapid and strong, but silently! Its home

The voiceless lightning in these solitudes Keeps innocently, and like vapor broads Over the snow. The secret strength of things

Which governs thought, and to the infinite dome

Of heaven is as a law, inhabits thee!

And what were thou, and earth, and stars, and sea,

If to the human mind's imaginings Silence and solitude were vacancy? July 23, 1816, 1817.

TO MARY ----

DEDICATION OF THE REVOLT OF ISLAM

So now my summer task is ended, Mary, And I return to thee, mine own heart's home;

As to his Queen some victor Knight of Faëry,

Earning bright spoils for her enchanted dome:

Nor thou disdain that, ere my fame

A star among the stars of mortal night, If it indeed may cleave its natal gloom, Its doubtful promise thus I would unite

With thy beloved name, thou Child of love and light.

The toil which stole from thee so many an hour

Is ended—and the fruit is at thy feet!

No longer where the woods to frame a bower

With interlaced branches mix and meet,

Or where, with sound like many voices sweet,

Waterfalls leap among wild islands green

Which framed for my lone boat a lone retreat

Of moss-grown trees and weeds, shall I be seen:

But beside thee, where still my heart has ever been.

Thoughts of great deeds were mine, dear Friend, when first

The clouds which wrap this world from youth did pass.

I do remember well the hour which burst

My spirit's sleep: a fresh Maydawn it was,

When I walked forth upon the glittering grass,

And wept, I knew not why: until there rose

From the near schoolroom voices that, alas!

Were but one echo from a world of woes—

The harsh and grating strife of tyrants and of foes.

And then I clasped my hands, and looked around,

But none was near to mock my streaming eyes,

Which poured their warm drops on the sunny ground—

So, without shame, I spake:—"I will be wise,

And just, and free, and mild, if in me lies

Such power, for I grow weary to behold The selfish and the strong still tyrannize Without reproach or check." I then controlled

My tears, my heart grew calm, and I was meek and bold.

And from that hour did I with earnest thought

Heap knowledge from forbidden mines of lore,

Yet nothing that my tyrants knew or taught I cared to learn, but from that secret

store
Wrought linkèd armor for my soul,

before
It might walk forth to war among mankind;

Thus power and hope were strengthened more and more

Within me, till there came upon my

mind
A sense of loneliness, a thirst with which I pined.

Alas that love should be a blight and

snare
To those who seek all sympathies in one!—

Such once I sought in vain; then black despair,

The shadow of a starless night, was thrown

Over the world in which I moved

alone:

Yet never found I one not false to me, Hard hearts, and cold, like weights of icy stone Which crushed and withered mine, that could not be

Aught but a lifeless clog, until revived by thee.

Thou Friend, whose presence on my wintry heart

Fell, like bright Spring upon some herbless plain,

How beautiful and calm and free thou wert

In thy young wisdom, when the mortal chain

Of Custom thou didst burst and rend in twain,

And walk as free as light the clouds among,

Which many an envious slave then breathed in vain

From his dim dungeon, and my spirit

To meet thee from the woes which had begirt it long!

No more alone through the world's wilderness,

Although I trod the paths of high intent,

I journeyed now: no more companionless.

Where solitude is like despair, I went.—

There is the wisdom of a stern content When Poverty can blight the just and good,

When Infamy dares mock the innocent,

And cherished friends turn with the multitude

To trample: this was ours, and we unshaken stood!

Now has descended a serener hour,

And, with inconstant fortune, friends return;

Though suffering leaves the knowledge and the power

Which says "Let scorn be not repaid with scorn."

And from thy side two gentle babes are born

To fill our home with smiles, and thus are we

Most fortunate beneath life's beaming morn:

And these delights, and thou, have been to me

The parents of the Song I consecrate to thee.

Is it that now my inexperienced fingers
But strike the prelude of a loftier
strain?

Or must the lyre on which my spirit lingers

Soon pause in silence, ne'er to sound again,

Though it might shake the Anarch Custom's reign,

And charm the minds of men to Truth's own sway.

Holier than was Amphion's? I would fain

Reply in hope—but I am worn away, And Death and Love are yet contending for their prey.

And what art thou? I know, but dare not speak:

Time may interpret to his silent years. Yet in the paleness of thy thoughtful cheek,

And in the light thine ample forehead wears,

And in thy sweetest smiles, and in thy tears,

And in thy gentle speech, a prophecy
Is whispered, to subdue my fondest
fears:

And, through thine eyes, even in thy soul I see

A lamp of vestal fire burning internally.

They say that thou wert lovely from thy birth,

Of glorious parents, thou aspiring Child.

I wonder not—for One then left this earth Whose life was like a setting planet

mild,
Which clothed thee in the radiance

undefiled

Of its departing glory; still her fame
Shines on thee, through the tempests dark and wild

Which shake these latter days; and thou canst claim

The shelter, from thy Sire, of an immortal name.

One voice came forth from many a mighty spirit

Which was the echo of three-thousand years:

And the tumultuous world stood mute to hear it,

As some lone man who in a desert hears

The music of his home:—unwonted fears

Fell on the pale oppressors of our race,
And Faith and Custom and lowthoughted cares,

Like thunder-stricken dragons, for a space

oft the to

Left the torn human heart, their food and dwelling-place.

Truth's deathless voice pauses among mankind!

If there must be no response to my cry—

If men must rise and stamp, with fury blind.

On his pure name who loves them—thou and I.

Sweet friend! can look from our tranquility

Like lamps into the world's tempestuous night.—

Two tranquil stars, while clouds are passing by

Which wrap them from the foundering seaman's sight,

That burn from year to year with unextinguished light.

OZYMANDIAS

I MET a traveller from an antique land

Who said: Two vast and trunkless legs of stone

Stand in the desert. Near them, on the sand, Half sunk, a shattered visage lies, whose

Half sunk, a shattered visage lies, whose frown,

And wrinkled lip, and sneer of cold command,

Tell that its sculptor well those passions read

Which yet survive stamped on these

Which yet survive, stamped on these lifeless things,

The hand that mocked them and the heart that fed:

And on the pedestal these words appear:
"My name is Ozymandias, king of kings:

Look on my works, ye Mighty, and despair!"

Nothing beside remains. Round the decay

Of that colossal wreck, boundless and bare

The lone and level sands stretch far away. 1817. 1818.

ON A FADED VIOLET

THE odor from the flower is gone
Which like thy kisses breathed on me;
The color from the flower is flown
Which glowed of thee and only thee!

A shrivelled, lifeless, vacant form, It lies on my abandoned breast, And mocks the heart which yet is warm With cold and silent rest.

I weep,—my tears revive it not!
I sigh,—it breathes no more on me;
Its mute and uncomplaining lot
Is such as mine should be.

LINES WRITTEN AMONG THE EUGANEAN HILLS

Many a green isle needs must be In the deep wide sea of misery. Or the mariner, worn and wan, Never thus could voyage on Day and night, and night and day, Drifting on his dreary way, With the solid darkness black Closing round his vessel's track; Whilst above the sunless sky, Big with clouds, hangs heavily, And behind the tempest fleet Hurries on with lightning feet, Riving sail, and cord, and plank, Till the ship has almost drank Death from the o'er-brimming deep: And sinks down, down, like that sleep When the dreamer seems to be Weltering through eternity; And the dim low line before Of a dark and distant shore Still recedes, as ever still Longing with divided will. But no power to seek or shun, He is ever drifted on O'er the unreposing wave To the haven of the grave. What, if there no friends will greet; What, if there no heart will meet His with love's impatient beat: Wander wheresoe'er he may, Can he dream before that day To find refuge from distress In friendship's smile, in love's caress! Then 'twill wreak him little woe Whether such there be or no: Senseless is the breast, and cold, Which relenting love would fold: Bloodless are the veins and chill

Which the pulse of pain did fill; Every little living nerve That from bitter words did swerve Round the tortured lips and brow, Are like sapless leaflets now Frozen upon December's bough. On the beach of a northern sea Which tempests shake eternally. As once the wretch there lay to sleep, Lies a solitary heap, One white skull and seven dry bones, On the margin of the stones, Where a few gray rushes stand, Boundaries of the sea and land: Nor is heard one voice of wail But the sea-mews, as they sail O'er the billows of the gale; Or the whirlwind up and down Howling, like a slaughtered town, When a king in glory rides Through the pomp of fratricides: Those unburied bones around There is many a mournful sound; There is no lament for him, Like a sunless vapor, dim, Who once clothed with life and thought What now moves nor murmurs not.

Ay, many flowering islands lie In the waters of wide Agony: To such a one this morn was led My bark by soft winds piloted: 'Mid the mountains Euganean I stood listening to the pæan, With which the legioned rooks did hail The sun's uprise majestical; Gathering round with wings all hoar, Thro' the dewy mist they soar Like gray shades, till the eastern heaven Bursts, and then, as clouds of even, Flecked with fire and azure, lie In the unfathomable sky, So their plumes of purple grain, Starred with drops of golden rain, Gleam above the sunlight woods, As in silent multitudes On the morning's fitful gale Thro' the broken mist they sail, And the vapors cloven and gleaming Follow down the dark steep streaming, Till all is bright, and clear, and still, Round the solitary hill.

Beneath is spread like a green sea The waveless plain of Lombardy, Bounded by the vaporous air, Islanded by cities fair; Underneath day's azure eyes Ocean's nursling, Venice lies, A peopled labyrinth of walls, Amphitrite's destined halls, Which her hoary sire now paves With his blue and beaming waves. Lo! the sun upsprings behind, Broad, red, radiant, half reclined On the level quivering line Of the waters crystalline; And before that chasm of light, As within a furnace bright, Column, tower, and dome, and spire. Shine like obelisks of fire, Pointing with inconstant motion From the altar of dark ocean To the sapphire-tinted skies; As the flames of sacrifice From the marble shrines did rise. As to pierce the dome of gold Where Apollo spoke of old.

Sun-girt City, thou hast been Ocean's child, and then his queen: Now is come a darker day, And thou soon must be his prey, If the power that raised thee here Hallow so thy watery bier. A less drear ruin then than now, With thy conquest-branded brow Stooping to the slave of slaves From thy throne, among the waves Wilt thou be, when the sea-mew Flies, as once before it flew, O'er thine isles depopulate, And all is in its ancient state, Save where many a palace gate With green sea-flowers overgrown Like a rock of ocean's own, Topples o'er the abandoned sea As the tides change sullenly. The fisher on his watery way, Wandering at the close of day, Will spread his sail and seize his oar Till he pass the gloomy shore, Lest thy dead should, from their sleep Bursting o'er the starlight deep, Lead a rapid masque of death O'er the waters of his path.

Those who alone thy towers behold Quivering through aërial gold, As I now behold them here, Would imagine not they were Sepulchres, where human forms, Like pollution-nourished worms To the corpse of greatness cling, Murdered, and now mouldering: But if Freedom should awake In her omnipotence, and shake From the Celtic Anarch's hold

All the keys of dungeons cold, Where a hundred cities lie Chained like thee, ingloriously, Thou and all thy sister band Might adorn this sunny land, Twining memories of old time With new virtues more sublime; If not, perish thou and they, Clouds which stain truth's rising day By her sun consumed away, Earth can spare ye: while like flowers, In the waste of years and hours, From your dust new nations spring With more kindly blossoming. Perish—let there only be Floating o'er thy hearthless sea As the garment of thy sky Clothes the world immortally, One remembrance, more sublime Than the tattered pall of time, Which scarce hides thy visage wan ;-That a tempest-cleaving Swan 1 Of the songs of Albion, Driven from his ancestral streams By the might of evil dreams, Found a nest in thee; and Ocean Welcomed him with such emotion That its joy grew his, and sprung From his lips like music flung O'er a mighty thunder-fit Chastening terror: -what though yet Poesy's unfailing River, Which thro' Albion winds for ever Lashing with melodious wave Many a sacred Poet's grave, Mourn its latest nursling fled? What though thou with all thy dead Scarce can for this fame repay Aught thine own? oh, rather say, Though thy sins and slaveries foul Overcloud a sunlike soul?-As the ghost of Homer clings Round Scamander's wasting springs; As divinest Shakespere's might Fills Avon and the world with light Like omniscient power which he Imaged 'mid mortality; As the love from Petrarch's urn, Yet amid you hills doth burn, A quenchless lamp by which the heart Sees things unearthly ;—so thou art Mighty spirit—so shall be The City that did refuge thee.

Lo, the sun floats up the sky Like thought-winged Liberty, Till the universal light Seems to level plain and height;

From the sea a mist has spread, And the beams of morn lie dead On the towers of Venice now, Like its glory long ago. By the skirts of that gray cloud Many-domèd Padua proud Stands, a peopled solitude, 'Mid the harvest-shining plain, Where the peasant heaps his grain In the garner of his foe, And the milk-white oxen slow With the purple vintage strain, Heaped upon the creaking wain, That the brutal Celt may swill Drunken sleep with savage will; And the sickle to the sword Lies unchanged, though many a lord, Like a weed whose shade is poison, Overgrows this region's foison, Sheaves of whom are ripe to come To destruction's harvest home: Men must reap the things they sow, Force from force must ever flow, Or worse; but 'tis a bitter woe That love or reason cannot change The despot's rage, the slave's revenge.

Padua, thou within whose walls Those mute guests at festivals, Son and Mother, Death and Sin, Played at dice for Ezzelin, Till Death cried, "I win, I win!" And Sin cursed to lose the wager. But Death promised, to assuage her, That he would petition for Her to be made Vice-Emperor, When the destined years were o'er, Over all between the Po And the eastern Alpine snow, Under the mighty Austrian. Sin smiled so as Sin only can, And since that time, ay, long before, Both have ruled from shore to shore, That incestuous pair, who follow Tyrants as the sun the swallow, As Repentance follows Crime, And as changes follow Time.

In thine halls the lamp of learning,
Padua, now no more is burning;
Like a meteor, whose wild way
Is lost over the grave of day,
It gleams betrayed and to betray:
Once remotest nations came
To adore that sacred flame,
When it lit not many a hearth
On this cold and gloomy earth:
Now new fires from antique light
Spring beneath the wide world's might:

But their spark lies dead in thee, Trampled out by tyranny. As the Nirway woodman quells, In the depth of piny bells, One light flame among the I rakes, While the boundless forest shakes. And its mighty trunks are torn By the fire thus lowly born: The spark beneath his feet is dead, He starts to see the flames it fed Howling through the darkened sky With a myriad tongues victoriously, Aml sinks down in fear: so thou, O Tyranny, behaliest now Light around thee, and thou hearest The loud flames ascend, and fearest: Grovel on the earth; av. hide In the dust thy purple pride!

Non lessen is around me now: Tis the noon of autumn's glow, When a soft and purple mist Like a vaporous amethyst, Or an air-dissolved star Mingling light and fragrance, far From the curved horizon's bound To the point of heaven's profound, Fills the overdowing sky: And the plains that silent lie Underneath, the leaves unsodden Where the infant frost has trodden With his morning-winged feet, Whose bright print is gleaming yet; And the rel and golden vines, Piercing with their trellised lines The rough, dark-skirted wilderness; The dun and bladed grass no less, Pointing from this heavy tower In the windless air: the flower Glimm-ring at my feet: the line Of the olive-sandalled Apennine. In the south dimly islanded: And the Alps, whose shows are spread High between the clants and sun; And of living things each one; And my spirit which so long Darkened this swift stream of song. Interpenetrated lie By the glory of the sky: Be it love, light, harmony, Other or the soul of all Which from heaven like dew doth fall, Or the mind which feeds this verse Peopling the lone universe.

Noon descends, and after noon Autumn's evening meets me soon, Leading the infantine moon. And that one star, which to her Almost seems to minister
Half the crimson light she brings
From the sunset's radiant springs:
And the soft dreams of the morn
(Which like wingèd winds had borne
To that silent isle, which lies
'Mid remembered agonies,
The frail bark of this lone being)
Pass, to other sufferers fleeing,
And its ancient pilot, Pain,
Sits beside the helm again,

Other flowering isles must be In the sea of life and agony: Other spirits float and flee O'er that gulf : even now, perhaps, On some rock the wild wave wraps. With folded wings they waiting sit For my bark, to pilot it To some calm and blooming cove, Where for me, and those I love, May a windless bower be built, Far from passion, pain, and guilt, In a dell 'mid lawny hills. Which the wild sea-murmur fills, And soft sunshine, and the sound Of old forests echoing round, And the light and smell divine Of all flowers that breathe and shine: We may live so happy there, That the spirits of the air. Envying us, may even entice To our healing paradise The polluting multitude: But their rage would be subdued By that clime divine and calm, And the winds whose wings rain balm On the uplifted soul, and leaves Under which the bright sea heaves; While each breathless interval In their whisperings musical The inspired soul supplies With its own deep melodies, And the love which heals all strife Circling, like the breath of life, All things in that sweet abode With its own mild brotherhood: They, not it, would change; and soon Every sprite beneath the moon Would repent its envy vain. And the earth grow young again. October, Isis. 1819.

STANZAS

WRITTEN IN DEJECTION, NEAR NAPLES

The sun is warm, the sky is clear.
The waves are dancing fast and bright

Blue isles and snowy mountains wear
The purple noon's transparent might.
The breath of the moist earth is light,
Around its unexpanded buds:
Like many a voice of one delight,

The winds, the birds, the ocean floods,
The City's voice itself is soft like Solitude's.

I see the Deep's untrampled floor With green and purple seaweeds strown:

I see the waves upon the shore, Like light dissolved in star-showers, thrown:

I sit upon the sands alone.

The lightning of the mountide ocean
Is flashing round me, and a tone
Arises from its measured motion,
How sweet! did any heart now share in my emotion.

Alas! I have nor hope nor health.

Nor peace within nor calm around,

Nor that content surpassing wealth

The sage in meditation found,

And walked with inward glory crowned—

Nor fame, nor power, nor love, nor leis-

Others I see whom these surround— Smiling they live, and call life pleasure:—

To me that cup has been dealt in another measure.

Yet now despair itself is mild,
Even as the winds and waters are;
I could lie down like a tired child,
And weep away the life of care
Which I have borne and yet must bear.

Till death like sleep might steal on me.
And I might feel in the warm air
My check grow cell, and hear the sea
Breathe o'er my dying brain its last monotony.

Some might lament that I were cold, As I, when this sweet day is gone. Which my lost heart, too soon grown ald.

Insults with this untimely moan;
They might lament—for I am one
Whom men love not.—and yet regret.
Unlike this day, which, when the sun
Shall on its stainless glory set.

Will linger, though enjoyed, like joy in memory yet. ISIS. 1824. SONNET: ENGLAND IN 1819

ODE TO THE WEST WIND 1

1

O WILD West Wind, thou breath of Autumn's being,

Thou, from whose unseen presence the leaves dead

Are driven, like ghosts from an enchanter fleeing,

Yellow, and black, and pale, and hectic red.

Pestilence-stricken multitudes: O thou. Who chariotest to their dark wintry bed

The winged seeds, where they lie cold and low,

Each like a corpse within its grave, until Thine azure sister of the spring shall blow

Her clarion o'er the dreaming earth, and fill (Driving sweet buds like flocks to feed in air)

With living hues and odors plain and hill;

Wild Spirit, which art moving everywhere;

Destroyer and preserver; hear, Oh hear!

Ħ

Thou on whose stream, 'mid the steep sky's commotion,

Loose clouds like earth's decaying leaves are shed,

Shook from the tangled boughs of Heaven and Ocean,

Angels of rain and lightning: there are spread

On the blue surface of thine airy surge, Like the bright hair uplifted from the head

Of some fierce Mænad, even from the dim verge

Of the horizon to the zenith's height
The locks of the approaching storm.
Thou dirge

Of the dying year, to which this closing night

Will be the dome of a vast sepulchre, Vaulted with all thy congregated might

Of vapors, from whose solid atmosphere Black rain, and fire, and hail will burst: Oh hear!

III

Thou who didst waken from his summer dreams

The blue Mediterranean, where he lay, Lulled by the coil of his crystàlline streams,

Beside a pumice isle in Baiæ's bay, And saw in sleep old palaces and towers Quivering within the wave's intenser day,

All overgrown with azure moss and flowers

So sweet, the sense faints picturing them! Thou

For whose path the Atlantic's level powers

Cleave themselves into chasms, while far below

The sea-blooms and the oozy woods which wear

The sapless foliage of the ocean, know

Thy voice, and suddenly grow gray with fear.

And tremble and despoil themselves:
Oh hear!

IV

If I were a dead leaf thou mightest bear;
If I were a swift cloud to fly with thee;
A wave to pant beneath thy power, and share

The impulse of thy strength, only less free Than thou, O uncontrollable! If even I were as in my boyhood, and could be

The comrade of thy wanderings over heaven,

As then, when to outstrip thy skiey speed Scarce seemed a vision; I would ne'er have striven

As thus with thee in prayer in my sore need.

Oh lift me as a wave, a leaf, a cloud! I fall upon the thorns of life! I bleed!

A heavy weight of hours has chained and bowed

One too like thee: tameless, and swift, and proud.

 ∇

Make me thy lyre, even as the forest is: What if my leaves are falling like its own! The tumult of thy mighty harmonies

Will take from both a deep, autumnal tone,

Sweet though in sadness. Be thou, spirit fierce,

My spirit! Be thou me, impetuous one!

Drive my dead thoughts over the universe Like withered leaves to quicken a new birth!

And, by the incantation of this verse,

Scatter, as from an unextinguished hearth

Ashes and sparks, my words among mankind!

Be through my lips to unawakened earth

The trumpet of a prophecy! O, wind, If Winter comes, can Spring be far behind?

THE INDIAN SERENADE

I ARISE from dreams of thee In the first sweet sleep of night, When the winds are breathing low, And the stars are shining bright: I arise from dreams of thee, And a spirit in my feet Hath led nie—who knows how! To thy chamber window, Sweet!

The wandering airs they faint
On the dark, the silent stream—
And the Champak odors fail
Like sweet thoughts in a dream;
The nightingale's complaint,
It dies upon her heart;
As I must on thine,
O! belovèd as thou art!

Oh lift me from the grass! I die! I faint! I fail!

Let thy love in kisses rain On my lips and eyelids pale. My cheek is cold and white, alas! My heart beats loud and fast;— Oh! press it to thine own again, Where it will break at last.

LOVE'S PHILOSOPHY

THE Fountains mingle with the River
And the Rivers with the Ocean,
The winds of Heaven mix for ever
With a sweet emotion;
Nothing in the world is single;
All things by a law divine
In one spirit meet and mingle.

See the mountains kiss high Heaven And the waves clasp one another; No sister-flower would be forgiven If it disdained its brother, And the sunlight clasps the earth And the moonbeams kiss the sea: What are all these kissings worth If thou kiss not me? 1810. 1819.

ACT I

SCENE—A RAVINE OF ICY ROCKS IN THE INDIAN CAUCASUS.

PROMETHEUS is discovered bound to the Precipice. Panthea and Ione are seated at his feet. Time, night. During the Scene, morning slowly breaks.

. See note at the end of the poem.

Prometheus. Monarch of Gods and Demons, and all Spirits

But One, who throng those bright and rolling worlds

Which Thou and I alone of living things Behold with sleepless eyes! regard this Earth

Made multitudinous with thy slaves, whom thou

Requitest for knee-worship, prayer, and praise,
And toil, and hecatombs of broken hearts, With fear and self-contempt and barren hope. Whilst me, who am thy foe, eyeless in hate, Hast thou made reign and triumph to

Hast thou made reign and triumph, to thy scorn

O'er mine own misery and thy vain revenge.

Three thousand years of sleep-unsheltered hours,

And moments are divided by keen pangs Till they seemed years, torture and solitude.

Scorn and despair, — these are mine empire;—

More glorious far than that which thou surveyest

From thine unenvied throne, O, Mighty God!

Almighty, had I deigned to share the shame

Of thine ill tyranny, and hung not here Nailed to this wall of eagle-baffling mountain.

Black, wintry, dead, unmeasured; without herb,

Insect, or beast, or shape or sound of life.

Ah me! alas, pain, pain ever, for ever!

No change, no pause, no hope! Yet I endure.

I ask the Earth, have not the mountains felt?

I ask you Heaven, the all-beholding Sun, Has it not seen? The Sea, in storm or calm.

Heaven's ever-changing Shadow, spread below,

Have its deaf waves not heard my agony? Ah me! alas, pain, pain ever, for ever!

The crawling glaciers pierce me with the spears

Of their moon-freezing crystals, the bright chains

Eat with their burning cold into my bones,

Heaven's wingèd hound, polluting from thy lips

His beak in poison not his own, tears up My heart; and shapeless sights come wandering by,

The ghastly people of the realm of dream,

Mocking me: and the Earthquake-fiends are charged

To wrench the rivets from my quivering wounds

When the rocks split and close again behind:

While from their loud abysses howling throng

The genii of the storm, urging the rage Of whirlwind, and afflict me with keen hail.

And yet to me welcome is day and night,

Whether one breaks the hoar frost of the morn,

Or starry, dim, and slow, the other climbs

The leaden-colored east; for then they lead

The wingless, crawling hours, one among whom

—As some dark Priest hales the reluctant victim—

Shall drag thee, cruel King, to kiss the blood

From these pole feet, which they reight

From these pale feet, which then might trample thee

If they disdained not such a prostrate slave.

Disdain! Ah no! I pity thee. What ruin

Will hunt thee undefended thro' the wide Heaven?

How will thy soul, cloven to its depth with terror,

Gape like a hell within! I speak in grief,

Not exultation, for I hate no more,

As then ere misery made me wise. The curse

Once breathed on thee I would recall. Ye Mountains,

Whose many-voiced Echoes, through the mist

Of cataracts, flung the thunder of that spell!
Ye icy Springs, stagnant with wrinkling

frost,
Which vibrated to hear me, and then crept Shuddering thro' India! Thou serenest

Air, Thro' which the Sun walks burning without beams!

And ye swift Whirlwinds, who on poisèd
wings

Hung mute and moveless o'er yon hushed abyss,

As thunder, louder than your own, made rock

The orbed world! If then my words had power,

Though I am changed so that aught evil

Is dead within; although no memory be Of what is hate, let them not lose it now! What was that curse? for ye all heard me speak.

First Voice (from the Mountains)

Thrice three hundred thousand years

O'er the Earthquake's couch we stood:

Oft, as men convulsed with fears, We trembled in our multitude.

Second Voice (from the Springs)

Thunderbolts had parched our water, We had been stained with bitter blood,

And had run mute, 'mid shrieks of slaughter,

Thro' a city and a solitude.

Third Voice (from the Air)

I had clothed, since Earth uprose, Its wastes in colors not their own, And oft had my serene repose

Been cloven by many a rending groan,

groan

Fourth Voice (from the Whirlwinds)

We had soared beneath these mountains

Unresting ages; nor had thunder, Nor you volcano's flaming fountains, Nor any power above or under Ever made us mute with wonder.

First Voice

But never bowed our snowy crest As at the voice of thine unrest.

Second Voice

Never such a sound before To the Indian waves we bore. A pilot asleep on the howling sea Leaped up from the deck in agony, And heard, and cried, "Ah, woe is me!" And died as mad as the wild waves be.

Third Voice

By such dread words from Earth to Heaven My still realm was never riven:

My still realm was never riven; When its wound was closed, there stood Darkness o'er the day like blood.

Fourth Voice

And we shrank back; for dreams of ruin To frozen caves our flight pursuing Made us keep silence—thus—and thus—Though silence is a hell to us.

The Earth. The tongueless Caverns of the craggy hills

Cried "Misery!" then; the hollow Heaven replied,

"Misery!" and the Ocean's purple waves,

Climbing the land, howled to the lashing winds,

And the pale nations heard it, "Misery!"

Prometheus. I hear a sound of voices:
not the voice

Which I gave forth. Mother, thy sons and thou

Scorn him, without whose all-enduring will

Beneath the fierce omnipotence of Jove, Both they and thou had vanished, like thin mist

Unrolled on the morning wind. Know ye not me,

The Titan? He who made his agony
The barrier to your else all-conquering

Oh, rock-embosomed lawns, and snowfed streams.

Now seen athwart frore vapors, deep below,

Thro' whose o'ershadowing woods I wandered once

With Asia, drinking life from her loved eyes;

Why scorns the spirit which informs ye, now
To commune with me? me alone, who checked,

As one who checks a fiend-drawn charioteer,

The falsehood and the force of him who reigns

Supreme, and with the groans of pining

slaves
Fills your dim glens and liquid wildernesses:

Why answer ye not, still? Brethren!

The Earth. They dare not.

Prometheus. Who dares? for I would hear that curse again.

Ha, what an awful whisper rises up!
Tis scarce like sound; it tingles thro'

the frame As lightning tingles, hovering ere it strike.

Speak, Spirit! from thine inorganic

voice
I only know that thou art moving near

And love. How cursed I him?

The Earth. How canst thou hear

Who knowest not the language of the dead?

Prometheus. Thou art a living spirit; speak as they.

The Earth. I dare not speak like life, lest Heaven's fell King

Should hear, and link me to some wheel of pain

More torturing than the one whereon I roll.

Subtle thou art and good, and tho' the Gods

Hear not this voice, yet thou art more than God

Being wise and kind: earnestly hearken now.

Prometheus. Obscurely thro' my brain, like shadows dim,

Sweep awful thoughts, rapid and thick.
I feel

Faint, like one mingled in entwining love;

Yet 'tis not pleasure.

The Earth. No, thou canst not hear; Thou art immortal, and this tongue is known

Only to those who die.

Prometheus. And what art thou, O, melancholy Voice?

The Earth. I am the Earth.

Thy mother; she within whose stony veins,

To the last fibre of the loftiest tree
Whose thin leaves trembled in the frozen air,

Joy ran, as blood within a living frame, When thou didst from her bosom, like a cloud.

Of glory, arise, a spirit of keen joy!
And at thy voice her pining sons uplifted
Their prostrate brows from the polluting dust.

And our almighty Tyrant with fierce dread

Grew pale, until his thunder chained thee here.

Then, see those million worlds which burn and roll

Around us: their inhabitants beheld
My spherèd light wane in wide Heaven;
the sea

Was lifted by strange tempest, and new fire

From earthquake-rifted mountains of bright snow

Shook its portentous hair beneath Heaven's frown;

Lightning and Inundation vexed the plains;

Blue thistles bloomed in cities; foodless toads

Within voluptuous chambers panting crawled:

When Plague had fallen on man, and beast and worm,

And Famine; and black blight on herb and tree;

And in the corn, and vines, and meadowgrass,

Teemed ineradicable poisonous weeds
Draining their growth, for my wan breast was dry

With grief; and the thin air, my breath, was stained

With the contagion of a mother's hate Breathed on her child's destroyer; aye, I heard

Thy curse, the which, if thou rememberest not.

Yet my innumerable seas and streams, Mountains, and caves, and winds, and you wide air,

And the inarticulate people of the dead,

Preserve, a treasured spell. We meditate In secret joy and hope those dreadful words

But dare not speak them.

Prometheus. Venerable mother!
All else who live and suffer take from

thee
Some comfort; flowers, and fruits, and happy sounds,

And love, though fleeting; these may not be mine.

But mine own words, I pray, deny me not.

The Earth. They shall be told. Ere

Babylon was dust, The Magus Zoroaster, my dead child,

Met his own image walking in the garden.

That apparition, sole of men, he saw.

For know there are two worlds of life and death:

One that which thou beholdest; but the other

Is underneath the grave, where do inhabit

The shadows of all forms that think and live

Till death unite them and they part no more;

Dreams and the light imaginings of men,

And all that fate creates or love desires, Terrible, strange, sublime and beauteous shapes.

There thou art, and dost hang, a writhing shade,

'Mid whirlwind-peopled mountains; all the gods Are there, and all the powers of nameless worlds.

Vast, sceptred phantoms; heroes, men.

and beasts:

And Demogorgon, a tremendous gloom: And he, the supreme Tyrant, on his throne

Of burning gold. Son, one of these shall utter

The curse which all remember. Call at will

Thine own ghost, or the ghost of Jupiter, Hades or Typhon, or what mightier Gods From all-prolific Evil, since thy ruin Have sprung, and trampled on my prostrate sons.

Ask, and they must reply: so the revenge Of the Supreme may sweep thro' vacant shades.

As rainy wind thro' the abandoned gate

Of a fallen palace.

Prometheus. Mother, let not aught Of that which may be evil, pass again My lips, or those of aught resembling me. Phantasm of Jupiter, arise, appear !

Tone

My wings are folded o'er mine ears: My wings are crossèd o'er mine eves: Yet thro' their silver shade appears, And thro' their lulling plumes arise, A Shape, a throng of sounds;

May it be no ill to thee O thou of many wounds!

Near whom, for our sweet sister's sake, Ever thus we watch and wake.

Panthea

The sound is of whirlwind underground Earthquake, and fire, and mountains cloven:

The shape is awful like the sound, Clothed in dark purple, star-in woven.

A sceptre of pale gold

To stay steps proud, o'er the slow cloud

His veinéd hand doth hold.

Cruel he looks, but calm and strong, Like one who does, not suffers wrong.

Phantasm of Jupiter. Why have the secret powers of this strange world

Driven me. a frail and empty phantom, hither

On direct storms? What unaccustomed sounds

Are hovering on my lips, unlike the voice With which our pallid race hold ghastly talk

In darkness? And, proud sufferer, who art thou?

Prometheus. Tremendous Image, as thou art must be

He whom thou shadowest forth. I am his foe,

The Titan. Speak the words which I would hear, thought inform thine Although no empty voice.

The Earth. Listen! And tho' your echoes must be mute,

Gray mountains, and old woods, and haunted springs,

Prophetic caves, and isle-surrounding streams.

Rejoice to hear what yet ve cannot speak. Phantasm. A spirit seizes me and speaks within:

It tears me as fire tears a thunder-cloud. Panthea. See, how he lifts his mighty looks, the Heaven

Darkens above.

He speaks! O shelter me! Tone. Prometheus. see the curse on gestures proud and cold.

And looks of firm defiance, and calm hate, And such despair as mocks itself with smiles.

Written as on a scroll: yet speak: Oh, speak!

Phantasm

Fiend, I defy thee! with a calm, fixed mind.

All that thou canst inflict I bid thee do:

Foul Tyrant both of Gods and Humankind.

One only being shalt thou not subdue.

Rain then thy plagues upon me here, Ghastly disease, and frenzying fear; And let alternate frost and fire Eat into me, and be thine ire

Lightning, and cutting hail, and legioned

Of furies, driving by upon the wounding storms.

Ay, do thy worst. Thou art omnipotent.

O'er all things but thyself I gave thee power,

And my own will. Be thy swift mischiefs sent

To blast mankind, from yon ethereal

Let thy malignant spirit move

In darkness over those I love:
On me and mine I imprecate
The utmost torture of thy hate;
And thus devote to sleepless agony,
This undeclining head, while thou must reign on high.

But thou, who art the God and Lord:
O, thou,

Who fillest with thy soul this world of woe,

To whom all things of Earth and Heaven do bow

In fear and worship: all-prevailing

I curse thee! let a sufferer's curse Clasp thee, his torturer, like remorse; Till thine Infinity shall be

A robe of envenomed agony;
And thine Omnipotence a crown of pain,
To cling like burning gold round thy dissolving brain.

Heap on thy soul, by virtue of this Curse

Ill deeds, then be thou damned, beholding good;

Both infinite as is the universe,

And thou, and thy self-torturing solitude.

An awful image of calm power Though now thou sittest, let the hour Come, when thou must appear to be That which thou art internally.

And after many a false and fruitless crime

Scorn track thy lagging fall thro' boundless space and time.

Prometheus. Were these my words, O, Parent?

The Earth. They were thine.

Prometheus. It doth repent me:

words are quick and vain;

Grief for awhile is blind, and so was mine.

I wish no living thing to suffer pain.

The Earth

Misery, Oh misery to me, That Jove at length should vanquish thee.

Wail, howl aloud, Land and Sea, The Earth's rent heart shall answer

Howl, Spirits of the living and the dead, Your refuge, your defence lies fallen and vanquishéd.

First Echo

Lies fallen and vanquishéd!

Second Echo

Fallen and vanquishéd!

Ione

Fear not: 'tis but some passing spasm,
The Titan is unvanquished still.
But see, where three' the azure chasm

Of yon forked and snowy hill Trampling the slant winds on high With golden-sandalled feet, that glow Under plumes of purple dye, Like rose-ensanguined ivory,

A Shape comes now, Stretching on high from his right hand A serpent-cinctured wand.

Panthea. 'Tis Jove's world-wandering herald, Mercury.

Ione

And who are those with hydra tresses
And iron wings that climb the wind,
Whom the frowning God represses
Like vapors steaming up behind,
Clanging loud, an endless crowd—

Panthea

These are Jove's tempest-walking hounds,
Whom he gluts with groans and blood,

When charioted on sulphurous cloud He bursts Heaven's bounds.

Ione

Are they now led, from the thin dead On new pangs to be fed?

Panthea

The Titan looks as ever, firm, not proud.

First Fury. Ha! Iscent life!

Second Fury. Let me but look into his eyes!

Third Fury. The hope of torturing him smells like a heap

Of corpses, to a death-bird after battle.

First Fury. Darest thou delay, O

Herald! take cheer, Hounds

Of Hell: what if the Son of Maia soon Should make us food and sport—who can please long

The Omnipotent?

Mercury. Back to your towers of iron

And gnash, beside the streams of fire and wail,

Your foodless teeth. Geryon, arise! and Gorgon,

Chimæra, and thou Sphinx, subtlest of fiends

Who ministered to Thebes Heaven's poisoned wine,

Unnatural love, and more unnatural hate:

These shall perform your task.

First Fury. On, mercy! mercy! We die with our desire: drive us not back!

Mercury. Crouch then in silence.
Awful Sufferer

To thee unwilling, most unwillingly
I come, by the great Father's will driven down,

To execute a doom of new revenge.

Alas! I pity thee, and hate myself

That I can do no more: aye from thy sight

Returning, for a season, Heaven seems Hell,

So thy worn form pursues me night and day,

Smiling reproach. Wise art thou, firm and good,

But vainly wouldst stand forth alone in strife

Against the Omnipotent; as you clear lamps

That measure and divide the weary years

From which there is no refuge, long have taught

And long must teach. Even now thy Torturer arms

With the strange might of unimagined pains

The powers who scheme slow agonies in Hell,

And my commission is to lead them here,

Or what more subtle, foul, or savage fiends

People the abyss, and leave them to their task.

Be it not so! there is a secret known
To thee, and to none else of living things.

Which may transfer the sceptre of wide Heaven,

The fear of which perplexes the Supreme:

Clothe it in words, and bid it clasp his

In intercession; bend thy soul in prayer,

And like a suppliant in some gorgeous fane.

Let the will kneel within thy haughty heart:

For benefits and meek submission tame
The fiercest and the mightiest.

Prometheus. Evil minds

Prometheus. Evil minds
Change good to their own nature. 1

He has; and in return he chains me here Years, ages, night and day; whether the Sun

Split my parched skin, or in the moony night

The crystal-wingèd snow cling round

my hair:
Whilst my belovèd race is trampled

down

By his thought-executing ministers.

Such is the tyrant's recompense: 'tis just:

He who is evil can receive no good;
And for a world bestowed, or a friend lost,

He can feel hate, fear, shame; not gratitude:

He but requites me for his own misdeed.

Kindness to such is keen reproach, which breaks

With bitter stings the light sleep of Revenge.

Submission, thou dost know I cannot try:

For what submission but that fatal word,

The death-seal of mankind's captivity, Like the Sicilian's hair-suspended sword, Which trembles o'er his crown, would he accept.

Or could I yield? Which yet I will not yield.

Let others flatter Crime, where it sits throned

In brief Omnipotence: secure are they: For Justice, when triumphant, will weep down

Pity, not punishment, on her own wrongs,

Too much avenged by those who err.
I wait,

Enduring thus, the retributive hour Which since we spake is even nearer

Which since we spake is even nearer now.

But hark, the hell-hounds clamor: fear delay:

Behold! Heaven lowers under thy Father's frown.

Mercury. Oh, that we might be spared: I to inflict

And thou to suffer! Once more answer me:

Thou knowest not the period of Jove's power?

Prometheus. I know but this, that it must come.

Mercury. Alas!
Thou canst not count thy years to come of pain?

Prometheus. They last while Jove must reign: nor more, nor less

Do I desire or fear.

Mercury. Yet pause, and plunge Into Eternity, where recorded time, Even all that we imagine, age on age, Seems but a point, and the reluctant mind

Flags wearily in its unending flight, Till it sink, dizzy, blind, lost, shelter-

Perchance it has not numbered the slow

Which thou must spend in torture, unreprieved?

Prometheus. Perchance no thought can count them, yet they pass.

Mercury. If thou might'st dwell among the Gods the while Lapped in voluptuous joy?

Prometheus. I would not quit
This bleak ravine, these unrepentant pains.

Mercury. Alas! I wonder at, yet pity thee.

Prometheus. Pity the self-despising slaves of Heaven,

Not me, within whose mind sits peace serene,

As light in the sun, throned: how vain is talk!

Call up the fiends.

Ione. O, sister, look! White fire
Has cloven to the roots you huge snowloaded cedar;

How fearfully God's thunder howls behind!

Mercury. I must obey his words and thine: alas!

Most heavily remorse hangs at my heart!

Panthea. See where the child of Heaven, with wingèd feet,

Runs down the slanted sunlight of the dawn.

Ione. Dear sister, close thy plumes over thine eyes

Lest thou behold and die: they come: they come

Blackening the birth of day with countless wings, And hollow underneath, like death.

First Fury. Prometheus 'Second Fury. Immortal Titan!

Third Fury. Champion of Heaven's slaves!

Prometheus. He whom some dreadful voice invokes is here,

Prometheus, the chained Titan. Horrible forms.

What and who are ye? Never yet there

Phantasms so foul thro' monster-teeming Hell

From the all-miscreative brain of Jove; Whilst I behold such execrable shapes, Methinks I grow like what I contemplate,

And laugh and stare in loathsome sympathy.

First Fury. We are the ministers of pain, and fear,

And disappointment, and mistrust, and hate.

And clinging crime; and as lean dogs pursue

Thro' wood and lake some struck and sobbing fawn,

We track all things that weep, and bleed, and live,

When the great King betrays them to our will.

Prometheus. Oh! many fearful natures

in one name,
I know ye; and these lakes and echoes

know
The darkness and the clangor of your wings. But why more hideous than your loathed selves

Gather ye up in legions from the deep?

Second Fury. We knew not that:
Sisters, rejoice, rejoice!
Prometheus Can aught exult in its

Prometheus. Can aught exult in its deformity?

Second Fury. The beauty of delight makes lovers glad,

Gazing on one another: so are we.

As from the rose which the pale priestess kneels

To gather for her festal crown of flowers The aërial crimson falls, flushing her cheek.

So from our victim's destined agony

The shade which is our form invests us round,

Else we are shapeless as our mother Night.

Prometheus. I laugh your power, and his who sent you here,

To lowest scorn. Pour forth the cup of

First Fury. Thou thinkest we will rend thee bone from bone.

And nerve from nerve, working like fire

Prometheus. Pain is my element, as hate is thine:

Ye rend me now: I care not.

Second Fury. Dost imagine We will but laugh into thy lidless eyes? Prometheus. I weigh not what ve do. but what ye suffer,

Being evil. Cruel was the power which called

You, or aught else so wretched, into light. Third Fury. Thou think 'st we will live thro' thee, one by one,

Like animal life, and tho' we can obscure

The soul which burns within, that we will dwell Beside it, like a vain loud multitude

Vexing the self-content of wisest men: That we will be dread thought beneath thy brain.

And foul desire round thine astonished heart,

And blood within thy labyrinthine veins Crawling like agony.

Prometheus. Why, we are thus now: Yet am I king over myself, and rule The torturing and conflicting throngs within.

As Jove rules you when Hell grows mutinous.

Chorus of Furies

From the ends of the earth, from the ends of the earth, Where the night has its grave and the morning its birth,

Come, come, come! Oh, ye who shake hills with the scream of your mirth, When cities sink howling in ruin: and

Who with wingless footsteps trample the sea.

And close upon Shipwreck and Famine's track.

Sit chattering with joy on the foodless wreck.

Come, come, come! Leave the bed, low, cold and red, Strewed beneath a nation dead: Leave the hatred, as in ashes Fire is left for future burning:

It will burst in bloodier fashion, When ye stir it, soon returning:

· Leave the self-contempt implanted In young spirits, sense-enchanted, Misery's vet unkindled fuel:

Leave Hell's secrets half unchanted To the maniac dreamer; cruel

More than ve can be with hate

Is he with fear.

Come, come, come! We are steaming up from Hell's wide

And we burthen the blast of the atmosphere.

But vainly we toil till ye come here. Ione. Sister, I hear the thunder of new wings.

solid mountains Panthea. These quiver with the sound

Even as the tremulous air; their shadows make

The space within my plumes more black than night.

First Fury

Your call was as a wingèd car Driven on whirlwinds fast and far: It rapt us from red gulf of war.

Second Fury

From wide cities, famine-wasted:

Third Fury

Groans half, heard, and blood untasted; Fourth Fury

Kingly conclaves stern and cold, Where blood with gold is bought and sold:

Fifth Fury

From the furnace, white and hot, In which—

A Fury

Speak not: whisper not I know all that ye would tell, But to speak might break the spell Which must bend the Invincible, The stern of thought;

He yet defies the deepest power of Hell.

Fury

Tear the veil!

Another Fury

It is torn.

Chorus

The pale stars of the morn Shine on a misery, dire to be borne.

Dost thou faint, mighty Titan? We laugh thee to scorn.

Dost thou boast the clear knowledge thou waken'dst for man?

Then was kindled within him a thirst which outran

Those perishing waters: a thirst of fierce fever.

Hope, love, doubt, desire, which consume him for ever.

One came forth of gentle worth Smiling on the sanguine earth; His words outlived him, like swift poison,

Withering up truth, peace, and pity. Look! where round the wide horizon

Many a million-peopled city Vomits smoke in the bright air. Mark that outcry of despair! 'Tis his mild and gentle ghost Wailing for the faith he kindled:

Look again, the flames almost To a glow-worm's lamp have dwindled:

The survivors round the embers Gather in dread.

Joy, joy, joy!
Past ages crowd on thee, but each one remembers,

And the future is dark, and the present is spread

Like a pillow of thorns for thy slumberless head.

Semichorus I

Drops of bloody agony flow From his white and quivering brow. Grant a little respite now: See a disenchanted nation Springs like day from desolation; To Truth its state is dedicate, And Freedom leads it forth, her mate; A legioned band of linkéd brothers Whom Love calls children-

Semichorus II

'Tis another's: See how kindred murder kin: 'Tis the vintage time for death and sin;

Blood, like new wine, bubbles within; Till Despair smothers

The struggling world, which slaves and tyrants win.

All the Furies vanish, except one. Ione. Hark, sister! what a low yet dreadful groan.

Quite unsuppressed is tearing up the heart

Of the good Titan, as storms tear the deep,

And beasts hear the sea moan in inland

Darest thou observe how the fiends torture him?

Panthea. Alas! I looked forth twice. but will no more.

Ione. What didst thou see?

A woful sight: a youth Panthea. With patient looks nailed to a crucifix. Tone. What next?

The heaven around, the Panthea. earth below

Was peopled with thick shapes of human death,

All horrible, and wrought by human hands.

And some appeared the work of human hearts.

For men were slowly killed by frowns and smiles:

And other sights too foul to speak and live

Were wandering by. Let us not tempt worse fear By looking forth: those groans are grief enough. Behold an emblem: those Fury.

who do endure Deep wrongs for man, and scorn, and chains, but heap Thousandfold torment on themselves and him. Remit the anguish of Prometheus. that lighted stare;

Close those wan lips; let that thornwounded brow

Stream not with blood; it mingles with thy tears!

Fix, fix those tortured orbs in peace and death.

So thy sick throes shake not that cruci-

So those pale fingers play not with thy

O, horrible! Thy name I will not speak, It hath become a curse. I see, I see The wise, the mild, the lofty, and the just, Whom thy slaves hate for being like to thee. Some hunted by foul lies from their heart's home, An early-chosen, late-lamented home;

As hooded ounces cling to the driven hind:

Some linked to corpses in unwholesome cells:

Some—Hear I not the multitude laugh loud?—

Impaled in lingering fire: and mighty realms

Float by my feet, like sea-uprooted isles. Whose sons are kneaded down in common blood

By the red light of their own burning homes.

Fury. Blood thou canst see, and fire; and canst hear groans;

Worse things, unheard, unseen, remain behind.

Prometheus. Worse?

In each human heart Furu. terror survives

The ruin it has gorged: the loftiest fear All that they would disdain to think were true:

Hypocrisy and custom make their minds The fanes of many a worship, now outworn.

They dare not devise good for man's estate.

And yet they know not that they do not

The good want power, but to weep barren tears. The powerful goodness want: worse need for them.

The wise want love; and those who love want wisdom; And all best things are thus confused to ill. Many are strong and rich, and would be just, But live among their suffering fellow-

As if none felt: they know not what they do. Thy words are like a Prometheus. cloud of wingéd snakes;

And yet I pity those they torture not. Fury. Thou pitiest them? I speak no more! Vanishes. Prometheus. Ãh woe!

Ah woe! Alas! pain, pain ever, for ever!

I close my tearless eyes, but see more

Thy works within my woe-illumed mind, Thou subtle tyrant! Peace is in the grave.

The grave hides all things beautiful and good:

I am a God and cannot find it there, Nor would I seek it: for, though dread revenge.

This is defeat, fierce king, not victory.

The sights with which thou torturest gird my soul

With new endurance, till the hour arrives When they shall be no types of things which are.

Panthea. Alas! what sawest thou? Prometheus. There are two woes:

To speak, and to behold; thou spare me one.

Names are there, Nature's sacred watchwords, they

Were borne aloft in bright emblazonry: The nations thronged around, and cried aloud.

As with one voice, Truth, liberty, and love!

Suddenly fierce confusion fell from heaven

Among them: there was strife, deceit, and fear:

Tyrants rushed in, and did divide the spoil.

This was the shadow of the truth I saw. The Earth. I felt thy torture, son. with such mixed joy

As pain and virtue give. To cheer thy state

I bid ascend those subtle and fair spirits. Whose homes are the dim caves of human thought.

And who inhabit, as birds wing the wind. Its world-surrounding ether: they be-

Beyond that twilight realm, as in a glass. The future: may they speak comfort to thee!

Panthea. Look, sister, where a troop of spirits gather,

Like flocks of clouds in spring's delightful weather,

Thronging in the blue air!

Ione. And see! more come. Like fountain-vapors when the winds are dumb,

That climb up the ravine in scattered

And, hark! is it the music of the pines? Is it the lake? Is it the waterfall?

Panthea. 'Tis something sadder sweeter far than all.

Chorus of Spirits

From unremembered ages we Gentle guides and guardians be Of heaven-oppressed mortality: And we breathe, and sicken not, The atmosphere of human thought. Be it dim, and dank, and gray, Like a storm-extinguished day,

Travelled o'er by dying gleams;
Be it bright as all between
Cloudless skies and windless streams,
Silent, liquid, and serene;
As the birds within the wind,
As the fish within the wave,
As the thoughts of man's own mind
Float thro' all above the grave;
We make there our liquid lair,
Voyaging cloudlike and unpent
Thro' the boundless element:
Thence we bear the prophecy
Which begins and ends in thee!

Ione. More yet come, one by one:
the air around them
Looks radiant as the air around a star.

First Spirit

On a battle-trumpet's blast I fled hither, fast, fast, fast, fast, 'Mid the darkness upward cast. From the dust of creeds outworn, From the tyrant's banner torn, Gathering 'round me, onward borne, There was mingled many a cry—Freedom! Hope! Death! Victory! Till they faded thro' the sky; And one sound, above, around, One sound beneath, around, above, Was moving; 'twas the soul of love; 'Twas the hope, the prophecy, Which begins and ends in thee.

Second Spirit

A rainbow's arch stood on the sea, Which rocked beneath, immovably; And the triumphant storm did flee, Like a conqueror, swift and proud, Between, with many a captive cloud, A shapeless, dark and rapid crowd, Each by lightning riven in half: I heard the thunder hoarsely laugh: Mighty fleets were strewn like chaff And spread beneath a hell of death O'er the white waters. I alit On a great ship lightning-split, And speeded hither on the sigh Of one who gave an enemy His plank, then plunged aside to die.

Third Spirit

I sate beside a sage's bed, And the lamp was burning red Near the book where he had fed, When a Dream with plumes of flame, To his pillow hovering came, And I knew it was the same Which had kindled long ago
Pity, eloquence, and woe;
And the world awhile below
Wore the shade its lustre made.
It has borne me here as fleet
As Desire's lightning feet;
I must ride it back ere morrow,
Or the sage will wake in sorrow.

Fourth Spirit

On a poet's lips I slept
Dreaming like a love-adept
In the sound his breathing kept;
Nor seeks nor finds he mortal blisses,
But feeds on the aërial kisses
Of shapes that haunt thought's wilder nesses.

He will watch from dawn to gloom
The lake-reflected sun illume
The yellow bees in the ivy-bloom,
Nor heed nor see, what things they be;
But from these create he can
Forms more real than living man,
Nurslings of immortality!
One of these awakened me,
And I sped to succor thee.

Ione

Behold'st thou not two shapes from the east and west

Come, as two doves to one belovéd nest, Twin nurslings of the all-sustaining air On swift still wings glide down the atmosphere?

And, hark! their sweet, sad voices! 'tis despair

Mingled with love and then dissolved in sound.

Panthea. Canst thou speak, sister? all my words are drowned.

Ione. Their beauty gives me voice.

See how they float

On their sustaining wings of skiey grain, Orange and azure deepening into gold: Their soft smiles light the air like a star's fire.

Chorus of Spirits

Hast thou beheld the form of love?

$Fifth\ Spirit$

As over wide dominions
I sped, like some swift cloud that wings
the wide air's wildernesses,
That planet-crested shape swept by on lightning-braided pinions, Scattering the liquid joy of life from his ambrosial tresses:

His footsteps paved the world with light: but as I past 'twas fading,

And hollow Ruin vawned behind; great sages bound in madness,

And headless patriots, and pale youths who perished, unupbraiding, Gleamed in the night. I wandered o'er, till thou, O King of sadness, Turned by thy smile the worst I saw to recollected gladness.

Sixth Spirit

Ah, sister! Desolation is a delicate thing: It walks not on the earth, it floats not on the air.

But treads with killing footstep, and fans with silent wing

The tender hopes which in their hearts the best and gentlest bear;
Who, soothed to false repose by the

fanning plumes above

And the music-stirring motion of its soft and busy feet,

Dream visions of aërial joy, and call the monster, Love,

And wake, and find the shadow Pain. as he whom now we greet.

Chorus

Tho' Ruin now Love's shadow be. Following him, destroyingly, On Death's white and winged steed

Which the fleetest cannot flee. Trampling down both flower and weed, Man and beast, and foul and fair, Like a tempest thro' the air; Thou shalt quell this horseman grim, Woundless though in heart or limb. Prometheus. Spirits! how know ye this shall be?

Chorus

In the atmosphere we breathe. As buds grow red when the snow-storms

From spring gathering up beneath, Whose mild winds shake the elder brake. And the wandering herdsmen know That the white-thorn soon will blow: Wisdom, Justice, Love, and Peace, When they struggle to increase,

Are to us as soft winds be To shepherd boys, the prophecy Which begins and ends in thee.

Ione. Where are the Spirits fled? Panthea. Only a sense Remains of them, like the omnipotence Of music, when the inspired voice and lute

Languish, ere vet the résponses are mute. Which thro' the deep and labyrinthine soul.

Like echoes thro' long caverns, wind and roll.

Prometheus. How fair these airborn shapes! and yet I feel

Most vain all hope but love; and thou art far,

Asia! who, when my being overflowed. Wert like a golden chalice to bright wine Which else had sunk into the thirsty

All things are still: alas! how heavily This quiet morning weighs upon my heart:

Tho' I should dream I could even sleep with grief

If slumber were denied not. I would fain Be what it is my destiny to be,

The savior and the strength of suffering man,

Or sink into the original gulf of things: There is no agony, and no solace left; Earth can console, Heaven can torment no more. Panthea. Hast thou forgotten one who watches thee The cold dark night, and never sleeps but when

The shadow of thy spirit falls on her? Prometheus. I said all hope was vain but love: thou lovest.

Panthea. Deeply in truth; but the eastern star looks white,

And Asia waits in that far Indian vale The scene of her sad exile; rugged once And desolate and frozen, like this ravine: But now invested with fair flowers and herbs.

And haunted by sweet airs and sounds, which flow

Among the woods and waters, from the ether

Of her transforming presence, which would fade

If it were mingled not with thine. Farewell!

ACT II

SCENE I.—MORNING. A LOVELY VALE IN THE INDIAN CAUCASUS. ASIA alone.

Asia. From all the blasts of heaven thou hast descended: Yes, like a spirit, like a thought, which makes

Unwonted tears throng to the horny 61.62°

And beatings haunt the desolated heart. Which should have learnt repose: thou hast descended

Cradled in tempests; thou dost wake, O

Spring!

O child of many winds! As suddenly Thou comest as the memory of a dream. Which now is sad because it hath been sweet:

Like genius, or like joy which riseth up As from the earth, clothing with golden clouds

The desert of our life.

This is the season, this the day, the hour; At sunrise thou shouldst come, sweet sister mine.

Too long desired, too long delaying, come!

How like death-worms the wingless moments crawl!

The point of one white star is quivering

Deep in the orange light of widening morn

Beyond the purple mountains: thro'a chasm

Of wind-divided mist the darker lake Reflects it: now it wanes: it gleams

As the waves fade, and as the burning threads

Of woven cloud unravel in pale air:

'Tis lost! and thro' you peaks of cloudlike snow

The roseate sunlight quivers: hear I not The Æolian music of her sea-green plumes

Winnowing the crimson dawn?

[PANTHEA enters. I feel, I see

Those eyes which burn thro' smiles that fade in tears,

Like stars half quenched in mists of silver

Belovèd and most beautiful, who wearest The shadow of that soul by which I live, How late thou art! the sphered sun had climbed

The sea: my heart was sick with hope, before

The printless air felt thy belated plumes. Panthea. Pardon, great Sister! but my wings were faint

With the delight of a remembered dream.

As are the noontide plumes of summer winds

Satiate with sweet flowers. I was wont to sleep

Peacefully, and awake refreshed and calm

Before the sacred Titan's fall, and thy Unhappy love, had made, thro' use and

Both love and woe familiar to my heart As they had grown to thine: erewhile I

Under the glaucous caverns of old Ocean Within dim bowers of green and purple

Our young Ione's soft and milky arms Locked then, as now, behind my dark, moist hair, While my shut eyes and cheek were pressed within

The folded depth of her life-breathing bosom:

But not as now, since I am made the wind

Which fails beneath the music that I bear

Of thy most wordless converse; since dissolved Into the sense with which love talks, my

Was troubled and yet sweet; my waking hours

Too full of care and pain.

Lift up thine eyes, And let me read thy dream.

As I have said Panthea. With our sea-sister at his feet I slept.

The mountain mists, condensing at our voice

Under the moon, had spread their snowy flakes.

From the keen ice shielding our linked sleep. Then two dreams came. One, I remember not. But in the other his pale wound-worn limbs

Fell from Prometheus, and the azure night

Grew radiant with the glory of that form Which lives unchanged within and his voice fell

Like music which makes giddy the dim brain.

Faint with intoxication of keen joy: "Sister of her whose footsteps pave the world

With loveliness—more fair than aught but her.

Whose shadow thou art—lift thine eyes on me."

I lifted them: the overpowering light Of that immortal shape was shadowed o'er

By love; which, from his soft and flowing limbs,

And passion-parted lips, and keen, faint

Steamed forth like vaporous fire; an atmosphere

Which wrapt me in its all-dissolving power,

As the warm ether of the morning sun Wraps ere it drinks some cloud of wandering dew.

dering dew.

I saw not, heard not, moved not, only felt His presence flow and mingle thro' my blood

Till it became his life, and his grew mine,

And I was thus absorbed, until it passed, And like the vapors when the sun sinks down,

Gathering again in drops upon the pines,

And tremulous as they, in the deep night

My being was condensed; and as the rays

Of thought were slowly gathered, I could hear

His voice, whose accents lingered ere they died

Like footsteps of weak melody: thy

Among the many sounds alone I heard Of what might be articulate; tho' still I listened thro' the night when sound was none.

Ione wakened then, and said to me:
"Canst thou divine what troubles me
to-night?

I always knew what I desired before, Nor ever found delight to wish in vain. But now I cannot tell thee what I seek: I know not; something sweet, since it is sweet

Even to desire; it is thy sport, false sister:

Thou hast discovered some enchantment old,

Whose spells have stolen my spirit as I slept

And mingled it with thine: for when just now

We kissed, I felt within thy parted lips
The sweet air that sustained me, and the warmth

Of the life-blood, for loss of which I faint.

Quivered between our intertwining arms."

I answered not, for the Eastern star grew pale,

But fled to thee.

Asia. Thou speakest, but thy words Are as the air: I feel them not: Oh, lift Thine eyes, that I may read his written soul!

Panthea. I lift them tho' they droop beneath the load

Of that they would express: what canst thou see

But thine own fairest shadow imaged there?

Asia. Thine eyes are like the deep, blue, boundless heaven

Contracted to two circles underneath Their long, fine lashes; dark, far, measureless, Orb within orb, and line thro' line in-

Panthea. Why lookest thou as if a spirit past?

Asia. There is a change: beyond their inmost depth

I see a shade, a shape: 'tis He, arrayed In the soft light of his own smiles, which spread

Like radiance from the cloud-surrounded moon.

Prometheus, it is thine! depart not yet!
Say not those smiles that we shall meet
again

Within that bright pavilion which their beams

Shall build on the waste world? The dream is told.

What shape is that between us? Its rude hair
Roughens the wind that lifts it its

Roughens the wind that lifts it, its regard

Is wild and quick, yet 'tis a thing of air, For thro' its gray robe gleams the golden dew

Whose stars the noon has quenched not Dream. Follow! Follow! Follow! Panthea. It is mine other dream.

Asia. It disappears.
Panthea. It passes now into my mind. Methought

As we sate here, the flower-infolding

Burst on you lightning-blasted almond-tree,

When swift from the white Scythian wilderness

A wind swept forth wrinkling the Earth with frost: I looked, and all the blossoms were blown down:

But on each leaf was stamped, as the blue bells

Of Hyacinth tell Apollo's written grief,

O, FOLLOW!

Asia. As you speak, your words Fill, pause by pause, my own forgotten

With shapes. Methought among the lawns together

Tawns together

We wandered, underneath the young gray dawn,

And multitudes of dense white fleecy clouds

Were wandering in thick flocks along the mountains

Shepherded by the slow, unwilling wind;

And the white dew on the new bladed grass,

Just piercing the dark earth, hung silently:

And there was more which I remember not:

But on the shadows of the morning clouds,

Athwart the purple mountain slope, was written

Follow, O, Follow! as they vanished by.

And on each herb, from which Heaven's dew had fallen,

The like was stamped, as with a withering fire.

A wind arose among the pines; it shook The clinging music from their boughs, and then

Low, sweet, faint sounds, like the farewell of ghosts,

Were heard: O, FOLLOW, FOLLOW, FOLLOW ME!

And then I said: "Panthea, look on me." But in the depth of those beloved eyes Still I saw, Follow, Follow!

Echo. Follow, follow! Panthea. The crags, this clear spring morning, mock our voices

As they were spirit-tongued.

Asia. It is some being Around the crags. What fine clear

Echoes (unseen)

sounds! O, list!

Echoes we: listen!
We cannot stay:
As dew-stars glisten
Then fade away—
Child of Ocean!

Asia. Hark! Spirits speak. The liquid résponses

Of their aërial tongues yet sound.

Panthea. I hear.

Echoes

O, follow, follow,
As our voice recedeth
Thro' the caverns hollow,
Where the forest spreadeth;

(More distant)

O, follow, follow!
Thro' the caverns hollow,
As the song floats thou pursue,
Where the wild bee never flew,
Thro' the noontide darkness deep,
By the odor-breathing sleep
Of faint night-flowers, and the waves
At the fountain-lighted caves,
While our music, wild and sweet,
Mocks thy gently falling feet,
Child of Ocean!

Asia. Shall we pursue the sound? It grows more faint

And distant.

Panthea. List! the strain floats nearer now.

Echoes

In the world unknown
Sleeps a voice unspoken;
By thy step alone
Can its rest be broken;
Child of Ocean!
Asia. How the notes sink upon the ebbing wind!

Echoes

O, follow, follow!
Thro' the caverns hollow,
As the song floats thou pursue,
By the woodland noontide dew;
By the forests, lakes, and fountains
Thro' the many-folded mountains;
To the rents, and gulfs, and chasms,
Where the Earth reposed from spasms,
On the day when He and thou
Parted, to commingle now;
Child of Ocean!

Asia. Come, sweet Panthea, link thy hand in mine,
And follow, ere the voices fade away.

COUNTY IT A FEDERAL STREET

SCENE II.—A FOREST, INTERMINGLED WITH ROCKS AND CAVERNS.

ASIA and PANTHEA pass into it. Two young Fauns are sitting on a Rock listening.

Semichorus I of Spirits

The path thro' which that lovely twain Have past, by cedar, pine, and yew, And each dark tree that ever grew, Is curtained out from Heaven's wide blue:

Nor sun, nor moon, nor wind, nor rain, Can pierce its interwoven bowers. Nor aught, save where some cloud of dew.

Drifted along the earth-creeping breeze, Between the trunks of the hoar trees,

Hangs each a pearl in the pale flowers

Of the green laurel, blown anew; And bends, and then fades silently, One frail and fair anemone: Or when some star of many a one That climbs and wanders thro' steep night,

Has found the cleft thro' which alone Beams fall from high those depths upon Ere it is borne away, away,

By the swift Heavens that cannot stay, It scatters drops of golden light, Like lines of rain that ne'er unite: And the gloom divine is all around.

And underneath is the mossy ground.

Semichorus II

There the voluptuous nightingales, Are awake thro' all the broad noonday.

When one with bliss or sadness fails, And thro' the windless ivy-boughs, Sick with sweet love, droops dying away

On its mate's music-panting bosom; Another from the swinging blossom, Watching to catch the languid close Of the last strain, then lifts on high

The wings of the weak melody, Till some new strain of feeling bear The song, and all the woods are mute; When there is heard thro' the dim air

The rush of wings, and rising there Like many a lake-surrounded flute, Sounds overflow the listener's brain So sweet, that joy is almost pain.

Semichorus I

There those enchanted eddies play echoes, music-tongued, which draw.

By Demogorgon's mighty law, With melting rapture, or sweet awe, All spirits on that secret way;

As inland boats are driven to Ocean

Down streams made strong with mountain-thaw:

And first there comes a gentle sound To those in talk or slumber bound

And wakes the destined. Soft emotion Attracts, impels them: those who saw Say from the breathing earth behind There steams a plume-uplifting wind Which drives them on their path, while

Believe their own swift wings and feet

The sweet desires within obey:

And so they float upon their way, Until, still sweet, but loud and strong, The storm of sound is driven along,

Sucked up and hurrying: as they fleet

Behind, its gathering billows meet And to the fatal mountain bear Like clouds amid the yielding air.

Canst thou imagine First Faun. where those spirits live

Which make such delicate music in the woods?

We haunt within the least frequented caves

And closest coverts, and we know these

Yet never meet them, tho' we hear them oft:

Where may they hide themselves? 'Tis hard to tell: Second Faun.

I have heard those more skilled in spirits sav.

The bubbles, which the enchantment of the sun

Sucks from the pale faint water-flowers that pave
The oozy bottom of clear lakes and pools,

Are the pavilions where such dwell and

Under the green and golden atmosphere Which noontide kindles thro' the woven leaves:

And when these burst, and the thin fiery

The which they breathed within those lucent domes.

Ascends to flow like meteors thro' the night.

They ride on them, and rein their headlong speed,

And bow their burning crests, and glide

Under the waters of the earth again. First Faun. If such live thus, have others other lives, Under pink blossoms or within the bells Of meadow flowers, or folded violets

Or on their dying odors, when they

Or in the sunlight of the sphered dew? Second Faun. Ay, many more which we may well divine.

But, should we stay to speak, noontide would come.

And thwart Silenus find his goats undrawn,

And grudge to sing those wise and lovely songs

Of fate, and chance, and God, and Chaos old,

And Love, and the chained Titan's woeful doom,

And how he shall be loosed, and make the earth

brotherhood: delightful strains which cheer

Our solitary twilights, and which charm To silence the unenvying nightingales.

SCENE III .- A PINNACLE OF ROCK AMONG MOUNTAINS. ASIA and PAN-THEA.

Panthea. Hither the sound has borne us-to the realm

Of Demogorgon, and the mighty portal, Like a volcano's meteor-breathing chasm, Whence the oracular vapor is hurled up Which lonely men drink wandering in their youth.

And call truth, virtue, love, genius, or

That maddening wine of life, whose dregs they drain

To deep intoxication; and uplift, Like Mænads who cry loud, Evoe! Evoe! The voice which is contagion to the world.

Asia. Fit throne for such a power! Magnificent!

How glorious art thou, Earth! And if thou be

The shadow of some spirit lovelier still, Though evil stain its work, and it should

Like its creation, weak yet beautiful. I could fall down and worship that and thee.

Even now my heart adoreth: Wonderful !

Look, sister, ere the vapor dim thy brain:

Beneath is a wide plain of billowy mist, As a lake, paving in the morning sky,

With azure waves which burst in silver light.

Some Indian vale. Behold it, rolling on Under the curdling winds, and islanding The peak whereon we stand, midway, around.

Encinctured by the dark and blooming forests.

Dim twilight-lawns, and stream-illumined caves.

And wind-enchanted shapes of wandering mist:

And far on high the keen sky-cleaving mountains

From icy spires of sun-like radiance fling The dawn, as lifted Ocean's dazzling spray,

From some Atlantic islet scattered up. Spangles the wind with lamp-like waterdrops.

The vale is girdled with their walls, a howl

Of cataracts from their thaw-cloven ravines.

Satiates the listening wind, continuous, vast, Awful as silence. Hark! the rushing snow! The sun-awakened avalanche! whose

Thrice sifted by the storm, had gathered

there Flake after flake, in heaven-defying minds As thought by thought is piled, till some great truth Is loosened, and the nations echo round, Shaken to their roots, as do the mountains

now. Panthea. Look how the gusty sea of mist is breaking

In crimson foam, even at our feet! it

As Ocean at the enchantment of the moon

Round foodless men wrecked on some oozy isle.

Asia. The fragments of the cloud are scattered up;

The wind that lifts them disentwines

my hair; Its billows now sweep o'er mine eyes; my brain

Grows dizzy; I see thin shapes within the mist.

Panthea. A countenance with beckoning smiles: there burns

An azure fire within its golden locks! Another and another: hark! they speak! Song of Spirits

To the deep, to the deep,
Down, down!
Through the shade of sleep,
Through the cloudy strife
Of Death and of Life;
Through the veil and the bar
Of things which seem and are
Even to the steps of the remotest throne,
Down, down!

While the sound whirls around,
Down, down!
As the fawn draws the hound,
As the lightning the vapor,
As the weak moth the taper;
Death, despair; love, sorrow;
Time both; to-day, to-morrow;
As steel obeys the spirit of the stone,
Down, down!

Through the gray, void abysm,
Down, down!

Where the air is no prism,
And the moon and stars are not,
And the cavern-crags wear not
The radiance of Heaven,
Nor the gloom to Earth given,
Where there is one pervading, one alone,
Down, down!

In the depth of the deep,
Down, down!
Like veiled lightning asleep,
Like the spark nursed in embers,
The last look Love remembers,
Like a diamond, which shines
On the dark wealth of mines,
A spell is treasured but for thee alone,
Down, down!

We have bound thee, we guide thee;
Down, down!
With the bright form beside thee;
Resist not the weakness,
Such strength is in meekness
That the Eternal, the Immortal,
Must unloose through life's portal
The snake-like Doom coiled underneath his throne
By that alone.

SCENE IV.—THE CAVE OF

DEMOGORGON. ASIA and PANTHEA.

Panthea. What veiled form sits on that ebon throne?

Asia. The veil has fallen.

Panthea. I see a mighty darkness

Filling the seat of power, and rays of gloom

Dart round, as light from the meridian sun,

Ungazed upon and shapeless; neither limb,

Nor form, nor outline; yet we feel it is A living Spirit.

Demogorgon. Ask what thou wouldst know.

Asia. What canst thou tell?

Demogorgon. All things thou dar'st demand.

Asia. Who made the living world? Demogorgon. God.

Asia. Who made all That it contains? thought, passion, reason, will, Imagination?

Demogorgon. God: Almighty God. Asia. Who made that sense which, when the winds of spring

In rarest visitation, or the voice
Of one beloved heard in youth alone,
Fills the faint eyes with falling tears which dim

The radiant looks of unbewailing flowers, And leaves this peopled earth a solitude When it returns no more?

Demogorgon. Merciful God.
Asia. And who made terror, madness,
crime, remorse,

Which from the links of the great chain of things,

To every thought within the mind of man

Sway and drag heavily, and each one reels

Under the load towards the pit of death;

Abandoned hope, and love that turns to hate;

And self-contempt, bitterer to drink

than blood;
Pain, whose unheeded and familiar

speech
Is howling, and keen shrieks, day after
day:

And Hell, or the sharp fear of Hell?

Demogorgon.

He reigns.

Asia. Utter his name: a world pining

Aska Utter his name: a world pining in pain Asks but his name: curses shall drag

Asks but his name; curses shall drag him down.

Demogorgon. He reigns.
Asia. I feel, I know it: who?
Demogorgon. He reigns.
Asia. Who reigns? There was the

Heaven and Earth at first,

And Light and Love: then Saturn, from whose throne

Time fell, an envious shadow: such the state Of the earth's primal spirits beneath his

sway,

As the calm joy of flowers and living leaves

Before the wind or sun has withered

And semivital worms; but he refused The birthright of their being, knowledge, power.

The skill which wields the elements.

the thought Which pierces this dim universe like light.

Self-empire, and the majesty of love : For thirst of which they fainted. Then Prometheus

Gave wisdom, which is strength, to Jupiter,

And with this law alone, "Let man be free."

Clothed him with the dominion of wide Heaven,

To know nor faith, nor love, nor law: to Omnipotent but friendless, is to reign: And Jove now reigned; for on the race of man

First famine, and then toil, and then disease,

Strife, wounds, and ghastly death unseen before,

Fell: and the unseasonable seasons drove

With alternating shafts of frost and fire. Their shelterless, pale tribes to mountain caves:

And in their desert hearts fierce wants he sent.

And mad disquietudes, and shadows idle Of unreal good, which levied mutual

So ruining the lair wherein they raged. Prometheus saw, and waked the legioned hopes

Which sleep within folded Elysian flowers.

Nepenthe, Moly, Amaranth, fadeless blooms,

That they might hide with thin and rainbow wings

The shape of Death; and Love he sent to bind

The disunited tendrils of that vine Which bears the wine of life, the human heart:

And he tamed fire which, like some beast of prey, Most terrible, but lovely, played beneath

The frown of man; and tortured to his

Iron and gold, the slaves and signs of power.

And gems and poisons, and all subtlest forms

Hidden beneath the mountains and the waves.

He gave man speech, and speech created thought.

Which is the measure of the universe: And Science struck the thrones of earth and heaven,

Which shook, but fell not; and the harmonious mind

Poured itself forth in all-prophetic song; And music lifted up the listening spirit Until it walked, exempt from mortal care,

Godlike, o'er the clear billows of sweet sound; And human hands first mimicked and then mocked, With moulded limbs more lovely than its own, The human form, till marble grew divine: And mothers, gazing, drank the love

men see Reflected in their race, behold, and perish.

He told the hidden power of herbs and springs, And Disease drank and slept. Death grew like sleep.

He taught the implicated orbits woven Of the wide-wandering stars; and how the sun

Changes his lair, and by what secret spell

The pale moon is transformed, when her broad eve

Gazes not on the interlunar sea:

He taught to rule, as life directs the limbs.

The tempest-wingéd chariots of the Ocean,

And the Celt knew the Indian. Cities then

Were built, and through their snow-like columns flowed

The warm winds, and the azure aether

And the blue sea and shadowy hills were seen.

Such, the alleviations of his state,

Prometheus gave to man, for which he hangs

Withering in destined pain: but who rains down

Evil, the immedicable plague, which,

Man looks on his creation like a God And sees that it is glorious, drives him on

The wreck of his own will, the scorn of earth.

The outcast, the abandoned, the alone? Not Jove: while yet his frown shook heaven, ay when

His adversary from adamantine chains Cursed him, he trembled like a slave. Declare

Who is his master? Is he too a slave?

Demogorgon. All spirits are enslaved which serve things evil:

Thou knowest if Jupiter be such or no. Asia. Whom called st thou God? Demogorgon. I spoke but as ye speak.

For Jove is the supreme of living things.

Asia. Who is the master of the slave?

Demogorgon. If the abysm

Could vomit forth its secrets. . . But a

Is wanting, the deep truth is imageless; For what would it avail to bid thee gaze On the revolving world? What to bid speak

Fate, Time, Occasion, Chance, and Change? To these

All things are subject but eternal Love.

Asia. So much I asked before, and my heart gave

The response thou hast given; and of such truths

Each to itself must be the oracle.

One more demand; and do thou answer me

As mine own soul would answer, did it

That which I ask. Prometheus shall

That which I ask. Prometheus shall arise

Henceforth the sun of this rejoicing world:

When shall the destined hour arrive?

Demogorgon.

Behold!

Asia. The rocks are cloven, and through the purple night

I see cars drawn by rainbow-wingéd steeds

Which trample the dim winds: in each there stands

A wild-eyed charioteer urging their flight.

Some look behind, as fiends pursued them there.

And yet I see no shapes but the keen stars:

Others, with burning eyes, lean forth, and drink

With eager lips the wind of their own speed.

As if the thing they loved fled on before, And now, even now, they clasped it. Their bright locks

Stream like a comet's flashing hair: they all

Sweep onward.

Demogorgon. These are the immortal Hours,

Of whom thou didst demand. One waits for thee.

Asia. A spirit with a dreadful countenance

Checks its dark chariot by the craggy gulf.

Unlike thy brethren, ghastly charioteer, Who art thou? Whither wouldst thou bear me? Speak!

Spirit. I am the shadow of a destiny More dread than is my aspect: ere you planet

Has set, the darkness which ascends with me

Shall wrap in lasting night heaven's kingless throne.

Asia. What meanest thou?

Panthea. That terrible shadow floats

Up from its throne, as may the lurid

Of earthquake-ruined cities o'er the sea. Lo! it ascends the car; the coursers fly Terrified: watch its path among the stars

Blackening the night!

Asia. Thus I am answered; strange!

Panthea. See, near the verge, another chariot stays;

An ivory shell inlaid with crimson fire, Which comes and goes within its sculptured rim

Of delicate strange tracery; the young spirit

That guides it has the dove-like eyes of hope; How its soft smiles attract the soul! as light Lures wingéd insects through the lamp-less air.

My coursers are fed with the lightning,

They drink of the whirlwind's stream, And when the red morning is brightning They bathe in the fresh sunbeam;

They have strength for their swiftness

I deem.

Then ascend with me, daughter of Ocean.

I desire; and their speed makes night kindle;

I fear: they outstrip the Typhoon; Ere the cloud piled on Atlas can dwindle

We encircle the earth and the moon: We shall rest from long labors at noon: Then ascend with me, daughter of Ocean.

SCENE V.—THE CAR PAUSES WITHIN A CLOUD ON THE TOP OF A SNOWY MOUNTAIN. ASIA, PANTHEA, and the SPIRIT OF THE HOUR.

Spirit

On the brink of the night and the morning

My coursers are wont to respire;

But the Earth has just whispered a warning

That their flight must be swifter than fire:

They shall drink the hot speed of desire!

Asia. Thou breathest on their nostrils, but my breath

Would give them swifter speed.

Spirit. Alas! it could not.

Panthea. Oh Spirit! pause, and tell whence is the light

Which fills the cloud? the sun is yet unrisen.

Spirit. The sun will rise not until noon. Apollo

Is held in heaven by wonder; and the light

Which fills this vapor, as the aërial hue Of fountain-gazing roses fills the water, Flows from thy mighty sister.

Panthea. Yes, I feel—Asia. What is it with thee, sister?
Thou art pale.

Panthea. How thou art changed! I dare not look on thee;

I feel but see thee not. I scarce endure
The radiance of thy beauty. Some good change

Is working in the elements, which suffer Thy presence thus unveiled. The Nereids tell

That on the day when the clear hyaline Was cloven at thy uprise, and thou didst stand

Within a veined shell, which floated on Over the calm floor of the crystal sea, Among the Ægean isles, and by the shores

Which bear thy name; love, like the atmosphere

Of the sun's fire filling the living world, Burst from thee, and illumined earth and heaven

And the deep ocean and the sunless caves

And all that dwells within them; till grief cast

Eclipse upon the soul from which it came:

Such art thou now; nor is it I alone,
Thy sister, thy companion, thine own chosen one.

But the whole world which seeks thy sympathy.

Hearest thou not sounds i' the air which speak the love

Of all articulate beings? Feelest thou not

The inanimate winds enamored of thee?

List! (Music.)

Asia. Thy words are sweeter than aught else but his Whose echoes they are: yet all love is sweet, Given or returned. Common as light is love,

And its familiar voice wearies not ever.
Like the wide heaven, the all-sustaining
air.

It makes the reptile equal to the God: They who inspire it most are fortunate, As I am now; but those who feel it most Are happier still, after long sufferings, As I shall soon become.

Panthea. List! Spirits speak.

Voice in the Air Singing

Life of Life! thy lips enkindle
With their love the breath between them;

And thy smiles before they dwindle
Make the cold air fire; then screen

In those looks, where whose gazes Faints, entangled in their mazes.

Child of Light! thy limbs are burning Thro' the vest which seems to hide
them:

As the radiant lines of morning Thro' the clouds ere they divide them; And this atmosphere divinest Shrouds thee wheresoe'er thou shinest. Fair are others; none beholds thee, But thy voice sounds low and tender Like the fairest, for it folds thee From the sight, that liquid splendor, And all feel, yet see thee never,

As I feel now, lost for ever!

Lamp of Earth! where'er thou movest Its dim shapes are clad with bright-

And the souls of whom thou lovest Walk upon the winds with lightness, Till they fail, as I am failing, Dizzy, lost, vet unbewailing!

Asia

My soul is an enchanted boat, Which, like a sleeping swan, doth

Upon the silver waves of thy sweet singing;

And thine doth like an angel sit Beside a helm conducting it, Whilst all the winds with melody are ringing. It seems to float ever, for ever, Upon that many-winding river, Between mountains, woods, abysses, A paradise of wildernesses!

Till, like one in slumber bound, Borne to the ocean, I float down, around.

Into a sea profound, of ever-spreading sound:

Meanwhile thy spirit lifts its pinions In music's most serene dominions; Catching the winds that fan that happy heaven.

And we sail on, away, afar,

Without a course, without a star, But, by the instinct of sweet music driven:

Till through Elysian garden islets By thee, most beautiful of pilots, Where never mortal pinnace glided, The boat of my desire is guided:

Realms where the air we breathe is love,

Which in the winds and on the waves doth move,

Harmonizing this earth with what we feel above.

We have pass'd Age's icy caves, And Manhood's dark and tossing waves,

And Youth's smooth ocean, smiling to betray:

Beyond the glassy gulfs we flee Of shadow-peopled Infancy,

Through Death and Birth, to a diviner

A paradise of vaulted bowers. Lit by downward-gazing flowers,

And watery paths that wind between Wildernesses calm and green,

Peopled by shapes too bright to see, And rest, having beheld; somewhat like thee:

Which walk upon the sea, and chant melodiously!

ACT III

SCENE I.—HEAVEN. JUPITER his Throne; THETIS and the other Deities assembled.

Jupiter. Ye congregated powers of heaven, who share

The glory and the strength of him ye serve.

Rejoice! henceforth I am omnipotent. All else had been subdued to me; alone The soul of man, like unextinguished fire, Yet burns towards heaven with fierce reproach, and doubt,

And lamentation, and reluctant prayer, Hurling up insurrection, which might make

Our antique empire insecure, though

On eldest faith, and hell's coeval, fear; And the my curses thre the pendulous air,

Like snow on herbless peaks, fall flake by flake,

And cling to it; tho' under my wrath's night

It climbs the crags of life, step after step, Which wound it, as ice wounds unsandalled feet,

It yet remains supreme o'er misery, Aspiring, unrepressed, yet soon to fall: Even now have I begotten a strange wonder,

That fatal child, the terror of the earth, Who waits but till the destined hour arrive,

Bearing from Demogorgon's vacant throne

The dreadful might of ever-living limbs Which clothed that awful spirit unbeheld,

To redescend, and trample out the spark.

Pour forth heaven's wine, Idean Gany. mede.

And let it fill the Dædal cups like fire, And from the flower-inwoven soil divine Ye all-triumphant harmonies arise. As dew from earth under the twilight stars:

Drink! be the nectar circling thro' your veins

The soul of joy, ye ever-living Gods, Till exultation burst in one wide voice Like music from Elysian winds.

And thou Ascend beside me, veiléd in the light Of the desire which makes thee one with Thetis, bright image of eternity! When thou didst cry, "Insufferable night!

God! Spare me! I sustain not the quick flames.

The penetrating presence; all my being, Like him whom the Numidian seps did thaw

Into a dew with poison, is dissolved. Sinking thro' its foundations: "even then Two mighty spirits, mingling, made a third

Mightier than either, which, unbodied now,

Between us floats, felt, although unbe-held. Waiting the incarnation, which ascends, (Hear ye the thunder of the fiery wheels Griding the winds?) from Demogorgon's throne.

Victory! victory! Feel'st thou not, O world.

The earthquake of his chariot thundering up Olympus?

[The Car of the Hour arrives. DEMOGORGON descends, and moves towards the Throne of JUPITER. Awful shape, what art thou?

Speak!

Eternity. Demand no Demogorgon. direr name.

Descend, and follow me down the abyss. I am thy child, as thou wert Saturn's

Mightier than thee: and we must dwell together

Henceforth in darkness. Lift thy lightnings not.

The tyranny of heaven none may retain, Or reassume, or hold, succeeding thee: Yet if thou wilt, as 'tis the destiny Of trodden worms to writhe till they are dead.

Put forth thy might.

Jupiter. Detested prodigy! Even thus beneath the deep Titanian prisons

I trample thee! thou lingerest?

Mercy! mercy! No pity, no release, no respite! Oh, That thou wouldst make mine enemy my judge,

Even where he hangs, seared by my long revenge,

On Caucasus! he would not doom me

Gentle, and just, and dreadless, is he

The monarch of the world? What then art thou?

No refuge! no appeal!

Sink with me then. We too will sink on the wide waves of

Even as a vulture and a snake outspent Drop, twisted in inextricable fight, Into a shoreless sea. Let hell unlock Its mounded oceans of tempestuous fire, And whelm on them into the bottomless void

This desolated world, and thee, and me, The conqueror and the conquered, and the wreck

Of that for which they combated.

Ai! Ai!

The elements obey me not. I sink Dizzily down, ever, for ever, down, And, like a cloud, mine enemy above Darkens my fall with victory! Ai, Ai!

SCENE II .-- THE MOUTH OF A GREAT RIVER IN THE ISLAND ATLANTIS. OCEAN is discovered reclining near the Shore; Apollo stands beside him.

Ocean. He fell, thou sayest, beneath his conqueror's frown?

Apollo. Aye, when the strife was ended which made dim

The orb I rule, and shook the solid stars, The terrors of his eye illumined heaven With sanguine light, through the thick ragged skirts

Of the victorious darkness, as he fell: Like the last glare of day's red agony, Which, from a rent among the fiery clouds.

Burns far along the tempest-wrinkled deep.

Ocean. He sunk to the abyss? To the dark void?

Apollo. An eagle so caught in some bursting cloud

On Caucasus, his thunder-baffled wings Entangled in the whirlwind, and his eyes

Which gazed on the undazzling sun, now blinded

By the white lightning, while the ponderous hail

Beats on his struggling form, which sinks at length

Prone, and the aërial ice clings over it.

Ocean. Henceforth the fields of Heaven-reflecting sea

Which are my realm, will heave, unstained with blood,

Beneath the uplifting winds, like plains of corn

Swayed by the summer air; my streams will flow

Round many-peopled continents, and round

Fortunate isles; and from their glassy thrones

Blue Proteus and his humid nymphs shall mark

The shadow of fair ships, as mortals see
The floating bark of the light-laden moon

With that white star, its sightless pilot's crest,

Borne down the rapid sunset's ebbing sea;

Tracking their path no more by blood and groans,

And desolation, and the mingled voice Of slavery and command! but by the light

Of wave-reflected flowers, and floating odors,

And music soft, and mild, free, gentle voices,

And sweetest music, such as spirits love.

Apollo. And I shall gaze not on the deeds which make

My mind obscure with sorrow, as eclipse Darkens the sphere I guide; but list, I

The small, clear, silver lute of the young Spirit

That sits i' the morning star.

Ocean. Thou must away;
Thy steeds will pause at even, till when farewell:

The loud deep calls me home even now to feed it

With azure calm out of the emerald urns

Which stand for ever full beside my throne.

Behold the Nereids under the green sea,

Their wavering limbs borne on the windlike stream,

Their white arms lifted o'er their streaming hair

With garlands pied and starry sea-flower crowns,

Hastening to grace their mighty sister's joy. [A sound of waves is heard.]

It is the unpastured sea hungering for calm.

Peace, monster; I come now. Farewell.

Apollo. Farewell.

SCENE III.—CAUCASUS. PROMETHEUS. HERCULES, IONE, the EARTH, SPIRITS, ASIA, and PANTHEA, borne in the Car with the SPIRIT OF THE HOUR. HERCULES unbinds PROMETHEUS, who descends.

Hercules. Most glorious among spirits, thus doth strength

To wisdom, courage, and long-suffering love,

And thee, who art the form they animate,

Minister like a slave.

Prometheus. Thy gentle words
Are sweeter even than freedom long desired

And long delayed.

Asia, thou light of life, Shadow of beauty unbeheld: and ye,

Fair sister nymphs, who made long years of pain

Sweet to remember, thro' your love and care:

Henceforth we will not part. There is a cave, All overgrown with trailing odorous plants,

Which curtain out the day with leaves
and flowers,

And paved with veinéd emerald, and a fountain

Leaps in the midst with an awakening

sound.
From its curved roof the mountain's frozen tears

Like snow, or silver, or long diamond

spires, Hang downward, raining forth a doubt-

Hang downward, raining forth a doubtful light:

And there is heard the ever-moving air, Whispering without from tree to tree, and birds.

And bees; and all around are mossy seats,

And the rough walls are clothed with long soft grass;

A simple dwelling, which shall be our

Where we will sit and talk of time and change,

As the world ebbs and flows, ourselves unchanged.

What can hide man from mutability? And if ye sigh, then I will smile; and thou.

Ione, shalt chant fragments of seamusic.

Until I weep, when ye shall smile away The tears she brought, which yet were sweet to shed.

We will entangle buds and flowers and beams

Which twinkle on the fountain's brim, and make

Strange combinations out of common things,

Like human babes in their brief innocence:

And we will search, with looks and words of love.

For hidden thoughts, each lovelier than the last.

Our unexhausted spirits; and like lutes Touched by the skill of the enamored wind.

Weave harmonies divine, yet ever new, From difference sweet where discord cannot be:

And hither come, sped on the charmed winds.

Which meet from all the points of heaven, as bees

From every flower aërial Enna feeds. At their known island-homes in Himera. The echoes of the human world, which

Of the low voice of love, almost unheard,

And dove-eyed pity's murmured pain, and music.

Itself the echo of the heart, and all That tempers or improves man's life. now free:

And lovely apparitions, dim at first, Then radiant, as the mind, arising bright

From the embrace of beauty, whence the forms

Of which these are the phantoms, cast on them

The gathered rays which are reality, Shall visit us, the progeny immortal Of Painting, Sculpture, and rapt Poesy,

And arts, tho' unimagined, yet to be. The wandering voices and the shadows these

Of all that man becomes, the mediators Of that best worship love, by him and us Given and returned; swift shapes and sounds, which grow More fair and soft as man grows wise and kind. And, veil by veil, evil and error fall: Such virtue has the cave and place around. [Turning to the Spirit of the Hour,

For thee, fair Spirit, one toil remains. Ione.

Give her that curvéd shell, which Proteus old

Made Asia's nuptial boon, breathing within it

A voice to be accomplished, and which

Didst hide in grass under the hollow

Ione. Thou most desired Hour, more loved and lovely

Than all thy sisters, this is the mystic shell:

See the pale azure fading into silver Lining it with a soft yet glowing light: Looks it not like lulled music sleeping there?

Spirit. It seems in truth the fairest shell of Ocean:

Its sounds must be at once both sweet and strange.

Prometheus. Go, borne over the cities of mankind

On whirlwind-footed coursers: once again

Outspeed the sun around the orbéd world: And as thy chariot cleaves the kindling

Thou breathe into the many-folded shell, Loosening its mighty music; it shall be As thunder mingled with clear echoes: then Return; and thou shalt dwell beside our cave.

And thou, O, Mother Earth!-

The Earth. I hear, I feel:

Thy lips are on me, and thy touch runs down

Even to the adamantine central gloom Along these marble nerves; 'tis life, 'tis

And through my withered, old and icy frame

The warmth of an immortal youth shoots down

Circling. Henceforth the many children fair

Folded in my sustaining arms; all plants,

And creeping forms, and insects rainbow-winged,

And birds, and beasts, and fish, and human shapes,

Which drew disease and pain from my wan bosom.

Draining the poison of despair, shall take

And interchange sweet nutriment; to me Shall they become like sister antelopes By one fair dam, snow-white and swift as wind,

Nursed among lilies near a brimming stream.

The dew-mists of my sunless sleep shall float

Under the stars like balm: night-folded flowers

Shall suck unwithering hues in their repose:

And men and beasts in happy dreams shall gather

Strength for the coming day, and all its joy:

And death shall be the last embrace of her Who takes the life she gave, even as a mother

Folding her child, says, "Leave me not

again."

Asia. Oh, mother! wherefore speak

the name of death?
Cease they to love, and move, and breathe, and speak,

Who die?

The Earth. It would avail not to reply:

Thou art immortal, and this tongue is known

But to the uncommunicating dead.

Death is the veil which those who live call life:

They sleep, and it is lifted: and meanwhile

In mild variety the seasons mild

With rainbow-skirted showers, and odorous winds,

And long blue meteors cleansing the dull night,

And the life-kindling shafts of the keen

All-piercing bow, and the dew-mingled rain

Of the calm moonbeams, a soft influence mild.

Shall clothe the forests and the fields, ay, even

The crag-built deserts of the barren deep, With ever-living leaves, and fruits, and flowers.

And thou! There is a cavern where my spirit.

Was panted forth in anguish whilst thy pain

Made my heart mad, and those who did

inhale it

Became mad too, and built a temple there,

And spoke, and were oracular, and lured The erring nations round to mutual war, And faithless faith, such as Jove kept with thee;

Which breath now rises, as amongst tall weeds

A violet's exhalation, and it fills With a serener light and crimson air

Intense, yet soft, the rocks and woods around;

It feeds the quick growth of the serpent vine,

And the dark linked ivy tangling wild, And budding, blown, or odor-faded blooms

Which star the winds with points of colored light,

As they rain thro' them, and bright golden globes

Of fruit, suspended in their own green heaven,

And thro' their veinèd leaves and amber stems

The flowers whose purple and translucid bowls
Stand ever mantling with aërial dew,

The drink of spirits: and it circles round,

Like the soft waving wings of noonday dreams,

Inspiring calm and happy thoughts, like mine,

Now thou art thus restored. This cave is thine.

Arise! Appear!

[A Spirit rises in the likeness of a winged child.

This is my torch-bearer: Who let his lamp out in old time with gazing

On eyes from which he kindled it ane.
With love, which is as fire, sweet daughter mine,

For such is that within thine own. Run, wayward, And guide this company beyond the peak Of Baechie Nysa, Mænad-haunted mountain.

And beyond Indus and its tribute rivers. Trampling the torrent streams and glassy lakes

With feet unwet, unwearied, undelaying, And up the green ravine, across the vale. Beside the windless and crystalline pool, Where ever lies, on unerasing waves,

The image of a temple, built above. Distinct with column, arch, and architrave.

And palm-like capital, and over-wrought And populous most with living imagery, Praxitelean shapes, whose marble smiles Fill the hushed air with everlasting love. It is deserted now, but once it bore

Thy name, Prometheus; there the emulous youths

Bore to thy honor thro' the divine gloom The lamp which was thine emblem; even as those

Who bear the untransmitted torch of

hope

Into the grave, across the night of life, As thou hast borne it most triumphantly To this far goal of Time. Depart, farewell.

Beside that temple is the destined cave.

SCENE IV. A FOREST. IN THE BACK-GROUND A CAVE, PROMETHEUS, ASIA, PANTHEA, IONE, and the SPIRIT OF THE EARTH.

Ione. Sister, it is not earthly: how it glides

Under the leaves! how on its head there burns

A light, like a green star, whose emerald beams

Are twined with its fair hair! how, as it moves.

The splendor drops in flakes upon the grass!

Knowest thou it?

Panthea. It is the delicate spirit That guides the earth thro' heaven. From afar

The populous constellations call that light

The loveliest of the planets; and some-

It floats along the spray of the salt sea, Or makes its chariot of a foggy cloud, Or walks thro' fields or cities while men sleep. Or o'er the mountain tops, or down the rivers.

Or thro' the green waste wilderness, as

Wondering at all it sees. Before Jove reigned

It loved our sister Asia, and it came

Each leisure hour to drink the liquid light

Out of her eyes, for which it said it thirsted

As one bit by a dipsas, and with her It made its childish confidence, and told

All it had known or seen, for it saw much.

Yet idly reasoned what it saw: and called her-

For whence it sprung it knew not, nor do I--

Mother, dear mother.

The Spirit of the Earth (running to Asia). Mother, dearest mother;

May I then talk with thee as I was wont?

May I then hide my eyes in thy soft arms,

After thy looks have made them tired of

May I then play beside thee the long noons.

When work is none in the bright silent air?

Asia. I love thee, gentlest being, and henceforth Can cherish thee unenvied: speak, I pray: Thy simple talk once solaced, now delights. Spirit of the Earth. Mother, I am grown wiser, though a child

Cannot be wise like thee, within this day;

And happier too; happier and wiser both. Thou knowest that toads, and snakes, and loathly worms,

And venomous and malicious beasts, and boughs

That bore ill berries in the woods, were

An hindrance to my walks o'er the green world:

And that, among the haunts of humankind.

Hard-featured men, or with proud, angry looks,

Or cold, staid gait, or false and hollow smiles.

Or the dull sneer of self-loved ignorance, Or other such foul masks, with which ill thoughts

Hide that fair being whom we spirits call man;

And women too, ugliest of all things evil.

(Tho' fair, even in a world where thou art fair,
When good and kind, free and sincere like thee),

When false or frowning made me sick at heart

To pass them, tho' they slept, and I unseen.

Well, my path lately lay thro' a great city

Into the woody hills surrounding it:

A sentinel was sleeping at the gate:
When there was heard a sound, so loud
it shook

The towers amid the moonlight, yet more sweet

Than any voice but thine, sweetest of all:

A long, long sound, as it would never end:

And all the inhabitants leapt suddenly Out of their rest, and gathered in the streets,

Looking in wonder up to Heaven, while yet

The music pealed along. I hid myself Within a fountain in the public square, Where I lay like the reflex of the moon Seen in a wave under green leaves; and

Those ugly human shapes and visages
Of which I spoke as having wrought me
pain,

Passed floating thro' the air, and fading still

Into the winds that scattered them; and those

From whom they passed seemed mild and lovely forms

After some foul disguise had fallen, and all

Were somewhat changed, and after brief surprise

And greetings of delighted wonder, all Went to their sleep again; and when the dawn

Came, would'st thou think that toads, and snakes, and efts,

Could e'er be beautiful? yet so they were, And that with little change of shape or hue:

All things had put their evil nature off; I cannot tell my joy, when o'er a lake Upon a drooping bough with night-shade twined,

I saw two azure halcyons clinging downward

And thinning one bright bunch of amber berries.

With quick long beaks, and in the deep there lay

Those lovely forms imaged as in a sky:

So, with my thoughts full of these happy changes,

We meet again, the happiest change of all.

Asia. And never will we part, till thy chaste sister

Who guides the frozen and inconstant moon

Will look on thy more warm and equal light

Till her heart thaw like flakes of April snow

And love thee.

Spirit of the Earth. What; as Asia loves Prometheus?

Asia. Peace, wanton, thou art yet not old enough.

Think ye by gazing on each other's eyes To multiply your lovely selves, and fill With sphered fires the interlunar air?

Spirit of the Earth. Nay, mother, while my sister trims her lamp 'Tis hard I should go darkling.

Asia. Listen; look!

The Spirit of the Hour enters.

Prometheus. We feel what thou hast heard and seen; yet speak.

Spirit of the Hour. Soon as the sound

Spirit of the Hour. Soon as the sound had ceased whose thunder filled. The abysses of the sky and the wide earth,

There was a change: the impalpable thin air

And the all-circling sunlight were transformed,

As if the sense of love dissolved in them Had folded itself round the sphered world.

My vision then grew clear, and I could

Into the mysteries of the universe: Dizzy as with delight I floated down;

Winnowing the lightsome air with languid plumes,

My coursers sought their birthplace in the sun,

Where they henceforth will live exempt from toil

Pasturing flowers of vegetable fire; And where my moonlike car will stand

within
A temple, gazed upon by Phidian forms

Of thee, and Asia, and the Earth, and me,

And you fair nymphs looking the love we feel,—

In memory of the tidings it has borne,— Beneath a dome fretted with graven flowers,

Poised on twelve columns of resplendent stone,

And open to the bright and liquid sky. Yoked to it by an amphisbenic snake

The likeness of those winged steeds will mock

The flight from which they find repose.
Alas,

Whither has wandered now my partial tongue

When all remains untold which ye would hear?

As I have said I floated to the earth: It was, as it is still, the pain of bliss

To move, to breathe, to be; I wandering went

Among the haunts and dwellings of mankind,

And first was disappointed not to see Such mighty change as I had felt within Expressed in outward things; but soon I looked,

And behold, thrones were kingless, and men walked

One with the other even as spirits do, None fawned, none trampled; hate, disdain, or fear,

Self-love or self-contempt, on human brows.

No more inscribed, as o'er the gate of hell,

"All hope abandon ye who enter here;"
None frowned, none trembled, none with eager fear

Gazed on another's eye of cold command, Until the subject of the tyrant's will Became, worse fate, the abject of his

Which spurred him, like an outspent horse, to death.

None wrought his lips in truth-entangling lines

Which smiled the lie his tongue disdained to speak:

None, with firm sneer, trod out in his own heart

The sparks of love and hope till there remained

Those bitter ashes, a soul self-consumed, And the wretch crept a vampire among men.

Infecting all with his own hideous ill;

None talked that common, false, cold, hollow talk

Which makes the heart deny the yes it breathes,

Yet question that unmeant hypocrisy
With such a self-mistrust as has no
name.

And women, too, frank, beautiful, and kind

As the free heaven which rains fresh light and dew

On the wide earth, passed; gentle radiant forms,

From custom's evil taint exempt and pure;
Speaking the wisdom once they could

Speaking the wisdom once they could not think,

Looking emotions once they feared to feel,

And changed to all which once they dared not be,

Yet being now, made earth like heaven; nor pride,

Nor jealousy, nor envy, nor ill shame, The bitterest of those drops of treasured gall,

Spoilt the sweet taste of the nepenthe, love.

Thrones, altars, judgment-seats, and prisons, wherein,

And beside which, by wretched men were borne

Sceptres, tiaras, swords, and chains, and tomes

Of reasoned wrong, glozed on by ignorance,

Were like those monstrous and barbaric shapes,

The ghosts of a no more remembered fame,

Which, from their unworn obelisks, look forth

In triumph o'er the palaces and tombs
Of those who were their conquerors:
mouldering round

Those imaged to the pride of kings and priests,

A dark yet mighty faith, a power as wide

As is the world it wasted, and are now But an astonishment; even so the tools And emblems of its last captivity,

Amid the dwellings of the peopled earth,

Stand, not o'erthrown, but unregarded now.

And those foul shapes, abhorred by god and man,

Which, under many a name and many a form.

Strange, savage, ghastly, dark and execrable,

Were Jupiter, the tyrant of the world; And which the nations, panic-stricken, served

With blood, and hearts broken by long hope, and love

Dragged to his altars soiled and garland-

And slain among men's unreclaiming tears.

Flattering the thing they feared, which fear was hate,

Frown, mouldering fast, o'er their abandoned shrines:

The painted veil, by those who were,

called life,

Which mimicked, as with colors idly spread,
All men believed and hoped, is torn aside; The loathsome mask has fallen, the man remains

Sceptreless, free, uncircumscribed, but

Equal, unclassed, tribeless, and nationless.

Exempt from awe, worship, degree, the king

Over himself; just, gentle, wise: but man

Passionless; no, yet free from guilt or pain,

Which were, for his will made or suffered them,

Nor yet exempt, the ruling them like slaves,

From chance, and death, and mutability, The clogs of that which else might oversoar

The loftiest star of unascended heaven, Pinnacled dim in the intense inane.

ACT IV

Scene, a Part of the Forest near the Cave of Prometheus. Panthea and Ione are sleeping: they awaken gradually during the first Song.

Voice of unseen Spirits

The pale stars are gone!
For the sun, their swift shepherd,
To their folds them compelling,
In the depths of the dawn,
Star in restor adjusting areas.

Hastes, in meteor-eclipsing array, and they flee

Beyond his blue dwelling, As fawns flee the leopard. But where are ye?

A Train of dark Forms and Shadows passes by confusedly, singing.

Here, oh, here: We bear the bier

Of the Father of many a cancelled year!
Spectres we

Of the dead Hours be, We bear Time to his tomb in eternity.

> Strew, oh, strew Hair, not yew?

Wet the dusty pall with tears, not dew!

Be the faded flowers

Of Death's bare bowers

Spread on the corpse of the King of Hours!

Haste, oh, haste! As shades are chased,

Trembling, by day, from heaven's blue waste.

We melt away,
Like dissolving spray,
From the children of a diviner day,
With the lullaby
Of winds that die

On the bosom of their own harmony!

Ione

What dark forms were they?

Panthea

The past Hours weak and gray,
With the spoil which their toil
Raked together

From the conquest but One could foil.

Ione

Have they past?

Panthea

They have past; They outspeeded the blast, While 'tis said, they are fled:

Ione

Whither, oh, whither?

Panthea

To the dark, to the past, to the dead.

Voice of unseen Spirits

Bright clouds float in heaven, Dew-stars gleam on earth, Waves assemble on ocean, They are gathered and driven By the storm of delight, by the panic of glee!

They shake with emotion, They dance in their mirth. But where are ye?

The pine boughs are singing Old songs with new gladness, The billows and fountains Fresh music are flinging from

Like the notes of a spirit from land and from sea;

The storms mock the mountains With the thunder of gladness.

But where are ye?

Ione. What charioteers are these?
Panthea. Where are their chariots?

Semichorus of Hours

The voice of the Spirits of Air and of Earth

Have drawn back the figured curtain of sleep

Which covered our being and darkened our birth

In the deep.

A Voice

In the deep?

Semichorus II

Oh, below the deep.

Semichorus I

An hundred ages we had been kept
Cradled in visions of hate and care,
And each one who waked as his brother slept,

Found the truth-

Semichorus II

Worse than his visions were!

Semichorus I

We have heard the lute of Hope in sleep; We have known the voice of Love in dreams,

We have felt the wand of Power, and leap—

Semichorus II

As the billows leap in the morning beams!

Chorus

Weave the dance on the floor of the breeze,

Pierce with song heaven's silent light,

Enchant the day that too swiftly flees,
To check its flight ere the cave of
night.

Once the hungry Hours were hounds
Which chased the day like a bleeding deer.

And it limped and stumbled with many wounds

Through the nightly dells of the desert year.

But now, oh weave the mystic measure Of music, and dance, and shapes of light.

Let the Hours, and the spirits of might and pleasure,

Like the clouds and sunbeams, unite.

A Voice

Panthea. See, where the Spirits of the human mind

Wrapt in sweet sounds, as in bright veils, approach.

Chorus of Spirits

We join the throng
Of the dance and the song,

By the whirlwind of gladness borne along;

As the flying-fish leap From the Indian deep.

And mix with the sea-birds, half asleep.

Chorus of Hours

Whence come ye, so wild and so fleet, For sandals of lightning are on your feet.

And your wings are soft and swift as thought,

And your eyes are as love which is veiled not?

Chorus of Spirits

We come from the mind Of human kind

Which was late so dusk, and obscene, and blind,

Now 'tis an ocean Of clear emotion.

A heaven of serene and mighty motion;

From that deep abyss Of wonder and bliss,

Whose caverns are crystal palaces; From those skiey towers

Where Thought's crowned powers
Sit watching your dance, ye happy
Hours!

From the dim recesses Of woven caresses,

Where lovers catch ye by your loose tresses:

From the azure isles,

Where sweet Wisdom smiles, Delaying your ships with her siren wiles.

From the temples high
Of Man's ear and eye,
Roofed over Sculpture and Poesy;
From the murmurings
Of the unsealed springs
Where Science bedews his Dædal wings.

Years after years,
Through blood, and tears,
And a thick hell of hatreds, and hopes,
and fears;
We waded and flew.

And the islets were few

Where the bud-blighted flowers of happiness grew.

Our feet now, every palm,
Are sandalled with calm,
And the dew of our wings is a rain of
balm;

And, beyond our eyes, The human love lies

Which makes all it gazes on Paradise.

Chorus of Spirits and Hours

Then weave the web of the mystic measure;

From the depths of the sky and the ends of the earth,

Come, swift Spirits of might and of pleasure,

Fill the dance and the music of mirth,
As the waves of a thousand streams rush by

To an ocean of splendor and harmony!

Chorus of Spirits

Our spoil is won, Our task is done,

We are free to dive, or soar, or run; Beyond and around,

Or within the bound

Which clips the world with darkness round.

We'll pass the eyes
Of the starry skies
Into the hoar deep to colonise:
Death, Chaos, and Night,

From the sound of our flight,
Shall flee, like mist from a tempest's might.

And Earth, Air, and Light, And the Spirit of Might,

Which drives round the stars in their flery flight;

And Love, Thought, and Breath, The powers that quell Death, perever we soar shall assemble h

Wherever we soar shall assemble beneath.

And our singing shall build In the void's loose field

A world for the Spirit of Wisdom to wield:

We will take our plan From the new world of man,

And our work shall be called the Promethean.

Chorus of Hours

Break the dance, and scatter the song; Let some depart, and some remain.

Semichorus I

We, beyond heaven, are driven along!

Semichorus II

Us the enchantments of earth retain:

$Semichorus\ I$

Ceaseless, and rapid, and fierce, and free, With the Spirits which build a new earth and sea,

And a heaven where yet heaven could never be.

Semichorus II

Solemn, and slow, and serene, and bright, Leading the Day and outspeeding the Night,

With the powers of a world of perfect light.

Semichorus I

We whirl, singing loud, round the gathering sphere,

Till the trees, and the beasts, and the clouds appear

From its chaos made calm by love, not fear.

Semichorus II

We encircle the ocean and mountains of earth,

And the happy forms of its death and birth

Change to the music of our sweet mirth.

Chorus of Hours and Spirits

Break the dance, and scatter the song, Let some depart, and some remain, Wherever we fly we lead along

In leashes, like starbeams, soft yet

strong

The clouds that are heavy with love's sweet rain.

Panthea. Ha! they are gone!

Ione. Yet feel you no delight

From the past sweetness?

Panthea. As the bare green hill When some soft cloud vanishes into rain, Laughs with a thousand drops of sunny water

To the unpavilioned sky!

Ione. Even whilst we speak
New notes arise. What is that awful sound?

Panthea, 'Tis the deep music of the rolling world

Kindling within the strings of the waved air.

Æolian modulations.

Ione. Listen too,

How every pause is filled with under notes,

Clear, silver, icy, keen, awakening tones, Which pierce the sense, and live within the soul,

As the sharp stars pierce winter's crystal air

And gaze upon themselves within the sea.

Panthea. But see where through two openings in the forest

Which hanging branches overcanopy, And where two runnels of a rivulet, Between the close moss violet-inwoven.

Between the close moss violet-inwoven, Have made their path of melody, like sisters

Who part with sighs that they may meet in smiles,

Turning their dear disunion to an isle
Of lovely grief, a wood of sweet sad
thoughts;

Two visions of strange radiance float upon

The ocean-like enchantment of strong sound,

Which flows intenser, keener, deeper yet Under the ground and through the windless air.

Ione. I see a chariot like that thinnest boat,

In which the mother of the months is borne

By ebbing night into her western cave, When she upsprings from interlunar dreams,

O'er which is curved an orblike canopy Of gentle darkness, and the hills and woods

Distinctly seen through that dusk airy veil,

Regard like shapes in an enchanter's glass;

Its wheels are solid clouds, azure and

Such as the genii of the thunderstorm Pile on the floor of the illumined sea

When the sun rushes under it; they roll And move and grow as with an inward wind;

Within it sits a wingéd infant, white Its countenance, like the whiteness of bright snow,

Its plumes are as feathers of sunny frost,
Its limbs gleam white, through the wind flowing folds

Of its white robe, woof of ethereal pearl. Its hair is white, the brightness of white light

Scattered in strings; yet its two eyes are heavens

Of liquid darkness, which the Deity

Within seems pouring, as a storm is poured

From jaggéd clouds, out of their arrowy lashes,

Tempering the cold and radiant air around,

With fire that is not brightness: in its hand

It sways a quivering moonbeam, from whose point

A guiding power directs the chariot's prow

Over its wheeled clouds, which as they roll

Over the grass, and flowers, and waves, wake sounds.

Sweet as a singing rain of silver dew.

Panthea. And from the other opening in the wood

Rushes, with loud and whirlwind harmony,

A sphere, which is as many thousand spheres,

Solid as crystal, yet through all its mass Flow, as through empty space, music and light:

Ten thousand orbs involving and involved.

Purple and azure, white, and green, and golden,

Sphere within sphere; and every space between

Peopled with unimaginable shapes.

Such as ghosts dream dwell in the lampless deep.

Yet each inter-transpicuous, and they whirl

Over each other with a thousand motions. Upon a thousand sightless axles spinning,

And with the force of self-destroying swiftness.

Intensely, slowly, solemnly roll on, Kindling with mingled sounds, and many tones,

Intelligible words and music wild.

With mighty whirl the multitudinous

Grinds the bright brook into an azure

Of elemental subtlety, like light;

And the wild odor of the forest flowers, The music of the living grass and air,

emerald light of leaf-entangled beams

Round its intense vet self-conflicting speed.

Seem kneaded into one aërial mass Which drowns the sense. Within the orb itself.

Pillowed upon its alabaster arms,

Like to a child o'erwearied with sweet

On its own folded wings, and wavy hair, The Spirit of the Earth is laid asleep, And you can see its little lips are moving,

Amid the changing light of their own smiles.

Like one who talks of what he loves in dream.

Ione. 'T is only mocking the orb's harmony.

And from a star upon its Panthea. forehead, shoot,

Like swords of azure fire, or golden

With tyrant-quelling myrtle overtwined, Embleming heaven and earth united now.

Vast beams like spokes of some invisible wheel

Which whirl as the orb whirls, swifter than thought.

Filling the abyss with sun-like lighten-

And perpendicular now, and now trans-

Pierce the dark soil, and as they pierce and pass,

Make bare the secrets of the earth's deep heart:

Infinite mine of adamant and gold.

Valueless stones, and unimagined gems. And caverns on crystalline columns poised

With vegetable silver overspread;

Wells of unfathomed fire, and water springs

Whence the great sea, even as a child is fed.

Whose vapors clothe earth's monarch mountain-tops

With kingly ermine snow, The beams flash on

And make appear the melancholy ruins Of cancelled cycles; anchors, beaks of Planks turned to marble; quivers, helms, and spears,

And gorgon-headed targes, and the wheels

Of scythed chariots and the emblazonry Of trophies, standards, and armorial beasts.

Round which death laughed, sepulchred emblems

Of dead destruction, ruin within ruin! The wrecks beside of many a city vast, Whose population which the earth grew

Was mortal, but not human; see, they

Their monstrous works, and uncouth skeletons,

Their statues, homes and fanes; prodigious shapes Huddled in gray annihilation, split,

Jammed in the hard, black deep; and over these,

The anatomies of unknown winged things, And fishes which were isles of living scale,

And serpents, bony chains, twisted around

The iron crags, or within heaps of dust To which the tortuous strength of their last pangs

Had crushed the iron crags; and over these

The jagged alligator, and the might

Of earth-convulsing behemoth, which

Were monarch beasts, and on the slimy shores,

And weed-overgrown continents of earth. Increased and multiplied like summer worms

On an abandoned corpse, till the blue globe

Wrapt deluge round it like a cloak, and

Yelled, gasped, and were abolished; or some God

Whose throne was in a comet, passed, and cried.

Be not! And like my words they were no more.

The Earth

The joy, the triumph, the delight, the madness!

The boundless, overflowing, bursting gladness,

The vaporous exultation not to be confined!

Ha! ha! the animation of delight Which wraps me, like an atmosphere of light.

And bears me as a cloud is borne by its own wind.

The Moon

Brother mine, calm wanderer, Happy globe of land and air. Some Spirit is darted like a beam from Which penetrates my frozen frame. And passes with the warmth of flame, With love, and odor, and deep melody Through me, through me!

The Earth

Ha! ha! the caverns of my hollow mountains.

My cloven fire-crags, sound-exulting fountains

Laugh with a vast and inextinguishable laughter.

The oceans, and the deserts, and the abysses, And the deep air's unmeasured wildernesses,

Answer from all their clouds and billows. echoing after.

They cry aloud as I do. Sceptred curse,

Who all our green and azure universe Threatenedst to muffle round with black destruction, sending

A solid cloud to rain hot thunderstones.

And splinter and knead down my children's bones,

All I bring forth, to one void mass, battering and blending.

Until each crag-like tower, and storied column.

Palace, and obelisk, and temple

solemn, My imperial mountains crowned with cloud, and snow, and fire;

My sea-like forests, every blade and blóssom

Which finds a grave or cradle in my bosom.

Were stamped by thy strong hate into a lifeless mire.

How art thou sunk, withdrawn. covered, drunk up

By thirsty nothing, as the brackish

Drained by a desert-troop, a little drop for all;

And from beneath, around, within, above,

Filling thy void annihilation, love Burst in like light on caves cloven by the thunder-ball.

The Moon

The snow upon my lifeless mountains Is loosened into living fountains, My solid oceans flow, and sing, and

shine:

A spirit from my heart bursts forth, It clothes with unexpected birth

My cold bare bosom: Oh! it must be thine

On mine, on mine!

Gazing on thee I feel, I know Green stalks burst forth, and bright flowers grow,

And living shapes upon my bosom move:

Music is in the sea and air,

Winged clouds soar here and there, Dark with the rain new buds are dreaming of:

Tis love, all love!

The Earth

It interpenetrates my granite mass, Through tangled roots and trodden clay doth pass.

Into the utmost leaves and delicatest flowers;

Upon the winds, among the clouds 'tis spread,

It wakes a life in the forgotten dead, They breathe a spirit up from their obscurest bowers,

And like a storm bursting its cloudy prison

With thunder, and with whirlwind, has arisen

Out of the lampless caves of unimagined being:

With earthquake shock and swiftness making shiver

Thought's stagnant chaos, unremoved for ever.

Till hate, and fear, and pain, light-vanquished shadows, fleeing,

Leave Man, who was a many-sided mirror,

Which could distort to many a shape of error,

This true fair world of things, a sea reflecting love;

Which over all his kind as the sun's heaven

Gliding o'er ocean, smooth, serene, and

Darting from starry depths radiance and life, doth move,

Leave Man, even as a leprous child is left,

Who follows a sick beast to some warm cleft

Of rocks, through which the might of healing springs is poured;

Then when it wanders home with rosy smile,

Unconscious, and its mother fears awhile

It is a spirit, then, weeps on her child restored—

Man, oh, not men! a chain of linkéd thought,

Of love and might to be divided not, Compelling the elements with adamantine stress; [gaze, As the sun rules, even with a tyrant's

The unquiet republic of the maze
Of planets, struggling fierce towards heaven's free wilderness—

Man, one harmonious soul of many a soul,

Whose nature is its own divine control,
Where all things flow to all, as rivers to the sea; [love; Familiar acts are beautiful through

Labor, and pain, and grief, in life's green grove

Sport like tame beasts, none knew how gentle they could be !

His will, with all mean passions, bad delights,

And selfish cares, its trembling satellites,

A spirit ill to guide, but mighty to obey, Is as a tempest-wingéd ship, whose helm

Love rules, through waves which dare not overwhelm,

Forcing life's wildest shores to own its sovereign sway.

All things confess his strength.
Through the cold mass

Of marble and of color his dreams pass; Bright threads whence mothers weave the robes their children wear;

Language is a perpetual orphic song, Which rules with Dædal harmony a throng

Of thoughts and forms, which else senseless and shapeless were.

The lightning is his slave; heaven's utmost deep

Gives up her stars, and like a flock of sheep

They pass before his eye, are numbered, and roll on! The tempest is his steed, he strides

the air;
And the abyss shouts from her depth

laid bare,
Heaven, hast thou secrets? Man unveils me: I have none.

The Moon

The shadow of white death has past From my path in heaven at last,

A clinging shroud of solid frost and sleep; And through my newly-woven bowers, Wander happy paramours,

Less mighty, but as mild as those who keep

Thy vales more deep.

The Earth

As the dissolving warmth of dawn may fold

A half unfrozen dew-globe, green and gold,

And crystalline, till it becomes a wingéd mist,

And wanders up the vault of the blue day,

Outlives the noon, and on the sun's last ray

Hangs o'er the sea, a fleece of fire and amethyst,

The Moon

Thou art folded, thou art lying In the light which is undying Of thme own joy, and heaven's smile

All suns and constellations shower On thee a light, a life, a power

Which doth array thy sphere; thou pourest thine
On mine, on mine!

The Earth

I spin beneath my pyramid of night. Which points into the heavens dreaming delight,

Murmuring victorious joy in my enchanted sleep:

As a youth lulled in love-dreams faintly sighing,

Under the shadows of his beauty lying;

Which round his rest a watch of light and warmth doth keep.

The Moon

As in the soft and sweet eclipse, When soul meets soul on lovers' lips, High hearts are calm, and brightest eyes are dull;

are dun;
So when thy shadow falls on me,
Then am I mute and still, by thee
Covered; of thy love, Orb most beautiful,
Full, oh, too full!

Thou art speeding round the sun Brightest world of many a one; Green and azure sphere which shinest With a light which is divinest Among all the lamps of Heaven To whom life and light is given; I, thy crystal paramour, Borne beside thee by a power Like the polar Paradise, Magnet-like of lovers' eyes; I, a most enamored maiden Whose weak brain is overladen With the pleasure of her love, Maniac-like around thee move Gazing, an insatiate bride, On thy form from every side Like a Mænad, round the cup Which Agave lifted up In the weird Cadmæan forest. Brother, wheresoe'er thou soarest I must hurry, whirl and follow Through the heavens wide and hollow, Sheltered by the warm embrace Of thy soul from hungry space,

Drinking from thy sense and sight Beauty, majesty, and might, As a lover or chameleon Grows like what it looks upon As a violet's gentle eye Gazes on the azure sky

Until its hue grows like what it behelds, As a gray and watery mist Glows like solid amethyst

Athwart the western mountain it enfolds,

When the sunset sleeps Upon its snow.

The Earth

And the weak day weeps
That it should be so.

Oh, gentle Moon, the voice of thy delight

Falls on me like thy clear and tender light

Soothing the seaman, borne the summer night,

Through isles for ever calm:

Oh, gentle Moon, thy crystal accents pierce

The caverns of my pride's deep universe, Charming the tiger joy, whose tramplings fierce

Made wounds which need thy balm.

Panthea. I rise as from a bath of sparkling water,

A bath of azure light, among dark rocks, Out of the stream of sound.

Ione. Ah me! sweet sister,
The stream of sound has ebbed away from us.

And you pretend to rise out of its wave, Because your words fall like the clear, soft dew

Shaken from a bathing wood-nymph's limbs and hair.

Panthea. Peace! peace! A mighty Power, which is as darkness,

Is rising out of Earth, and from the sky
Is showered like night, and from within
the air

Bursts, like eclipse which had been gathered up

Into the pores of sunlight: the bright visions,

Wherein the singing spirits rode and shone,

Gleam like pale meteors through a watery night.

Ione. There is a sense of words upon mine ear.

Panthea. An universal sound like words: Oh, list!

Demogorgon

Thou, Earth, calm empire of a happy soul,

Sphere of divinest shapes and harmonies,

Beautiful orb! gathering as thou dost roll

The love which paves thy path along the skies:

The Earth

I hear: I am as a drop of dew that dies.

Demogorgon

Thou, Moon, which gazest on the nightly Earth

With wonder, as it gazes upon thee; Whilst each to men, and beasts, and the swift birth

Of birds, is beauty, love, calm, harmony:

The Moon

I hear: I am a leaf shaken by thee!

Demogorgon

Ye kings of suns and stars, Demons and Gods.

Ethereal Dominations, who possess Elysian, windless, fortunate abodes

Beyond Heaven's constellated wilderness:

A Voice from above

Our great Republic hears, we are blest, and bless.

Demogorgon

Ye happy dead, whom beams of brightest verse

Are clouds to hide, not colors to portray,

Whether your nature is that universe Which once ye saw and suffered—

A Voice from beneath

Whom we have left, we change and pass away.

Demogorgon

Ye elemental Genii, who have homes From man's high mind even to the central stone

Of sullen lead; from Heaven's starfretted domes To the dull weed some sea-worm battens on:

A confused Voice

We hear: thy words waken Oblivion.

Demogorgon

Spirits, whose homes are flesh: ye beasts and birds.

Ye worms, and fish; ye living leaves and buds:

Lightning and wind; and ye untameable herds.

Meteors and mists, which throng air's solitudes:—

A Voice

Thy voice to us is wind among still woods.

Demogorgan

Man.who wert once a despot and a slave;
A dupe and a deceiver; a decay;

A traveller from the cradle to the grave
Through the dim night of this immortal day:

All

Speak: thy strong words may never pass away.

Demogorgon

This is the day, which down the void abysm

At the Earth-born's spell yawns for Heaven's despotism,

And Conquest is dragged captive through the deep:

Love, from its awful throne of patient

power
In the wise heart, from the last giddy

hour Of dead endurance, from the slippery,

steep,
And narrow verge of crag-like agony,
springs

And folds over the world its healing wings.

Gentleness, Virtue, Wisdom, and Endurance.

These are the seals of that most firm assurance

Mother of many acts and hours, should free

1 The prominent feature of Shelley's theory of the destiny of the human species was that evil is not inherent in the system of the creation, but an accident that might be expelled. This also forms a portion of Christianity: God made earth and man perfect, till he, by his fall,

"Brought death into the world and all our woe."

Shelley believed that mankind had only to will that there should be no evil, and there would be none. It is not my part in these Notes to notice the arguments that have been urged against this opinion, but to mention the fact that he entertained it, and was indeed attached to it with fervent enthusiasm. That man could be so per-fectionized as to be able to expel evil from his own nature, and from the greater part of the creation, was the cardinal point of his system. And the subject he loved best to dwell on was the image of One warring with the Evil Principle, oppressed not only by it, but by all-even the good, who were deluded into considering evil a necessary portion of humanity; a victim full of fortitude and hope and the spirit of triumph, emanating from a reliance in the ultimate omnipotence of Good. Such he had depicted in his last poem, when he made Laon the enemy and the victim of tyrants. He now took a more idealised image of the same subject. He followed certain classical authorities in figuring Saturn as the good principle, Jupiter the usurping evil one, and Prometheus as the regenerator, who, unable to bring mankind back to primitive innocence, used knowledge as a weapon to defeat evil, by leading mankind, beyond the state wherein they are sinless through ignorance, to that in which they are virtuous through wisdom. Jupiter punished the temerity of the Titan by chaining him to a rock of Caucasus, and causing a vulture to devour his still-renewed heart. There was a prophecy affoat in heaven portending the fall of Jove, the secret of averting which was known only to Prometheus; and the god offered freedom from torture on condition of its being communicated to him. According to the mythological story, this referred to the off-spring of Thetis, who was destined to be greater than his father. Prometheus at last bought pardon for his crime of enriching mankind with his gifts, by revealing the prophecy. Hercules killed the vulture, and set him free; and Thetis was married to Peleus, the father of Achilles.

was married to Peleus, the father of Achilles. Shelley adapted the catastrophe of this story to his peculiar views. The son greater than his father, born of the nuptials of Jupiter and Thetis, was to dethrone Evil, and bring back a happier reign than that of Saturn. Prometheus defies the power of his enemy, and endures centuries of torture; till the hour arrives when Jove, blind to the real event, but darkly guessing that some great good to himself will flow, espouses Thetis. At the moment, the Primal Power of the world drives him from his usurped thome and Strength in the person of Hergules. Fower of the world drives him from his usurped throne, and Strength, in the person of Hercules, liberates Humanity, typified in Prometheus, from the tortures generated by evil done or suffered. Asia, one of the Oceanides, is the wife of Prometheus—she was, according to other my-thological interpretations, the same as Venus and Nature. When the benefactor of mankind is liberated, Nature resumes the beauty of her prime, and is united to her husband, the emblem of the human race, in perfect and happy union In the fourth Act, the Poet gives further scope to his imagination, and idealizes the forms of creation—such as we know them, instead of such as they appeared to the Greeks. Maternal Earth, the mighty parent, is superseded by the Spirit of the Earth, the guide of our planet through the realms of sky; while his fair and weaker companion and attendant, the Spirit of the Moon, receives bliss from the annihilation of Evil in the superior sphere.

Shelley develops more particularly in the lyrics of this drama his abstruse and imaginative theories with regard to the creation. It requires a mind as subtle and penetrating as his own to understand the mystic meanings scat-tered throughout the poem. They elude the ordinary reader by their abstraction and delicacy of distinction, but they are far from vague. It was his design to write prose metaphysical essays on the nature of Man, which would have served to explain much of what is obscure in his poetry; a few scattered fragments of observations and remarks alone remain. He considered these philosophical views of Mind and Nature to be instinct with the intensest spirit of poetry.

More popular poets clothe the ideal with familiar and sensible imagery. Shelley loved to idealize the real—to gift the mechanism of the material universe with a soul and a voice, and to bestow such also on the most delicate and abstract emotions and thoughts of the mind. Sophocles was his great master in this species of imagery.—(From Mrs. Shelley's note.)

Like the Spirit of Love felt everywhere: And each flower and herb on Earth's dark breast

Rose from the dreams of its wintry rest.

But none ever trembled and panted with

In the garden, the field, or the wilderness.

Like a doe in the noontide with love's sweet want.

As the companionless Sensitive Plant.

The snowdrop and then the violet,

Arose from the ground with warm rain wet.

And their breath was mixed with fresh odor, sent

From the turf, like the voice and the instrument.

Then the pied wind-flowers and the tulip tall,

And narcissi, the fairest among them all, Who gaze on their eyes in the stream's recess.

Till they die of their own dear loveliness:

And the Naiad-like lily of the vale.

Whom youth makes so fair and passion so pale.

That the light of its tremulous bells is

Through their pavilions of tender green;

And the hyacinth purple, and white, and blue,

Which flung from its bells a sweet peal

Of music so delicate, soft, and intense. It was felt like an odor within the sense:

And the rose like a nymph to the bath addrest.

Which unveiled the depth of her glowing breast,

Till, fold after fold, to the fainting air The soul of her beauty and love lay bare:

And the wand-like lily, which lifted up, As a Mænad, its moonlight-colored cup, Till the fiery star, which is its eye,

Gazed through clear dew on the tender

And the jessamine faint, and the sweet tuberose.

The sweetest flower for scent that blows: And all rare blossoms from every clime Grew in that garden in perfect prime.

And on the stream whose inconstant

Was prankt under boughs of embowering blossom,

With golden and green light, slanting through

Their heaven of many a tangled hue.

Broad water-lilies lay tremulously,

And starry river-buds glimmered by, And around them the soft stream did glide and dance With a motion of sweet sound and radiance.

And the sinuous paths of lawn and of moss, Which led through the garden, along and across,

Some open at once to the sun and the breeze.

Some lost among bowers of blossoming trees.

Were all paved with daisies and delicate

As fair as the fabulous asphodels. And flowrets which drooping as day drooped too Fell into pavilions, white, purple, and

To roof the glow-worm from the evening

dew.

And from this undefiled Paradise

The flowers (as an infant's awakening

Smile on its mother, whose singing sweet

Can first lull, and at last must awaken

When Heaven's blithe winds had unfolded them.

As mine-lamps enkindle a hidden gem, Shone smiling to Heaven, and every one Shared joy in the light of the gentle sun;

For each one was interpenetrated

With the light and the odor its neighbor shed.

Like young lovers whom youth and love make dear

Wrapped and filled by their mutual atmosphere.

But the Sensitive Plant which could give small fruit

Of the love which it felt from the leaf to the root,

Received more than all, it loved more than ever,

Where none wanted but it, could belong to the giver,

For the Sensitive Plant has no bright flower:

Radiance and odor are not its dower; It loves, even like Love, its deep heart is full.

It desires what it has not, the beautiful!

The light winds which from unsustaining wings.

Shed the music of many murmurings; The beams which dart from many a

Of the flowers whose hues they bear afar;

The pluméd insects swift and free, Like golden boats on a sunny sea, Laden with light and odor, which pass Over the gleam of the living grass;

The unseen clouds of the dew, which lie Like fire in the flowers till the sun rides high,

Then wander like spirits among the spheres,

Each cloud faint with the fragrance it bears:

The quivering vapors of dim noontide, Which like a sea o'er the warm earth

In which every sound, and odor, and beam,

Move, as reeds in a single stream;

Each and all like ministering angels were

For the Sensitive Plant sweet joy to bear,

Whilst the lagging hours of the day went by

Like windless clouds o'er a tender sky.

And when evening descended from heaven above,

And the Earth was all rest, and the air was all love.

And delight, tho' less bright, was far more deep,

And the day's veil fell from the world of sleep.

And the beasts, and the birds, and the insects were drowned

In an ocean of dreams without a sound; Whose waves never mark, tho' they ever impress

The light sand which paves it, consciousness;

(Only overhead the sweet nightingale Ever sang more sweet as the day might fail,

And snatches of its Elysian chant Were mixed with the dreams of the Sensitive Plant.)

The Sensitive Plant was the earliest Up-gathered into the bosom of rest; A sweet child weary of its delight, The feeblest and yet the favorite, Cradled within the embrace of night.

PART SECOND

There was a Power in this sweet place, An Eve in this Eden; a ruling grace Which to the flowers did they waken or dream,

Was as God is to the starry scheme.

A Lady, the wonder of her kind, Whose form was upborne by a lovely mind

Which, dilating, had moulded her mien

Like a sea-flower unfolded beneath the ocean,

Tended the garden from morn to even:
And the meteors of that sublunar heaven,
Like the lamps of the air when night
walks forth,

Laughed round her footsteps up from the Earth!

She had no companion of mortal race, But her tremulous breath and her flushing face

Told, whilst the morn kissed the sleep from her eyes

That her dreams were less slumber than Paradise:

As if some bright Spirit for her sweet sake

Had deserted heaven while the stars were awake.

As if yet around her he lingering were, Tho' the veil of daylight concealed him from her. Her step seemed to pity the grass it pressed:

You might hear by the heaving of her breast,

That the coming and going of the wind Brought pleasure there and left passion behind.

And wherever her airy footstep trod, Her trailing hair from the grassy sod Erased its light vestige, with shadowy sweep.

Like a sunny storm o'er the dark green deep.

I doubt not the flowers of that garden sweet

Rejoiced in the sound of her gentle feet; I doubt not they felt the spirit that came From her glowing fingers thro' all their frame.

She sprinkled bright water from the stream

On those that were faint with the sunny beam;

And out of the cups of the heavy flowers. She emptied the rain of the thunder showers.

She lifted their heads with her tender hands,

And sustained them with rods and osier bands;

If the flowers had been her own infants she

Could never have nursed them more tenderly.

And all killing insects and gnawing worms,

And things of obscene and unlovely forms,

She bore in a basket of Indian woof, Into the rough woods far aloof,

In a basket, of grasses and wild-flowers

The freshest her gentle hands could pull For the poor banished insects, whose intent,

Although they did ill, was innocent.

But the bee and the beamlike ephemeris Whose path is the lightning's, and soft moths that kiss

The sweet lips of the flowers, and harm not, did she

Make her attendant angels be.

And many an antenatal tomb,

Where butterflies dream of the life to come,

She left clinging round the smooth and dark

Edge of the odorous cedar bark.

This fairest creature from earliest spring Thus moved through the garden ministering

All the sweet season of summer tide, And ere the first leaf looked brown—she died!

PART THIRD

Three days the flowers of the garden fair, Like stars when the moon is awakened, were,

Or the waves of Baiæ, ere luminous She floats up through the smoke of Vesuvius.

And on the fourth, the Sensitive Plant Felt the sound of the funeral chant,

And the steps of the bearers, heavy and slow.

And the sobs of the mourners deep and low;

The weary sound and the heavy breath, And the silent motions of passing death, And the smell, cold, oppressive, and dank.

Sent through the pores of the coffin plank;

The dark grass, and the flowers among the grass,

Were bright with tears as the crowd did pass;

From their sighs the wind caught a mournful tone,

And sate in the pines, and gave groan for groan.

The garden once fair, became cold and foul.

Like the corpse of her who had been its

Which at first was lovely as if in sleep, Then slowly changed, till it grew a heap To make men tremble who never weep.

Swift summer into the autumn flowed, And frost in the mist of the morning rode.

Though the noonday sun looked clear and bright,

Mocking the spoil of the secret night.

The rose leaves, like flakes of crimson snow.

Paved the turf and the moss below.

The lilies were drooping, and white, and wan,

Like the head and the skin of a dying man.

And Indian plants, of scent and hue The sweetest that ever were fed on dew, Leaf by leaf, day after day.

Were massed into the common clay.

And the leaves, brown, yellow, and gray, and red,

And white with the whiteness of what is dead,

Like troops of ghosts on the dry wind past;

Their whistling noise made the birds aglrast.

And the gusty winds waked the wingéd seeds.

Out of their birthplace of ugly weeds,
Till they clung round many a sweet flower's stem.

Which rotted into the earth with them.

The water-blooms under the rivulet Fell from the stalks on which they were set:

And the eddies drove them here and there,

As the winds did those of the upper air.

Then the rain came down, and the broken stalks,

Were bent and tangled across the walks;

And the leafless network of parasite
bowers

Massed into ruin; and all sweet flowers.

Between the time of the wind and the snow,

All loathliest weeds began to grow,
Whose coarse leaves were splashed with many a speck,

Like the water-snake's belly and the toad's back.

And thistles, and nettles, and darnels rank,

And the dock, and henbane, and hemlock dank.

Stretched out its long and hollow shank, And stifled the air till the dead wind stank.

And plants, at whose names the verse feels loath,

Filled the place with a monstrous under growth,

Prickly, and pulpous, and blistering, and blue,

Livid, and starred with a lurid dew.

And agarics, and fungi, with mildew and mould

Started like mist from the wet ground cold;

Pale, fleshy, as if the decaying dead
With a spirit of growth had been animated!

Spawn, weeds, and filth, a leprous scum, Made the running rivulet thick and dumb

And at its outlet flags huge as stakes
Dammed it up with roots knotted like water snakes.

And hour by hour, when the air was still.

The vapors arose which have strength to kill:

At morn they were seen, at noon they were felt,

At night they were darkness no star could melt.

And unctuous meteors from spray to spray

Crept and flitted in broad noonday Unseen; every branch on which they alit

By a venomous blight was burned and bit.

The Sensitive Plant like one forbid Wept, and the tears within each lid Of its folded leaves which together grew Were changed to a blight of frozen glue.

For the leaves soon fell, and the branches soon

By the heavy axe of the blast were hewn;

The sap shrank to the root through every pore

As blood to a heart that will beat no more.

For Winter came: the wind was his whip:

One choppy finger was on his lip: He had torn the cataracts from the hills

And they clanked at his girdle like manacles;

His breath was a chain which without a sound

The earth, and the air, and the water bound;

He came, fiercely driven, in his chariotthrone

By the tenfold blasts of the arctic zone.

Then the weeds which were forms of living death

Fled from the frost to the earth beneath. Their decay and sudden flight from frost Was but like the vanishing of a ghost!

And under the roots of the Sensitive Plant

The moles and the dormice died for want:

The birds dropped stiff from the frozen air

And were caught in the branches naked and bare.

First there came down a thawing rain And its dull drops froze on the boughs again.

Then there steamed up a freezing dew Which to the drops of the thaw-rain grew;

And a northern whirlwind, wandering about

Like a wolf that had smelt a dead child out,

Shook the boughs thus laden, and heavy and stiff,

And snapped them off with his rigid griff.

When winter had gone and spring came back

The Sensitive Plant was a leafless wreck; But the mandrakes, and toadstools, and docks, and darnels,

Rose like the dead from their ruined charnels.

Conclusion

Whether the Sensitive Plant, or that Which within its boughs like a spirit sat

Ere its outward form had known decay, Now felt this change, I cannot say.

Whether that lady's gentle mind, No longer with the form combined Which scattered love, as stars do light, Found sadness, where it left delight, I dare not guess; but in this life Of error, ignorance, and strife, Where nothing is, but all things seem, And we the shadows of the dream,

It is a modest creed, and yet Pleasant if one considers it, To own that death itself must be, Like all the rest, a mockery.

That garden sweet, that lady fair,
And all sweet shapes and odors there,
In truth have never passed away:
'Tis we, 'tis ours, are changed; not they.

THE CLOUD

I BRING fresh showers for the thirsting flowers,

From the seas and the streams;
I bear light shade for the leaves when laid

In their noonday dreams.

From my wings are shaken the dews that waken

The sweet buds every one,
When rocked to rest on their mother's

When rocked to rest on their mother's breast,

As she dances about the sun.

I wield the flail of the lashing hail,
And whiten the green plains under,
And then again I dissolve it in rain,
And laugh as I pass in thunder.

I sift the snow on the mountains below, And their great pines groan aghast; And all the night 'tis my pillow white,

While I sleep in the arms of the blast.

Sublime on the towers of my skiey bowers,

Lightning my pilot sits,

In a cavern under is fettered the thunder,
It struggles and howls at fits;

Over earth and ocean, with gentle

This pilot is guiding me, Lured by the love of the geniithat move

In the depths of the purple sea; Over the rills, and the crags, and the hills,

Over the lakes and the plains,
Wherever he dream, under mountain or

Vherever he dream, under mountain or stream, The Spirit he loves remains;

The Spirit he loves remains;
And I all the while bask in heaven's blue smile,

Whilst he is dissolving in rains.

The sanguine sunrise, with his meteor eyes,

And his burning plumes outspread, Leaps on the back of my sailing rack,

When the morning star shines dead, As on the jag of a mountain crag,

Which an earthquake rocks and swings,

An eagle alit one moment may sit In the light of its golden wings.

And when sunset may breathe, from the lit sea beneath,

Its ardors of rest and of love,
And the crimson pall of eve may fall
From the depth of heaven above,

With wings folded I rest, on mine airy nest,

As still as a brooding dove.

That orbed maiden with white fire laden, Whom mortals call the moon,

Glides glimmering o'er my fleece-like floor,

By the midnight breezes strewn;
And wherever the beat of her unseen

Which only the angels hear,

May have broken the woof of my tent's thin roof,

The stars peep behind her and peer:
And I laugh to see them whirl and flee,
Like a swarm of golden bees,

When I widen the rent in my wind-built tent,

Till the calm rivers, lakes, and seas, Like strips of the sky fallen through me on high,

Are each paved with the moon and these.

f bind the sun's throne with a burning zone,

And the moon's with a girdle of pearl;

The volcanoes are dim, and the stars reel and swim.

When the whirlwinds my banner unfurl.

From cape to cape, with a bridge-like shape,

Over a torrent sea.

Sunbeam-proof, I hang like a roof, The mountains its columns be.

The triumphal arch through which I

With hurricane, fire, and snow,

When the powers of the air are chained to my chair,

Is the million-colored bow:

The sphere-fire above its soft colors wove, While the moist earth was laughing below.

I am the daughter of earth and water, And the nurshing of the sky;

I pass through the pores of the ocean and shores;

I change, but I cannot die.

For after the rain when with never a stain,

The pavilion of heaven is bare, And the winds and sunbeams with their convex gleams,

Build up the blue dome of air, I silently laugh at my own cenotaph, And out of the caverns of rain,

Like a child from the womb, like a ghost from the tomb,

I arise and unbuild it again.

TO A SKYLARK

Hall to thee, blithe spirit!
Bird thou never wert,
That from heaven, or near it,
Pourest thy full heart
In profuse strains of unpremeditated art.

Higher still and higher
From the earth thou springest
Like a cloud of fire;
The blue deep they wingest

The blue deep thou wingest,
And singing still dost soar, and soaring ever singest.

In the golden lightning
Of the sunken sun,
O'er which clouds are brightning,
Thou dost float and run;

Like an unbodied joy whose race is just begun.

The pale purple even
Melts around thy flight;
Like a star of heaven,
In the broad daylight

Thou art unseen, but yet I hear thy shrill delight,

Keen as are the arrows
Of that silver sphere,
Whose intense lamp narrows
In the white dawn clear,
Until we hardly see, we feel that it is

there.

All the earth and air

All the earth and air With thy voice is loud,

As, when night is bare, From one lonely cloud The moon rains out her beams, and heaven is overflowed.

What thou art we know not: What is most like thee?

From rainbow clouds there flow not Drops so bright to see.

As from thy presence showers a rain of melody.

Like a poet hidden In the light of thought, Singing hymns unbidden. Till the world is wrought

To sympathy with hopes and fears it heeded not:

Like a high-born maiden In a palace-tower. Soothing her love-laden

Soul in secret hour With music sweet as love, which overflows her bower:

Like a glow-worm golden In a dell of dew. Scattering unbeholden Its aërial hue

Among the flowers and grass, which screen it from the view:

Like a rose embowered In its own green leaves, By warm winds deflowered, Till the scent it gives Makes faint with too much sweet these heavy-wingéd thieves:

Sound of vernal showers On the twinkling grass, Rain-awakened flowers, All that ever was

Joyous, and clear, and fresh, thy music doth surpass:

Teach us, sprite or bird, What sweet thoughts are thine: I have never heard

Praise of love or wine That panted forth a flood of rapture so divine.

Chorus Hymeneal, Or triumphal chant, Matched with thine would be all But an empty vaunt,

A thing wherein we feel there is some hidden want.

What objects are the fountains Of thy happy strain?

What fields, or waves, or mountains? What shapes of sky or plain?

What love of thine own kind? what ignorance of pain?

With thy clear keen joyance Languor cannot be: Shadow of annovance Never came near thee:

Thou lovest; but ne'er knew love's sad satiety.

Waking or asleep, Thou of death must deem Things more true and deep Than we mortals dream,

Or how could thy notes flow in such a crystal stream?

We look before and after. And pine for what is not: Our sincerest laughter With some pain is fraught; Our sweetest songs are those that tell of saddest thought.

Yet if we could scorn Hate, and pride, and fear; If we were things born Not to shed a tear,

I know not how thy joy we ever should come near.

Better than all measures Of delightful sound. Better than all treasures That in books are found, Thy skill to poet were, thou scorner of the ground!

Teach me half the gladness That thy brain must know, Such harmonious madness From my lips would flow, The world should listen then, as I am 1820. 1820. listening now.

TO----

I FEAR thy kisses, gentle maiden, Thou needest not fear mine; My spirit is too deeply laden Ever to burthen thine.

I fear thy mien, thy tones, thy motion, Thou needest not fear mine; Innocent is the heart's devotion With which I worship thine.

ARETHUSA

ARETHUSA arose
From her couch of snows
In the Acroceraunian mountains,—
From cloud and from crag,
With many a jag,

Shepherding her bright fountains.
She leapt down the rocks,
With her rainbow locks

Streaming among the streams;—
Her steps paved with green
The downward ravine

Which slopes to the western gleams:
And gliding and springing
She went, ever singing,

In murmurs as soft as sleep;
The Earth seemed to love her,
And Heaven smiled above her,
As she lingered towards the deep.

Then Alpheus bold, On his glacier cold,

With his trident the mountains strook
And opened a chasm
In the rocks;—with the spasm

All Erymanthus shook.
And the black south wind
It concealed behind

The urns of the silent snow,
And earthquake and thunder
Did rend in sunder

The bars of the springs below.
The beard and the hair
Of the River-god were Seen through the torrent's sweep,

As he followed the light
Of the fleet nymph's flight

To the brink of the Dorian deep.

"Oh, save me! Oh, guide me! And bid the deep hide me, For he grasps me now by the hair!" The loud Ocean heard, To its blue depth stirred, And divided at her prayer;

And under the water The Earth's white daughter

Fled like a sunny beam;
Behind her descended

Her billows, unblended
With the brackish Dorian stream:—
Like a gloomy stain

On the emerald main Alpheus rushed behind,— As an eagle pursuing

A dove to its ruin

Down the streams of the cloudy wind.

Under the bowers
Where the Ocean Powers
Sit on their pearled thrones,
Through the coral woods
Of the weltering floods,
Over heaps of unvalued stones;

Through the dim beams
Which amid the streams

Weave a network of colored light;
And under the caves,
Where the shadowy waves

Are as green as the forest's night;—
Outspeeding the shark.
And the sword-fish dark,

Under the ocean foam,
And up through the rifts
Of the mountain clifts

They passed to their Dorian home.

And now from their fountains In Enna's mountains,

Down one vale where the morning basks, Like friends once parted Grown single-hearted,

They ply their watery tasks.
At sunrise they leap
From their cradles steep

In the cave of the shelving hill; At noontide they flow Through the woods below And the meadows of Asphodel;

And the meadows of Asphou And at night they sleep In the rocking deep

Beneath the Ortygian shore; Like spirits that lie In the azure sky

When they love but live no more. 1820. 1824.

HYMN OF PAN

From the forests and highlands
We come, we come;
From the river-girt islands,
Where loud waves are dumb
Listening to my sweet pipings.
The wind in the reeds and the rushes

The wind in the reeds and the rushes,
The bees on the bells of thyme,
The birds on the myrtle bushes,

The cicale above in the lime, And the lizards below in the grass, Were as silent as ever old Tmolus was, re as silent as ever old Tmolus was, Listening to my sweet pipings.

Liquid Peneus was flowing,
And all dark Tempe lay
In Pelion's shadow, outgrowing
The light of the dying day,
Speeded by my sweet pipings.

The Sileni, and Sylvans, and Fauns, And the Nymphs of the woods and waves,

To the edge of the moist river-lawns, And the brink of the dewy caves,

And all that did then attend and follow Were silent with love, as you now, Apollo.

With envy of my sweet pipings.

I sang of the dancing stars,

I sang of the dædal Earth,

And of Heaven—and the giant wars, And Love, and Death, and Birth,-And then I changed my pipings,- Singing how down the vale of Menalus I pursued a maiden and clasp'd a reed: Gods and men, we are all deluded thus! It breaks in our bosom and then we bleed:

All wept, as I think both ye now would, If envy or age had not frozen your blood, At the sorrow of my sweet pipings. 18.30. 1834.

THE QUESTION

I DREAMED that, as I wandered by the way, Bare winter suddenly was changed to

spring,
And gentle odors led my steps astray, Mixed with a sound of waters mur-

Along a shelving bank of turf, which lay Under a copse, and hardly dared to

Its green arms round the bosom of the stream,

But kissed it and then fled, as thou mightest in dream.

There grew pied wind-flowers and violets, Daisies, those pearled Arcturi of the earth.

The constellated flower that never sets; Faint ox lips; tender bluebells, at whose birth

The sod scarce heaved; and that tall flower that wets-

Like a child, half in tenderness and

Its mother's face with heaven's collected tears,

When the low wind, its playmate's voice, it hears.

And in the warm hedge grew lush eglantine,

Green cowbind and the moonlightcolored May.

And cherry-blossoms, and white cups, whose wine

Was the bright dew, yet drained not by the day:

And wild roses, and ivy serpentine,

With its dark buds and leaves, wandering astray;

And flowers azure, black, and streaked with gold,

Fairer than any wakened eyes behold.

And nearer to the river's trembling edge. There grew broad flag-flowers, purple prankt with white,

And starry river buds among the sedge, And floating water-lilies, broad and

Which lit the oak that overhung the hedge

With moonlight beams of their own watery light:

And bulrushes, and reeds of such deep green

As soothed the dazzled eve with sober sheen.

Methought that of these visionary flowers I made a nosegay, bound in such a way

That the same hues, which in their natural bowers

Were mingled or opposed, the like arrav

Kept these imprisoned children of the Hours

Within my hand,—and then, elate and gay,

I hastened to the spot whence I had

That I might there present it !-- oh! to 1820. 1822. whom?

SONG

RARELY, rarely, comest thou, Spirit of Delight! Wherefore hast thou left me now Many a day and night? Many a weary night and day Tis since thou art fled away.

How shall ever one like me Win thee back again? With the joyous and the free Thou wilt scoff at pain. Spirit false! thou hast forgot All but those who need thee not. As a lizard with the shade
Of a trembling leaf.
Thou with sorrow art dismayed;
Even the sighs of grief
Reproach thee, that thou art not near,
And reproach thou wilt not hear.

Let me set my mournful ditty
To a merry measure,
Thou wilt never come for pity,
Thou wilt come for pleasure,
Pity then will cut away
Those cruel wings, and thou wilt stay.

I love all that thou lovest,
Spirit of Delight!
The fresh Earth in new leaves drest,
And the starry night;
Autumn evening, and the morn
When the golden mists are born.

I love snow, and all the forms
Of the radiant frost;
I love waves, and winds, and storms,
Every thing almost
Which is Nature's, and may be
Untainted by man's misery.

I love tranquil solitude,
And such society
As is quiet, wise, and good;
Between thee and me
What difference? but thou dost possess
The things I seek, not love them less.

I love Love—though he has wings,
And like light can flee,
But above all other things,
Spirit, I love thee—
Thou art love and life! Oh come,
Make once more my heart thy home.

1870, 1 1824.

TO THE MOON

ART thou pale for weariness
Of climbing heaven and gazing on the earth,

Wandering companionless
Among the stars that have a different birth.—

And ever changing, like a joyless eye That finds no object worth its constancy?

1820, 1824.

¹ Though included by Mrs. Shelley, and by later editors, among the poems of 1821, there is a copy of this poem in the Harvard College Manuscripts, dated in Shelley's handwriting, "Pisa, May, 1830." See note in Edward Dowden's Edition of Shelley.

THE WORLD'S WANDERERS

Tell me, thou star, whose wings of light
Speed thee in thy fiery flight,
In what cavern of the night
Will thy pinions close now?

Tell me, moon, thou pale and gray Pilgrim of heaven's homeless way, In what depth of night or day Seekest thou repose now?

Weary wind, who wanderest
Like the world's rejected guest,
Hast thou still some secret nest
On the tree or billow?

TIME LONG PAST

LIKE the ghost of a dear friend dead
Is Time long past.
A tone which is now forever fled,
A hope which is now forever past,
A love so sweet it could not last,
Was Time long past.

There were sweet dreams in the night
Of Time long past:
And, was it sadness or delight,
Each day a shadow onward east
Which made us wish it yet might last—
That Time long past.

There is regret, almost remorse,
For Time long past.
'Tis like a child's belovéd corse
A father watches, till at last
Beauty is like remembrance, cast
From Time long past.

EPIPSYCHIDION

VERSES ADDRESSED TO THE NOBLE AND UNFORTUNATE LADY, EMILIA V., NOW IMPRISONED IN THE CONVENT OF ...

L'anima e mante si slancia fuori del creato, e si crea nel infinito un Mondo tutto per essa, diverso assai da questo oscuro e pauroso baratro. Her own words.

SWEET Spirit! Sister of that orphan one,

Whose empire is the name thou weepest

In my heart's temple I suspend to thee
These votive wreaths of withered
memory.

Poor captive bird! who, from thy narrow cage,

Pourest such music, that it might as-

The rugged hearts of those who prisoned

thee.
Were they not deaf to all sweet melody;
This song shall be thy rose; its petals
pale

Are dead, indeed, my adored Nightin-

gale!

But soft and fragrant is the faded blossom,

And it has no thorn left to wound thy bosom.

High, spirit-wingéd Heart! who dost for ever

Beat thine unfeeling bars with vain endeavor,

Till those bright plumes of thought, in which arrayed

It over-soared this low and worldly shade,

Lie shattered; and thy panting, wounded

Stains with dear blood its unmaternal nest!

I weep vain tears: blood would less bitter be,

Yet poured forth gladlier, could it profit thee.

Seraph of Heaven! too gentle to be human,

Veiling beneath that radiant form of Woman

All that is insupportable in thee Of light, and love, and immortality! Sweet Benediction in the eternal Curse! Veiled Glory of this lampless Universe! Thou Moon beyond the clouds! Thou living Form

Among the Dead! Thou Star above the Storm!

Thou Wonder, and thou Beauty, and thou Terror!

Thou Harmony of Nature's art! Thou Mirror

In whom, as in the splendor of the Sun, All shapes look glorious which thou gazest on!

Ay, even the dim words which obscure thee now

Flash, lightning-like, with unaccustomed glow;

I pray thee that thou blot from this sad

All of its much mortality and wrong,

With those clear drops, which start like sacred dew

From the twin lights thy sweet soul darkens through,

Weeping, till sorrow becomes ecstasy: Then smile on it, so that it may not die.

I never thought before my death to see

Youth's vision thus made perfect. Emily,

I love thee; though the world by no thin name

Will hide that love, from its unvalued shame.

Would we two had been twins of the same mother!

Or, that the name my heart lent to another

Could be a sister's bond for her and thee,

Blending two beams of one eternity!
Yet were one lawful and the other true,
These names, though dear, could paint not, as is due. How beyond refuge I am thine. Ah me! I am not thine: I am a part of thee,

Sweet Lamp! my moth-like Muse has burnt its wings;

Or, like a dying swan who soars and sings,

Young Love should teach Time, in his own gray style,

All that thou art. Art thou not void of guile,

A lovely soul formed to be blest and bless?

A well of sealed and secret happiness, Whose waters like blithe light and music are,

Vanquishing dissonance and gloom? A

Which moves not in the moving Heavens, alone?

A smile amid dark frowns? a gentle tone

Amid rude voices? a belovéd light? A Selitude, a Refuge, a Delight?

A Lute which those whom Love has taught to play

Make music on, to soothe the roughest

And lull fond grief asleep? a buried treasure?

A cradle of young thoughts of wingless pleasure;

A violet-shrouded grave of Woe?—I measure

The world of fancies, seeking one like thee,

And find—alas! mine own infirmity.

She met me, Stranger, upon life's rough way,

And lured me towards sweet Death; as Night by Day,

Winter by Spring, or Sorrow by swift Hope,

Led into light, life, peace. An antelope, In the suspended impulse of its lightness.

Were less ethereally light: the brightness

Of her divinest presence trembles through

Her limbs, as underneath a cloud of dew Embodied in the windless Heaven of June

Amid the splendor-wingéd stars, the

Burns, inextinguishably beautiful:

And from her lips, as from a hyacinth full

Of honey-dew, a liquid murmur drops, Killing the sense with passion; sweet as stops

Of planetary music heard in trance.

In her mild lights the starry spirits dance,

The sunbeams of those wells which ever

Under the lightnings of the soul—too deep

For the brief fathom-line of thought or sense.

The glory of her being, issuing thence, Stains the dead, blank, cold air with a warm shade

Of unentangled intermixture, made By Love, of light and motion: one intense

Diffusion, one serene Omnipresence, Whose flowing outlines mingle in their flowing

Around her cheeks and utmost fingers glowing

With the unintermitted blood, which there

Quivers (as in a fleece of snow-like air The crimson pulse of living morning quiver),

Continuously prolonged, and ending never,

Till they are lost, and in that Beauty furled

Which penetrates and clasps and fills the world;

Scarce visible from extreme loveliness.
Warm fragrance seems to fall from her light dress

And her loose hair; and where some heavy tress

The air of her own speed has disentwined, The sweetness seems to satiate the faint wind;

And in the soul a wild odor is felt, Beyond the sense, like fiery dews that

Into the bosom of a frozen bud.—

See where she stands! a mortal shape indued

With love and life and light and deity, And motion which may change but cannot die;

An image of some bright Eternity;

A shadow of some golden dream; a Splendor
Leaving the third sphere piletless a

Leaving the third sphere pilotless; a tender

Reflection of the eternal Moon of Love

Reflection of the eternal Moon of Love Under whose motions life's dull billows move;

A Metaphor of Spring and Youth and Morning;

A Vision like incarnate April, warning, With smiles and tears, Frost the Anatomy

Into his summer grave.

Ah, woe is me!

What have I dared? where am I lifted?

Shall I descend, and perish not? I know That Love makes all things equal: I have heard

By mine own heart this joyous truth averred:

The spirit of the worm beneath the sod In love and worship, blends itself with God.

Spouse! Sister! Angel! Pilot of the Fate

Whose course has been so starless! Oh, too late

Beloved! Oh, too soon adored, by me! For in the fields of immortality

My spirit should at first have worshipped thine,

A divine presence in a place divine; Or should have moved beside it on this earth.

A shadow of that substance, from its birth;

But not as now:—I love thee; yes, I feel That on the fountain of my heart a seal Is set, to keep its waters pure and bright For thee, since in those tears thou hast delight.

We—are we not formed, as notes of music are.

For one another, though dissimilar;

Such difference without discord, as can make

Those sweetest sounds, in which all spirits shake

As trembling leaves in a continuous air?

Thy wisdom speaks in me, and bids me dare

Beacon the rocks on which high hearts are wrecked.

I never was attached to that great sect, Whose doctrine is, that each one should select

Out of the crowd a mistress or a friend, And all the rest, though fair and wise, commend

To cold oblivion, though it is in the code

Of modern morals, and the beaten road Which those poor slaves with weary footsteps tread,

Who travel to their home among the dead

By the broad highway of the world, and

With one chained friend, perhaps a jealous foe,

The dreariest and the longest journey go.

True Love in this differs from gold and clay

That to divide is not to take away.

Love is like understanding, that grows bright,

Gazing on many truths; 'tis like thy light,

Imagination! which from earth and sky, And from the depths of human phantasy,

As from a thousand prisms and mirrors, fills

The Universe with glorious beams, and kills

Error, the worm, with many a sun-like arrow

Of its reverberated lightning. Narrow The heart that loves, the brain that contemplates,

The life that wears, the spirit that creates

One object, and one form, and builds thereby

A sepulchre for its eternity.

Mind from its object differs most in this:

Evil from good; misery from happiness; The baser from the nobler; the impure And frail, from what is clear and must endure.

If you divide suffering and dross, you may

Diminish till it is consumed away;

If you divide pleasure and love and thought,

Each part exceeds the whole; and we know not

How much, while any yet remains unshared, Of pleasure may be gained, of sorrow spared:

This truth is that deep well, whence sages draw

The unenvied light of hope; the eternal law

By which those live, to whom this world of life

Is as a garden ravaged, and whose strife

Is as a garden ravaged, and whose strife. Tills for the promise of a later birth. The wilderness of this Elysian earth.

There was a Being whom my spirit

Met on its visioned wanderings, far aloft,

In the clear golden prime of my youth's

Upon the fairy isles of sunny lawn,

Amid the enchanted mountains, and the caves

Of divine sleep, and on the air-like

Of wonder-level dream, whose tremulous floor

Paved her light steps;—on an imagined shore.

Under the gray beak of some promontory

She met me, robed in such exceeding

she met me, robed in such exceeding

That I beheld her not. In solitudes

Her voice came to me through the whispering woods,

And from the fountains, and the odors deep

Of flowers, which, like lips murmuring in their sleep

Of the sweet kisses which had lulled them there.

Breathed but of her to the enamored air; And from the breezes whether low or loud,

And from the rain of every passing cloud,

And from the singing of the summer birds,

And from all sounds, all silence. In the words

Of antique verse and high romance,—in form,

Sound, color—in whatever checks that Storm

Which with the shattered present chokes the past;

And in that best philosophy, whose taste
Makes this cold common hell, our life, a doom

As glorious as a fiery martyrdom;

Her Spirit was the harmony of truth.—

Then, from the caverns of my dreamy youth

I sprang, as one sandalled with plumes of fire.

And towards the loadstar of my one desire

I flitted, like a dizzy moth, whose flight Is as a dead leaf's in the owlet light,

When it would seek in Hesper's setting sphere

A radiant death, a fiery sepulchre,

As if it were a lamp of earthly flame.—
But She, whom prayers or tears then could not tame,

Passed, like a God throned on a wingéd planet,

Whose burning plumes to tenfold swiftness fan it,

Into the dreary cone of our life's shade;
And as a man with mighty loss dismayed.

I would have followed, though the grave between

Yawned like a gulf whose spectres are unseen:

When a voice said:—"O Thou of hearts the weakest.

The phantom is beside thee whom thou seekest."

Then I—"Where?" the world's echo answered "where!"

And in that silence, and in my despair, I questioned every tongueless wind that thew

Over my tower of mourning, if it knew Whither 'twas fled, this soul out of my soul:

And murmured names and spells which have control

Over the sightless tyrants of our fate; But neither prayer nor verse could dissipate

The night which closed on her; nor uncreate

That world within this Chaos, mine and me,

Of which she was the veiled Divinity, The world I say of thoughts that worshipped her:

And therefore I went forth, with hope and fear

And every gentle passion sick to death, Feeding my course with expectation's breath,

Into the wintry forest of our life;

And struggling through its error with vain strife,

And stumbling in my weakness and my haste.

And half bewildered by new forms, I past Seeking among those untaught foresters If I could find one form resembling hers, In which she might have masked herself from me.

There,—One, whose voice was venomed melody

Sate by a well, under blue nightshade bowers;

The breath of her false mouth was like faint flowers,

Her touch was as electric poison,—flame Out of her looks into my vitals came, And from her living cheeks and bosom flew

A killing air, which pierced like honey-

Into the core of my green heart, and lay Upon its leaves; until, as hair grown gray O'er a young brow, they hid its unblown prime

With ruins of unseasonable time.

In many mortal forms I rashly sought
The shadow of that idol of my thought.
And some were fair—but beauty dies
away:

Others were wise—but honeyed words betray:

And One was true—oh! why not true to me?

Then, as a hunted deer that could not flee,

I turned upon my thoughts, and stood at bay,

Wounded and weak and panting; the cold day

Trembled, for pity of my strife and pain. When, like a noonday dawn, there shone again

Deliverance. One stood on my path who seemed

As like the glorious shape which I had dreamed,

As is the Moon, whose changes ever run Into themselves, to the eternal Sun: The cold chaste Moon, the Queen of

Heaven's bright isles,

Who makes all beautiful on which she

That wandering shrine of soft yet icy flame

Which ever is transformed, yet still the

And warms not but illumines. Young and fair

As the descended Spirit of that sphere, She hid me, as the Moon may hide the night

From its own darkness, until all was bright

Between the Heaven and Earth of my calm mind,

And, as a cloud charioted by the wind, She led me to a cave in that wild place, And sate beside me, with her downward

Illumining my slumbers, like the Moon Waxing and waning o'er Endymion.

And I was laid asleep, spirit and limb, And all my being became bright or dim As the Moon's image in a summer sea,

According as she smiled or frowned on

And there I lay, within a chaste cold bed:

Alas, I then was nor alive nor dead :-For at her silver voice came Death and Life.

Unmindful each of their accustomed

Masked like twin babes, a sister and a brother.

The wandering hopes of one abandoned

And through the cavern without wings they flew,

And cried "Away, he is not of our crew."

I wept, and though it be a dream, I weep.

What storms then shook the ocean of my sleep, Blotting that Moon, whose pale and waning lips

Then shrank as in the sickness of eclipse :-

And how my soul was as a lampless sea, And who was then its Tempest; and when She,

The Planet of that hour, was quenched, what frost

Crept o'er those waters, till from coast to coast

The moving billows of my being fell Into a death of ice, immovable :--

And then—what earthquakes made it gape and split,

The white Moon smiling all the while

These words conceal:-If not, each word would be

The key of stanchless tears. Weep not for me!

At length, into the obscure Forest

The Vision I had sought through grief and shame.

Athwart that wintry wilderness of thorns

Flashed from her motion splendor like the Morn's

And from her presence life was radiated Through the grav earth and branches bare and dead;

So that her way was paved, and roofed above

With flowers as soft as thoughts of budding love;

And music from her respiration spread Like light,—all other sounds were penetrated

By the small, still, sweet spirit of that sound.

So that the savage winds hung mute around:

And odors warm and fresh fell from her

Dissolving the dull cold in the frore air: Soft as an Incarnation of the Sun,

When light is changed to love, this glorious One

Floated into the cavern where I lay, And called my Spirit, and the dreaming

clay Was lifted by the thing that dreamed below

As smoke by fire, and in her beauty's glow

I stood, and felt the dawn of my long

Was penetrating me with living light: I knew it was the Vision veiled from me So many years—that it was Emily.

Twin Spheres of light who rule this passive Earth,

This world of love, this me; and into birth Awaken all its fruits and flowers, and Magnetic might into its central heart; And lift its billows and its mists, and

guide

By everlasting laws, each wind and tide To its fit cloud, and its appointed cave; And lull its storms, each in the craggy grave

Which was its cradle, luring to faint howers

The armies of the rainbow-wingéd showers:

And, as those married lights, which from the towers

Of Heaven look forth and fold the wandering globe

In liquid sleep and splendor, as a robe;
And all their many-mingled influence

If equal, yet unlike, to one sweet end:—So ye, bright regents, with alternate

Govern my sphere of being, night and

day!
Thou, not disdaining even a borrowed

might:
Thou, not eclipsing a remoter light;

And, through the shadow of the seasons three,

From Spring to Autumn's sere maturity,

Light it into the Winter of the tomb,
Where it may ripen to a brighter bloom.
Thou too, O Comet beautiful and fierce,
Who drew the heart of this frail Universe Towards thine own; till, wrecked in that convulsion,

Alternating attraction and repulsion,

Thine went astray and that was rent in twain:

Oh, float into our azure heaven again!
Be there love's folding-star at thy return;
The living Sun will feed thee from its urn

Of golden fire; the Moon will veil her In thy last smiles; adoring Even and Morn

Will worship thee with incense of calm breath

And lights and shadows; as the star of Death

And Birth is worshipped by those sisters wild

Called Hope and Fear—upon the heart are piled

Their offerings,—of this sacrifice divine A world shall be the altar.

Scorn not these flowers of thought, the fading birth

Which from its heart of heartsthat plant puts forth

Whose fruit, made perfect by thy sunny eyes,

Will be as of the trees of Paradise.

The day is come, and thou wilt fly with me.

To whatsoe'er of dull mortality

Is mine, remain a vestal sister still;
To the intense, the deep, the imperish-

Not mine but me, henceforth be thou united

Even as a bride, delighting and delighted.

The hour is come:—the destined Star has risen

Which shall descend upon a vacant prison.

The walls are high, the gates are strong, thick set

The sentinels—but true love never yet
Was thus constrained: it overleaps all fence:

Like lightning, with invisible violence Piercing its continents; like Heaven's free breath,

Which he who grasps can hold not; liker Death,

Who rides upon a thought, and makes his way

Through temple, tower, and palace, and the array

Of arms; more strength has Love than he or they; For it can burst his charnel, and make

For it can burst his charnel, and make free

The limbs in chains, the heart in agony, The soul in dust and chaos.

A ship is floating in the harbor now,
A wind is hovering o'er the mountain's
brow:

There is a path on the sea's azure floor,
No keel has ever ploughed that path

before;
The halcyons brood around the foamless isles; [wiles;

The treacherous Ocean has forsworn its
The merry mariners are bold and free:
Say, my heart's sister, wilt thou sail
with me?

Our bark is as an albatross, whose nest Is a far Eden of the purple East;

And we between her wings will sit, while Night

And Day, and storm, and Calm, pursue their flight,

Our ministers, along the boundless Sea, Treading each other's heels, unheededly. It is an Isle under Ionian skies,

Beautiful as a wreck of Paradise,

And, for the harbors are not safe and good,

This land would have remained a solitude

But for some pastoral people native there,

Who from the Elysian, clear, and golden air

Draw the last spirit of the age of gold, Simple and spirited; innocent and bold. The blue Ægean girds this chosen home, With ever-changing sound and light and foam,

Kissing the sifted sands, and caverns hoar:

And all the winds wandering along the shore

Undulate with the undulating tide:

There are thick woods where sylvan forms abide;

And many a fountain, rivulet, and pond, As clear as elemental diamond,

Or serene morning air; and far beyond, The mossy tracks made by the goats and deer

(Which the rough shepherd treads but once a year),

Pierce into glades, caverns, and bowers, and halls

Built round with ivy, which the water-

Illumining, with sound that never fails
Accompany the noonday nightingales;
And all the place is peopled with sweet

The light clear element which the isle wears

Is heavy with the scent of lemon-flowers, Which floats like mist laden with unseen showers

And falls upon the eyelids like faint sleep;

And from the moss violets and jonquils peep,

And dart their arrowy odor through the brain

Till you might faint with that delicious pain.

And every motion, odor, beam, and tone With that deep music is in unison:

Which is a soul within the soul—they seem

Like echoes of an antenatal dream.—
It is an isle 'twixt Heaven, Air, Earth,
and Sea,

Cradled, and hung in clear tranquility; Bright as that wandering Eden Lucifer. Washed by the soft blue Oceans of young air,

It is a favored place. Famine or Blight, Pestilence, War, and Earthquake, never light

Upon its mountain-peaks; blind vultures, they

Sail onward far upon their fatal way: The winged storms, chanting their thunder-psalm

To other lands, leave azure chasms of

Over this isle, or weep themselves in dew, From which its fields and woods ever renew

Their green and golden immortality.

And from the sea there rise, and from the sky

There fall, clear exhalations, soft and bright,

Veil after veil, each hiding some delight, Which Sun or Moon or zephyr draw aside,

Till the isle's beauty, like a naked bride Glowing at once with love and loveliness,

Blushes and trembles at its own excess: Yet, like a buried lamp, a Soul no less Burns in the heart of this delicious isle,

An atom of th' Eternal, whose own smile Unfolds itself, and may be felt, not seen

O'er the gray rocks, blue waves, and forests green,
Filling their bare and void interstices.—
But the chief marvel of the wilderness

Is a lone dwelling, built by whom or how

None of the rustic island-people know;

Tis not a tower of strength, though with its height

It overtops the woods; but, for delight, Some wise and tender Ocean-King, ere crime

Had been invented, in the world's young prime,

Reared it, a wonder of that simple time. An envy of the isles, a pleasure-house Made sacred to his sister and his spouse. It scarce seems now a wreck of humar

But, as it were Titanic; in the heart
Of Earth having assumed its form, then grown

Out of the mountains, from the living stone.

Lifting itself in caverns light and high;

For all the antique and learned imagery Has been erased, and in the place of it The ivy and the wild-vine interknit

The volumes of their many twining stems;

Parasite flowers illume with dewy gems
The lampless halls, and when they fade,
the sky

Peeps through their winter-woof of tracery

With Moonlight patches, or star atoms keen.

Or fragments of the day's intense serene;—

Working mosaic on their Parian floors. And, day and night, aloof, from the high towers

And terraces, the Earth and Ocean seem To sleep in one another's arms, and dream Of waves, flowers, clouds, woods, rocks, and all that we

Read in their smiles, and call reality.

This isle and house are mine, and I have vowed

Thee to be lady of the solitude.—

And I have fitted up some chambers there

Looking towards the golden Eastern air, And level with the living winds, which flow

Like waves above the living waves below.—

I have sent books and music there, and all

Those instruments with which high spirits call

The future from its cradle, and the past Out of its grave, and make the present last

In thoughts and joys which sleep, but cannot die.

Folded within their own eternity.

Our simple life wants little, and true taste

Hires not the pale drudge Luxury, to waste

The scene it would adorn, and therefore still.

Nature with all her children, haunts the hill.

The ring-dove, in the embowering ivy,

Keeps up her love-lament, and the owls

Round the evening tower, and the young stars glance

Between the quick bats in their twilight dance;

The spotted deer bask in the fresh moonlight

Before our gate, and the slow, silent night

Is measured by the pants of their calm sleep.

Be this our home in life, and when years heap

Their withered hours, like leaves, on our decay,

Let us become the overhanging day, The living soul of this Elysian isle, Conscious, inseparable, one. Meanwhile We two will rise, and sit, and walk together.

Under the roof of blue Ionian weather, And wander in the meadows, or ascend The mossy mountains, where the blue heavens bend

With lightest winds, to touch their paramour;

Or linger, where the pebble-paven shore, Under the quick, faint kisses of the sea Trembles and sparkles as with ecstasy,— Possessing and possest by all that is

Within that calm circumference of bliss, And by each other, till to love and live Be one:—or, at the noontide hour, arrive Where some old cavern hoar seems yet to keep

The moonlight of the expired night asleep.

Through which the awakened day can never peep;

A veil for our seclusion, close as Night's, Where secure sleep may kill thine innocent lights;

Sleep, the fresh dew of languid love, the

Whose drops quench kisses till they burn again.

And we will talk, until thought's melody Become too sweet for utterance, and it

In words, to live again in looks, which dart

With thriling tone into the voiceless heart,

Harmonising silence without a sound.

Our breath shall intermix, our bosoms bound,

And our veins beat together; and our lips

With other eloquence than words, eclipse
The soul that burns between them, and the wells

Which boil under our being's inmost cells.

The fountains of our deepest life, shall be

Confused in passion's golden purity, As mountain-springs under the morning

We shall become the same, we shall be

Spirit within two frames, oh! wherefore two?

One passion in twin-hearts, which grows and grew,

Till like two meteors of expanding flame, Those spheres instinct with it become the same.

Touch, mingle, are transfigured; ever still

Burning, yet ever inconsumable:

In one another's substance finding food, Like flames too pure and light and unimbued

To nourish their bright lives with baser

Which point to Heaven and cannot pass away: One hope within two wills, one will beneath

Two overshadowing minds, one life, one death.

One Heaven, one Hell, one immortality, And one annihilation. Woe is me!

The winged words on which my soul would pierce

Into the height of love's rare Universe. Are chains of lead around its flight of fire-

I pant, I sink, I tremble, I expire!

Weak Verses, go, kneel at your Sovereign's feet,

And say :- "We are the masters of thy slave:

What wouldest thou with us and ours and thine?"

Then call your sisters from Oblivion's cave.

All singing loud: "Love's very pain is sweet,

But its reward is in the world divine Which, if not here, it builds beyond the grave."

So shall ye live when I am there. Then haste

Over the hearts of men, until ye meet Marina, Vanna, Primus, and the rest, And bid them love each other and be blest;

And leave the troop which errs, and which reproves,

And come and be my guest,-for I am 1821. 1821. Love's.

TO NIGHT

SWIFTLY walk o'er the western wave Spirit of Night!

Out of thy misty eastern cave, Where all the long and lone daylight, Thou wovest dreams of joy and fear, Which make thee terrible and dear,— Swift be thy flight!

Wrap thy form in a mantle gray, Star-inwrought! Blind with thine hair the eyes of Day; Kiss her until she be wearied out, Then wander o'er city, and sea, and land Touching all with thine opiate wand-

Come, long sought!

When I arose and saw the dawn, I sighed for thee;

When light rode high, and the dew was gone,

And noon lay heavy on flower and tree, And the weary Day turned to his rest, Lingering like an unloved guest, I sighed for thee.

Thy brother Death came, and cried, Wouldst thou me?

Thy sweet child Sleep, the filmy-eyed, Murmured like a noontide bee, Shall I nestle near thy side? Wouldst thou me?—And I replied, No, not thee!

Death will come when thou art dead Soon, too soon— Sleep will come when thou art fled; Of neither would I ask the boon I ask of thee, belovéd Night-Swift be thine approaching flight, Come soon, soon!

TIME

Unfathomable Sea! whose waves are vears.

Ocean of Time, whose waters of deep

Are brackish with the salt of human tears !

Thou shoreless flood, which in thy ebb and flow

Claspest the limits of mortality!

And sick of prey, yet howling on for

Vomitest thy wrecks on its inhospitable shore;

Treacherous in calm, and terrible in storm,

Who shall put forth on thee, Unfathomable Sea? 1821, 1824

SONNET: POLITICAL GREATNESS

Nor happiness, nor majesty, nor fame, Nor peace, nor strength, nor skill in arms or arts.

Shepherd those herds whom tyranny makes tame:

Verse echoes not one beating of their hearts.

History is but the shadow of their shame,

Art veils her glass, or from the pageant starts

As to oblivion their blind millions fleet,

Staining that Heaven with obscene imagery

Of their own likeness. What are numbers knit

By force or custom? Man who man would be,

Must rule the empire of himself; in it Must be supreme, establishing his throne

On vanquished will, quelling the anarchy
Of hopes and fears, being himself alone.

MUTABILITY

The flower that smiles to-day
To-morrow dies;
All that we wish to stay
Tempts and then flies.
What is this world's delight?
Lightning that mocks the night,
Brief even as bright.

Virtue, how frail it is!
Friendship how rare!
Love, how it sells poor bliss
For proud despair!
But we, though soon they fall,
Survive their joy, and all
Which ours we call.

Whilst skies are blue and bright,
Whilst flowers are gay,
Whilst eyes that change ere night
Make glad the day;
Whilst yet the calm hours creep,
Dream thou—and from thy sleep
Then wake to weep.

A LAMENT

O world! O life! O time! On whose last steps I climb

Trembling at that where I had stood before;

When will return the glory of your prime?

No more—Oh, never more!

Out of the day and night A joy has taken flight;

Fresh spring, and summer, and winter hoar,

Move my faint heart with grief, but with delight

No more—Oh, never more! 1821. 1824.

MUSIC, when soft voices die, Vibrates in the memory— Odors, when sweet violets sicken, Live within the sense they quicken,

Rose leaves, when the rose is dead,
Are heaped for the belovéd's bed;
And so thy thoughts, when thou art gone

Love itself shall slumber on.

ADONAIS

AN ELEGY ON THE DEATH OF JOHN KEATS, AUTHOR OF ENDYMION, HYPERION, ETC.

'Αστήρ πρὶν μεν έλαμπες ἐνὶ ζωοϊσιν 'Εῷος' Νίν δε θανων λάμπεις Έσπερος ἐν φθιμένοις. PLATO.

I WEEP for Adonais—he is dead!
Oh weep for Adonais! though our tears
Thaw not the frost which binds so dear
a head!

And thou, sad Hour, selected from all years

To mourn our loss, rouse thy obscure compeers,

And teach them thine own sorrow! Say:
"With me

Died Adonais; till the Future dares Forget the Past, his fate and fame shall

An echo and a light unto eternity!"

Where wert thou, mighty Mother, when he lay,

When thy Son lay, pierced by the shaft which flies

In darkness? where was lorn Urania When Adonais died? With veiled eyes, 'Mid listening Echoes, in her Paradise She sate, while one, with soft enamored breath.

Rekindled all the fading melodies

With which, like flowers that mock the corse beneath,

He had adorned and hid the coming bulk of death.

Oh weep for Adonais—he is dead!

Wake, melancholy Mother, wake and weep!

Yet wherefore? Quench within their burning bed

Thy fiery tears, and let thy lov'd heart keep,

Like his, a mute and uncomplaining sleep;

For he is gone, where all things wise and fair

Descend;—oh, dream not that the amorous Deep

Will yet restore him to the vital air; Death feeds on his mute voice, and laughs at our despair.

Most musical of mourners, weep again Lament anew, Urania!—He died, Who was the Sire of an immortal strain, Blind, old, and lonely, when his country's pride,

The priest, the slave, and the liberticide,

Trampled and mocked with many a loathed rite

Of lust and blood; he went, unterrified, Into the gulf of death; but his clear Sprite

Yet reigns o'er earth; the third among the sons of light.

Most musical of mourners, weep anew!
Not all to that bright station dared to climb;

And happier they their happiness who knew,

Whose tapers yet burn through that night of time

In which suns perished; others more sublime.

Struck by the envious wrath of man or God.

Have sunk, extinct in their refulgent prime;

And some yet live, treading the thorny road.

Which leads, through toil and hate, to Fame's serene abode.

But now, thy youngest, dearest one has perished,

The nursling of thy widowhood, who grew,

Like a pale flower by some sad maiden cherished,

And fed with true love tears, instead of dew;

Most musical of mourners, weep anew!
Thy extreme hope, the loveliest and the last.

The bloom, whose petals nipt before they blew

Died on the promise of the fruit, is waste;

The broken lily lies—the storm is overpast.

To that high Capital, where kingly Death Keeps his pale court in beauty and decay,

He came; and bought, with price of purest breath,

A grave among the eternal. — Come away!

Haste, while the vault of blue Italian

Is yet his fitting charnel-roof! while still He lies, as if in dewy sleep he lay:

Awake him not! surely he takes his fill Of deep and liquid rest, forgetful of all ill.

He will awake no more, oh, never

Within the twilight chamber spreads apace,

The shadow of white Death, and at the door

Invisible Corruption waits to trace

His extreme way to her dim dwellingplace;

The eternal Hunger sits, but pity and awe

Soothe her pale rage, nor dares she to deface

So fair a prey, till darkness, and the law Of change shall o'er his sleep the mortal curtain draw.

Oh weep for Adonais!—The quick Dreams,

The passion-wingéd Ministers of thought, Who were his flocks, whom near the living streams

Of his young spirit he fed, and whom he taught

The love which was its music, wander not,—

Wander no more, from kindling brain to

But droop there, whence they sprung; and mourn their lot

Round the cold heart, where, after their sweet pain.

They ne'er will gather strength, or find

And one with trembling hands clasps his cold head.

And fans him with her moonlight wings, and cries:

"Our love, our hope, our sorrow, is not dead:

See, on the silken fringe of his faint eves.

Like dew upon a sleeping flower, there

A tear some Dream has loosened from his brain.

Lost Angel of a ruined Paradise!

She knew not 'twas her own: as with no

She faded, like a cloud which had outwept its rain.

One from a lucid urn of starry dew Washed his light limbs as if embalming them:

Another clipt her profuse locks, and threw

The wreath upon him, like an anadem. Which frozen tears instead of pearls begem;

Another in her wilful grief would

Her bow and winged reeds, as if to

A greater loss with one which was more weak:

And dull the barbed fire against his frozen cheek.

Another Splendor on his mouth alit. That mouth, whence it was wont to draw the breath

Which gave it strength to pierce the guarded wit,

And pass into the panting heart beneath

With lightning and with music: the damp death

Quenched its caress upon his icy lips; And, as a dying meteor stains a wreath Of moonlight vapor, which the cold night clips.

It flushed through his pale limbs, and passed to its eclipse.

And others came . . . Desires and Adorations,

Winged Persuasions and veiled Destinies.

Splendors and Glooms, and glimmering Incarnations

Of hopes and fears, and twilight Phantasies;

And Sorrow, with her family of Sighs, And Pleasure, blind with tears, led by the gleam

Of her own dying smile instead of eyes, Came in slow pomp;—the moving pomp might seem

Like pageantry of mist on an autumnal stream.

All he had loved, and moulded into thought.

From shape, and hue, and odor, and sweet sound.

Lamented Adonais. Morning sought Her eastern watchtower, and her hair unbound. Wet with the tears which should adorn the ground,

Dimmed the aërial eyes that kindle day; Afar the melancholy thunder moaned, Pale Ocean in unquiet slumber lay,

And the wild winds flew round, sobbing in their dismay.

Lost Echo sits amid the voiceless mountains.

And feeds her grief with his remembered

And will no more reply to winds or fountains.

Or amorous birds perched on the young green spray, Or herdsman's horn, or bell at closing day: Since she can mimic not his lips, more

dear

Than those for whose disdain she pined

Into a shadow of all sounds:—a drear Murmur, between their songs, is all the woodmen hear.

Grief made the young Spring wild, and she threw down

Her kindling buds, as if she Autumn were,

Or they dead leaves; since her delight is flown

For whom should she have waked the sullen year?

To Phœbus was not Hyacinth so dear

Nor to himself Narcissus, as to both

Thou Adonais: wan they stand and sere

Amid the faint companions of their youth,

With dew all turned to tears; odor, to sighing ruth.

Thy spirit's sister, the lorn nightingale, Mourns not her mate with such melodious pain;

Not so the eagle, who like thee could scale

Heaven, and could nourish in the sun's domain

domain
Her mighty youth with morning, doth complain,

Soaring and screaming round her empty

As Albion wails for thee; the curse of Cain

Light on his head who pierced thy innocent breast

And scared the angel soul that was its earthly guest!

Ah woe is me! Winter is come and

But grief returns with the revolving year;

The airs and streams renew their joyous tone:

The ants, the bees, the swallows reappear;

Fresh leaves and flowers deck the dead Seasons' bier;

The amorous birds now pair in every brake,

And build their mossy homes in field and brere:

And the green lizard, and the golden snake,

Like unimprisoned flames, out of their trance awake.

Through wood and stream and field and hill and Ocean

A quickening life from the Earth's heart has burst

As it has ever done, with change and motion,

From the great morning of the world when first

God dawned on Chaos; in its stream immersed

The lamps of Heaven flash with a softer light:

All baser things pant with life's sacred thirst;

Diffuse themselves; and spend in love's delight,

The beauty and the joy of their renewed might.

The leprous corpse touched by this spirit tender

Exhales itself in flowers of gentle breath; Like incarnations of the stars, when splendor

Is changed to fragrance, they illumine death

And mock the merry worm that wakes beneath;

Nought we know, dies. Shall that alone which knows

Be as a sword consumed before the sheath

By sightless lightning?—th' intense atom glows

A moment, then is quenched in a most cold repose.

Alas! that all we loved of him should be But for our grief, as if it had not been,

And grief itself be mortal! Woe is me! Whence are we, and why are we? of what scene

The actors or spectators? Great and mean

Meet massed in death, who lends what life must borrow.

As long as skies are blue, and fields are green,

Evening must usher night, night urge the morrow,

Month follow month with woe, and year wake year to sorrow.

He will awake no more, oh, never more! "Wake thou," cried Misery, "child-less Mother, rise

Out of thy sleep, and slake, in thy heart's core,

A wound more fierce than his with tears and sighs."

And all the Dreams that watched Urania's eyes,

And all the Echoes whom their sister's song

Had held in holy silence, cried:
"Arise!"

Swift as a Thought by the snake Memory stung,

From her ambrosial rest the fading Splendor sprung.

She rose like an autumnal Night, that springs

Out of the East, and follows wild and drear

The golden Day, which, on eternal wings,

Even as a ghost abandoning a bier,

Had left the Earth a corpse. Sorrow and fear

So struck, so roused, so rapt Urania; So saddened round her like an atmosphere

Of stormy mist; so swept her on her way

Even to the mournful place where Adonais lay.

Out of her secret Paradise she sped, Through camps and cities rough with stone, and steel,

And human hearts, which to her airy tread

tread

Yielding not, wounded the invisible Palms of her tender feet where'er they fell:

And barbéd tongues, and thoughts more sharp than they

Rent the soft Form they never could repel,

Whose sacred blood, like the young tears of May,

Paved with eternal flowers that undeserving way.

In the death chamber for a moment Death

Shamed by the presence of that living Might

Blushed to annihilation, and the breath Revisited those lips, and life's pale light Flashed through those limbs, so late her dear delight.

"Leave me not wild and drear and comfortless,

As silent lightning leaves the starless night!

Leave me not!" cried Urania: her

Roused Death: Death rose and smiled, and met her vain caress.

"Stay yet awhile! speak to me once again:

Kiss me, so long but as a kiss may live; And in my heartless breast and burning brain

That word, that kiss, shall all thoughts else survive,

With food of saddest memory kept alive, Now thou art dead, as if it were a part Of thee, my Adonais! I would give All that I am to be as thou now art!
But I am chained to Time, and cannot thence depart!

"O gentle child, beautiful as thou wert, Why didst thou leave the trodden paths of men

Too soon, and with weak hands though mighty heart

Dare the unpastured dragon in his den? Defenceless as thou wert, oh where was Wisdom the mirrored shield, or scorn the spear?

Or hadst thou waited the full cycle, when

The mouston of life's weste had fled

The monsters of life's waste had fled from thee like deer.

"The herded wolves, bold only to pursue;

The obscene ravens, clamorous o'er the dead;

The vultures to the conqueror's banner true

Who feed where Desolation first has fed, And whose wings rain contagion;—how they fled,

When like Apollo, from his golden bow, The Pythian of the age one arrow sped And smiled!—The spoilers tempt no second blow,

They fawn on the proud feet that spurn them lying low.

"The sun comes forth, and many reptiles spawn;

He sets, and each ephemeral insect then Is gathered into death without a dawn, And the immortal stars awake again; So is it in the world of living men:

A godlike mind soars forth, in its delight Making earth bare and veiling heaven, and when

It sinks, the swarms that dimmed or shared its light

Leave to its kindred lamps the spirit's awful night."

Thus ceased she: and the mountain shepherds came,

Their garlands sere, their magic mantles rent;

The Pilgrim of Eternity, whose fame
Over his living head like Heaven is bent,
An early but enduring monument

An early but enduring monument, Came, veiling all the lightnings of his song In sorrow; from her wilds Ierne sent The sweetest lyrist of her saddest wrong, And love taught grief to fall like music from his tongue.

Midst others of less note, came one frail Form.

A phantom among men; companionless As the last cloud of an expiring storm Whose thunder is its knell; he, as I guess.

Had gazed on Nature's naked loveliness, Actaon-like, and now he fled astray With feeble steps o'er the world's wilderness.

And his own thoughts, along that rugged

Pursued, like raging hounds, their father and their prey.

A pardlike Spirit beautiful and swift— A Love in desolation masked;—a Power Girt round with weakness;—it can scarce uplift

The weight of the superincumbent hour; It is a dying lamp, a falling shower,

A breaking billow;—even whilst we speak

Is it not broken? On the withering flower

The killing sun smiles brightly: on a cheek

The life can burn in blood, even while the heart may break.

His head was bound with pansies overblown,

And faded violets, white, and pied, and blue:

And a light spear topped with a cypress cone,

Round whose rude shaft dark ivy tresses grew

Yet dripping with the forest's noonday dew,

Vibrated, as the ever-beating heart Shook the weak hand that grasped it;

He came the last, neglected and apart;
A herd-abandoned deer struck by the hunter's dart.

All stood aloof, and at his partial moan Smiled through their tears; well knew that gentle band

Who in another's fate now wept his own; As in the accents of an unknown land,

He sung new sorrow; sad Urania scanned

The Stranger's mien, and murmured: "Who art thou?"

He answered not, but with a sudden hand

Made bare his branded and ensanguined brow,

Which was like Cain's or Christ's—oh, that it should be so!

What softer voice is hushed over the dead?

Athwart what brow is that dark mantle thrown?

What form leans sadly o'er the white deathbed,

In mockery of monumental stone,

The heavy heart heaving without a moan?

If it be He, who, gentlest of the wise, Taught, soothed, loved, honored the departed one;

Let me not vex, with inharmonious sighs

The silence of that heart's accepted sacrifice.

Our Adonais has drunk poison—oh!
What deaf and viperous murderer could

Life's early cup with such a draught of woe?

The nameless worm would now itself disown:

It felt, yet could escape the magic tone Whose prelude held all envy, hate, and

But what was howling in one breast alone,

Silent with expectation of the song,

Whose master's hand is cold, whose silver lyre unstrung.

Live thou, whose infamy is not thy fame!

Live! fear no heavier chastisement from me,

Thou noteless blot on a remembered name!

But be thyself, and know thyself to be! And ever at thy season be thou free

To spill the venom when thy fangs o'erflow:

Remorse and Self-contempt shall cling to thee:

Hot Shame shall burn upon thy secret

And like a beaten hound tremble thou shalt—as now.1

Nor let us weep that our delight is fled Far from these carrion kites that scream below:

He wakes or sleeps with the enduring dead:

Thou canst not soar where he is sitting 1)()W.---

Dust to the dust! but the pure spirit shall flow

Back to the burning fountain whence it came.

A portion of the Eternal, which must Plow

Through time and change, unquenchably the same.

Whilst thy cold embers choke the sordid hearth of shame.

Peace, peace! he is not dead, he doth not sleep-

He hath awakened from the dream of life-

'Tis we, who lost in stormy visions, keep With phantoms an unprofitable strife,

And in mad trance, strike with our spirit's knife

Invulnerable nothings.—We decay Like corpses in a charnel; fear and grief Convulse us and consume us day by day, And cold hopes swarm like worms within our living clay.

He has outsoared the shadow of our night;

Envy and calumny and hate and pain. And that unrest which men miscall delight.

Can touch him not and torture not again; From the contagion of the world's slow

He is secure, and now can never mourn A heart grown cold, a head grown gray in vain:

Nor, when the spirit's self has ceased to burn.

With sparkless ashes load an unlamented

He lives, he wakes—'tis Death is dead, not he:

Mourn not for Adonais.—Thou young Dawn thee

Turn all thy dew to splendor, for from The spirit thou lamentest is not gone; Ye caverns and ye forests, cease to moan! Cease ye faint flowers and fountains, and thou Air

Which like a mourning veil thy scarf hadst thrown

O'er the abandoned Earth, now leave it

Even to the joyous stars which smile on its despair!

He is made one with Nature: there is heard

His voice in all her music, from the moan Of thunder to the song of night's sweet

He is a presence to be felt and known In darkness and in light, from herb and stone,

Spreading itself where'er that Power may move

Which has withdrawn his being to its own:

Which wields the world with never wearied love.

Sustains it from beneath, and kindles it above.

He is a portion of the loveliness Which once he made more lovely: he doth bear His part, while the one Spirit's plastic stress

Sweeps through the dull dense world. compelling there

All new successions to the forms they wear;

Torturing th' unwilling dross checks its flight

To its own likeness, as each mass may bear:

And bursting in its beauty and its might From trees and beasts and men into the Heaven's light.

The splendors of the firmament of time May be eclipsed, but are extinguished not;

Like stars to their appointed height they climb

And death is a low mist which cannot blot

The brightness it may veil. When lofty thought

Lifts a young heart above its mortal lair, And love and life contend in it, for what Shall be its earthly doom, the dead live there

And move like winds of light on dark and stormy air.

The inheritors of unfulfilled renown Rose from their thrones, built beyond mortal thought.

Far in the Unapparent. Chatterton

Rose pale, his solemn agony had not Yet faded from him; Sidney, as he fought

And as he fell and as he lived and loved Sublimely mild, a Spirit without spot, Arose; and Lucan, by his death approved:

Oblivion as they rose shrank like a thing reproved.

And many more, whose names on Earth are dark

But whose transmitted effluence cannot die

So long as fire outlives the parent spark, Rose, robed in dazzling immortality. "Thou art become as one of us," they

cry,

"It was for thee you kingless sphere has long

Swung blind in unascended majesty, Silent alone amid an Heaven of Song.

Assume thy wingéd throne, thou Vesper of our throng!"

Who mourns for Adonais? Oh come forth

Fond wretch! and know thyself and him aright.

Clasp with thy panting soul the pendulous Earth;

As from a centre, dart thy spirit's light Beyond all worlds, until its spacious might

Satiate the void circumference: then shrink

Even to a point within our day and

night;
And keep thy heart light lest it make thee sink

When hope has kindled hope, and lured thee to the brink.

Or go to Rome, which is the sepulchre Oh! not of him, but of our joy: 'tis nought

That ages, empires, and religions there Lie buried in the ravage they have wrought:

For such as he can lend,—they borrow not

Glory from those who made the world their prey;

And he is gathered to the kings of thought

Who waged contention with their time's decay,

And of the past are all that cannot pass away.

Go thou to Rome,—at once the Paradise, The grave, the city, and the wilderness; And where its wrecks like shattered mountains rise,

And flowering weeds, and fragrant copses dress

The bones of Desolation's nakedness,

Pass, till the Spirit of the spot shall lead Thy footsteps to a slope of green access Where, like an infant's smile, over the dead

A light of laughing flowers along the grass is spread.

And gray walls moulder round, on which dull Time

Feeds, like slow fire upon a hoary brand; And one keen pyramid with wedge sublime,

Pavilioning the dust of him who planned This refuge for his memory, doth stand Like flame transformed to marble; and beneath.

A field is spread, on which a newer band Have pitched in Heaven's smile their camp of death

Welcoming him we lose with scarce extinguished breath.

Here pause: these graves are all too young as yet

To have outgrown the sorrow which consigned

Its charge to each; and if the seal is set, Here, on one fountain of a mourning mind,

Break it not thou! too surely shalt thou find [home, Thine own well full, if thou returnest

Of tears and gall. From the world's bitter wind

Seek shelter in the shadow of the tomb. What Adonais is, why fear we to become?

The One remains, the many change and pass;

Heaven's light forever shines, Earth's shadows fly;

Life, like a dome of many-colored glass, Stains the white radiance of Eternity, Until Death tramples it to fragments.

—Die,
If thou wouldst be with that which thou dost seek!

Follow where all is fled!—Rome's azure sky, fare weak

Flowers, ruins, statues, music, words, The glory they transfuse with fitting truth to speak.

Why linger, why turn back, why shrink, my Heart?

Thy hopes are gone before: from all things here

They have departed; thou shouldst now depart!

A light is past from the revolving year, And man, and woman; and what still is dear

Attracts to crush, repels to make thee wither.

The soft sky smiles,—the low wind whispers near;

'Tis Adonais calls! oh, hasten thither, No more let Life divide what Death can join together.

That Light whose smile kindles the Universe,

That Beauty in which all things work and move,

That Benediction which the eclipsing Curse

Of birth can quench not, that sustaining Love

Which through the web of being blindly wove

By man and beast and earth and air and sea,

Burns bright or dim, as each are mirrors of The fire for which all thirst; now beams on me,

Consuming the last clouds of cold mortality.

The breath whose might I have invoked in song

Descends on me; my spirit's bark is driven,

Far from the shore, far from the trembling throng

Whose sails were never to the tempest given;

The massy earth and spheréd skies are riven!

I am borne darkly, fearfully, afar; Whilst burning through the inmost veil of Heaven,

The soul of Adonais, like a star,
Beacons from the abode where the Eternal are. 1821, 1821.

LIFE MAY CHANGE, BUT IT MAY FLY NOT

LIFE may change, but it may fly not; Hope may vanish, but can die not; Truth be veiled, but still it burneth; Love repulsed,—but it returneth! Yet were life a charnel where Hope lay coffined with Despair; Yet were truth a sacred lie, Love were lust—If Liberty

Lent not life its soul of light, Hope its iris of delight, Truth its prophet's robe to wear, Love its power to give and bear. From Hellas, 1821.

WORLDS ON WORLDS ARE ROLL-ING EVER

1822.

Worlds on worlds are rolling ever From creation to decay,

Like the bubbles on a river Sparkling, bursting, borne away.

But they are still immortal
Who, through birth's orient portal

And death's dark chasm hurrying to and fro,

Clothe their unceasing flight In the brief dust and light Gathered around their chariots as the

New shapes they still may weave, New gods, new laws receive, Bright or dim are they as the robes they last On Death's bare ribs had cast.

A power from the unknown God, A Promethean conqueror came;

Like a triumphal path he trod
The thorns of death and shame.
A mortal shape to him
Was like the vapor dim

Which the orient planet animates with light:

Hell, Sin, and Slavery came, Like bloodhounds mild and tame, Nor preyed, until their Lord had taken flight:

The moon of Mahomet Arose, and it shall set:

While blazoned as on heaven's immortal noon

The cross leads generations on.

Swift as the radiant shapes of sleep From one whose dreams are Paradise Fly, when the fond wretch wakes to

And day peers forth with her blank eyes;

So fleet, so faint, so fair, The Powers of earth and air Fled from the folding star of Bethlehem!

Apollo, Pan, and Love, And even Olympian Jove Grew weak, for killing Truth had glared on them:

Our hills and seas and streams

Dispeopled of their dreams, Their waters turned to blood, their dew to tears,

Wailed for the golden years. From Hellus, 1821. 1822.

SONGS FROM HELLAS

DARKNESS has dawned in the East On the noon of time: The death-birds descend to their feast. From the hungry clime. Let Freedom and Peace flee far To a sunnier strand, And follow Love's folding star To the Evening land!

The young moon has fed Her exhausted horn. With the sunset's fire: The weak day is dead. But the night is not born; And, like leveliness panting with wild

While it trembles with fear and de-Hesperus flies from awakening night, And pants in its beauty and speed with

Fast flashing, soft, and bright.

Thou beacon of love! thou lamp of the Guide us far, far away,

To climes where now veiled by the ardor of day Thou art hidden

From waves on which weary noon

Faints in her summer swoon, Between Kingless continents sinless as Eden. Around mountains and islands invio-

Prankt on the sapphire sea.

Through the sunset of hope, Like the shapes of a dream, What Paradise islands of glory gleam! Beneath Heaven's cope,

Their shadows more clear float by -The sound of their oceans, the light of their sky,

The music and fragrance their solitudes breathe

Burst, like morning on dream, or like Heaven on death

Through the walls of our prison: And Greece, which was dead, is arisen! 1821. 1822.

THE WORLD'S GREAT AGE BEGINS ANEW

THE world's great age begins anew, The golden years return, The earth doth like a snake renew Her winter weeds outworn: Heaven smiles, and faiths and empires

Like wrecks of a dissolving dream.

A brighter Hellas rears its mountains From waves serener far: A new Peneus rolls his fountains

Against the morning star. Where fairer Tempes bloom, there sleep Young Cyclads on a sunnier deep.

A loftier Argo cleaves the main, Fraught with a later prize: Another Orpheus sings again, And loves, and weeps, and dies. A new Ulysses leaves once more Calvoso for his native shore.

Oh, write no more the tale of Troy, If earth Death's scroll must be! Nor mix with Laian rage the joy Which dawns upon the free: Although a subtler Sphinx renew Riddles of death Thebes never knew.

Another Athens shall arise. And to remoter time Bequeath, like sunset to the skies, The splendor of its prime; And leave, if nought so bright may live, All earth can take or Heaven can give.

Saturn and Love their long repose Shall burst, more bright and good Than all who fell, than One who rose, Than many unsubdued: 1

1 Saturn and Love were among the deities of a real or imaginary state of innocence and happireal or imaginary state of innocence and happiness. All those who fell, or the tools of Greece, Asia, and Egypt; the One who rose, or Jesus Christ, at whose appearance the idols of the Pagan World were americed of their worship; and the many unsubdued, or the monstrous objects in the site of the interest of the interest. jects of the idolatry of China, India, the Antaretic islands, and the native tribes of America. certainly have reigned over the understandings of men in conjunction or in succession, during periods in which all we know of evil has been in a state of portentous, and, until the revival of learning and the arts, perpetually increasing activity. (From Shelley's Note.)

Not gold, not blood, their altar dowers, But votive tears and symbol flowers.

The cease! must hate and death return?
Cease! must men kill and die?
Cease! drain not to its dregs the urn
Of bitter prophecy.
The world is weary of the past,
Oh, might it die or rest at last!
Final Chorus from Hellas.

TO-MORROW

Where art thou, beloved To-morrow?
When young and old and strong and weak,

Rich and poor, through joy and sorrow, Thy sweet smiles we ever seek,— In thy place—ah! well-a-day! We find the thing we fled—To-day. IS21. 1824.

TO-

One word is too often profaned
For me to profane it,
One feeling too falsely disdained
For thee to disdain it.
One hope is too like despair
For prudence to smother,
And pity from thee more dear
Than that from another.

I can give not what men call love,
But wilt thou accept not
The worship the heart lifts above
And the Heavens reject not.
The desire of the moth for the star,
Of the night for the morrow,
The devotion to something afar
From the sphere of our sorrow?
1821. 1834.

WITH A GUITAR, TO JANE

ARIEL to Miranda.—Take
This slave of Music, for the sake
Of him who is the slave of thee,
And teach it all the harmony
In which thou canst, and only thou,
Make the delighted spirit glow,
Till joy denies itself again,
And, too intense, is turned to pain;
For by permission and command
Of thine own Prince Ferdinand,
Poor Ariel sends this silent token
Of more than ever can be spoken;
Your guardian spirit, Ariel, who,

From life to life, must still pursue Your happiness ;—for thus alone Can Ariel ever find his own. From Prospero's enchanted cell. As the mighty verses tell, To the throne of Naples, he Lit you o'er the trackless sea. Flitting on, your prow before, Like a living meteor. When you die, the silent Moon, In her interlunar swoon, Is not sadder in her cell Than deserted Ariel. When you live again on earth. Like an unseen star of birth, Ariel guides you o'er the sea Of life from your nativity. Many changes have been run. Since Ferdinand and you begun Your course of love, and Ariel still Has tracked your steps, and served your will;

Now, in humbler, happier lot,
This is all remembered not;
And now, alas! the poor sprite is Imprisoned, for some fault of his,
In a body like a grave;—
From you he only dares to crave,
For his service and his sorrow,
A smile to-day, a song to-morrow.

The artist who this idol wrought. To echo all harmonious thought, Felled a tree, while on the steep The woods were in their winter sleep, Rocked in that repose divine On the wind-swept Apennine; And dreaming, some of Autumn past, And some of Spring approaching fast, And some of April buds and showers, And some of songs in July bowers, And all of love; and so this tree,-Oh that such our death may be !-Died in sleep, and felt no pain, To live in happier form again: From which, beneath Heaven's fairest star,

The artist wrought this loved Guitar, And taught it justly to reply, To all who question skilfully, In language gentle as thine own; Whispering in enamored tone Sweet oracles of woods and dells, And summer winds in sylvan cells; For it had learnt all harmonies Of the plains and of the skies, Of the forests and the mountains, And the many-voiced fountains; The clearest echoes of the hills,

The softest notes of falling rills, The melodies of birds and bees, The murmuring of summer seas, And pattering rain, and breathing dew And airs of evening; and it knew That seldom-heard mysterious sound, Which, driven on its diurnal round, As it floats through boundless day, Our world enkindles on its way-All this it knows, but will not tell To those who cannot question well The spirit that inhabits it: t talks according to the wit If its companions; and no more s heard than has been felt before. 3v those who tempt it to betrav These secrets of an elder day But sweetly as its answers will Flatter hands of perfect skill, It keeps its highest, holiest tone For our beloved Jane alone. 1822. 1832-1833.

LINES: "WHEN THE LAMP IS SHATTERED"

When the lamp is shattered
The light in the dust lies dead—
When the cloud is scattered
The rainbow's glory is shed.
When the lute is broken,
Sweet tones are remembered not;
When the lips have spoken,
Loved accents are soon forgot.

As music and splendor
Survive not the lamp and the lute,
The heart's echoes render
No song when the spirit is mute:
No song but sad dirges,
Like the wind through a ruined cell,
Or the mournful surges
That ring the dead seaman's knell.

When hearts have once mingled
Love first leaves the well-built nest,
The weak one is singled
To endure what it once possessed.
O Love! who bewailest
The frailty of all things here,
Why choose you the frailest
For your cradle, your home, and your bier?

bier?

Its passions will rock thee
As the storms rock the ravens on high:
Bright reason will mock thee,
Like the sun from a wintry sky.
From thy nest every rafter
Will rot, and thine eagle home
Leave thee naked to laughter,
When leaves fall and cold winds come.

1822. 1824.

SONG FROM CHARLES THE FIRST

A widow bird sate mourning for her love
Upon a wintry bough;

The freezing stream below.

There was no leaf upon the forest bare. No flower upon the ground, And little motion in the air

Except the mill-wheel's sound.

1822. 1834.

A DIRGE

Rough wind, that moanest loud
Grief too sad for song;
Wild wind, when sullen cloud
Knells all the night long;
Sad storm, whose tears are vain,
Bare woods, whose branches strain,
Deep caves and dreary main,
Wail, for the world's wrong!

IMITATION OF SPENSER¹

Now Morning from her orient chamber came.

And her first footsteps touch'd a verdant

Crowning its lawny crest with amber flame,

Silv'ring the untainted gushes of its rill; Which, pure from mossy beds, did down

And after parting beds of simple flowers, By many streams a little lake did fill, Which round its marge reflected woven bowers,

And, in its middle space, a sky that never lowers.

There the king-fisher saw his plumage bright

Vieing with fish of brilliant dye below; Whose silken fins, and golden scales light

Cast upward, through the waves, a ruby glow:

There saw the swan his neck of arched

And oar'd himself along with majesty; Sparkled his jetty eyes; his feet did show

Beneath the waves like Afric's ebony. And on his back a fay reclined voluptuously.

Ah! could I tell the wonders of an isle That in that fairest lake had placed been.

I could e'en Dido of her grief beguile; Or rob from aged Lear his bitter teen: For sure so fair a place was never seen, Of all that ever charm'd romantic eye:

1 "It was the Fuerie Queene that awakened his genius. In Spenser's fairy-land he was enchanted, breathed in a new world, and became another being; till, enamored of the stanza, he attempted to imitate it, and succeeded. ... This, his earliest attempt, the 'Imitation of Spenser', is in his first volume of poems." (Quoted by Colvin from the Houghton MSS.)

It seem'd an emerald in the silver sheen Of the bright waters; or as when on high.

Through clouds of fleecy white, laughs the cerulean sky.

And all around it dipp'd luxuriously Slopings of verdure through the glossy tide,

Which, as it were in gentle amity, Rippled delighted up the flowery side; As if to glean the ruddy tears, it tried, Which fell profusely from the rose-tree stem!

Haply it was the workings of its pride, In strife to throw upon the shore a gem Outvieing all the buds in Flora's diadem. 1813 or 1814. 1817.1

TO SOLITUDE

O SOLITUDE! if I must with thee dwell, Let it not be among the jumbled heap Of murky buildings; climb with me the steep.-

Nature's observatory—whence the dell, Its flowery slopes, its river's crystal swell May seem a span; let me thy vigils keep 'Mongst boughs pavilion'd where the deer's swift leap

Startles the wild bee from the fox-glove

But though I'll gladly trace these scenes with thee,

Yet the sweet converse of an innocent mind.

Whose words are images of thoughts refin'd,

Is my soul's pleasure; and it sure must be Almost the highest bliss of human-kind, When to thy haunts two kindred spirits ? 1815. May 5, 1816.2

1 The dates for Keats' poems are made up from Sidney Colvin's careful study of the order of composition of the poems, in his Life of Keats, and from H. Buxton Forman's excellent notes in his edition of Keats' Works.

2 In Leigh Hunt's Examiner. Probably the first lines of Keats ever printed.

HOW MANY BARDS GILD THE LAPSES OF TIME

How many bards gild the lapses of time!
A few of them have ever been the food
Of my delighted fancy,—I could brood
Over their beauties, earthly, or sublime:
And often, when I sit me down to rhyme,
These will in throngs before my mind
intrude:

But no confusion, no disturbance rude Do they occasion; 'tis a pleasing chime. So the unnumber'd sounds that evening store;

The songs of birds—the whisp*ring of the leaves—

The voice of waters—the great bell that heaves

With solemn sound,—and thousand others more,

That distance of recognizance bereaves, Make pleasing music, and not wild uproar. 21816. 1817.

KEEN, FITFUL GUSTS ARE WHIS-PERING HERE AND THERE

KEEN, fitful gusts are whispering here and there

Among the bushes half leafless, and dry;
The stars look very cold about the sky,
And I have many miles on foot to fare.
Yet feel I little of the cool bleak air,
Or of the dead leaves rustling drearily,
Or of those silver lamps that burn on high.

Or of the distance from home's pleasant

lair:

For I am brimful of the friendliness
That in a little cottage I have found;
Of fair-hair'd Milton's eloquent distress,
And all his love for gentle Lycid drown'd;
Of lovely Laura in her light green dress,
And faithful Petrarch gloriously crown'd. ?1816. 1817.

TO ONE WHO HAS BEEN LONG IN CITY PENT

To one who has been long in city pent 'Tis very sweet to look into the fair And open face of heaven,—to breathe a prayer

Full in the smile of the blue firmament. Who is more happy, when, with heart's content,

Fatigued he sinks into some pleasant lair Of wavy grass, and reads a debonair And gentle tale of love and languishment? Returning home at evening, with an ear Catching the notes of Philomel,—an eye Watching the sailing cloudlet's bright career,

He mourns that day so soon has glided by:

E'en like the passage of an angel's tear That falls through the clear ether silently.

ON FIRST LOOKING INTO CHAP-MAN'S HOMER

Much have I travell'd in the realms of gold,

And many goodly states and kingdoms seen:

Round many western islands have I

Which bards in fealty to Apollo hold.
Oft of one wide expanse had I been told
That deep-browed Homer ruled as his demesne:

Yet did I never breathe its pure serene
Till I heard Chapman speak out loud and bold:

Then felt I like some watcher of the skies

When a new planet swims into his ken; Or like stout Cortez when with eagle

He star³d at the Pacific—and all his men Look'd at each other with a wild surmise—

Silent, upon a peak in Darien.

GREAT SPIRITS NOW ON EARTH ARE SOJOURNING

Great spirits now on earth are sojourning;

He of the cloud, the cataract, the lake, Who on Helvellyn's summit, wide awake.

Catches his freshness from Archangel's wing;

He of the rose, the violet, the spring,

The social smile, the chain for Freedom's sake:

And lo!—whose steadfastness would never take

A meaner sound than Raphael's whispering.

And other spirits there are standing apart

Upon the forehead of the age to come;

These, these will give the world another

And other pulses. Hear ve not the hum Of mighty workings in the human mart? Listen awhile ye nations, and be dumb. November, 1816. 1817.

ON THE GRASSHOPPER AND CRICKET

THE poetry of earth is never dead: When all the birds are faint with the hot sun.

And hide in cooling trees, a voice will run

From hedge to hedge about the newmown mead:

That is the Grasshopper's—he takes the

In summer luxury,—he has never done With his delights; for when tired out with fun

He rests at ease beneath some pleasant

The poetry of earth is ceasing never;

On a lone winter evening, when the

Has wrought a silence, from the stove there shrills

The Cricket's song, in warmth increasing ever.

And seems to one in drowsiness half lost.

The Grasshopper's among some grassy hills. December 30, 1816, 1817.

SLEEP AND POETRY

"As I lay in my bed slepe full unmete

Was unto me, but why that I ne might
"Rest I ne wist, for there n'as erthly wight
"[As I suppose] had more of hertis ese
"Than I, for I n'ad sicknesse nor disese."

CHAUGER.

What is more gentle than a wind in summer?

What is more soothing than the pretty hummer

That stays one moment in an open flower.

And buzzes cheerily from bower to bower?

What is more tranquil than a muskrose blowing

In a green island, far from all men's knowing?

More healthful than the leafiness of dales?

More secret than a nest of nightingales? More serene than Cordelia's countenance?

More full of visions than a high romance?

What, but thee, Sleep? Soft closer of our eyes!

Low murmurer of tender lullabies!

Light hoverer around our happy pillows!

Wreather of poppy buds, and weeping willows!

Silent entangler of a beauty's tresses! Most happy listener! when the morning blesses

Thee for enlivening all the cheerful eves

That glance so brightly at the new sun rise.

But what is higher beyond thought thar thee?

Fresher than berries of a mountain tree' More strange, more beautiful, more smooth, more regal,

Than wings of swans, than doves, than dim-seen eagle?

What is it? And to what shall I compare it?

It has a glory, and nought else can share it:

The thought thereof is awful, sweet, and

Chasing away all worldliness and folly; Coming sometimes like fearful claps of thunder,

Or the low rumblings earth's regions under:

And sometimes like a gentle whispering Of all the secrets of some wondrous thing

That breathes about us in the vacant air:

So that we look around with prying stare,

Perhaps to see shapes of light, aërial limning,

And catch soft floatings from a faintheard hymning;

To see the laurel wreath, on high suspended,

That is to crown our name when life is ended.

Sometimes it gives a glory to the voice, And from the heart up-springs, rejoice! rejoice!

Sounds which will reach the Framer of all things.

And die away in ardent mutterings.

No one who once the glorious sun has seen

And all the clouds, and felt his bosom

For his great Maker's presence, but must know

What 'tis I mean, and feel his being

Therefore no insult will I give his spirit, By telling what he sees from native merit.

O Poesy! for thee I hold my pen
That am not yet a glorious denizen
Of thy wide heaven—Should J rather kneel

Upon some mountain-top until I feel
A glowing splendor round about me
hung.

And echo back the voice of thine own

tongue?
O Poesy! for thee I grasp my pen
That am not yet a glorious denizen
Of thy wide heaven; yet, to my ardent prayer.

Yield from thy sanctuary some clear air, Smoothed for intoxication by the breath Of flowering bays, that I may die a death

Of luxury, and my young spirit follow The morning sun-beams to the great

Apollo

Like a fresh sacrifice; or if I can bear The o'erwhelming sweets, 'twill bring me to the fair

Visions of all places: a bowery nook
Will be elysium—an eternal book
Whomes I may copy many a largly sayin

Whence I may copy many a lovely saying About the leaves, and flowers—about the playing

Of nymphs in woods, and fountains; and the shade

Keeping a silence round a sleeping maid

And many a verse from so strange influence

That we must ever wonder how, and whence

It came. Also imaginings will hover Round my fireside, and haply there discover

Vistas of solemn beauty, where I'd wander

In happy silence, like the clear meander Through its lone vales; and where I found a spot

Of awfuller shade, or an enchanted grot, Or a green hill o'erspread with chequered dress Of flowers, and fearful from its loveliness,

Write on my tablets all that was permitted,

All that was for our human senses fitted.
Then the events of this wide world I'd seize

Like a strong giant, and my spirit teaze Till at its shoulders it should proudly see Wings to find out an immortality.

Stop and consider! life is but a day:
A fragile dew-drop on its perilous way
From a tree's summit; a poor Indian's
sleep

While his boat hastens to the monstrous steep

Of Montmorenci. Why so sad a moan? Life is the rose's hope while yet unblown; The reading of an ever-changing tale; The light uplifting of a maiden's veil; A pigeon tumbling in clear summer air; A laughing school-boy, without grief or care

Riding the springy branches of an elm.

O for ten years, that I may overwhelm Myself in poesy; so I may do the deed That my own soul has to itself decreed. Then I will pass the countries that I see In long perspective, and continually Taste their pure fountains. First the realm I'll pass

Of Flora, and old Pan; sleep in the grass, Feed upon apples red, and strawberries, And choose each pleasure that my fancy sees;

Catch the white-handed nymphs in shady places,

To woo sweet kisses from averted faces,—

Play with their fingers, touch their shoulders white

Into a pretty shrinking with a bite
As hard as lips can make it: till agreed,
A lovely tale of human life we'll read.
And one will teach a tame dove how it hest

May fan the cool air gently o'er my rest; Another, bending o'er her nimble tread, Will set a green robe floating round her head.

And still will dance with ever varied ease, Smiling upon the flowers and the trees: Another will entice me on, and on

Through almond blossoms and rich cinnamon;

Till in the bosom of a leafy world

We rest in silence, like two gems up-

In the recesses of a pearly shell.

And can I ever bid these joys farewell? Yes, I must pass them for a nobler life, Where I may find the agonies, the strife Of human hearts: for lo! I see afar, O'er-sailing the blue cragginess, a car

And steeds with streamy manes—the charioteer

Looks out upon the winds with glorious fear:

And now the numerous tramplings quiver lightly

Along a huge cloud's ridge; and now with sprightly

Wheel downward come they into fresher skies,

Tipt round with silver from the sun's bright eyes.

Still downward with capacious whirl they glide;

they glide;
And now I see them on a green-hill's

In breezy rest among the nodding stalks.

The charioteer with wond'rous gesture talks

To the trees and mountains; and there soon appear

Shapes of delight, of mystery, and fear, Passing along before a dusky space

Made, by some mighty oaks: as they would chase

Some ever-fleeting music on they sweep.

Lo! how they murmur, laugh, and smile, and weep:

Some with upholden hand and mouth severe:

Some with their faces muffled to the ear Between their arms; some, clear in youthful bloom,

Go glad and smilingly athwart the gloom;

Some looking back, and some with upward gaze;

Yes, thousands in a thousand different ways

Flit onward—now a lovely wreath of girls

Dancing their sleek hair into tangled curls;

And now broad wings. Most awfully intent

The driver of those steeds is forward bent,

And seems to listen: O that I might know [glow.

All that he writes with such a hurrying

The visions all are fled—the car is fled Into the light of heaven, and in their stead

A sense of real things comes doubly strong,

And, like a muddy stream, would bear

My soul to nothingness: but I will strive Against all doubtings, and will keep

The thought of that same chariot, and the strange

Journey it went.

Is there so small a range
In the present strength of manhood, that the high

Imagination cannot freely fly

As she was wont of old? prepare her steeds,

Paw up against the light, and do strange deeds

Upon the clouds? Has she not shewn us all?

From the clear space of ether, to the small

Breath of new buds unfolding? From the meaning

Of Jove's large eye-brow, to the tender greening
Of April meadows? Here her altar

Of April meadows? Here her altar shone,

E'en in this isle; and who could paragon
The fervid choir that lifted up a noise
Of harmony, to where it aye will poise
Its mighty self of convoluting sound,
Huge as a planet, and like that roll
round.

Eternally around a dizzy void?

Ay, in those days the Muses were nigh cloy'd

With honors; nor had any other care
Than to sing out and soothe their wavy hair.

Could all this be forgotten? Yes, a schism

Nurtured by foppery and barbarism, Made great Apollo blush for this his land.

Men were thought wise who could not understand understand His glories: with a puling infant's force They sway'd about upon a rocking horse,

And thought it Pegasus. Ah dismal soul'd!

The winds of heaven blew, the ocean roll'd [blue Its gathering waves—ye felt it not. The

Bared its eternal bosom, and the dew Of summer nights collected still to make The morning precious: beauty was awake!

Why were ye not awake? But ye were dead

To things ye knew not of,—were closely wed

To musty laws lined out with wretched rule

And compass vile: so that ye taught a school

Of dolts to smooth, inlay, and clip, and fit,

Till like the certain wands of Jacob's

Till, like the certain wands of Jacob's wit,

Their verses tallied. Easy was the task:

A thousand handicraftsmen wore the mask

Of Poesy. Ill-fated, impious race!

That blasphemed the bright Lyrist to his face,

And did not know it,—no, they went about,

Holding a poor, decrepit standard out Mark'd with most flimsy mottos, and in large

The name of one Boileau!

O ye whose charge It is to hover round our pleasant hills!

Whose congregated majesty so fills
My boundly reverence, that I cannot

trace
Your hallowed names, in this unholy

Your hallowed names, in this unholy place,

So near those common folk; did not their shames

Affright you? Did our old lamenting Thames

Delight you? Did ye never cluster round

Delicious Avon, with a mournful sound, And weep? Or did ye wholly bid adieu To regions where no more the laurel grew?

Or did ye stay to give a welcoming

To some lone spirits who could proudly sing

Their youth away, and die? 'Twas even so:

But let me think away those times of woe:

Now 'tis a fairer season; ye have breathed

Rich benedictions o'er us; ye have wreathed

Fresh garlands: for sweet music has been heard

In many places;—some has been upstirr'd

From out its crystal dwelling in a lake, By a swan's ebon bill; from a thick brake,

Nested and quiet in a valley mild,

Bubbles a pipe; fine sounds are floating wild

About the earth: happy are ye and glad.

These things are doubtless: yet in truth we've had

Strange thunders from the potency of song;

Mingled indeed with what is sweet and strong,

From majesty: but in clear truth the themes

Are ugly clubs, the Poets Polyphemes Disturbing the grand sea. A drainless shower

Of light is poesy; 'tis the supreme of power;

'Tis might half slumb'ring on its own right arm.

The very archings of her eye-lids charm A thousand willing agents to obey,

And still she governs with the mildest sway:

But strength alone though of the Muses born

Is like a fallen angel: trees uptorn, Darkness, and worms, and shrouds, and sepulchres

Delight it; for it feeds upon the burrs

And thorns of life; forgetting the great end

Of poesy, that it should be a friend To soothe the cares, and lift the thoughts of man.

Yet I rejoice: a myrtle fairer than E'er grew in Paphos, from the bitter weeds

Lifts its sweet head into the air, and feeds A silent space with ever sprouting green. All tenderest birds there find a pleasant screen,

Creep through the shade with jaunty fluttering,

Nibble the little cupped flowers and sing.
Then let us clear away the choking thorns

From round its gentle stem; let the young fawns,

Yeaned in after times, when we are flown.

Find a fresh sward beneath it, overgrown With simple flowers: let there nothing be

More boisterous than a lover's bended knee:

Nought more ungentle than the placid look

Of one who leans upon a closed book; Nought more untranquil than the grassy slopes

Between two hills. All hail delightful hopes!

As she was wont, th' imagination Into most lovely labyrinths will be gone, And they shall be accounted poet kings Who simply tell the most heart-easing things.

O may these joys be ripe before I die.

Will not some say that I presumptuously Have spoken? that from hastening dis-

'Twere better far to hide my foolish face :

That whining boyhood should with reverence bow

Ere the dread thunderbolt could reach?

If I do hide myself, it sure shall be In the very fane, the light of Poesy: If I do fall, at least I will be laid Beneath the silence of a poplar shade; And over me the grass shall be smooth shaven:

And there shall be a kind memorial graven.

But off Despondence! miserable bane! They should not know thee, who athirst to gain

A noble end, are thirsty every hour. What though I am not wealthy in the dower

Of spanning wisdom; though I do not

The shiftings of the mighty winds that blow

Hither and thither all the changing thoughts

Of man: though no great minist'ring reason sorts

Out the dark mysteries of human souls To clear conceiving: yet there ever rolls A vast idea before me, and I glean

Therefrom my liberty; thence too I've

The end and aim of Poesy. 'Tis clear As anything most true; as that the year Is made of the four seasons—manifest As a large cross, some old cathedral's crest, Lifted to the white clouds. Therefore should I

Be but the essence of deformity, A coward, did my very eye-lids wink At speaking out what I have dared to think.

Ah! rather let me like a madman run Over some precipice: let the hot sun Melt my Dedalian wings, and drive me down

Convuls'd and headlong! Stav! an inward frown

Of conscience bids me be more calm awhile.

An ocean dim, sprinkled with many an

Spreads awfully before me. How much toil!

How many days! what desperate turmoil!

Ere I can have explored its widenesses. Ah, what a task! upon my bended knees, I could unsay those—no, impossible! Impossible!

For sweet relief I'll dwell On humbler thoughts, and let this strange assay

Begun in gentleness die so away.

E'en now all tumult from my bosom fades:

I turn full hearted to the friendly aids That smooth the path of honor; brotherhood.

And friendliness the nurse of mutual good.

The hearty grasp that sends a pleasant sonnet

Into the brain ere one can think upon it; The silence when some rhymes are coming out;

And when they're come, the very pleasant rout:

The message certain to be done tomorrow.

'Tis perhaps as well that it should be to borrow

Some precious book from out its snug retreat.

To cluster round it when we next shall meet.

Scarce can I scribble on; for lovely airs Are fluttering round the room like doves in pairs;

Many delights of that glad day recalling. When first my senses caught their tender

And with these airs come forms of elegance

Stooping their shoulders o'er a horse's prance,

Vareless, and grand-fingers soft and round

Parting luxuriant curls;—and the swift

Of Bacchus from his chariot, when his

Made Ariadne's cheek look blushingly. Thus I remember all the pleasant flow Of words at opening a portfolio.

Things such as these are ever harbingers To trains of peaceful images: the stirs Of a swan's neck unseen among the rushes:

A limet starting all about the bushes:
A butterfly, with golden wings broad parted

Nestling a rose, convuls'd as though it smarted

With over pleasure -many, many more, Might I indulge at large in all my store Of luxuries: yet I must not forget

Sleep, quiet, with his poppy coronet:
For what there may be worthy in these rhymes

I partly owe to him: and thus, the chimes

Of friendly voices had just given place To as sweet a silence, when I gan retrace The pleasant day, upon a couch at case. It was a poet's house ¹ who keeps the keys Of pleasure's temple. Round about were hung

The glorious features of the bards who

In other ages—cold and sacred basts Smiled at each other. Happy he who trusts

To clear Futurity his darling fame!
Then there were fauns and satyrs taking

At swelling apples with a frisky leap And reaching fingers, 'mid a luscious heap

Of vine leaves. Then there rose to view a fane

Of liny marble, and thereto a train

Of nymphs approaching fairly o'er the sward:

One, loveliest, holding her white hand toward

The dazzling sun-rise; two sisters sweet Bending their graceful figures till they meet

Over the trippings of a little child:
And some are hearing, eagerly, the wild

Thrilling liquidity of dewy piping.

See, in another picture, nymphs are wiping

Cherishingly Diana's timorous limbs;—A fold of lawny mantle dabbling swims
At the bath's edge, and keeps a gentle motion

With the subsiding crystal: as when ocean

Heaves calmly its broad swelling smoothness o'er

Its rocky marge, and balances once

The patient weeds; that now unshent by foam

Feel all about their undulating home.

Sappho's meek head was there half smiling down

At nothing; just as though the earnest frown

Of over thinking had that moment gone From off her brow, and left her all alone.

Great Alfred's too, with anxious, pitying eyes,

As if he always listened to the sighs Of the goaded world; and Kosciusko's

By horrid suffrance—mightily forlorn.

Petrarch, outstepping from the shady green,

Starts at the sight of Laura; nor can wean His eyes from her sweet face. Most

His eyes from her sweet face. Most happy they!

For over them was seen a free display Of out-spread wings, and from between them shone

The face of Poesy: from off her throne She overlook'd things that I scarce could tell.

The very sense of where I was might well

Keep Sleep aloof: but more than that there came

Thought after thought to nourish up the flame

Within my breast; so that the morning light

Surprised me even from a sleepless night; And up I rose refresh'd, and glad, and

Resolving to begin that very day

These lines; and howsoever they be done,

I leave them as a father does his son.

TO LEIGH HUNT, ESQ.

[Dedication of the volume of 1817]

GLORY and loveliness have passed away; For if we wander out in early morn, No wreathed incense do we see upborne

Into the east, to meet the smiling day:
No crowd of nymphs soft voic'd and young, and gay,

In woven baskets bringing ears of

Roses, and pinks, and violets, to adorn The shrine of Flora in her early May. But there are left delights as high as these,

And I shall ever bless my destiny,
That in a time, when under pleasant
trees

Pan is no longer sought, I feel a free A leafy luxury, seeing I could please With these poor offerings, a man like thee. 1817. 1817.

ON SEEING THE ELGIN MARBLES

M7 spirit is too weak—mortality Weighs heavily on me like unwilling sleep, And each imagin'd pinnacle and steep Of godlike hardship tells me I must die Like a sick Eagle looking at the sky. Yet 'tis a gentle luxury to weep

That I have not the cloudy winds to

Fresh for the opening of the morning's

Such dim-conceivéd glories of the brain Bring round the heart an undescribable feud:

So do these wonders a most dizzy pain,
That mingles Grecian grandeur with the rude

Wasting of old Time—with a billowy

A sun—a shadow of a magnitude.

ON A PICTURE OF LEANDER

Come hither all sweet maidens soberly, Down-looking aye, and with a chastened light

Hid in the fringes of your eyelids white, And meekly let your fair hands joined he

As if so gentle that ye could not see, Untouched, a victim of your beauty bright,

Sinking away to his young spirit's night, Sinking bewildered 'mid the dreary sea: 'Tis young Leander toiling to his death; Nigh swooning, he doth purse his weary lips

For Hero's cheek, and smiles against her smile.

O horrid dream! see how his body dips Dead-heavy; arms and shoulders gleam awhile:

He's gone; up bubbles all his amorous breath!

ON THE SEA

It keeps eternal whisperings around Desolate shores, and with its mighty swell

Gluts twice ten thousand caverns, till the spell

Of Hecate leaves them their old shadowy sound.

Often tis in such gentle temper found,
That scarcely will the very smallest shell

Be moved for days from whence it sometime fell.

When last the winds of heaven were unbound. Oh ve! who have your eye-balls vexed and tired.

Feast them upon the wideness of the Sea:

Oh ye! whose ears are dinned with uproar rude,

Or fed too much with cloving melody.— Sit ve near some old cavern's mouth, and brood

Until ye start, as if the sea-nymphs August, 1817. 1848. quired!

WHEN I HAVE FEARS THAT I MAY CEASE TO BE

When I have fears that I may cease to be Before my pen has glean'd my teeming brain.

Before high piléd books, in charact'ry, Hold like rich garners the full-ripen'd grain:

When I behold, upon the night's starr'd

Huge cloudy symbols of a high romance, And think that I may never live to trace Their shadows, with the magic hand of chance; And when I feel, fair creature of an

That I shall never look upon thee more, Never have relish in the faery power

Of unreflecting love! - then on the shore

Of the wide world I stand alone, and think

Till Love and Fame to nothingness do 1817. 1848. sink.

FROM EXDYMION

BOOK I

PROEM

A THING of beauty is a joy for ever: Its loveliness increases; it will never Pass into nothingness; but still will keep

A bower quiet for us, and a sleep Full of sweet dreams, and health, and quiet breathing.

Therefore, on every morrow, are we wreathing

A flowery band to bind us to the earth. Spite of despondence, of the inhuman dearth

Of noble natures, of the gloomy days, Of all the unhealthy and o'er-darkened ways

Made for our searching: yes, in spite of

Some shape of beauty moves away the pall

From our dark spirits. Such the sun, the moon.

Trees old and young, sprouting a shady

For simple sheep; and such are daffodils With the green world they live in: and clear rills

That for themselves a cooling covert

'Gainst the hot season; the mid-forest

Rich with a sprinkling of fair musk-rose blooms:

And such too is the grandeur of the dooms

We have imagined for the mighty dead; All lovely tales that we have heard or read:

An endless fountain of immortal drink. Pouring unto us from the heaven's brink.

Nor do we merely feel these essences For one short hour; no, even as the trees That whisper round a temple become

Dear as the temple's self, so does the moon.

The passion poesy, glories infinite,

Haunt us till they become a cheering

Unto our souls, and bound to us so fast, That, whether there be shine, or gloom o'ercast,

They alway must be with us, or we die.

Therefore, 'tis with full happiness that I

Will trace the story of Endymion. The very music of the name has gone Into my being, and each pleasant scene Is growing fresh before me as the green

Of our own valleys: so I will begin Now while I cannot hear the city's din; Now while the early budders are just

And run in mazes of the youngest hue About old forests; while the willow trails Its delicate amber; and the dairy pails Bring home increase of milk. And, as the year

Grows lush in juicy stalks, I'll smoothly

My little boat, for many quiet hours. With streams that deepen freshly into bowers.

Many and many a verse I hope to write, Before the daisies, vermeil rimm'd and white,

Hide in deep herbage; and ere yet the bees

Hum about globes of clover and sweet peas.

I must be near the middle of my story. O may no wintry season, bare and hoary, See it half finished: but let Autumn bold.

With universal tinge of sober gold, Be all about me when I make an end. And now at once, adventuresome, I send

My herald thought into a wilderness:
There let its trumpet blow, and quickly

My uncertain path with green, that I may speed

Easily onward, thorough flowers and weed.

HYMN TO PAN

O THOU, whose mighty palace roof doth hang

From jagged trunks, and overshadoweth Eternal whispers, glooms, the birth, life, death

Of unseen flowers in heavy peacefulness; Who lov'st to see the hamadryads dress Their ruffled locks where meeting hazels darken:

And through whole solemn hours dost

sit, and hearken

The dreary melody of bedded reeds— In desolate places, where dank moisture breeds

The pipy hemlock to strange overgrowth;

Bethinking thee, how melancholy loth Thou wast to lose fair Syrinx—do thou now,

By thy love's milky brow!

By all the trembling mazes that she ran, Hear us, great Pan!

O thou, for whose soul-soothing quiet, turtles

Passion their voices cooingly 'mong myrtles.

What time thou wanderest at eventide Through sunny meadows, that outskirt the side

Of thine enmossed realms: O thou, to whom

Broad leaved fig trees even now fore-

Their ripen'd fruitage; yellow girted bees

Their golden honeycombs; our village leas

Their fairest-blossom'd beans and poppied corn;

The chuckling linnet its five young unborn,

To sing for thee; low creeping strawberries

Their summer coolness; pent up butterflies

Their freckled wings; yea, the fresh budding year
All its completions—be quickly near,

All its completions—be quickly near,
By every wind that nods the mountain
pine,

O forester divine!

Thou, to whom every fawn and satyr flies

For willing service; whether to surprise
The squatted hare while in half sleeping fit;

Or upward ragged precipices flit

To save poor lambkins from the eagle's maw;

Or by mysterious enticement draw
Bewildered shepherds to their path
again;

Or to tread breathless round the frothy main,

And gather up all fancifullest shells For thee to tumble into Naiads' cells, And, being hidden, laugh at their outpeeping;

Or to delight thee with fantastic leaping.

The while they pelt each other on the

With silvery oak apples, and fir cones brown—

By all the echoes that about thee ring, Hear us, O satyr king!

O Hearkener to the loud clapping shears,

While ever and anon to his shorn peers
A ram goes bleating: Winder of the horn,

When snouted wild-boars routing tender corn

Anger our huntsman: Breather round our farms.

To keep off mildews, and all weather harms:

Strange ministrant of undescribed sounds,

That come a swooning over hollow grounds,

And wither drearily on barren moors:

Dread opener of the mysterious doors Leading to universal knowledge—see, Great son of Dryope,

The many that are come to pay their

Be still the unimaginable lodge
For solitary thinkings; such as dodge Conception to the very bourne of heaven.

Then leave the naked brain: be still the leaven,

That spreading in this dull and clodded earth

Gives it a touch ethereal—a new birth: Be still a symbol of immensity;

A firmament reflected in a sea;

An element filling the space between:
An unknown—but no more: we humbly

With uplift hands our foreheads, lowly bending,

And giving out a shout most heaven-

rending,

Conjure thee to receive our humble Pæan,

Upon thy Mount Lycean!

THE COMING OF DIAN

[Endymion speaks, to his Sister Peona.]

"This river does not see the naked sky, Till it begins to progress silverly Around the western border of the wood,

Whence, from a certain spot, its winding flood

Seems at the distance like a crescent moon;

And in that nook, the very pride of June, Had I been used to pass my weary eves; There rather for the sun unwilling leaves So dear a picture of his sovereign power, And I could witness his most kingly hour, When he doth lighten up the golden reins,

And paces leisurely down amber plains His snorting four. Now when his chariot

last

Its beams against the zodiac-lion cast, There blossom'd suddenly a magic bed Of sacred ditamy, and poppies red: At which I wondered greatly, knowing

11.6]

That but one night had wrought this flowery spell;

And, sitting down close by, began to muse

What it might mean. Perhaps, thought I, Morpheus,

In passing here, his owlet pinions shook; Or, it may be, ere matron Night uptook Herebon urn, young Mercury, by stealth, Had dipt his rod in it: such garland wealth

Came not by common growth. Thus on I thought,

Until my head was dizzy and distraught. Moreover, through the dancing poppies stole

A breeze, most softly lulling to my soul;
And shaping visions all about my sight

Of colors, wings, and bursts of spangly light;
The which became more strange, and strange, and dim,

And then were gulf'd in a tumultuous swim:

And then I fell asleep. Ah, can I tell The enchantment that afterwards befell? Yet it was but a dream: yet such a dream That never tongue, although it overteem With mellow utterance, like a cavern spring,

Could figure out and to conception bring All I beheld and felt. Methought I lay Watching the zenith, where the milky

way

Among the stars in virgin splendor pours;

And travelling my eye, until the doors Of heaven appeared to open for my flight, I became loth and fearful to alight From such high soaring by a downward glance:

So kept me stedfast in that airy trance, Spreading imaginary pinions wide.

When, presently, the stars began to glide, And faint away, before my eager view: At which I sigh'd that I could not pursue, And dropped my vision to the horizon's verge: [emerge

And lo! from opening clouds, I saw The loveliest moon, that ever silver'd o'er A shell for Neptune's goblet: she did soar

So passionately bright, my dazzled soul Commingling with her argent spheres did roll

Through clear and cloudy, even when she went

At last into a dark and vapory tent— Whereat, methought, the lidless-eyed train

Of planets all were in the blue again.

To commune with those orbs, once more
I rais'd

My sight right upward: but it was quite dazed

By a bright something, sailing down apace,

Making me quickly veil my eyes and face:

Again I look'd, and, O ye deities,

Who from Olympus watch our destinies!
Whence that completed form of all completeness?

Whence came that high perfection of all sweetness?

Speak, stubborn earth, and tell me where, O where Hast thou a symbol of her golden hair? Not oat-sheaves drooping in the western sun:

Not—thy soft hand, fair sister! lèt me Such follying before thee—yet she had. Indeed, locks bright enough to make me mad;

And they were simply gordian'd up and braided,

Leaving, in naked comeliness, unshaded, Her pearl round ears, white neck, and orbed brow;

The which were blended in, I know not how.

With such a paradise of lips and eyes, Blush-tinted cheeks, half smiles, and faintest sighs,

That, when I think thereon, my spirit clings

And plays about its fancy, till the stings Of human neighborhood envenom all. Unto what awful power shall I call?

To what high fane?—Ah! see her hovering feet,

More bluely vein'd, more soft, more whitely sweet

Than those of sea-born Venus, when she rose

From out her cradle shell. The wind out blows

Her scarf into a fluttering pavilion;
'Tis blue, and over-spangled with a million

Of little eyes, as though thou wert to shed.

Over the darkest, lushest blue-bell bed, Handfuls of daisies."—" Endymion, how strange!

Dream within dream!"—"She took an airy range,

And then, towards me, like a very maid, Came blushing, waning, willing, and afraid,

And press'd me by the hand: Ah! 'twas too much;

Methought I fainted at the charmed touch,

Yet held my recollection, even as one Who dives three fathoms where the waters run

Gurgling in beds of coral: for anon,

I felt upmounted in that region
Where falling stars dart their artillery forth.

And eagles struggle with the buffeting

That balances the heavy meteor-stone;— Felt too, I was not fearful, nor alone,

But lapp'd and lull'd along the dangerous sky.

Soon, as it seem'd, we left our journeying high,

And straightway into frightful eddies swoop'd;

Such as aye muster where gray time has scoop'd

Huge dens and caverns in a mountain's side:

Their hollow sounds arous'd me, and I sigh'd

To faint once more by looking on my bliss—

I was distracted; madly did I kiss
The wooing arms which held me, and did give

My eyes at once to death: but 'twas to

To take in draughts of life from the gold fount

Of kind and passionate looks; to count, and count

The moments, by some greedy help that seem'd [deem'd A second self, that each might be re-And plunder'd of its load of blessedness

And plunder'd of its load of blessedness.
Ah, desperate mortal! I ev'n dar'd to press

Her very cheek against my crowned lip, And, at that moment, felt my body dip Into a warmer air: a moment more,

Our feet were soft in flowers. There was store

Of newest joys upon that alp. Sometimes

A scent of violets, and blossoming limes, Loiter'd around us; then of honey cells, Made delicate from all white-flower bells;

And once, above the edges of our nest, An arch face peep'd,—an Oread as I guess'd.

"Why did I dream that sleep o'erpower'd me In midst of all this heaven? Why not see,

Far off, the shadows of his pinions dark, And stare them from me? But no, like a spark

That needs must die, although its little beam

Reflects upon a diamond, my sweet dream Fell into nothing—into stupid sleep. And so it was, until a gentle creep,

A careful moving caught my waking ears,

And up I started: Ah! my sighs, my tears,

My clenched hands; -for lo! the poppies hung [sung Dew-dabbled on their stalks, the ouzel

A heavy ditty, and the sullen day Had chidden herald Hesperus away, With leaden looks: the solitary breeze Bluster'd, and slept, and its wild self did

teaze

With wayward melancholy; and I thought.

Mark me, Peona! that sometimes it brought,

Faint fare-thee-wells, and sigh-shrilled adieus!—

Away I wander'd—all the pleasant hues Of heaven and earth had faded: deepest shades

Were deepest dungeons; heaths and sunny glades

Were full of pestilent light; our taintless rills

Seem'd sooty, and o'er-spread with upturn'd gills

Of dying fish; the vermeil rose had blown In frightful scarlet, and its thorns outgrown like spiked aloe. If an innocent bird Before my heedless footsteps stirr'd, and stirr'd

In little journeys, I beheld in it A disguis'd demon, missioned to knit

My soul with under darkness; to entice My stumblings down some monstrous precipice:

Therefore Teager followed, and did curse The disappointment. Time, that aged nurse, Rock'd me to patience. Now, thank gentle heaven!

These things, with all their comfortings, are given

To my down-sunken hours, and with thee.

Sweet sister, help to stem the ebbing sea Of weary life."

FROM BOOK II

INVOCATION TO THE POWER OF LOVE

O SOVEREIGN power of love! O grief! O balm!

All records, saving thine, come cool, and calm,

And shadowy, through the mist of passed years:

For others, good or bad, hatred and tears
Have become indolent; but touching
thine,

One sigh doth echo, one poor sob doth pine,

One kiss brings honey-dew from buried days.

The woes of Troy, towers smothering o'er their blaze,

Stiff-holden shields, far-piercing spears, keen blades,

Struggling, and blood, and shrieks—all dimly fades

Into some backward corner of the brain; Yet, in our very souls, we feel amain The close of Troilus and Cressid sweet.

Hence, pageant history! hence, gilded cheat!
Swart planet in the universe of deeds!

Wide sea, that one continuous murmur breeds

Along the pebbled shore of memory! Many old rotten-timber'd boats there be Upon thy vaporous bosom, magnified To goodly vessels; many a sail of pride,

To goodly vessels; many a sail of pride, And golden keel'd, is left unlaunch'd and dry.

But wherefore this? What care, though owl did fly

About the great Athenian admiral's mast?

What care, though striding Alexander past
The Industrial his Macadenian numbers 2

The Indus with his Macedonian numbers? Though old Ulysses tortured from his slumbers

The glutted Cyclops, what care?—Juliet leaning

Amid her window-flowers,—sighing, weaning

Tenderly her fancy from its maiden snow, [flow

Doth more avail than these: the silver Of Hero's tears, the swoon of Imogen. Fair Pastorella in the bandit's den.

Are things to brood on with more ardency Than the death-day of empires. Fearfully Must such conviction come upon his head, Who, thus far, discontent, has dared to tread,

Without one muse's smile, or kind behest,

The path of love and poesy. But rest, In chating restlessness, is yet more drear

Than to be crush'd, in striving to uprear Love's standard on the battlements of song.

So once more days and nights aid me along,

Like legion'd soldiers.

FROM BOOK IV

ROUNDELAY

"O Sorrow,
Why dost borrow
The natural hue of health, from vermeil lips?

To give maiden blushes
To the white rose bushes?

Or is it thy dewy hand the daisy tips?

"O Sorrow,

Why dost borrow
The lustrous passion from a falcon-eye?—
To give the glow-worm light?
Or, on a moonless might,

To tinge, on siren shores, the salt seaspray?

"O Sorrow,
Why dost borrow
The mellow ditties from a mourning

tongue?—
To give at evening pale
Unto the nightingale.

That thou mayst listen the cold dews among?

"O Sorrow,

Why dost borrow
Heart's lightness from the merriment of
May?—

A lover would not tread A cowslip on the head,

Though he should dance from eve till peep of day—
Nor any drooping flower

Nor any drooping flower Held sacred for thy bower, Wherever he may sport himself and play.

"To Sorrow,
I bade good-morrow,
And thought to leave her far away behind:

But cheerly, cheerly, She loves me dearly;

She is so constant to me, and so kind:
I would deceive her

And so leave her,

But ah! she is so constant and so kind.

"Beneath my palm trees, by the river side,

I sat a-weeping : in the whole world wide There was no one to ask me why I wept,— And so I kept

Brimming the water-lily cups with tears
Cold as my fears.

"Beneath my palm trees, by the river side.

I sat a-weeping: what enamor'd bride, Cheated by shadowy wooer from the clouds,

But hides and shrouds

Beneath dark palm trees by a river side?

"And as I sat, over the light blue hills There came a noise of revellers: the rills Into the wide stream came of purple hue—

'Twas Bacchus and his crew!
The earnest trumpet spake, and silver

From kissing cymbals made a merry

'Twas Bacchus and his kin!
Like to a moving vintage down they came,

Crown'd with green leaves, and faces all on flame;

All madly dancing through the pleasant valley,

To scare thee, Melancholy!
O then, O then, thou wast a simple name!

And I forgot thee, as the berried holly
By shephords, is forgotten, when, in Tall chestnuts keep away the sun and

moon:—
I rush'd into the folly!

"Within his car, aloft, young Bacchus stood,

Trifling his ivy-dart, in dancing mood; With sidelong laughing;

And little rills of crimson wine imbrued His plump white arms, and shoulders, enough white

For Venus' pearly bite;

And near him rode Silenus on his ass, Pelted with flowers as he on did pass Tipsily quaffing. "Whence came ye, merry Damsels! whence came ye!

So many, and so many, and such glee? Why have ye left your bowers desolate,

Your lutes, and gentler fate?—
'We follow Bacchus! Bacchus on the wing,

A conquering!

Bacchus, young Bacchus! good or ill betide,

We dance before him thorough kingdoms wide:—

Come hither, lady fair, and joined be To our wild minstrelsy!'

Whence came ye, jolly Satyrs! whence came ye!

So many, and so many, and such glee? Why have ye left your forest haunts, why left

Your nuts in oak-tree cleft?—
'For wine, for wine we left our kernel tree:

For wine we left our heath, and yellow brooms.

And cold mushrooms:

For wine we follow Bacchus through the earth;

Great God of breathless cups and chirping mirth!—

Come hither, lady fair, and joined be To our mad minstrelsy!'

"Over wide streams and mountains great we went, [tent,

And, save when Bacchus kept his ivy Onward the tiger and the leopard pants, With Asian elephants:

Onward these myriads—with song and dance,

With zebras striped, and sleek Arabians' prance,

Web-footed alligators, crocodiles,

Bearing upon their scaly backs, in files, Plump infant laughers mimicking the

Of seamen, and stout galley-rower's teil; With toying oars and silken sails they glide.

Nor care for wind and tide.

"Mounted on panthers' furs and lions' manes, [plains; From rear to van they scour about the

A three days' journey in a moment done:
And always, at the rising of the sun,
About the wilds they hunt with spear and horn.

On spleenful unicorn.

"I saw Osirian Egypt kneel adown Before the vine-wreath crown!

I saw parch'd Abyssinia rouse and sing
To the silver cymbals' ring!

I saw the whelming vintage hotly pierce Old Tartary the fierce!

The kings of Inde their jewel-sceptres vail,

And from their treasures scatter pearled hail;

Great Brahma from his mystic heaven groans,
And all his priesthood moans.

Before young Bacchus' eye-wink turning

Into these regions came I following

Sick-hearted, weary—so I took a whim To stray away into these forests drear Alone, without a peer:

And I have told thee all thou .mayest hear.

"Young stranger! I've been a ranger

In search of pleasure throughout every clime:

Alas! 'tis not for me!
Bewitch'd I sure must be,
To lose in grieving all my maiden prime,

"Come then, Sorrow!

Sweetest Sorrow! Like an own babe I nurse thee on my breast:

I thought to leave thee
And deceive thee,

But now of all the world I love thee best.

"There is not one, No, no, not one

But thee to comfort a poor lorely maid;
Thou art her mother,
And her brother.

Her playmate, and her wood in the shade."

THE FEAST OF DIAN

WHO, who from Dian's feast would be away?

For all the golden bowers of the day
Are empty left? Who, who away would be

From Cynthia's wedding and festivity? Not Hesperus: lo! upon his rilver

He leans away for highest heaven and sings,

Snapping his lucid fingers merrily!—
Ah, Zephyrus! art here, and Flora too!
Ye tender bibbers of the rain and dew,
Young playmates of the rose and daffodil,

Be careful, ere ye enter in, to fill Your baskets high

With fennel green, and balm, and golden pines,

Savory, latter mint, and columbines, Cool parsley, basil sweet, and sunny thyme;

Yea, every flower and leaf of every clime,

All gather'd in the dewy morning: hie Away! fly, fly!—

Crystalline brother of the belt of heaven, Aquarius! to whom king Jove has given Two liquid pulse streams 'stead of feather'd wings,

Two fan-like fountains,—thine illumin-

For Dian play:
Dissolve the frozen purity of air;

Let thy white shoulders silvery and bare

Shew cold through watery pinions; make more bright

The Star-Queen's crescent on her marriage night:

Haste, haste away!—
Castor has tamed the planet Lion, see!
And of the Bear has Pollux mastery:
A third is in the race! who is the third,

Speeding away swift as the eagle bird?
The tramping Centaur!

The Lion's mane's on end: the Bear how fierce!

The Centaur's arrow ready seems to pierce

Some enemy: far forth his bow is bent Into the blue of heaven. He'll be shent, Pale unrelentor,

When he shall hear the wedding lutes aplaying.—

Andromeda! sweet woman! why delaying

Sotimidly among the stars: come hither!

Join this bright throng, and nimbly follow whither

They all are going.
Danae's Son, before Jove newly bow'd,
Has wept for thee, calling to Jove aloud.

Thee, gentle lady, did he disenthral: Ye shall for ever live and love, for all Thy tears are flowing.

ROBIN HOOD

No! those days are gone away, And their hours are old and gray, And their minutes buried all Under the down-trodden pall Of the leaves of many years: Many times have winter's shears, Frozen North, and chilling East, Sounded tempests to the feast Of the forest's whispering fleeces, Since men knew nor rent nor leases.

No, the bugle sounds no more, And the twanging bow no more; Silent is the ivory shrill Past the heath and up the hill; There is no mid-forest laugh, Where lone Echo gives the half To some wight, amaz'd to hear Jesting, deep in forest drear.

On the fairest time of June You may go, with sun or moon, Or the seven stars to light you, Or the polar ray to right you; But you never may behold Little John, or Robin bold; Never one, of all the clan, Thrumming on an empty can Some old hunting ditty, while He doth his green way beguile To fair hostess Merriment, Down beside the pasture Trent; For he left the merry tale Messenger for spicy ale.

Gone, the merry morris din; Gone, the song of Gamelyn; Gone, the tough-belted outlaw Idling in the "grené shawe;" All are gone away and past! And if Robin should be cast Sudden from his turfed grave, And if Marian should have Once again her forest days, She would weep, and he would craze: He would swear, for all his oaks, Fall'n beneath the dockyard strokes, Have rotted on the briny seas; She would weep that her wild bees Sang not to her—strange! that honey Can't be got without hard money!

So it is: yet let us sing, Honor to the old bow-string! Honor to the bugle-horn! Honor to the woods unshorn! Honor to the Lincoln green! Honor to the archer keen! Honor to tight Little John, And the horse he rode upon! Honor to bold Robin Hood. Sleeping in the underwood! Honor to Maid Marian, And to all the Sherwood-clan! Though their days have hurried by, Let us two a burden try. February 3, 1818. 1820.

IN A DREAR-NIGHTED DECEMBER

In a drear-nighted December. Too happy, happy tree, Thy branches ne'er remember Their green felicity: The north cannot undo them. With a sleety whistle through them: Nor frozen thawings glue them From budding at the prime.

In a drear-nighted December. Too happy, happy brook, Thy bubblings ne'er remember Apollo's summer look; But with a sweet forgetting, They stay their crystal fretting, Never, never petting About the frozen time.

Ah! would 'twere so with many A gentle girl and boy! But were there ever any Writhed not at passéd joy? To know the change and feel it, When there is none to heal it. Nor numbéd sense to steal it, Was never said in rhyme.

TO AILSA ROCK

HEARKEN, thou craggy ocean pyramid! Give answer from thy voice, the seafowls' screams!

When were thy shoulders mantled in huge streams?

When, from the sun, was thy broad forehead hid?

How long is't since the mighty power bid Thee heave to airy sleep from fathom dreams?

Sleep in the lap of thunder or sunbeams,

Or when gray clouds are thy cold cover-

Thou answer'st not: for thou art dead asleer;

Thy life is but two dead eternities-The last in air, the former in the deep. First with the whales, last with the eagle-skies-

Drown'd wast thou till an earthquake made thee steep,
Another cannot wake thy giant size.

THE HUMAN SEASONS

Four Seasons fill the measure of the

There are four seasons in the mind of man:

He has his lusty Spring, when fancy clear Takes in all beauty with an easy span: He has his Summer, when luxuriously Spring's honey'd cud of youthful thought he loves

To ruminate, and by such dreaming high Is nearest unto heaven: quiet coves His soul has in its Autumn, when his wings

He furleth close; contented so to look On mists in idleness—to let fair things Pass by unheeded as a threshold brook. He has his Winter too of pale misfeature. Or else he would forego his mortal nature. $ 1818. 1819.

TO HOMER

STANDING aloof in giant ignorance, Of thee I hear and of the Cyclades. As one who sits ashore and longs perchance

To visit Dolphin-coral in deep seas. So thou wast blind:—but then the veil was rent,

For Jove uncurtained Heaven to let thee

And Neptune made for thee a spumy tent.

And Pan made sing for thee his foresthive.

Aye, on the shores of darkness there is light,

And precipices show untrodden green. There is a budding morrow in midnight,1

There is a triple sight in blindness keen: Such seeing hadst thou, as it once befell

To Dian, Queen of Earth, and Heaven, and Hell. 1818. 1848.

LINES

THE MERMAID TAVERN

Souls of Poets dead and gone, What Elysium have ye known, Happy field or mossy cavern, Choicer than the Mermaid Tavern? Have ye tippled drink more fine Than mine host's Canary wine? Or are fruits of Paradise Sweeter than those dainty pies Of venison? O generous food! Drest as though bold Robin Hood Would, with his maid Marian, Sup and bowse from horn and can.

I have heard that on a day
Mine host's sign-board flew away,
Nobody knew whither, till
An astrologer's old quill
To a sheepskin gave the story,
Said he saw you in your glory,
Underneath a new old sign
Sipping beverage divine,
And pledging with contented smack
The Mermaid in the Zodiac.

Souls of Poets dead and gone, What Elysium have ye known, Happy field or mossy cavern, Choicer than the Mermaid Tavern?

FANCY

EVER let the Fancy roam,
Pleasure never is at home:
At a touch sweet Pleasure melteth,
Like to bubbles when rain pelteth;
Then let winged Fancy wander
Through the thought still spread beyond her:

Open wide the mind's cage-door,
She'll dart forth, and cloudward soar.
O sweet Fancy! let her loose;
Summer's joys are spoilt by use,
And the enjoying of the Spring
Fades as does its blossoming;
Autumn's red-lipp'd fruitage too,
Blushing through the mist and dew,
Cloys with tasting: What do then?
Sit thee by the ingle, when
The sear fagot blazes bright,
Spirit of a winter's night;
When the soundless earth is muffled,
And the caked snow is shuffled
From the ploughboy's heavy shoon;

When the Night doth meet the Noon In a dark conspiracy. To banish Even from her sky. Sit thee there, and send abroad, With a mind self-overaw'd Fancy, high-commission'd: -send her! She has vassals to attend her: She will bring, in spite of frost, Beauties that the earth hath lost; She will bring thee, all together, All delights of summer weather; All the buds and bells of May, From dewy sward or thorny spray: All the heaped Autumn's wealth, With a still, mysterious stealth: She will mix these pleasures up Like three fit wines in a cup, And thou shalt quaff it :- thou shalt Distant harvest-carols clear; Rustle of the reaped corn; Sweet birds antheming the morn: And, in the same moment—hark! 'Tis the early April lark, Or the rooks, with busy caw, Foraging for sticks and straw. Thou shalt, at one glance, behold The daisy and the marigold; White-plum'd lilies, and the first Hedge-grown primrose that hath burst; Shaded hyacinth, alway Sapphire queen of the mid-May; And every leaf, and every flower Pearled with the self-same shower. Thou shalt see the field-mouse peep Meagre from its celled sleep; And the snake all winter-thin Cast on sunny bank its skin; Freckled nest-eggs thou shalt see Hatching in the hawthorn-tree, When the henbird's wing doth rest Quiet on her mossy nest; Then the hurry and alarm When the bee-hive casts its swarm; Acorns ripe down-pattering,

Oh, sweet Fancy! let her loose; Every thing is spoilt by use: Where's the cheek that doth not fade, Too much gaz'd at? Where's the maid Whose lip mature is ever new? Where's the eye, however blue, Doth not weary? Where's the face One would meet in every place? Where's the voice, however soft, One would hear so very oft? At a touch sweet Pleasure melteth Like to bubbles when rain pelteth.

While the autumn breezes sing.

Let, then, winged Fancy find
Thee a mistress to thy mind:
Dulcet-eyed as Ceres' daughter,
Ere the God of Torment taught her
How to frown and how to chide;
With a waist and with a side
White as Hebe's, when her zone
Slipped its golden clasp, and down
Fell her kirtle to her feet,
While she held the goblet sweet,
And Jove grew languid.—Break the mesh

Of the Fancy's silken leash; Quickly break her prison-string And such joys as these she'll bring.— Let the winged Fancy roam, Pleasure never is at home. 1818. 1820.

ISABELLA

THE POT OF BASIL

A STORY FROM BOCCACCIO

FAIR Isabel, poor simple Isabel!
Lorenzo, a young palmer in Love's
eye!

They could not in the self-same mansion dwell

Without some stir of heart, some malady;

They could not sit at meals but feel how well

It soothed each to be the other by; They could not, sure, beneath the same

But to each other dream, and nightly weep.

With every morn their love grew ten-

With every eve deeper and tenderer still;

He might not in house, field, or garden stir.

But her full shape would all his seeing

And his continual voice was pleasanter
To her, than noise of trees or hidden rill;

Her lute-string gave an echo of his name, She spoilt her half-done broidery with the same.

He knew whose gentle hand was at the latch.

Before the door had given her to his eyes;

And from her chamber-window he would catch

Her beauty farther than the falcon spies:

And constant as her vespers would he watch,

Because her face was turn'd to the same skies:

And with sick longing all the night outwear,

To hear her morning-step upon the stair.

A whole long month of May in this sad plight

Made their cheeks paler by the break of June:

"To-morrow will I bow to my delight,
To-morrow will I ask my lady's boon."—

"O may I never see another night, Lorenzo, if thy lips breathe not love's tune."—

So spake they to their pillows; but, alas, Honeyless days and days did he let pass;

Until sweet Isabella's untouch'd cheek Fell sick within the rose's just domain, Fell thin as a young mother's, who doth

seek
By every lull to cool her infant's pain:
"How ill she is," said he, "I may not

speak,
And yet I will, and tell my love all

If looks speak love-laws, I will drink her tears.

And at the least 'twill startle off her cares.''

So said he one fair morning, and all day His heart beat awfully against his side;

And to his heart he inwardly did pray
For power to speak; but still the ruddy tide

Stifled his voice, and puls'd resolve away—

Fever'd his high conceit of such a bride,

Yet brought him to the meekness of a child:

Alas! when passion is both meek and wild!

So once more he had wak'd and anguished

A dreary night of love and misery, If Isabel's quick eye had not been wed To every symbol on his forehead high; She saw it waxing very pale and dead, And straight all flush'd; so, lisped tenderly,

"Lorenzo!"—here she ceas'd her timid quest,

But in her tone and look he read the rest.

"O Isabella, I can half perceive
That I may speak my grief into thine ear:

If thou didst ever anything believe, Believe how I love thee, believe how

My soul is to its doom: I would not grieve

Thy hand by unwelcome pressing, would not fear

Thine eyes by gazing; but I cannot live

Another night, and not my passion shrive.

"Love! thou art leading me from wintry cold.

Lady! thou leadest me to summer clime,

And I must taste the blossoms that unfold

In its ripe warmth this gracious morning time."

So said, his erewhile timid lips grew bold,

And poesied with hers in dewy rhyme: Great bliss was with them, and great happiness

Grew, like a lusty flower in June's caress.

Parting they seem'd to tread upon the air,

Twin roses by the zephyr blown apart Only to meet again more close, and share The inward fragrance of each other's heart.

She, to her chamber gone, a ditty fair Sang, of delicious love and honey'd dart;

He with light steps went up a western

And bade the sun farewell, and joy'd his fill.

All close they met again, before the dusk Had taken from the stars its pleasant veil,

All close they met, all eves, before the dusk

Had taken from the stars its pleasant veil,

Close in a bower of hyacinth and musk, Unknown of any, free from whispering tale.

Ah! better had it been for ever so, Than idle ears should pleasure in their woe.

Were they unhappy then?—It cannot be—

Too many tears for lovers have been shed,

Too many sighs give we to them in fee, Too much of pity after they are dead, Too many doleful stories do we see,

Whose matter in bright gold were best be read;

Except in such a page where Theseus' spouse

Over the pathless waves towards him bows.

But, for the general award of love,
The little sweet doth kill much bitterness;

Though Dido silent is in under-grove,
And Isabella's was a great distress,

Though young Lorenzo in warm Indian clove

Was not embalm'd, this truth is not the less—

Even bees, the little almsmen of springbowers,

Know there is richest juice in poison-flowers.

With her two brothers this fair lady dwelt,

Enriched from ancestral merchandise, And for them many a weary hand did swelt

In torched mines and noisy factories, And many once proud-quiver'd loins did melt

In blood from stinging whip;—with hollow eyes

Many all day in dazzling river stood,
To take the rich-ored driftings of the flood.

For them the Ceylon diver held his breath,

And went all naked to the hungry shark;

For them his ears gush'd blood; for them in death

The seal on the cold ice with piteous bark

Lay full of darts; for them alone did seethe

A thousand men in troubles wide and dark:

Half-ignorant, they turn'd an easy wheel.

That set sharp racks at work, to pinch and peel.

Why were they proud? Because their marble founts

Gush'd with more pride than do a wretch's tears?—

Why were they proud? Because fair orange-mounts

Were of more soft ascent than lazar stairs?—

Why were they proud? Because redlin'd accounts

Were richer than the songs of Grecian years?—

Why were they proud? again we ask aloud.

Why in the name of Glory were they proud?

Yet were these Florentines as self-retired

In hungry pride and gainful cowardice, As two close Hebrews in that land inspired,

Paled in and vineyarded from beggarspies;

The hawks of ship-mast forests—the untired

And pannier'd mules for ducats and old lies—

Quick cat's-paws on the generous strayaway.— Great wits in Spanish, Tuscan, and Malay.

How was it these same ledger-men could spy

Fair Isabella in her downy nest?

How could they find out in Lorenzo's eye A straying from his toil? Hot Egypt's pest

Into their vision covetous and sly!

How could these money-bags see east and west?—

Yet so they did—and every dealer fair Must see behind, as doth the hunted hare.

O eloquent and famed Boccaccio!

Of thee we now should ask forgiving boon,

And of thy spicy myrtles as they blow, And of thy roses amorous of the moon, And of thy lilies, that do paler grow

Now they can no more hear thy ghittern's tune, For venturing syllables that ill beseem
The quiet glooms of such a piteous theme.

Grant thou a pardon here, and then the tale

Shall move on soberly, as it is meet; There is no other crime, no mad assail

To make old prose in modern rhyme more sweet:

But it is done—succeed the verse or fail—

To honor thee, and thy gone spirit greet;

To stead thee as a verse in English tongue,

An echo of thee in the north-wind sung.

These brethren having found by many signs

What love Lorenzo for their sister had, And how she lov'd him too, each unconfines

His bitter thoughts to other, well-nigh mad

That he, the servant of their trade designs,

Should in their sister's love be blithe and glad

When 'twas their plan to coax her by degrees

To some high noble and his olive-trees.

And many a jealous conference had they,

And many times they bit their lips alone,

Before they fix'd upon a surest way

To make the youngster for his crime atone;

And at the last, these men of cruel clay
Cut Mercy with a sharp knife to the bone:

For they resolved in some forest dim To kill Lorenzo, and there bury him.

So on a pleasant morning, as he leant Into the sun-rise, o'er the balustrade

Of the garden-terrace, towards him they bent

Their footing through the dews; and to him said,

"You seem there in the quiet of content,

Lorenzo, and we are most loth to invade

Calm speculation; but if you are wise, Bestride your steed while cold is in the skies. "To-day we purpose, ay, this hour we mount

To spur three leagues towards the Apennine;

Come down, we pray thee, ere the hot sun count

His dewy rosary on the eglantine."
Lorenzo, courteously as he was wont,

Bow'd a fair greeting to these serpents' whine;

And went in haste, to get in readiness, With belt, and spur, and bracing huntsman's dress.

And as he to the court-yard pass'd along, Each third step did he pause, and listen'd oft

If he could hear his lady's matin-song, Or the light whisper of her footstep soft:

And as he thus over his passion hung,
He heard a laugh full musical aloft;
When he him years her fortune

When, looking up, he saw her features
bright

Smile through an in-door lattice, all delight.

"Love, Isabel!" said he, "I was in pain Lest I should miss to bid thee a good morrow:

Ah! what if I should lose thee, when so fain

I am to stifle all the heavy sorrow

Of a poor three hours' absence? but we'll gain

Out of the amorous dark what day doth borrow.

Good bye! I'll soon be back."—" Good bye!" said she:—

And as he went she chanted merrily.

So the two brothers and their murder'd man

Rode past fair Florence, to where Arno's stream

Gurgles through straiten'd banks, and still doth fan

Itself with dancing bulrush, and the bream

Keeps head against the freshets. Sick and wan

The brothers' faces in the ford did seem,

Lorenzo's flush with love.—They pass'd the water

Into a forest quiet for the slaughter.

There was Lorenzo slain and buried in, There in that forest did his great love cease: Ah! when a soul doth thus its freedom win,

It aches in loneliness—is ill at peace As the break-covert blood-hounds of such sin:

They dipp'd their swords in the water, and did tease

Their horses homeward, with convulsed spur,

Each richer by his being a murderer.

They told their sister how, with sudden speed,

Lorenzo had ta'en ship for foreign lands,

Because of some great urgency and need In their affairs, requiring trusty hands. Poor Girl! put on thy stifling widow's weed,

And 'scape at once from Hope's accursed bands:

To-day thou wilt not see him, nor to-morrow,

And the next day will be a day of sorrow.

She weeps alone for pleasures not to be; Sorely she wept until the night came on.

And then, instead of love, O misery!
She brooded o'er the luxury alone:
His image in the dusk she seem'd to see,

And to the silence made a gentle mean,
Spreading her perfect arms upon the air,
And on her couch low murmuring,
"Where? O where?"

But Selfishness, Love's cousin, held not long

Its fiery vigil in her single breast; She fretted for the golden hour, and hung Upon the time with feverish unrest—

Not long—for soon into her heart a

Of higher occupants, a richer zest, Came tragic; passion not to be subdued, And sorrow for her love in travels rude.

In the mid days of autumn, on their eves
The breath of Winter comes from far
away,

And the sick west continually bereaves Of some gold tinge, and plays a roundelay

Of death among the bushes and the leaves

To make all bare before he cares to stray

From his north cavern. So sweet Isabel By gradual decay from beauty fell,

Because Lorenzo came not. Oftentimes She ask'd her brothers, with an eye all pale,

Striving to be itself, what dungeon

Could keep him off so long? They spake a tale,

Time after time, to quiet her. Their crimes

Came on them, like a smoke from Hinnom's vale;

And every night in dreams they groan'd aloud,

To see their sister in her snowy shroud.

And she had died in drowsy ignorance, But for a thing more deadly dark than all;

It came like a fierce potion, drunk by chance,

Which saves a sick man from the feather'd pall

For some few gasping moments; like a lance,

Waking an Indian from his cloudy hall

With cruel pierce, and bringing him again

Sense of the gnawing fire at heart and brain.

It was a vision.—In the drowsy gloom,
The dull of midnight, at her couch's foot

Lorenzo stood, and wept: the forest tomb

Had marr'd his glossy bair which once could shoot

Lustre into the sun, and put cold doom Upon his lips, and taken the soft lute From his lorn voice, and past his loamed

Had made a miry channel for his tears.

Strange sound it was, when the pale shadow spake;

For there was striving, in its piteous tongue,

To speak as when on earth it was awake, And Isabella on its music hung:

Languor there was in it, and tremulous shake,

As in a palsied Druid's harp unstrung; And through it moan d a ghostly undersong,

Like hoarse night-gusts sepulchral briars among.

Its eyes, though wild, were still all dewy bright

With love, and kept all phantom fear aloof

From the poor girl by magic of their light,

The while it did unthread the horrid woof

Of the late darken'd time,—the murder ous spite
Of pride and avarice, the dark pine roof

In the forest,—and the sodden turfed ____. dell,

Where, without any word, from stabs he fell.

Saying moreover, "Isabel, my sweet! Red whortle-berries droop above my head,

And a large flint-stone weighs upon my feet;

Around me beeches and high chestnuts shed

Their leaves and prickly nuts; a sheepfold bleat

Comes from beyond the river to my

Go, shed one tear upon my heatherbloom,

And it shall comfort me within the tomb.

"I am a shadow now, alas! alas!

Upon the skirts of human-nature dwelling

Alone: I chant alone the holy mass, While little sounds of life are round me knelling,

And glossy bees at noon do fieldward
pass,

And many a chapel bell the hour is telling,

Paining me through: those sounds grow strange to me,

And thou art distant in Humanity.

"I know what was, I feel full well what is,

And I should rage, if spirits could go mad;

Though I forget the taste of earthly bliss,

That paleness warms my grave, as though I had

A Seraph chosen from the bright abyss
To be my spouse: thy paleness makes me glad;

Thy beauty grows upon me, and I feel A greater love through all my essence steal." The Spirit mourn'd "Adieu!"—dissolv'd, and left

The atom darkness in a slow turmoil; As when of healthful midnight sleep bereft,

Thinking on rugged hours and fruitless toil,

We put our eyes into a pillowy cleft,

And see the spangly gloom froth up
and boil:

It made sad Isabella's eyelids ache, And in the dawn she started up awake:

"Ha! ha!" said she, "I knew not this hard life,

I thought the worst was simple

misery;
I thought some Fate with pleasure or with strife

Portion'd us—happy days, or else to

But there is crime—a brother's bloody knife!

Sweet Spirit, thou hast school'd my infancy:

I'll visit thee for this, and kiss thine eyes,

And greet thee morn and even in the skies."

When the full morning came, she had devised

How she might secret to the forest hie; How she might find the clay, so dearly prized,

And sing to it one latest lullaby;

How her short absence might be unsurmised,

While she the inmost of the dream would try.

Resolv'd, she took with her an aged nurse, And went into that dismal forest-hearse.

See, as they creep along the riverside, How she doth whisper to that aged

How she doth whisper to that aged Dame,

And, after looking round the champaign wide,
Shows her a knife.—"What feverous

hectic flame

Burns in the child 2—What good can

Burns in thee, child?—What good can thee betide,

That thou should'st smile again?"—
The evening came,

And they had found Lorenzo's earthy bed; The flint was there, the berries at his head.

Who hath not loiter'd in a green churchyard, And let his spirit, like a demon-mole, Work through the clayey soil and gravel hard,

To see skull, coffin'd bones, and funeral stole;

Pitying each form that hungry Death hath marr'd,

And filling it once more with human soul?

Ah! this is holiday to what was felt When Isabella by Lorenzo knelt.

She gaz'd into the fresh-thrown mould, as though

One glance did fully all its secrets tell; Clearly she saw, as other eyes would know Pale limbs at bottom of a crystal well;

Upon the murderous spot she seem'd to

Like to a native lily of the dell: Then with her knife, all sudden, she began To dig more fervently than misers can.

Soon she turn'd up a soiled glove, whereon Hersilk had play'd in purple phantasies, She kiss'd it with a lip more chill than

And put it in her bosom, where it dries
And freezes utterly unto the bone

Those dainties made to still an infant's cries:

Then 'gan she work again; nor stay'd her care,

But to throw back at times her veiling hair.

That old nurse stood beside her wondering
Until her heart felt pity to the core
At sight of such a dismal laboring,

And so she kneeled, with her locks all hoar,

And put her lean hands to the horrid thing:

Three hours they labor'd at this travail sore;

At last they felt the kernel of the grave, And Isabella did not stamp and rave.

Ah! wherefore all this wormy circumstance?

Why linger at the yawning tomb so long?

O for the gentleness of old Romance,

The simple plaining of a minstrel's song!

Fair reader, at the old tale take a glance, For here, in truth, it doth not well belong

To speak:—O turn thee to the very tale, And taste the music of that vision pale.

With duller steel than the Perséan sword They cut away no formless monster's head,

But one, whose gentleness did well accord With death, as life. The ancient harps have said,

Love never dies, but lives, immortal

If Love impersonate was ever dead, Pale Isabella kiss'd it, and low moan'd 'Twas love; cold,—dead indeed, but not dethroned.

In anxious secrecy they took it home, And then the prize was all for Isabel: She calm'd its wild hair with a golden comb.

And all around each eye's sepulchral

Pointed each fringed lash; the smeared

loam
With tears, as chilly as a dripping well,

She drench'd away:—and still she comb'd, and kept Sighing all day—and still she kiss'd, and

Sighing all day—and still she kiss'd, and wept.

Then in a silken scarf, sweet with the dews

Of precious flowers pluck'd in Araby, And divine liquids come with odorous ooze

Through the cold serpent pipe refreshfully,—

She wrapp'd it up; and for its tomb did

A garden-pot, wherein she laid it by And cover'd it with mould and, o'er it set Sweet Basil, which her tears kept ever wet.

And she forgot the stars, the moon, and sun,

And she forgot the blue above the trees, And she forgot the dells where waters

And she forgot the chilly autumn breeze; She had no knowledge when the day was done.

And the new morn she saw not: but in peace

Hung over her sweet Basil evermore, And moisten'd it with tears unto the core.

And so she ever fed it with thin tears, Whence thick, and green, and beautiful it grew,

So that it smelt more balmy than its peers Of Basil-tufts in Florence; for it drew Nurture besides, and life, from human fears,

From the fast mouldering head there shut from view:

So that the jewel, safely casketed, Came forth, and in perfuméd leafits spread.

O Melancholy, linger here awhile! O Music, Music, breathe despondingly! O Echo, Echo, from some sombre isle, Unknown. Lethean, sigh to us—O sigh!

Spirits in grief, lift up your heads, and smile:

Lift up your heads, sweet Spirits, heavily,

And make a pale light in your cypress glooms, [tombs. Tinting with silver wan your marble

Moan hither, all ye syllables of woe,

From the deep throat of sad Melpomene!

Through bronzed lyre in tragic order go, And touch the strings into a mystery; Sound mournfully upon the winds and low;

For simple Isabel is soon to be Among the dead: She withers, like a palm

Cut by an Indian for its juicy balm.

O leave the palm to wither by itself; Let not quick Winter chill its dying hour!—

It may not be—those Baälites of pelf,
Her brethren, noted the continual shower

From her dead eyes; and many a curious elf,

Among her kindred, wonder'd that such dower

Of youth and beauty should be thrown aside

By one mark'd out to be a Noble's bride.

And, furthermore, her brethren wonder'd much

Why she sat drooping by the Basil green,

And why it flourish'd, as by magic touch; Greatly they wonder'd what the thing might mean

They could not surely give belief, that such

A very nothing would have power to wean

Her from her own fair youth, and pleasures gay, [lay.

And even remembrance of her love's de-

Therefore they watch'd a time when they might sift

This hidden whim; and long they watch'd in vain:

For seldom did she go to chapel-shrift, And seldom felt she any hunger-pain; And when she left, she hurried back, as swift

As bird on wing to breast its eggs again:

And, patient as a hen-bird, sat her there Beside her Basil, weeping through her hair.

Yet they contrivid to steal the Basil-pot, And to examine it in secret place: The thing was vile with green and livid spot.

And yet they knew it was Lorenzo's face; The guerdon of their murder they had got.

And so left Florence in a moment's space,

Never to turn again.—Away they went, With blood upon their heads, to banishment.

O Melancholy, turn thine eyes away! O Music, Music, breathe despondingly! O Echo, Echo, on some other day,

From isles Lethean, sigh to us—O sigh!
Spirits of grief, sing not your "Well-away!"

For Isabel, sweet Isabel, will die:

Will die a death too lone and incomplete, Now they have ta'en away her Basil sweet.

Piteous she look'd on dead and senseless things,

Asking for her lost Basil amorously:
And with melodious chuckle in the strings

Of her form voice, she oftentimes would cry

After the Pilgrim in his wanderings,
To ask him where her Basil was; and
why

'Twas hid from her: "For cruel 'tis," said she,

"To steal my Basil-pot away from me."

And so she pined, and so she died forlorn, Imploring for her Basil to the last.

No heart was there in Florence but did mourn

In pity of her love, so overcast.

And a sad ditty of this story born

From mouth to mouth through all the

From mouth to mouth through all the country pass'd:

Still is the burthen sung—"O cruelty,
"To steal my Basil-pot away from me!"

1818. 1820.

THE EVE OF ST. AGNES

St. Agnes' Eve—Ah, bitter chill it was!
The owl, for all his feathers, was a-cold;
The hare limp'd trembling through the frozen grass,

And silent was the flock in woolly fold: Numb were the Beadsman's fingers, while he told

His rosary, and while his frosted breath, Like pious incense from a censer old, Seem'd taking flight for heaven, without a death,

Past the sweet Virgin's picture, while his prayer he saith.

His prayer he saith, this patient, holy man

Then takes his lamp, and riseth from his knees,

And back returneth, meagre, barefoot, wan,

Along the chapel aisle by slow degrees: The sculptur'd dead, on each side, seem to freeze,

Emprison'd in black, purgatorial rails: Knights, ladies, praying in dumb oratiries.

He passeth by; and his weak spirit fails To think how they may ache in icy hoods and mails.

Northward he turneth through a little door,

And scarce three steps, ere Music's golden tongue

Flatter'd to tears this aged man and

But no -already had his deathbell rung; The joys of all his life were said and sung:

His was harsh penance on St. Agnes' Eve:

Another way he went, and soon among Rough ashes sat he for his soul's reprieve, And all night kept awake, for sinners' sake to grieve.

That ancient Beadsman heard the prelude soft;

And so it chanc'd, for many a door was wide,

From hurry to and fro. Soon, up aloft,
The silver, snarling trumpets gan to chide: [pride,
The level chambers, ready with their

Were glowing to receive a thousand guests:

The carved angels, ever eager-eyed, Star'd where upon their heads the cornice rests.

With hair blown back, and wings put cross-wise on their breasts.

At length burst in the argent revelry, With plume, tiara, and all rich array, Numerous as shadows haunting fairily The brain, new stuff'd, in youth, with triumphs gay of old romance. These let us wish

away,

And turn, sole-thoughted, to one Lady there,

Whose heart had brooded, all that wintry day,

On love, and wing'd St. Agnes' saintly care,

As she had heard old dames full many times declare.

They told her how, upon St. Agnes' Eve, Young virgins might have visions of delight,

And soft adorings from their loves receive

Upon the honey'd middle of the night If ceremonies due they did aright;

As, supperless to bed they must retire, And couch supine their beauties, lily white;

Nor look behind, nor sideways, but require

Of Heaven with upward eyes for all that they desire.

Full of this whim was thoughtful Madeline;

The music, yearning like a God in pain, She scarcely heard: her maiden eyes divine,

Fix'd on the floor, saw many a sweeping train

Pass by—she heeded not at all: in vain Came many a tiptoe, amorous cavalier, And back retir'd; not cool'd by high disdain,

But she saw not: her heart was otherwhere:

She sigh'd for Agnes' dreams, the sweetest of the year.

She danc'd along with vague, regardless eyes,

Anxious her lips, her breathing quick and short:

The hallow'd hour was near at hand: she sighs

Amid the timbrels, and the throng'd resort

Of whisperers in anger, or in sport;

'Mid looks of love, defiance, hate, and scorn,

Hoodwink'd with faery fancy; all amort, Save to St. Agnes and her lambs unshorn,

And all the bliss to be before to-morrow morn.

So, purposing each moment to retire, She linger'd still. Meantime, across the moors,

Had come young Porphyro, with heart on fire

For Madeline. Beside the portal doors, Buttress'd from moonlight, stands he, and implores

All saints to give him sight of Madeline, But for one moment in the tedious hours, That he might gaze and worship all unseen:

Perchance speak, kneel, touch, kiss—in sooth such things have been.

He ventures in : let no buzz'd whisper tell:

All eyes be muffled, or a hundred swords

Will storm his heart, Love's fev'rous citadel:

For him, those chambers held barbarian hordes,

Hyena foemen, and hot-blooded lords, Whose very dogs would execrations howl Against his lineage: not one breast affords

Him any mercy, in that mansion foul, Save one old beldame, weak in body and in soul.

Ah, happy chance! the aged creature came,

Shuffling along with ivory-headed wand, To where he stood, hid from the torch's flame.

Behind a broad hall-pillar, far beyond
The sound of merriment and chorus bland:

He startled her; but soon she knew his face.

And grasp'd his fingers in her palsied hand,

Saying, "Mercy, Porphyro! hie thee from this place;

They are all here to-night, the whole blood-thirsty race!

Get hence! get hence! there's dwarfish Hildebrand;

He had a fever late, and in the fit

He cursed thee and thine, both house and land:

Then there's that old Lord Maurice, not a whit

More tame for his gray hairs—Alas me! flit!

Flit like a ghost away."—"Ah, Gossip dear.

We're safe enough; here in this armchair sit.

And tell me how "-" Good Saints! not here, not here:

"Follow me, child, or else these stones will be thy bier."

He follow'd through a lowly arched way, Brushing the cobwebs with his lofty plume:

And as she mutter'd "Well-a-well-aday!"

He found him in a little moonlight

Pale, lattic'd, chill, and silent as a tomb. "Now tell me where is Madeline," said he,

"O tell me, Angela, by the holy loom Which none but secret sisterhood may

When they St. Agnes' wool are weaving piously."

"St. Agnes! Ah! it is St. Agnes' Eve-Yet men will murder upon holy days: Thou must hold water in a witch's sieve, And be liege-lord of all the Elves and Fays.

To venture so: it fills me with amaze To see thee, Porphyro!—St. Agnes' Eve! God's help! my lady fair the conjurer

This very night; good angels her deceive!

But let me laugh awhile, I've mickle time to grieve."

Feebly she laugheth in the languid moon.

While Porphyro upon her face doth look, Like puzzled urchin on an aged crone Who keepeth clos'd a wond'rous riddlebook.

As spectacled she sits in chimney nook. But soon his eyes grew brilliant, when

His lady's purpose; and he scarce could brook

Tears, at the thought of those enchantments cold.

And Madeline asleep in lap of legends

Sudden a thought came like a fullblown rose,

Flushing his brow, and in his pained heart

Made purple riot: then doth he propose A stratagem, that makes the beldame

"A cruel man and impious thou art: Sweet lady, let her pray, and sleep, and dream

Alone with her good angels, far apart From wicked men like thee. Go. go!-I deem Thou canst not surely be the same that thou didst seem.

"I will not harm her, by all saints I swear."

Quoth Porphyro: "O may I ne'er find grace

When my weak voice shall whisper its last prayer,

If one of her soft ringlets I displace, Or look with ruffian passion in her face: Good Angela, believe me by these tears; Or I will, even in a moment's space,

Awake, with horrid shout, my foemen's ears.

And beard them, though they be more fang'd than wolves and bears."

"Ah! why wilt thou affright a feeble soul?

A poor, weak, palsy-stricken churchyard thing,

Whose passing-bell may ere the midnight toll;

Whose prayers for thee, each morn and evening,

Were never miss'd." Thus plaining, doth she bring

A gentler speech from burning Porphyro:

So woful, and of such deep sorrowing, That Angela gives promise she will do Whatever he shall wish, betide her weal or woe.

Which was, to lead him, in close secrecy, Even to Madeline's chamber, and there hide

Him in a closet, of such privacy That he might see her beauty unespied, And win perhaps that night a peerless bride,

While legion'd fairies pac'd the coverlet, And pale enchantment held her sleepyeved.

Never on such a night have lovers met, Since Merlin paid his Demon all the monstrous debt.

"It shall be as thou wishest," said the Dame:

"All cates and dainties shall be stored there

Quickly on this feast-night: by the tambour frame

Her own lute thou wilt see: no time to spare.

For I am slow and feeble, and scarce dare On such a catering trust my dizzy head. Wait here, my child, with patience; kneel in prayer

The while: Ah! thou must needs the lady wed,

Or may I never leave my grave among the dead."

So saying, she hobbled off with busy fear.
The lover's endless minutes slowly pass'd;

The dame return'd, and whisper'd in his

To follow her; with aged eyes aghast From fright of dim espial. Safe at last, Through many a dusky gallery, they gain

The maiden's chamber, silken, hush'd, and chaste;

Where Porphyro took covert, pleas'd amain.

His poor guide hurried back with agues in her brain.

Her falt'ring hand upon the balustrade Old Angela was feeling for the stair, When Madeline, St Agnes' charmed maid.

Rose, like a mission'd spirit, unaware:
With silver taper's light, and pious care,
She turn'd, and down the aged gossip led
To a safe level matting. Now prepare,
Young Porphyro, for gazing on that bed;
She comes, she comes again, like ringdove fray'd and fled.

Out went the taper as she hurried in;
Its little smoke, in pallid moonshine,
died:

She clos'd the door, she panted, all akin To spirits of the air, and visions wide: No uttered syllable, or, woe betide! But to her heart, her heart was voluble, Paining with eloquence her balmy side;
As though a tongueless nightingale should swell

Her throat in vain, and die, heart-stifled, in her dell.

A casement high and triple arch'd there was,

All garlanded with carven imag'ries

Of fruits, and flowers, and bunches of knot-grass.

And diamonded with panes of quaint device,

Innumerable of stains and splendid dyes,
As are the tiger-moth's deep-damask'd
wings:

And in the midst, 'mong thousand heraldries,

And twilight saints, and dim emblazonings,

A shielded scutcheon blush'd with blood of queens and kings.

Full on this casement shone the wintry

And threw warm gules on Madeline's fair breast.

As down she knelt for heaven's grace and boon;

Rose-bloom fell on her hands, together prest,

And on her silver cross soft amethyst, And on her hair a glory, like a saint: She seem'd a splendid angel, newly drest, Save wings, for heaven: Porphyro grew faint:

She knelt, so pure a thing, so free from mortal taint.

Anon his heart revives: her vespers done, Of all its wreathed pearls her hair she frees;

Unclasps her warmed jewels one by one Loosens her fragrant boddice; by degrees

Her rich attire creeps rustling to her knees;

Half-hidden, like a mermaid in seaweed, Pensive awhile she dreams awake, and sees,

In fancy, fair St. Agnes in her bed,
But dares not look behind, or all the charm is fled.

Soon, trembling in her soft and chilly nest,

In sort of wakeful swoon, perplex'd she lay.

Until the poppied warmth of sleep oppress'd Her soothed limbs, and soul fatigued away:

Flown, like a thought, until the morrow-day;

Blissfully haven'd both from joy and pain:

Clasp'd like a missal where swart Paynims pray;

Blinded alike from sunshine and from

As though a rose should shut, and be a bud again.

Stol'n to this paradise, and so entranced.

Porphyro gazed upon her empty dress, And listen'd to her breathing, if it chanced

To wake into a slumberous tenderness; Which when he heard, that minute did he bless.

And breath'd himself: then from the closet crept,

Noiseless as fear in a wide wilderness, And over the hush'd carpet, silent, stepped,

And 'tween the curtains peep'd, where, lo!-how fast she slept.

Then by the bed-side, where the faded

Made a dim, silver twilight, soft he set A table, and, half-anguish'd, threw thereon

A cloth of woven crimson, gold, and jet :-

O for some drowsy Morphean amulet! The boisterous, midnight, festive cla-

The kettle-drum, and far-heard clarionet.

Affray his ears, though but in dying tone :-

The hall door shuts again, and all the noise is gone.

And still she slept an azure-lidded sleep, In blanched linen, smooth, and lavender'd.

While he from forth the closet brought a heap

Of candied apple, quince, and plum, and gourd:

With jellies soother than the creamy And lucent syrops, tinct with cinna-Manna and dates, in argosy transferr'd From Fez; and spiced dainties, every [banon.

From silken Samarcand to cedar'd Le-

These delicates he heap'd with glowing

On golden dishes and in baskets bright Of wreathed silver: sumptuous they stand

In the retired quiet of the night,

Filling the chilly room with perfume light.-

"And now, my love, my seraph fair, awake!

Thou art my heaven, and I thine eremite:

Open thine eyes, for meek St. Agnes' sake.

Or I shall drowse beside thee, so my soul doth ache."

Thus whispering, his warm, unnerved

Sank in her pillow. Shaded was her dream

By the dusk curtains:—'twas a midnight charm

Impossible to melt as iced stream:

The lustrous salvers in the moonlight gleam:

Broad golden fringe upon the carpet lies: It seem'd he never, never could redeem From such a stedfast spell his lady's eyes; So mus'd awhile, entoil'd in woofed phantasies.

Awakening up, he took her hollow lute,— Tumultuous,-and, in chords that tenderest be.

He play'd an ancient ditty, long since

In Provence call'd, "La belle dame sans mercv:"

Close to her ear touching the melody: Wherewith disturb'd, she utter'd a soft moan:

He ceased—she panted quick—and suddenly

Her blue affrayed eyes wide open shone: Upon his knees he sank, pale as smoothsculptured stone.

Her eyes were open, but she still beheld, Now wide awake, the vision of her sleep: There was a painful change, that nigh expell'd

The blisses of her dream so pure and deep At which fair Madeline began to weep,

And moan forth witless words with many a sigh; [keep; While still her gaze on Porphyro would Who knelt, with joined hands and piteous eye, dreamingly. Fearing to move or speak, she look'd so "Ah, Porphyro!" said she, "but even now

Thy voice was at sweet tremble in mine

Made tuneable with every sweetest vow;
And those sad eyes were spiritual and clear:

How chang'd thou art! how pallid, chill, and drear!

Give me that voice again, my Porphyro, Those looks immortal, those complainings dear!

Oh leave me not in this eternal woe, For if thou diest, my Love, I know not where to go."

Beyond a mortal man impassion'd far At these voluptuous accents, he arose, Ethereal, flush'd, and like a throbbing star

Seen mid the sapphire heaven's deep repose;

Into her dream he melted, as the rose
Blendeth its odor with the violet,— Solution great a magnificant her from

Solution sweet: meantime the frost wind blows Like Love's alarum pattering the sharp

Against the window-panes; St. Agnes' moon hath set.

'Tis dark: quick pattereth the flaw-blown sleet:

"This is no dream, my bride, my Madeline!"

"Tis dark: the iced gusts still rave and

"No dream, alas! alas! and woe is mine!
Porphyro will leave me here to fade and pine.—

Cruel! what traitor could thee hither bring?

I curse not, for my heart is lost in thine, Though thou forsakest a deceived thing;—

A dove forlorn and lost with sick unpruned wing."

"My Madeline! sweet dreamer! lovely bride!

Say, may I be for aye thy vassal blest?
Thy beauty's shield, heart-shap'd and vermeil dved?

Ah, silver shrine, here will I take my rest

After so many hours of toil and quest, A famish'd pilgrim,—saved by miracle. Though I have found, I will not rob thy nest Saving of thy sweet self; if thou think'st well

To trust, fair Madeline, to no rude infidel.

"Hark! 'tis an elfin-storm from faery land.

Of haggard seeming, but a boon indeed; Arise—arise! the morning is at hand;— The bloated wassaillers will never heed:—

Let us away, my love, with happy speed; There are no ears to hear, or eyes to see,— Drown'd all in Rhenish and the sleepy mead:

Awake! arise! my love, and fearless be, For o'er the southern moors I have a home for thee."

She hurried at his words, beset with fears,

For there were sleeping dragons all around,

At glaring watch, perhaps, with ready spears—

Down the wide stairs a darkling way they found.—
In all the house was heard no human

In all the house was heard no human sound.

A chain-droop'd lamp was flickering by each door;
The arms rich with however howk

The arras, rich with horseman, hawk, and hound,
Flutter'd in the besieging wind's uproar;

And the long carpets rose along the gusty floor.

They glide, like phantoms, into the wide hall;

Like phantoms, to the iron porch, they glide;

Where lay the Porter, in uneasy sprawl, With a huge empty flagon by his side: The wakeful bloodhound rose, and shook his hide,

But his sagacious eye an inmate owns:
By one, and one, the bolts full easy

The chains lie silent on the footworn stones:—

The key turns, and the door upon its hinges groans.

And they are gone: ay, ages long ago These lovers fled away into the storm.

That night the Baron dreamt of many a woe,

And all his warrior-guests, with shade and form

Of witch, and demon, and large coffinworm,

Were long be-nightmar'd. Angela the

THE EVE OF SAINT MARK

A FRAGMENT

Upon a Sabbath-day it fell; Twice holy was the Sabbath-bell, That call'd the folks to evening prayer; The city streets were clean and fair From wholesome drench of April rains; And, on the western window panes, The chilly sunset faintly told Of unmatur'd green valleys cold, Of the green thorny bloomless hedge, Of rivers new with spring-tide sedge, Of primroses by shelter'd rills, And daisies on the aguish hills. Twice holy was the Sabbath-bell: The silent streets were crowded well With staid and pious companies, Warm from their fire-side oratiries: And moving, with demurest air, To even-song, and vesper prayer. Each arched porch, and entry low, Was fill'd with patient folk and slow, With whispers hush, and shuffling feet, While play'd the organ loud and sweet.

The bells had ceas'd, the prayers begun, And Bertha had not yet half done A curious volume, patch'd and torn, That all day long, from earliest morn, Had taken captive her two eyes, Among its golden broideries; Perplex'd her with a thousand things,—The stars of Heaven, and angels' wings, Martyrs in a fiery blaze, Azure saints and silver rays, Moses' breastplate, and the seven Candlesticks John saw in Heaven, The winged Lion of St. Mark, And the Covenantal Ark, With its many mysteries, Cherubim and golden mice.

Bertha was a maiden fair, Dwelling in th' old Minster-square; From her fire-side she could see, Sidelong, its rich antiquity, Far as the Bishop's garden-wall; Where sycamores and elm-trees tall, Full-leav'd, the forest had outstript, By no sharp north-wind ever nipt, So shelter'd by the mighty pile. Bertha arose, and read awhile, With forehead 'gainst the window-pane Again she try'd, and then again, Until the dusk eve left her dark Upon the legend of St. Mark. From plated lawn-frill, fine and thin, She lifted up her soft warm chin. With aching neck and swimming eyes, And daz'd with saintly imageries.

All was gloom, and silent all,
Save now and then the still foot-fall
Of one returning homewards late,
Past the echoing minster-gate.
The clamorous daws, that all the day
Above tree-tops and towers play,
Pair by pair had gone to rest,
Each in its ancient belfry nest,
Where asleep they fall betimes,
To music and the drowsy chimes.

All was silent, all was gloom,
Abroad and in the homely room:
Down she sat, poor cheated soul;
And struck a lamp from the dismal coal;
Lean'd forward, with bright drooping

And slant look, full against the glare. Her shadow, in uneasy guise, Hover'd about, a giant size, On ceiling-beam and old oak chair, The parrot's cage, and panel square; And the warm angled winter-screen, On which were many monsters seen, Call'd doves of Siam, Lima mice, And legless birds of Paradise, Macaw, and tender Avadavat, And silken-furr'd Angora cat. Untir'd she read, her shadow still Glower'd about, as it would fill The room with wildest forms and shades, As though some ghostly queen of spades Had come to mock behind her back, And dance, and ruffle her garments black.

Untir'd she read the legend page,
Of holy Mark, from youth to age,
On land, on sea, in pagan chains,
Rejoicing for his many pains.
Sometimes the learned eremite,
With golden star, or dagger bright,
Referr'd to pious poesies
Written in smallest crow-quill size
Beneath the text: and thus the rhyme

Was parcel'd out from time to time: --- "Als writeth he of swevens, Men han before they wake in bliss,

Whanne that hir friendes thinke him hound

In crimped shroude farre under grounde: And how a litling childe mote be A saint er its nativitie,

At length her constant evelids come Upon the fervent martyrdom; Then lastly to his holy shrine, Exalt amid the tapers' shine At Venice,-

ODE ON INDOLENCE

"They toil not, neither do they spin."

ONE morn before me were three figures

With bowed necks, and joined hands, side-faced:

And one behind the other stepp'd serene, In placid sandals, and in white robes graced

They pass ?, like figures on a marble urn, When snifted round to see the other

They came again; as when the urn once more

Is shifted round, the first seen shades return:

And they were strange to me, as may betide

With vases, to one deep in Phidian

How is it Shadows! that I knew ye not? How come ye muffled in so hush a mask? Was it a silent deep-disguised plot To steal away, and leave without a task My idle days? Ripe was the drowsy

The blissful cloud of summer-indolence

Benumbed my eyes; my pulse grew less and less:

Pain had no sting, and pleasure's wreath no flower:

O why did ye not melt, and leave my sense

Unhaunted quite of all but—noth. ingness?

A third time passed they by, and, passing, turn'd

Each one the face a moment whiles to

Then faded, and to follow them I burn'd And ach'd for wings, because I knew the three:

The first was a fair Maid, and Love her name:

The second was Ambition, pale of cheek.

And ever watchful with fatigued

The last, whom I love more, the more of blame

Is heap'd upon her, maiden most unmeek.-

I knew to be my demon Poesy.

They faded, and forsooth! I wanted wings:

O folly! What is Love? and where is it?

And for that poor Ambition! it springs From a man's little heart's short feverfit:

For Poesy !-- no,--she has not a joy,-At least for me,—so sweet as drowsy noons,

And evenings steep'd in honied indolence:

O, for an age so sheltered from annov. That I may never know how change the moons.

Or hear the voice of busy commonsense!

And once more came they by;—alas! wherefore?

My sleep had been embroider'd with dim dreams;

My soul had been a lawn besprinkled

With flowers, and stirring shades, and baffled beams:

The morn was clouded, but no shower Tho' in her lids hung the sweet tears of May; The open casement press'd a newleav'd vine,

Let in the budding warmth and throstle's lay;

O Shadows! 'twas a time to bid farewell!

Upon your skirts had fallen no tears of mine.

So, ye three Ghosts, adieu! Ye cannot raise

My head cool-bedded in the flowery grass;

For I would not be dieted with praise, A pet-lamb in a sentimental farce!

Fade softly from my eyes, and be once

In masque-like Figures on the dreamy urn;

Farewell! I yet have visions for the night,

And for the day faint visions there is store:

Vanish, ye Phantoms! from my idle spright,

Into the clouds, and never more return! March, 1819. 1848.

ODE

BARDS of Passion and of Mirth, Ye have left your souls on earth! Have ye souls in heaven too, Double-lived in regions new? Yes, and those of heaven commune With the spheres of sun and moon; With the noise of fountains wond'rous. And the parle of voices thund'rous; With the whisper of heaven's trees And one another, in soft ease Seated on Elvsian lawns Brows'd by none but Dian's fawns; Underneath large blue-bells tented, Where the daisies are rose-scented, And the rose herself has got Perfume which on earth is not; Where the nightingale doth sing Not a senseless, tranced thing, But divine melodious truth; Philosophic numbers smooth; Tales and golden histories Of heaven and its mysteries.

Thus ye live on high, and then
On the earth ye live again;
And the souls ye left behind you
Teach us, here, the way to find you,
Where your other souls are joying,
Never slumber'd, never cloying.
Here, your earth-born souls still speak
To mortals, of their little week;

Of their sorrows and delights; Of their passions and their spites; Of their glory and their shame; What doth strengthen and what maim. Thus ye teach us, every day, Wisdom, though fled far away.

Bards of Passion and of Mirth, Ye have left your souls on earth! Ye have souls in heaven too, Double-lived in regions new!

ODE TO PSYCHE

O Goddess! hear these tuneless numbers, wrung

By sweet enforcement and remembrance dear,

And pardon that thy secrets should be sung

Even into thine own soft-conched ear; Surely I dreamt to-day, or did I see

The winged Psyche with awaken'd eyes?

I wander'd in a forest thoughtlessly, And, on the sudden, fainting with surprise, [side Saw two fair creatures, couched side by

In deepest grass, beneath the whisp'ring roof
Of leaves and trembled blossoms, where

Of leaves and trembled blossoms, where there ran

A brooklet, scarce espied:
'Mid hush'd, cool-rooted flowers, fragrant-eyed,

Blue, silver-white, and budded Tyrian, They lay calm-breathing on the bedded grass:

Their arms embracéd, and their pinions too;

Their lips touch'd not, but had not bade adieu.

As if disjoined by soft-handed slumber, And ready still past kisses to outnumber At tender eye-dawn of aurorean love:

The winged boy I knew;
But who wast thou, O happy, happy dove?

His Psyche true!

O latest born and loveliest vision far Of all Olympus' faded hierarchy! Fairer than Phoebe's sapphire-region'd star, [sky; Or Vesper, amorous glow-worm of the

Or Vesper, amorous glow-worm of the Fairer than these, though temple thou hast none,

Nor altar heap'd with flowers;

Nor virgin-choir to make delicious moan Upon the midnight hours; No voice, no lute, no pipe, no incense

sweet

From chain-swung censer teeming: No shrine, no grove, no oracle, no heat Of pale-mouth'd prophet dreaming.

O brightest! though too late for antique vows.

Too, too late for the fond believing lyre.

When holy were the haunted forest boughs,

Holy the air, the water, and the fire; Yet even in these days so far retir'd

From happy pieties, thy lucent fans, Fluttering among the faint Olymp-

I see, and sing, by my own eyes inspired. So let me be thy choir, and make a moan Upon the midnight hours;

Thy voice, thy lute, thy pipe, thy incense sweet

Of pale-mouth'd prophet dreaming.

Yes, I will be thy priest, and build a fane In some untrodden region of my mind, Where branched thoughts, new grown with pleasant pain,

Instead of pines shall murmur in the wind:

Far, far around shall those dark-cluster'd trees

Fledge the wild-ridged mountains steep by steep;

And there by zephyrs, streams, and birds, and bees. The moss-lain Dryads shall be lull'd to sleep;

And in the midst of this wide quietness A rosy sanctuary will I dress

With the wreath'd trellis of a working brain.

With buds, and bells, and stars without a name.

With all the gardener Fancy e'er could

Who breeding flowers, will never breed the same:

And there shall be for thee all soft de-That shadowy thought can win,

To let the warm Love in!

April, 1819. 1820.

ODE ON A GRECIAN URN

Thou still unravish'd bride of quietness, Thou foster-child of silence and slow time.

Sylvan historian, who canst thus express

A flowery tale more sweetly than our rhyme:

What leaf-fring'd legend haunts about thy shape

Of deities or mortals, or of both, In Tempe or the dales of Arcady? What men or gods are these? What maidens loth?

What mad pursuit? What struggle to escape?

What pipes and timbrels? What wild ecstasy?

Heard melodies are sweet, but those unheard

Are sweeter; therefore, ye soft pipes, play on ;

Not to the sensual ear, but, more endear'd,

Pipe to the spirit ditties of no tone: Fair youth, beneath the trees, thou canst not leave Thy song, nor ever can those trees be

Bold Lover, never, never canst thou

Though winning near the goal-yet, do not grieve;

She cannot fade, though thou hast not thy bliss,

For ever wilt thou love, and she be fair!

Ah, happy, happy boughs! that cannot

Your leaves, nor ever bid the Spring adieu;

And, happy melodist, unwearied, For ever piping songs for ever new;

More happy love! more happy, happy love!

For ever warm and still to be enjoy'd, For ever panting, and for ever young;

All breathing human passion far above, That leaves a heart high-sorrowful and cloy'd,

A burning forehead, and a parching tongue.

Who are these coming to the sacrifice? To what green altar, O mysterious priest.

Lead'st thou that heifer lowing at the skies,

And all her silken flanks with garlands dressed?

What little town by river or sea shore, Or mountain-built with peaceful citadel.

Is emptied of this folk, this pious morn?

And, little town, thy streets for evermore

Will silent be; and not a soul to tell Why thou art desolate, can e'er return.

O Attic shape! Fair attitude! with brede

Of marble men and maidens over wrought,

With forest branches and the trodden weed;

Thou, silent form, dost tease us out of thought

As doth eternity: Cold Pastoral!
When old age shall this generation
waste.

Thou shalt remain, in midst of other woe

Than ours, a friend to man, to whom thou say'st,

"Beauty is truth, truth beauty,"— that is all

Ye know on earth, and all ye need to know.

1819. January, 1820.

ODE TO A NIGHTINGALE

My heart aches, and a drowsy numbness pains

My sense, as though of hemlock I had drunk,

Or emptied some dull opiate to the drains One minute past, and Lethe-wards had sunk:

'Tis not through envy of thy happy lot, But being too happy in thine happiness.—

That thou, light winged Dryad of the trees,

In some melodious plot

Of beechen green, and shadows numberless,

Singest of summer in full-throated ease.

O, for a draught of vintage! that hath been [earth, Cool'd a long age in the deep-delved

Tasting of Flora and the country green.
Dance, and Provençal song, and sunburnt mirth!

O for a beaker full of the warm South, Full of the true, the blushful Hippocrene,

With beaded bubbles winking at the brim.

And purple-stained mouth;
That I might drink, and leave the world unseen.

And with thee fade away into the forest dim:

Fade far away, dissolve, and quite forget What thou among the leaves hast never known,

The weariness, the fever, and the fret Here, where men sit and hear each other groan;

Where palsy shakes a few, sad, last gray hairs.

Where youth grows pale, and spectrethin, and dies;

Where but to think is to be full of sorrow

And leaden-eyed despairs,
Where Beauty cannot keep her lustrous eyes,

Or new Love pine at them beyond to-morrow.

Away! away! for I will fly to thee,
Not charioted by Bacchus and his pards,

But on the viewless wings of Poesy,
Though the dull brain perplexes and

Already with thee! tender is the night, And haply the Queen-Moon is on her throne,

Cluster'd around by all her starry Fays;

But here there is no light,
Save what from heaven is with the breezes blown

Through verdurous glooms and winding mossy ways.

I cannot see what flowers are at my feet,

Nor what soft incense hangs upon the boughs,

But, in embalmed darkness, guess each sweet

Wherewith the seasonable month endows

The grass, the thicket, and the fruit-tree wild;

White hawthorn, and the pastoral eglantine;

Fast fading violets cover'd up in leaves:

And mid-May's eldest child,

The coming musk-rose, full of dewy wine.

The murmurous haunt of flies on summer eves.

Darkling I listen; and, for many a time I have been half in love with easeful Death,

Call'd him soft names in many a mused rhyme,

To take into the air my quiet breath; Now more than ever seems it rich to die, To cease upon the midnight with no pain,

While thou art pouring forth thy soul abroad

In such an ecstasy!

Still wouldst thou sing, and I have ears in vain—

To thy high requiem become a sod.

Thou wast not born for death, immortal Bird!

No hungry generations tread thee down;

The voice I hear this passing night was

In ancient days by emperor and clown: Perhaps the self-same song that found a path

Through the sad heart of Ruth, when,

sick for home,

She stood in tears amid the alien

The same that oft-times hath Charm'd magic casements, opening on the foam

Of perilous seas, in faery lands forlorn.

Forlorn! the very word is like a bell
To toll me back from thee to my sole self!

Adieu! the fancy cannot cheat so well
As she is fam'd to do, deceiving elf.

As she is fam a to do, deceiving en.

Adieu! adieu! thy plaintive anthem fades

Past the near meadows, over the still stream, [deep

Up the hill-side; and now tis buried In the next valley-glades:

Was it a vision, or a waking dream? Fled is that music:—Do I wake or sleep? May, 1819. July, 1819.

ODE ON MELANCHOLY

No, no, go not to Lethe, neither twist Wolf's-bane, tight-rooted, for its poisonous wine;

Nor suffer thy pale forehead to be kiss'd By nightshade, ruby grape of Proserpine;

Make not your rosary of yew-berries, Nor let the beetle, nor the death-moth

Your mournful Psyche, nor the downy owl A partner in your sorrow's mysteries;

For shade to shade will come too drowsily, And drown the wakeful anguish of

And drown the wakeful anguish of the soul.

But when the melancholy fit shall fall Sudden from heaven like a weeping cloud,

That fosters the droop-headed flowers all.

And hides the green hill in an April shroud;

Then glut thy sorrow on a morning rose, Or on the rainbow of the salt sandwave.

Or on the wealth of globed peonies; Or if thy mistress some rich anger shows, Emprison her soft hand, and let her rave.

And feed deep, deep upon her peerless eyes.

She dwells with Beauty—Beauty that must die;

And Joy, whose hand is ever at his lips Bidding adieu; and aching Pleasure nigh, Turning to poison while the bee-mouth sips:

Ay, in the very temple of Delight

Veil'd Melancholy has her sovran shrine,

Though seen of none save him whose strenuous tongue

Can burst Joy's grape against his palate fine:

His soul shall taste the sadness of her might,

And be among her cloudy trophies hung. 1819. 1820.

TO AUTUMN

SEASON of mists and mellow fruitfulness, Close bosom-friend of the maturing sun; Conspiring with him how to load and bless

With fruit the vines that round the thatch-eves run;

To bend with apples the moss'd cottagetrees,

And fill all fruit with ripeness to the core;

To swell the gourd, and plump the hazel shells

With a sweet kernel; to set budding more.

And still more, later flowers for the bees,

Until they think warm days will never cease,

For Summer has o'er-brimm'd their clammy cells.

Who hath not seen thee oft amid thy store?

Sometimes whoever seeks abroad may find

Thee sitting careless on a granary floor, Thy hair soft-lifted by the winnowing wind:

Or on a half-reap'd furrow sound asleep, Drows'd with the fume of poppies, while thy hook

Spares the next swath and all its twined flowers:

And sometimes like a gleaner thou dost keep

Steady thy laden head across a brook; Or by a cider-press, with patient look, Thou watchest the last oozings hours by hours.

Where are the songs of Spring? Ay, where are they?

Think not of them, thou hast thy music too,—

While barred clouds bloom the softdying day,

And touch the stubble-plains with rosy hue;

Then in a wailful choir the small gnats mourn

Among the river sallows, borne aloft Or sinking as the light wind lives or dies;

And full-grown lambs loud bleat from hilly bourn;

Hedge-crickets sing; and now with treble soft [croft;

The red-breast whistles from a garden-And gathering swallows twitter in the skies.

HYPERION

A FRAGMENT

BOOK I.

DEEP in the shady sadness of a vale Far sunken from the healthy breath of morn,

Far from the fiery noon, and eve's one star,

Sat gray-hair'd Saturn, quiet as a stone, Still as the silence round about his lair; Forest on forest hung about his head

Like cloud on cloud. No stir of air was there,

Not so much life as on a summer's day Robs not one light seed from the feather'd grass,

But where the dead leaf fell, there did it rest.

A stream went voiceless by, still deadened more

By reason of his fallen divinity

Spreading a shade: the Naiad 'mid her reeds

Press'd her cold finger closer to her lips.

Along the margin-sand large footmarks went,

No further than to where his feet had stray'd,

And slept there since. Upon the sodden ground

His old right hand lay nerveless, listless, dead, Unsceptred; and his realmless eyes were closed; While his bow'd head seem'd list'ning

to the Earth,

His ancient mother, for some comfort yet.

It seem'd no force could wake him from his place;

But there came one, who with a kindred hand

Touch'd his wide shoulders, after bending low

With reverence, though to one who knew it not.

She was a Goddess of the infant world; By her in stature the tall Amazon

Had stood a pigmy's height: she would have ta'en

Achilles by the hair and bent his neck; Or with a finger stay'd Ixion's wheel. Her face was large as that of Memphian sphinx, Pedestal'd haply in a palace court, When sages look'd to Egypt for their lore.

But oh! how unlike marble was that

How beautiful, if sorrow had not made Sorrow more beautiful than Beauty's self.

There was a listening fear in her regard, As if calamity had but begun:

As if the vanward clouds of evil days Had spent their malice, and the sullen

Was with its stored thunder laboring up. One hand she press'd upon that aching

Where beats the human heart, as if just there,

Though an immortal, she felt cruel pain; The other upon Saturn's bended neck She laid, and to the level of his ear

Leaning with parted lips, some words she spake

In solemn tenor and deep organ tone: Some mourning words, which in our feeble tongue

Would come in these like accents; O how frail

To that large utterance of the early Gods!

"Saturn, look up!—though wherefore, poor old King?

I have no comfort for thee, no not one:
I cannot say, 'O wherefore sleepest thou?'

[earth

For heaven is parted from thee, and the Knows thee not, thus afflicted, for a God:

And ocean too, with all its solemn noise, Has from thy sceptre pass'd; and all the air

Is emptied of thine hoary majesty.

Thy thunder, conscious of the new command.

Rumbles refuctant o'er our fallen house:
And thy sharp lightning in unpractised
hands

Scorches and burns our once serene demain.

O aching time! O moments big as years!
All as ye pass swell out the monstrous truth.

And press it so upon our weary griefs That unbelief has not a space to breathe. Saturn, sleep on:—O thoughtless, why did I

Thus violate thy slumbrous solitude?
Why should I ope thy melancholy eyes?
Saturn, sleep on! while at thy feet I
weep."

As when, upon a tranced summernight,

Those green-rob'd senators of mighty 'woods,

Tall caks branch-charmed by the Tall oaks, branch-charmed by the earnest stars,

Dream, and so dream all night without a stir,

Save from one gradual solitary gust Which comes upon the silence, and dies

As if the ebbing air had but one wave; So came these words and went; the

She touch'd her fair large forehead to the ground,

Just where her falling hair might be outspread

A soft and silken mat for Saturn's feet.
One moon, with alteration slow, had shed

Her silver seasons four upon the night, And still these two were postured motionless,

Like natural sculpture in cathedral cavern;

The frozen God still couchant on the earth,

And the sad Goddess weeping at his feet: Until at length old Saturn lifted up His faded eyes, and saw his kingdom

And all the gloom and sorrow of the place,

And that fair kneeling Goddess; and then spake,

As with a palsied tongue, and while his

Shook horrid with such aspen-malady: "O tender spouse of gold Hyperion, Thea, I feel thee ere I see thy face:

Look up, and let me see our doom in it; Look up, and tell me if this feeble shape Is Saturn's; tell me, if thou hear'st the voice

Of Saturn; tell me, if this wrinkling brow,

Naked and bare of its great diadem, Peers like the front of Saturn. Who had power

To make me desolate? whence came the strength?

How was it nurtur'd to such bursting forth,

While Fate seem'd strangled in my nervous grasp?

But it is so; and I am smother'd up, And buried from all godlike exercise Of influence benign on planets pale, Of admonitions to the winds and seas, Of peaceful sway above man's harvesting,

And all those acts which Deity supreme Doth ease its heart of love in.—I am gone Away from my own bosom: I have left My strong identity, my real self,

Somewhere between the throne, and where I sit

Here on this spot of earth. Search, Thea, search!

Open thine eyes eterne, and sphere them round

Upon all space: space starr'd, and lorn of light:

Space region'd with life-air; and barren void:

Spaces of fire, and all the yawn of hell.-Search, Thea, search! and tell me, if thou seest

A certain shape or shadow, making way With wings or chariot fierce to repossess A heaven he lost erewhile: it must—it must

Be of ripe progress—Saturn must be

King.

Yes, there must be a golden victory: There must be Gods thrown down, and trumpets blown

Of triumph calm, and hymns of festival Upon the gold clouds metropolitan, Voices of soft proclaim, and silver stir

Of strings in hollow shells; and there shall be

Beautiful things made new, for the surprise

Of the sky-children; I will give command:

Thea! Thea! Thea! where is Saturn?"

This passion lifted him upon his feet. And made his hands to struggle in the air, His Druid locks to shake and ooze with sweat.

His eyes to fever out, his voice to cease. He stood, and heard not Thea's sobbing

A little time, and then again he snatch'd Utterance thus.—" But cannot I create? Cannot I form? Cannot I fashion forth Another world, another universe,

To overbear and crumble this to nought? Where is another chaos? Where?"- [quake That word Found way unto Olympus, and made The rebel three.—Thea was startled up, And in her bearing was a sort of hope, As thus she quick-voic'd spake, yet full of awe.

"This cheers our fallen house: come to our friends.

O Saturn! come away, and give them heart:

I know the covert for thence came I hither."

Thus brief; then with beseeching eyes she went

With backward footing through the shade a space:

He follow'd, and she turn'd to lead the

Through aged boughs, that yielded like the mist

Which eagles cleave upmounting from their nest.

Meanwhile in other realms big tears were shed.

More sorrow like to this, and such like

woe,
Too huge for mortal tongue or pen of scribe:

The Titans fierce, self-hid, or prisonbound.

Groan'd for the old allegiance once more. And listen'd in sharp pain for Saturn's voice.

But one of the whole mammoth-brood still kept

His sov'reignty, and rule, and majesty:— Blazing Hyperion on his orbed fire Still sat, still snuff'd the incense, teeming

From man to the sun's God; vet unsecure:

For as among us mortals omens drear Fright and perplex, so also shuddered

Not at dog's howl, or gloom-bird's hated screech.

Or the familiar visiting of one Upon the first toll of his passing-bell. Or prophesyings of the midnight lamp; But horrors, portion'd to a giant nerve, Oft made Hyperion ache. His palace bright Bastion'd with pyramids of glowing gold, And touch'd with shade of bronzed obelisks.

Glar'd a blood-red through all its thousand courts.

Arches, and domes, and fiery galleries; And all its curtains of Aurorian clouds Flush'd angerly: while sometimes eagle's wings,

Unseen before by Gods or wondering [were heard, Darken'd the place; and neighing steeds

Not heard before by Gods or wondering men.

Also, when he would taste the spicy wreaths

Of incense, breath'd aloft from sacred hills.

Instead of sweets, his ample palate took Savor of poisonous brass and metal sick: And so, when harbor'd in the sleepy west.

After the full completion of fair day,— For rest divine upon exalted couch And slumber in the arms of melody,

He pac'd away the pleasant hours of ease With stride colossal, on from hall to hall; While far within each aisle and deep recess.

His winged minions in close clusters

stood,

Amaz'd and full of fear; like anxious men Who on wide plains gather in panting troops,

When earthquakes jar their battlements and towers.

Even now, while Saturn, rous'd from icy trance,

Went step for step with Thea through the woods,

Hyperion, leaving twilight in the rear, Came slope upon the threshold of the west;

Then, as was wont, his palace-door flew

In smoothest silence, save what solemn tubes, Blown by the serious Zephyrs, gave of

And wandering sounds, slow-breathed melodies:

And like a rose in vermeil tint and shape, In fragrance soft, and coolness to the eye, That inlet to severe magnificence

Stood full blown, for the God to enter in.

He enter'd, but he enter'd full of wrath; His flaming robes stream'd out beyond his heels,

And gave a roar, as if of earthly fire, That scar'd away the meek ethereal

And Hours made their dove-wings tremble.
On he flared.

From stately nave to nave, from vault to vault,

Through bowers of fragrant and enwreathed light,

And diamond-paved lustrous long arcades,

Until he reach'd the great main cupola;

There standing fierce beneath, he stamped his foot,

And from the basements deep to the high towers

Jarr'd his own golden region; and before The quavering thunder thereupon had ceas'd.

His voice leapt out, despite of godlike curb,

To this result: "O dreams of day and night!

O monstrous forms! O effigies of pain! O spectres busy in a cold, cold gloom!

O lank-ear'd Phantoms of black-weeded pools!

Why do I know ye? why have I seen ye? why Is my eternal essence thus distraught

To see and to behold these horrors new? Saturn is fallen, am I too to fall? Am I to leave this haven of my rest, This cradle of my glory, this soft clime, This calm luxuriance of blissful light,

These crystalline pavilions, and pure fanes,
Of all my lucent empire? It is left

Deserted, void, nor any haunt of mine.
The blaze, the splendor, and the symmetry,

I cannot see—but darkness, death and darkness.

Even here, into my centre of repose,
The shady visions come to domineer,
Insult, and blind, and stifle up my pomp.—

Fall!—No, by Tellus and her briny robes!

Over the fiery frontier of my realms

I will advance a terrible right arm

Shall scare that infant thunderer, rebel Jove,

And bid old Saturn take his throne again."—
He spake, and ceas'd, the while a heavier threat

Held struggle with his throat but came not forth;

For as in theatres of crowded men Hubbub increases more they call out "Hush!"

So at Hyperion's words the Phantoms

Bestirr'd themselves, thrice horrible and cold; And from the mirror'd level where he stood

A mist arose, as from a scummy marsh.

At this, through all his bulk an agony Crept gradual, from the feet unto the crown. Like a lithe serpent vast and muscular Making slow way, with head and neck convuls'd

From over-strained might. Releas'd, he fled

To the eastern gates, and full six dewy

Before the dawn in season due should blush.

He breath'd fierce breath against the sleepy portals,

Clear'd them of heavy vapors, burst them wide

Suddenly on the ocean's chilly streams.
The planet orb of fire, whereon he rode
Each day from east to west the heavens through.

Spun round in sable curtaining of clouds: Not therefore veiled quite, blindfold, and hid,

But ever and anon the glancing spheres, Circles, and arcs, and broad-belting colure,

Glow'd through, and wrought upon the muffling dark

Sweet-shaped lightnings from the nadir deep

Up to the zenith,—hieroglyphics old,
Which sages and keen-eyed astrologers
Then living on the earth, with laboring thought

Won from the gaze of many centuries:

Now lost, save what we find on remnants huge

Of stone, or marble swart; their import

Their wisdom long since fled.—Two wings this orb

Possess'd for glory, two fair argent wings,

Ever exalted at the God's approach:

And now, from forth the gloom their plumes immense

Rose, one by one, till all outspreaded were;

While still the dazzling globe maintain'd eclipse,

Awaiting for Hyperion's command.
Fain would he have commanded, fain took throne

And bid the day begin, if but for change. He might not:—No, though a primeval God;

The sacred seasons might not be disturb'd.

Therefore the operations of the dawn Stay'd in their birth, even as here 'tistold. Those silver wings expanded sisterly, Eager to sail their orb; the porches wide Open'd upon the dusk demesnes of night; And the bright Titan, phrenzied with new woes,

Unus'd to bend, by hard compulsion bent His spirit to the sorrow of the time; And all along a dismal rack of clouds, Upon the boundaries of day and night, He stretch'd himself in grief and radiance faint.

There as he lay, the Heaven with its

Look'd down on him with pity, and the voice

Of Cœlus, from the universal space, Thus whisper'd low and solemn in his ear.

"O brightest of my children dear, earthborn

And sky-engendered, Son of Mysteries All unrevealed even to the powers Which met at thy creating; at whose joy And palpitations sweet, and pleasures soft,

I, Cœlus, wonder, how they came and whence;

And at the fruits thereof what shapes they be,

Distinct, and visible; symbols divine, Manifestations of that beauteous life Diffus'd unseen throughout eternal space;

Of these new-form'd art thou, oh brightest child!

Of these, thy brethren and the Goddesses!

There is sad feud among ye, and rebellion

Of son against his sire. I saw him fall, I saw my first-born tumbled from his throne!

To me his arms were spread, to me his voice

Found way from forth the thunders round his head!

Pale wox I and in vapors hid my face. Art thou, too, near such doom? vague fear there is:

For I have seen my sons most unlike Gods.

Divine ye were created, and divine In sad demeanor, solemn, undisturb'd, Unruffled, like high Gods, ye liv'd and ruled:

Now I behold in you fear, hope, and wrath:

Actions of rage and passion; even as I see them, on the mortal world beneath, In men who die.—This is the grief, O Son! Sad sign of ruin, sudden dismay, and fall!

Yet do thou strive: as thou art capable. As thou canst move about, an evident

God:

And canst oppose to each malignant hour Ethereal presence:—I am but a voice; My life is but the life of winds and tides, No more than winds and tides can I avail :-

But thou canst.—Be thou therefore in the van

Of circumstance; yea, seize the arrow's barb Before the tense string murmur.-To

the earth!

For there thou wilt find Saturn, and his woes.

Meantime I will keep watch on thy bright sun,

And

of thy seasons be a careful nurse."-

Ere half this region-whisper had come down.

Hyperion arose, and on the stars

Lifted his curved lids, and kept them

Until it ceas'd; and still he kept them wide:

And still they were the same bright, patient stars.

Then with a slow incline of his broad breast.

Like to a diver in the pearly seas,

Forward he stoop'd over the airy shore, And plung'd all noiseless into the deep night.

BOOK II

JUST at the self-same beat of Time's wide wings

Hyperion slid into the rustled air,

And Saturn gain'd with Thea that sad place Where Cybele and the bruised Titans mourn'd. It was a den where no insulting light

Could glimmer on their tears; where their own groans

They felt, but heard not, for the solid roar

Of thunderous waterfalls and torrents hoarse.

Pouring a constant bulk, uncertain where.

Crag jutting forth to crag, and rocks that seem'd

Ever as if just rising from a sleep,

Forehead to forehead held their monstrous horns:

And thus in thousand hugest phantasies Made a fit roofing to this nest of woe. Instead of thrones, hard flint they sat

Couches of rugged stone, and slaty ridge Stubborn'd with iron. All were not assembled:

Some chain'd in torture, and some wandering.

Cœus, and Gyges, and Briareüs,

Typhon, and Dolor, and Porphyrion,

With many more, the brawniest in as sault,

Were pent in regions of laborious breath; Dungeon'd in opaque element, to keep Their clenched teeth still clench'd, and all their limbs

Lock'd up like veins of metal, crampt and screw'd:

Without a motion, save of their big hearts

Heaving in pain, and horribly convuls'd With sanguine feverous boiling gurge of pulse.

Mnemosyne was straying in the world; Far from her moon had Phœbe wandered:

And many else were free to roam abroad. But for the main, here found they covert drear.

Scarce images of life, one here, one there, Lay vast and edgeways; like a dismal cirque

Of Druid stones, upon a forlorn moor, When the chill rain begins at shut of eve.

In dull November, and their chancel

The Heaven itself, is blinded throughout night.

Each one kept shroud, nor to his neighbor gave

Or word, or look, or action of despair. Creüs was one; his ponderous iron mace Lay by him, and a shatter'd rib of rock Told of his rage, ere he thus sank and pined. Iäpetus another; in his grasp,

A serpent's plashy neck; its barbed tongue

Squeez'd from the gorge, and all its uncurl'd length

Dead; and because the creature could not spit

Its poison in the eyes of conquering Next Cottus: prone he lay, chin upperAs though in pain; for still upon the flint

He ground severe his skull, with open mouth

And eyes at horrid working. Nearest

Asia, born of most enormous Caf, Who cost her mother Tellus keener pangs.

Though feminine, than any of her sons:
More thought than woe was in her dusky
face.

For she was prophesying of her glory;
And in her wide imagination stood
Palm-shaded temples, and high rival fanes.

By Oxus or in Ganges' sacred isles.
Even as Hope upon her anchor leans,
So leant she, not so fair, upon a tusk
Shed from the broadest of her elephants.
Above her, on a crag's uneasy shelve,
Upon his elbow rais'd, all prostrate else,
Shadow'd Enceladus; once tame and
mild

As grazing ox unworried in the meads; Now tiger-passion'd, lion-thoughted, wroth.

He meditated, plotted, and even now Was hurling mountains in that second war.

Not long delay'd, that scar'd the younger Gods

To hide themselves in forms of beast and

Nor far hence Atlas; and beside him

Phorcus, the sire of Gorgons. Neighbor'd close

Oceanus, and Tethys, in whose lap Sobb'd Clymene among her tangled hair. In midst of all lay Themis, at the feet Of Ops the queen all clouded round from sight;

No shape distinguishable, more than when

Thick night confounds the pine-tops with the clouds:

And many else whose names may not be told.

For when the Muse's wings are air-ward spread,

Who shall delay her flight? And she must chant

Of Saturn, and his guide, who now had climb'd [depth With damp and slippery footing from a

More horrid still. Above a sombre cliff Their heads appear'd, and up their stature grew Till on the level height their steps found ease:

Then Thea spread abroad her trembling arms

Upon the precincts of this nest of pain, And sidelong fix'd her eye on Saturn's face;

There saw she direst strife; the supreme God

At war with all the frailty of grief, Of rage, of fear, anxiety, revenge,

Remorse, spleen, hope, but most of all despair.

Against these plagueshe strove in vain; for Fate

Had pour'd a mortal oil upon his head, A disanointing poison: so that Thea, Affrighted, kept her still, and let him

First onwards in, among the fallen tribe.

As with us mortal men, the laden heart

Is persecuted more, and fever'd more, When it is nighing to the mournful house Where other hearts are sick of the same bruise;

So Saturn, as he walk'd into the midst, Felt faint, and would have sunk among the rest,

But that he met Enceladus's eye,

Whose mightiness, and awe of him, at once

Came like an inspiration; and he shouted,

"Titans, behold your God!" at which some groan'd;

Some started on their feet; some also shouted;

Some wept, some wail'd, all bow'd with reverence;

And Ops, upifting her black folded veil, Show'd her pale cheeks, and all her forehead wan,

Her eye-brows thin and jet, and hollow eyes.

There is a roaring in the bleak-grown pines pines When Winter lifts his voice; there is a noise Among immortals when a God gives with hushing finger, how he means to load

His tongue with the full weight of utterless thought,

With thunder, and with music, and with pomp:

Such noise is like the roar of bleakgrown pines;

Which, when it ceases in this mountain'd world,

No other sound succeeds; but ceasing here.

Among these fallen, Saturn's voice therefrom

Grew up like organ, that begins anew Its strain, when other harmonies, stopt short.

Leave the dinn'd air vibrating silverly.
Thus grew it up—" Not in my own sad breast,

Which is its own great judge and searcher out,

Can I find reason why ye should be thus:
Not in the legends of the first of days,
Studied from that old spirit-leaved book
Which starry Uranus with finger bright Sav'd from the shores of darkness, when the waves

Low-ebb'd still hid it up in shallow gloom:—

And the which book ye know I ever kept For my firm-based footstool:—Ah, infirm!

Not there, nor in sign, symbol, or portent Of element, earth, water, air, and fire,— At war, at peace, or inter-quarrelling One against one, or two, or three, or all

One against one, or two, or three, or all Each several one against the other three, As fire with air loud warring when rainfloods

Drown both, and press them both against earth's face,

Where, finding sulphur, a quadruple wrath wrath Unhinges the poor world;—not in that strife,

Wherefrom I take strange lore, and read it deep,

Can I find reason why ye should be thus; No, no-where can unriddle, though I search,—

And pore on Nature's universal scroll Even to swooning, why ye, Divinities, The first-born of all shap'd and palpable Gods,

Should cower beneath what, in comparison,

Is unfremendous might. Yet ye are here,

O'erwhelm'd, and spurn'd, and batter'd, ye are here!

O Titans, shall I say 'Arise!'—Ye groan; Shall I say 'Crouch!'—Ye groan. What can I then?

O Heaven wide! O unseen parent dear!

What can I! Tell me, all ye brethren Gods,

How we can war, how engine our great wrath!

O speak your counsel now, for Saturn's ear

Is all a-hunger'd. Thou, Oceanus,

Ponderest high and deep; and in thy face I see, astonied, that severe content
Which comes of thought and musing the

Which comes of thought and musing; give us help!"

So ended Saturn; and the God of the Sea,

Sophist and sage, from no Athenian grove,
But cogitation in his watery shades.

Arose, with locks not oozy, and began, In murmurs, which his first-endeavoring tongue

Caught infant-like from the far foamed sands.

sands.
O ye, whom wrath consumes! who, passion-stung,

Writhe at defeat, and nurse your agonies!

Shut up your senses, stifle up your ears, My voice is not a bellows unto ire.

Yet listen, ye who will, whilst I bring proof

How ye, perforce, must be content to stoop;

And in the proof much comfort will

And in the proof much comfort will I give,

If ye will take that comfort in its truth.
We fall by course of Nature's law, not force

Of thunder, or of Jove. Great Saturn, thou

Hast sifted well the atom-universe;
But for this reason, that thou art the King,

And only blind from sheer supremacy, One avenue was shaded from thine eyes, Through which I wandered to eternal truth.

And first, as thou wast not the first of powers,

So art thou not the last; it cannot be;
Thou art not the beginning nor the end,
From chaos and parental darkness came Light, the first fruits of that intestine
broil,

That sullen ferment, which for wondrous

Was ripening in itself. The ripe hour came,

And with it light, and light, engendering

Upon its own producer, forthwith

touch'd

The whole enormous matter into life. Upon that very hour, our parentage, The Heavens and the Earth, were manifest:

Then thou first-born, and we the giant-

Found ourselves ruling new and beauteous realms.

Now comes the pain of truth, to whom 'tis pain;

O folly! for to bear all naked truths, And to envisage circumstance, all calm, That is the top of sovereignty. Mark well!

As Heaven and Earth are fairer, fairer

Than Chaos and blank Darkness, though once chiefs:

And as we show beyond that Heaven and Earth

In form and shape compact and beau-

In will, in action free, companionship, And thousand other signs of purer life; So on our heels a fresh perfection treads, A power more strong in beauty, born

And fated to excel us, as we pass In glory that old Darkness: nor are we Thereby more conquer'd, than by us the rule

Of shapeless Chaos. Say, doth the dull soil

Quarrel with the proud forests it hath fed,

And feedeth still, more comely than itself?

Can it deny the chiefdom of green groves?

Or shall the tree be envious of the dove Because it cooeth, and hath snowy wings To wander wherewithal and find itsjoys? We are such forest-trees, and our fair boughs

Have bred forth, not pale solitary doves, But eagles golden-feather'd, who do tower

Above us in their beauty, and must reign In right thereof; for 'tis the eternal law That first in beauty should be first in might:

Yea, by that law, another race may drive Our conquerors to mourn as we do now. Have ye beheld the young God of the Seas.

My dispossessor? Have ye seen his face? Have ye beheld his chariot, foam'd along

By noble winged creatures he hath made?

I saw him on the calmed waters scud, With such a glow of beauty in his eyes, That it enforc'd me to bid sad farewell To all my empire: farewell sad I took, And hither came, to see how dolorous fate

Had wrought upon ye; and how I might best

Give consolation in this woe extreme. Receive the truth, and let it be your balm."

Whether through poz'd conviction, or disdain,

They guarded silence, when Oceanus Left murmuring, what deepest thought can tell?

But so it was, none answer'd for a space,

Save one whom none regarded, Clymene;

And yet she answer'd not, only complain'd, With hectic lips, and eyes up-looking

With hectic lips, and eyes up-looking mild,
Thus wording timidly among the fierce:

"O Father, I am here the simplest voice,

And all my knowledge is that joy is gone, And this thing woe crept in among our hearts,

There to remain for ever, as I fear:
I would not bode of evil, if I thought
So weak a creature could turn off the help
Which by just right should come of mighty Gods;

Yet let me tell my sorrow, let me tell
Of what I heard, and how it made me
weep,

And know that we had parted from all hope.

I stood upon a shore, a pleasant shore, Where a sweet clime was breathed from a land

Of fragrance, quietness, and trees, and flowers.

Full of calm joy it was, as I of grief;
Too full of joy and soft delicious warmth;

So that I felt a movement in my heart To chide, and to reproach that solitude With songs of misery, music of our woes; And sat me down, and took a mouthed shell

And murmur'd into it, and made melody—

O melody no more! for while I sang,

And with poor skill let pass into the breeze

The dull shell's echo, from a bowery

strand

Just opposite, an island of the sea,

There came enchantment with the shifting wind.

That did both drown and keep alive my

I threw my shell away upon the sand, And a wave fill'd it, as my sense was fill'd With that new blissful golden melody. A living death was in each gush of sounds, Each family of rapturous hurried notes,

That fell, one after one, yet all at once, Like pearl beads dropping sudden from their string:

And then another, then another strain, · Each like a dove leaving its olive perch, With music wing'd instead of silent plumes,

To hover round my head, and make me

Of joy and grief at once. Grief overcame.

And I was stopping up my frantic ears, When, past all hindrance of my trembling hands,

A voice came sweeter, sweeter than all tune,

And still it cried, 'Apollo! young Apollo!

The morning-bright Apollo! Apollo!

fled, it follow'd me, and cried 'Apollo!'

O Father, and O Brethren, had ye felt Those pains of mine; O Saturn, hadst thou felt,

Ye would not call this too indulged tongue

Presumptuous, in thus venturing to be heard."

So far her voice flow'd on, like timorous brook

That, lingering along a pebbled coast. Doth fear to meet the sea: but sea it met,

And shudder'd; for the overwhelming voice

Of huge Enceladus swallow'd it in wrath: The ponderous syllables, like sullen waves

In the half glutted hollows of reef-rocks, Came booming thus, while still upon his arm [contempt.

He lean'd; not rising, from supreme

"Or shall we listen to the over-wise, Or to the over-foolish giant, Gods?

Not thunderbolt on thunderbolt, till all That rebel Jove's whole armory were spent.

Not world on world upon these shoulders piled.

Could agonize me more than baby-words In midst of this dethronement horrible. Speak! roar! shout! yell! ye sleepy Titans all.

Do ve forget the blows, the buffets vile? Are ye not smitten by a youngling arm? Dost thou forget, sham Monarch of the Waves.

Thy scalding in the seas? What, have I rous'd

Your spleens with so few simple words as these?

O joy! for now I see ye are not lost: O joy! for now I see a thousand eves Wide glaring for revenge!"—As this he said. He lifted up his stature vast, and stood, Still without intermission speaking thus: "Now ye are flames, I'll tell you how to burn,

And purge the ether of our enemies: How to feed fierce the crooked stings of

And singe away the swollen clouds of Jove,

Stifling that puny essence in its tent. O let him feel the evil he hath done: For though I scorn Oceanus's lore,

Much pain have I for more than loss of realms:

The days of peace and slumberous calm are fled;

Those days, all innocent of scathing war, When all the fair Existences of heaven Came open-eyed to guess what we would speak :-

That was before our brows were taught to frown.

Before our lips knew else but solemn sounds:

That was before we knew the winged thing,

Victory, might be lost, or might be won. And be ye mindful that Hyperion,

Our brightest brother, still is undisgraced-

Hyperion, lo! his radiance is here!"

All eyes were on Enceladus's face, And they beheld, while still Hyperion's

Flew from his lips up to the vaulted rocks.

A pallid gleam across his features stern: Not savage, for he saw full many a God Wroth as himself. He look'd upon them all.

And in each face he saw a gleam of light.

But splendider in Saturn's, whose hoar locks

Shone like the bubbling foam about a

When the prow sweeps into a midnight cove.

In pale and silver silence they remain'd, Till suddenly a splendor, like the morn, Pervaded all the beetling gloomy steeps, All the sad spaces of oblivion.

And every gulf, and every chasm old, And every height, and every sullen depth.

Voiceless, or hoarse with loud tormented streams:

And all the everlasting cataracts, And all the headlong torrents far and Mantled before in darkness and huge shade.

Now saw the light and made it terrible. It was Hyperion—a granite peak

His bright feet touch'd, and there he stay'd to view

The misery his brilliance had betray'd To the most hateful seeing of itself. Golden his hair of short Numidian curl,

Regal his shape majestic, a vast shade In midst of his own brightness, like the

Of Memnon's image at the set of sun To one who travels from the dusking

Sighs, too, as mournful as that Memnon's harp tive

He utter'd, while his hands contempla-He press'd together, and in silence stood.

Despondence seiz'd again the fallen Gods At sight of the dejected King of Day. And many hid their faces from the light: But fierce Enceladus sent forth his eyes

Among the brotherhood; and, at their glare,

Uprose Iäpetus, and Creüs too,

And Phorcus, sea-born, and together

To where he towered on his eminence. There those four shouted forth old Saturn's name;

Hyperion from the peak loud answered, "Saturn 1"

Saturn sat near the Mother of the Gods, In whose face was no joy, though all the Gods

Gave from their hollow throats the name of "Saturn!"

BOOK III

Thus in alternate uproar and sad peace. Amazed were those Titans utterly. O leave them, Muse! O leave them to their woes; For thou art weak to sing such tumults dire:

A solitary sorrow best befits

Thy lips, and antheming a lonely grief. Leave them, O Muse! for thou anon wilt find

Many a fallen old Divinity

Wandering in vain about bewildered shores.

Meantime touch piously the Delphic harp,

And not a wind of heaven but will breathe

In aid soft warble from the Dorian flute; For lo! 'tis for the Father of all verse. Flush every thing that hath a vermeil hue.

And let the clouds of even and of morn Float in voluptuous fleeces o'er the hills; Let the red wine within the goblet boil, Cold as a bubbling well; let faint-lipp'd shells,

On sands, or in great deeps, vermilion

Through all their labyrinths; and let the maid

Blush keenly, as with some warm kiss surpris'd.

Chief isle of the embowered Cyclades, Rejoice, O Delos, with thine olives green,

And poplars, and lawn-shading palms, and beech.

In which the zephyr breathes the loudest song, And hazels thick, dark-stemm'd beneath the shade: Apollo is once more the golden theme!

Where was he, when the Giant of the Stood bright, amid the sorrow of his peers? Together had he left his mother fair

And his twin-sister sleeping in their bower,

And in the morning twilight wandered forth

Beside the osiers of a rivulet.

Full ankle-deep in lilies of the vale.

The nightingale had ceas'd, and a few stars

Were lingering in the heavens, while the thrush

Began calm-throated. Throughout all the isle

There was no covert, no retired cave Unhaunted by the murmurous noise of waves,

Though scarcely heard in many a green recess.

He listen'd, and he wept, and his bright tears

Went trickling down the golden bow he held.

Thus with half-shut suffused eyes he stood.

While from beneath some cumbrous boughs hard by

With solemn step an awful Goddess came,

And there was purport in her looks for him,

Which he with eager guess began to read Perplex'd, the while melodiously he said:

"How cam'st thou over the unfooted sea?

Or hath that antique mien and robed form

Mov'd in these vales invisible till now?

Sure I have heard those vestments sweeping o'er

The fallen leaves, when I have sat alone In cool mid-forest. Surely I have traced The rustle of those ample skirts about These grassy solitudes, and seen the flowers Lift up their heads, as still the whisper pass'd. [fore, Goddess! I have beheld those eyes be-And their eternal calm, and all that face, Or I have dream'd."—"Yes," said the supreme shape,

"Thou hast dream'd of me; and awaking up

Didst find a lyre all golden by thy side, Whose strings touch'd by thy fingers, all the vast

Unwearied ear of the whole universe Listen'd in pain and pleasure at the birth Of such new tuneful wonder. Is't not strange

That thou shouldst weep, so gifted? Tell me, youth, What sorrow thou canst feel; for I am

When thou dost shed a tear: explain thy griefs

To one who in this lonely isle hath been The watcher of thy sleep and hours of life,

From the young day when first thy infant hand

Pluck'd witless the weak flowers, till thine arm

Could bend that bow heroic to all times. Show thy heart's secret to an ancient Power

Who hath forsaken old and sacred thrones

For prophecies of thee, and for the sake Of loveliness new born."—Apollo then, With sudden scrutiny and gloomless eyes, Thus answer'd, while his white melodious throat

Throbb'd with the syllables.—"Mnemosyne!

Thy name is on my tongue, I know not how;

Why should I tell thee what thou so well seest?

Why should I strive to show what from thy lips

Would come no mystery? For me, dark, dark,

And painful vile oblivion seals my eyes: I strive to search wherefore I am so sad, Until a melancholy numbs my limbs; And then upon the grass I sit, and moan,

Like one who once had wings.—O why should I

Feel curs'd and thwarted, when the liegeless air

Yields to my step aspirant? why should I Spurn the green turf as hateful to my feet? Goddess benign, point forth some un-

Are there not other regions than this isle?

What are the stars? There is the sun,

the sun!

And the most patient brilliance of the moon!

And stars by thousands! Point me out the way

To any one particular beauteous star, And I will flit into it with my lyre,

And make its silvery splendor pant with bliss.

I have heard the cloudy thunder: Where is power? Whose hand, whose essence, what divinity

Makes this alarum in the elements,
While I here idle listen on the shore
In fearless yet in aching ignorance?
O tell me, lonely Goddess, by thy harp,
That waileth every morn and eventide,
Tell me why thus I rave, about these groves!

Mute thou remainest—Mute! yet I can

A wondrous lesson in thy silent face: Knowledge enormous makes a God of me.

Names, deeds, gray legends, dire events,

LA BELLE DAME SANS MERCI

BALLAD

O WHAT can ail thee, knight-at-arms, Alone and palely loitering! The sedge has wither'd from the lake, And no birds sing. O what can ail thee, knight-at-arms i So haggard and so woe-begone? The squirrel's granary is full, And the harvest's done.

I see a lily on thy brow
With anguish moist and fever dew,
And on thy cheeks a fading rose
Fast withereth too.

I met a lady in the meads,
Full beautiful— a faery's child,
Her hair was long, her foot was light,
And her eyes were wild.

I made a garland for her head, And bracelets too, and fragrant zone; She look'd at me as she did love, And made sweet moan.

I set her on my pacing steed,
And nothing else saw all day long.
For sidelong would she bend, and sing
A faery's song.

She found me roots of relish sweet,
And honey wild, and manna dew,
And sure in language strange she said—
"I love thee true."

She took me to her elfin grot,
And there she wept, and sigh'd full sore,
And there I shut her wild wild eyes

And there I shut her wild wild eyes With kisses four.

And there she lulléd me asleep, And there I dream'd—Ah! woe betide! The latest dream I ever dream'd On the cold hill's side.

I saw pale kings and princes too,
Pale warriors, death-pale were they
all;

They cried—"La Belle Dame sans Merci Hath thee in thrall!"

I saw their starv'd lips in the gloam, With horrid warning gaped wide, And I awoke and found me here, On the cold hill's side.

And this is why I sojourn here,
Alone and palely loitering,
Though the sedge is wither'd from the lake

And no birds sing.

ON FAME

T

FAME, like a wayward girl, will still be

To those who woo her with too slavish knees,

But makes surrender to some thoughtless boy,

And dotes the more upon a heart at ease; She is a Gipsy,—will not speak to those Who have not learnt to be content without her:

A Jilt, whose ear was never whisper'd close,

Who thinks they scandal her who talk about her;

A very Gipsy is she, Nilus-born, Sister-in-law to jealous Potiphar;

Ye love-sick Bards! repay her scorn for scorn :

Ye Artists lovelorn! madmen that ye are!

Make your best bow to her and bid adieu, Then, if she likes it, she will follow you.

TT

How fever'd is the man, who cannot look

Upon his mortal days with temperate blood.

Who vexes all the leaves of his life's book. And robs his fair name of its maidenhood:

It is as if the rose should pluck herself, Or the ripe plum finger its misty bloom, As if a Naiad, like a meddling elf,

Should darken her pure grot with muddy gloom :

But the rose leaves herself upon the briar, For winds to kiss and grateful bees to

And the ripe plum still wears its dim attire.

The undisturbed lake has crystal space: Why then should man, teasing the world for grace,

Spoil his salvation for a fierce miscreed? 1819. 1848.

TO SLEEP

O SOFT embalmer of the still midnight. Shutting with careful fingers and benign, gloom-pleased eyes, embowered from the light.

Enshaded in forgetfulness divine:

O soothest Sleep! if so it please thee, close.

In midst of this thine hymn, my willing eves.

Or wait the amen, ere thy poppy throws Around my bed its lulling charities: Then save me, or the passed day will

shine

Upon my pillow, breeding many woes,-Save me from curious conscience, that still lords

Its strength for darkness, burrowing like a mole;

Turn the key deftly in the oiled wards, And seal the hushed casket of my soul. 1819.

BRIGHT STAR! WOULD I WERE STEADFAST AS THOU ART

Bright star! would I were steadfast as thou art-

Not in lone splendor hung aloft the night,

And watching, with eternal lids apart. Like Nature's patient sleepless Eremite. The moving waters at their priestlike task

Of pure ablution round earth's human shores,

Or gazing on the new soft fallen mask Of snow upon the mountains and the moors-

No-yet still steadfast, still unchange-

Pillow'd upon my fair love's ripening breast,

To feel for ever its soft fall and swell, Awake for ever in a sweet unrest,

Still, still to hear her tender-taken breath. And so live ever—or else swoon to death.

GEBIR

BOOK I

THE INVASION. THE MEETING OF GEBIR AND CHAROBA. THE LOVES OF TA-MAR AND THE SEA-NYMPH. THE SEA-SHELL. THE WRESTLING-MATCH.

I sing the fates of Gebir. He had dwelt

Among those mountain-caverns which retain

His labors yet, vast halls and flowing wells,

Nor have forgotten their old master's

Though sever'd from his people: here, incensed

By meditating on primeval wrongs,

He blew his battle-horn, at which uprose Whole nations; here, ten thousand of most might

He call'd aloud; and soon Charoba saw His dark helm hover o'er the land of Nile.

What should the virgin do? should royal knees

Bend suppliant? or defenceless hands engage

Men of gigantic force, gigantic arms?
For 'twas reported that nor sword sufficed,

Nor shield immense nor coat of massive mail.

But that upon their towering heads they

Each a huge stone, refulgent as the stars. This told she Dalica, then cried aloud, "If on your bosom laying down my head I sobb'd away the sorrows of a child,

If I have always, and Heav'n knows I have.

Next to a mother's held a nurse's name, Succor this one distress, recall those days.

Love me, tho' 'twere because you lov'd me then."

But whether confident in magic rites Or touched with sexual pride to stand implor'd,

Dalica smiled, then spake: "Away those fears,

Though stronger than the strongest of his kind,

He falls; on me devolve that charge; he falls.

Rather than fly him, stoop thou to allure:

Nay, journey to his tents. A city stood Upon that coast, they say, by Sidad built, [ground

Whose father Gad built Gadir; on this Perhaps he sees an ample room for war. Persuade him to restore the walls himself

In honor of his ancestors, persuade . . . But wherefore this advice? young, unespoused.

Charoba want persuasions! and queen!"

"O Dalica!" the shuddering maid

exclaim'd,
"Could I encounter that fierce frightful

Could I speak? no, nor sigh," "And canst thou reign?"

Cried Dalica; "Yield empire or comply."

Unfixed, though seeming fixed, her eyes downcast,

The wonted buzz and bustle of the court From far through sculptured galleries met her ear;

Then lifting up her head, the evening sun

Pour'd a fresh splendor on her burnished throne:

The fair Charoba, the young queen, complied.

But Gebir, when he heard of her approach,

Laid by his orbed shield; his vizor-helm, His buckler and his corslet he laid by,

And bade that none attend him: at his side

Two faithful dogs that urge the silent course, Shaggy, deep-chested, crouched; the crocodile, Crying, oft made them raise their flaccid

ears
And push their heads within their master's hand.

There was a brightening paleness in his face,

Such as Diana rising o'er the rocks

Shower'd on the lonely Latmian; on his brow

Sorrow there was, yet nought was there severe.

But when the royal damsel first he saw, Faint, hanging on her handmaids, and her knees

Tottering, as from the motion of the car,

His eyes looked earnest on her, and those eyes

Show'd, if they had not, that they might have, lov'd.

For there was pity in them at that hour. With gentle speech, and more with gentle looks,

He sooth'd her; but lest Pity go beyond And crost Ambition lose her lofty aim Bending, he kissed her garment, and retired.

He went, nor slumber'd in the sultry noon,

When viands, couches, generous wines, persuade,

And slumber most refreshes; nor at night, When heavy dews are laden with disease; And blindness waits not there for lingering age.

Ere morning dawn'd behind him, he

At those rich meadows where young Tamar fed

The royal flocks entrusted to his care.

"Now," said he to himself, "will I repose
At least this burthen on a brother's
breast."

His brother stood before him: he, amazed, Rear'd suddenly his head, and thus began. "Is it thou, brother! Tamar, is it thou! Why, standing on the valley's utmost verge.

Lookest thou on that dull and dreary

Where beyond sight Nile blackens all the sand?

And why that sadness? When I past our sheep

The dew-drops were not shaken off the bar,

Therefore if one be wanting, 'tis untold."

"Yes, one is wanting, nor is that untold,"

Said Tamar; "and this dull and dreary shore

Is neither dull nor dreary at all hours." Whereon the tear stole silent down his cheek.

Silent, but not by Gebir unobserv'd:

Wondering he gazed awhile, and pitying spake.

"Let me approach thee; does the morning light

Scatter this wan suffusion o'er thy brow, This faint blue lustre under both thine eyes?"

"O brother, is this pity or reproach?" Cried Tamar, "cruel if it be reproach, If pity, O how vain!" "Whate'er it be

That grieves thee, I will pity, thou but speak,

And I can tell thee, Tamar, pang for pang."

"Gebir! then more than brothers are we now!

Everything (take my hand) will I confess. I neither feed the flock nor watch the fold;

How can I, lost in love? But, Gebir, why That anger which has risen to your cheek?

Can other men? could you? what, no reply!

And still more anger, and still worse conceal'd!

Are these your promises? your pity this?"

"Tamar, I well may pity what I feel— Mark me aright—I feel for thee proceed—Relate me all." "Then will I all relate,"

Said the young shepherd, gladden'd from his heart.

"Twas evening, though not sunset, and the tide

Level with these green meadows, seem'd yet higher:

'Twas pleasant; and I loosen'd from my

The pipe you gave me, and began to play. O that I ne'er had learnt the tuneful art! It always brings us enemies or love.

Well, I was playing, when above the waves

Some swimmer's head methought I saw ascend;

I, sitting still, survey'd it, with my pipe Awkwardly held before my lips half-closed.

Gebir! it was a Nymph! a Nymph divine!

I cannot wait describing how she came, How I was sitting, how she first assum'd The sailor; of what happen'd there remains

Enough to say, and too much to forget.

The sweet deceiver stepped upon this bank

Before I was aware; for with surprise Moments fly rapid as with love itself.

Stooping to tune afresh the hoarsen'd reed,

I heard a rustling, and where that arose
My glance first lighted on her nimble feet.

Her feet resembled those long shells explored

By him who to befriend his steed's dim sight

Would blow the pungent powder in the

Her eyes too! O immortal Gods! her eyes

Resembled—what could they resemble?
what

Ever resemble those? Even her attire Was not of wonted woof nor vulgar art:

Her mantle show'd the yellow samphire-

Her girdle the dove-color'd wave serene. "Shepherd," said she, "and will, you wrestle now,

And with the sailor's hardier race engage?"

I was rejoiced to hear it, and contrived How to keep up contention: could I fail By pressing not too strongly, yet to press?

"Whether a shepherd, as indeed you seem,

Or whether of the hardier race you boast, I am not daunted; no; I will engage." "But first," said she, "what wager will you lay?"

"A sheep," I answered: "add whate'er you will."

"I can not," she replied, "make that return:

Our hided vessels in their pitchy round Seldom, unless from rapine, hold a sheep, But I have sinuous shells of pearly hue Within, and they that lustre have imbibed

In the sun's palace-porch, where when unvoked

His chariot-wheel stands midway in the wave:

Shake one and it awakens, then apply Its polisht lips to your attentive ear, And it remembers its august abodes.

And murmurs as the ocean murmurs there.

And I have others given me by the nymphs,

Of sweeter sound than any pipe you have;

But we, by Neptune! for no pipe.contend,

This time a sheep I win, a pipe the next."
Now came she forward eager to engage,
But first her dress, her bosom then survey'd,

And heav'd it, doubting if she could deceive.

Her bosom seem'd, inclos'd in haze like heav'n,

To baffle touch, and rose forth undefined:

Above her knee she drew the robe succinct,

Above her breast, and just below her arms.

"This will preserve my breath when tightly bound,

If struggle and equal strength should so constrain."

Thus, pulling hard to fasten it, she spake, And, rushing at me, closed: I thrill'd throughout

And seem'd to lessen and shrink up with

.- :-- ---:41

Again with violent impulse gushed my blood,

And hearing nought external, thus absorb'd,

I heard it, rushing through each turbid vein,

Shake my unsteady swimming sight in air.

Yet with unyielding though uncertain arms

I clung around her neck; the vest beneath

Rustled against our slippery limbs entwined:

Often mine springing with eluded force Started aside and trembled till replaced: And when I most succeeded, as I thought, My bosom and my throat felt so compressed

That life was almost quivering on my lips,

Yet nothing was there painful: these are signs

Of secret arts and not of human might; What arts I cannot tell; I only know My eyes grew dizzy and my strength decay'd;

I was indeed o'ercome . . . with what regret,

And more, with what confusion, when I reached

The fold, and yielding up the sheep, she cried,

"This pays a shepherd to a conquering maid."

She smiled, and more of pleasure than disdain

Was in her dimpled chin and liberal lip, And eyes that languished, lengthening, just like love.

She went away; I on the wicker gate Leant, and could follow with my eyes alone.

The sheep she carried easy as a cloak; But when I heard its bleating, as I did, And saw, she hastening on, its hinder feet [slip,

Struggle, and from her snowy shoulder One shoulder its poor efforts had un veil'd, [tears;

Then all my passions mingling fell in Restless then ran I to the highest ground To watch her; she was gone; gone down the tide; And the long moonbeam on the hard wet sand

Lay like a jasper column half up-rear'd."
"But, Tamar! tell me, will she not return?"

"She will return, yet not before the moon

Again is at the full: she promised this,
Tho' when she promised I could not reply."

"By all the Gods I pity thee! go on, Fear not my anger, look not on my shame,

For when a lover only hears of love He finds his folly out, and is ashamed. Away with watchful nights and lonely days.

Contempt of earth and aspect up to heaven,

With contemplation, with humility, A tatter'd cloak that pride wears when deform'd,

Away with all that hides me from myself,

Parts me from others, whispers I am wise:

From our own wisdom less is to be reapt Than from the barest folly of our friend. Tamar! thy pastures, large and rich, afford

Flowers to thy bees and herbage to thy sheep,

But, battened on too much, the poorest croft

Of thy poor neighbor yields what thine denies."

They hasten'd to the camp, and Gebir there

Resolved his native country to forego, And order'd from those ruins to the right They forthwith raise a city. Tamar heard [told,

With wonder, tho' in passing 'twas half-His brother's love, and sigh'd upon his own. 1798.1

Landor speaks of her again in two poems written late in life: The Three Roses, 1858, (see page 457); and Abertawy, 1859, the concluding lines of which almost equal in beauty this early lyric, usually considered the most beautiful of his poems;

Where is she now? Call'd far away, By one she dared not disobey. To those proud halls, for youth unfit, Where princes stand and judges sit. Where Ganges rolls his widest wave She dropped her blossom in the grave; Her noble name she never changed, Nor was her nobler heart estranged.

But who are those that cull and deal its fruit?

Creatures that shun the light and fear the shade,

Bloated and fierce, Sleep's mien and Famine's cry.

Rise up again, rise in thy dignity,
Dejected Man! and scare this brood
away. 1824.

CHILD OF A DAY, THOU KNOWEST NOT

CHILD of a day, thou knowest not
The tears that overflow thine urn,
The gushing eyes that read thy lot,
Nor, if thou knewest, couldst return!
And why the wish! the pure and blessed

Watch like thy mother o'er thy sleep.
O peaceful night! O envied rest!
Thou wilt not ever see her weep.
1831.

LYRICS, TO IANTHE

Away my verse; and never fear,
As men before such beauty do;
On you she will not look severe,
She will not turn her eyes from you.

Some happier graces could I lend
That in her memory you should live,
Some little blemishes might blend,

For it would please her to forgive.

When Helen first saw wrinkles in her face

("Twas when some fifty long had settled there

And intermarried and branched off awide)

She threw herself upon her couch and wept:

On this side hung her head, and over

Listlessly she let fall the faithless brass That made the men as faithless.

But when you Found them, or fancied them, and would not hear That they were only vestiges of smiles,

Or the impression of some amorous hair Astray from cloistered curls and roseate [perhaps band.

Which had been lying there all night Upon a skin so soft, "No, no," you said, "Sure, they are coming, yes, are come, are here:

Well, and what matters it, while thou art too!"

Ianthe! you are call'd to cross the sea! A path forbidden me!

Remember, while the Sun his blessing sheds

Upon the mountain-heads,

How often we have watched him laying

His brow, and dropped our own Against each other's, and how faint and

And sliding the support!

What will succeed it now? Mine is unblessed.

Ianthe! nor will rest

But on the very thought that swells with pain.

O bid me hope again!

O give me back what Earth, what (without you)

Not Heaven itself can do,

One of the golden days that we have past :

And let it be my last!

Or else the gift would be, however sweet, Fragile and incomplete.

I held her hand, the pledge of bliss, Her hand that trembled and withdrew:

She bent her head before my kiss . . My heart was sure that hers was true.

Now I have told her I must part, She shakes my hand, she bids adieu, Nor shuns the kiss. Alas, my heart! Hers never was the heart for you.

Pleasure! why thus desert the heart In its spring-tide?

I could have seen her, I could part, And but have sigh'd!

O'er every youthful charm to stray. To gaze, to touch . .

Pleasure! why take so much away, Or give so much!

Mild is the parting year, and sweet The odor of the falling spray: Life passes on more rudely fleet, And balmless is its closing day.

I wait its close. I court its gloom. But mourn that never must there fall Or on my breast or on my tomb The tear that would have sooth'd it all Past ruin'd Ilion Helen lives, Alcestis rises from the shades; Verse calls them forth; 'tis verse the Immortal youth to mortal maids.

Soon shall Oblivion's deepening veil Hide all the peopled hills you see, The gay, the proud, while lovers hail These many summers you and me.

FIESOLAN IDYL

HERE, where precipitate Spring, with one light bound

Into hot Summer's lusty arms, expires, And where go forth at morn, at eve, at night,

Soft airs that want the lute to play with

And softer sighs that know not what they want,

Aside a wall, beneath an orange-tree, Whose tallest flowers could tell the lowlier ones

Of sights in Fiesolé right up above. While I was gazing a few paces off At what they seem'd to show me with their nods, Their frequent whispers and their pointing shoots,

A gentle maid came down the garden-

And gathered the pure treasure in her

I heard the branches rustle, and stepped

To drive the ox away, or mule or goat, Such I believed it must be. How could I Let beast o'erpower them? When hath wind or rain

Borne hard upon weak plant that wanted

And I (however they might bluster round)

Walked off? 'Twere most ungrateful: for sweet scents

Are the swift vehicles of still sweeter thoughts.

And nurse and pillow the dull memory That would let drop without them her best stores.

They bring me tales of youth and tones of love.

And 'tis and ever was my wish and way To let all flowers live freely, and all die (Whene'er their Genius bids their souls depart)

Among their kindred in their native place.

I never pluck the rose; the violet's head Hath shaken with my breath upon its

And not reproached me: the ever-sacred

Of the pure lily hath between my hands Felt safe, unsoil'd, nor lost one grain of gold.

I saw the light that made the glossy leaves

More glossy; the fair arm, the fairer cheek

Warmed by the eye intent on its pursuit; I saw the foot that, altho' half-erect

From its gray slipper, could not lift her To what she wanted: I held down a

And gather'd her some blossoms; since their hour Was come, and bees had wounded them,

and flies Of harder wing were working their way

And scattering them in fragments under-evolved, Others, ere broken off, fell into shells, For such appear the petals when detached Unbending, brittle, lucid, white like sun:

And like snow not seen thro', by eye or

Yet every one her gown received from

Was fairer than the first. I thought not

But so she praised them to reward my care.

I said, "You find the largest." "This indeed."

Cried she, "is large and sweet." She held one forth.

Whether for me to look at or to take She knew not, nor did I; but taking it Would best have solved (and this she felt) her doubt.

I dared not touch it; for it seemed a

Of her own self; fresh, full, the most mature

Of blossoms, yet a blossom; with a touch To fall, and yet unfallen. She drew back The boon she tender'd, and then, finding not

The ribbon at her waist to fix it in, Dropped it, as loth to drop it, on the rest. 1831.

FOR AN EPITAPH AT FIESOLE

Lo! where the four mimosas blend their shade

In calm repose at last is Landor laid, For ere he slept he saw them planted

By her his soul had ever held most dear. And he had lived enough when he had dried her tear. 1831.

UPON A SWEET-BRIAR

My briar that smelledst sweet When gentle spring's first heat Ran through thy quiet veins,-Thou that wouldst injure none, But wouldst be left alone,

Alone thou leavest me, and nought of thine remains.

What! hath no poet's lyre O'er thee, sweet-breathing briar, Hung fondly, ill or well? And yet methinks with thee A poet's sympathy,

Whether in weal or woe, in life or death, might dwell.

Hard usage both must bear, Few hands your youth will rear, Few bosoms cherish von: Your tender prime must bleed

1834.1

Ere you are sweet, but freed From life, you then are prized; thus prized are poets too.

And art thou yet alive?
And shall the happy hive
Send out her youth to cull
Thy sweets of leaf and flower,
And spend the sunny hour
ith thee, and thy faint heart

With thee, and thy faint heart with murmuring music lull?

Tell me what tender care,
Tell me what pious prayer,
Bade thee arise and live.
The fondest-favored bee
Shall whisper nought to thee
Move loving than the song my grateful muse shall give.

THE MAID'S LAMENT

I LOVED him not; and yet now he is gone I feel I am alone.

I check'd him while he spoke; yet could he speak.

Alas! I would not check.

For reasons not to love him once I sought,

And wearied all my thought

To vex myself and him: I now would give

My love, could he but live

Who lately lived for me, and when he found

'Twas vain, in holy ground

He hid his face amid the shades of death.

I waste for him my breath

Who wasted his for me: but mine returns.

And this lorn bosom burns

With stifling heat, heaving it up in sleep, And waking me to weep

Tears that had melted his soft heart:

for years

Wept he as bitter tears.

Merciful God! such was his latest prayer,

These may she never share.

Quieter is his breath, his breast more cold.

Than daisies in the mould.

Where children spell, athwart the churchyard gate,

THE SHADES OF AGAMEMNON AND IPHIGENEIA ¹

Iphigeneia. Father! I now may lean upon your breast,

And you with unreverted eyes will grasp Iphigeneia's hand.

We are not shades

Surely! for yours throb yet.

And did my blood

Win Troy for Greece?

Ah! 'twas ill done, to shrink; But the sword gleam'd so sharp; and the good priest

Trembled, and Pallas frown'd above, severe.

Agamemnon. Daughter!
Iphigeneia. Beloved father! is the

Again to pierce my bosom? 'tis unfit For sacrifice; no blood is in its veins,

No God requires it here: here are no wrongs
To vindicate, no realms to overthrow.

You standing as at Aulis in the fane, With face averted, holding (as before) My hand; but yours burns not, as then it burn'd.

This alone shows me we are with the Blessed,

Nor subject to the sufferings we have

I will win back past kindness.

Tell me then,
Tell how my mother fares who loved me

And griev'd, as 'twere for you, to see me part.

Frown not, but pardon me for tarrying Amid too idle words, nor asking how She prais'd us both (which most?) for what we did.

Agamemnon. Ye Gods who govern

here! do human pangs
Reach the pure soul thus far below? do tears

Spring in these meadows?

1 "I imagine Agamemnon to descend from his horrible death, and to meet instantly his daughter. By the nature of things, by the suddenness of the event, Iphigeneia can have heard nothing of her mother's double crime, adultery and murder." Aspasia to Cleone, introducing the poem as first given in Pericles and Aspasia, 1836

Iphigeneia. No, sweet father, no . . I could have answered that; why ask the Gods?

Agamemnon. Iphigeneia! child! the Earth

Has gendered crimes unheard of hereto-

And Nature may have changed in her last depths.

Together with the Gods and all their laws.

Iphigeneia. Father! we must not let vou here condemn:

Not, were the day less joyful: recollect We have no wicked here; no king to judge.

Poseidon, we have heard, with bitter rage

Lashes his foaming steeds against the

And, laughing with loud yell at winged

Innoxious to his fields and palaces

Affrights the eagle from the sceptred hand:

While Pluto, gentlest brother of the

And happiest in obedience, views sedate His tranquil realm, nor envies theirs above.

No change have we, not even day for night

Nor spring for summer.

All things are serene, Serene too be your spirit! None on earth Ever was half so kindly in his house, And so compliant, even to a child.

Never was snatch'd your robe away from man Though going to the council. The blind Knew his good king was leading him indoors.

Before he heard the voice that marshal'd Greece.

Therefore all prais'd you.

Proudest men themselves In others praise humility, and most Admire it in the sceptre and the sword. What then can make you speak thus rapidly And briefly? in your step thus hesitate? Are you afraid to meet among the good Incestuous Helen here?

Agamemnon. O! gods of hell! Iphigeneia. She hath not past the river.

We may walk

With our hands link'd nor feel our house's shame.

Agamemnon. Never mayst thou, Iphigeneia, feel it!

Aulis had no sharp sword, thou wouldst exclaim.

Greece no avenger-I, her chief so late. Through Erebos, through Elvsium. writhe beneath it.

Iphigeneia. Come, I have better diadems than those

Of Argos and Mycenai: come away,

And I will weave them for you on the

You will not look so pale when you have walk'd

A little in the grove, and have told all Those sweet fond words the widow sent her child.

Agamemnon. O Earth! I suffered less upon thy shores!

The bath that bubbled with my blood, the blows

That spilt it (O worse torture!) must she know?

Ah! the first woman coming from Mycenai

Will pine to pour this poison in her ear, Taunting sad Charon for his slow advance.

Iphigeneia!

Iphigeneia. Why thus turn away? Calling me with such fondness! I am here.

Father! and where you are, will ever be. Agamemnon. Thou art my child; yes, yes, thou art my child.

All was not once what all now is! Come

Idol of love and truth! my child! my child !

(Alone.) Fell woman! ever false! false was thy last Denunciation, as thy bridal vow;

And yet even that found faith with me! The dirk

Which sever'd flesh from flesh, where this hand rests,

Severs not, as thou boastedst in thy scoffs.

Iphigeneia's love from Agamemnon:

The wife's a spark may light, a straw consume,

The daughter's not her heart's whole fount hath quench'd,

Tis worthy of the Gods, and lives for Iphigeneia. What spake my father to the Gods above?

Unworthy am I then to join in prayer? If, on the last, or any day before,

Of my brief course on earth, I did amiss, Say it at once, and let me be unblessed; But, O my faultless father! why should you?

And shun so my embraces?

Am I wild

And wandering in my fondness?

We are shades!
Groan not thus deeply; blight not thus the season

Of full-orb'd gladness! Shades we are indeed,

But mingled, let us feel it, with the blessed.

I knew it, but forgot it suddenly,

Altho' I felt it all at your approach.

Look on me; smile with me at my illusion.

You are so like what you have ever been (Except in sorrow!) I might well forget I could not win you as I used to do.

It was the first embrace since my de-

I ever aim'd at: those who love me live, Save one, who loves me most, and now would chide me.

Agamemnon. We want not, O Iphigeneia, we Want not embrace, nor kiss that cools the heart [more

With purity, nor words that more and Teach what we know, from those we know, and sink

Often most deeply where they fall most light.

Time was when for the faintest breath of thine

Kingdom and life were little,

Iphigeneia. Value them As little now.

As little now

Agamemnon. Were life and kingdom all!

Iphigeneia. Ah! by our death many are sad who loved us.

The little fond Electra, and Orestes So childish and so bold! O that mad

So childish and so bold! O that ma boy!

They will be happy too.

Cheer! king of men!
Cheer! there are voices, songs—Cheer!
arms advance.

Agamemnon. Come to me, soul of peace! These, these alone,

These are not false embraces.

Iphigeneia. Both are happy!
Agamemnon. Freshness breathes round me from some breeze above.
Vhat are ve, winged ones! with golden

What are ye, winged ones! with golden urns?

The Hours

(Descending.) To each an urn we bring: Earth's purest gold Alone can hold

The lymph of the Lethean spring. We, son of Atreus! we divide The dulcet from the bitter tide

That runs athwart the paths of

No more our pinions shalt thou see. Take comfort! We have done with thee,

And must away to earth again.
(Ascending.) Where thou art, thou
Of braided brow,

Thou cull'd too soon from Argive bowers, Where thy sweet voice is heard among The shades that thrill with choral song, None can regret the parted Hours.

(As the Hours depart, the shades of the Argive warriors who had fought at Troy approach and chant in chorus the praises of Agamemnon and his daughter.)

Chorus of Argives

Maiden! be thou the spirit that breathes
Triumph and joy into our song!
Wear and bestow these amaranthwreaths,

Iphigeneia—they belong
To none but thee and her who reigns
(Less chanted) on our bosky plains.

Semi-chorus

Iphigeneia! 'tis to thee Glory we owe and victory. Clash, men of Argos, clash your arms, To martial worth and virgin charms.

Other Semi-chorus

Ye men of Argos! it was sweet To roll the fruits of conquest at the feet Whose whispering sound made bravest hearts beat fast.

This we have known at home; But hither we are come

To crown the king who ruled us first and last.

Chorus

Father of Argos! king of men!
We chant the hymn of praise to
thee.

In serried ranks we stand again, Our glory safe, our country free. Clash, clash the arms we bravely Against Scamander's God-defended shore.

Semi-chorus

Blessed art thou who hast repell'd Battle's wild fury, Ocean's whelming foam;

Blessed o'er all, to have beheld Wife, children, house avenged, and peaceful home!

Other Semi-chorus

We, too, thou seest, are now Among the happy, though the aged brow

From sorrow for us we could not protect,

Nor, on the polished granite of the

Folding our arms, of spoils and perils tell,

Nor lift the vase on the lov'd head erect.

Semi-chorus

What whirling wheels are those behind?

What plumes come flaring through the wind,

Nearer and nearer? From his

He who defied the heaven-born Powers of war

Pelides springs! Dust, dust are we To him, O king, who bends the knee, Proud only to be first in reverent praise of thee.

Other Semi-Chorus

Clash, clash the arms! None other race Shall see such heroes face to face. We too have fought; and they have seen Nor sea-sand gray nor meadow green Where Dardans stood against their Clash! Io Paean! clash again! Repinings for lost days repress. The flames of Troy had cheer'd us less.

Chorus

Hark! from afar more war-steeds neigh, Thousands o'er thousands rush this way. Ajax is yonder! ay, behold The radiant arms of Lycian gold! Arms from admiring valor won, Tydeus! and worthy of thy son.
'Tis Ajax wears them now; for he Rules over Adria's stormy sea.

He threw them to the friend who lost (By the dim judgment of the host)
Those wet with tears which Thetis gave
The youth most beauteous of the brave.
In vain! the insatiate soul would go
For comfort to his peers below.
Clash! ere we leave them all the plain,
Clash! Io Paean! once again. 1836.

THE DEATH OF ARTEMIDORA 2

"ARTEMIDORA! Gods invisible, While thou art lying faint along the couch.

Have tied the sandal to thy slender feet And stand beside thee, ready to convey Thy weary steps where other rivers flow, Refreshing shades will waft thy weari-

Away, and voices like thy own come near And nearer, and solicit an embrace."

Artemidora sigh'd, and would have pressed

The hand now pressing hers, but was too weak.

Iris stood over her dark hair unseen While thus Elpenor spake. He looked into Eyes that had given light and life erewhile

To those above them, but now dim with

And wakefulness. Again he spake of joy Eternal. At that word, that sad word,

Faithful and fond her bosom heav'd once more:

Her head fell back; and now a loud deep sob

Swell'd thro' the darken'd chamber; 'twas not hers. 1836.

CORINNA TO TANAGRA, FROM ATHENS

TANAGRA! think not I forget
Thy beautifully storied streets;
Be sure my memory bathes yet
In clear Thermodon, and yet greets
The blithe and liberal shepherd-boy,

Upheav'd with sylvan fruit; away he

The only proper gift for thee,
Of which no mortal shall bereave
In later times thy mouldering walls,
Until the last old turret falls;
A crown, a crown from Athens won,
A crown no God can wear, beside Latona's son.

There may be cities who refuse
To their own child the honors due,
And look ungently on the Muse;
But ever shall those cities rue
The dry, unyielding, niggard breast,
Offering no nourishment, no rest,
To that young head which soon shall rise

Disdainfully, in might and glory, to the skies.

Sweetly where cavern'd Dirce flows Do white-arm'd maidens chant my lay,

Flapping the while with laurel-rose
The honey-gathering tribes away;
And sweetly, sweetly Attic tongues
Lisp your Corinna's early songs;
To her with feet more graceful come
The verses that have dwelt in kindred breasts at home.

O let thy children lean aslant
Against the tender mother's knee,
And gaze into her face, and want
To know what magic there can be
In words that urge some eyes to dance,
While others as in holy trance
Look up to heaven: be such my praise!
Why linger? I must haste, or lose the Delphic bays.

SAPPHO TO HESPERUS

I HAVE beheld thee in the morning hour A solitary star, with thankless eyes, Ungrateful as I am! who bade thee rise When sleep all night had wandered from my bower.

Can it be true that thou art he Who shines now above the sea Amid a thousand, but more bright?

Ah yes! the very same art thou That heard me then and hearest now... Thou seemest, star of love! to throb with light. 1836.

LITTLE AGLAE

TO HER FATHER, ON HER STATUE BEING CALLED LIKE HER

FATHER! the little girl we see Is not, I fancy, so like me; You never hold her on your knee.

When she came home, the other day, You kiss'd her; but I cannot say She kiss'd you first and ran away.

DIRCE

STAND close around, ye Stygian set,
With Dirce in one boat conveyed,
Or Charon, seeing, may forget
That he is old, and she a shade.

CLEONE TO ASPASIA

WE mind not how the sun in the midsky

Is hastening on; but when the golden orb

Strikes the extreme of earth, and when the gulfs

Of air and ocean open to receive him, Dampness and gloom invade us; then we think

Ah! thus is it with Youth. Too fast his feet

Run on for sight; hour follows hour; fair maid Succeeds fair maid; bright eyes bestar his couch;

The cheerful horn awakens him; the feast,

The revel, the entangling dance, allure,

And voices mellower than the Muse's own Heave up his buoyant bosom on their wave.

A little while, and then—Ah Youth!

Youth! Youth!
Listen not to my words—but stay with

me!

When thou art gone, Life may go too; the sigh

That rises is for thee, and not for Life. 1836.

ON LUCRETIA BORGIA'S HAIR

Borgia, thou once wert almost too august

And high for adoration; now thou'rt dust:

All that remains of thee these plaits unfold.

Calm hair meandering in pellucid gold. 1837.

TO WORDSWORTH

Those who have laid the harp aside
And turn'd to idler things,
From very restlessness have tried
The loose and dusty strings,
And, catching back some favorite strain,
Run with it o'er the chords again.

But Memory is not a Muse, O Wordsworth! though 'tis said They all descend from her, and use To haunt her fountain-head: That other men should work for me In the rich mines of Poesie.

Pleases me better than the toil
Of smoothing under hardened hand,
With attic emery and oil,

The shining point for Wisdom's wand, Like those thou temperest 'mid the rills Descending from thy native hills. Without his governance, in vain,

Vithout his governance, in vain,
Manhood is strong, and Youth is bold.

If oftentimes the o'er-piled strain, Clogs in the furnace and grows cold Beneath his pinions deep and frore, And swells and melts and flows no more,

That is because the heat beneath
Pants in its cavern poorly fed.
Life springs not from the couch of Death,

Nor Muse nor Grace can raise the dead;

Unturn'd then let the mass remain, Intractable to sun or rain.

A marsh, where only flat leaves lie, And showing but the broken sky, Too surely is the sweetest lay That wins the ear and wastes the day, Where youthful Fancy pouts alone And lets not Wisdom touch her zone.

He who would build his fame up high, The rule and plummet must apply. Nor say, "I'll do what I have plann'd," Before he try if loam or sand Be still remaining in the place Delved for each polished pillar's base. With skilful eye and fit device Thou raisest every edifice, Whether in sheltered vale it stand, Or overlook the Dardan strand, Amid the cypresses that mourn Laodameia's love forlorn.

We both have run o'er half the space Listed for mortal's earthly race; We both have crossed life's fervid line, And other stars before us shine: May they be bright and prosperous As those that have been stars for us! Our course by Milton's light was sped, And Shakespeare shining overhead: Chatting on deck was Dryden too, The Bacon of the rhyming crew; None ever cross'd our mystic sea More richly stored with thought than he; Tho' never tender nor sublime, He wrestles with and conquers Time. To learn my lore on Chaucer's knee, I left much prouder company Thee gentle Spenser fondly led, But me he mostly sent to bed.

I wish them every joy above That highly blessed spirits prove, Save one: and that too shall be theirs, But after many rolling years, When 'mid their light thy light appears. 1833. 1837.

TO JOSEPH ABLETT

Lord of the Celtic dells, Where Clwyd listens as his minstrel tells

Of Arthur, or Pendragon, or perchance
The plumes of flashy France,
Or, in dark region far across the main,
Far as Grenada in the world of Spain,

Warriors untold to Saxon ear, Until their steel-clad spirits reappear; How happy were the hours that held Thy friend (long absent from his native home)

Amid thy scenes with thee! how wide afield

From all past cares and all to come!

What hath Ambition's feverish grasp, what hath

Inconstant Fortune, panting Hope; What Genius, that should cope

With the heart-whispers in that path Winding so idly, where the idler stream Flings at the white-haired poplars gleam for gleam?

Ablett! of all the days
My sixty summers ever knew,
Pleasant as there have been no few,
Memory not one surveys
Like those we spent together. Wisely

Are they alone that leave the soul content.

Together we have visited the men Whom Pictish pirates vainly would have drowned;

Ah, shall we ever clasp the hand again That gave the British harp its truest sound?

Live, Derwent's guest! and thou by Grasmere's springs! Serene creators of immortal things.

And live too thou for happier days
Whom Dryden's force and Spenser's fays
Have heart and soul possess'd: 2
Growl in Grim London he who will,
Revisit thou Maiano's hill,
And swell with pride his sunburnt

breast.

Old Redi in his easy-chair
With varied chant awaits thee there,
And here are voices in the grove
Aside my house, that make me think
Bacchus is coming down to drink
To Ariadne's love.

But whither am I borne away
From thee, to whom began my lay?
Courage! I am not yet quite lost;
I stepped aside to greet my friends;
Believe me, soon the greeting ends,
I know but three or four at most.

Deem not that Time hath borne too hard Upon the fortunes of thy bard, Leaving me only three or four: 'Tis my old number; dost thou start At such a tale? in what man's heart

Is there fireside for more?

I never courted friends or Fame;
She pouted at me long, at last she came,
And threw her arms around my neck
and said,

¹ Southey and Wordsworth. ² Leigh Hunt.

"Take what hath been for years delay'd, And fear not that the leaves will fall One hour the earlier from thy coronal."

Ablett! thou knowest with what even hand
I waved away the offer'd seat

Among the clambering, clattering, stilt ed great,

The rulers of our land; Nor crowds nor kings can lift me up, Nor sweeten Pleasure's purer cup.

Thou knowest how, and why, are dear to me

My citron groves of Fiesole,
My chirping Affrico, my beechwood

My Naiads, with feet only in the brook, Which runs away and giggles in their faces,

Yet there they sit, nor sigh for other places.

'Tis not Pelasgian wall,
By him made sacred whom alone
'Twere not profane to call
The bard divine, nor (thrown Far under me) Valdarno, nor the crest
Of Vallombrosa in the crimson east.

Here can I sit or roam at will:
Few trouble me, few wish me ill,
Few come across me, few too near;
Here all my wishes make their stand;
Here ask I no one's voice or hand;
Scornful of favor, ignorant of fear.

Yon vine upon the maple bough Flouts at the hearty wheat below; Away her venal wines the wise man sends,

While those of lower stem he brings From inmost treasure vault, and sings Their worth and age among his chosen friends.

Behold our Earth, most nigh the sun Her zone least opens to the genial heat, But farther off her veins more freely run:

'Tis thus with those who whirl about the great; [mote The nearest shrink and shiver, we re-May open-breasted blow the pastoral oat.

TO MARY LAMB

COMFORT thee, O thou mourner, yet awhile!

Again shall Elia's smile

Refresh thy heart, where heart can ache no more.

What is it we deplore?

He leaves behind him, freed from griefs and years,

Far worthier things than tears.
The love of friends without a single foe:
Unequalled lot below!

His gentle soul, his genius, these are thine;

For these dost thou repine?

He may have left the lowly walks of men;

Left them he has; what then?

Are not his footsteps followed by the eyes

Of all the good and wise?
Tho' the warm day is over, yet they seek

Upon the lofty peak

Of his pure mind the roseate light that glows

O'er death's perennial snows.
Behold him! from the region of the blessed

He speaks: he bids thee rest. 1834. 1837.

ON HIS OWN IPHIGENEIA AND AGAMEMNON

From eve to morn, from morn to parting night

Father and daughter stood within my sight. [they said, I felt the looks they gave, the words And reconducted each serener shade.

Ever shall these to me be well-spent days,
Sweet fell the tears upon them, sweet the praise. [throne, Far from the footstool of the tragic I am tragedian in that scene alone. 1837.

FAREWELL TO ITALY

I LEAVE thee, beauteous Italy! no more From the high terraces, at eventide, To look supine into thy depths of sky, Thy golden moon between the cliff and me, Or thy dark spires of fretted cypresses Bordering the channel of the milky-way. Fiesole and Valdarno must be dreams Hereafter, and my own lost Affrico Murmur to me but in the poet's song. I did believe (what have I not believed?) Weary with age, but unoppressed by pain.

To close in thy soft clime my quiet day And rest my bones in the Mimosa's shade.

Hope! Hope! few ever cherished thee so little;

Few are the heads thou hast so rarely raised; [well.]
But thou didst promise this, and all was For we are fond of thinking where to lie When every pulse hath ceased, when the lone heart

Can lift no aspiration—reasoning
As if the sight were unimpaired by death,
Were unobstructed by the coffin-lid,
And the sun cheered corruption! Over

The smiles of nature shed a potent charm.

And light us to our chamber at the grave. 1835. 1846.

WHY, WHY REPINE

Why, why repine, my pensive friend, At pleasures slipped away? Some the stern Fates will never lend, And all refuse to stay.

I see the rainbow in the sky,
The dew upon the grass,
I see them, and I ask not why
They glimmer or they pass.

With folded arms I linger not
To call them back; 'twere vain;
In this, or in some other spot,
I know they'll shine again.

1846.

MOTHER, I CANNOT MIND MY WHEEL

MOTHER, I cannot mind my wheel;
My fingers ache, my lips are dry:
Oh! if you felt the pain I feel!
But oh, who ever felt as I?
No longer could I doubt him true—
All other men may use deceit;
He always said my eyes were blue,
And often swore my lips were sweet.

TO A BRIDE

FEBRUARY 17, 1846 1

A STILL, serene, soft day; enough of sun To wreathe the cottage smoke like pinetree snow.

Whiter than those white flowers the bride-maids wore:

Upon the silent boughs the lissom air Rested; and, only when it went, they moved.

Nor more than under linnet springing off. Such was the wedding morn: the joyous Year

Leapt over March and April up to May. Regent of rising and of ebbing hearts, Thyself borne on in cool serenity,

All heaven around and bending over thee.

All earth below and watchful of thy course!

Well hast thou chosen, after long demur To aspirations from more realms than one.

Peace be with those thou leavest! peace with thee!

Is that enough to wish thee? not enough. But very much: for Love himself feels pain,

While brighter plumage shoots, to shed

last year's;

And one at home (how dear that one!) recalls

Thy name, and thou recallest one at home.

Yet turn not back thine eyes; the hour of tears

Is over: nor believe thou that Romance Closes against pure Faith her rich domain.

Shall only blossoms flourish there? Arise,

Far sighted bride! look forward! clearer views

And higher hopes lie under calmer skies. Fortune in vain call'd out to thee; in

Rays from high regions darted; Wit pour'd out

His sparkling treasures; Wisdom laid his crown

Of richer jewels at thy reckless feet. Well hast thou chosen. I repeat the words, ¹ For the marriage of the daughter of Rose Aylmer's half-sister. Called by Landor "my tenderest lay." See The Three Roses, p. 457, and note there.

Adding as true ones, not untold before, That incense must have fire for its ascent.

Else 'tis inert and can not reach the idol. Youth is the sole equivalent of youth. Enjoy it while it lasts; and last it will; Love can prolong it in despite of Years.

LYRICS

"Do you remember me? or are you proud?"

Lightly advancing thro' her star-trimm'd crowd.

Ianthe said, and looked into my eyes. "A yes, a yes, to both: for Memory Where you but once have been must ever

be,

And at your voice Pride from his throne must rise."

No, my own love of other years? No. it must never be.

Much rests with you that yet endears, Alas! but what with me?

Could those bright years o'er me revolve So gay, o'er you so fair,

The pearl of life we would dissolve And each the cup might share. You show that truth can ne'er decay,

Whatever fate befalls; I. that the myrtle and the bay Shoot fresh on ruin'd walls.

ONE year ago my path was green, My footstep light, my brow serene; Alas! and could it have been so One year ago?

There is a love that is to last When the hot days of youth are past: Such love did a sweet maid bestow One year ago.

I took a leaflet from her braid And gave it to another maid. Love! broken should have been thy bow One year ago.

YES: I write verses now and then, But blunt and flaccid is my pen, No longer talked of by young men As rather clever:

In the last quarter are my eyes, You see it by their form and size: Is it not time then to be wise? Or now or never.

Fairest that ever sprang from Eve! While Time allows the short reprieve, Just look at me! would you believe Twas once a lover? I cannot clear the five-bar gate, But, trying first its timbers' state, Climb stiffly up, take breath, and wait To trundle over.

Thro' gallopade I cannot swing The entangling blooms of Beauty's spring:

I cannot say the tender thing, Be't true or false, And am beginning to opine Those girls are only half-divine Whose waists you wicked boys entwine In giddy waltz.

I fear that arm above that shoulder, I wish them wiser, graver, older, Sedater, and no harm if colder And panting less.

Ah! people were not half so wild In former days, when, starchly mild, Upon her high-heel'd Essex smiled The brave Queen Bess.

With rosy hand a little girl pressed down A boss of fresh-cull'd cowslips in a rill: Often as they sprang up again, a frown Show'd she disliked resistance to her

But when they droop'd their heads and shone much less,

She shook them to and fro, and threw them by,

And tripped away. "Ye loathe the heaviness

Ye love to cause, my little girls!" thought I, "And what had shone for you, by you must die."

You smiled, you spoke, and I believed, By every word and smile deceived. Another man would hope no more; Nor hope I what I hoped before: But let not this last wish be vain; Deceive, deceive me once again!

Remain, ah not in youth alone, Tho' youth, where you are, long will stay,

But when my summer days are gone. And my autumnal haste away. "Can I be always by your side?"

No: but the hours you can, you must Nor rise at Death's approaching stride, Nor go when dust is gone to dust.

Soon, O Ianthe! life is o'er, And sooner beauty's heavenly smile: Grant only (and I ask no more), Let love remain that little while.

TO A CYCLAMEN

I come to visit thee again, My little flowerless cyclamen; To touch the hand, almost to press, That cheered thee in thy loneliness. What could thy careful guardian find Of thee in form, of me in mind, What is there in us rich or rare, To make us claim a moment's care? Unworthy to be so caressed, We are but withering leaves at best.

Give me the eyes that look on mine, And, when they see them dimly shine, Are moister than they were. Give me the eyes that fain would find Some relics of a youthful mind

Amid the wrecks of care. Give me the eyes that catch at last A few faint glimpses of the past, And, like the arkite dove,

Bring back a long-lost olive-bough, And can discover even now

A heart that once could love.

Twenty years hence my eyes may grow If not quite dim, yet rather so, Still yours from others they shall know Twenty years hence.

Twenty years hence tho' it may hap That I be call'd to take a nap In a cool cell where thunder-clap Was never heard, There breathe but o'er my arch of grass A not too sadly sigh'd Alas,
And I shall catch, ere you can pass,
That wingèd word.

Proud word you never spoke, but you will speak

Four not exempt from pride some future day.

Resting on one white hand a warm wet cheek

Over my open volume you will say, "This man loved me!" then rise and trip away.

Alas, how soon the hours are over Counted us out to play the lover! And how much narrower is the stage Allotted us to play the sage! But when we play the fool, how wide, The theatre expands! beside, How long the audience sits before us! How many prompters! what a chorus!

QUATRAINS

On the smooth brow and clustering hair Myrtle and rose! your wreath combine,

The duller olive I would wear, Its constancy, its peace, be mine.

My hopes retire; my wishes as before Struggle to find their resting-place in vain;

The ebbing sea thus beats against the shore:

The shore repels it; it returns again.

Various the roads of life; in one All terminate, one lonely way. We go; and "Is he gone?" Is all our best friends say.

Is it not better at an early hour
In its calm cell to rest the weary
head,

While birds are singing and while blooms the bower,

Than sit the fire out and go starv'd to bed? 1846.

I KNOW NOT WHETHER I AM PROUD

I know not whether I am proud, But this I know, I hate the crowd: Therefore pray let me disengage My verses from the motley page, Where others far more sure to please Pour out their choral song with ease.

And yet perhaps, if some should tire With too much froth or too much fire, There is an ear that may incline Even to words so dull as mine.

1846.

THE DAY RETURNS, MY NATAL DAY

THE day returns, my natal day,
Borne on the storm and pale with snow.

And seems to ask me why I stay, Stricken by Time and bowed by Woe.

Many were once the friends who came
To wish me joy; and there are some
Who wish it now; but not the same:
They are whence friend can never come.

Nor are they you my love watched o'er Cradled in innocence and sleep; You smile into my eyes no more, Nor see the bitter tears they weep.

HOW MANY VOICES GAILY SING

How many voices gaily sing,
"O happy morn, O happy spring
Of life!" Meanwhile there comes o'er

A softer voice from Memory, And says, "If loves and hopes have flown

With years, think too what griefs are gone!" 1846.

TO ROBERT BROWNING

ON THE HELLENICS¹

Come back, ye wandering Muses, come back home.

Ye seem to have forgotten where it lies: Come, let us walk upon the silent sands Of Simois, where deep footmarks show long strides;

Thence we may mount, perhaps, to higher ground,

Where Aphroditè from Athenè won The golden apple, and from Herè too, And happy Ares shouted far below.

Or would ye rather choose the grassy vale

Where flows Anapos thro' anemones, Hyacinths, and narcissuses, that bend To show their rival beauty in the stream?

Bring with you each her lyre, and each in turn

Temper a graver with a lighter song. 1847.

THRASYMEDES AND EUNOE

Who will away to Athens with me? who Loves choral songs and maidens crown'd with flowers,

Unenvious? mount the pinnace; hoist the sail.

I promise ye, as many as are here,

¹ Prefixed to the second edition of Landor's Hellenics, 1847. It is here given slightly out of the exact chronological order, that it may stand as an introduction to the chief poems from the Hellenics, those of 1846 as well as those of 1847. Other poems of Landor's, such as The Death of Artemidora, Cleone to Aspasia, The Shades of Agamemnon and Iphigeneia, etc., though originally published in other collections, and therefore not given here with the Hellenics, were ultimately included by Landor among them.

Ye shall not, while ye tarry with me,

From unrinsed barrel the diluted wine Of a low vineyard or a plant ill-pruned, But such as anciently the Ægean isles Pour'd in libation at their solemn feasts: And the same goblets shall ye grasp, embossed

With no vile figures of loose languid boors,

But such as gods have lived with and have led. The sea smiles bright before us. What Away they fly. Let us away in time To overtake them. Are they menaces We hear? And shall the strong repulse the weak,

Enraged at her defender? Hippias! Art thou the man? 'Twas Hippias. He had found

His sister borne from the Cecropian port By Thrasymedes. - And reluctantly? Ask, ask the maiden; I have no reply. "Brother! O brother Hippias! O, if

If pity, ever touch'd thy breast, forbear! Strike not the brave, the gentle, the beloved,

My Thrasymedes, with his cloak alone Protecting his own head and mine from harm."

"Didst thou not once before," cried Hippias,

Regardless of his sister, hoarse with wrath

At Thrasymedes, "didst not thou, dogeved.

Dare, as she walk'd up to the Parthenon, On the most holy of all holy days, In sight of all the city, dare to kiss Her maiden cheek?'

"Ay, before all the gods, Ay, before Pallas, before Artemis, Ay, before Aphroditè, before Herè,

I dared; and dare again. spouse!

Arise! and let my lips quaff purity From thy fair open brow."

The sword was up. And yet he kiss'd her twice. Some God withheld

The arm of Hippias; his proud blood seeth'd slower

And smote his breast less angrily; he spake thus: His hand on the white shoulder, and "Ye must return with me. A second

Offended, will our sire Peisistratos Pardon the affront? Thou shouldst have ask'd thyself

This question ere the sail first flapp'd the

Whence was thrown out a rope from one above,

And Hippias caught it. From the virgin's waist

Her lover dropped his arm, and blushed to think He had retain'd it there in sight of rude

Irreverent men: he led her forth, nor spake.

Hippias walked silent too, until they reached

The mansion of Peisistratos her sire. Serenely in his sternness did the prince Look on them both awhile: they saw not him.

For both had cast their eyes upon the ground.

"Are these the pirates thou hast taken, son?"

Said he. "Worse, father! worse than pirates they.

Who thus abuse thy patience, thus abuse Thy pardon, thus abuse the holy rites Twice over.'

"Well hast thou performed thy duty," Firmly and gravely said Peisistratos.

"Nothing then, rash young man! could turn thy heart

From Eunoe, my daughter?"

"Nothing, sir, Shall ever turn it. I can die but once And love but once. O Euroe! farewell!" "Nay, she shall see what thou canst bear for her. "O father! shut me in my chamber,

shut me

In my poor mother's tomb, dead or alive, But never let me see what he can bear; I know how much that is, when borne for me."

"Not yet: come on. And lag not thou behind.

Pirate of virgin and of princely hearts ! Before the people and before the Goddess Thou hadst evinced the madness of thy passion,

And now wouldst bear from home and plenteousness

To poverty and exile this my child." Then shuddered Thrasymedes, and exclaim'd,

"I see my crime; I saw it not before. The daughter of Peisistratos was born Neither for exile nor for poverty, Ah! nor for me!" He would have wept,

He spake; and on the morrow they were one. 1846.

IPHIGENEIA AND AGAMEMNON

IPHIGENEIA, when she heard her doom At Aulis, and when all beside the King Had gone away, took his right hand, and said.

"Ofather! I am young and very happy. I do not think the pious Calchas heard Distinctly what the Goddess spake. Old-age

Obscures the senses. If my nurse, who knew

My voice so well, sometimes misunderstood

While I was resting on her knee both

And hitting it to make her mind my words,

And looking in her face, and she in mine, Might he not also hear one word amiss, Spoken from so far off, even from Olympus?"

The father placed his cheek upon her head.

And tears dropped down it, but the king of men

Replied not. Then the maiden spake once more. [thou not

"O father! sayst thou nothing? Hear'st Me, whom thou ever hast, until this hour, Listened to fondly, and awakened me

To hear my voice amid the voice of birds.

When it was inarticulate as theirs,

And the down deadened it within the nest?"

He moved her gently from him, silent

And this, and this alone, brought tears from her.

Although she saw fate nearer: then with sighs,

"I thought to have laid down my hair before

Artemis, and not have Benignant dimmed

Her polished altar with my virgin blood; I thought to have selected the white flowers

To please the Nymphs, and to have asked of each

By name, and with no sorrowful regret, Whether, since both my parents willed the change,

I might at Hymen's feet bend my clipped brow

And (after those who mind us girls the Adore our own Athena, that she would Regard me mildly with her azure eyes, But father! to see you no more, and see Your love, O father! go ere I am gone . ."

Gently he moved her off, and drew her back.

Bending his lofty head far over hers, And the dark depths of nature heaved and burst.

He turn'd away; not far, but silent still.

She now first shuddered; for in him, so nigh,

So long a silence seemed the approach of death,

And like it. Once again she raised her

"O father! if the ships are now detained.

And all your vows move not the Gods above.

When the knife strikes me there will be one prayer

The less to them: and purer can there

Any, or more fervent than the daughter's prayer

For her dear father's safety and success?" [resolve.

A groan that shook him shook not his An aged man now entered, and without One word, stepped slowly on, and took the wrist

Of the pale maiden. She looked up and saw The fillet of the priest and calm cold eves. Then turned she where her parent stood, and cried

"O father! grieve no more: the ships 1846. can sail."

THE HAMADRYAD 1

RHAICOS was born amid the hills where-

Gnidos the light of Caria is discern'd, And small are the white-crested that play near,

And smaller onward are the purple waves.

Thence festal choirs were visible, all crown'd

With rose and myrtle if they were inborn;

If from Pandion sprang they, on the coast

Where stern Athenè raised her citadel, Then olive was intwined with violets Cluster'd in bosses, regular and large. For various men wore various coronals; But one was their devotion; 'twas to

Whose laws all follow, her whose smile

withdraws The sword from Ares, thunderbolt from

Zeus, And whom in his chill caves the mutable

Of mind, Poseidon, the sea-king, reveres.

And whom his brother, stubborn Dis. hath pray'd

To turn in pity the averted cheek Of her he bore away, with promises, Nay, with loud oath before dread Styx itself,

To give her daily more and sweeter flowers

Than he made drop from her on Enna's dell.

Rhaicos was looking from his father's

At the long trains that hastened to the town

From all the valleys, like bright rivu-

Gurgling with gladness, wave outrunning wave,

1 Compare Lowell's poem, Rhæcus, which gives a somewhat different version of the same story.

And thought it hard he might not also

And offer up one prayer, and press one hand,

He knew not whose. The father call'd him in,

And said, "Son Rhaicos! those are idle games;

Long enough I have lived to find them so,"

And ere he ended sighed; as old men do Always, to think how idle such games are.

"I have not yet," thought Rhaicos in his heart,

And wanted proof.

"Suppose thou go and help Echeion at the hill, to bark you oak And lop its branches off, before we delve

About the trunk and ply the root with

This we may do in winter."

Rhaicos went:

For thence he could see farther, and see more

Of those who hurried to the city-gate. Echeion he found there with naked arm Swart-hair'd, strong-sinew'd, and his eyes intent

Upon the place where first the axe should fall:

He held it upright. "There are bees about.

Or wasps, or hornets," said the cautious eld,

"Look sharp, O son of Thallinos!" The youth

Inclined his ear, afar, and warily,

And cavern'd in his hand. He heard a buzz

At first, and then the sound grew soft and clear,

And then divided into what seem'd tune, And there were words upon it, plaintive words,

He turn'd, and said, "Echeion! do not strike

That tree: it must be hollow; for some god

Speaks from within. Come thyself near." Again

Both turn'd toward it: and behold! there sat

Upon the moss below, with her two

Pressing it, on each side, a maid in form. [pale Downcast were her long eyelashes, and

Her cheek, but never mountain-ash display'd

Berries of color like her lip so pure,

Nor were the anemones about her hair Soft, smooth and wavering like the face beneath.

"What dost thou here?" Echeion, half-afraid,

Half-angry cried. She lifted up her eyes, But nothing spake she. Rhaicos drew one step Backward, for fear came likewise over him,

But not such fear: he panted, gasp'd, drew in

His breath, and would have turn'd it into words,

But could not into one.

"O send away
That sad old man!" said she. The old man went

Without a warning from his master's son,

Glad to escape, for sorely he now fear'd, And the axe shone behind him in their eyes.

Hamad. And wouldst thou too shed the most innocent

Of blood? No vow demands it; no god wills

The oak to bleed.

Rhaicos. Who art thou? whence? why here?

And whither wouldst thou go? Among the robed

In white or saffron, or the hue that most Resembles dawn or the clear sky, is none Array'd as thou art. What so beautiful As that gray robe which clings about thee close,

Like moss to stones adhering, leaves to trees.

Yet lets thy bosom rise and fall in turn, As, touch'd by zephyrs, fall and rise the boughs

Of graceful platan by the river-side?

Hamad, Lovest thou well thy father's house?

Rhaicos. Indeed
I love it, well I love it, yet would leave

For thine, where'er it be, my father's house,
With all the marks upon the door, that

With all the marks upon the door, that show

My growth at every birthday since the third,

And all the charms, o'erpowering evil eyes,

My mother nail'd for me against my bed,

And the Cydonian bow (which thou shalt see)

Won in my race last spring from Eutychos.

Bethink thee what it is to Hamad. leave a home

Thou never yet hast left, one night, one day.

Rhaicos. No, 'tis not hard to leave it; 'tis not hard

To leave, O maiden, that paternal home, If there be one on earth whom we may

First, last, for ever; one who says that she

Will love for ever too. To say which word.

Only to say it, surely is enough.

It shows such kindness . . if 'twere possible

We at the moment think she would indeed.

Hamad. Who taught thee all this folly at thy age?

Rhaicos. I have seen lovers and have learned to love.

Hamad. But wilt thou spare the tree?

Rhaicos. My father wants

The bark; the tree may hold its place awhile.

Hamad. Awhile! thy father numbers then my days?

Rhaicos. Are there no others where the moss beneath

Is quite as tufty? Who would send thee forth

Or ask thee why thou tarriest? Is thy Anywhere near?

Hamad. I have no flock: I kill

Nothing that breathes, that stirs, that feels the air,

The sun, the dew. Why should the beautiful

(And thou art beautiful) disturb the source

Whence springs all beauty? Hast thou never heard

Of Hamadryads?

Rhaicos.Heard of them I have: Tell me some tale about them. sit

Beside thy feet? Art thou not tired? The herbs

Are very soft; I will not come too nigh; Do but sit there, nor tremble so, nor doubt. plore

Stay, stay an instant: let me first ex-

If any acorn of last year be left

Within it; thy thin robe too ill protects Thy dainty limbs against the harm one small

Acorn may do. Here's none. Another day

Trust me; till then let me sit opposite. Hamad. I seat me; be thou seated. and content.

Rhaicos. O sight for gods! ve men

below! adore

The Aphroditè. Is she there below? Or sits she here before me? as she sate Before the shepherd on those heights that shade

The Hellespont, and brought his kindred woe.

Hamad. Reverence the higher Powers: nor deem amiss

Of her who pleads to thee, and would repay-

Ask not how much-but very much. Rise not:

No. Rhaicos, no! Without the nuptial vow

Love is unholy. Swear to me that none Of mortal maids shall ever taste thy kiss. Then take thou mine; then take it, not before.

Rhaicos.Hearken, all gods above! O Aphroditè!

O Herè! Let my vow be ratified!

But wilt thou come into my father's house?

Hamad. Nay: and of mine I cannot give thee part.

Rhaicos. Where is it?

Hamad.In this oak.

Rhaicos. Ay; now begins The tale of Hamadryad; tell it through. Hamad. Pray of thy father never to to cut down

My tree; and promise him, as well thou mayst,

That every year he shall receive from me More honey than will buy him nine fat sheep,

More wax than he will burn to all the gods.

Why fallest thou upon thy face? Some

May scratch it, rash young man! Rise up; for shame!

Rhaicos. For shame I can not rise. O pity me!

I dare not sue for love.. but do not hate! Let me once more behold thee..not once [loved!

But many days: let me love on.. un-

I aimed too high: on my head the bolt Falls back, and pierces to the very brain.

Hamad. Go.. rather go, than make me say I love.

Rhaicos. If happiness is immortality, (And whence enjoy it else the gods above?)

I am immortal too: my vow is heard:
Hark! on the left.. Nay, turn not from me now,
I claim my kiss.

Hamad. Do men take first, then claim?

Do thus the seasons run their course with them?

Her lips were seal'd, her head sank on his breast.

'Tis said that laughs were heard within the wood:

But who should hear them?..and whose laughs? and why?

Savory was the smell, and long past noon,

Thallinos! in thy house: for marjoram, Basil and mint, and thyme and rosemary,

Were sprinkled on the kid's wellroasted length,

Awaiting Rhaicos. Home he came at last.

Not hungry, but pretending hunger keen, With head and eyes just o'er the maple plate.

"Thou seest but badly, coming from the Boy Rhaicos!" said the father. "That oak's bark

Must have been tough, with little sap between;

It ought to run; but it and I are old."
Rhaicos, although each morsel of the bread

Increased by chewing, and the meat grew cold

And tasteless to his palate, took a draught Of gold-bright wine, which, thirsty as he was,

He thought not of until his father fill'd The cup, averring water was amiss,

But wine had been at all times pour'd on kid,

It was religion.

He thus fortified
Said, not quite boldly, and not quite abashed,

"Father, that oak is Zeus's own; that oak

Year after year will bring thee wealth from wax

And honey. There is one who fears the

And the gods love—that one"

(He blush'd, nor said

What one)

"Has promised this, and may do more. Thou hast not many moons to wait until The bees have done their best; if then there come Nor wax nor honey, let the tree be hewn."

"Zeus hath bestow'd on thee a prudent mind,"

Said the glad sire: "but look thou often there,

And gather all the honey thou canst find In every crevice, over and above What has been promised; would they

What has been promised; would they reckon that?"

Rhaicos went daily; but the nymph as oft,

Invisible. To play at love, she knew, Stopping its breathings when it breathes most soft,

Is sweeter than to play on any pipe.
She play'd on his: she fed upon his sighs;
They pleased her when they gently
waved her hair,

Cooling the pulses of her purple veins, And when her absence brought them out, they pleased.

Even among the fondest of them all,
What mortal or immortal maid is more Content with giving happiness than pain?

One day he was returning from the wood Despondently. She pitied him, and said "Come back!" and twined her fingers in the hem

Above his shoulder. Then she led his steps

To a cool rill that ran o'er level sand Through lentisk and through oleander,

Bathed she his feet, lifting them on her

When bathed, and drying them in both her hands.

He dared complain; for those who most are loved

Most dare it; but not harsh was his complaint.

"O thou inconstant!" said he, "if stern law

Bind thee, or will, stronger than sternest law [hope O, let me know henceforward when to

The fruit of love that grows for me but here."

He spake : and pluck'd it from its pliant stem.

"Impatient Rhaicos! Why thus inter-

The answer I would give? There is a bee Whom I have fed, a bee who knows my thoughts

And executes my wishes: I will send That messenger. If ever thou art false, Drawn by another, own it not, but drive My bee away; then shall I know my fate. And—for thou must be wretched—weep at thine.

But often as my heart persuades to lay Its cares on thine and throb itself to rest, Expect her with thee, whether it be morn

Or eve, at any time when woods are safe.

Day after day the Hours beheld them blessed.

And season after season: years had past, Blessed were they still. He who asserts that Love

Ever is sated of sweet things, the same Sweet things he fretted for in earlier days. Never, by Zeus! loved he a Hamadryad. The nights had now grown longer, and perhaps The Hamadryads find them lone and Among their woods; one did, alas! She called

Her faithful bee: 't was when all bees should sleep, And all did sleep but hers. She was sent forth

To bring that light which never wintry blast

Blows out, nor rain nor snow extinguishes.

The light that shines from loving eyes

Eyes that love back, till they can see no more.

Rhaicos was sitting at his father's hearth:

Between them stood the table, not o'erspread

With fruits which autumn now profusely bore,

Nor anise cakes, nor odorous wine: but

The draft-board was expanded; at which game

Triumphant sat old Thallinos; the son Was puzzled, vexed, discomfited, distraught.

A buzz was at his ear: up went his hand,

And it was heard no longer. The poor

Return'd, (but not until the morn shone bright)

And found the Hamadryad with her

Upon her aching wrist, and showed one wing

Half-broken off, the other's meshes marr'd.

And there were bruises which no eye could see

Saving a Hamadryad's.

At this sight

Down fell the languid brow, both hands fell down.

A shriek was carried to the ancient hall Of Thallinos: he heard it not: his son Heard it, and ran forthwith into the wood.

No bark was on the tree, no leaf was green,

The trunk was riven through. From that day forth

Nor word nor whisper sooth'd his ear, nor sound

Even of insect wing; but loud laments The woodmen and the shepherds one long year

Heard day and night; for Rhaicos would not quit

The solitary place, but moan'd and died.

Hence milk and honey wonder not, O guest,

To find set duly on the hollow stone. 1846.

ACON AND RHODOPÉ; OR, INCON-STANCY

(A Sequel)

THE Year's twelve daughters had in turn gone by.

Of measured pace though varying mien all twelve,

Some froward, some sedater, some adorn'd

For festival, some reckless of attire.

The snow had left the mountain-top; fresh flowers

Had withered in the meadow; fig and prune

Hung wrinkling; the last apple glow'd amid

Its freckled leaves; and weary oxen blink'd

Between the trodden corn and twisted vine,

Under whose bunches stood the empty crate,

To creak ere long beneath them carried home.

This was the season when twelve months before,

O gentle Hamadryad, true to love!
Thy mansion, thy dim mansion in the wood

Was blasted and laid desolate; but none Dared violate its precincts, none dared pluck

The moss beneath it, which alone remain'd

Of what was thine.

Old Thallinos sat mute
In solitary sadness. The strange tale

(Not until Rhaicos died, but then the whole)

Echeion had related, whom no force Could ever make look back upon the oaks.

The father said, "Echeion! thou must weigh,

Carefully, and with steady hand, enough (Although no longer comes the store as once!)

Of wax to burn all day and night upon That hollow stone where milk and honey

So may the gods, so may the dead, be pleas'd!"

Thallinos bore it thither in the morn, And lighted it and left it.

First of those
Who visited upon this solemn day
The Hamadryad's oak, were Rhodopé
And Acon; of one age, one hope, one trust.

Graceful was she as was the nymph whose fate

She sorrowed for: he slender, pale, and first

Lapp'd by the flame of love: his father's lands [afar.

Were fertile, herds lowed over them Now stood the two aside the hollow stone And look'd with steadfast eyes toward the oak Shivered and black and bare.

"May never we Love as they loved!" said Acon. She at this

Smiled, for he said not what he meant to say,

And thought not of its bliss, but of its end.

He caught the flying smile, and blush'd, and vow'd

Nor time nor other power, whereto the might

Of love hath yielded and may yield again,

Should alter his.

The father of the youth Wanted not beauty for him, wanted not Song, that could lift earth's weight from off his heart.

Discretion, that could guide him thro' the world,

Innocence, that could clear his way to heaven;

Silver and gold and land, not green before

The ancestral gate, but purple under skies

Bending far off, he wanted for his heir. Fathers have given life, but virgin heart

They never gave; and dare they then control

Or check it harshly? dare they break a bond

Girt round it by the holiest Power on high?

Acon was grieved, he said, grieved bitterly,

But Acon had complied . . 'twas dutiful:

Crush thy own heart, Man! Man! but fear to wound

The gentler, that relies on thee alone, By thee created, weak or strong by thee; Touch it not but for worship; watch before

Its sanctuary; nor leave it till are closed. The temple-doors and the last lamp is spent.

Rhodopé, in her soul's waste solitude, Sate mournful by the dull-resounding

Often not hearing it, and many tears
Had the cold breezes hardened on her cheek.

Meanwhile he sauntered in the wood of oaks,

Nor shun'd to look upon the hollow stone

That held the milk and honey, nor to lay

His plighted hand where recently 'twas

Opposite hers, when finger playfully Advanced and pushed back finger, on each side.

He did not think of this, as she would

If she were there alone.

The day was hot:

The moss invited him; it cool'd his cheek,

It cool'd his hands; he thrust them into

And sank to slumber. Never was there dream

Divine as his. He saw the Hamadryad. She took him by the arm and led him on Along a valley, where profusely grew The smaller lilies with their pendent bells.

And, hiding under mint, chill drosera, The violet shy of butting cyclamen,

The feathery fern, and, browser of moist banks.

Her offspring round her, the soft strawberry;

The quivering spray of ruddy tamarisk, The oleander's light-haired progeny Breathing bright freshness in each other's face,

And graceful rose, bending her brow, with cup

Of fragrance and of beauty, boon for Gods.

The fragrance fill'd his breast with such delight

His senses were bewildered, and he thought

He saw again the face he most had loved.

He stopped: the Hamadryad at his side Now stood between: then drew him farther off:

He went, compliant as before: but soon Verdure had ceased: altho' the ground was smooth,

Nothing was there delightful. At this change

He would have spoken, but his guide repressed

All questioning, and said,
"Weak youth! what brought Thy footstep to this wood, my native haunt.

My life-long residence? this bank, where first

I sate with him . . . the faithful (now I know.

Too late!) the faithful Rhaicos. Haste thee home: more Be happy, if thou canst; but come no Where those whom death alone could sever, died."

He started up: the moss whereon he

Was dried and withered: deadlier paleness spread

Over his cheek: he sickened: and the

Had land enough; it held his only son. 1847.

MENELAUS AND HELEN AT TROY

After the fall of Troy, Helen is pursued by Menelaus up the steps of the palace; an old attendant deprecates and intercepts his vengeance.

Menelaus. Out of my way! Off! or my sword may smite thee

Heedless of venerable age. And thou Fugitive! stop. Stand, traitress, on that stair-

Thou mountest not another, by the gods!

Now take the death thou meritest, the death

Zeus who presides o'er hospitality,

And every other god whom thou hast left.

And every other who abandons thee In this accursed city, sends at last.

Turn, vilest of vile slaves! turn, paramour

Of what all other women hate, of cowards,

Turn, lest this hand wrench back thy head, and toss

It and its odors to the dust and flames. Helen. Welcome, the death thou promisest! Not fear

But shame, obedience, duty, make me turn.

Menelaus. Duty! false harlot!

Helen. Name too true! severe Precursor to the blow that is to fall. It should alone suffice for killing me.

Menelaus. Ay, weep: be not the only one in Troy

Who wails not on this day-its lastthe day

Thou and thy crimes darken with dead on dead.

Helen. Spare! spare! O let the last that falls be me.

There are but young and old.

There are but guilty Menelaus. Where thou art, and the sword strikes none amiss.

Hearest thou not the creeping blood buzz near

Like flies? or wouldst thou rather hear it hiss

Louder, against the flaming roofs thrown down

Wherewith the streets are pathless? Ay, but vengeance

Springs over all; and Nemesis and Atè Drove back the flying ashes with both hands.

I never saw thee weep till now: and now

There is no pity in thy tears. The tiger Leaves not her young athirst for the first milk, first milk,

As thou didst. Thine could scarce have clasped thy knee

If she had felt thee leave her.

Helen. O my child!

My only one! thou livest: 'tis enough; Hate me, abhor me, curse me—these are duties—

Call me but Mother in the shades of death!

She now is twelve years old, when the bud swells

And the first colors of uncertain life

Begin to tinge it.

Menelaus (aside.) Can she think of home?

Hers once, mine yet, and sweet Hermionè's!

Is there one spark that cheer'd my hearth, one left.

For thee, my last of love!

Scorn, righteous scorn
Blows it from me—but thou mayst—never, never—

Thou shalt not see her even there. The slave

On earth shall scorn thee, and the damn'd below.

Helen. Delay not either fate. If death is mercy,

Send me among the captives; so that Zeus

May see his offspring led in chains away,
And thy hard brother, pointing with his sword
[shore,

At the last wretch that crouches on the Cry, "She alone shall never sail for Greece!"

Menelaus. Hast thou more words?

Her voice is musical
As the young maids who sing to Artemis:
How glossy is that yellow braid my grasp Seiz'd and let loose! Ah! can then years have past

Since—but the children of the gods, like them,

Suffer not age.

Helen! speak honestly,
And thus escape my vengeance—was it

That bore thee off?

Helen. It was some evil god.
Menelaus. Helping that hated man?
Helen. How justly hated!
Menelaus. By thee too?

Helen. Hath he not made thee un-

O do not strike.

Menelaus. Wretch!

Helen. Strike, but do not speak.

Menelaus. Lest thou remember me against thy will.

Helen, Lest I look up and see you wroth and sad,

Against my will; O! how against my will They know above, they who perhaps can pity.

Menelaus. They shall not save thee.
Helen. Then indeed they pity.
Menelaus. Prepare for death.

Helen. Not from that hand: 'twould pain you.

Menelaus. Touch not my hand.—Easily dost thou drop it!

Helen. Easy are all things, do but thou command.

Menelaus. Look up then.

Helen. To the hardest proof of all I am now bidden; bid me not look up.

Menelaus, She looks as when I led her on behind The torch and fife, and when the blush o'erspread

Her girlish face at tripping in the myrtle On the first step before the wreathed gate.

Approach me. Fall not on thy knees. Helen. The hand That is to slay me, best may slay me thus. I dare no longer see the light of heaven, Not thine—alas! the light of heaven to Menelaus. Follow me.

She holds out both arms—and now Drops them again.—She comes.—Why stoppest thou?

Helen. O Menelaus! could thy heart know mine,

As once it did—for then they did converse,

Generous the one, the other not unworthy— [than guilt. Thou wouldst find sorrow deeper even Menelaus, And I must lead her by the hand again?

Nought shall persuade me. Never. She draws back-

The true alone and loving sob like her. [He takes her hand, Come Helen! O let never Greek see this! Hide me from Argos, from Amyclai hid me.

Hide me from all. Thy anguish is too strong Menelaus. For me to strive with.

Leave it all to me. Menelaus. Peace! Peace! The wind, I hope, is fair for Sparta.

ÆSCHYLOS AND SOPHOCLES

Sophocles. Thou goest then, and leavest none behind

Worthy to rival thee!

Æschulos. Nay, say not so. Whose is the hand that now is pressing

A hand I may not ever press again! What glorious forms hath it brought boldly forth

From Pluto's realm! The blind old Œdipos

Was led on one side by Antigone, Sophocles propped the other.

Sophocles Sophocles. Sooth'd not Prometheus chain'd upon his rock.

Keeping the vultures and the Gods away;

Sophocles is not greater than the chief Who conquered Ilion, nor could be revenge

His murder, or stamp everlasting brand Upon the brow of that adulterous wife. Æschylos. Live, and do more.

Thine is the Lemnian isle. And thou has placed the arrows in the hand

Of Philoctetes, hast assuaged his wounds And given his aid without which Greece had fail'd.

Sophocles. I did indeed drive off the pest of flies;

We also have our pest of them which

About our honey, darken it, and sting; We laugh at them, for under hands like ours,

Without the wing that Philoctetes shook,

One single feather crushes the whole swarm,

I must be grave,

Hath Sicily such charms Above our Athens? Many charms hath she.

But she hath kings. Accursed be the race !

Æschulos. But where kings honor better men than they

Let kings be honored too.

The laurel crown Surmounts the golden: wear it: and 1847. farewell.

SHAKESPEARE AND MILTON

THE tongue of England, that which myriads

Have spoken and will speak, were paralvzed

Hereafter, but two mighty men stand forth

Above the flight of ages, two alone; One crying out,

All nations spoke thro' me.

The other:

True; and thro' this trumpet burst God's word; the fall of Angels, and the doom

First of immortal, then of mortal, Man. Glory! be glory! not to me, to God.

TO YOUTH

Where art thou gone, light-ankled Youth?

With wing at either shoulder, And smile that never left thy mouth Until the Hours grew colder:

Then somewhat seem'd to whisper near That thou and I must part: I doubted it: I felt no fear, No weight upon the heart:

If aught befell it, Love was by And roll'd it off again: So, if there ever was a sigh, Twas not a sigh of pain.

I may not call thee back; but thou Returnest when the hand Of gentle Sleep waves o'er my brow His poppy-crested wand;

Then smiling eves bend over mine, Then lips once pressed invite; But sleep hath given a silent sign, And both, alas! take flight. 1853.

TO AGE

WELCOME, old friend! These many years

Have we lived door by door:

The Fates have laid aside their shears
Perhaps for some few more.

I was indocile at an age
When better boys were taught,
But thou at length hast made me sage,
If I am sage in aught.

Little I know from other men,
Too little they from me,
But thou hast pointed well the pen
That writes these lines to thee.

Thanks for expelling Fear and Hope, One vile, the other vain; One's scourge, the other's telescope, I shall not see again;

Rather what lies before my feet My notice shall engage—

My notice shall engage— He who hath braved Youth's dizzy heat Dreads not the frost of Age.

THE CHRYSOLITES AND RUBIES BACCHUS BRINGS

THE chrysolites and rubies Bacchus brings

To crown the feast where swells the broad-vein'd brow,

Where maidens blush at what the minstrel sings,

They who have coveted may covet now.

Bring me, in cool alcove, the grape uncrushed,

The peach of pulpy cheek and down mature,

Where every voice (but bird's or child's) is hushed,

And every thought, like the brook nigh, runs pure. 1853.

SO THEN, I FEEL NOT DEEPLY!

So then, I feel not deeply! if I did, I should have seized the pen and pierced therewith

The passive world!

And thus thou reasonest?
Well hast thou known the lover's, not so well

The poet's heart: while that heart bleeds, the hand

Presses it close. Grief must run on and pass

Into near Memory's more quiet shade Before it can compose itself in song. He who is agonized and turns to show His agony to those who sit around,

Seizes the pen in vain: thought, fancy, power,

Rush back into his bosom; all the strength

Of genius can not draw them into light From under mastering Grief; but Memory,

The Muse's mother, nurses, rears them

Informs, and keeps them with her all her days. 1853.

YEARS, MANY PARTI-COLORED YEARS

YEARS, many parti-colored years,
Some have crept on, and some have flown

Since first before me fell those tears
I never could see fall alone.
Years, not so many, are to come,
Years not so varied, when from you
One more will fall: when carried home,
I see it not, nor hear adieu. 1853.

I WONDER NOT THAT YOUTH REMAINS

I wonder not that Youth remains
With you, wherever else she flies:
Where could she find such fair domains,
Where bask beneath such sunny eyes?
1853.

ON MUSIC

Many love music but for music's sake, Many because her touches can awake Thoughts that repose within the breast half-dead,

And rise to follow where she loves to lead.

What various feelings come from days gone by!

What tears from far-off sources dim the eye!

Few, when light fingers with sweet voices play

And melodies swell, pause, and melt away,

Mind how at every touch, at every tone. A spark of life hath glisten'd and hath gone.

ROSE AYLMER'S HAIR, GIVEN BY HER SISTER

BEAUTIFUL spoils! borne off from vanquished death!

Upon my heart's high altar shall ve

lie,

Moved but by only one adorer's breath, Retaining youth, rewarding constancy.

DEATH STANDS ABOVE ME

DEATH stands above me, whispering low I know not what into my ear: Of his strange language all I know Is, there is not a word of fear. 1853.

ON HIS SEVENTY-FIFTH BIRTH-DAY

I STROVE with none; for none was worth my strife,

Nature I loved, and next to Nature. Art;

I warmed both hands before the fire of life. It sinks, and I am ready to depart.

1853.

ON THE DEATH OF SOUTHEY

IT was a dream (ah! what is not a dream?)

In which I wander'd thro' a boundless

Peopled by those that peopled earth ere-

But who conducted me? That gentle Power.

Gentle as Death, Death's brother. On his brow

Some have seen poppies; and perhaps among

The many flowers about his wavy curls Poppies there might be; roses I am sure I saw, and dimmer amaranths between. Lightly I thought I leaped across a grave

Smelling of cool fresh turf, and sweet it smelt.

I would, but must not linger; I must on, To tell my dream before forgetfulness Sweeps it away, or breaks or changes it. I was among the shades (if shades they were)

And look'd around me for some friendly hand

To guide me on my way, and tell me all That compass'd me around. I wish'd to

One no less firm or ready than the guide Of Alighieri, trustier far than he. Higher in intellect, more conversant

With earth and heaven and whatso lies between.

He stood before me—Southey.

"Thou art he." Said I, "whom I was wishing."

"That I know."

Replied the genial voice and radiant eye. "We may be question'd, question we may not;

For that might cause to bubble forth again

Some bitter spring which crossed the pleasantest

And shadiest of our paths."

"I do not ask." Said I, "about your happiness; I see The same serenity as when we walked Along the downs of Clifton. Fifty years Have roll'd behind us since that summertide,

Nor thirty fewer since along the lake Of Lario, to Bellaggio villa-crown'd,

Thro' the crisp waves I urged my side ling bark,

Amid sweet salutations off the shore From lordly Milan's proudly courteous dames."

"Landor! I well remember it," said he. "I had just lost my first-born only boy, And then the heart is tender; lightest things Sink into it, and dwell there evermore." The words were not yet spoken when the air

Blew balmier; and around the parent's neck

An Angel threw his arms: it was that son.

"Father! I felt you wished me," said the boy.

"Behold me here !"

Gentle the sire's embrace. "See here your father's Gentle his tone. friend!"

He gazed into my face, then meekly ward

"He whom my father loves hath his re-On earth; a richer one awaits him here. 1853.

ON SOUTHEY'S DEATH

FRIENDS! hear the words my wandering thoughts would say,

And cast them into shape some other day.

Southey, my friend of forty years, is gone.

And, shattered by the fall, I stand alone. 1858.

HEART'S-EASE

There is a flower I wish to wear,
But not until first worn by you . .
Heart's-ease . . of all earth's flowers
most rare;

Bring it; and bring enough for two.

THE THREE ROSES 1

WHEN the buds began to burst, Long ago, with Rose the First, I was walking; joyous then Far above all other men. Till before us up there stood Britonferry's oaken wood, Whispering, "Happy as thou art. Happiness and thou must part." Many summers have gone by Since a Second Rose and I (Rose from that same stem) have told This and other tales of old. She upon her wedding-day Carried home my tenderest lay: From her lap I now have heard Gleeful, chirping, Rose the Third, Not for her this hand of mine Rhyme with nuptial wreath shall twine: Cold and torpid it must lie, Mute the tongue and closed the eye. 1858.

LATELY OUR SONGSTERS LOI-TERED IN GREEN LANES

LATELY our songsters loiter'd in green lanes,

Content to catch the ballads of the plains:

I fancied I had strength enough to

A loftier station at no distant time, And might securely from intrusion doze Upon the flowers thro' which Ilissus flows.

¹ See pages 428 and 441. "Rose the Third" was the daughter of "the Second Rose," and thus the grand-niece of Rose Aylmer. In those pale olive grounds all voices cease,

And from afar dust fills the paths of Greece.

My slumber broken and my doublet torn,

I find the laurel also bears a thorn.

1863.

THESEUS AND HIPPOLYTA 1

Hippolyta. Eternal hatred I have sworn against

The persecutor of my sisterhood; In vain, proud son of Ægeus, hast thou snapped

Their arrows and derided them; in vain
Leadest thou me a captive; I can die,

And die I will.

Theseus. Nay; many are the years

Of youth and beauty for Hippolyta.

Hippolyta. I scorn my youth, I hate my beauty. Go!

Monster! of all the monsters in these wilds

Most frightful and most odious to my sight.

Theseus. I boast not that I saved thee from the bow

Of Sevthian.

Hippolyta. And for what? To die disgraced.

Strong as thou art, yet thou art not so strong
As Death is, when we call him for support.

Theseus. Him too will I ward off; he

Theseus. Him too will I ward off; he strikes me first,

Hippolyta, long after, when these eyes Are closed, and when the knee that supplicates

Can bend no more.

Hippolyta. Is the man mad? Theseus. He is.

Hippolyta. So, thou canst tell one truth, however false

In other things.

Theseus. What other? Thou dost pause,

And thine eyes wander over the smooth turf

As if some gem (but gem thou wearest not)

Had fallen from the remnant of thy hair.

¹ Written by Landor immediately before its publication, at the age of eighty-eight. Perhaps the only other example in literature of such vigor and creative power, at such an age, is that of Sophocles.

Hippolyta! speak plainly, answer me, What have I done to raise thy fear or hate?

Hippolyta. Fear I despise, perfidy I abhor.

Unworthy man! did Heracles delude The maids who trusted him?

Theseus. Did ever I?

Whether he did or not, they never told

I would have chided him.

Thou chide him! thou! Hippoluta. The Spartan mothers well remember thee.

Theseus. Scorn adds no beauty to the beautiful.

Heracles was beloved by Omphale, He never parted from her, but obey'd Her slightest wish, as Theseus will Hippolyta's.

Hippolyta. Then leave me, leave me instantly; I know

The way to my own country. This command, And only this, my heart must disobey.

My country shall be thine, and there thy state

Regal.

Hippolyta. Am I a child? Give me my own.

And keep for weaker heads thy diadems.

Thermodon I shall never see again, Brightest of rivers, into whose clear depth My mother plunged me from her warmer breast,

And taught me early to divide the waves With arms each day more strong, and soon to chase

And overtake the father swan, nor heed His hoarser voice or his uplifted wing. Where are my sisters? are there any left?

Theseus. I hope it. Hippolyta. And I fear it: theirs may

A fate like mine; which, O ye Gods, forbid!

Theseus. I pity thee, and would assuage thy grief.

Hippolyta. Pity me not: thy anger I could bear.

Theseus. There is no place for anger where thou art.

Commiseration even men may feel For those who want it: even the fiercer beasts

Lick the sore-wounded of a kindred race.

Hearing their cry, albeit they may not

Hippolyta. This is no falsehood: and can he be false

Who speaks it?

I remember not the time When I have wept, it was so long ago. Thou forcest tears from me, because . .

because . . I cannot hate thee as I ought to do.

1863.

AN AGED MAN WHO LOVED TO DOZE AWAY

An aged man who loved to doze away An hour by daylight, for his eyes were dim,

And he had seen too many suns go down And rise again, dreamed that he saw two forms

Of radiant beauty; he would clasp them

But both flew stealthily away. He cried

In his wild dream, "I never thought, O youth, That thou, altho' so cherished, would'st return. But I did think that he who came with thee, Love, who could swear more sweetly than birds sing.

Would never leave me comfortless and lone.'

A sigh broke through his slumber, not the last. 1863.

WELL I REMEMBER HOW YOU SMILED

Well I remember how you smiled To see me write your name upon The soft sea-sand. "O! what a child!

You think you're writing upon stone!" I have since written what no tide Shall ever wash away, what men

Unborn shall read o'er ocean wide And find Ianthe's name again.

1863.

TO MY NINTH DECADE

To my ninth decade I have totter'd on, And no soft arm bends now my steps to steady;

She, who once led me where she would, is gone,

So when he calls me, Death shall find 1863. me ready.

TENNYSON

CLARIBEL

A MELODY

WHERE Claribel low-lieth The breezes pause and die, Letting the rose-leaves fall: But the solemn oak-tree sigheth, Thick-leaved, ambrosial, With an ancient melody Of an inward agony, Where Claribel low-lieth.

At eve the beetle boometh Athwart the thicket lone: At noon the wild bee hummeth About the moss'd headstone: At midnight the moon cometh, And looketh down alone. Her song the lintwhite swelleth. The clear-voiced mavis dwelleth, The callow throstle lispeth, The slumbrous wave outwelleth, The babbling runnel crispeth, The hollow grot replieth
Where Claribel low-lieth. 1830.

THE POET

THE poet in a golden clime was born, With golden stars above: Dower'd with the hate of hate, the scorn of scorn. The love of love.

He saw thro' life and death, thro' good and ill. He saw thro' his own soul.

The marvel of the everlasting will, An open scroll,

Before him lay; with echoing feet he threaded

The secretest walks of fame: The viewless arrows of his thoughts were headed

And wing'd with flame,

Like Indian reeds blown from his silver tongue.

And of so fierce a flight,

From Calpe unto Caucasus they sung. Filling with light

And vagrant melodies the winds which bore

Them earthward till they lit; Then, like the arrow-seeds of the field flower,

The fruitful wit

Cleaving took root, and springing forth

Where'er they fell, behold.

Like to the mother plant in semblance, grew A flower all gold,

And bravely furnish'd all abroad to fling The winged shafts of truth,

To throng with stately blooms the breathing spring Of Hope and Youth.

So many minds did gird their orbs with beams.

Tho' one did fling the fire;

Heaven flow'd upon the soul in many dreams Of high desire.

Thus truth was multiplied on truth, the world

Like one great garden show'd, And thro' the wreaths of floating dark upcurl'd.

Rare sunrise flow'd.

And Freedom rear'd in that august sun-

Her beautiful bold brow,

When rites and forms before his burning eyes

Melted like snow.

There was no blood upon her maiden robes

Sunn'd by those orient skies; But round about the circles of the globes Of her keen eyes

And in her raiment's hem was traced in flame

WISDOM, a name to shake
All evil dreams of power—a sacred name.

And when she spake,

Her words did gather thunder as they ran,

And as the lightning to the thunder Which follows it, riving the spirit of man,

Making earth wonder,

So was their meaning to her words. No sword

Of wrath her right arm whirl'd, But one poor poet's scroll, and with his word

She shook the world. 1830.

THE LADY OF SHALOTT 1

PART I

On either side the river lie
Long fields of barley and of rye,
That clothe the wold and meet the sky;
And thro' the field the road runs by
To many-tower'd Camelot;

And up and down the people go, Gazing where the lilies blow Round an island there below, The island of Shalott.

Willows whiten, aspens quiver, Little breezes dusk and shiver Thro' the wave that runs for ever By the island in the river

Flowing down to Camelot.
Four gray walls, and four gray towers,
Overlook a space of flowers.
And the silent isle imbowers
The Lady of Shalott.

By the margin, willow-veil'd, Slide the heavy barges trail'd By slow horses; and unhail'd The shallop flitteth silken-sail'd Skimming down to Camelot.

Skimming down to Camelot; But who hath seen her wave her hand?

1 See the Life of Tennyson, by his Son, I, 116-

Or at the casement seen her stand? Or is she known in all the land, The Lady of Shalott?

Only reapers, reaping early In among the bearded barley, Hear a song that echoes cheerly From the river winding clearly,

Down to tower'd Camelot; And by the moon the reaper weary, Piling sheaves in uplands airy, Listening, whispers "T is the fairy Lady of Shalott."

PART II

There she weaves by night and day A magic web with colors gay. She has heard a whisper say, A curse is on her if she stay

To look down to Camelot.
She knows not what the curse may be.
And so she weaveth steadily,
And little other care hath she,
The Lady of Shalott.

And moving thro' a mirror clear That hangs before her all the year, Shadows of the world appear. There she sees the highway near

Winding down to Camelot;
There the river eddy whirls,
And there the surly village-churls,
And the red cloaks of market girls,
Pass onward from Shalott.

Sometimes a troop of damsels glad, An abbot on an ambling pad, Sometimes a curly shepherd-lad, Or long-hair'd page in crimson clad,

Goes by to tower'd Camelot; And sometimes thro' the mirror blue The knights come riding two and two: She hath no loyal knight and true, The Lady of Shalott.

But in her web she still delights To weave the mirror's magic sights, For often thro' the silent nights A funeral, with plumes and lights

And music, went to Camelot; Or when the moon was overhead, Came two young lovers lately wed: "I am half sick of shadows," said The Lady of Shalott.

PART III

A bow-shot from her bower-eaves, He rode between the barley-sheaves, The sun came dazzling thre' the leaves, And flamed upon the brazen greaves

Of bold Sir Lancelot. A red-cross knight for ever kneel'd To a lady in his shield, That sparkled on the yellow field, Beside remote Shalott.

The gemmy bridle glitter'd free, Like to some branch of stars we see Hung in the golden Galaxy. The bridle bells rang merrily

As he rode down to Camelot; And from his blazon'd baldric slung A mighty silver bugle hung, And as he rode his armor rung, Beside remote Shalott.

All in the blue unclouded weather Thick-jewell'd shone the saddle-leather, The helmet and the helmet-feather Burn'd like one burning flame together,

As he rode down to Camelot; As often thro' the purple night, Below the starry clusters bright, Some bearded meteor, trailing light, Moves over still Shalott.

His broad clear brow in sunlight glow'd; On burnish'd hooves his war-horse trode; From underneath his helmet flow'd His coal-black curls as on he rode,

As he rode down to Camelot. From the bank and from the river He flash'd into the crystal mirror, "Tirra lirra," by the river Sang Sir Lancelot.

She left the web, she left the loom, She made three paces thro' the room, She saw the water-lily bloom, She saw the helmet and the plume,

She look'd down to Camelot. Out flew the web and floated wide; The mirror crack'd from side to side: "The curse is come upon me," cried

The Lady of Shalott.

PART IV

In the stormy east-wind straining, The pale yellow woods were waning, The broad stream in his banks complaining,

Heavily the low sky raining Over tower'd Camelot: Down she came and found a boat Beneath a willow left affoat, And round about the prow she wrote The Lady of Shalott.

And down the river's dim expanse Like some bold seër in a trance, Seeing all his own mischance— With a glassy countenance

Did she look to Camelot. And at the closing of the day She loosed the chain, and down she lay: The broad stream bore her far away, The Lady of Shalott.

Lying, robed in snowy white That loosely flew to left and right-The leaves upon her falling light-Thro' the noises of the night

She floated down to Camelot; And as the boat-head wound along The willowy hills and fields among, They heard her singing her last song, The Lady of Shalott.

Heard a carol, mournful, holy, Chanted loudly, chanted lowly, Till her blood was frozen slowly And her eyes were darken'd wholly Turn'd to tower'd Camelot. For ere she reach'd upon the tide The first house by the water-side, Singing in her song she died, The Lady of Shalott.

Under tower and balcony, By garden-wall and gallery, A gleaming shape she floated by, Dead-pale between the houses high.

Silent into Camelot. Out upon the wharfs they came, Knight and burgher, lord and dame, And round the prow they read her name, The Lady of Shalott.

Who is this? and what is here? And in the lighted palace near Died the sound of royal cheer. And they cross'd themselves for fear.

All the knights at Camelot: But Lancelot mused a little space; He said, "She has a lovely face; God in his mercy lend her grace, The Lady of Shalott." 183

1832, 1842.

SONG: THE MILLER'S DAUGHTER

It is the miller's daughter, And she is grown so dear, so dear, That I would be the jewel That trembles in her ear; For hid in ringlets day and night, I'd touch her neck so warm and white. And I would be the girdle

About her dainty dainty waist. And her heart would beat against me, In sorrow and in rest;

And I should know if it beat right, I'd clasp it round so close and tight.

And I would be the necklace, And all day long to fall and rise pon her balmy bosom.

With her laughter or her sighs; And I would lie so light, so light, I scarce should be unclasp'd at night. 1832.

CENONE

THERE lies a vale in Ida, lovelier Than all the valleys of Ionian hills. The swimming vapor slopes athwart the

Puts forth an arm, and creeps from pine to pine,

And loiters, slowly drawn. On either

The lawns and meadow-ledges midway down

Hang rich in flowers, and far below them roars

The long brook falling thro' the cloven ravine

In cataract after cataract to the sea. Behind the valley topmost Gargarus Stands up and takes the morning; but in front

The gorges, opening wide apart, reveal Troas and Ilion's column'd citadel, The crown of Troas.

Hither came at noon Mournful Œnone, wandering forlorn Of Paris, once her playmate on the hills. Her cheek had lost the rose, and round her neck Floated her hair or seem'd to float in rest.

She, leaning on a fragment twined with vine,

Sang to the stillness till the mountain-

Aloft the mountain-lawn was dewydark.

And dewy-dark aloft the mountain-pine. Beautiful Paris, evil-hearted Paris, Leading a jet-black goat white-horn'd, white-hooved, Came up from reedy Simois all alone.

"O mother Ida, harken ere I die. Far off the torrent call'd me from the cleft:

Far up the solitary morning smote The streaks of virgin snow. With downdropt eyes

I sat alone; white-breasted like a star Fronting the dawn he moved; a leopard

Disclosed a fruit of pure Hesperian gold. That smelt ambrosially, and while I look'd

And listen'd, the full-flowing river of speech

Came down upon my heart:

Upon her pearly shoulder leaning cold, The while, above, her full and earnest

Over her snow-cold breast and angry cheek

'Self-reverence, self-knowledge, self-control,

And Paris ponder'd, and I cried, 'O Paris,

Give it to Pallas!' but he heard me not, Or hearing would not hear me, woe is me!

"O mother Ida, many-fountain'd Ida, Dear mother Ida, harken ere I die. Idalian Aphrodite beautiful,

Fresh as the foam, new-bathed in Paphian wells,

With rosy slender fingers backward drew

From her warm brows and bosom her deep hair

Ambrosial, golden round her lucid throat And shoulder; from the violets her light foot

Shone rosy-white, and o'er her rounded form

Between the shadows of the vine-bunches Floated the glowing sunlights, as she moved.

"Dear mother Ida, harken ere I die. Sho with a subtle smile in her mild eyes, The herald of her triumph, drawing nigh Half-whisper'd in his ear, 'I promise thee

The fairest and most loving wife in Greece.'

She spoke and laugh'd; I shut my sight for fear;

But when I look'd, Paris had raised his arm,

And I beheld great Here's angry eyes, As she withdrew into the golden cloud, And I was left alone within the bower; And from that time to this I am alone, And I shall be alone until I die.

"Yet, mother Ida, harken ere I die. Fairest—why fairest wife? am I not fair?

My love hath told me so a thousand times.

Methinks I must be fair, for yesterday, When I past by, a wild and wanton pard. Eyed like the evening star, with playful tail Crouch'd fawning in the weed. Most loving is she?

Ah me, my mountain shepherd, that my arms

Were wound about thee, and my hot lips pressed

Close, close to thine in that quick-falling dew

Of fruitful kisses, thick as autumn rains Flash in the pools of whirling Simois!

"O mother, hear me yet before I die.
They came, they cut away my tallest pines,

My tall dark pines, that plumed the craggy ledge

High over the blue gorge, and all between

The snowy peak and snow-white cataract Foster'd the callow eaglet—from beneath Whose thick mysterious boughs in the dark morn The panther's roar came muffled, while I sat

Low in the valley. Never, never more Shall lone Œnone see the morning mist Sweep thro'them; never see them overlaid

With narrow moonlit slips of silver cloud,

Between the loud stream and the trembling stars.

"O mother, hear me yet before I die.
I wish that somewhere in the ruin'd folds,

Among the fragments tumbled from the

Or the dry thickets, I could meet with

The Abominable, that uninvited came Into the fair Peleïan banquet-hall,

And cast the golden fruit upon the board, And bred this change; that I might speak my mind.

And tell her to her face how much I hate

Her presence, hated both of Gods and men.

"O mother, hear me yet before I die. Hath he not sworn his love a thousand times,

In this green valley, under this green hill,

Even on this hand, and sitting on this stone?

Seal'd it with kisses? water'd it with tears?

O happy tears, and how unlike to these!
O happy heaven, how canst thou see my face?

O happy earth, how canst thou bear my weight? [cloud,

O death, death, death, thou ever-floating There are enough unhappy on this earth, Pass by the happy souls, that love to live:

I pray thee, pass before my light of life, And shadow all my soul, that I may die. Thou weighest heavy on the heart within

Weigh heavy on my eyelids; let me die.

whereof I catch the issue, as I hear Dead sounds at night come from the inmost hills,

Like footsteps upon wool. I dimly see My far-off doubtful purpose, as a mother Conjectures of the features of her child Ere it is born. Her child !—a shudder comes Across me: never child be born of me, Unblest, to vex me with his father's eyes!

"O, mother, hear me yet before I die. Hear me, O earth. I will not die alone, Lest their shrill happy laughter come to me

Walking the cold and starless road of death

Uncomforted, leaving my ancient love With the Greek woman. I will rise and Down into Troy, and ere the stars come forth

Talk with the wild Cassandra, for she says

A fire dances before her, and a sound Rings ever in her ears of armed men. What this may be I know not, but I know

That wheresoe'er I am by night and day, All earth and air seem only burning fire." 1832, 1842.

THE SISTERS

WE were two daughters of one race; She was the fairest in the face. The wind is blowing in turret and tree.

They were together, and she fell;

Therefore revenge became me well.

O, the earl was fair to see!

She died; she went to burning flame; She mix'd her ancient blood with shame.

The wind is howling in turret and tree.
Whole weeks and months, and early and late.

To win his love I lay in wait!

O, the earl was fair to see!

I made a feast; I bade him come;
I won his love, I brought him home.
The wind is roaring in turret and tree.
And after supper, on a bed,
Upon my lap he laid his head.
O, the earl was fair to see!

I kiss'd his cyclids into rest.
His ruddy cheek upon my breast.
The wind is raging in turnet and tree.
I hated him with the hate of hell,
But I loved his beauty passing well.
O, the earl was fair to see!

I rose up in the silent night;

I mane my digger sharp and bright.

The will Is raying in turnet and tree.
As helf-ash ep his breath he drew,
Three times I stabb'd him thro' and thro'.

O, the earl was fair to see!

Lourl'd and comb'd his comely head, He look'd so grand when he was dead.

The wind is blowing in turret and tree. I wrapped his body in the sheet.

And laid him at his mother's feet.

O, the earl was fan to see! 1832.

THE PALACE OF ART 1

I BUILT my soul a lordly pleasure-house, Wherein at ease for aye to dwell. I said, "O Soul, make merry and ca-

Dear soul, for all is well."

A huge crag-platform, smooth as burnish'd brass,

I chose. The ranged ramparts bright From level meadow-bases of deep grass Suddenly scaled the light

Thereon I built it firm. Of ledge or shelf
The rock rose clear, or winding stair.
My soul would live alone unto herself
In her high palace there.

And "while the world runs round and round," I said,

"Reign thou apart, a quiet king,

Still as, while Saturn whirls, his steadfast shade

Sleeps on his luminous ring."

To which my soul made answer readily:
"Trust me, in bliss I shall abide
In this great mansion, that is built for

So royal-rich and wide."

Four courts I made, East, West and South

In each a squared lawn, wherefrom The golden gorge of dragons spouted forth

A flood of fountain-foam.

And round the cool green courts there

Cf cloisters, branch'd like mighty words,

18 . O. Lab of Tennyson I 118-121

Echoing all night to that sonorous flow Of spouted fountain-floods:

And round the roofs a gilded gallery
That lent broad verge to distant lands,
Far as the wild swan wings, to where
the sky

Dipped down to sea and sands.

From those four jets four currents in one swell

Across the mountain stream'd below In misty folds, that floating as they fell Lit up a torrent-bow.

And high on every peak a statue seem'd
To hang on tiptoe, tossing up
A cloud of incense of all odor steam'd
From out a golden cup.

So that she thought," And who shall gaze

My palace with unblinded eyes,
While this great bow will waver in the

And that sweet incense rise?"

For that sweet incense rose and never fail'd,

And, while day sank or mounted higher,

The light aerial gallery, golden-rail'd, Burnt like a fringe of fire.

Likewise the deep-set windows, stain'd and traced,

Would seem slow-flaming crimson fires
From shadow'd grots of arches inter-

And tipped with frost-like spires.

Full of leng-sounding corridors it was,
That over-vaulted grateful gloom,
Thur's which the liveleng day my souldi

Thro' which the livelong day my soul did

Well-pleased, from room to room.

Full of great rooms and small the palace stood,

All various, each a perfect whole From living Nature, fit for every mood And change of my still soul.

For some were hung with arras green and blue.

Showing a gaudy summer-morn,
Where with puff'd cheek the belted hunter blew

His wreathed bugle-horn.

One seem d all dark and red—a tract of sand,

And some one pacing there alone, Who paced for ever in a glimmering

Lit with a low large moon.

One show'd an iron coast and angry waves.

You seem'd to hear them climb and fall

And roar rock-thwarted under bellowing caves.

Beneath the windy wall.

And one, a full-fed river winding slow By herds upon an endless plain,

The ragged rims of thunder brooding low.

With shadow-streaks of rain.

And one, the reapers at their sultry toil.

In front they bound the sheaves. Behind

Were realms of upland, prodigal in oil, And hoary to the wind.

And one a foreground black with stones and slags;

Beyond, a line of heights; and higher All barr'd with long white cloud the scornful crags;

And highest, snow and fire.

And one, an English home—gray twilight pour'd

On dewy pastures, dewy trees, Softer than sleep—all things in order stored,

A haunt of ancient Peace.

Nor these alone, but every landscape fair,

As fit for every mood of mind.

Or gay, or grave, or sweet, or stern, was there

Notless than truth design'd.

Or the maid-mother by a crucifix, In tracts of pasture sunny-warm, Beneath branch-work of costly sardonyx

Beneath branch-work of costly sardonyx Sat smiling, babe in arm.

Or in a clear-wall'd city on the sea.

Near gilded organ-pipes, her hair Wound with white roses, slept Saint Cecily;

An angel look'd at her.

Or thronging all one porch of Paradise
A group of Houris bow'd to see

The dying Islamite, with hands and eves

That said, We wait for thee.

Or mythic Uther's deeply-wounded son In some fair space of sloping greens Lay, dozing in the vale of Avalon, And watch'd by weeping queens,

Or hollowing one hand against his ear,
To list a foot-fall, ere he saw

The wood-nymph, stay'd the Ausonian king to hear

Of wisdom and of law.

Or over hills with peaky tops engrail'd,
And many a tract of palm and rice,
The throne of Indian Cama slowly sail'd

A summer fann'd with spice.

Or sweet Europa's mantle blew unclasp'd,

From off her shoulder backward borne; From one hand droop'd a crocus; one hand grasp'd

The mild bull's golden horn.

Or else flush'd Ganymede, his rosy thigh Half-buried in the eagle's down,

Sole as a flying star shot thro' the sky Above the pillar'd town.

Nor these alone: but every legend fair Which the supreme Caucasian mind Carved out of Nature for itself, was there, Nor less than life designed.

Then in the towers I placed great bells that swung.

Moved of themselves, with silver sounds:

And with choice paintings of wise men I hung

The royal dais round.

For there was Milton like a serapli strong,

Beside him Shakespeare bland and mild:

And there the world-worn Dante graspia his song.

And somewhat grimly smiled.

And there the Ionian father of the rest;
A million wrinkles carved his skin;

A hundred winters snow'd upon luc breast,

From cheek and throat and chin

Above, the fair hall-ceiling stately-set Many an arch high up did lift, And angels rising and descending met

With interchange of gift.

Below was all mosaic choicely plann'd With cycles of the human tale Of this wide world, the times of every

land

So wrought they will not fail.

The people here, a beast of burden slow, Toil'd onward, prick'd with goads and stings;

Here play'd, a tiger, rolling to and fro The heads and crowns of kings;

Here rose, an athlete, strong to break or bind

All force in bonds that might endure, And here once more like some sick man declined,

And trusted any cure.

But over these she trod; and those great bells

Began to chime. She took her throne; She sat betwixt the shining oriels,
To sing her songs alone.

And thro' the topmost oriels' colored flame

Two godlike faces gazed below; Plato the wise, and large-brow'd Verulam.

The first of those who know.

And all those names that in their motion were

Full-welling fountain-heads of change, Betwixt the slender shafts were blazon'd fair

In diverse raiment strange;

Thro' which the lights, rose, amber, emerald, blue,

Flush'd in her temples and her eyes,
And from her lips, as morn from Memnon, drew

Rivers of melodies.

No nightingale delighteth to prolong Her low preamble all alone,

More than my soul to hear her echo'd song

Throb thro' the ribbed stone;

Singing and murmuring in her feastful mirth,

Joying to feel herself alive,

Lord over Nature, lord of the visible earth.

Lord of the senses five;

Communing with herself: "All these are mine,

And let the world have peace or wars,
'Tis one to me." She—when young night divine

Crown'd dying day with stars,

Making sweet close of his delicious toils— Lit light in wreaths and anadems,

And pure quintessences of precious oils In hollow'd moons of gems,

To mimic heaven; and clapped her hands and cried,

"I marvel if my still delight

In this great house so royal-rich and wide Be flatter'd to the height.

"O all things fair to sate my various eyes!

O shapes and hues that please me well!
O silent faces of the Great and Wise,
My Gods, with whom I dwell!

"O Godlike isolation which art mine,
I can but count thee perfect gain,
What time I watch the darkening droves of swine

That range on yonder plain.

"In filthy sloughs they roll a prurient skin,

They graze and wallow, breed and sleep;

And oft some brainless devil enters in, And drives them to the deep."

Then of the moral instinct would she prate

And of the rising from the dead,
As hers by right of full-accomplish'd
Fate:

And at the last she said:

"I take possession of man's mind and deed.

I care not what the sects may brawl.
I sit as God holding no form of creed,
But contemplating all."

Full oft the riddle of the painful earth Flash'd thro' her as she sat alone,

Yet not the less held she her solemn mirth,

And intellectual throne.

And so she throve and prosper'd; so three years

She prosper'd; on the fourth she fell, Like Herod, when the shout was in his ears,

Struck thro' with pangs of hell.

Lest she should fail and perish utterly, God, before whom ever lie bare

The abysmal deeps of personality, Plagued her with sore despair.

When she would think, where er she turn'd her sight

The airy hand confusion wrought, Wrote, "Mene, mene," and divided quite The kingdom of her thought.

Deep dread and loathing of her solitude Fell on her, from which mood was born

Scorn of herself; again, from out that mood

Laughter at her self-scorn.

"What! is not this my place of strength," she said,

"My spacious mansion built for me, Whereof the strong foundation-stones were laid Since my first memory?"

But in dark corners of her palace stood Uncertain shapes; and unawares

On white-eyed phantasms weeping tears of blood,

And horrible nightmares,

And hollow shades enclosing hearts of flame.

And, with dim fretted foreheads all, On corpses three-months-old at noon she came,

That stood against the wall.

A spot of dull stagnation, without light Or power of movement, seem'd my soul,

Mid onward-sloping motions infinite Making for one sure goal;

A still salt pool, lock'd in with bars of sand,

Left on the shore, that hears all night The plunging seas draw backward from the land

Their moon led waters white;

A star that with the choral starry dance Join'd not, but stood, and standing saw The hollow orb of moving Circumstance Roll'd round by one fix'd law.

Back on herself her serpent pride had curl'd.

"No voice," she shriek'd in that lone hall,

"No voice breaks thro' the stillness of this world; One deep, deep silence all!"

She, mouldering with the dull earth's mouldering sod,

Inwrapt tenfold in slothful shame, Lay there exiled from eternal God, Lost to her place and name;

And death and life she hated equally, And nothing saw, for her despair, But dreadful time, dreadful eternity, No comfort anywhere;

Remaining utterly confused with fears, And ever worse with growing time,

And ever unrelieved by dismal tears, And all alone in crime.

Shut up as in a crumbling tomb, girt

With blackness as a solid wall,

Far off she seem'd to hear the dully sound

Of human footsteps fall;

As in strange lands a traveller walking slow,

In doubt and great perplexity, A little before moonrise hears the low Moan of an unknown sea;

And knows not if it be thunder, or a sound

Of rocks thrown down, or one deep

Of great wild beasts; then thinketh, "I have found
A new land, but I die."

She howl'd aloud, "I am on fire within.
There comes no murmur of reply.

What is it that will take away my sin, And save me lest I die?"

So when four years where wholly finished,

She threw her royal robes away. "Make me a cottage in the vale," she

"Where I may mourn and pray.

"Yet pull not down my palace towers, that are

So lightly, beautifully built;

Perchance I may return with others

When I have purged my guilt."

THE LOTOS EATERS

Courage!" he said, and pointed toward the land.

* This mounting wave will roll us shoreward soon."

In the afternoon they came unto a land In which it seemed always afternoon. All round the coast the languid air did swoon.

Breathing like one that hath a weary

dream.

Full-faced above the valley stood the moon:

And, like a downward smoke, the slender stream

Along the cliff to fall and pause and fall did seem.

A land of streams! some, like a downward smoke.

Slow-dropping veils of thinnest lawn, did go;

And some thro' wavering lights and shadows broke.

Rolling a slumbrous sheet of foam below. They saw the gleaming river seaward flow

From the inner land; far off, three mountain-tops.

Three silent pinnacles of aged snow,

Stood sunset-flush'd; and, dew'd with showery drops.

Up-clomb the shadowy pine above the woven copse.

The charmed sunset linger'd low adown In the red West; thro' mountain clefts

Was seen far inland, and the yellow down Border'd with palm, and many a winding

And meadow, set with slender galin-

A land where all things always seem'd the same!

And round about the keel with faces

Dark faces pale against that rosy flame, The mild-eyed melancholy Lotos-eaters came.

Branches they bore of that enchanted

Laden with flower and fruit, whereof they gave

To each, but whoso did receive of them And taste, to him the gushing of the wave

Far far away did seem to mourn and rave

On alien shores; and if his fellow spake. His voice was thin, as voices from the

And deep-asleep he seem'd, yet all awake, And music in his ears his beating heart did make.

They sat them frwn upon the yellow sand,

Between the sun and moon upon the shore;

And sweet it was to dream of Fatherland,

Of child, and wife and slave: but ever-

Most weary seem'd the sea, weary the oar.

Weary the wandering fields of barren foam.

Then some one said, "We will return no

And all at once they sang, "Our island

Is far beyond the wave; we will no longer roam."

CHORIC SONG

THERE is sweet music here that softer falls

Than petals from blown roses on the grass.

Or night-dews on still waters between walls

Of shadowy granite, in a gleaming pass; Music that gentlier on the spirit lies, Than tired evelids upon tired eves:

Music that brings sweet sleep down from the blissful skies.

Here are cool mosses deep.

And thro' the moss the ivies creep,

And in the stream the long-leaved flowers weep,

And from the craggy ledge the poppy hangs in sleep.

Why are we weigh'd upon with heaviness,

And utterly consumed with sharp distress,

While all things else have rest from weariness?

All things have rest: why should we toil alone,

We only toil, who are the first of things, And make perpetual moan,

Still from one sorrow to another thrown;

Nor ever fold our wings, And cease from wanderings,

Nor steep our brows in slumber's holy balm;

Nor harken what the inner spirit sings, "There is no joy but calm!"—

Why should we only toil, the roof and crown of things?

Ш

Lo! in the middle of the wood,
The folded leaf is woo'd from out the bud

With winds upon the branch, and there Grows green and broad, and takes no care,

Sun-steep'd at noon, and in the moon Nightly dew-fed; and turning yellow Falls, and floats adown the air.

Lo! sweeten'd with the summer light,
The full-juiced apple, waxing overmellow.

Drops in a silent autumn night.
All its allotted length of days
The flower ripens in its place,
Ripens and fades, and falls, and hath no

toil,
Fast-rooted in the fruitful soil.

IV

Hateful is the dark-blue sky, Vaulted o'er the dark-blue sea. Death is the end of life; ah, why Should life all labor be?

Let us alone. Time driveth onward fast,

And in a little while our lips are dumb. Let us alone. What is it that will last?

All things are taken from us, and be-

Portions and parcels of the dreadful past.

Let us alone. What pleasure can we have

To war with evil? Is there any peace.
In ever climbing up the climbing wave?
All things have rest, and ripen toward the grave

In silence—ripen, fall, and cease:
Give us long rest or death, dark death,
or dreamful ease.

How sweet it were, hearing the downward stream,

With half-shut eyes ever to seem Falling asleep in a half-dream!

To dream and dream, like yonder amber light,

Which will not leave the myrrh-bush on the height;

To hear each other's whisper'd speech; Eating the Lotos day by day.

To watch the crisping ripples on the beach,

And tender curving lines of creamy spray;

To lend our hearts and spirits wholly
To the influence of mild-minded melancholy;

To muse and brood and live again in memory,

With those old faces of our infancy Heap'd over with a mound of grass, Two handfuls of white dust, shut in an urn of brass!

VΙ

Dear is the memory of our wedded lives, And dear the last embraces of our wives And their warm tears; but all bath suffer'd change;

For surely now our household hearths are cold,

Our sons inherit us, our looks are strange,

And we should come like ghosts to trouble joy.

Or else the island princes over-bold Have eat our substance, and the minstrel sings

Before them of the ten years' war in Troy,

And our great deeds, as half-forgotten things.

Is there confusion in the little isle?

Let what is broken so remain.
The Gods are hard to reconcile;
'T is hard to settle order once again.

There is confusion worse than death, Trouble on trouble, pain on pain,

Long labor unto aged breath, sore task to hearts worn out by many

And eyes grown dim with gazing on the pilot-stars,

TT

But, propped on beds of amaranth and

How sweet -while warm airs lull us, blowing lowly-

With half-dropped eyelid still,

Beneath a heaven dark and holv.

To watch the long bright river drawing slowly

His waters from the purple hill-To hear the dewy echoes calling

From cave to cave thro' the thick-twined

To watch the emerald-color'd water fall-

Thro' many a woven acanthus-wreath divine!

Only to hear and see the far-off sparkling

Only to hear were sweet, stretch'd out beneath the pine.

VIII

The Lotos blooms below the barren peak, The Lotos blows by every winding creek;

All day the wind breathes low with mellower tone;

Thro' every hollow cave and alley lone Round and round the spicy downs the vellow Lotos-dust is blown.

We have had enough of action, and of motion we,

Roll'd to starboard, roll'd to larboard, when the surge was seething free,

Where the wallowing monster spouted his foam-fountains in the sea.

Let us swear an oath, and keep it with an equal mind,

In the hollow Lotos-land to live and lie reclined

On the hills like Gods together, careless of mankind.

For they lie beside their nectar, and the bolts are hurl'd

Far below them in the valleys, and the clouds are lightly curl'd

Round their golden houses, girdled with the gleaming world;

Where they smile in secret, looking over wasted lands.

Blight and famine, plague and earthquake, roaring deeps and fiery

Clanging fights, and flaming towns, and sinking ships, and praying hands.

But they smile, they find a music centred in a doleful song

Steaming up, a lamentation and an an cient tale of wrong,

Like a tale of little meaning tho' the words are strong;

Chanted from an ill-used race of men that cleave the soil,

Sow the seed, and reap the harvest with enduring toil,

Storing yearly little dues of wheat, and wine and oil:

Till they perish and they suffer-some. t is whisper'd—down in hell

Suffer endless anguish, others in Elysian valleys dwell.

Resting weary limbs at last on beds of asphodel.

Surely, surely, slumber is more sweet than toil, the shore

Than labor in the deep mid-ocean, wind and wave and oar;

O, rest ve, brother mariners, we will not wander more. 1832, 1842.

A DREAM OF FAIR WOMEN

I READ, before my evelids dropped their shade.

"The Legend of Good Women," long

Sung by the morning star of song, who made

His music heard below;

Dan Chaucer, the first warbler, whose sweet breath

Preluded those melodious bursts that

The spacious times of great Elizabeth With sounds that echo still.

And, for a while, the knowledge of his art

Held me above the subject, as strong gales

Hold swollen clouds from raining, tho' my heart.

Brimful of those wild tales.

Charged both mine eyes with tears. every land

I saw, wherever light illumineth,

Beauty and anguish walking hand in hand

The downward slope to death.

Those far-renowned brides of ancient Song Peopled the hollow dark, like burning stars.

And I heard sounds of insult, shame, and wrong,

And trumpets blown for wars;

And clattering flints batter'd with clanging hoofs;

And I saw crowds in column'd sanctuaries.

And forms that pass'd at windows and on roofs

Of marble palaces;

Corpses across the threshold, heroes tall
Dislodging pinnacle and parapet

Upon the tortoise creeping to the wall, Lances in ambush set;

And high shrine-doors burst thro' with heated blasts

That run before the fluttering tongues of fire;

White surf wind-scatter'd over sails and masts,

And ever climbing higher;

Squadrons and squares of men in brazen plates,

Scaffolds, still sheets of water, divers woes,

Ranges of glimmering vaults with iron grates,

And hush'd seraglios.

So shape chased shape as swift as, when to land

Bluster the winds and tides the self-same way,

Crisp foam-flakes scud along the level sand,

Torn from the fringe of spray.

I started once, or seem'd to start in pain, Resolved on noble things, and strove to speak,

As when a great thought strikes along the brain

And flushes all the cheek.

And once my arm was lifted to hew down

A cavalier from off his saddle-bow,

That bore a lady from a leaguer'd town; And then, I know not how,

All those sharp fancies, by down-lapsing thought

Stream'd onward, lost their edges, and did creep

Roll'd on each other, rounded, smooth'd, and brought

Into the gulfs of sleep.

At last methought that I had wander'd far

In an old wood ; fresh-wash'd in coolest dew

The maiden splendors of the morning star
Shook in the steadfast blue.

Enormous elin-tree boles did stoop and lean

Upon the dusky brushwood underneath

Their broad curved branches, fledged with clearest green,
New from its silken sheath.

The dim red Morn had died, her journey done,

And with dead lips smiled at the twilight plain,

Half-fallen across the threshold of the sun,

Never to rise again.

There was no motion in the dumb dead air,

Not any song of bird or sound of rill; Gross darkness of the inner sepulchre Is not so deadly still

As that wide forest. Growths of jasmine turn'd

Their humid arms festooning tree to tree,

And at the root thro' lush green grasses burn'd
The red anemone.

I knew the flowers, I knew the leaves, I

The tearful glimmer of the languid

On those long, rank, dark wood-walks drench'd in dew.

Leading from lawn to lawn.

The smell of violets, hidden in the green, Pour'd back into my empty soul and frame

The times when I remember to have been Joyful and free from blame.

And from within me a clear undertone Thrill'd thro' mine ears in that unblissful clime, [own 'Pass freely thro'; the wood is all thine

Until the end of time."

At length I saw a lady within call,
Stiller than chisell'd marble, standing
there:

A daughter of the gods, divinely tall, And most divinely fair.

Her loveliness with shame and with surprise

Froze my swift speech; she turning on my face

The star-like sorrows of immortal eyes, Spoke slowly in her place:

"I had great beauty; ask thou not my name: [tiny.

No one can be more wise than des-Many drew swords and died. Where'er I came

I brought calamity."

"No marvel, sovereign lady: in fair field

Myself for such a face had boldly died."

I answer'd free; and turning I appeal'd To one that stood beside.

But she, with sick and scornful looks averse.

To her full height her stately stature draws:

"My youth," she said, "was blasted with a curse:

This woman was the cause.

"I was cut off from hope in that sad place

Which men call'd Aulis in those iron years:

My father held his hand upon his face; I, blinded with my tears,

"Still strove to speak: my voice was thick with sighs

As in a dream. Dimly I could descry The stern black-bearded kings with wolfish eyes,

Waiting to see me die.

"The high masts flicker'd as they lay afloat;

The crowds, the temples, waver'd, and the shore;

The bright death quiver'd at the victim's

Touch'd—and I knew no more."

Whereto the other with a downward brow:
"I would the white cold heavy-

"I would the white cold heavyplunging foam,

Whirled by the wind, had roll'd meden below.

Then when Heft my home,

Her slow full words sank thro' the silence drear,

As thunder-drops fall on a sleeping sea:

Sudden I heard a voice that cried "Come here,

That I may look on thee."

I turning saw, throned on a flowery rise, One sitting on a crimson scarf unroll'd;

A queen, with swarthy cheeks and bold black eyes, Brow-bound with burning gold.

She, flashing forth a haughty smile, began:

"I govern'd men by change, and so I

sway'd
All moods. 'Tis long since I have seen a man.

Once, like the moon, I made

"The ever-shifting currents of the blood According to my humor ebb and flow.

I have no men to govern in this wood:
That makes my only woe.

"Nay—yet it chafes me that I could not bend

One will; nor tame and tutor with mine eve

That dull cold-blooded Cæsar. Prythee, friend,
Where is Mark Antony?

"The man, my lover, with whom I rode sublime

On Fortune's neck; we sat as God by God:

The Nilus would have risen before his time

And flooded at our nod.

"We drank the Libyan Sun to sleep, and lit

Lamps which out-burn'd Canopus. O, my life

In Egypt! O, the dalliance and the wit, The flattery and the strife,

"And the wild kiss, when fresh from war's alarms,

My Hercules, my Roman Antony,

My mailed Bacchus leaped into my arms, Contented there to die!

"And there he died: and when I heard my name

Sigh'd forth with life, I would not brook my tear

Of the other: with a worm I balk'd his fame.

What else was left? look here!"-

With that she tore her robe apart, and

The polish'd argent of her breast to sight

Laid bare. Thereto she pointed with a

Showing the aspic's bite. -

"I died a Queen. The Roman soldier found

Me lying dead, my crown about my brows.

A name for ever!—lying robed and crown'd

Worthy a Roman spouse."

Her warbling voice, a lyre of widest

Struck by all passion, did fall down and glance

From tone to tone, and glided thro' all change

Of liveliest utterance.

When she made pause I knew not for delight:

Because with sudden motion from the ground

She raised her piercing orbs, and fill'd with light

The interval of sound.

Still with their fires Love tipt his keenest

As once they drew into two burning rings

All beams of Love, melting the mighty hearts

Of captains and of kings.

Slowly my sense undazzled. Then I heard A noise of some one coming thro' the

And singing clearer than the crested bird That claps his wings at dawn:

"The torrent brooks of hallow'd Israel From craggy hollows pouring, late and Sound all night long, in falling thro' the dell,

Far-heard beneath the moon.

"The balmy moon of blessed Israel Floods all the deep-blue gloom with beams divine:

All night the splinter'd crags that wall the dell With spires of silver shine."

As one that museth where broad sunshine laves

The lawn by some cathedral, thro' the Hearing the holy organ rolling waves Of sound on roof and floor

Within, and anthem sung, is charm'd and tied

To where he stands,—so stood I, when that flow

Of music left the lips of her that died To save her father's vow:

The daughter of the warrior Gileadite. A maiden pure; as when she went along

From Mizpah's tower'd gate with welcome light.

With timbrel and with song.

My words leaped forth: "Heaven heads the count of crimes

With that wild oath." She render'd answer high:

"Not so, nor once alone; a thousand I would be born and die.

"Single I grew, like some green plant, whose root

Creeps to the garden water-pipes beneath,

Feeding the flower; but ere my flower to Changed, I was ripe for death.

"My God, my land, my father-these did move

Me from my bliss of life that Nature

Lower'd softly with a threefold cord of Down to a silent grave.

"And I went mourning, 'No fair Hebrew boy

Shall smile away my maiden blame

The Hebrew mothers'-emptied of all joy,

Leaving the dance and song,

"Leaving the olive-gardens far below, Leaving the promise of my bridal bower.

The valleys of grape loaded vines that Beneath the battled tower.

"The light white cloud swam over us. Anon

We heard the lion roaring from his den:

We saw the large white stars rise one by one.

Or, from the darken'd glen,

' Saw God divide the night with flying

And thunder on the everlasting hills. heard Him, for He spake, and grief became

A solemn scorn of ills.

When the next moon was roll'd into the sky.

Strength came to me that equall'd my desire.

How beautiful a thing it was to die For God and for my sire!

"It comforts me in this one thought to dwell.

That I subdued me to my father's will; Because the kiss he gave me, ere I fell, Sweetens the spirit still.

"Moreover it is written that my race Hew'd Ammon, hip and thigh, from Aroer

On Arnon unto Minneth." Here her face Glow'd, as I look'd at her.

She lock'd her lips; she left me where I stood:

"Glory to God," she sang, and past afar, Thridding the sombre boskage of the wood, Toward the morning-star.

Losing her carol I stood pensively, As one that from a casement leans his head.

When midnight bells cease ringing suddenly,

And the old year is dead.

"Alas! alas!" a low voice, full of care, Murmur'd beside me: "Turn and look on me:

I am that Rosamond, whom men call fair.

If what I was I be.

"Would I had been some maiden coarse and poor!

O me, that I should ever see the light! Those dragon eyes of anger'd Eleanor Do hunt me, day and night."

She ceased in tears, fallen from hope and trust:

To whom the Egyptian: "O, you tamely died!

You should have clung to Fulvia's waist, and thrust

The dagger thro' her side."

With that sharp sound the white dawn's creeping beams, Stolen to my brain, dissolved the mys-

Of folded sleep. The captain of my Ruled in the eastern sky.

Morn broaden'd on the borders of the dark

Ere I saw her who clasp'd in her last trance

Her murder'd father's head, or Joan of

A light of ancient France;

Or her who knew that Love can vanquish

Who kneeling, with one arm about her king.

Drew forth the poison with her balmy breath.

Sweet as new buds in spring.

No memory labors longer from the deep Gold-mines of thought to lift the hidden ore

To gather and tell o'er

Each little sound and sight. With what dull pain

Compass'd, how eagerly I sought to strike

Into that wondrous track of dreams again!

But no two dreams are like.

As when a soul laments, which hath been blest.

Desiring what is mingled with past vears.

In yearnings that can never be expressed By signs or groans or tears;

Because all words, tho' cull'd with choicest art,

Failing to give the bitter of the sweet, Wither beneath the palate, and the heart 1832. Faints, faded by its heat.

SAINT AGNES' EVE

DEEP on the convent-roof the snows Are sparkling to the moon;

My breath to heaven like vapor goes; May my soul follow soon!

The shadows of the convent-towers Slant down the snowy sward,

Still creeping with the creeping hours
That lead me to my Lord.

Make Thou my spirit pure and clear As are the frosty skies,

Or this first snowdrop of the year That in my bosom lies.

As these white robes are soil'd and dark, To yonder shining ground; As this pale taper's earthly spark,

To yonder argent round; So shows my soul before the Lamb,

My spirit before Thee; So in mine earthly house I am, To that I hope to be.

Break up the heavens, O Lord! and far, Thro' all yon starlight keen.

Draw me, thy bride, a glittering star, In raiment white and clean.

He lifts me to the golden doors;
The flashes come and go;
All heaven bursts her starry floors,
And strows her lights below,
And deepens on and up! the gates

Roll back, and far within For me the Heavenly Bridegroom waits,

To make me pure of sin.
The Sabbaths of Eternity,
One Sabbath deep and wide—

A light upon the shining sea—

The Bridegroom with his bride!

YOU ASK ME, WHY, THO' ILL AT EASE

You ask me, why, tho' ill at ease, Within this region I subsist, Whose spirits falter in the mist, And languish for the purple seas.

it is the land that freemen till.

That sober-suited Freedom chose,

The land, where girt with friends or foes

Is man may speak the thing he will;

A land of settled government.
A land of just and old renown.
Where Freedom slowly broadens down
From precedent to precedent:

Where faction seldom gathers head, But, by degrees to fullness wrought, The strength of some diffusive thought Hath time and space to work and spread.

Should banded unions persecute
Opinions, and induce a time
When single thought is civil crime.
And individual freedom mute,

The power should make from land to land

The name of Britain trebly great— Tho' every channel of the State Should fill and choke with golden sand—

Yet waft me from the harbor-mouth,
Wild wind! I seek a warmer sky,
And I will see before I die
The palms and temples of the South.

OF OLD SAT FREEDOM ON THE HEIGHTS

Or old sat Freedom on the heights, The thunders breaking at her feet; Above her shook the starry lights; She heard the torrents meet.

There in her place she did rejoice, self-gather'd in her prophet-mind, But fragments of her mighty voice Came rolling on the wind.

Then stepped she down thro' town and field

To mingle with the human race,
And part by part to men reveal'd

Grave mother of majestic works, From her isle-altar gazing down, Who, Godlike, grasps the triple forks And, king-like, wears the crown.

The fulness of her face-

Her open eyes desire the truth. The wiscour of a thousand years is in them. May perpetual youth Keep dry their light from tears;

That her fair form may stand and

Make bright our days and light our dreams,

Turning to scorn with lips divine
The falsehood of extremes!

LOVE THOU THY LAND

Love thou thy land, with love farbrought

From out the storied past, and used Within the present, but transfused Thro' future time by power of thought;

Frue love turn'd round on fixed poles, Love, that endures not sordid ends, For English natures, freemen, friends, Thy brothers, and immortal souls.

But pamper not a hasty time,

Nor feed with crude imaginings

The herd, wild hearts and feeble

wings

That every sophister can lime.

Deliver not the tasks of might
To weakness, neither hide the ray
From those, not blind, who wait for
day,

The sitting girt with doubtful light.

Make knowledge circle with the winds;
But let her herald, Reverence, fly
Before her to whatever sky
Bear seed of men and growth of minds.

Watch what main-currents draw the years:
Cut Prejudice against the grain.

Cut Prejudice against the grain.
But gentle words are always gain;
Regard the weakness of thy peers.

Nor toil for title, place, or touch
Of pension, neither count on praise—
It grows to gaerdon after-days.
Nor deal in watch-words overmuch;

Not clinging to some ancient saw,
Not master'd by some modern term,
Not swift nor slow to change, but firm:

And in its season bring the law,

That from Discussion's lip may fall
With Life that, working strongly, binds—

Set in all lights by many minds, To close the interests of all.

For Nature also, cold and warm, And moist and dry, devising long, Thro' many agents making strong, Matures the individual form.

Meet is it changes should control Our being, lest we rust in ease. We all are changed by still degrees, All but the basis of the soul.

So let the change which comes be free
To ingroove itself with that which flies,

And work, a joint of state, that plies Its office, moved with sympathy.

A saying hard to shape in act;
For all the past of Time reveals
A bridal dawn of thunder-peals,
Wherever Thought hath wedded Fact.

Even now we hear with inward strife
A motion toiling in the gloom—
The Spirit of the years to come
Yearning to mix himself with Life.

A slow-develop'd strength awaits Completion in a painful school; Phantoms of other forms of rule, New Majesties of mighty States—

The warders of the growing hour,
But vague in vapor, hard to mark;
And round them sea and air are dark
With great contrivances of Power.

Of many changes, aptly join'd, Is bodied forth the second whole. Regard gradation, lest the soul Of Discord race the rising wind;

A wind to puff your idol-fires,
And heap their ashes on the head;
To shame the boast so often made,
That we are wiser than our sires.

O, yet, if Nature's evil star
Drive men in manhood, as in youth,
To follow flying steps of Truth
Across the brazen bridge of war—

If New and Old, disastrous feud,
Must ever shock, like armed foes,
And this be true, till Time shall close
That Principles are rain'd in blood;

Not yet the wise of heart would cease
To hold his hope thro' shame and guilt.
But with his hand against the hilt,
Would pace the troubled land, like
Peace;

Not less, the dogs of Faction bay,
Would serve his kind in deed and
word,

Certain, if knowledge bring the sword, That knowledge takes the sword awayWould love the gleams of good that broke

From either side, nor veil his eyes; And if some dreadful need should rise Would strike, and firmly, and one stroke.

To-morrow yet would reap to-day
As we bear blossom of the dead

Earn well the thrifty months, nor wed Raw Haste, half-sister to Delay.

MORTE D'ARTHUR

So all day long the noise of battle roll'd Among the mountains by the winter sea, Until King Arthur's table, man by man, Had fallen in Lyonnesse about their lord, King Arthur; then, because his wound was deep.

The bold Sir Bedivere uplifted him, Sir Bedivere, the last of all his knights, And bore him to a chapel nigh the field, A broken chancel with a broken cross. That stood on a dark strait of barren land. On one side lay the ocean, and on one Lay a great water, and the moon was full.

Then spake King Arthur to Sir Bedivere:

"The sequel of to-day unsolders all The goodliest fellowship of famous knights

Whereof this world holds record. Such

They sleep—the men I loved. I think that we Shall never more, at any future time, Delight our souls with talk of knightly deeds,

Walking about the gardens and the halls
Of Camelot, as in the days that were.

I perish by this people which I made,— Tho' Merlin sware that I should come again

To rule once more—but let what will be be.

I am so deeply smitten thro' the helm That without help I cannot last till morn.

Thou therefore take my brand Excali-

Which was my pride; for thou rememberest how

In those old days, one summer moon, an arm

Rose up from out the bosom of the lake. Clothed in white samite, mystic, wonderful,

Holding the sword — and how I row'd across

And took it, and have worn it, like a king:

And, wheresoever I am sung or told In aftertime, this also shall be known. But now delay not; take Excalibur, And fling him far into the middle mere;

And fling him far into the middle mere; Watch what thou seest, and lightly bring me word."

To him replied the bold Sir Bedivere: "It is not meet, Sir King, to leave thee thus,

Aidless, alone, and smitten thro' the helm.

A little thing may harm a wounded man.

Yet I thy hest will all perform at full, Watch what I see, and lightly bring thee word."

So saying, from the ruin'd shrine he stept

And in the moon athwart the place of tombs,

Where lay the mighty bones of ancient men,

Old knights, and over them the sea-wind

Shrill, chill, with flakes of foam. He, stepping down

By zigzag paths and juts of pointed rock, Came on the shining levels of the lake. There drew he forth the brand Exca-

And o'er him, drawing it, the winter moon,

Brightening the skirts of a long cloud, ran forth

And sparkled keen with frost against the hilt;

For all the haft twinkled with diamond sparks,

Myriads of topaz-lights, and jacinth work

Of subtlest jewellery. He gazed so long That both his eyes were dazzled, as he stood,

This way and that dividing the swift mind,

In act to throw; but at the last it seem'd Better to leave Excalibur conceal'd

There in the many-knotted water-flags,
That whistled stiff and dry about the marge.

So strode he back slow to the wounded king.

Then spake King Arthur to Sir Bedivere: [I gave?"
"Hast then perform'd my mission which

What is it thou hast seen, or what hast heard?"

And answer made the bold Sir Bedi-

"I heard the ripple washing in the reeds, And the wild water lapping on the crag."

To whom replied King Arthur, faint and pale;

"Thou hast betray'd thy nature and thy name,

Not rendering true answer, as beseem'd Thy fealty, nor like a noble knight; For surer sign had follow'd, either hand, Or voice, or else a motion of the mere.

This is a shameful thing for men to lie. Yet now, I charge thee, quickly go again

As thou art lief and dear, and do the

thing
I bade thee, watch, and lightly bring me word."

Then went Sir Bedivere the second time

Across the ridge, and paced beside the mere,

Counting the dewy pebbles, fix'd in thought:

But when he saw the wonder of the hilt, How curiously and strangely chased, he smote

His palms together, and he cried aloud: "And if indeed I cast the brand away. Surely a precious thing, one worthy note, Should thus be lost forever from the earth.

Which might have pleased the eyes of many men.

What good should follow this, if this were done?

What harm, undone? deep harm to disobey.

Seeing obedience is the bond of rule. Were it well to obey then, if a king demand

An act unprofitable, against himself? The king is sick, and knows not what he

What record, or what relic of my lord Should be to aftertime, but empty breath And rumors of a doubt? but were this kept.

Stored in some treasure-house of mighty

Some one might show it at a joust of arms

Saying, 'King Arthur's sword, Excalibur, Wrought by the lonely maiden of the Nine years she wrought it, sitting in the deeps

Upon the hidden bases of the hills. So might some old man speak in the aftertime

To all the people, winning reverence: But now much honor and much fame were lost."

So spake he, clouded with his own conceit.

And hid Excalibur the second time.

And so strode back slow to the wounded king. Then spoke King Arthur, breathing heavily: "What is it thou hast seen, or what hast heard?" And answer made the bold Sir Bedi-

"I heard the water lapping on the crag, And the long ripple washing in the reeds."

To whom replied King Arthur, much in wrath:

"Ah, miserable and unkind, untrue, Unknightly, traitor-hearted! Woe is me! Authority forgets a dying king,

Laid widow'd of the power in his eye That bow'd the will. I see thee what thou art,

For thou, the latest-left of all my knights,

In whom should meet the offices of all, Thou wouldst betray me for the precious hilt;

Either from lust of gold, or like a girl Valuing the giddy pleasure of the eyes. Yet, for a man may fail in duty twice, And the third time may prosper, get thee hence:

But, if thou spare to fling Excalibur, I will arise and slay thee with my hands." Then quickly rose Sir Bedivere, and ran, And, leaping down the ridges lightly, plunged

Among the bulrush-beds, and clutch'd the sword.

And strongly wheel'd and threw it. The great brand

Made lightnings in the splendor of the moon,

And flashing round and round, and whirl'd in an arch,

Shot like a streamer of the northern morn,

Seen where the moving isles of winter shock

By night, with noises of the northern sea.

So flash'd and fell the brand Excalibur: But ere he dipped the surface, rose an arm Cloth'd in white samite, mystic, wonder-

And caught him by the hilt, and brandish'd him

Three times, and drew him under in the mere.

And lightly went the other to the king. Then spoke King Arthur, drawing thicker breath:

"Now see I by thine eyes that this is done.

Speak out: what is it thou hast heard. or seen?"

And answer made the bold Sir Bedi-

"Sir King, I closed mine eyelids, lest the gems

Should blind my purpose, for I never

Nor shall see, here or elsewhere, till I die.

Not the I live three lives of mortal men, So great a miracle as vonder hilt.

Then with both hands I flung him, wheeling him;

But when I look'd again, behold an arm, Clothed in white samite, mystic, wonderful,

That caught him by the hilt, and brandish'd him

Three times, and drew him under in the mere."

And answer made King Arthur, breathing hard:

"My end draws nigh; 't is time that I were gone.

Make broad thy shoulders to receive my weight,

And bear me to the margin; yet I fear My wound hath taken cold, and I shall die."

So saying, from the pavement he half rose,

Slowly, with pain, reclining on his arm. And looking wistfully with wide blue

As in a picture. Him Sir Bedivere Remorsefully regarded thro' his tears, And would have spoken, but he found not words, Then took with care, and kneeling on one knee. O'er both his shoulders drew the languid hands, And rising bore him thro' the place of tombs.

But, as he walk'd, King Arthur panted

Like one that feels a nightmare on his hed

When all the house is mute. So sigh'd the king, Muttering and murmuring at his ear,

"Quick, quick!
I fear it is too late, and I shall die."

But the other swiftly strode from ridge

Clothed with his breath, and looking. he walk'd,

Larger than human on the frozen hills. He heard the deep behind him, and a

Before. His own thought drove him like a goad.

Dry clash'd his harness in the icy caves And barren chasms, and all to left and right

The bare black cliff clang'd round him, as he based

His feet on juts of slippery crag that rang

Sharp-smitten with the dint of armed

And on a sudden, lo! the level lake.

And the long glories of the winter moon. Then saw they how there hove a dusky

Dark as a funeral scarf from stem to stern.

Beneath them; and descending they were ware

That all the decks were dense with stately forms

Black-stoled, black-hooded, like a dream -by these

Three queens with crowns of gold—and from them rose

A cry that shiver'd to the tingling stars. And, as it were one voice, an agony

Of lamentation, like a wind that shrills All night in a waste land, where no one

Or hath come, since the making of the world.

Then murmur'd Arthur, "Place me in the barge."

And to the barge they came. There those three queens

Put forth their hands, and took the king, and wept.

But she that rose the tallest of them

And fairest, laid his head upon her lap,

And loosed the shatter'd casque, and chafed his hands,

And call'd him by his name, complaining loud,

And dropping bitter tears against his brow

Striped with dark blood; for all his face was white

And colorless, and like the wither'd moon Smote by the fresh beam of the springing east;

And all his greaves and cuisses dash'd with drops

Of onset; and the light and lustrous curls—

That made his forehead like a rising sun High from the dais-throne—were parch'd with dust;

Or, clotted into points and hanging loose, Mix'd with the knightly growth that fringed his lips.

So like a shatter'd column lay the king; Not like that Arthur who, with lance in rest.

From spur to plume a star of tournament, Shot thro' the lists at Camelot, and charged

Before the eyes of ladies and of kings. Then loudly cried the bold Sir Bedivere: "Ah! my Lord Arthur, whither shall I

Where shall I hide my forehead and my eyes?

For now I see the true old times are dead,

When every morning brought a noble chance,

And every chance brought out a noble knight.

Such times have been not since the light that led

The holy Elders with the gift of myrrh. But now the whole ROUND TABLE is dissolved

Which was an image of the mighty world;

And I, the last, go forth companionless, And the days darken round me, and the years.

Among new men, strange faces, other minds."

And slowly answer'd Arthur from the barge:

"The old order changeth, yielding place to new.

And God fulfils himself in many ways, Lest one good custom should corrupt the world.

Comfort thyself: what comfort is in

I have lived my life, and that which I have done [thou. May He within himself make pure! but

If thou shouldst never see my face again, Pray for my soul. More things are wrought by prayer

Than this world dreams of. Wherefore let thy voice

Rise like a fountain for me night and day.

For what are men better than sheep or goats

That nourish a blind life within the brain,

If, knowing God, they lift not hands of prayer
Both for themselves and those who call them friend?

For so the whole round earth is every

way

Bound by gold chains about the feet of

Bound by gold chains about the feet of God.

But now farewell. I am going a long way
With these thou seest—if indeed I go—
For all my mind is clouded with a doubt—

To the island-valley of Avilion:

Where falls not hail, or rain, or any snow, Nor ever wind blows loudly, but it lies Deep-meadow'd, happy, fair with orchard lawns

And bowery hollows crown'd with summer sea,

Where I will heal me of my grievous wound."

So said he, and the barge with oar and sail

Moved from the brink, like some fullbreasted swan

That, fluting a wild carol ere her death, Ruffles her pure cold plume, and takes the flood

With swarthy webs, Long stood Sir Bedivere

Revolving many memories, till the hull Look'd one black dot against the verge of dawn,

And on the mere the wailing died away.

Then they came in; but when the boy beheld

And let all this be as it was before."
So Mary said, and Dora hid her face

By Mary. There was silence in the room;

And all at once the old man burst in sobs:

"I have been to blame—to blame. I have kill'd my son.

I have kill'd him—but I loved him—my dear son.

May God forgive me!—I have been to blame.

Kiss me, my children."

And all the man was broken with remorse:

And all his love came back a hundredfold:

And for three hours he sobb'd o'er William's child

So those four abode Within one house together, and as years Went forward Mary took another mate; But Dora lived unmarried till her death.

ULYSSES 1

It little profits that an idle king, By this still hearth, among these barren crags.

Match'd with an aged wife, I mete and dol?

Unequal laws unto a savage race.
That hoard, and sleep, and feed, and know not me.

1 See the Life of Tennyson, I, 196.

I cannot rest from travel; I will drink Life to the lees. All times I have enjoy'd

Greatly, have suffer'd greatly, both with

That loved me, and alone; on shore, and Thro's cudding drifts the rainy Hyades Vext the dim's a. Lam become a name; For always roaming with a hungry heart Much have I seen and known,—cities of

And manners, climates, councils, governments,

Myself not least, but honor'd of them

And drunk delight of battle with my peers,

Far on the ringing plains of windy Troy.
I am a part of all that I have met:

Yet all experience is an arch wherethro' Gleams that untravell'd world whose margin fades

For ever and for ever when I move. How dull it is to pause, to make an end, To rust unburnish'd, not to shine in use! As tho' to breathe were life! Life piled

Were all too little, and of one to me Little remains; but every hour is saved From that eternal silence, something more.

A bringer of new things: and vile it were For some three suns to store and hoard myself,

And this gray spirit yearning in desire To follow knowledge like a sinking star, Beyond the utmost bound of human thought.

This is my son, mine own Telemachus,

Of common duties decent, not to fail In offices of tenderness, and pay Meet adoration to my household gods. When I am gone. He works his work, I mine.

There lies the port; the vessel puffs her sail:

There gloom the dark, broad seas. My mariners,

Souls that have toil'd and wrought, and thought with me.—

That ever with a frolic welcome took

The thunder and the sunshine, and opposed

Free hearts, free foreheads,—you and I

Old age bath yet his honor and his toil. Death closes all; but something ere the

Some work of noble note, may yet be done,

Not unbecoming men that strove with Gods.

The lights begin to twinkle from the rocks:

The long day wanes; the slow moon climbs; the deep

Moans round with many voices. Come, my friends

'T is not too late to seek a newer world. Push off, and sitting well in order smite The sounding furrows; for my purpose holds

LOCKSLEY HALL 1

COMRADES, leave me here a little, while as yet 't is early morn;

Leave me here, and when you want me, sound upon the bugle-horn.

'T is the place, and all around it, as of old, the curlews call,

Dreary gleams about the moorland flying over Locksley Hall;

Locksley Hall, that in the distance overlooks the sandy tracts,

And the hollow ocean-ridges roaring into cataracts.

¹ See the Life of Tennyson, I, 176 and 195.

Many a night from yonder ivied casement, ere I went to rest,

Did I look on great Orion sloping slowl; to the west.

Many a night I saw the Pleiads, rising thro' the mellow shade,

Glitter like a swarm of fireflies tangled in a silver braid.

Here about the beach I wander'd, nourishing a youth sublime

With the fairy tales of science, and the long result of time;

When the centuries behind me like a fruitful land reposed;

When I clung to all the present for the promise that it closed;

When I dipped into the future far as human eve could see,

Saw the vision of the world and all the wonder that would be.—

In the spring a fuller crimson comes upon the robin's breast;

In the spring the wanton lapwing gets himself another crest;

In the spring a livelier iris changes on the burnish'd dove;

In the spring a young man's fancy lightly turns to thoughts of love.

Then her check was pale and thinner than should be for one so young,

And her eyes on all my motions with a mute observance hung.

And I said, "My cousin Amy, speak, and speak the truth to me,

Trust me, cousin, all the current of my being sets to thee."

On her pallid cheek and forehead came a color and a light,

As I have seen the rosy red flushing in the northern night.

And she turn'd—ler bosom shaken with a sudden storm of sighs—

All the spirit deeply dawning in the dark of haz leyes -

Saying, "I have hid my feelings, fearing they should do me wrong;"

Saying, "Dost thou love me. consin?" weeping, "I have loved thee long."

Love took up the glass of time, and turn'd it in his glowing hands;

Every moment, lightly shaken, ran itself in golden sands.

Love took up the harp of Life, and smote on all the chords with might:

Smote the chord of Self, that, trembling, past in music out of sight.

Many a morning on the moorland did we hear the copses ring,

And her whisper throng'd my pulses with the fulness of the spring.

Many an evening by the waters did we watch the stately ships.

And our spirits rush'd together at the touching of the lips.

O my cousin, shallow-hearted! O my Amy, mine no more!

O the dreary, dreary, moorland! O the barren, barren shore!

Falser than all fancy fathoms, falser than all songs have sung,

Puppet to a father's threat, and servile to a shrewish tongue!

Is it well to wish thee happy? having known me - to decline

On a range of lower feelings and a narrower heart than mine!

Yet it shall be; thou shalt lower to his leyel day by day,

What is fine within thee growing coarse to sympathize with clay.

As the husband is, the wife is; thou art mated with a clown,

And the grossness of his nature will have weight to drag thee down.

He will hold thee, when his passion shall have spent its novel force.

Something better than his dog, a little dearer than his horse.

What is this? his eyes are heavy: think not they are glazed with wine. Go to him, it is thy duty; kiss him, take his hand in thine.

It may be my lord is weary, that his brain is overwrought;

Soothe him with the finer fancies, touch him with thy lighter thought.

He will answer to the purpose, easy things to understand—

Better thou wert dead before me, tho' I slew thee with my hand!

Better thou and I were lying, hidden from the heart's disgrace.

Roll'd in one another's arms, and silent in a last embrace.

Cursed be the social wants that sin against the strength of youth!

Cursed be the social lies that warp us from the living truth!

Cursed be the sickly forms that err from honest Nature's rule!

Cursed be the gold that gilds the straiten'd forehead of the fool!

Well—'t is well that I should bluster! Hadst thou less unworthy proved-Would to God-for I had loved thee more than ever wife was loved.

Am I mad, that I should cherish that which bears but bitter fruit?

I will pluck it from my bosom, tho' my heart be at the root.

Never, tho' my mortal summers to suc? length of years should come As the many-winter'd crow that leads,

the clanging rookery home.

Where is comfort? in division of the records of the mind?

Can I part her from herself, and love her as I knew her, kind?

I remember one that perish'd; sweetly did she speak and move;

Such a one do I remember, whom to look at was to love.

Can I think of her as dead, and love her for the love she bore?

No-she never loved me truly; love is love for evermore.

Comfort? comfort scorn'd of devils! this is truth the poet sings,

That a sorrow's crown of sorrow is remembering happier things.

Drug thy memories, lest thou learn it, lest thy heart be put to proof.

In the dead unhappy night, and when the rain is on the roof.

Like a dog, he hunts in dreams, and thou art staring at the wall,

Where the dying night-lamp flickers, and the shadows rise and fall.

Then a hand shall pass before thee, pointing to his drunken sleep.

To thy widow'd marriage-pillows, to the

To thy widow'd marriage-pillows, to the tears that thou wilt weep.

Thou shalt hear the "Never, never," whisper'd by the phantom years, And a song from out the distance in the ringing of thine ears:

And an eye shall vex thee, looking ancient kindness on thy pain.

Turn thee, turn thee on thy pillow; get thee to thy rest again.

Nay, but Nature brings thee solace; for a tender voice will cry.

"T is a purer life than thine, a lip to drain thy trouble dry.

Baby lips will laugh me down; my latest rival brings thee rest.

Baby fingers, waxen touches, press me from the mother's breast.

O, the child too clothes the father with a dearness not his due.

Half is thine and half is his; it will be worthy of the two.

O, I see thee old and formal, fitted to thy petty part,

With a little hoard of maxims preaching down a daughter's heart.

"They were dangerous guides the feelings—she herself was not exempt—

Truly, she herself had suffer'd "—Perish in thy self-contempt!

Overlive it—lower yet—be happy! wherefore should I care?

I myself must mix with action, lest I wither by despair.

What is that which I should turn to, lighting upon days like these?

Every door is barr'd with gold; and opens but to golden keys.

Every gate is throng'd with suitors, all the markets overflow.

I have but an angry fancy; what is that which I should do? I had been content to perish, falling on the foeman's ground,

When the ranks are roll'd in vapor, and the winds are laid with sound.

But the jingling of the guinea helps the hurt that Honor feels,

And the nations do but murmur, snarling at each other's heels.

Can I but relive in sadness? I will turn that earlier page.

Hide me from my deep emotion, O thou wondrous Mother-Age!

Make me feel the wild pulsation that I felt before the strife,

When I heard my days before me, and the tumult of my life;

Yearning for the large excitement that the coming years would yield,

Eager-hearted as a boy when first he leaves his father's field,

And at night along the dusky highway near and nearer drawn,

Sees in heaven the light of London flaring like a dreary dawn;

And his spirit leaps within him to be gone before him then,
Underneath the light he looks at, in

Inderneath the light he looks at, in among the throngs of men;

Men, my brothers, men the workers, ever reaping something new;

That which they have done but earnest of the things that they shall do.

For I dipped into the future, far as human eye could see.

eye could see. Saw the Vision of the world, and all the wonder that would be;

Saw the heavens fill with commerce, argosies of magic sails,

Pilot of the purple twilight, dropping down with costly bales;

Heard the heavens fill with shouting, and there rain'd a ghastly dew

From the nations' airy navies grappling in the central blue;

Far along the world-wide whisper of the south-wind rushing warm,

With the standards of the peoples plunging thro' the thunder-storm;

Till the war-drum throbb'd no longer, and the battle-flags were furf'd

In the Parliament of man, the Federation of the world.

There the common sense of most shall hold a fretful realm in awe,

And the kindly earth shall slumber, lapped in universal law.

So I triumph'd ere my passion sweeping thro' me left me dry,

Left me with the palsied heart, and left me with the jaundiced eye;

Eye, to which all order festers, all things here are out of joint.

Science moves, but slowly, slowly, creeping on from point to point;

Slowly comes a hungry people, as a lion, creeping nigher,

Glares at one that nods and winks behind a slowly-dying fire.

Yet I doubt not thro' the ages one increasing purpose runs,

And the thoughts of men are widen'd with the process of the suns.

What is that to him that reaps not harvest of his youthful joys.

Tho' the deep heart of existence beat for ever like a boy's?

Knowledge comes, but wisdom lingers, and I linger on the shore.

And the individual withers, and the world is more and more.

Knowledge comes, but wisdom lingers, and he bears a laden breast.

Full of sad experience, moving toward the stillness of his rest.

Hark, my merry comrades call me, sounding on the bugle-horn,
They to whom my foolish passion were

They to whom my foolish passion were a target for their scorn.

Shall it not be scorn to me to harp on such a moulder'd string?

f am shamed thro' all my nature to have loved so slight a thing.

Weakness to be wroth with weakness!
woman's pleasure, woman's pain
Nature made them blinder motions

Nature made them binder motion bounded in a shallower brain.

Woman is the lesser man, and all thy passions, match'd with mine,

Are as moonlight unto sunlight, and as water unto wine—

Here at least, where nature sickens, nothing. Ah, for some retreat

Deep in yonder shining Orient, where my life began to beat,

Where in wild Mahratta-battle fell my father evil-starr'd;—

I was left a trampled orphan, and a selfish uncle's ward.

Or to burst all links of habit—there to wander far away,

On from island unto island at the gateways of the day.

Larger constellations burning, mellow moons and happy skies,

Breadths of tropic shade and palms in cluster, knots of Paradise.

Never comes the trader, never floats an European flag,

Slides the bird o'er lustrous woodland, swings the trailer from the crag;

Droops the heavy-blossom'd bower, hangs the heavy-fruited tree—

Summer isles of Eden lying in darkpurple spheres of sea.

There methinks would be enjoyment more than in this march of mind, In the steamship, in the railway, in the thoughts that shake mankind.

There the passions cramp'd no longer shall have scope and breating space;

I will take some savage woman, she shall rear my dusky race.

Iron-jointed, supple-sinew'd, they shall dive, and they shall run,

Catch the wild goat by the hair. and hurl their lances in the sun;

Whistle back the parrot's call, and leap the rainbows of the brooks.

Not with blinded eyesight poring over

Fool, again the dream, the fancy! but I know my words are wild.

But I count the gray barbarian lower than the Christian child.

I. to herd with narrow foreheads, vacant of our glorious gains,

Like a beast with lower pleasures, like a beast with lower pains!

Mated with a squalid savage—what to me were sun or clime!

I the heir of all the ages, in the foremost files of time -

I that rather held it better men should perish one by one,

Than that earth should stand at gaze like Joshua's moon in Ajalon!

Not in vain the distance beacons. Forward, forward let us range,

Let the great world spin for ever down the ringing grooves of change.

Thro' the shadow of the globe we sweep into the younger day;

Better fifty years of Europe than a cycle of Cathay.

Mother-Age,—for mine I knew not, help me as when life begun;

Rift the hills, and roll the waters, flash the lightnings, weigh the sun.

O, I see the crescent promise of my spirit hath not set.

Ancient founts of inspiration well thro' all my fancy yet.

Howsoever these things be, a long farewell to Locksley Hall!

Now for me the woods may wither, now for me the roof-tree fall.

Comes a vapor from the margin, blackening over heath and holt,

Cramming all the blast before it, in its breast a thunderbolt.

Let it fall on Locksley Hall, with rain or hail, or fire or snow;

For the mighty wind arises, roaring seaward, and I go. 1842.

GODIVA

I waited for the train at Coventry;
I hung with grooms and porters on the bridge,

To watch the three tall spires; and there I shaped

The city's ancient legend into this:

Not only we, the latest seed of Time,
New men, that in the flying of a wheel

Cry down the past, not only we, that prate

Of rights and wrongs, have loved the people well,

And loathed to see them overtax'd; but she

Did more, and underwent, and overcame,

The woman of a thousand summers back, Godiva, wife to that grim Earl, who ruled

In Coventry; for when he laid a tax

Upon his town, and all the mothers brought

Their children, clamoring, "If we pay, we starve!"

She sought her lord, and found him, where he strode

About the hall, among his dogs, alone, His beard a foot before him, and his hair A yard behind. She told him of their tears,

And pray'd him, "If they pay this tax they starve." Whereat he stared, replying, half-

Whereat he stared, replying, halfamazed,
"You would not let your little finger

ache
For such as these?"—"But I would die,"

said she.

He laugh'd, and swore by Peter and by Paul,

Then filling at the diament in her contact.

Then fillip'd at the diamond in her ear:
"O, ay, ay, ay, you talk!"—"Alas!"
she said,

"But prove me what it is I would not do."

And from a heart as rough as Esau's hand,

He answer'd, "Ride you naked thro' the town,

And I repeal it;" and nodding, as in scorn.

He parted, with great strides among his dogs.

So left alone, the passions of her mind, As winds from all the compass shift and blow.

Made war upon each other for an hour, Till pity won. She sent a herald forth, And bade him cry, with sound of trum

And bade him cry, with sound of trumpet, all

The hard condition, but that she would loose

The people; therefore, as they loved her

well.
From then till noon no foot should pace
the street.

[all]

No eye look down, she passing, but that

Should keep within, door shut, and window barr'd.

Then fled she to her inmost bower, and

there

Unclasp'd the wedded eagles of her belt, The grim Earl's gift; but ever at a breath

She linger'd, looking like a summer

111001

Half-dipped in cloud. Anon she shook her head.

And shower'd the rippled ringlets to her knee;

Unclad herself in haste; adown the stair

Stole on; and like a creeping sunbeam slid

From pillar unto pillar, until she reach'd The gateway; there she found her palfrey trapt

In purple blazon'd with armorial gold.

Then she rode forth, clothed on with

The deep air listen'd round her as she rode.

And all the low wind hardly breathed for fear.

The little wide-mouth'd heads upon the spout

Had cunning eyes to see; the barking

Cur Made her cheek flame; her palfrey's footfall shot Light horrors thro' her pulses; the blind

walls .
Were full of chinks and holes; and over-

head
Fantastic gables, crowding, stared;
but she

Not less thro' all bore up, till, last, she

The white-flower'd elder-thicket from the field

Gleam thro' the Gothic archway in the wall.

Then she rode back, clothed on with chastity.

And one low churl, compact of thankless earth,

The fatal byword of all years to come, Boring a little auger-hole in fear,

Peep'd—but his eyes, before they had their will,

Were shrivell'd into darkness in his head, [who wait And dropped before him. So the Powers. On noble deeds, cancell'd a sense misused; [at once, And she, that knew not, pass'd; and all

With twelve great shocks of sound, the shameless noon [dred towers, Was classed and hammer'd from a hun-One after one; but even then she gain'd

Her bower, whence reissuing, robed and crown'd,

To meet her lord, she took the tax away And built herself an everlasting name.

SIR GALAHAD

My good blade carves the casques of men, My tough lance thrusteth sure.

My strength is as the strength of ten, Because my heart is pure.

The shattering trumpet shrilleth high.
The hard brands shiver on the steel.

The splinter'd spear-shafts crack and fly,
The horse and rider reel;

They reel, they roll in clanging lists,
And when the tide of combat stands,
Perfume and flowers fall in showers,
That lightly rain from ladies' hands.

How sweet are looks that ladies bend On whom their favors fall!

For them 1 battle till the end,
To save from shame and thrall.
But all my heart is drawn above.

My knees are bow'd in crypt and shrine;

I never felt the kiss of love, Nor maiden's hand in mine. More bounteous aspects on me beam.

Me mightier transports move and thrill:

So keep I fair thro' faith and prayer A virgin heart in work and will.

When down the stormy crescent goes, A light before me swims.

Between dark stems the forest glows,
I hear a noise of hymns.

Then by some secret shrine I ride; I hear a voice, but none are there;

The stalls are void, the doors are wide,
The tapers burning fair.

Fair gleams the snowy altar-cloth,
The silver vessels sparkle clean,

The shrill bell rings, the censer swings, And solemn chants resound between

Sometimes on lonely mountain-meres I find a magic bank,

I leap on board; no helmsman steers; I float till all is dark.

A gentle sound, an awful light! Three angels bear the Holy Grail; With fold I feet, in stoles of white, On sleeping wings they sail.
Ah, blessed vision! blood of God! My spirit beats her mortal bars, Asdown dark tides the glory slides, And starlike mingles with the stars.

When on my goodly charger borne Thro' dreaming towns I go. The cock crows ere the Christmas morn. The screets are dumb with snow. The tempest crackles on the leads, And, ringing, springs from brand and eves.

But o'er the dark a glory spreads, And gilds the driving hail.

I leave the plain, I climb the height: No branchy thicket shelter yields; But blessed forms in whistling storms Fly o'er waste fens and windy fields.

A maiden knight--to me is given Such hope, I know not fear: I yearn to breathe the airs of heaven That often meet me here. I muse on joy that will not cease, Pure spaces clothed in living beams, Pure lilies of eternal peace, Whose odors haunt my dreams; And, stricken by an angel's hand, This mortal armor that I wear, This weight and size, this heart and

Are touch'd, are turn'd to finest air.

The clouds are broken in the sky. And thro' the mountain-walls A rolling organ-harmony Swells up and shakes and falls. Then move the trees, the copses nod, Wings flutter, voices hover clear: "O just and faithful knight of God! Ride on! the prize is near. So pass I hostel, hall, and grange; By bridge and ford, by park and pale, All-arm'd I ride, whate'er betide, Until I find the Holy Grail. 1842.

A FAREWELL

FLOW down, cold rivulet, to the sea, Thy tribute wave deliver; No more by thee my steps shall be, For ever and for ever.

Flow, softly flow, by lawn and lea, A rivulet, then a river; Nowhere by thee my steps shall be, For ever and for ever.

But here will sigh thine alder-tree, And here thine aspen shiver: And here by thee will hum the bee. For ever and for ever.

A thousand suns will stream on thee, A thousand moons will quiver; But not by thee my steps shall be, 1842 For ever and for ever.

THE VISION OF SIN

I HAD a vision when the night was late; A youth came riding toward a palacegate.

He rode a horse with wings, that would have flown,

But that his heavy rider kept him down. And from the palace came a child of sin, And took him by the curls, and led him

Where sat a company with heated eyes, Expecting when a fountain should arise. A sleepy light upon their brows and

As when the sun, a crescent of eclipse. Dreams over lake and lawn, and isles and capes-

Suffused them, sitting, lying, languid shapes,

By heaps of gourds, and skins of wine, and piles of grapes.

Then methought I heard a mellow sound.

Gathering up from all the lower ground; Narrowing in to where they sat assem-

Low voluptuous music winding trembled,

Woven in circles. They that heard it

Panted hand-in-hand with faces pale, Swung themselves, and in low tones re-

Till the fountain spouted, showering

Sleet of diamond-drift and pearly hail. Then the music touch'd the gates and died.

Rose again from where it seem'd to fail, Storm'd in orbs of song, a growing gale; Till thronging in and in, to where they waited, As 't were a hundred-throated nighting gale,

The strong tempestuous treble throbb'd and palpitated;

Ran into its giddlest whirl of sound, Caught the sparkles, and in circles, Purple gauzes, golden hazes, liquid

mazes

Flung the torrent rainbow round. Then they started from their places, Moved with violence, changed in hue, Caught each other with wild grimaces, Half-invisible to the view. Wheeling with precipitate paces To the melody, till they flew, Hair and eyes and limbs and faces, Twisted hard in fierce embraces, Like to Furies, like to Graces, Dash'd together in blinding dew; Till, kill'd with some luxurious agony, The nerve-dissolving melody Fluttered headlong from the sky.

And then I look'd up toward a mountaintract.

That girt the region with high cliff and lawn.

I saw that every morning, far withdrawn

Beyond the darkness and the cataract, God made Himself an awful rose of Unheeded; and detaching, fold by fold, From those still heights, and, slowly drawing near,

A vapor heavy, hueless, formless, cold, Came floating on for many a month and year,

Unheeded: and I thought I would have spoken,

And warn'd that madman ere it grew too late,

But, as in dreams, I could not. Mine was broken, When that cold vapor touch'd the palace-

And link'd again. I saw within my head A gray and gap-tooth'd man as lean as death. Who slowly rode across a wither'd

And lighted at a ruin'd inn, and said:

heath.

"Wrinkled ostler, grim and thin! Here is custom come your way; Take my brute, and lead him in, Stuff his ribs with mouldy hay.

- "Bitter barmaid, waning fast! See that sheets are on my bed. What! the flower of life is past; It is long before you wed.
- "Slip-shod waiter, lank and sour, At the Dragon on the heath! Let us have a quiet hour, Let us hob-and-nob with Death.
- "I am old, but let me drink; Bring me spices, bring me wine: I remember, when I think, That my youth was half divine.
- "Wine is good for shrivell'd lips, When a blanket wraps the day. When the rotten woodland drips, And the leaf is stamp'd in clay.
- "Sit thee down, and have no shame. Cheek by jowl, and knee by knee; What care I for any name? What for order or degree?
- "Let me screw thee up a peg; Let me loose thy tongue with wine: Callest thou that thing a leg? Which is thinnest? thine or mine?
- "Thou shalt not be saved by works, Thou hast been a sinner too: Ruin'd trunks on wither'd forks, Empty scarecrows, I and you!
- "Fill the cup and fill the can, Have a rouse before the morn Every moment dies a man, Every moment one is born.
- "We are men of ruin'd blood; Therefore comes it we are wise. Fish are we that love the mud. Rising to no fancy-flies.
- "Name and fame! to fly sublime Thro' the courts, the camps, the schools,
- Is to be the ball of Time, Bandied by the hands of fools.
- "Friendship!—to be two in one— Let the canting liar pack! Well I know, when I am gone, How she mouths behind my back.
- "Virtue!—to be good and just— Every heart, when sifted well, Is a clot of warmer dust, Mix'd with cunning sparks of hell.

- "O, we two as well can look Whited thought and cleanly life As the priest, above his book Leering at his neighbor's wife.
- "Fill the cup and fill the can, Have a rouse before the morn: Every moment dies a man, Every moment one is born,
- "Drink, and let the parties rave;
 They are fill'd with idle spleen,
 Rising, falling, like a wave,
 For they know not what they mean.
- "He that roars for liberty
 Faster binds a tyrant's power,
 And the tyrant's cruel glee
 Forces on the freer hour.
- "Fill the can and fill the cup;
 All the windy ways of men
 Are but dust that rises up,
 And is lightly laid again.
- "Greet her with applausive breath, Freedom, gaily doth she tread; In her right a civic wreath, In her left a human head.
- "No, I love not what is new; She is of an ancient house, And I think we know the hue Of that cap upon her brows.
- "Let her go! her thirst she slakes Where the bloody conduit runs, Then her sweetest meal she makes On the first-born of her sons.
- "Drink to lofty hopes that cool,— Visions of a perfect State; Drink we, last, the public fool, Frantic love and frantic hate.
- "Chant me now some wicked stave, Till thy drooping courage rise, And the glow-worm of the grave Glimmer in thy rheumy eyes.
- "Fear not thou to loose thy tongue, Set thy hoary fancies free; What is loathsome to the young Savors well to thee and me.
- "Change, reverting to the years, When thy nerves could understand What there is in loving tears, And the warmth of hand in hand.

- "Tell me tales of thy first love— April hopes, the fools of chance— Till the graves begin to move, And the dead begin to dance.
- "Fill the can and fill the cup; All the windy ways of men Are but dust that rises up. And is lightly laid again,
- "Trooping from their mouldy dens The chap-fallen circle spreads— Welcome, fellow-citizens, Hollow hearts and empty heads!
- "You are bones, and what of that? Every face, however full, Padded round with flesh and fat, Is but modell'd on a skull.
- "Death is king, and Vivat Rex! Tread a measure on the stones, Madam—if I know your sex From the fashion of your bones.
- "No, I cannot praise the fire In your eye--nor yet your lip; All the more do I admire Joints of cunning workmanship.
- "Lo! God's likeness—the groundplan—
 Neither modell'd, glazed, norframed;
 Buss me, thou rough sketch of man,
 Far too naked to be shamed!
- "Drink to Fortune, drink to Chance, While we keep a little breath! Drink to heavy Ignorance! Hob-and-nob with brother Death!
- "Thou art mazed, the night is long,
 And the longer night is nearWhat! I am not all as wrong
 As a bitter jest is dear.
- "Youthful hopes, by scores, to all, When the locks are crisp and curl'd; Unto me my maudlin gall And my mockeries of the world.
- "Fill the cup and fill the can; Mingle madness, mingle scorn! Dregs of life, and lees of man; Yet we will not die forlorn."

v

The voice grew faint; there came a further change;

Once more uprose the mystic mountain range.

Below were men and horses pierced with worms.

And slowly quickening into lower forms:
By shards and scurf of salt, and scum of dross.

Old plash of rains, and refuse patch'd with moss.

Then some one spake: "Behold! it was a crime

Of sense avenged by sense that wore with time."

Another said: "The crime of sense became

The crime of malice, and is equal blame."
And one: "He had not wholly quench'd his power:

A little grain of conscience made him sour."

At last I heard a voice upon the slope Cry to the summit, "Is there any hope?" To which an answer peal'd from that high land,

But in a tongue no man could understand;

And on the glimmering limit far with-

God made Himself an awful rose of dawn. 1842.

On thy cold gray stones, O Sea!
And I would that my tongue could utter
The thoughts that arise in me.

O, well for the fisherman's boy,
That he shouts with his sister at play!
O, well for the sailor lad,
That he sings in his boat on the bay!

And the stately ships go on
To their haven under the hill;
But O for the touch of a vanish'd hand,

But O for the touch of a vanish'd hand, And the sound of a voice that is still!

Break, break, break,
At the foot of thy crags, O Sea!
But the tender grace of a day that is dead

Will never come back to me. 1842.

THE POETS SONG

THE rain had fallen, the Poet arose,

He pass'd by the town and out of the street;

A light wind blew from the gates of the sun,

And waves of shadow went over the wheat:

And he sat him down in a lonely place, And chanted a melody loud and sweet, That made the wild-swan pause in her

And the lark drop down at his feet.

The swallow stopped as he hunted the fly, The snake slipped under a spray,

The wild hawk stood with the down on his beak,

And stared, with his foot on the prey; And the nightingale thought, "I have sung many songs,

But never a one so gay, For he sings of what the world will be When the years have died away." 1842.

LYRICS FROM THE PRINCESS

TEARS, idle tears, I know not what they mean,

Tears from the depth of some divine despair

Rise in the heart, and gather to the eyes, In looking on the happy autumn-fields, And thinking of the days that are no more.

Fresh as the first beam glittering on a sail.

That brings our friends up from the underworld.

Sad as the last which reddens over one That sinks with all we love below the verge;

So sad, so fresh, the days that are no more.

Ah, sad and strange as ir dark summer dawns

The earliest pipe of half-awaken'd birds
To dying ears, when unto dying eyes

The casement slowly grows a glimmering square;

So sad, so strange, the days that are no more.

Dear as remember'd kisses after death, And sweet as those by hopeless fancy feign'd

On lips that are for others; deep as love, Deep as first love, and wild with all regret;

O Death in Life, the days that are no more!

O Swallow, Swallow, flying, flying south.

Fly to her, and fall upon her gilded eaves, And tell her, tell her, what I tell to thee.

O. tell her, Swallow, thou that knowest each,

That bright and fierce and fickle is the

And dark and true and tender is the

O Swallow, Swallow, if I could follow, and light

Upon her lattice, I would pipe and trill, And cheep and twitter twenty million loves.

O, were I thou that she might take

And lay me on her bosom, and her heart Would rock the snowy cradle till I died!

Why lingereth she to clothe her heart with love.

Delaying as the tender ash delays To clothe herself, when all the woods are green?

O, tell her, Swallow, that thy brood is flown;

Say to her, I do but wanton in the South, But in the North long since my nest is

O, tell her, brief is life but love is long, And brief the sun of summer in the North.

And brief the moon of beauty in the South.

O Swallow, flying from the golden woods,

Fly to her, and pipe and woo her, and make her mine,

And tell her, tell her, that I follow thee.

As thro' the land at eve we went, And pluck'd the ripen'd ears, We fell out, my wife and I, O, we fell out, I know not why, And kiss'd again with tears. And blessings on the falling out That all the more endears,

When we fall out with those we love And kiss again with tears!

For when we came where lies the child We lost in other years,

There above the little grave, O, there above the little grave, We kiss'd again with tears.

Sweet and low, sweet and low, Wind of the western sea, Low, low, breathe and blow. Wind of the western sea! Over the rolling waters go, Come from the dying moon, and blow,

Blow him again to me: While my little one, while my pretty one, sleeps.

Sleep and rest, sleep and rest, Father will come to thee soon: Rest, rest, on mother's breast, Father will come to thee soon: Father will come to his babe in the nest. Silver sails all out of the west

Under the silver moon;

Sleep, my little one, sleep, my pretty one, sleep.

The splendor falls on castle walls And snowy summits old in story; The long light shakes across the lakes, And the wild cataract leaps in glory.

Blow, bugle, blow, set the wild echoes flying.

Blow, bugle; answer, echoes, dying, dying, dying.

O, hark, O, hear! how thin and clear, And thinner, clearer, farther going! O, sweet and far from cliff and scar The horns of Elfland faintly blowing! Blow, let us hear the purple glens reply-

Blow, bugle; answer, echoes, dying, dying, dying.

O love, they die in you rich sky, They faint on hill or field or river; Our echoes roll from soul to soul,

And grow for ever and for ever. Blow, bugle, blow, set the wild echoes flying,
And answer, echoes, answer, dying, dying, dying.

Thy voice is heard thro' rolling drums That beat to battle where he stands; Thy face across his fancy comes, And gives the battle to his hands.

A moment, while the trumpets blow, He sees his brood about thy knee; The next, like fire he meets the foe, And strikes him dead for thine and thee.

Home they brought her warder dead; She nor swoon'd nor utter'd cry. All her maidens, watching, said. "She must weep or she will die."

Then they praised him, soft and low, Call'd him worthy to be loved, Truest friend and noblest foe; Yet she neither spoke nor moved.

Stole a maiden from her place, Lightly to the warrior stepped, Took the face-cloth from the face; Yet she neither moved nor wept.

Rose a nurse of nine(y years,
Set his child upon her knee—
Like summer tempest came her tears—
"Sweet my child, I live for thee."

Ask me no more: the moon may draw the sea:

The cloud may stoop from heaven and take the shape,

With fold to fold, of mountain or of cape;

But O too fond, when have I answer'd thee?

Ask me no more.

Ask me no more: what answer should 1 give?

I love not hollow cheek or faded eye: Yet, O my friend, I will not have thee

Ask me no more, lest I should bid thee live:

Ask me no more.

Ask me no more: thy fate and mine are seal'd;

I strove against the stream and all in vain;

Let the great river take me to the main.

No more, dear love, for at a touch I yield:
Ask me no more.

IN MEMORIAM A. H. H.

OBILL MDCCCXXXIII 1

STRONG Son of God, immortal Love, Whom we, that have not seen thy face, By faith, and faith alone, embrace, Believing where we cannot prove;

Thine are these orbs of light and shade; Thou madest Life in man and brute; Thou madest Death; and lo, thy foot Is on the skull which thou hast made.

Thou wilt not leave us in the dust:
Thou madest man, he knows not why,
He thinks he was not made to die:
And thou hast made him: thou art just.

Thou seemest human and divine,
The highest, holiest manhood, thou.
Our wills are ours, we know not how;
Our wills are ours, to make them thine.

Our little systems have their day;
They have their day and cease to be,
They are but broken lights of thee,
And thou, O Lord, art more than they.

We have but faith: we cannot know,
For knowledge is of things we see;
And yet we trust it comes from thee,
A beam in darkness: let it grow.

Let knowledge grow from more to more, But more of reverence in us dwell; That mind and soul, according well May make one music as before,

But vaster. We are fools and slight;
We mock thee when we do not fear:
But help thy foolish ones to bear;
Help thy vain worlds to bear thy light.

Forgive what seem'd my sin in me, What seem'd my worth since I began; For merit lives from man to man, And not from man, O Lord, to thee.

Forgive my grief for one removed, Thy creature, whom I found so fair. I trust he lives in thee, and there i find him worthier to be loved.

Forgive these wild and wandering cries, Confusions of a wasted youth; Forgive them where they fail in truth, And in thy wis lom make me wise.

O Sorrow, cruel fellowship, O Priestess in the vaults of Death, O sweet and bitter in a breath. What whispers from thy lying lip?

"The stars," she whispers, "blindly run; A web is woven across the sky; From out waste places comes a cry, And murmurs from the dying sun;

"And all the phantom, Nature, stands-With all the music in her tone, A hollow echo of my own,— A hollow form with empty hands."

And shall I take a thing so blind, Embrace her as my natural good; Or crush her, like a vice of blood, Upon the threshold of the mind?

I sometimes hold it half a sin To put in words the grief I feel; For words, like Nature, half reveal And half conceal the Soul within.

But, for the unquiet heart and brain, A use in measured language lies; The sad mechanic exercise, Like dull narcotics, numbing pain.

In words, like weeds, I'll wrap me o'er Like coarsest clothes against the cold; But that large grief which these en-

One writes, that "other friends remain," That "loss is common to the race"-And common is the commonplace, And vacant chaff well meant for grain.

That loss is common would not make My own less bitter, rather more. Too common! Never morning wore To evening, but some heart did break.

O father, wheresoe'er thou be, Who pledgest now thy gallant son, A shot, ere half thy draught be done, Hath still'd the life that beat from thee.

O mother, praying God will save Thy sailor,—while thy head is bow'd, His heavy-shotted hammock-shroud Drops in his vast and wandering grave.

Ye know no more than I who wrought At that last hour to please him well; Who mused on all I had to tell, something written, something And thought:

Expecting still his advent home: And ever met him on his way With wishes, thinking, "here to-day," Or "here to-morrow will he come."

O, somewhere, meek, unconscious dove, That sittest ranging golden hair; And glad to find thyself so fair, Poor child, that waitest for thy love!

For now her father's chimney glows In expectation of a guest; And thinking "this will please him best,"

She takes a riband or a rose;

For he will see them on to-night; And with the thought her color burns; And, having left the glass, she turns Once more to set a ringlet right;

And, even when she turn'd, the curse Had fallen, and her future lord Was drown'd in passing thro' the ford, Or kill'd in falling from his horse.

O, what to her shall be the end? And what to me remains of good? To her perpetual maidenhood, And unto me no second friend.

VII

Dark house, by which once more I stand Here in the long unlovely street, Doors, where my heart was used to beat

So quickly, waiting for a hand,

A hand that can be clasp'd no more—Behold me, for I cannot sleep,
And like a guilty thing I creep
At earliest morning to the door.

He is not here; but far away
The noise of life begins again,
And ghastly thro' the drizzling rain
On the bald street breaks the blank day,

Fair ship, that from the Italian shore Sailest the placid ocean-plains With my lost Arthur's loved remains, Spread thy full wings, and waft him o'er.

So draw him home to those that mourn In vain; a favorable speed Ruffle thy mirror'd mast, and lead Thro' prosperous floods his holy urn.

All night no ruder air perplex
Thy sliding keel, till Phosphor, bright
As our pure love, thro' early light
Shall glimmer on the dewy decks.

Sphere all your lights around, above; Sleep, gentle heavens, before the Sleep, gentle winds, as he sleeps now, My friend, the brother of my love;

My Arthur, whom I shall not see Till all my widow'd race be run; Dear as the mother to the son, More than my brothers are to me.

X

I hear the noise about thy keel;
I hear the bell struck in the night;
I see the cabin-window bright;
I see the sailor at the wheel.

Thou bring'st the sailor to his wife, And travell'd men from foreign lands; And letters unto trembling hands; And thy dark freight, a vanish'd life.

So bring him: we have idle dreams; This look of quiet flatters thus Our home-bred fancies. O. to us, The fools of habit, sweeter seems To rest beneath the clover sod, That takes the sunshine and the rains, Or where the kneeling hamlet drains The chalice of the grapes of God;

Than if with thee the roaring wells
Should gulf him fathom-deep in brine.
And hands so often clasp'd in mine,
Should toss with tangle and with shells.

XΤ

Calm is the morn without a sound, Calm as to suit a calmer grief. And only thro' the faded leaf The chestnut pattering to the ground;

Calm and deep peace on this high wold, And on these dews that drench the furze,

And all the silvery gossamers That twinkle into green and gold;

Calm and still light on yon great plain
That sweeps with all its autumn
bowers,

And crowded farms and lessening towers,

To mingle with the bounding main;

Calm and deep peace in this wide air, These leaves that redden to the fall, And in my heart, if calm at all, If any calm, a calm despair;

Calm on the seas, and silver sleep,
And waves that sway themselves in
rest,

And dead calm in that noble breast Which heaves but with the heaving deep.

IIIX

Tears of the widower, when he sees
A late-lost form that sleep reveals,
And moves his doubtful arms, and feels

Her place is empty, fall like these;

Which weep a loss for ever new,
A void where heart on heart reposed;
And, where warm hands have prest
and closed,

Silence, till I be silent too;

Which weep the comrade of my choice An awful thought, a life removed, The human-hearted man I loved, A Spirit, not a breathing voice. Come, Time, and teach me, many years,
I do not suffer in a dream;

For now so strange do these things

Mine eyes have leisure for their tears,

My fancies time to rise on wing,
And glance about the approaching sails,

As the they brought but merchants' bales,

And not the burthen that they bring.

XIV

If one should bring me this report,
That thou hadst touch'd the land today,

And I went down unto the quay, And found thee lying in the port;

And standing, muffled round with woe, Should see thy passengers in rank Come stepping lightly down the plank,

And beckoning unto those they know;

And if along with these should come
The man I held as half-divine,
Should strike a sudden hand in mine,
And ask a thousand things of home;

And I should tell him all my pain,
And how my life had droop'd of late,
And he should sorrow o'er my state
And marvel what possess'd my brain;

And I perceived no touch of change,
No hint of death in all his frame,
But found him all in all the same,
I should not feel it to be strange.

XVIII

'T is well; 't is something; we may stand
Where he in English earth is laid,

And from his ashes may be made The violet of his native land.

'T is little; but it looks in truth
As if the quiet bones were blest
Among familiar names to rest
And in the places of his youth.

Come then, pure hands, and bear the

That sleeps or wears the mask of sleep, And come, whatever loves to weep, And hear the ritual of the dead. Ah yet, even yet, if this might be,
I, falling on his faithful heart,
Would breathing thro' his lips impart
The life that almost dies in me;

That dies not, but endures with pain, And slowly forms the firmer mind, Treasuring the look it cannot find, The words that are not heard again.

XIX

The Danube to the Severn gave
The darken'd heart that beat no more;
They laid him by the pleasant shore,
And in the hearing of the wave.

There twice a day the Severn fills; The salt sea-water passes by, And hushes half the babbling Wye, And makes a silence in the hills.

The Wye is hush'd nor moved along,
And hush'd my deepest grief of all,
When fill'd with tears that cannot
fall,

I brim with sorrow drowning song.

The tide flows down, the wave again
Is vocal in its wooded walls;
My deeper anguish also falls,
And I can speak a little then.

XXI -

I sing to him that rests below,
And, since the grasses round me wave,
I take the grasses of the grave.
And make them pipes whereon to blow.

The traveller hears me now and then,
And sometimes harshly will he speak:
"This fellow would make weakness
weak,

And melt the waxen hearts of men."

Another answers: "Let him be, He loves to make parade of pain, That with his piping he may gain The praise that comes to constancy."

A third is wroth: "Is this an hour For private sorrow's barren song, When more and more the people throng The chairs and thrones of civil power?

"A time to sicken and to swoon,
When Science reaches forth her arms
To feel from world to world, and charms

Her secret from the latest moon?"

Behold, ye speak an idle thing;
Ye never knew the sacred dust.
I do but sing because I must.
And pipe but as the linnets sing;

And one is glad; her note is gay,
For now her little ones have ranged;
And one is sad; her note is changed,
Because her brood is stolen away.

XXIII

Now, sometimes in my sorrow shut, Or breaking into song by fits, Alone, alone, to where he sits, The Shadow cloak'd from head to foot,

Who keeps the keys of all the creeds, I wander, often falling lame, And looking back to whence I came, Or on to where the pathway leads;

And crying, How changed from where it ran

Thro' lands where not a leaf was dumb,

But all the lavish hills would hum The murmur of a happy Pan;

When each by turns was guide to each, And Fancy light from Fancy caught, And Thought leaped out to wed with Thought

Ere Thought could wed itself with Speech:

And all we met was fair and good,
And all was good that Time could bring.

And all the secret of the Spring Moved in the chambers of the blood;

And many an old philosophy
On Argive heights divinely sang,
And round us all the thicket rang
To many a flute of Arcady.

XXVII

I envy not in any moods
The captive void of noble rage,
The linnet born within the cage,
Ihat never knew the summer woods.

I envy not the beast that takes
His license in the field of time,
Unfetter'd by the sense of crime,
To whom a conscience never wakes;

Nor, what may count itself as blest, The heart that never plighted troth But stagnates in the weeds of sloth; Nor any want-begotten rest.

I hold it true, whate'er befall; I feel it, when I sorrow most; 'T is better to have loved and lost Than never to have loved at all

XXVIII

The time draws near the birth of Christ The moon is hid, the night is still; The Christmas bells from hill to hill Answer each other in the mist.

Four voices of four hamlets round, From far and near, on mead and moor, Swell out and fail, as if a door Were shut between me and the sound;

Each voice four changes on the wind,
That now dilate, and now decrease,
Peace and goodwill, goodwill and
peace,
Peace and goodwill, to all mankind.

This year I slept, and woke with pain,
I almost wish'd no more to wake,
And that my hold on life would break
Before I heard those bells again;

But they my troubled spirit rule,
For they controll'd me when a boy;
They bring me sorrow touch'd with
joy,
The merry, merry bells of Yule.

XXX

With trembling fingers did we weave The holly round the Christmas hearth; A rainy cloud possess'd the earth, And sadly fell our Christmas-eve.

At our old pastimes in the hall
We gamboll'd, making vain pretence
Of gladness, with an awful sense
Of one mute Shadow watching all.

We paused: the winds were in the beech;

We heard them sweep the winter land;

And in a circle hand-in-hand Sat silent, looking each at each.

Then echo-like our voices rang;
We sung, tho' every eye was dim,
A merry song we sang with him
Last year; impetuously we sang.

We ceased; a gentler feeling crept Upon us; surely rest is meet. "They rest," we said, "their sleep is sweet,"

And silence follow'd, and we wept.

One voices took a higher range;
Once more we sang: "They do not die
Nor lose their mortal sympathy,
Nor change to us, although they change;

"Rapt from the fickle and the frail With gather'd power, yet the same, Pierces the keen seraphic flame From orb to orb, from veil to veil."

Rise, happy morn, rise, holy morn,
Draw forth the cheerful day from
night:

O Father, touch the east, and light The light that shone when Hope was

XXXI

When Lazarus left his charnel-cave, And home to Mary's house return'd, Was this demanded—if he yearn'd To hear her weeping by his grave?

"Where wert thou, brother, those four days?"

There lives no record of reply,

Which telling what it is to die Had surely added praise to praise.

From every house the neighbors met,
The streets were fill'd with joyful sound,

A solemn gladness even crown'd The purple brows of Olivet.

Behold a man raised up by Christ!
The rest remaineth unreveal'd;
He told it not, or something seal'd
The lips of that Evangelist

HXXX

Her eyes are homes of silent prayer,
Nor other thought her mind admits
But, he was dead, and there he sits,
And he that brought him back is there.

Then one deep love doth supersede
All other, when her ardent gaze
Roves from the living brother's face,
And rests upon the Life indeed.

All subtle thought, all curious fears,
Borne down by gladness so complete,
She bows, she bathes the Saviour's feet
With costly spikenard and with tears.

Thrice blest whose lives are faithful prayers,

Whose loves in higher love endure; What souls possess themselves so pure, Or is there blessedness like theirs?

IIIXXX

O thou that after toil and storm
Mayst seem to have reach'd a puret
air,

Whose faith has centre everywhere, Nor cares to fix itself to form,

Leave thou thy sister, when she prays, Her early heaven, her happy views; Nor thou with shadow'd hint confuse A life that leads melodious days.

Her faith thro' form is pure as thine, Her hands are quicker unto good. O, sacred be the flesh and blood To which she links a truth divine!

See thou, that countest reason ripe
In holding by the law within,
Thou fail not in a world of sin,
And even for want of such a type.

XT.

Could we forget the widow'd hour And look on Spirits breathed away, As on a maiden in the day When first she wears her orange-flower!

When crown'd with blessing she doth rise

To take her latest leave of home, And hopes and light regrets that come Make April of her tender eyes;

And doubtful joys the father move, And tears are on the mother's face, As parting with a long embrace She enters other realms of love;

Her office there to rear, to teach, Becoming as is meet and fit A link among the days, to knit The generations each with each;

And, doubtless, unto thee is given A life that bears immortal fruit In those great offices that suit The full-grown energies of heaven.

Ay me, the difference I discern! How often shall her old fireside Be cheer'd with tidings of the bride, How often she herself return. And tell them all they would have told, And bring her babe, and make her boast,

Till even those that miss'd her most Shall count new things as dear as old;

But thou and I have shaken hands,
Till growing winters lay me low;
My paths are in the fields I know,
And thine in undiscover'd lands.

XLVIII

If these brief lays, of Sorrow born, Were taken to be such as closed Grave doubts and answers here proposed,

Then these were such as men might scorn.

Her care is not to part and prove She takes, when harshed moods remit,

What sien ler shade of doubt may flit, And makes it vassal unto love:

And hence indeed, she sports with words. But better serves a wholesome law, And holds it sin and shame to draw The deepest measure from the chords;

Nor dare she trust a larger lay,
But rather loosens from the lip
Short swallow-flights of song, that dip
Their wings in tears, and skim away.

LIV

O, yet we trust that somehow good
Will be the final goal of ill,
To pangs of nature, sins of will,
Defects of doubt, and taints of blood;

That nothing walks with aimless feet; That not one life shall be destroy'd, Or cast as rubbish to the void, When God hath made the pile complete;

That not a worm is cloven in vain; That not a moth with vain desire Is shrivell'd in a fruitless fire, Or but subserves another's gain.

Behold, we know not anything:
I can but trust that good shall fall
At last—far off—at last, to all.
And every winter change to spring.

So runs my dream; but what am I? An infant crying in the night; An infant crying for the light, And with no language but a cry.

T.V

The wish, that of the living whole No life may fail beyond the grave, Derives it not from what we have The likest God within the soul?

Are God and Nature then at strife,
That Nature lends such evil dreams?
So careful of the type she seems,
So careless of the single life,

That I, considering everywhere
Her secret meaning in her deeds,
And finding that of fifty seeds
She often brings but one to bear,

I falter where I firmly trod,
And falling with my weight of cares
Upon the great world's altar-stairs
That slope thro' darkness up to God,

I stretch lame hands of faith, and grope, And gather dust and chaff, and call To what I feel is Lord of all, And faintly trust the larger hope.

LVI

'So careful of the type?" but no. From scarped cliff and quarried stone She cries, "A thousand types are gone; I care for nothing, all shall go.

"Thou makest thine appeal to me:
I bring to life, I bring to death;
The spirit does but mean the breath:
I know no more." And he, shall he,

Man, her last work, who seem'd so fair, Such splendid purpose in his eyes, Who roll'd the psalm to wintry skies, Who built him fanes of fruitless prayer,

Who trusted Gol was love indeed And love Creation's final law— Tho' Nature, red in tooth and claw With ravine, shriek'd against his creed—

Who loved, who suffer'd countless ills, Who battled for the True, the Just, Be blown about the desert dust, Or seal'd within the iron hills?

No more? A monster then, a dream, A discord. Dragons of the prime, That tare each other in their slime, Were mellow music match'd with him.

O life as futile, then, as frail!
O for thy voice to soothe and bless!
What hope of answer, or redress?
Behind the veil, behind the veil.

LVII

Peace: come away: the song of woe Is atter all an earthly song.
Peace; come away: we do him wrong To sing so wildly: let us go.

Come; let us go: your cheeks are pale; But half my life I leave behind. Methinks my friend is richly shrined; But I shall pass, my work will fail.

Yet in these ears, till hearing dies,
One set slow bell will seem to toll
The passing of the sweetest soul
That ever look'd with human eyes,

I hear it now, and o'er and o'er, Eternal greetings to the dead; And "Ave, Ave, Ave," said, "Adieu, adieu," for evermore.

LATII

In those sad words I took farewell.

Like echoes in sepulchral halls,
As drop by drop the water falls
In vaults and catacombs, they fell;

And, falling, idly broke the peace
Of hearts that beat from day to day,
Half-conscious of their dying clay,
And those cold crypts where they shall cease.

The high Muse answer'd: "Wherefore grieve
Thy brethren with a fruitless tear?
Abide a little longer here,
And thou shalt take a nobler leave."

TVIV

Dost thou look back on what hath been, As some divinely gifted man, Whose life in low estate began And on a simple village green;

Who breaks his birth's invidious bar, And grasps the skirts of happy chance, And breasts the blows of circumstance, And grapples with his evil star;

Who makes by force his merit known And lives to clutch the golden keys, To mould a mighty state's decrees, And shape the whisper of the throne;

And moving up from high to higher, Becomes on Fortune's crowning slope The pillar of a people's hope, The center of a world's desire; Yet feels, as in a pensive dream,
When all his active powers are still,
A distant dearness in the hill,
A secret sweetness in the stream,

The limit of his narrower fate,
While yet beside its vocal springs
He play'd at counsellors and kings
With one that was his earliest mate;

Who ploughs with pain his native lea And reaps the labor of his hands, Or in the furrow musing stands: "Does my old friend remember me?"

LXVII

When on my bed the moonlight falls, I know that in thy place of rest By that broad water of the west There comes a glory on the walls:

Thy marble bright in dark appears,
As slowly steals a silver flame
Along the letters of thy name,
And o'er the number of thy years.

The mystic glory swims away,
From off my bed the moonlight dies;
And closing eaves of wearied eyes
I sleep till dusk is dipt in gray;

And then I know the mist is drawn
A lucid veil from coast to coast,
And in the dark church like a ghost
Thy tablet glimmers in the dawn.

LXXIV

As sometimes in a dead man's face,
To those that watch it more and more,
A likeness, hardly seen before,
Comes out—to some one of his race;

So, dearest, now thy brows are cold,
I see thee what thou art, and know
Thy likeness to the wise below,
Thy kindred with the great of old.

But there is more than I can see, And what I see I leave unsaid, Nor speak it, knowing Death has made His darkness beautiful with thee.

HYXXI

Again at Christmas did we weave
The holly round the Christmas hearth;
The silent snow possess'd the earth,
And calmly fell our Christmas-eve.

The yule-clog sparkled keen with frost, No wing of wind the region swept, But over all things brooding slept The quiet sense of something lost.

As in the winters left behind,
Again our ancient games had place,
The mimic picture's breathing grace,
And dance and song and hoodman-blind.

Who show'd a token of distress?
No single tear, no mark of pain—
O sorrow, then can sorrow wane?
O grief, can grief be changed to less?

O last regret, regret can die!
No—mixed with all this mystic frame,
Her deep relations are the same,
But with long use her tears are dry.

LXXXIII

Dip down upon the northern shore, O sweet new-year delaying long; Thou doest expectant Nature wrong; Delaying long, delay no more.

What stays thee from the clouded noons, Thy sweetness from its proper place; Can trouble live with April days, Or sadness in the summer moons?

Bring orchis, bring the foxglove spire, The little speedwell's darling blue, Deep tulips dash'd with fiery dew, Laburnums, dropping-wells of fire,

O thou, new-year, delaying long, Delayest the sorrow in my blood, That longs to burst a frozen bud And flood a fresher threat with song.

LXXXV

This truth came borne with bier and pall,
I felt it, when I sorrow'd most,
'T is better to have loved and lost,
Than never to have loved at all

O true in word, and tried in deed, Demanding, so to bring relief To this which is our common grief, What kind of life is that I lead;

And whether trust in things above Be dimm'd of sorrow, or sustain'd; And whether love for him have drain'd My capabilities of love;

Your words have virtue such as draws A faithful answer from the breast, Thro' light reproaches, half expressed. And loyal unto kindly laws.

My blood an even tenor kept,
Till on mine ear this message falls,
That in Vienna's fatal walls
God's finger touch'd him, and he slept

The great Intelligences fair
That range above our mortal state,
In circle round the blessed gate,
Received and gave him welcome there

And led him thro' the blissful climes, And show'd him in the fountain fresh All knowledge that the sons of flesh Shall gather in the cycled times. \

But I remain'd, whose hopes were dim, Whose life, whose thoughts were little worth,

To wander on a darken'd earth, Where all things round me breathed of him.

O friendship, equal-poised control,
O heart, with kindliest motion warm,
O sacred essence, other form,
O solemn ghost, O crowned soul!

Yet none could better know than I,
How much of act at human hands
The sense of human will demands
By which we dare to live or die.

Whatever way my days decline,
I felt and feel, tho' left alone,
His being working in mine own,
The footsteps of his life in mine;

A life that all the Muses deck'd With gifts of grace, that might express All-comprehensive tenderness, All-subtilizing intellect:

And so my passion hath not swerved To works of weakness, but I find An image comforting the mind, And in my grief a strength reserved.

Likewise the imaginative woe,

That loved to handle spiritual strife,
Diffused the shock thro' all my life,
But in the present broke the blow.

My pulses therefore beat again
For other friends that once I met;
Nor can it suit me to forget
The mighty hopes that make us men.

I woo your love: I count it crime
To mourn for any overmuch;
I, the divided half of such
A friendship as had master'd Time;

Which masters Time indeed, and is Eternal, separate from fears. The all-assuming months and years Can take no part away from this;

But Summer on the steaming floods,
And Spring that swells the narrow brooks.

And Autumn, with a noise of rooks, That gather in the waning woods,

And every pulse of wind and wave Recalls, in change of light or gloom, My old affection of the tomb, And my prime passion in the grave.

My old affection of the tomb,
A part of stillness, yearns to speak:
"Arise, and get thee forth and seek
A friendship for the years to come.

"I watch thee from the quiet shore; Thy spirit up to mine can reach; But in dear words of human speech We two communicate no more."

And I, "Can clouds of nature stain
The starry clearness of the free?
How is it? Canst thou feel for me
Some painless sympathy with pain?"

And lightly does the whisper fall:
"'T is hard for thee to fathom this;
I triumph in conclusive bliss,
And that serene result of all."

So hold I commerce with the dead; Or so methinks the dead would say; Or so shall grief with symbols play And pining life be fancy-fed.

Now looking to some settled end,
That those things pass, and I shall prove
A meeting somewhere, love with love,
I crave your pardon, O my friend;

If not so fresh, with love as true, I, clasping brother-hands, aver I could not, if I would, transfer The whole I felt for him to you.

For which be they that hold apart
The promise of the golden hours?
First love, first friendship, equal powers,

That marry with the virgin heart.

Still mine, that cannot but deplore, That beats within a lonely place, That yet remembers his embrace, But at his footstep leaps no more,

My heart, tho' widow'd, may not rest Quite in the love of what is gone, But seeks to beat in time with one That warms another living breast.

Ah, take the imperfect gift I bring, Knowing the primrose yet is dear. The primrose of the later year, As not unlike to that of Spring.

LXXXVI

Sweet after showers, ambrosial air,
That rollest from the gorgeous gloom
Of evening over brake and bloom
And meadow, slowly breathing bare

The round of space, and rapt below Thro' all the dewy tassell'd wood, And shadowing down the horned flood In ripples, fan my brows and blow

The fever from my cheek, and sigh
The full new life that feeds thy breath
Throughout my frame, till Doubt and
Death,

Ill brethren, let the fancy fly

From belt to belt of crimson seas
On leagues of odor streaming far,
To where in yonder orient star
A hundred spirits whisper "Peace."

LXXXVII

I past beside the reverend walls
In which of old I wore the gown;
I roved at random thro' the town,
And saw the tumult of the halls;

And heard once more in college fanes
The storm their high-built organs make,

And thunder-music, rolling, shake The prophet blazon'd on the panes;

And caught once more the distant shout,
The measured pulse of racing oars
Among the willows; paced the shores
And many a bridge, and all about.

The same gray flats again, and felt The same, but not the same; and last Up that long walk of limes I past To see the rooms in which he dwelt. Another name was on the door.

I linger'd; all within was noise
Of songs, and clapping hands, and boys

That crash'd the glass and beat the floor;

Where once we held debate, a band
Of youthful friends, on mind and art,
And labor, and the changing mart,
And all the framework of the land;

When one would aim an arrow fair, But send it slackly from the string; And one would pierce an outer ring, And one an inner, here and there;

And last the master-bowman, he, Would cleave the mark. A willing ear

We lent him. Who but hung to hear The rapt oration flowing free

From point to point, with power and grace

And music in the bounds of law, To those conclusions when we saw The God within him light his face,

And seem to lift the form, and glow In azure orbits heavenly-wise; And over those ethereal eyes The bar of Michael Angelo?

LXXXVIII

Wild bird, whose warble, liquid sweet, Rings Eden thro' the budded quicks, O, tell me where the senses mix, O, tell me where the passions meet,

Whence radiate: fierce extremes employ

Thy spirits in the darkening leaf, And in the midmost heart of grief Thy passion clasps a secret joy;

And I—my harp would prelude woe—
I cannot all command the strings;
The glory of the sum of things
Will flash along the chords and go.

XCVI

You say, but with no touch of scorn, Sweet-hearted, you, whose light-blue eyes

Are tender over drowning flies, You tell me, doubt is Devil-born.

I know not: one indeed I knew In many a subtle question versed, Who touch'd a jarring lyre at first, But ever strove to make it true;

Perplexed in faith, but pure in deeds, At last he beat his music out. There lives more faith in honest doubt, Believe me, than in half the creeds.

He fought his doubts and gather'd strength,

He would not make his judgment blind.

He faced the spectres of the mind And laid them; thus he came at length

To find a stronger faith his own,
And Power was with him in the night,
Which makes the darkness and the light,

And dwells not in the light alone,

But in the darkness and the cloud,
As over Sinai's peaks of old,
While Israel made their gods of gold,
Altho' the trumpet blew so loud.

XCVII

My love has talk'd with rocks and trees; He finds on misty mountain-ground His own vast shadow glory-crown'd; He sees himself in all he sees.

Two partners of a married life—
I look'd on these and thought of thee
In vastness and in mystery,
And of my spirit as of a wife.

These two—they dwelt with eye on eye,
Their hearts of old have beat in tune,
Their meetings made December June.
Their every parting was to die.

Their love has never past away;
The days she never can forget
Are earnest that he loves her yet,
Whate'er the faithless people say.

Her life is lone, he sits apart;
He loves her yet, she will not weep,
Tho' rapt in matters dark and deep
He seems to slight her simple heart.

He thrids the labyrinth of the mind,
He reads the secret of the star,
He seems so near and yet so far,
He looks so cold: she thinks him kind.

She keeps the gift of years before, A witherd violet is her bliss; She knows not what his greatness is, For that, for all, she loves him more. For him she plays, to him she sings Of early faith and plighted vows; She knows but matters of the house, And he, he knows a thousand things.

Her faith is fixed and cannot move, She darkly feels him great and wise. She dwells on him with faithful eyes, "I cannot understand; I love."

CII

We leave the well-beloved place
Where first we gazed upon the sky;
The roofs that heard our earliest cry
Will shelter one of stranger race.

We go, but ere we go from home,
As down the garden-walks I move,
Two spirits of a diverse love
Contend for loving masterdom.

One whispers, "Here thy boyhood sung Long since its matin song, and heard The low love-language of the bird In native hazels tassel-hung."

The other answers, "Yea, but here
Thy feet have stray'd in after hours
With thy lost friend among the
bowers,

And this hath made them trebly dear."

These two have striven half the day, And each prefers his separate claim, Poor rivals in a losing game, That will not yield each other way.

I turn to go; my feet are set
To leave the pleasant fields and farms;
They mix in one spether's arms

They mix in one another's arms To one pure image of regret.

CIV

The time draws near the birth of Christ;
The moon is hid, the night is still;
A single church below the hill
Is pealing, folded in the mist.

A single peal of bells below.

That wakens at this hour of rest
A single murmur in the breast,
That these are not the bells I know.

Like strangers' voices here they sound, In lands where not a memory strays. Nor landmark breathes of other days, But all is new unhallow'd ground.

CVI

Ring out, wild bells, to the wild sky,
The flying cloud, the frosty light:
The year is dying in the night;
Ring out, wild bells, and let him die.

Ring out the old, ring in the new,
Ring, happy bells, across the snow.
The year is going, let him go;
Ring out the false, ring in the true.

Ring out the grief that saps the mind, For those that here we see no more; Ring out the feud of rich and poor; Ring in redress to all mankind.

Ring out a slowly dying cause,
And ancient forms of party strife;
Ring in the nobler modes of life,
With sweeter manners, purer laws.

Ring out the want, the care, the sin,
The faithless coldness of the times
Ring out, ring out my mournful rhymes.

But ring the fuller minstrel in.

Ring out false pride in place and blood
The civic slander and the spite;
Ring in the love of truth and right,
Ring in the common love of good,

Ring out old shapes of foul disease; Ring out the narrowing lust of gold; Ring out the thousand wars of old, Ring in the thousand years of peace.

Ring in the valiant man and free,
The larger heart, the kindlier hand:
Ring out the darkness of the land.
Ring in the Christ that is to be.

CVIII

I will not shut me from my kınd, And, lest I stiffen into stone, I will not eat my heart alone, Nor feed with sighs a passing wind:

What profit lies in barren faith,
And vacant yearning, the with might
To scale the heaven's highest height.
Or dive below the wells of death?

What find I in the highest place.
But mine own phantom chanting hymns?

And on the depths of death there swims

The reflex of a human face.

I'll rather take what fruit may be
Of sorrow under human skies;
'T is held that sorrow makes us wise,
Whatever wisdom sleep with thee.

CXI

The churl in spirit, up or down
Along the scale of ranks, thro' all,
To him who grasps a golden ball,
By blood a king, at heart a clown,—

The churl in spirit, howe'er he veil His want in forms for fashion's sake, Will let his coltish nature break At seasons thro' the gilded pale;

For who can always act? but he,
To whom a thousand memories call,
Not being less but more than all
The gentleness he seem'd to be,

Best seem'd the thing he was, and join'd Each office of the social hour To noble manners, as the flower And native growth of noble mind;

Nor ever narrowness or spite, Or villain fancy fleeting by, Drew in the expression of an eye Where God and Nature met in light;

And thus he bore without abuse
The grand old name of gentleman,
Defamed by every charlatan,
And soil'd with all ignoble use.

CXIII

Tis held that sorrow makes us wise; Yet how much wisdom sleeps with thee

Which not alone had guided me, But served the seasons that may rise;

For can I doubt, who knew thee keen In intellect, with force and skill To strive, to fashion, to fulfil— I doubt not what thou wouldst have been:

A life in civic action warm,
A soul on highest mission sent,
A potent voice of Parliament,
A pillar steadfast in the storm,

Should licensed boldness gather force, Becoming, when the time has birth, A lever to uplift the earth And roll it in another course, With thousand shocks that come and

With agonies, with energies, With overthrowings, and with cries, And undulations to and fro.

CXIV

Who loves not Knowledge? Who shall rail

Against her beauty? May she mix With men and prosper! Who shall

Her pillars? Let her work prevail.

But on her forehead sits a fire;
She sets her forward countenance
And leaps into the future chance,
Submitting all things to desire.

Half-grown as yet, a child, and vain— She cannot fight the fear of death. What is she, cut from love and faith, But some wild Pallas from the brain

Of demons? fiery-hot to burst All barriers in her onward race For power. Let her know her place; She is the second, not the first.

A higher hand must make her mild, If all be not in vain, and guide Her footsteps, moving side by side With Wisdom, like the younger child;

For she is earthly of the mind,
But Wisdom heavenly of the soul.
O friend, who camest to thy goal
So early, leaving me behind,

I would the great world grew like thee, Who grewest not alone in power And knowledge, but by year and hour In reverence and in charity.

CXV

Now fades the last long streak of snow, Now burgeons every maze of quick About the flowering squares, and thick

By ashen roots the violets blow.

Now rings the woo lland loud and long.
The distance takes a lovelier hue,
And drown'd in yonder living blue
The lark becomes a sightless song.

Now dance the lights on lawn and lea, The flocks are whiter down the vale, And milkier every milky sail On winding stream or distant sea. Where now the seamew pipes, or dives
In yonder greening gleam, and fly
The happy birds, that change their sky

To build and brood, that live their lives

From land to land; and in my breast Spring wakens too, and my regret Becomes an April violet. And buds and blossoms like the rest.

CXVIII

Contemplate all this work of Time, The giant laboring in his youth; Nor dream of human love and truth, As dving Nature's earth and lime;

But trust that those we call the dead Are breathers of an ampler day For ever nobler ends. They say, The solid earth whereon we tread

In tracts of fluent heat began,
And grew to seeming-random forms,
The seeming prey of cyclic storms,
Till at the last arose the man;

Who throve and branch'd from clime to clime,

The herald of a higher race, And of himself in higher place, If so he type this work of time

Within himself, from more to more;
Or, crown'd with attributes of woe
Like glories, move his course, and show

That life is not as idle ore,

But iron dug from central gloom,
And heated hot with burning fears,
And dipped in baths of hissing tears,
And batter'd with the shocks of doom

To shape and use. Arise and fly
The reeling Faun, the sensual feast;
Move upward, working out the beast,
And let the ape and tiger die.

CXXIII

There rolls the deep where grew the tree.

O earth, what changes hast thouseen! There where the long street roars hath

The stillness of the central sea.

The hills are shadows, and they flow

From Sorm to form, and nothing stands.

They melt like mist, the solid lands, Like clouds they shape themselves and go.

But in my spirit will I dwell,
And dream my dream, and hold it true;
For tho' my lips may breathe adieu,
I cannot think the thing farewell.

CXXIV

That which we dare invoke to bless;
Our dearest faith; our ghastliest
doubt;

He, They, One, All; within, without; The Power in darkness whom we guess,—

I found Him not in world or sun, Or eagle's wing, or insect's eye, Nor thro' the questions men may try, The petty cobwebs we have spun.

If e'er when faith had fallen asleep, I heard a voice, "believe no more," And heard an ever-breaking shore That tumbled in the Godless deep,

A warmth within the breast would melt The freezing reason's colder part, And like a man in wrath the heart Stood up and answer'd, "I have felt."

No, like a child in doubt and fear:
But that blind clamor made me wise;
Then was I as a child that cries,
But, crying, knows his father near;

And what I am beheld again
What is, and no man understands;
And out of darkness came the hands
That reach thro' nature, moulding men.

CXXV

What ever I have said or sung,
Some bitter notes my harp would give,
Yea, tho' there often seem'd to live
A contradiction on the tongue,

Yet hope had never lost her youth,
She did but look through dimmer eyes;
Or Love but play'd with gracious lies,
Because he felt so fix'd in truth;

And if the song were full of care,
He breathed the spirit of the song;
And if the words were sweet and strong

He set his royal signet there;

Abiding with me till I sail
To seek thee on the mystic deeps,
And this electric force, that keeps
A thousand pulses dancing, fail.

CXXVI

Love is and was my lord and king, And in his presence I attend To hear the tidings of my friend, Which every hour his couriers bring.

Love is and was my king and lotd,
And will be, tho' as yet I keep
Within the court on earth, and sleep
Encompass'd by his faithful guard,

And hear at times a sentinel
Who moves about from place to place,
And whispers to the worlds of space,
In the deep night, that all is well.

CXXVII

And all is well, tho' faith and form
Be sunder'd in the night of fear;
Well roars the storm to those that hear
A deeper voice across the storm,

Proclaiming social truth shall spread, And justice, even the thrice again The red fool-fury of the Seine Should pile her barricades with dead.

But ill for him that wears a crown, And him, the lazar, in his rags! They tremble, the sustaining crags; The spires of ice are toppled down,

And molten up, and roar in flood;
The fortress crashes from on high,
The brute earth lightens to the sky,
And the great Æon sinks in blood,

And compass'd by the fires of hell;
While thou, dear spirit, happy star,
O'erlook'st the tumult from afar,
And smilest, knowing all is well.

CXXIX

Dear friend, far off, my lost desire, So far, so near in woe and weal, O loved the most, when most I feel There is a lower and a higher;

Known and unknown, human, divine; Sweet human hand and lips and eye; Dear heavenly friend that canst not die,

Mine, mine, for ever, ever mine;

Strange friend, past, present, and to be; Loved deeplier, darklier understood; Behold, I dream a dream of good, And mingle all the world with thee.

CXXX

Thy voice is on the rolling air;
I hear thee where the waters run;
Thou standest in the rising sun,
And in the setting thou art fair.

What art thou then? I cannot guess:
But tho' I seem in star and flower
To feel thee some diffusive power,
I do not therefore love thee less.

My love involves the love before;
My love is vaster passion now;
Tho' mix'd with God and Nature thou.
I seem to love thee more and more.

Far off thou art, but ever nigh;
I have thee still, and I rejoice;
I prosper, circled with thy voice;
I shall not lose thee tho' I die.

CXXXI

O living will that shalt endure
When all that seems shall suffer shock,
Rise in the spiritual rock,
Flow thro' our deeds and make them

pure,

That we may lift from out of dust
A voice as unto him that hears,
A cry above the conquer'd years
To one that with us works, and trust,

With faith that comes of self-control. The truths that never can be proved Until we close with all we loved, And all we flow from, soul in soul. 1833-49. 1850.

TO THE QUEEN 1

REVERED, beloved—O you that hold
A nobler office upon earth
Than arms, or power of brain, or birth
Could give the warrior kings of old,

Victoria,—since your Royal grace
To one of less desert allows
This laurel greener from the brows
Of him that utter'd nothing base;

Derefixed to the first edition of Tonnyson's Poems published after he became Poet Laureate.

And should your greatness, and the care
That yokes with empire, yield you time
To make demand of modern rhyme
If aught of ancient worth be there;

Then—while a sweeter music wakes,
And thro' wild March the throstle calls,
Where all about your palace-walls
The sun-lit almond-blossom shakes—

Take, Madam, this poor book of song;
For the the faults were thick as dust
In vacant chambers, I could trust
Your kindness. May you rule us long,

And leave us rulers of your blood
As noble till the latest day!
May children of our children say,

"She wrought her people lasting good;

- "Her court was pure; her life serene; God gave her peace; her land reposed; A thousand claims to reverence closed In her as Mother, Wife, and Queen;
- "And statesmen at her council met Who knew the seasons when to take Occasion by the hand, and make The bounds of freedom wider yet
- "By shaping some august decree Which kept her throne unshaken still, Broad-based upon her people's will, And compass'd by the inviolate sea."

THE EAGLE

FRAGMENT

HE clasps the crag with crooked hands, Close to the sun in lonely lands, Ring'd with the azure world, he stands.

The wrinkled sea beneath him crawls; He watches from his mountain walls, And like a thunderbolt he falls. 1851.

COME NOT WHEN I AM DEAD

To drop thy foolish tears upon my grave,

To transple round my fallen head, And vex the unhappy dust thou wouldst not save.

There let the wind sweep and the plover

But thou, go by.

Child, if it were thine error or thy crime I care no longer, being all unblest:
Wed whom thou wilt, but I am sick of time.

And I desire to rest.
Pass on, weak heart, and leave me where

I lie; Go by, go by. 1851.

ODE ON THE DEATH OF THE DUKE . OF WELLINGTON

1

Bury the Great Duke
With an empire's lamentation;
Let us bury the Great Duke

To the noise of the mourning of a mighty nation;

Mourning when their leaders fall

Mourning when their leaders fall, Warriors carry the warrior's pall, And sorrow darkens hamlet and hall.

II

Where shall we lay the man whom we deplore?

Here, in streaming London's central roar.

Let the sound of those he wrought for. And the feet of those he fought for, Echo round his bones for evermore.

TT

Lead out the pageant: sad and slow, As fits an universal woe, Let the long, long procession go,

And let the sorrowing crowd about it grow,
And let the mournful martial music blow:

The last great Englishman is low.

177

Mourn, for to us he seems the last, Remembering all his greatness in the past,

No more in soldier fashion will he greet With lifted hand the gazer in the street. O friends, our chief state-oracle is mute! Mourn for the man of long-enduring blood,

The statesman-warrior, moderate, reso-

Whole in himself, a common good. Mourn for the man of amplest influence, Yet clearest of ambitious crime, Our greatest yet with least pretence, Great in council and great in war,

Foremost captain of his time,
Rich in saving common-sense,
And, as the greatest only are,
In his simplicity sublime.
O good gray head which all men knew,
O voice from which their omens all men drew,

O iron nerve to true occasion true, O fallen at length that tower of strength Which stood four-square to all the winds that blew!

Such was he whom we deplore.
The long self-sacrifice of life is o'er.
The great World-victor's victor will be seen no more.

V

All is over and done, Render thanks to the Giver, England, for thy son. Let the bell be toll'd. Render thanks to the Giver, And render him to the mould. Under the cross of gold That shines over city and river, There he shall rest for ever Among the wise and the bold. Let the bell be toll'd. And a reverent people behold The towering car, the sable steeds. Bright let it be with its blazon'd deeds, Dark in its funeral fold. Let the bell be toll'd, And a deeper knell in the heart be

And the sound of the sorrowing anthem

Thro' the dome of the golden cross;
And the volleying cannon thunder his loss;

He knew their voices of old.
For many a time in many a clime
His captain's-ear has heard them boom
Bellowing victory, bellowing doom.
When he with those deep voices
wrought,

Guarding realms and kings from shame, With those deep voices our dead captain taught

The tyrant, and asserts his claim
In that dread sound to the great name
Which he has worn so pure of blame,
In praise and in dispraise the same,
A man of well-attemper'd frame.
O civic muse, to such a name,
To such a name for ages long,
To such a name.
Preserve a broad approach of fame,
And ever-echoing avenues of song t

"Who is he that cometh, like an hon or'd guest,
With banner and with music, with soldier and with priest,

Vith a nation weeping, and breaking

With a nation weeping, and breaking on my rest?"—

Mighty Seaman, this is he

Was great by land as thou by sea.
Thine island loves thee well, thou

The greatest sailor since our world be-

Now, to the roll of muffled drums, To thee the greatest soldier comes; For this is le

For this is Me
Was great by land as thou by sea.
His foes were thine; he kept us free;
O, give him welcome, this is he
Worthy of our gorgeous rites,
And worthy to be laid by thee;
For this is England's greatest son,
He that gain'd a hundred fights,
Nor ever lost an English gan;

This is he that far away Against the myriads of Assaye Clash'd with his fiery few and won;

And underneath another sun, Warring on a later day, Round affrighted Lisbon drew The treble works, the vast designs

Of his labor'd rampart-lines, Where he greatly stood at bay, Whence he issued forth anew, And ever great and greater grew,

Beating from the wasted vines Back to France her banded swarms, Back to France with countless blows,

Till o'er the hills her eagles flew Beyond the Pyrenean pines, Follow'd up in valley and glen

With blare of bugle, clamor of men, Roll of cannon and clash of arms, And England pouring on her foes, Such a war had such a close.

Again their ravening eagle rose In anger, wheel'd on Europe-shadowing

wings,
And barking for the thrones of kings;
Till one that sought but Duty's iron crown On that loud Sabbath shook the spoiler

down;
A day of onsets of despair!

Dash'd on every rocky square, Their surging charges foam'd themeselves away;

Last, the Prussian trumpet blew;

Thro' the long-tormented air Heaven flash'd a sudden jubilant ray, And down we swept and charged and overthrew.

So great a soldier taught us there What long-enduring hearts could do In that world-earthquake, Waterloo! Mighty Seaman, tender and true, And pure as he from taint of craven guile,

O saviour of the silver-coasted isle, O shaker of the Baltic and the Nile, If aught of things that here befall Touch a spirit among things divine. If love of country move thee there at all. Be glad, because his bones are laid by thine!

And thro' the centuries let a people's voice

In full acclaim, A people's voice,

The proof and echo of all human fame, A people's voice, when they rejoice At civic revel and pomp and game, Attest their great commander's claim With honor, honor, honor, honor to him, Eternal honor to his name.

A people's voice! we are a people yet. Tho' all men else their nobler dreams forget,

Confused by brainless mobs and lawless

Powers,

Thank Him who isled us here, and roughly set His Briton in blown seas and storming showers.

We have a voice with which to pay the

Of boundless love and reverence and regret

To those great men who fought, and kept it ours.

And keep it ours, O God, from brute control!

O Statesmen, guard us, guard the eye, the soul

Of Europe, keep our noble England whole.

And save the one true seed of freedom

Betwixt a people and their ancient throne,

That sober freedom out of which there

Our loyal passion for our temperate

For, saving that, ye help to save man-

Till public wrong be crumbled into dust. And drill the raw world for the march of mind,

Till crowds at length be sane and crowns be just.

But wink no more in slothful overtrust. Remember him who led your hosts; He bade you guard the sacred coasts. Your cannons moulder on the seaward wall:

His voice is silent in your council-hall For ever; and whatever tempests lour For ever silent; even if they broke In thunder, silent; yet remember all He spoke among you, and the Man who spoke; Who never sold the truth to serve the hour. Nor palter'd with Eternal God for power; Who let the turbid streams of rumor flow

Thro' either babbling world of high and

Whose life was work, whose language With rugged maxims hewn from life;

Who never spoke against a foe; Whose eighty winters freeze with one rebuke

All great self-seekers trampling on the right.

Truth-teller was our England's Alfred named:

Truth-lover was our English Duke! Whatever record leap to light He never shall be shamed.

For one about whose patriarchal knee

Peace, his triumph will be sung

By some yet unmoulded tongue Far on in summers that we shall not see.

Peace, it is a day of pain

Late the little children clung. O peace, it is a day of pain For one upon whose hand and heart and brain Once the weight and fate of Europe hung. Ours the pain, be his the gain! More than is of man's degree Must be with us, watching here At this, our great solemnity. Whom we see not we revere: We revere, and we refrain From talk of battles loud and vain, And brawling memories all too free For such a wise humility As befits a solemn fane: We revere, and while we hear The tides of Music's golden sea Setting toward eternity, plifted high in heart and hope are we, Until we doubt not that for one so true There must be other nobler work to do Than when he fought at Waterloo,

And Victor he must ever be. For the diant Ages heave the hill And break the shore, and evermore Make and break, and work their will. Tho' world on world in myriad myriads roll

THE CHARGE OF THE LIGHT BRIGADE 1

HALF a league, half a league, Half a league onward, All in the valley of Death Rode the six hundred. " Forward the Light Brigade! Charge for the guns!" he said. Into the valley of Death Rode the six hundred.

"Forward, the Light Brigade!" Was there a man dismay'd? Not the' the soldier knew Some one had blunder'd. Theirs not to make reply, Theirs not to reason why, Theirs but to do and die. Into the valley of Death Rode the six hundred.

Cannon to right of them, Cannon to left of them, Cannon in front of them Volley'd and thunder'd; Storm'd at with shot and shell, Boldly they rode and well, Into the jaws of Death, Into the mouth of hell Rode the six hundred.

Flash'd all their sabres bare, Flash'd as they turn'd in air

Sabring the gunners there, Charging an army, while All the world wonder'd. Plunged in the battery-smoke Right thro' the line they broke: Cossack and Russian Reel'd from the sabre-stroke Shatter'd and sunder'd. Then they rode back, but not, Not the six hundred.

Cannon to right of them. Cannon to left of them, Cannon behind them Volley'd and thunder'd: Storm'd at with shot and shell, While horse and hero fell, They that had fought so well Came thro' the jaws of Death, Back from the mouth of hell, All that was left of them, Left of six hundred.

When can their glory fade? O the wild charge they made! All the world wonder'd. Honor the charge they made! Honor the Light Brigade, Noble six hundred!

THE BROOK

I come from haunts of coot and hern I make a sudden sally, And sparkle out among the fern, To bicker down a valley.

By thirty hills I hurry down. Or slip between the ridges, By twenty thorps, a little town, And half a hundred bridges.

Till last by Philip's farm I flow To join the brimming river, For men may come and men may go But I go on forever.

I chatter over stony ways, In little sharps and trebles, I bubble into eddying bays, I babble on the pebbles.

With many a curve my banks I fret By many a field and fallow, And many a fairy foreland set With willow-weed and mallow.

I chatter, chatter, as I flow
To join the brimming river,
For men may come and men may go,
But I go on for ever.

I wind about, and in and out, With here a blossom sailing, And here and there a lusty trout, And here and there a grayling.

And here and there a foamy flake Upon me, as I travel With many a silvery water-break Above the golden gravel,

And draw them all along, and flow To join the brimming river, For men may come and men may go, But I go on for ever.

I steal by lawns and grassy plots, I slide by hazel covers; I move the sweet forget-me-nots That grow for happy lovers.

I slip, I slide, I gloom, I glance,
Among my skunming swallows:
I make the netted sunbeam dance
Against my sandy shallows.

I murmur under moon and stars
In brambly wildernesses;
I linger by my shingly bars,
I loiter round my cresses;

And out again I curve and flow
To join the brimming river,
For men may come and men may go,
But I go on forever.

LYRICS FROM MAUD1

PART I

V

A voice by the cedar tree
In the meadow under the Hall!
She is singing an air that is known to
me,

A passionate balled gallant and gay.
A martial song like a trumpet's call!
Singing alone in the morning of life.
In the happy morning of life and of May.
Singing of men that in battle array,
Ready in heart and ready in hand.
March with banner and bugle and fife
To the death, for their native land.

Maud with her exquisite face, And wild voice pealing up to the sunny

sky.
And feet like sunny gems on an English

green.
Maud in the light of her youth and her grace, Singing of Death, and of Honor that

Singing of Death, and of Honor that cannot die,

Till I well could weep for a time so sordid and mean,

And myself so languid and base.

Silence, beautiful voice!
Be still, for you only trouble the mind
With a joy in which I cannot rejoice,
A glory I shall not find.
Still! I will hear you no more,

For your sweetness hardly leaves me a choice

But to move to the meadow and fall before

Her feet on the meadow grass, and adore,

Not her, who is neither courtly nor kind. Not her, not her, but a voice.

XI

O, let the solid ground
Not fail beneath my feet
Before my life has found
What some have found so sweet!
Then let come what come may,
What matter if I go mad,
I shall have had my day.

Let the sweet heavens endure,
Not close and darken above me
Before I am quite quite sure
That there is one to love me!
Then let come what come may
To a life that has been so sad,
I shall have had my day.

Birds in the high Hall-garden When twilight was falling, Maud, Maud, Maud, They were crying and calling.

Where was Maud? in our wood;
And I—who else?—was with her
Gathering woodland lilies,
Myriads blow together.

Birds in our wood sang
Ringing thro' the valleys,
Maud is here, here, here
In among the lilies.

¹ See the Life of Tennyson, I, 393 406.

I kiss'd her slender hand, She took the kiss secately; Mand is not seventeen. But she is tall and stately.

ato erv out on pride Who have won her favor? O. Maud were sure of heaven If lowliness could save her!

I know the way she went Home with her maiden posy, For her feet have touch'd the meadows And left the daisies rosy.

Birds in the high Hall-garden Were crying and calling to her, Where is Maud, Maud, Maud? One is come to woo her.

Look, a horse at the door, And little King Charley snarling! Go back, my lord, across the moor. You are not her darling.

XVII

Go not, happy day, From the shining fields, Go not, happy day, Till the maiden yields. Rosy is the West, Rosy is the South, Roses are her cheeks, And a rose her mouth. When the happy Yes Falters from her lips, Pass and blush the news Over glowing ships; Over blowing seas, Over seas at rest, Pass the happy news, Blush it thro' the West; Till the red man dance By his red cedar-tree, And the red man's babe Leap, beyond the sea. Blush from West to East, Blush from East to West, Till the West is East. Blush it thro' the West. Rosy is the West, Rosy is the South, Roses are her cheeks,

And a rose her mouth. IIII/Z

1 have led her home, my love, my only

There is none like her, none.

And never yet so warmly ran my blood And sweetly, on and on

Calming itself to the long-wish'd-for end, Full to the banks, close on the promised good.

None like her, none.

Just now the dry-tongued laurels' pattering talk

Seem'd her light foot along the garden walk.

And shook my heart to think she comes once more.

But even then I heard her close the door; The gates of heaven are closed, and she is gone.

There is none like her, none,

Nor will be when our summers have deceased.

O, art thou sighing for Lebanon

In the long breeze that streams to thy delicious East,

Sighing for Lebanon,

Dark cedar, tho' thy limbs have here increased,

Upon a pastoral slope as fair, And looking to the South and fed With honey'd rain and delicate air, And haunted by the starry head

Of her whose gentle will has changed my

And made my life a perfumed altarflame:

And over whom thy darkness must have spread With such delight as theirs of old, thy great Forefathers of the thornless garden, there

Shadowing the snow-limb'd Eve from whom she came?

Here will I lie, while these long branches

And you fair stars that crown a happy Go in and out as if at merry play,

Who am no more so all ferlorn As when it seem'd far better to be born

To labor and the mattock-harden'd hand Than nursed at ease and brought to understand

A sad astrology, the boundless plan That makes you tyrants in your iron skies.

Innumerable, pitiless, passionless eyes, Cold fires, yet with power to burn and brand

His nothingness into man.

But now shine on, and what care I Who in this stormy gulf have found a

The countercharm of space and hollow

And do accept my madness, and would

To save from some slight shame one simple girl?—

Nould die, for sullen-seeming Death may give

More life to Love than is or ever was In our low world, where yet 't is sweet to live.

Let no one ask me how it came to pass; It seems that I am happy, that to me A livelier emerald twinkles in the grass, A purer sapphire melts into the sea.

Not die, but live a life of truest breath, And teach true life to fight with mortal wrongs.

O, why should Love, like men in drinking songs,

Spice his fair banquet with the dust of death?

Make answer, Maud my bliss,

Maud made my Maud by that long loving

Life of my life, wilt thou not answer this?

"The dusky strand of Death inwoven

With dear Love's tie, makes Love himself more dear.'

Is that enchanted moan only the swell Of the long waves that roll in yonder bay?

And hark the clock within, the silver knell

Of twelve sweet hours that past in bridal white.

And died to live, long as my pulses

But now by this my love has closed her sight, And given false death her hand, and stolen away

To dreamful wastes where footless fancies dwell

Among the fragments of the golden day.

May nothing there her maiden grace affright!

Dear heart, I feel with thee the drowsy

My bride to be, my evermore delight,

My own heart's heart, my ownest own, farewell:

It is but for a little space I go.

And ve meanwhile far over moor and Beat to the noiseless music of the night! Has our whole earth gone nearer to the

Of your soft splendors that you look so bright?

I have climb'd nearer out of lonely hell. Beat, happy stars, timing with things below,

Beat with my heart more blest than heart can tell.

Blest, but for some dark undercurrent

That seems to draw—but it shall not be Let all be well, be well.

IXX

Rivulet crossing my ground, And bringing me down from the Hall This garden-rose that I found, Forgetful of Maud and me, And lost in trouble and moving round Here at the head of a tinkling fall, And trying to pass to the sea; O rivulet, born at the Hall, My Maud has sent it by thee— If I read her sweet will right— On a blushing mission to me, Saying in odor and color, "Ah be Among the roses to-night."

IIXX

Come into the garden, Maud, For the black bat, night, has flown, Come into the garden, Maud, I am here at the gate alone; And the woodbine spices are wafted abroad.

And the musk of the rose is blown.

For a breeze of morning moves, And the planet of love is on high, Beginning to faint in the light that she loves

On a bed of daffodil sky, To faint in the light of the sun she loves To faint in his light, and to die.

All night have the roses heard The flute, violin, bassoon;

All night has the casement jessamine stirr'd

To the dancers dancing in tune; Till a silence fell with the waking bird, And a hush with the setting moon.

I said to the lily. "There is but one.
With whom she has heart to be gay.
When will the dancers leave her alone?
She is weary of dance and play."
You held to the setting many are cone.

Now half to the setting moon are gone.

And half to the rising day;

Low on the sand and lond on the stone

Low on the sand and loud on the stone.

The last wheel echoes away.

I said to the rose, "The brief night goes In babble and revel and wine. O young lord-lover, what sighs are those, For one that will never be thine? But mine, but mine," so I sware to the rose,

"For ever and ever, mine."

And the soul of the rose went into my

As the music clash'd in the Hall;
And long by the garden lake I stood,
For I heard your rivulet fall
From the lake to the meadow and on to the wood,

Our wood, that is dearer than all;

From the meadow your walks have left so sweet

That whenever a March-wind sighs
He sets the jewel-print of your feet
In violets blue as your eyes,
To the woody hollows in which we meet

And the valleys of Paradise.

The slender acacia would not shake
One long milk-bloom on the tree;
The white lake-blossom fell into the lake

As the pimpernel dozed on the lea;
But the rose was awake all night for your sake,

Knowing your promise to me; The lilies and roses were all awake, They sigh'd for the dawn and thee.

Queen rose of the rosebud garden of girls,

Come hither, the dances are done, In gloss of satin and glimmer of pearls, Queen lily and rose in one; [curls, Shine out, little head, sunning over with To the flowers, and be their sun.

There has fallen a splendid tear
From the passion-flower at the gate,
She is coming, my dove, my dear;
She is coming, my life, my fate.
The red rose cries, "She is near, she is near;"

And the white rose weeps, "She is late;"

The larkspur listens, "I hear, I hear;"
And the lily whispers, "I wait."

She is coming, my own, my sweet;
Were it ever so airy a tread,
My heart would hear her and beat,
Were it earth in an earthy bed;
My dust would hear her and beat,
Had I lain for a century dead,
Would start and tremble under her feet
And blossom in purple and red.

PART II

 Π

SEE what a lovely shell,
Small and pure as a pearl,
Lying close to my foot,
Frail, but a work divine,
Made so fairily well
With delicate spire and whorl,
How exquisitely minute,
A miracle of design!

What is it? a learned man Could give it a clumsy name. Let him name it who can, The beauty would be the same.

The tiny cell is forlorn, Void of the little living will That made it stir on the shore. Did he stand at the diamond door Of his house in a rainbow frill? Did he push, when he was uncurl'd A golden foot or a fairy horn Thro' his dim water-world?

Slight, to be crush'd with a tap Of my finger-nail on the sand, Small, but a work divine, Frail, but of force to withstand, Year upon year, the shock Of cataract seas that snap The three-decker's oaken spine Athwart the ledges of rock, Here on the Breton strand!

Breton, not Briton: here
Like a shipwreck'd man on a coast
Of ancient fable and fear—
Plagued with a flitting to and fro,
A disease, a hard mechanic ghost
That never came from on high
Nor ever arose from below,
But only moves with the moving eye,
Flying along the land and the main—

Why should it look like Maud? Am I to be overawe! By what I cannot but know Is a juggle born of the brain?

Back from the Breton coast, Sick of a nameless fear, Back to the dark sea-line Looking, thinking of all I have lost; An old song vexes my ear, But that of Lamech is mine.

For years, a measurcless ill, for years, for ever, to part—But she, she would love me still; And as long, O God, as she Have a grain of love for me, So long, no doubt, no doubt, Shall I nurse in my dark heart, However weary, a spark of will Not to be trampled out.

Strange, that the mind, when fraught With a passion so intense
One would think that it well
Might drown all life in the eye.—
That it should, by being so overwrought,
Suddenly strike on a sharper sense
For a shell, or a flower, little things
Which else would have been past by!
And now I remember, I,
When he lay dying there,
I noticed one of his many rings—
For he had many, poor worm—and
thought,

It is his mother's hair.

Who knows if he be dead?
Whether I need have fled?
Am I guilty of blood?
However this may be,
Comfort her, comfort her, all things
good,

While I am over the sea!

Let me and my passionate love go by,

But speak to her all things holy and
high,

Whatever happen to me!
Me and my harmful love go by;
But come to her waking, find her asleep,
Powers of the height, Powers of the deep,

And comfort her tho' I die!

TV

O that 't were possible After long grief and pain To find the arms of my true love Round me once again! When I was wont to meet her In the silent woody places By the home that gave me birth, We stood tranced in long embraces Mixed with kisses sweeter, sweeter Than anything on earth.

A shadow flits before me, Not thou, but like to thee. Ah, Christ, that it were possible For one short hour to see The souls we loved, that they might tell

What and where they be!

It leads me forth at evening,
It lightly winds and steals
In a cold white robe before me,
When all my spirit reels
At the shouts, the leagues of lights,
And the roaring of the wheels.

Half the night I waste in sighs, Half in dreams I sorrow after The delight of early skies; In a wakeful doze I sorrow For the hand, the lips, the eyes, For the meeting of the morrow, The delight of happy laughter, The delight of low replies.

'T is a morning pure and sweet, And a dewy splendor falls On the little flower that clings To the turrets and the walls; 'T is a morning pure and sweet, And the light and shadow fleet.

She is walking in the meadow, And the woodland echo rings; In a moment we shall meet. She is singing in the meadow, And the rivulet at her feet Ripples on in light and shadow To the ballad that she sings.

Do I hear her sing as of old,
My bird with the shining head,
My own dove with the tender eye?
But there rings on a sudden a passionate

There is some one dying or dead,
And a sullen thunder is roll'd;
For a tumult shakes the city,
And I wake, my dream is fled.
In the shuddering dawn, behold,
Without knowledge, without pity,
by the curtains of my bed
That abiding phantom cold!

Get thee hence, nor come again, Mix not memory with doubt, Pass, thou deathlike type of pain, Pass and cease to move about! T is the blot upon the brain Phat will show itself without.

Then I rise, the eave-drops fall, And the yellow vapors choke The great city sounding wide; The day comes, a dull red ball Wrapt in drifts of lurid smoke On the misty river-tide.

Thro' the hubbub of the market I steal, a wasted frame; It crosses here, it crosses there, Thro' all that crowd confused and loud, The shadow still the same; And on my heavy eyelids My anguish hangs like shame.

Alas for her that met me, That heard me softly call, Came glimmering thro' the laurels At the quiet evenfall, In the garden by the turrets Of the old manorial hall!

Would the happy spirit descend From the realms of light and song, In the chamber or the street, As she looks among the blest, Should I fear to greet my friend Or to say "Forgive the wrong," Or to ask her, "Take me, sweet, To the regions of thy rest"?

But the broad light glares and beats, And the shadow flits and fleets And will not let me be; And I loathe the squares and streets, And the faces that one meets, Hearts with no love for me. Always I long to creep Into some still cavern deep, There to weep, and weep, and weep My whole soul out to thee. 1855.

WILL

O, WELL for him whose will is strong!
He suffers, but he will not suffer long;
He suffers, but he cannot suffer wrong.
For him nor moves the loud world's random mock,

Nor all Calamity's hugest waves confound,

Who seems a promontory of rock,

That, compass'd round with turbulent sound,

In middle ocean meets the surging shock, Tempest-buffeted, citadel-crown'd.

But ill for him who, bettering not with time.

Corrupts the strength of heaven-descended Will,

And ever weaker grows thro' acted crime;

Or seeming-genial venial fault.
Recurring and suggesting still!
He seems as one whose footsteps halt,
Toiling in immeasurable sand,
And o'er a weary sultry land,
Far beneath a blazing vault,
Sown in a wrinkle of the monstrous
hill,

The city sparkles like a grain of salt.
1855.

ENID'S SONG

TURN, Fortune, turn thy wheel, and lower the proud;

Turn thy wild wheel thro' sunshine, storm, and cloud;

Thy wheel and thee we neither love nor hate.

Turn, Fortune, turn thy wheel with smile or frown;
With that wild wheel we go not up or down; Our hoard is little, but our hearts are

Smile and we smile, the lords of many lands:

great.

Frown and we smile, the lords of our own hands;

For man is man and master of his fate.

Turn, turn thy wheel above the staring crowd;

Thy wheel and thou are shadows in the cloud;

Thy wheel and thee we neither love nor hate.

From the Marriage of Geraint, 1859.

VIVIEN'S SONG

In love, if love be love, if love be ours, Faith and unfaith can ne'er be equal powers:

Unfaith in aught is want of faith in all

It is the little rift within the lute, That by and by will make the music mute. And ever widening slowly silence all.

The little rift within the lover's lute, Or little pitted speck in garner'd fruit, That rotting inward slowly moulders all.

It is not worth the keeping; let it go: But shall it? answer, darling, answer, no. And trust me not at all or all in all. From Merlin and Vivien, 1859.

ELAINE'S SONG

SWEET is true love tho' given in vain, in vain:

And sweet is death who puts an end to pain.

I know not which is sweeter, no, not I.

Love, art thou sweet? then bitter death must be.

Love, thou art bitter; sweet is death to

O Love, if death be sweeter, let me die.

Sweet love, that seems not made to fade away;

Sweet death, that seems to make us loveless clay:

I know not which is sweeter, no, not I.

I fain would follow love, if that could be:

I needs must follow death, who calls for me:

Call and I follow. I follow! let me die. From Lancelot and Elaine, 1859.

GUINEVERE

QUEEN GUINEVERE had fled the court, and sat

There in the holy house at Almesbury Weeping, none with her save a little maid,

A novice. One low light betwixt them

Blurr'd by the creeping mist, for all abroad.

Beneath a moon unseen albeit at full, The white mist, like a face-cloth to the

Clung to the dead earth, and the land was still.

For hither had she fled, her cause of flight

Sir Modred; he that like a subtle beast Lay couchant with his eyes upon the throne,

Ready to spring, waiting a chance. For

He chill'd the popular praises of the King

With silent smiles of slow disparagement;

And tamper'd with the Lords of the White Horse.

Heathen, the brood by Hengist left; and sought

To make disruption in the Table Round Of Arthur, and to splinter it into feuds Serving his traitorous end; and all his aims

Were sharpen'd by strong hate for Lancelot.

For thus it chanced one morn when all

the court,
Green-suited, but with plumes that mock'd the May,

Had been-their wont-a-maying and return'd,

That Modred still in green, all ear and eve.

Climb'd to the high top of the garden-

To spy some secret scandal if he might, And saw the Queen who sat betwixt her

Enid and lissome Vivien, of her court The wiliest and the worst; and more than this

He saw not, for Sir Lancelot passing by Spied where he couch'd, and as the gardener's hand

Picks from the colewort a green caterpillar,

So from the high wall and the flowering

Of grasses Lancelot pluck'd him by the heel.

And cast him as a worm upon the way: But when he knew the prince the' marr'd with dust,

He, reverencing king's blood in a bad

Made such excuses as he might, and Full knightly without scorn. For in those days

No knight of Arthur's noblest dealt in scorn;

But, if a man were halt, or hunch'd, in By those whom God had made fulllimb'd and tall,

Scorn was allow'd as part of his defect, And he was answer'd softly by the King And all his Table. So Sir Lancelot holp To raise the prince, who rising twice or thrice

Full sharply smote his knees, and smiled.

and went:

But, ever after, the small violence done Rankled in him and ruffled all his heart, As the sharp wind that rufiles all day long

A little bitter pool about a stone

On the bare coast.

But when Sir Lancelot told This matter to the Queen, at first she laugh'd

Lightly, to think of Modred's dusty fall, Then shudder'd, as the village wife who cries.

"I shudder, some one steps across my grave:"

Then laugh'd again, but faintlier, for indeed

She half-foresaw that he, the subtle beast, Would track her guilt until he found, and hers

Would be for evermore a name of scorn. Henceforward rarely could she front in

Or elsewhere, Modred's narrow foxy face, Heart-hiding smile, and gray persistent

Henceforward too, the Powers that tend the soul.

To help it from the death that cannot die,

And save it even in extremes, began To vex and plague her. Many a time for Beside the placid breathings of the King. In the dead night, grim faces came and

Before her, or a vague spiritual fear-Like to some doubtful noise of creaking doors.

Heard by the watcher in a haunted house.

That keeps the rust of murder on the

Held her awake; or if she slept she [stand dream'd

An awful dream, for then she seem'd to On some vast plain before a setting sun, And from the sun there swiftly made at

A ghastly something, and its shadow flew Before it till it touch'd her, and she turn'dWhen lo! her own, that broadening from her feet.

And blackening, swallow'd all the land, and in it

Far cities burnt, and with a cry she woke.

And all this trouble did not pass but grew.

Till even the clear face of the guileless King,

And trustful courtesies of household life, Became her bane; and at the last she said:

"O Lancelot, get thee hence to thine own land,

For if thou tarry we shall meet again, And if we meet again some evil chance Will make the smouldering scandal break and blaze

Before the people and our lord the King." And Lancelot ever promised, but remain'd

And still they met and met. Again she said.

"O Lancelot, if thou love me get thee hence.

And then they were agreed upon a night-When the good King should not be there

-to meet And part for ever. Vivien, lurking, heard. She told Sir Modred. Passion-pale they met And greeted. Hands in hands, and eye to eve. Low on the border of her couch they sat

Stammering and staring. It was their last hour, A madness of farewells. And Modred brought His creatures to the basement of the tower For testimony; and crying with full voice.

"Traitor, come out, ye are trapped at last," aroused

Lancelot, who rushing outward lionlike Leapt on him, and hurl'd him headlong, and he fell

Stunn'd and his creatures took and bare him off,

And all was still. Then she, "The end is come.

And I am shamed for ever; " and he said:

"Mine be the shame, mine was the si" ; but rise,

And fly to my strong castle over-seas.

There will I hide thee till my life shall end,

There hold thee with my life against the world."

She answer'd: "Lancelot, wilt thou hold me so?

Nay, friend, for we have taken our farewells.

Would God that thou couldst hide me from myself!

Mine is the shame, for I was wife, and thou

Unwedded; yet rise now, and let us fly, For I will draw me into sanctuary,

And bide my doom." So Lancelot got her horse,

Set her thereon, and mounted on his own,

And then they rode to the divided way, There kiss'd, and parted weeping; for he passed,

Love-loyal to the least wish of the Queen, Back to his land; but she to Almesbury Fled all night long by glimmering waste and weald.

And heard the spirits of the waste and weald

Moan as she fled, or thought she heard them moan.

And in herself she moan'd, "Too late, too late!"

Till in the cold wind that foreruns the morn.

A blot in heaven, the raven, flying high, Croak'd, and she thought, "He spies a field of death;

For now the heathen of the Northern

Lured by the crimes and frailties of the court,
Begin to slay the folk and spoil the land."

And when she came to Almesbury she

And when she came to Almesbury she spake

There to the nuns, and said, "Mine enemies

Pursue me, but, O peaceful Sisterhood, Receive and yield me sanctuary, nor ask Her name to whom ye yield it till her time

To tell you; " and her beauty, grace, and power

Wrought as a charm upon them, and they spared

To ask it.

So the stately Queen abode For many a week, unknown, among the nuns, Nor with them mix'd, nor told her name, nor sought,

Wrapt in her grief, for housel or for shrift,

But communed only with the little maid,

Who pleased her with a babbling heed-

Which often lured her from herself; but now.

This night, a rumor wildly blown about Came that Sir Modred had usurp'd the realm

And leagued him with the heathen, while the King

Was waging war on Lancelot. Then she thought,

"With what a hate the people and the King

Must hate me "and bow'd down upon her hands

Silent, until the little maid, who brook'd No silence, brake it, uttering "Late! so late!

What, hour, I wonder now?" and when she drew

No answer, by and by began to hum An air the nuns had taught her: "Late, so late!"

Which when she heard, the Queen look'd up and said.

"O maiden, if indeed ye list to sing, Sing, and unbind my heart that I may weep."

Whereat full willingly sang the little maid.

Late, late, so late! and dark the night and chill!

Late, late, so late! but we can enter still.
Too late, too late! ye cannot enter now.

"No light had we; for that we do repent, And learning this, the bridegroom will relent. Too late, too late! ye cannot enter now.

"No light! so late! and dark and chill the night!

O let us in, that we may find the light!
Too late, too late! ye cannot enter now.

"Have we not heard the bridegroom is so sweet! O, let us in, tho' late, to kiss his feet!

O, let us in, tho' late, to kiss his feet! No, no, too late! ye cannot enter now."

So sang the novice, while full passionately,

Her head upon her hands, remembering Her thought when first she came, wept the sad Queen.

Then said the little novice, prattling to her:

"O pray you, noble lady, weep no

But let my words—the words of one so small.

Who knowing nothing knows but to

And if I do not there is penance given— Comfort your sorrows, for they do not flow

From evil done; right sure am I of that, Who sees your tender grace and stateliness.

But weigh your sorrows with our lord the King's,

And weighing find them less; for gone is he

To wage grim war against Sir Laucelot there,

Round that strong castle where he holds the Queen:

And Modred whom he left in charge of all.

The traitor—Ah, sweet lady, the King's grief

For his own self, and his own Queen and realm.

Must needs be thrice as great as any of

For me, I thank the saints, I am not great;

For if there ever come a grief to me I cry my cry in silence, and have done; None knows it, and my tears have brought me good.

But even were the griefs of little ones
As great as those of great ones, yet this grief

Is added to the griefs the great must bear,

That, howsoever much they may desire Silence, they cannot weep behind a cloud;

As even here they talk at Almesbury About the good King and his wicked Queen.

And were I such a King with such a Queen,

Well might I wish to veil her wicked-

But were I such a King it could not be."

Then to her own sad heart mutter'd the Queen,

"Will the child kill me with her innocent talk?"

But openly she answer'd, "Must not I, If this files traiter have displace I his lord, [realm?" Grieve with the common grief of all the

"Yea," sail the maid, "that all is woman's grief,

That she is woman, whose disloyal life
Hath wrought confusion in the Table
Round

Which good King Arthur founded, years ago,

With signs and miracles and wonders,

At Camelot, ere the coming of the Queen."

Then thought the Queen within herself again,

"Will the child kill me with her foolish prate?"

But openly she spake and said to her,
"O little maid, shut in by nunnery
walls,

What canst thou know of Kings and Tables Round,

Or what of signs and wonders, but the signs

And simple miracles of thy nunnery?"

To whom the little novice garrulously: "Yea, but I know; the land was full of signs

And wonders ere the coming of the Queen.

So said my father, and himself was knight

Of the great Table—at the founding of it,

And rode thereto from Lyonnesse; and he said

That as he rode, an hour or maybe twain After the sunset, down the coast, he heard

Strange music, and he paused, and turning—there,

All down the lonely coast of Lyonnesse, Each with a beacon-star upon his head, And with a wild sea-light about his feet, He saw them—headland after headland flame

Far on into the rich heart of the west.
And in the light the white mermaiden swam,

And strong man-breasted things stood from the sea,

And sent a deep sea-voice thro' all the land.

To which the little elves of chasm and cleft

Made answer, sounding like a distant horn.

So said my father—yea, and furthermore, Next morning, while he past the dim-lit woods

Himself beheld three spirits mad with joy

Come dashing down on a tall wayside flower.

That shook beneath them as the thistle shakes

When three gray linnets wrangle for the seed.

And still at evenings on before his horse

The flickering fairy-circle wheel'd and broke

Flying, and link'd again, and wheel'd and broke

Flying, for all the land was full of life. And when at last he came to Camelot, A wreath of airy dancers hand-in-hand

Swung round the lighted lantern of the hall;

And in the hall itself was such a feast
As never man had dream'd; for every knight

Had whatsoever meat he long'd for served

By hands unseen; and even as he said Down in the cellars merry bloated things Shoulder'd the spigot, straddling on the butts

While the wine ran; so glad were spirits

Before the coming of the sinful Queen."

Then spake the Queen and somewhat bitterly,

"Were they so glad? ill prophets were they all,

Spirits and men. Could none of them foresee,

Not even thy wise father with his signs And wonders, what has fallen upon the realm?"

To whom the novice garrulously again:

"Yea, one, a bard, of whom my father said,

Full many a noble war-song had he sung, Even in the presence of an enemy's fleet.

Between the steep cliff and the coming wave;

And many a mystic lay of life and death
Had chanted on the smoky mountaintops,

When round him bent the spirits of the

When round him bent the spirits of the hills

With all their dewy hair blown back like flame.

So said my father—and that night the

Sang Arthur's glorious wars, and sang the King

As wellnigh more than man, and rail'd at those

Who call'd him the false son of Gorloïs.

For there was no man knew from whence he came;

But after tempest, when the long wave broke

All down the thundering shores of Bude and Bos,

There came a day as still as heaver: . nd then

They found a naked child upon the

Of dark Tintagil by the Cornish sea,

And that was Arthur, and they foster'd him

Till he by miracle was approven King; And that his grave should be a mystery From all men, like his birth; and could

A woman in her womanhood as great As he was in his manhood, then, he

The twain together well might change the world.

But even in the middle of his song

He falter'd, and his hand fell from the harp,

And pale he turn'd and reel'd, and would have fallen,

But that they stay'd him up; nor would he tell

His vision; but what doubt that he fore-

This evil work of Lancelot and the Queen?"

Then thought the Queen, "Lo! they have set her on,

Our simple-seeming abbessand her nuns, To play upon me," and bow'd her head nor spake.

Whereat the novice crying, with clasp'd hands,

Shame on her own garrulity garrulously, Said the good nuns would check her gadding tongue

Full often, "aud, sweet lady, if I seem To vex an ear too sad to listen to me, Unmannerly, with prattling and the

Which my good father told me, check me too Nor let me shame my father's memory,

Of noblest manners, tho' himself would

Sir Lancelot had the noblest: and he

Kill'd in a tilt, come next, five summers

And left me; but of others who remain, And of the two first-famed for courtesv -

And pray you check me if I ask amiss-But pray you, which had noblest, while you moved

Among them, Lancelot or our lord the King?"

Then the pale Queen look'd up and answer'd her:

"Sir Lancelot, as became a noble knight, Was gracious to all ladies, and the same In open battle or the tilting-field

Forbore his own advantage, and the King

In open battle or the tilting-field

Forbore his own advantage, and these

Were the most nobly manner'd men of all:

For manners are not idle, but the fruit Of loyal nature and of noble mind."

"Yea," said the maid, "be manners such fair fruit?

Then Lancelot's needs must be a thousand-fold

Less noble, being, as all rumor runs, The most disloyal friend in all the world."

To which a mournful answer made the Queen:

"O, closed about by narrowing nunnery-

What knowest thou of the world and all its lights

And shadows, all the wealth and all the woe?

If ever Lancelot, that most noble knight, Were for one hour less noble than himself.

Pray for him that he scape the doom of fire.

And weep for her who drew him to his doom."

"Yea," said the little novice, "I pray for both:

But I should all as soon believe that his,

Sir Lancelot's, were as noble as the

King's,
As I could think, sweet lady, yours would be

Such as they are, were you the sinful Queen."

So she, like many another babbler hurt

Whom she would soothe, and harm'a where she would heal:

For here a sudden flush of wrathful heat Fired all the pale face of the Queen, who cried:

"Such as thou art be never maiden more For ever! thou their tool, set on to olague

And play upon and harry me, petty spy And traitress!" When that storm of anger brake

From Guinevere, aghast the maiden rose, White as her veil, and stood before the Queen

As tremulously as foam upon the beach Stands in a wind, ready to break and fly, And when the Queen had added, "Get thee hence!"

Fled frighted. Then that other left alone

Sigh'd, and began to gather heart again, Saying in herself: "The simple, fearful child

Meant nothing, but my own too-fearful guilt.

Simpler than any child, betrays itself. But help me, Heaven, for surely I repent!

For what is true repentance but in thought-

Not even in inmost thought to think again

The sins that made the past so pleasant to us?

And I have sworn never to see him more. To see him more."

And even in saving this Her memory from old habit of the mind Went slipping back upon the golden days In which she saw him first, when Lancelot came.

Reputed the best knight and goodliest man.

Ambassador, to yield her to his lord Arthur, and led her forth, and far ahead Of his and her retinue moving, they, Rapt in sweet talk or lively, all on love

And sport and tilts and pleasure,—for the time

Was may-time, and as yet no sin was dream'd,—

Rode under groves that look'd a paradise Of blossom, over sheets of hyacinth

That seem'd the heavens upbreaking thro' the earth.

And on from hill to hill, and every day Beheld at noon in some delicious dale The silk pavilions of King Arthur raised For brief repast or afternoon repose

By couriers gone before; and on again, Till yet once more ere set of sun they

The Dragon of the great Pendragonship,
That crown'd the state pavilion of the King,

Blaze by the rushing brook or silent well.

But when the Queen immersed in such a trance,

And moving thro' the past unconsciously,

Came to that point where first she saw the King

Ride toward her from the city, sigh'd to find

Her journey done, glanced at him, thought him cold,

High, self-contain'd, and passionless, not like him,

"Not like my Lancelot"—while she brooded thus

And grew half-guilty in her thoughts again,

There rode an armed warrior to the doors.

A murmuring whisper thro' the nunnery ran,

Then on a sudden a cry, "The King!"
She sat

Stiff-stricken, listening; but when armed feet

Thro' the long gallery from the outer doors

Rang coming, prone from off her seat she fell,

And grovell'd with her face against the floor.

There with her milk-white arms and shadowy hair

She made her face a darkness from the King,

And in the darkness heard his armed feet Pause by her; then came silence, then a voice.

Monotonous and hollow like a ghost's Denouncing judgment, but, though changed, the King's: "Liest thou here so low, the child of one

I honor'd, happy, dead before thy shame? Well is it that no child is born of thee.

The children born of thee are sword and fire,

Red ruin, and the breaking up of laws,
The craft of kindred and the godless hosts

Of heathen swarming o'er the Northern Sea;

Whom I, while yet Sir Lancelot, my right arm,
The mightiest of my knights, above with

me,

Have everywhere about this land of Christ

In twelve great battles ruining overthrown.

And knowest thou now from whence I come—from him,

From waging bitter war with him; and he,

That did not shun to smite me in worse way,

Had yet that grace of courtesy in him left,

He spared to lift his hand against the

King
Who made him knight. But many a knight was slain;

And many more and all his kith and kin

Clave to him, and abode in his own land.

And many more when Modred raised revolt,

Forgetful of their troth and fealty, clave To Modred, and a remnant stays with me.

And of this remnant will I leave a part, True men who love me still, for whom I live,

To guard thee in the wild hour coming on,

Lest but a hair of this low head be harm'd.

Fear not; thou shalt be guarded till my death.

Howbeit I know, if ancient prophecies

Have err'd not, that I march to meet my doom.

Thou hast not made my life so sweet to

That I the King should greatly care to live:

For thou hast spoilt the purpose of my

Bear with me for the last time while I show,

Even for thy sake, the sin which thou hast sun'd [law

For when the Roman left us, and their Relax'd its hold upon us, and the ways Were fill'd with rapine, here and there a deed

Of prowess done redress'd a random wrong,

But I was first of all the kings who drew The knighthood-errant of this realm and all

The realms together under me, their Head.

In that fair Order of my Table Round, A glorious company, the flower of men, To serve as model for the mighty world, And be the fair beginning of a time.

I made them lay their hands in mine and swear and swear

To reverence the King, as if he were Their conscience, and their conscience as their King,

To break the heathen and uphold the

Christ,

To ride abroad redressing human wrongs,
To speak no slander, no, nor listen to it,
To honor his own word as if his God's,
To lead sweet lives in purest chastity,
To love one maiden only, cleave to her,
And worship her by years of noble deeds,
Until they won her; for indeed I knew
Of no more subtle master under heaven
Than is the maiden passion for a maid,
Not only to keep down the base in man,
But teach high thought, and amiable words

And courtliness, and the desire of fame, And love of truth, and all that makes a man.

And all this throve before I wedded thee, Believing, "Lo, mine helpmate, one to feel

My purpose and rejoicing in my joy!"
Then came thy shameful sin with Lance-

Then came the sin of Tristram and Isolt;
Then others, following these my mightiest knights,

And drawing foul ensample from fair

Sinn'd also, till the loathsome opposite
Of all my heart had destined did obtain,
And all thro' thee! so that this life of mine

I guard as God's high gift from scathe

and wrong,

Not greatly care to lose; but rather think How sad it were for Arthur, should he live, To sit once more within his lonely hall, And miss the wonted number of my knights,

And miss to hear high talk of noble deeds As in the golden days before thy sin. For which of us who might be left could speak

Of the pure heart, nor seem to glance at thee?

And in thy bowers of Camelot or of Usk Thy shadow still would glide from room to room,

And I should evermore be vext with thee In hanging robe or recent ornament. Or ghostly footfall echoing on the stair. For think not, tho' thou wouldst not love thy lord, love thy lord,

Thy lord has wholly lost his love for

thee

I am not made of so slight elements. Yet must I leave thee, woman, to thy shame. I hold that man the worst of public foes Who either for his own or children's sake,

To save his blood from scandal; lets the wife Whom he knows false abide and rule

the house:
For being thro' his cowardice allow'd
Her station, taken everywhere for pure,
She like a new disease, unknown to men,
Creeps, no precaution used, among the erowd.

Makes wicked lightnings of her eyes, and saps

The fealty of our friends, and stirs the pulse

With devil's leaps, and poisons half the young.

Worst of the worst were that man he that reigns!

Better the King's waste hearth and aching heart

Than thou reseated in thy place of light,
The mockery of my people and their bane!"

He paused, and in the pause she crept an inch

Nearer, and laid her hands about his feet. Far off a solitary trumpet blew

Then waiting by the doors the war-horse neigh'd

As at a friend's voice, and he spake again:

"Yet think not that I come to urge thy crimes:

I did not come to curse thee, Guinevere, I, whose vast pity almost makes me die To see thee, laying there thy golden head, My pride in happier summers, at my feet. The wrath which forced my thoughts on that fierce law.

The doom of treason and the flaming death.-

When first I learned thee hidden here.is past.

The pang-which, while I weigh'd thy heart with one

Too wholly true to dream untruth in

Made my tears burn-is also past-in part.

And all is past, the sin is sinn'd, and I, Lo, I forgive thee, as Eternal God

Forgives! do thou for thine own soul the rest.

But how to take last leave of all I loved? O golden hair, with which I used to play Not knowing! O imperial-moulded form.

And beauty such as never woman wore, Until it came a kingdom's curse with

I cannot touch thy lips, they are not mine,

But Lancelot's; nay, they never were the King's.

I cannot take thy hand; that too is flesh, And in the flesh thou hast sinn'd; and mine own flesh.

Here looking down on thine polluted,

'I loathe thee;' yet not less, O Guinevere.

For I was ever virgin save for thee,

My love thro' flesh hath wrought into my life

So far that my doom is, I love thee still. Let no man dream but that I love thee

Perchance, and so thou purif "thy soul, And so thou lean on our fair father Christ.

Hereafter in that world where all are pure

We two may meet before high God, and

Wilt spring to me, and claim me thine, and know

I am thine husband—not a smaller soul, Nor Lancelot, nor another. Leave me that.

I charge thee, my last hope. Now must I [blow. Thro' the thick night I hear the trumpet

They summon me their King to lead mine hosts Far down to that great battle in the west.

Where I must strike against the man they call

My sister's son-no kin of mine, who leagues

With Lords of the White Horse, heathen, and knights,

Traitors—and strike him dead, and meet myself

Death, or I know not what mysterious doom.

And thou remaining here wilt learn the event:

But hither shall I never come again, Never lie by thy side, see thee no more— Farewell!"

And while she grovell'd at his feet, She felt the King's breath wander o'er her neck.

And in the darkness o'er her fallen head Perceived the waving of his hands that blessed.

Then, listening till those armed steps were gone.

Rose the pale Queen, and in her anguish found

The casement: "peradventure," so she thought.

"If I might see his face, and not be

And lo, he sat on horseback at the door! And near him the sad nuns with each a

Stood, and he gave them charge about the Queen.

To guard and foster her for evermore. And while he spake to these his helm was lower'd. To which for crest the golden dragon

Of Britain; so she did not see the face, Which then was as an angel's, but she

Wet with the mists and smitten by the

The Dragon of the great Pendragonship Blaze, making all the night a steam of fire.

And even then he turn'd; and mere and more

The moony vapor rolling round the King, Who seem'd the phantom of a giant in

Enwound him fold by fold, and made him gray

And grayer, till himself became as mist Before her, moving ghostlike to his doom.

Then she stretch'd out her arms and cried aloud,

"O Arthur!" there her voice brake suddenly,

Then—as a stream that spouting from a cliff

Fails in mid air, but gathering at the base

Re-makes itself, and flashes down the vale—

Went on in passionate utterance:

Gone thro' my sin to slay and to be slain!

And he forgave me, and I could not speak.

Farewell? I should have answer'd his farewell.

His mercy choked me. Gone, my lord the King,

My own true lord! how dare I call him mine?

The shadow of another cleaves to me,
And makes me one pollution. He, the King,

Call'd me polluted. Shall I kill myself? What help in that? I cannot kill my sin,

If soul be soul, nor can I kill my shame;
No, nor by living can I live it down.

The days will grow to weeks, the weeks to months,

The months will add themselves and make the years,

The years will roll into the centuries,
And mine will ever be a name of scorn.
I must not dwell on that defeat of fame.
Let the world be; that is but of the world—

What else? what hope? I think there was a hope,

Except he mock'd me when he spake of hope;

His hope he call'd it; but he never mocks,

For mockery is the fume of little hearts.

And blessed be the King, who hath forgiven

My wickedness to him, and left me hope That in mine own heart I can live down

And be his mate hereafter in the heavens Before high God! Ah great and gentle lord.

Who wast, as is the conscience of a saint

Among his warring senses, to thy knights—

To whom my false voluptuous pride, that took

Full easily all impressions from below, Would not look up, or half-despised the height

To which I would not or I could not climb-

I thought I could not breathe in that fine air,

That pure severity of perfect light— I yearn'd for warmth and color which I found

In Lancelot—now I see thee what thou

Thou art the highest and most human too.

Not Lancelot, nor another. Is there none

Will tell the King I love him tho' so late?

Now—ere he goes to the great battle? none!

Myself must tell him in that purer life, But now it were too daring. Ah my God, What might I not have made of thy fair world,

Had I but loved thy highest creature here?

It was my duty to have loved the highest;

It surely was my profit had I known; It would have been my pleasure had I seen.

We needs must love the highest when we see it,

Not Lancelot, nor another."

Grasp'd made her veil her eyes. She look'd and saw

The novice, weeping, suppliant, and said to her,

"Yea, little maid, for am I not forgiven?"

Then glancing up beheld the holy nuns All round her, weeping; and her heart was loosed

Within her, and she wept with these and said:

"Ye know me then, that wicked one, who broke

The vast design and purpose of the King. O, shut me round with narrowing nunnery walls,

Meek maidens, from the voices crying, 'Shame!'

I must not scorn myself; he loves me still.

Let no one dream but that he loves me still.

So let me, if you do not shudder at me, Nor shun to call me sister, dwell with you:

you; Wear black and white, and be a nun like you,

Fast with your fasts, not feasting with your feasts;

Grieve with your griefs, not grieving at your joys,

But not rejoicing; mingle with your rites;

Pray and be pray'd for; lie before your shrines;

Do each low office of your holy house; Walk your dim cloister, and distribute dole

To poor sick people, richer in His eyes Who ransom'd us, and haler too than I; And treat their loathsome hurts and heal mine own;

And so wear out in alms-deed and in prayer

The sombre close of that voluptuous day Which wrought the ruin of my lord the King."

She said. They took her to themselves; and she Still hoping, fearing "Is it yet too late?"

Dwelt with them, till in time their abbess died.

Then she, for her good deeds and her pure life,

And for the power of ministration in her, And likewise for the high rank she had borne.

Was chosen abbess, there, an abbess, lived

For three brief years, and there, an abbess, passed

To where beyond these voices there is

To where beyond these voices there is peace. 1859.

TITHONUS

THE woods decay, the woods decay and fall,

The vapors weep their burthen to the ground,

Man comes and tills the field and lies beneath,

And after many a summer dies the swan.

Me only cruel immortality

Consumes; I wither slowly in thine arms, Here at the quiet limit of the world, A white-hair'd shadow roaming like a dream

The ever-silent spaces of the East,

Far-folded mists, and gleaming halls of morn.

Alas! for this gray shadow, once a

So glorious in his beauty and thy choice, Who madest him thy chosen, that he seem'd

To his great heart none other than a God!

I ask'd thee, "Give me immortality."
Then didst thou grant mine asking with a smile,

Like wealthy men who care not how they give.

But thy strong Hours indignant work'd their wills,

And beat me down and marr'd and wasted me,

And tho' they could not end me, left me maim'd

To dwell in presence of immortal youth, Immortal age beside immortal youth, And all I was in ashes. Can thy love,

Thy beauty, make amends, tho' even

Close over us, the silver star, thy guide, Shines in those tremulous eyes that fill with tears

To hear me? Let me go; take back thy gift.

Why should a man desire in any way To vary from the kindly race of men, Or pass beyond the goal of ordinance

Where all should pause, as is most meet for all?

A soft air fans the cloud apart; there comes

A glimpse of that dark world where I was born.

Once more the old mysterious glimmer steals

From thy pure brows, and from thy shoulders pure,

And bosom beating with a heart renew'd.

Thy cheek begins to redden thro' the gloom,

Thy sweet eyes brighten slowly close to nine.

Ere yet they blind the stars, and the wild team

Which love thee, yearning for thy yoke arise,

And shake the darkness from their loosen'd manes.

And beat the twilight into flakes of fire.

Lo! ever thus thou growest beautiful

In silence, then before thine answer

Departest, and thy tears are on my check.

Why wilt thou ever scare me with thy

And make me tremble lest a saving

In days far-off, on that dark earth, be true?

"The Gods themselves cannot recall their gifts.

Ay me! ay me! with what another

In days far-off, and with what other eres

I used to watch -- if I be he that watchid -

The lucid outline forming round thee;

The dim curls kindle into sunny rings; Changed with thy mystic change, and felt my blood

Glow with the glow that slowly crimson'd all

Thy presence and thy portals, while I

Mouth, forehead, evelids, growing dewv-

With kisses balmier than half-opening buds

Of April, and could hear the lips that kiss'd

Whispering I knew not what of wild and sweet,

Like that strange song I heard Apollo

While Ilion like a mist rose into towers. Yet hold me not for ever in thine East:

How can my nature longer mix with thine?

Coldly thy rosy shadows bathe me, cold Are all thy lights, and cold my wrinkled feet

Upon thy glimmering thresholds, when the steam

Floats up from those dim fields about the homes

And whistled to the morning star.

And while he whistled long and loud He heard a fierce mermaiden cry, "O boy, tho' thou art young and proud, I see the place where thou wilt lie.

"The sands and yeasty surges mix In caves about the dreary bay, And on thy ribs the limpet sticks, And in thy heart the scrawl shall play."

"Fool," he answer'd, "death is sure To those that stay and those that roam. But I will nevermore endure To sit with empty hands at home.

"My mother clings about my neck, My sisters crying, 'Stay for shame;' My father raves of death and wreck,— They are all to blame, they are all to blame.

"God help me! save I take my part Of danger on the roaring sea, A devil rises in my heart, Far worse than any death to me." 1861.

MILTON

(ALCAICS)

O MIGHTY-MOUTH'D inventor of harmonies,

O skill'd to sing of Time or Eternity. God-gifted organ-voice of England, Milton, a name to resound for ages: Whose Titan angels, Gabriel, Abdiel, Starr'd from Jehovah's gorgeous armo-

Tower, as the deep-domed empyrean Rings to the roar of an angel onset! Me rather all that bowery loneliness, The brooks of Eden mazily murmuring.

And bloom profuse and cedar arches Charm, as a wanderer out in ocean, Where some refulgent sunset of India Streams o'er a rich ambrosial ocean isle, And crimson-hued the stately palm-

Whisper in odorous heights of even. 1863.

THE VOYAGE

WE left behind the painted buoy
That tosses at the harbor-mouth;
And madly danced our hearts with joy,
As fast we fleeted to the south.
How fresh was every sight and sound
On open main or winding shore!

We knew the merry world was round,
And we might sail for evermore.

Warm broke the breeze against the brow,

Dry sang the tackle, sang the sail;
The lady's-head upon the prow
Caught the shrill salt, and sheer'd the gale.

The broad seas swell'd to meet the keel, And swept behind; so quick the run We felt the good ship shake and reel, We seem'd to sail into the sun!

How oft we saw the sun retire,
And burn the threshold of the night,
Fall from his Ocean-lane of fire,
And sleep beneath his pillar'd light!
How oft the purple-skirted robe
Of twilight slowly downward drawn,
As thro' the slumber of the globe
Again we dash'd into the dawn!

New stars all night above the brim Of waters lighten'd into view; They climb'd as quickly, for the rim Changed every moment as we flew. Far ran the naked moon across The houseless ocean's heaving field, Or flying shone, the silver boss Of her own halo's dusky shield.

The peaky islet shifted shapes,
High towns on hills were dimly seen;
We passed long lines of Northern capes
And dewy Northern meadows green.
We came to warmer waves, and deep
Across the boundless east we drove,

Where those long swells of breaker sweep

The nutmeg rocks and isles of clove.

By peaks that flamed, or, all in shade, Gloom'd the low coast and quivering brine

With ashy rains, that spreading made Fantastic plume or sable pine:
By sands and steaming flats, and floods
Of mighty mouth, we scudded fast,
And hills and scarlet-uningled woods

And hills and scarlet-mingled wools Glow'd for a moment as we passed.

O hundred shores of happy climes, How swiftly stream'd ye by the bark! At times the whole sea burn'd, at times With wakes of fire we tore the dark; At times a carven craft would shoot From havens hid in fairy bowers, With waked limbs and flowers and fruit

With naked limbs and flowers and fruit.

But we nor paused for fruit not flowers.

For one fair Vision ever fled
Down the waste waters day and night,
And still we follow'd where she led,
In hope to gain upon her flight.
Her face was evermore unseen,
And fixed upon the far sea-line;
But each man murmur'd, "O my queen,
I follow till I make thee mine!"

And now we lost her, now she gleam'd Like Fancy made of golden air. Now nearer to the prow she seem'd Like Virtue firm, like Knowledge fair, Now high on waves that idly burst Like Heavenly Hope she crown'd the

And now, the bloodless point reversed, She bore the blade of Liberty.

And only one among us—him
We pleased not—he was seldom pleased;

He saw not far, his eyes were dim,
But ours he swore were all diseased.
"A ship of fools," he shriek'd in spite,
"A ship of fools," he sneer'd and went.

And overboard one stormy night
He cast his body, and on we swept.

And never sail of ours was furl'd,
Nor anchor dropped at eve or morn;
We loved the glories of the world.
But laws of nature were our scorn.
For blasts would rise and rave and cease,

But whence were those that drove the sail

Across the whirlwind's heart of peace,

And to and thro' the counter gale?

Again to colder climes we came,

For still we follow'd where she led; Now mate is blind and captain lame, And half the crew are sick or dead, But, blind or lame or sick or sound, We follow that which thes before;

We know the merry world is round, And we may sail for evermore.

THE FLOWER :

ONCE in a golden hour I cast to earth a seed. Up there came a flower, The people said, a weed.

To and fro they went Thro' my garden-bower, And muttering discontent Cursed me and my flower.

Then it grew so tall It wore a crown of light, But thieves from o'er the wall Stole the seed by night;

1 See the Life of Tennyson II, 10-11.

Sow'd it far and wide By every town and tower, Till all the people cried "Splendid is the flower."

Read my little fable: He that runs may read. Most can raise the flowers now For all have got the seed.

And some are pretty enough, And some are poor indeed; And now again the people Call it but a weed. 1864.

cave and tree, The voice of the dead was a living voice

WAGES

GLORY of warrior, glory of orator, glory of song,

Paid with a voice flying by to be lost on an endless sea—

Glory of Virtue, to fight, to struggle, to right the wrong—

Nay, but she aim'd not at glory, no lover of glory she:

lover of glory she;
. Give her the glory of going on, and still to be.

The wages of sin is death: if the wages of Virtue be dust,

Would she have heart to endure for the life of the worm and the fly?

She desires no isles of the blest, no quiet seats of the just,

To rest in a golden grove, or to bask in a summer sky;

Give her the wages of going on, and not to die. 1868.

FROM THE COMING OF ARTHUR

MERLIN'S RIDDLE

RAIN, rain, and sun! a rainbow in the sky!

A young man will be wiser by and by; An old man's wit may wander ere be die.

Rain, rain, and sun! a rainbow on the lea!

And truth is this to me, and that to thee; And truth or clothed or naked let it be.

Rain, sun, and rain! and the free blossom blows:

Sun, rain, and sun! and where is he who knows?

From the great deep to the great deep he goes. 1869.

TRUMPET SONG

Blow trumpet, for the world is white with May!

Blow trumpet, the long night hath roll'd away!

Blow thro' the living world—" Let the King reign!"

Shall Rome or Heathen rule in Arthur's realm?

Flash brand and lance, fall battle-axe upon helm,

Fall battle-axe, and flash brand! Let the King reign!

Strike for the King and live! his knights have heard

That God hath told the King a secret word.

Fall battle-axe, and flash brand! Let the King reign!

Blow trumpet! he will lift us from the dust.

Blow trumpet! live the strength, and die the lust!

Clang battle-axe, and clash brand! Let the King reign!

Strike for the King and die! and if thou diest,

The King is king, and ever wills the highest.

Clang battle-axe, and clash brand! Let the King reign!

Blow, for our Sun is mighty in his May!
Blow, for our Sun is mightier day by
day!

Clang battle-axe, and clash brand! Let the King reign!

The King will follow Christ, and we the King,

In whom high God hath breathed a secret thing.

Fall battle axe, and flash brand! Let the King reign! 1874.

THE HIGHER PANTHEISM

The sun, the moon, the stars, the seas, the hills and the plains,—

Are not these, O Soul, the Vision of Him who reigns?

Is not the Vision He, tho' He be not that which He seems?

Dreams are true while they last, and do we not live in dreams?

Earth, these solid stars, this weight of body and limb,

Are they not sign and symbol of thy division from Him?

Dark is the world to thee; thyself art the reason why,

For is He not all but thou, that hast power to feel "I am I"?

Glory about thee, without thee; and thou fulfillest thy doom,

Making Him broken gleams and a stifled splendor and gloom.

Speak to Him, thou, for He hears, and Spirit with Spirit can meet-

Closer is He than breathing, and nearer than hands and feet.

God is law, say the wise; O soul, and let us rejoice.

For if He thunder by law the thunder is vet His voice.

Law is God, say some; no God at all, says the fool.

For all we have power to see is a straight staff bent in a pool;

And the ear of man cannot hear, and the eye of man cannot see;

But if we could see and hear, this Vision-were it not He? 1869.

FLOWER IN THE CRANNIED WALL

FLOWER in the crannied wall,

I pluck you out of the crannies, I hold you here, root and all, in my hand.

Little flower—but if I could understand What you are, root and all, and all in all.

I should know what God and man is.

ENGLAND AND AMERICA IN 1782

O THOU that sendest out the man To rule by land and sea,

1 Makes nothing.

2 The flies are as fierce as anything.

Strong mother of a lion-line, Be proud of those strong sons of thine Who wrench'd their rights from thee!

What wonder if in noble heat
Those men thine arms withstood,
Retaught the lesson thou hadst taught,
And in thy spirit with thee fought—
Who sprang from English blood!

But thou rejoice with liberal joy,
Lift up thy rocky face,
And shatter, when the storms are black,
In many a streaming torrent back,
The seas that shock thy base!

Whatever harmonies of law
The growing world assume,
Thy work is thine—the single note
From that deep chord which Hampden smote

Will vibrate to the doom.

1872.

THE VOICE AND THE PEAK

The voice and the Peak,
Far over summit and lawn,
The lone glow and long roar
Green-rushing from the rosy thrones of dawn!

All night have I heard the voice
Rave over the rocky bar,
But thou wert silent in heaven,
Above thee glided the star.

Hast thou no voice, O Peak.
That standest high above all?
"I am the voice of the Peak,
I roar and rave, for I fall.

"A thousand voices go
To North, South, East, and West;
They leave the heights and are troubled,
And moan and sink to their rest.

"The fields are fair beside them,
The chestnut towers in his bloom;
But they—they feel the desire of the deep—
Fall, and follow their doom.

"The deep has power on the height, And the height has power on the deep! They are raised for ever and ever, And sink again into sleep."

Not raised for ever and ever, But when their cycle is o'er, The valley, the voice, the peak, the star Pass, and are found no more.

The Peak is high and flush'd At his highest with sunrise fire; The Peak is high, and the stars are high, And the thought of a man is higher.

A deep below the deep, And a height beyond the height! Our hearing is not hearing. And our seeing is not sight.

The voice and the Peak Far into heaven withdrawn. The lone glow and long roar Green-rushing from the rosy thrones of dawn! 1874.

MILKMAID'S SONG

SHAME upon you, Robin, Shaine upon you now ! Kiss me would you? with my hands Milking the cow? Daisies grow again, Kingcups blow again, And you came and kiss'd me milking

Robin came behind me, Kiss'd me well, I vow. Cuff him could I? with my hands Milking the cow? Swallows fly again, Cuckoos cry again, And you came and kiss'd me milking the cow.

Come, Robin, Robin, Come and kiss me now: Help it can I? with my hands Milking the cow? Ringdoves coo again, All things woo again. Come behind and kiss me milking the cow!

LOW, LUTE, LOW!

HAPLESS doom of woman happy in betrothing ! Beauty passes like a breath, and love is lost in loathing.

Low, my lute; speak low, my lute, but say the world is nothing-Low, lute, low!

Love will hover round the flowers when they first awaken; Love will fly the fallen leaf, and not be overtaken.

Low, my lute! O, low, my lute! we fade and are forsaken-

Low, dear lute, low!

THE REVENGE 1

A BALLAD OF THE FLEET

AT Flores in the Azores Sir Richard Grenville lay,

And a pinnace, like a flutter'd bird, came flying from far away;

"Spanish ships of war at sea! we have sighted fifty-three!"

Then sware Lord Thomas Howard: "'Fore God I am no coward;

But I cannot meet them here, for my ships are out of gear,

And the half my men are sick. I must fly, but follow quick.

We are six ships of the line; can we fight with fifty-three?"

TT

Then spake Sir Richard Grenville: "I know you are no coward;

You fly them for a moment to fight with them again.

But I've ninety men and more that are lying sick ashore.

I should count myself the coward if I left them, my Lord Howard,
To these Inquisition dogs and the devil-doms of Spain."

III

So Lord Howard past away with five ships of war that day,

Till he melted like a cloud in the silent summer heaven;

But Sir Richard bore in hand all hissick men from the land

Very carefully and slow, Men of Bideford in Devon,

And we laid them on the ballast down below:

For we brought them all aboard,

And they blest him in their pain, that they were not left to Spain,

To the thumb-screw and the stake, for the glory of the Lord.

IV

He had only a hundred seamen to work the ship and to fight

And he sailed away from Flores till the Spaniard came in sight,

With his huge sea-castles heaving upon the weather bow.

"Shall we fight or shall we fly? Good Sir Richard, tell us now, For to fight is but to die!

There 'll be little of us left by the time this sun be set."

And Sir Richard said again: "We be all good English men.

Let us bang these dogs of Seville, the children of the devil,

For I never turn'd my back upon Don or devil yet."

V

Sir Richard spoke and he laugh'd, and we roar'd a hurrah, and so

The little Revenge ran on sheer into the heart of the foe,

With her hundred fighters on deck, and her ninety sick below For half of their fleet to the right and half to the left were seen,

And the little Revenge ran on thro' the long sea-lane between.

VI

Thousands of their soldiers look'd down from their decks and laugh'd,

Thousands of their seamen made mock at the mad little craft

Running on and on, till delay'd

By their mountain-like San Philip that, of fifteen hundred tons,

And up shadowing high above us with her yawning tiers of guns,

Took the breath from our sails, and we stay'd.

VII

And while now the great San Philip hung above us like a cloud

Whence the thunderbolt will fall

Long and loud,

Four galleons drew away

From the Spanish fleet that day,

And two upon the larboard and two upon the starboard lay.

And the battle-thunder broke from them all.

VIII

But anon the great San Philip, she bethought herself and went, Having that within her womb that had left her ill content;

And the rest they came aboard us, and they fought us hand to hand,

For a dozen times they came with their pikes and musqueteers,

And a dozen times we shook 'em off as a dog that shakes his ears

When he leaps from the water to the

When he leaps from the water to the land.

IX

And the sun went down, and the stars came out far over the summer sea,

But never a moment ceased the fight of the one and the fifty-three. Ship after ship, the whole night long,

their high-built galleons came,

Ship after ship, the whole night long, with her battle-thunder and flame;

Ship after ship, the whole night long, drew back with her dead and her

For some were sunk and many were shatter'd, and so could fight us no more—

God of battles, was ever a battle like this in the world before?

X

For he said, "Fight on! fight on!"
Tho his vessel was all but a wreck;
And it chanced that, when half of the short summer night was gone.
With a grisly wound to be drest he had ·left the deck, But a bullet struck him that was dressing it suddenly dead,

And himself he was wounded again in the side and the head.

And he said, "Fight on! fight on!"

X1

And the night went down, and the sun smiled out far over the summer sea.

And the Spanish fleet with broken sides lay round us all in a ring;

But they dared not touch us again, for they fear'd that we still could sting,

So they watch'd what the end would be.
And we had not fought them in vain,
But in perilous plicht were we

But in perilous plight were we, Seeing forty of our poor hundred were slain,

And half of the rest of us maim'd for

life
In the crash of the cannonades and the desperate strife;

And the sick men down in the hold were most of them stark and cold,

And the pikes were all broken or bent, and the powder was all of it spent; And the masts and the rigging were lying over the side;

But Sir Richard cried in his English pride:

"We have fought such a fight for a day and a night

As may never be fought again!
We have won great glory, my men!

And a day less or more

At sea or ashore, We die—does it matter when?

Sink me the ship, Master Gunner—sink her, split her in twain!

Fall into the hands of God, not into the hands of Spain!"

XII

And the gunner said, "Ay, ay," but the seamen made reply:

"We have children, we have wives, And the Lord hath spared our lives.

We will make the Spaniard promise, if we yield, to let us go;

We shall live to fight again and to strike another blow."

And the lion there lay dying, and they yielded to the foe.

IIIX

And the stately Spanish men to their flagship bore him then,

Where they laid him by the mast, old Sir Richard caught at last,

And they praised him to his face with their courtly foreign grace;

But he rose upon their decks, and he cried:

"I have fought for Queen and Faith like a valiant man and true:

I have only done my duty as a man is bound to do.

With a joyful spirit I Sir Richard Grenville die!"

And he fell upon their decks, and he died.

XIV

And they stared at the dead that had been so valiant and true,

And had holden the power and glory of Spain so cheap

That he dared her with one little ship and his English few;

Was he devil or man? He was devil for aught they knew, But they sank his body with honor down into the deep.

And they mann'd the Revenge with a swarthier alien crew,

And away she sail'd with her loss and long'd for her own; When a wind from the lands they had ruin'd awoke from sleep, And the water began to heave and the weather to moan,

And or ever that evening ended a great gale blew,

And a wave like the wave that is raised by an earthquake grew.

Till it smote on their hulls and their sails and their masts and their flags.

And the whole sea plunged and fell on the shot-shatter'd navy of Spain.

And the little Revenge herself went down by the island crags

To be lost evermore in the main.

THE DEFENCE OF LUCKNOW 1

BANNER of England, not for a season, O banner of Britain, hast thou

Floated in conquering battle or flapped to the battle-cry!

Never with mightier glory than when we had rear'd thee on high

Flying at top of the roofs in the ghastly siege of Lucknow-

Shot thro' the staff or the halyard, but ever we raised thee anew,

And ever upon the topmost roof our banner of England blew.

Frail were the works that defended the hold that we held with our lives-

Women and children among us, God help them, our children and wives! Hold it we might—and for fifteen days or for twenty at most.

"Never surrender, I charge you, but every man die at his post!"

Voice of the dead whom we loved, our Lawrence, the best of the brave;

Cold were his brows when we kiss'd him—we laid him that night in his grave.

"Every man die at his post!" and there hail'd on our houses and halls

Death from their rifle bullets, and death from their cannon-balls,

Death in our innermost chamber, and death at our slight barricade.

Death while we stood with the musket, and death while we stooped to the Death to the dying, and wounds to the wounded, for often there fell,

Striking the hospital wall, crashing thro' it, their shot and their shell,

Death-for their spies were among us. their marksmen were told of our best.

So that the brute bullet broke thro' the brain that could think for the rest:

Bullets would sing by our foreheads, and bullets would rain at our feet-

1 "The old flag used during the defence of the Residency, was hoisted on the Lucknow flagstaff by General Wilson, and the soldiers who still survived from the siege were all mustered on parade in honor of this poem, when my son Lionel (who died on his journey from India) visited Lucknow. A tribute overwhelmingly (Tennyson.) touching."

Fire from ten thousand at once of the rebels that girdled us round-

Death at the glimpse of a finger from over the breadth of a street,

Death from the heights of the mosque and the palace, and death in the ground! Mine? yes, a mine! Countermine!

down, down! and creep thro' the

Keep the revolver in hand! you can hear him—the murderous mole!

Quiet, ah! quiet-wait till the point of the pickaxe be thro'!

Click with the pick, coming nearer and nearer again than before—

Now let it speak, and you fire, and the dark pioneer is no more:

And ever upon the topmost roof our banner of England blew!

Ay, but the foe sprung his mine many times, and it chanced on a day

Soon as the blast of that underground thunder-clap echo'd away

Dark thro' the smoke and the sulphur like so many fiends in their hell— Cannon-shot, musket-shot, volley on volley, and yell upon yell-Fiercely on all the defences our myriad enemy fell.

What have they done? where is it? Out yonder. Guard the Redan!

Storm at the Water-gate! storm at the Bailey-gate! storm, and it ran

Surging and swaying all round us, as ocean on every side

Plunges and heaves at a bank that is daily drowned by the tide—

So many thousands that, if they be bold enough, who shall escape? Kill or be kill'd, live or die, they shall know we are soldiers and men! Ready! take aim at their leaders—their masses are gapp'd with our grape-Backward they reel like the wave, like the wave fingering forward again, Flying and foil'd at the last by the handful they could not subdue;

And ever upon the topmost roof our banner of England blew!

Handful of men as we were, we were English in heart and in limb,

Strong with the strength of the race to command, to obey, to endure,

Each of us fought as if hope for the garrison hung but on him;

Still—could we watch at all points? we were every day fewer and fewer. There was a whisper among us, but only a whisper that past:

"Children and wives—if the tigers leap into the fold unawares-

Every man die at his post—and the foe may outlive us at last-

Better to fall by the hands that they love, than to fall into theirs!"

Roar upon roar in a moment two mines by the enemy sprung Clove into perilous chasms our walls and our poor palisades. Riflemen, true is your heart, but be sure that your hand be as true! Sharp is the fire of assault, better aimed are your flank fusilades-

Twice do we hurl them to earth from the ladders to which they had

Twice from the ditch where they shelter we drive them with hand-grenades:

And ever upon the topmost roof our banner of England blew!

Then on another wild morning another wild earthquake out-tore

Clean from our lines of defence ten or twelve good paces or more.

Riflemen, high on the roof, hidden there from the light of the sun

One has leaped up on the breach, crying out: "Follow me, follow me!"-Mark him-he falls! then another and him too, and down goes he. Had they been bold enough then, who can tell but the traitors had won?

Boardings and rafters and doors-an embrasure! make way for the gun! Now double-charge it with grape! It is charged and we fire, and they run.

Praise to our Indian brothers, and let the dark face have his due!

Thanks to the kindly dark faces who fought with us, faithful and few, Fought with the bravest among us, and drove them, and smote them, and slew,

That ever upon the topmost roof our banner in India blew.

VI

Men will forget what we suffer and not what we do. We can fight!

But to be soldier all day, and be sentinel all thro' the night-

Ever the mine and assault, our sallies, their lying alarms,

Bugles and drums in the darkness, and shoutings and soundings to arms,

Ever the labor of fifty that had to be done by five, Ever the marvel among us that one should be left alive,

Ever the day with its traitorous death from the loopholes around.

Ever the night with its coffinless corpse to be laid in the ground,

Heat like the mouth of a hell, or a deluge of cataract skies,

Stench of old offal decaying, and infinite torment of flies,

Thoughts of the breezes of May blowing over an English field,

Cholera, scurvy, and fever, the wound that would not be heal'd,

Lopping away of the limb by the pitifulpitiless knife,-

Torture and trouble in vain,—for it never could save us a life,

Valor of delicate women who tended the hospital bed. Horror of women in travail among the dying and dead, Grief for our perishing children, and never a moment for grief, Toil and ineffable weariness, faltering hopes of relief, Havelock baffled, or beaten, or butcher'd for all that we knew-

Then day and night, day and night, coming down on the still-shatter'd walls

Millions of musket-bullets, and thousands of cannon-balls—

But ever upon the topmost roof our banner of England blew.

VII

Hark cannonade, fusillade! is it true what was told by the scout,

Outram and Havelock breaking their way through the fell mutineers?

Surely the pibroch of Europe is ringing again in our ears?

All on a sudden the garrison utter a jubilant shout,

Havelock's glorious Highlanders answer with conquering cheers,

Sick from the hospital echo them, women and children come out.

Blessing the wholesome white faces of Havelock's good fusileers.

Kissing the war-harden'd hand of the Highlander wet with their tears!

Dance to the pibroch!—saved! we are saved!—is it you? is it you? Saved by the valor of Havelock, saved by the blessing of heaven! "Hold it for fifteen days!" we have held it for eighty-seven!

And ever aloft on the palace roof the old banner of England blew. 1879.

RIZPAH1

17-

WAILING, wailing, wailing, the wind over land and sea-

And Willy's voice in the wind, "O mother, come out to me!"

Why should be call me to-night, when he knows that I cannot go? For the downs are as bright as day, and the full moon stares at the snow.

We should be seen, my dear; they would spy us out of the town.

The loud black nights for us, and the storm rushing over the down,

When I cannot see my own hand, but am led by the creak of the chain,

And grovel and grope for my son till I find myself drenched with the rain.

Anything fallen again? nay—what was there left to fall?

I have taken them home, I have number'd the bones, I have hidden them all.

What am I saying? and what are you? do you come as a spy!

Falls? what falls? who knows? As the tree falls so must it lie.

Who let her in? how long has she been? you—what have you heard?

Why did you sit so quiet? you never have spoken a word.

O-to pray with me-yes-a lady-none of their spies-

But the night has crept into my heart, and begun to darken my eyes.

Ah—you, that have lived so soft, what should you know of the night,

The blast and the burning shame and the bitter frost and the fright?

I have done it, while you were asleepyou were only made for the day.

I have gather'd my baby together-and now you may go your way.

Nav-for it's kind of you, madam, to sit by an old dying wife.

But say nothing hard of my boy, I have only an hour of life.

I kiss'd my boy in the prison, before he went out to die. "They dared me to do it," he said, and he never has told me a lie.

I whipped him for robbing an orchard once when he was but a child-

"The farmer dared me to do it," he said; he was always so wild-

And idle-and could n't be idle-my Willy—he never could rest.

The King should have made him a soldier, he would have been one of his best.

But he lived with a lot of wild mates, and they never would let him be good:

They swore that he dare not rob the mail, and he swore that he would;

And he took no life, but he took one purse, and when all was done

He flung it among his fellows-"I'll none of it," said my son.

I came into court to the judge and the lawyers. I told them my tale,

God's own truth—but they kill'd him. they kill'd him for robbing the mail.

They hang'd him in chains for a showwe had always borne a good

To be hang'd for a thief—and then put away-is n't that enough shame?

Dust to dust-low down-let us hide! but they set him so high

That all the ships of the world could stare at him, passing by. God'll pardon the hell-black raven and horrible fowls of the air,

But not the black heart of the lawyer who kill'd him and hang'd him there.

And the jailer forced me away. I had bid him my last good-bye;

They had fasten'd the door of his cell.
"O mother!" I heard him cry.

I could n't get back tho' I tried, he had something further to say,

And now I never shall know it. The jailer forced me away.

² See the Life of Tennyson II, 249-251.

Then since I could n't but hear that cry of my boy that was dead,

They seized me and shut me up: they fasten'd me down on my bed.

" Mother, O mother!"-he call'd in the dark to me year after year-

They beat me for that, they beat me—you know that I could n't but hear;

And then at the last they found I had grown so stupid and still

They let me abroad again—but the creatures had worked their will.

Flesh of my flesh was gone, but bone of my bone was left-

I stole them all from the lawvers—and you, will you call it a theft?-

My baby, the bones that had suck'd me, the bones that had laughed and had cried-

Theirs? O, no! they are mine-not theirs-they had moved in my side.

Do you think I was scared by the bones? I kiss'd 'em, I buried 'em all-

I can't dig deep, I am old—in the night by the churchyard wall.

My Willy 'll rise up whole when the trumpet of judgment 'll sound,

But I charge you never to say that I laid him in holy ground.

They would scratch him up—they would hang him again on the cursed tree. Sin? O, yes, we are sinners, I know—let all that be. And read me a Bible verse of the Lord's goodwill toward men-

"Full of compassion and mercy, the Lord "-let me hear it again;

"Full of compassion and mercy-longsuffering." Yes, O. yes!

For the lawyer is born but to murderthe Saviour lives but to bless.

He'll never put on the black cap except for the worst of the worst,

And the first may be last—I have heard it in church—and the last may be

Suffering-O, long-suffering-yes, as the Lord must know,

Year after year in the mist and the wind and the shower and the snow.

Heard, have you? what? they have told you he never repented his sin.

How do they know it? are they his mother? are you of his kin?

Heard! have you ever heard, when the storm on the downs began,

The wind that Il wail like a child and the sea that'll moan like a man?

Election, Election, and Reprobation-

it's all very well.
But I go to-night to my boy, and I shall not find him in hell.

For I cared so much for my boy that the Lord has look'd into my care.

And He means me I 'm sure to be happy with Willy, I know not where.

And if he be lost—but to save my soul, that is all your desire-

Do you think that I care for my soul if my boy be gone to the fire?

I have been with God in the dark-go, go, vou may leave me aloue-

You never have borne a child-you are just as hard as a stone.

Madam, I beg your pardon! I think that you mean to be kind,

But I cannot hear what you say for my Willy's voice in the wind-

The snow and the sky so bright-he used but to call in the dark,

And he calls to me now from the church and not from the gibbet for hark!

Nav—you can hear it yourself—it is coming—shaking the walls—

Willy—the moon 's in a cloud——Goodnight. I am going. He calls. 1880.

SONG FROM THE SISTERS

O DIVINER air.

Thro' the heat, the drowth, the dust, the glare,

Far from out the west in shadowing showers.

Over all the meadow baked and bare,

Making fresh and fair All the bowers and the flowers, Fainting flowers, faded bowers,

Over all this weary world of ours,

Breathe, diviner Air!

O diviner light,

Thro' the cloud that roofs our noon with night,

Thro' the blotting mist, the blinding showers,

Far from out a sky for ever bright, Over all the woodland's flooded bowers, Over all the meadow's drowning flowers, Over all this ruin'd world of ours. Break, diviner light! 1880.

TO VIRGIL 1

ROMAN VIRGIL, thou that singest Ilion's lofty temples robed in fire,

Ilion falling, Rome arising, wars, and filial faith, and Dido's pyre;

Landscape-lover, lord of language more than he that sang the "Works and Days,"

All the chosen coin of fancy flashing out from many a golden phrase;

Thou that singest wheat and woodland, tilth and vineyard, hive and horse and herd;

All the charm of all the Muses often flowering in a lonely word:

Poet of the happy Tityrus piping underneath his beechen bowers;

Poet of the poet-satyr whom the laughing shepherd bound with flowers;

Chanter of the Pollio, glorving in the blissful years again to be,

Summers of the snakeless meadow, unlaborious earth and oarless sea;

Thou that seest Universal Nature moved by Universal Mind:

Thou majestic in thy sadness at the doubtful doom of human kind;

Light among the vanish'd ages; star that gildest vet this phantom

Golden branch amid the shadows, kings and realms that pass to rise no

Now thy Forum roars no longer, fallen every purple Cæsar's dome-

Tho' thine ocean-roll of rhythm sound forever of Imperial Rome-

Now the Rome of slaves hath perish'd, and the Rome of freemen holds her place,

I, from out the Northern Island sunder'd once from all the human race,

1 "To Virgil was written at the request of the Mantuans for the nineteenth centenary of Virgil's Death." (Life of Tennyson, II, 320.) I salute thee, Mantovano, I that loved thee since my day began,

Wielder of the stateliest measure ever moulded by the lips of man. 1882.

"FRATER AVE ATQUE VALE"

Row us out from Desenzano, to your Sirmione row!

So they row'd, and there we landed—"O venusta Sirmio!"

There to me thro' all the groves of olive in the summer glow,

There beneath the Roman ruin where the purple flowers grow,

Came that "Ave atque Vale" of the Poet's hopeless woe,

Tenderest of Roman poets nineteen hundred years ago "Frater Ave atque Vale" - as we wander'd to and fro

Gazing at the Lydian laughter of the Garda Lake below

Sweet Catullus's all-but-island, olive silvery Sirmio! 1883.

EPILOGUE TO THE CHARGE OF THE HEAVY BRIGADE

And here the Singer for his art Not all in vain may plead

"The song that nerves a nation's heart Is in itself a deed." 1885.

VASTNESS

Many a hearth upon our dark globe sighs after many a vanish'd face,

Many a planet by many a sun may roll with the dust of a vanish'd race.

Raving politics, never at rest—as this poor earth's pale history runs,—

What is it all but a trouble of ants in the gleam of a million million of suns?

Lies upon this side, lies upon that side, truthless violence mourn'd by the Thousands of voices drowning his own in a popular torrent of lies upon lies:

Stately purposes, valor in battle, glorious annals of army and fleet,

Death for the right cause, death for the wrong cause, trumpets of victory. groans of defeat:

- Innocence seethed in her mother's milk, and Charity setting the martyr aflame;
- Thraldom who walks with the banner of Freedom, and recks not to ruin a realm in her name.
- Faith at her zenith, or all but lost in the gloom of doubts that darken the schools:
- Craft with a bunch of all-heal in her hand, follow'd up by her vassal legion of fools;
- Trade frieg over a thousand seas with her spice and her vintage, her silk and her corn;
- Desolate offing, sailorless harbors, famishing populace, wharves forlorn;
- Star of the morning, Hope in the sunrise; gloom of the evening, Life at a close;
- Pleasure who flaunts on her wide downway with her flying robe and her poison'd rose;
- Pain that has crawl'd from the corpse of Pleasure, a worm which writhes all day, and at night
- Stirs up again in the heart of the sleeper, and stings him back to the curse of the light;
- Wealth with his wines and his wedded harlots; honest Poverty, bare to the bone;
- Opulent Avarice, lean as Poverty; Flattery gilding the rift in a throne;
- Fame blowing out from her golden trumpet a jubilant challenge to Time and to Fate;
- Slander, her shadow, sowing the nettle on all the laurell'd graves of the great;
- Love for the maiden, crown'd with marriage, no regrets for aught that has been,
- Household happiness, gracious children, debtless competence, golden mean;
- National hatreds of whole generations, and pigmy spites of the village spire;
- Vows that will last to the last deathruckle, and vows that are snapt in a moment of fire;

- He that has lived for the lust of the minute, and died in the doing it, flesh without mind;
- He that has nail'd all flesh to the Cross, till Self died out in the love of his kind;
- Spring and Summer and Autumn and Winter, and all these old revolutions of earth;
- All new-old revolutions of Empire—change of the tide—what is all of it worth?
- What the philosophies, all the sciences, poesy, varying voices of prayer,
- All that is noblest, all that is basest, all that is filthy with all that is fair?
- What is it all, if we all of us end but in being our own corpse-coffins at last?
- Swallow'd in Vastness, lost in Silence, drown'd in the deeps of a meaningless Past?
- What but a murmur of gnats in the gloom, or a moment's anger of bees in their hive?—
- Peace, let it be! for I loved him, and love him for ever: the dead are not dead but alive. 1885.

MERLIN AND THE GLEAM 1

O YOUNG Mariner,
You from the haven
Under the sea-cliff,
You that are watching
The gray Magician
With eyes of wonder,
I am Merlin,
And I am dying,
I am Merlin
Who follow the Gleam.

Mighty the Wizard
Who found me at sunrise
Sleeping and woke me
And learn'd me Magic!
Great the Master,
And sweet the Magic,
When over the valley,
In early summers,
Over the mountain,
On human faces,

And all around me, Moving to melody, Floated the Gleam.

Once at the croak of a Raven who crossed it,
A barbarous people,
Blind to the magic
And deaf to the melody,
Smarl'd at an I cursed me.
A demon vexed me,
The light retreated,
The landskip darken'd,
The Master whisper'd
"Follow the Gleam."

Then to the melody
Over a wilderness
Gliding, and glancing at
Elf of the woodland,
Gnome of the cavern,
Griffin and Giant,
And dancing of Fairies
In desolate hollows,
And wraiths of the mountain,
And rolling of dragons
By warble of water,
Or cataract music
Of falling torrents,
Flitted the Gleam.

Down from the mountain
And over the level,
And streaming and shining on Silent river,
Silvery willow,
Pasture and plowland,
Innocent maidens,
Garrulous children,
Homestead and harvest,
Reaper and gleaner,
And rough-ruddy faces
Of lowly labor,
Slided the Gleam—

Then, with a melody Stronger and statelier, Led me at length To the city and palace Of Arthur the King; Touch'd at the golden Cross of the churches, Flash'd on the tournament, Flicker'd and bicker'd From helmet to helmet, And last on the forehead Of Arthur the blameless Rested the Gleam.

Clouds and darkness Closed upon Camelot; Arthur had vanish'd I knew not whither. The king who loved me, And cannot die; For-out of the darkness Silent and slowly

The Gleam, that had waned to a wintry glimmer
On icy fallow
And faded forest,
Drew to the valley

And faded forest,
Drew to the valley
Named of the shadow,
And slowly brightening
Out of the glimmer,
And slowly moving again to a melody

Yearningly tender,
Fell on the shadow,
No longer a shadow,
But clothed with the Gleam,

And broader and brighter The Gleam flying onward, Wed to the melody, Sang thro' the world; And slower and fainter, Old and weary. But eager to follow, I saw, whenever In passing it glanced upon Hamlet or city, That under the Crosses The dead man's garden, The mortal hillock, Would break into blossom; And so to the land's Last limit I came-And can no longer, But die rejoicing, For thro' the Magic Of Him the Mighty, Who taught me in childhood, There on the border Of boundless Ocean, And all but in Heaven Hovers the Gleam.

Not of the sunlight,
Not of the moonlight,
Not of the starlight!
O young Mariner,
Down to the haven,
Call your companions,
Launch your vessel
And crowd your canvas,
And, ere it vanishes
Over the margin,
After it, follow it,
Follow the Gleam.

FAR-FAR-AWAY

(FOR MUSIC)

What sight so lured him thro' the fields he knew where earth's green stole into heaven's own hue,

Far-far-away?

What sound was dearest in his native dells?

The mellow lin-lan-lone of evening bells Far-far-away.

What vague world-whisper, mystic pain or joy.

Thro' those three words would haunt him when a boy.

Far-far-away?

A whisper from his dawn of life? a breath

From some fair dawn beyond the doors of death

Far-far-away?

Far, far, how far? from o'er the gates of birth.

The faint horizons, all the bounds of earth.

Far-far-away?

What charm in words, a charm no words could give?

O dving words, can Music make you live Far-far-away?

THE THROSTLE

"SUMMER is coming, summer is coming. I know it, I know it. I know it.

Light again, leaf again, life again, love again!"

Yes, my wild little Poet.

Sing the new year in under the blue. Last year you same it as gladly.

"New, new, new, new!" Is it then so That you should carol so madly?

"Love again, song again, nest again, young again," Never a prophet so crazy!

And hardly a daisy as yet. little friend, See, there is hardly a daisy.

Here again, here, here, here, happy year!"

O warble unchidden, unbidden! Summer is coming, is coming, my dear, And all the winters are hidden.

THE OAK

LIVE thy Life. Young and old, Like von oak. Bright in spring. Living gold:

Summer-rich Then: and then Autumn-changed, Soberer-hued Gold again.

All his leaves Fallen at length, Look, he stands, Trunk and bough, Naked strength.

When I put out to sea,

But such a tide as moving seems asleep, Too full for sound and foam,

When that which drew from out the boundless deep Turns again home.

Twilight and evening bell, And after that the dark!

And may there be no sadness of farewell.

When I embark;

For tho' from out our bourne of Time and Place

The flood may bear me far, I hope to see my Pilot face to face When I have crossed the bar. 1889.

ELIZABETH BARRETT BROWNING

SONNETS FROM THE PORTUGUESE'

I

I THOUGHT once how Theocritus had

Of the sweet years, the dear and wished-

for years,

Who each one in a gracious hand appears
To bear a gift for mortals, old or young:
And, as I mused it in his antique tongue,
I saw, in gradual vision through my tears.

The sweet, sad years, the melancholy

years,

Those of my own life, who by turns had flung

A shadow across me. Straightway I was 'ware,

So weeping, how a mystic Shape did move

Behind me, and drew me backward by the hair;

And a voice said in mastery, while I strove,—

"Guess now who holds thee?"—"Death,"
I said, But, there,

The silver answer rang,—"Not Death, but Love."

II

But only three in all God's universe Have heard this word thou hast said,—

Himself, beside

Thee speaking, and me listening! and replied

One of us . . . that was God, . . . and laid the curse

So darkly on my eyelids, as to amerce My sight from seeing thee,—that if I had died,

The deathweights, placed there, would have signified

Less absolute exclusion. "Nay" is worse

From God than from all others, O my friend!

Men could not part us with their worldly jars,

Nor the seas change us, nor the tempests bend;

Our hands would touch for all the mountain-bars:

And, heaven being rolled between us at the end,

We should but vow the faster for the stars.

TII 2

UNLIKE are we, unlike, O princely Heart! Unlike our uses and our destinies.

Our ministering two angels look surprise
On one another, as they strike athwart
Their wings in passing. Thou, bethink thee, art

A guest for queens to social pageantries, With gages from a hundred brighter eyes

Than tears even can make mine, to play thy part

Of chief musician. What hast thou to

With looking from the lattice-lights at me,

A poor, tired, wandering singer, singing through

The dark, and leaning up a cypress tree?
The chrism is on thine head,—on mine,
the dew.—

And Death must dig the level where these agree.

IV

Thou hast thy calling to some palacefloor,

Most gracious singer of high poems!

The dancers will break footing, from the

Of watching up thy pregnant lips for more.

1 See the Letters of Elizabeth Barrett Browning, 1, 316-317.

² See the Letters of Robert Browning and Elizabeth Barrett Barrett, I, 74-75. (Jay 24, 1845.)

And dost thou lift this house's latch too poor

For hand of thine? and canst thou think and bear

To let thy music drop here unaware
In folds of golden fulness at my door?
Look up and see the casement broken in,
The bats and owlets builders in the roof!
My cricket chirps against thy mandolin.
Hush, call no echo up in further proof
Of desolation! there's a voice within
That weeps... as thou must sing... alone, aloof.

\mathbf{v}

I LIFT my heavy heart up solemnly, As once Electra her sepulchral urn, And looking in thine eyes, I overturn The ashes at thy feet. Behold and see What a great heap of grief lay hid in me,

And how the red wild sparkles dimly burn

and shred

Through the ashen grayness. If thy foot in scorn

Could tread them out to darkness utterly, It might be well perhaps. But if instead

Thou wait beside me for the wind to

The gray dust up, . . . those laurels on

thine head,
O my Belovèd, will not shield thee so,
That none of all the fires shall scorch

The hair beneath. Stand farther off then! go.

VI 1

Go from me. Yet I feel that I shall stand

Henceforward in thy shadow. Nevermore

Alone upon the threshold of my door Of individual life, I shall command The uses of my soul, nor lift my hand Serenely in the sunshine as before, Without the sense of that which I forbore—

Thy touch upon the palm. The widest

Doom takes to part us, leaves thy heart in mine

With pulses that beat double. What I

1 See the Letters of R. B. and E. B. B., I, 74-75, and 144. And what I dream include thee, as the

Must taste of its own grapes. And when I sue

God for myself, He hears that name of thine,

And sees within my eyes the tears of two.

VII

THE face of all the world is changed, I think,

Since first I heard the footsteps of thy

Move still, oh, still, beside me, as they stole

Betwixt me and the dreadful outer brink Of obvious death, where I, who thought to sink,

Was caught up into love, and taught the whole

Of life in a new rhythm. The cup of God gave for baptism, I am fain to drink, And praise its sweetness, Sweet, with thee anear.

The names of country, heaven, are changed away

For where thou art or shalt be, there or here;

And this . . . this lute and song . . . loved yesterday,

(The singing angels know) are only dear Because thy name moves right in what they say.

VIII 1

What can I give thee back, O liberal And princely giver, who hast brought the gold

And purple of thine heart, unstained, untold,

And laid them on the outside of the wall

For such as I to take or leave withal, In unexpected largesse? am I cold, Ungrateful, that for these most manifold High gifts, I render nothing back at all? Not so; not cold,—but very poor instead.

Not so; not cold,—but very poor instead.
Ask God who knows. For frequent tears have run

The colors from my life, and left so dead And pale a stuff, it were not fitly done To give the same as pillow to thy head. Go farther! let it serve to trample on.

¹ With this Sonnet and the next, compare the Letters, I, 183-5.

IX

Can it be right to give what I can give?
To let thee sit beneath the fall of tears
As salt as mine, and hear the sighing
years

Re-sighing on my lips renunciative

Through those infrequent smiles which fail to live

For all thy adjurations? O my fears,
That this can scarce be right! We are not peers,

So to be lovers; and I own, and grieve. That givers of such gifts as mine are,

Be counted with the ungenerous. Out,

alas

I will not soil thy purple with my dust, Nor breathe my poison on thy Veniceglass,

Nor give thee any love—which were unjust.

Beloved, I only love thee! let it pass.

X

YET. love, mere love, is beautiful indeed And worthy of acceptation. Fire is bright,

Let temple burn, or flax; an equal light Leaps in the flame from cedar-plank or

weed:

And love is fire. And when I say at need I love three... mark!...I love three—in thy sight

I stand transfigured, glorified aright, With conscience of the new rays that proceed Out of my face toward thine. There's nothing low

In love, when love the lowest: meanest creatures

Who love God, God accepts while loving

And what I feel, across the inferior features

Of what I am, doth flash itself, an I show How that great work of Love enhances Nature's.

XI

And therefore if to love can be desert, I am not all unworthy. Checks as pale As these you see, and trembling knees that fail

To bear the burden of a heavy heart,— This weary minstrel-life that once was girt

To climb Aornus, and can scarce avail To pipe now 'gainst the valley nighting ale A melancholy music,—why advert

To these things? O Beloved, it is plain I am not of thy worth nor for thy place! And yet, because I love thee, I obtain

From that same love this vindicating

To live on still in love, and yet in vain.—
To bless thee, yet renounce thee to thy face.

XII

Indeed this very love which is my boast, And which, when rising up from breast to brow.

Doth crown me with a ruby large enow To draw men's eyes and prove the inner cost.—

This love even, all my worth, to the utter-

I should not love withal, unless that thou Hadst set me an example, shown me how.

When first thine earnest eyes with mine were crossed,

And love called love. And thus, I cannot speak

Of love even, as a good thing of my own:
Thy soul hath snatched up mine all faint
and weak,

And placed it by thee on a golden throne,—

And that I love (O soul, we must be meek!)

Is by thee only, whom I love alone.

IIIX

And wilt thou have me fashion into speech

The love I bear thee, finding words enough,

And hold the torch out, while the winds are rough,

Between our faces, to cast light on each?--

I drop it at thy feet. I cannot teach My hand to hold my spirit so far off

From myself—me—that I should bring thee proof

In words, of love hid in me out of reach. Nay, let the silence of my womanhood Commend my woman-love to thy be-

Seeing that I stand unwon, however wooed,

And rend the garment of my life, in brief,

By a most dauntless, voiceless fortitude. Lest one touch of this heart convey its grief.

XIV 1

If thou must love me, let it be for nought Except for love's sake only. Do not say "I love her for her smile—her look—her

Of speaking gently,—for a trick of thought

That falls in well with mine, and certes brought

A sense of pleasant ease on such a

day"—
For these things in themselves, Belovèd,

Be changed, or change for thee,—and love, so wrought,

May be unwrought so. Neither love me

Thine own dear pity's wiping my cheeks

dry,—
A creature might forget to weep, who

Thy bore comfort long, and lose thy love thereby!

But love me for love's sake, that ever-

Thou mayst love on, through love's eternity.

XV

Accuse me not, beseech thee, that I wear

Too calm and sad a face in front of thine:

For we two look two ways, and cannot shine

With the same sunlight on our brow and hair.

On me thou lookest with no doubting care.

As on a bee shut in a crystalline:

Since sorrow hath shut me safe in love's divine,

And to spread wing and fly in the outer

Were most impossible failure, if I strove To fail so. But I look on thee—on thee—Beholding, besides love, the end of love, Hearing oblivion beyond memory; As one who sits and gazes from above, Over the rivers to the bitter sea.

XVI^2

AND yet, because thou overcomest so, Because thou art more noble and like a king,

¹ Compare the Letters, I, 256, 274-5, 506, 508. ² Compare the Letters, I, 545. Thou canst prevail against my fears and fling

Thy purple round me, till my heart shall grow
Too close against thine heart henceforth to know

How it shook when alone. Why, conquering

May prove as lordly and complete a thing

In lifting upward, as in crushing low!

And as a vanquished soldier yields his sword

To one who lifts him from the bloody earth,

Even so, Belovèd, I at last record,

Here ends my strife. If thou invite me forth,

I rise above abasement at the word.

Make thy love larger to enlarge my worth.

XVII

My poet, thou canst touch on all the notes

God set between His After and Before, And strike up and strike off the general roar

Of the rushing worlds a melody that floats.

In a serene air purely. Antidotes
Of medicated music, answering for Mankind's forlornest uses, thou canst

pour
From thence into their ears. God's will devotes

Thine to such ends, and mine to wait on thine.

How, Dearest, wilt thou have me for most use?

A hope, to sing by gladly? or a fine Sad memory, with thy songs to interfuse?

A shade, in which to sing—of palm or pine?

A grave, on which to rest from singing?
Choose.

XVIII

I NEVER gave a lock of hair away
To a man, Dearest, except this to thee,
Which now upon my fingers thoughtfully,

I ring out to the full brown length and

"Take it." My day of youth went yesterday:

My hair no longer bounds to my foot's glee,

Nor plant I it from rose or myrtle-tree, As girls do, any more; it only may

Now shade on two pale cheeks the mark of tears.

Taught drooping from the head that hangs aside

Through sorrow's trick. I thought the funeral-shears

Would take this first, but love is justified.—

Take it thou, finding pure, from all those years,

The kiss my mother left here when she

XIX

THE soul's Rialto hath its merchandise; I barter curl for curl upon that mart, And from my poet's forehead to my heart

Receive this lock which outweighs argosies.-

As purply black, as erst to Pindar's eyes
The dim purpureal tresses gloomed athwart

The nine white Muse-brows. For this counterpart,

The bay-crown's shade, Belovèd, I surmise.

Still lingers on thy curl, it is so black!

Thus, with a fillet of smooth-kissing breath,

I tie the shadows safe from gliding back, And lay the gift where nothing hindereth;

Here on my heart, as on thy brow, to lack

No natural heat till mine grows cold in death.

XX^{1}

BELOVED, my Belovèd, when I think That thou wast in the world a year ago, What time I sat alone here in the snow And saw no footprint, heard the silence

No moment at thy voice, but, link by link,

Went counting all my chains as if that

They never could fall off at any blow

Struck by thy possible hand,—why, thus I drink

Of life's great cup of wonder! Wonderful,

Never to feel thee thrill the day or night With personal act or speech, -nor ever cull Some prescience of thee with the blossoms white

Thou sawest growing! Atheists are as dull.

Who cannot guess God's presence out of sight.

XXI 1

Say over again, and yet once over again, That thou dost love me. Though the word repeated

Should seem "a cuckoo-song," as thou dost treat it,

Remember, never to the hill or plain,

Valley and wood, without her cuckoostrain

Comes the fresh Spring in all her green completed.

Belovèd, I, amid the darkness greeted By a doubtful spirit-voice, in that doubt's

Cry, "Speak once more—thou lovest!"
Who can fear

Too many stars, though each in heaven shall roll,

Too many flowers, though each shall crown the year?

Say thou dost love me, love me, love me
—toll

The silver iterance!—only minding,
Dear,

To love me also in silence with thy soul.

HXX

When our two souls stand up erect and strong,

Face to face, silent, drawing nigh and nigher,

Until the lengthening wings break into fire

At either curved point,—what bitter wrong

Can the earth do to us, that we should not long

Be here contented? Think. In mounting higher,

The angels would press on us and aspire To drop some golden orb of perfect song Into our deep, dear silence. Let us stay Rather on earth, Belovèd,—where the

Contrarious moods of men recoil away
And isolate pure spirits, and permit

A place to stand and love in for a day, With darkness and the death-hour round ing it.

[!] Compare the Letters, I, 147.

¹ Compare the Letters, I, 336.

XXIII 1

Is it indeed so? If I lay here dead,

Wouldst thou miss any life in losing mine?

And would the sun for thee more coldly shine

Because of grave-damps falling round my head?

I marrelled, my Beloved, when I read Thy thought so in the letter. I am

But . . . so much to thee? Can I pour thy wine

While my hands tremble? Then my soul, instead

Of dreams of death, resumes life's lower range.

Then, love me, Love! look on mebreathe on me!

As brighter ladies do not count it strange,

For love, to give up acres and degree,
I yield the grave for thy sake, and exchange

My near sweet view of Heaven, for earth with thee!

XXIV

LET the world's sharpness, like a clasping knife,

Shut in upon itself and do no harm In this close hand of Love, now soft and warm.

And let us hear no sound of human strife

After the click of the shutting. Life to life—

I lean upon thee, Dear, without alarm, And feel as safe as guarded by a charm Against the stab of worldlings, who if rife

Are weak to injure. Very whitely still The lilies of our lives may reassure

Their blossoms from their roots, accessible

Alone to heavenly dews that drop not fewer,

Growing straight, out of man's reach, on the hill. [us poor. God only, who made us rich, can make

XXV

A HEAVY heart, Belovéd, have I borne From year to year until I saw thy face, And sorrow after sorrow took the place Of all those natural joys as lightly worn

¹ Compare the Letters, I, 337, 345, 350.

As the stringed pearls, each lifted in its

By a beating heart at dance-time.
Hopes apace

Were changed to long despairs, till God's own grace

Could scarcely lift above the world for-

My heavy heart. Then thou didst bid me bring

And let it drop adown thy calmly great Deep being! Fast it sinketh, as a thing Which its own nature doth precipitate, While thine doth close above it, mediating Betwixt the stars and the unaccomplished fate.

XXVI

I LIVED with visions for my company Instead of men and women, years ago, And found them gentle mates, nor thought to know

A sweeter music than they played to

But soon their trailing purple was not

free
Of this world's dust, their lutes did silent grow,

And I myself grew faint and blind be-

Their vanishing eyes. Then THOU didst come—to be.
Belovèd, what they seemed. Their shining fronts,

Their spaces their splenders (better yet

Their songs, their splendors (better, yet the same,

As river-water hallowed into fonts), Met in thee, and from out thee over came

My soul with satisfaction of all wants:
Because God's gifts put man's best dreams to shame.

ZXVII 1

My own Belovèc, who hast lifted me From this drear flat of earth where I was thrown,

And, in betwixt the languid ringlets, blown

A life-breath, till the forehead hopefully

Shines out again, as all the angels see, Before thy saving kiss! My own, my

Who camest to me when the world was gone,

¹ Compare the Letters, I, 595.

And I who looked for only God, found thee!

I find thee; I am safe, and strong, and glad.

As one who stands in dewless asphodel Looks backward on the tedious time he

In the upper life,—so I, with bosomswell.

Make witness, here, between the good and bad.

That Love, as strong as Death, retrieves as well.

XXVIII 1

My letters! all dead paper, mute and white!

And yet they seem alive and quivering Against my tremulous hands which loose the string

And let them drop down on my knee to-night.

This said,—he wished to have me in his sight

Once, as a friend: this fixed a day in spring

To come and touch my hand . . . a simple thing,

Yet I wept for it !- this, . . . the paper's light . . . Said, Dear, I love thee; and I sank and quailed

As if God's future thundered on my

This said, I am thine—and so its ink has paled

With lying at my heart that beat too fast.

And this . . . O Love, thy words have ill availed

If, what this said, I dared repeat at last!

XXIX

I THINK of thee !- my thoughts do twine and bud

About thee, as wild vines, about a tree, Put out broad leaves, and soon there's nought to see

Except the straggling green which hides the wood.

Yet, O my palm-tree, be it understood I will not have my thoughts instead of

Who art dearer, better! Rather, instantly

Renew thy presence; as a strong tree

1 Compare the Letters, I, 6, 70, 365.

Rustle thy boughs and set thy trunk all bare.

And let these bands of greenery which insphere thee

Drop heavily down,—burst, shattered, everywhere!

Because, in this deep joy to see and hear thee

And breathe within thy shadow a new

I do not think of thee-I am too near thee.

XXX

I SEE thine image through my tears tonight.

And yet to-day I saw thee smiling. How

Refer the cause?—Beloved, is it thou Or I, who makes me sad? The acolyte Amid the chanted joy and thankful rite May so fall flat, with pale insensate brow.

On the altar-stair. I hear thy voice and

Perplexed, uncertain, since thou art out of sight,

As he, in his swooning ears, the choir's Amen.

Beloved, dost thou love? or did I see all The glory as I dreamed, and fainted when

Too vehement light dilated my ideal, For my soul's eyes? Will that light come again,

As now these tears come—falling hot and real?

IXXXI

Thou comest! all is said without a word. I sit beneath thy looks as children do In the noon-sun, with souls that tremble through

Their happy eyelids from an unaverred Yet prodigal inward joy. Behold, I

In that last doubt! and yet I cannot rue The sin most, but the occasion—that we Should for a moment stand unministered

By a mutual presence. Ah, keep near and close.

Thou dovelike help! and, when my fears would rise,

With thy broad heart serenely interpose:

Brood down with thy divine sufficiencies

Tacse thoughts which tremble when bereft of those.

Like callow birds left desert to the skies.

XXXII

The first time that the sun rose on thine oath

To love me, I looked forward to the moon

To slacken all those bonds which seemed too soon

And quickly tied to make a lasting troth.

Quick-loving hearts, I thought, may quickly loathe;

And, looking on myself, I seemed not

For such man's love;—more like an outof-tune

Worn viol, a good singer would be wroth

To spoil his song with, and which, snatched in haste,

Is laid down at the first ill-sounding

I did not wrong myself so, but I placed A wrong on thee. For perfect strains may float

'Neath master-hands, from instruments defaced.—

And great souls, at one stroke, may do and doat.

IIIXXX

YES, call me by my pet-name! let me hear

The name I used to run at, when a child, From innocent play, and leave the cowslips piled,

To glance up in some face that proved me dear

With the look of its eyes. I miss the Fond voices which, being drawn and reconciled

Into the music of Heaven's undefiled, Call me no longer. Silence on the bier,

While I call God—call God!—So let thy mouth

Be heir to those who are now examinate. Gather the north flowers to complete the south,

And catch the early love up in the late. Yes, call me by that name,—and I, in truth,

With the same heart, will answer and not wait.

XXXIV

With the same heart, I said, I'll answer thee

As those, when thou shalt call me by my name—

Lo, the vain promise! is the same, the same,

Perplexed and ruffled by life's strategy? When called before, I told how hastily I dropped my flowers or brake off from a game,

To run and answer with the smile that forum and answer with the smile that

At play last moment, and went on with

Through my obedience. When I answer

I drop a grave thought, break from solitude;

Yet still my heart goes to thee—ponder how--

Not as to a single good, but all my good! Lay thy hand on it, best one, and allow That no child's foot could run fast as this blood.

VXXX

If I leave all for thee, wilt thou ex-

And be all to me? Shall I never miss Home-talk and blessing and the common

That comes to each in turn, nor count it strange,

When I look up, to drop on a new range Of walls and floors, another home than this?

Nay, wilt thou fill that place by me which is Filled by dead eyes too tender to know change?

That's hardest. If to conquer love, has tried,

To conquer grief, tries more, as all things prove;

For grief indeed is love and grief beside. Alas, I have grieved so I am hard to love. Yet love me--wilt thou? Open thine heart wide.

And fold within the wet wings of thy dove.

XXXVI

When we met first and loved, I did not build

Upon the event with marble. Could it mean

1 Compare the Letters, I, 361.

Fo last, a love set pendulous between Sorrow and sorrow? Nay, I rather thrilled, Distrusting every light that seemed to gild

The onward path, and feared to overlean A finger even. And, though I have grown serene
And strong since then, I think that God has willed

A still renewable fear . . . O love, O troth . . .

Lest these enclaspèd hands should never hold,

This mutual kiss drop down between us both

As an unowned thing, once the lips being

And Love, be false! if he, to keep one oath,

Must lose one joy, by his life's star fore-told.

XXXVII

PARDON, oh, pardon, that my soul should make,

Of all that strong divineness which I

For thine and thee, an image only so Formel of the sand, and fit to shift and

It is that distant years which did not

Thy sovranty, recoiling with a blow, Have forced my swimming brain to un-

Their doubt and dread, and blindly to forsake

Thy purity of likeness and distort

Thy worthiest love to a worthless counterfeit:

As if a shipwrecked Pagan, safe in port, His guardian sea-god to commemorate, Should set a sculptured porpoise, gills asnort

And vibrant tail, within the temple-gate.

HLAZZZ

FIRST time he kissed me, he but only kissed

The fingers of this hand wherewith I write:

And ever since, it grew more clean and white,

Slow to world-greetings, quick with its "Oh, list."

When the angels speak. A riag of amethyst

I could not wear here, plainer to my sight,

Than that first kiss. The second passed in height

The first, and sought the forehead, and half missed.

Half falling on the hair. O beyond meed!
That was the chrism of love, which love's own crown.

With sanctifying sweetness, did precede.
The third upon my lips was folded down
In perfect, purple state; since when, in deed.

I have been proud and said, "My love, my own."

XIXXX

BECAUSE thou hast the power and own'st the grace

To look through and behind this mask of me

(Against which years have beat thus blanchingly

With their rains), and behold my soul's true face,

The dim and weary witness of life's race,—

Because thou hast the faith and love to see,

Through that same soul's distracting lethargy,

The patient angel waiting for a place
In the new H avens,—because nor sin nor woe.

Nor God's infliction, nor death's neighborhood,

Nor all which others viewing, turn to

Nor all which makes me tired of all, selfviewed,—

Nothing repels thee, . . . Dearest, teach me so

To pour out gratitude, as thou dost, good!

XL

Oн, yes! they love through all this world of ours!

I will not gainsay love, called love forsooth.

I have heard love talked in my early youth,

And since, not so long back but that the flowers

Then gathered, smell still. Mussulmans and Giaours

Throw kerchiefs at a smile, and have no ruth

For any weeping. Polypheme's white tooth

Slips on the nut if, after frequent showers,

The shell is over-smooth,—and not so much

Will turn the thing called love, aside to hate,

Or else to oblivion. But thou art not such

A lover, my Belovèd! thou canst wait Through sorrow and sickness, to bring souls to touch.

And think it soon when others cry "Too late."

XLI

I THANK all who have loved me in their hearts.

With thanks and love from mine. Deep thanks to all

Who paused a little near the prison-wall To hear my music in its louder parts

Ere they went onward, each one to the mart's

Or temple's occupation, beyond call.

But thou, who, in my voice's sink and fall

When the sob took it, thy divinest Art's Own instrument didst drop down at thy foot

To hearken what I said between my tears, . . .

Instruct me how to thank thee! Oh, to shoot

My soul's full meaning into future years, That they should lend it utterance, and salute

Love that endures, from Life that disappears!

XLII

"My future will not copy fair my past"_1

I wrote that once; and thinking at my side

My ministering life-angel justified

The word by his appealing look upcast
To the white throne of God, I turned at last.

And there, instead, saw thee, not unallied To angels in thy soul! Then I, long tried

By natural ills, received the comfort fast, While budding, at thy sight, my pilgrim's staff

¹ A sonuer of Mrs. Browning's, of 1844, begins with this line. See also the Letters, I. 281.

Gave out green leaves with morning dews impearled.

I seek no copy now of life's first half: Leave here the pages with long musing curled.

And write me new my future's epigraph, New angel mine, unhoped for in the world!

XLIII

How do I love thee? Let me count the ways.

I love thee to the depth and breadth and height

My soul can reach, when feeling out of sight

For the ends of Being and ideal Grace. I love thee to the level of everyday's Most quiet need, by sun and candle-light.

I love thee freely, as men strive for Right;

I love thee purely, as they turn from Praise,

I love thee with the passion put to use In my old griefs, and with my childhood's

I love thee with a love I seemed to lose
With my lost saints,—I love thee with the breath,

Smiles, tears, of all my life!—and, if God

I shall but love thee better after death.

XLIV

Beloved, thou hast brought me many flowers

Plucked in the garden, all the summer through

And winter, and it seemed as if they grew
In this close room, nor missed the sun .
and showers.

and showers. So, in the like name of that love of ours, Take back these thoughts which here unfolded too,

And which on warm and cold days I withdrew

From my heart's ground. Indeed, those beds and bowers

Be overgrown with bitter weeds and rue, And wait thy weeding; yet here's eglantine,

Here's ivy!—take them, as I used to do Thy flowers, and keep them where they shall not pine.

Instruct thine eyes to keep their colors true.

And tell thy soul their roots are left in mine. [1847.] 1850.

SONGS FROM PARACELSUS

HEAP cassia, sandal-buds and stripes Of labdanum, and aloe-balls,

Smeared with dull nard an Indian wipes From out her hair: such balsam falls Down sea-side mountain pedestals,

From tree-tops where tired winds are fain,

Spent with the vast and howling main, To treasure half their island-gain.

And strew faint sweetness from some

Egyptian's fine worm-eaten shroud Which breaks to dust when once unrolled;

Or shredded perfume, like a cloud From closet long to quiet vowed, With mothed and dropping arras hung, Mouldering her lute and books among, As when a queen, long dead, was young.

Over the sea our galleys went,
With cleaving prows in order brave
To a speeding wind and a bounding
wave,

A gallant armament:

Each bark built out of a forest-tree
Left leafy and rough as first it grew.
And nailed all over the gaping sides,
Within and without, with black bull-hides,

Seethed in fat and suppled in flame, To bear the playful billows' game: So, each good ship was rude to see, Rude and bare to the outward view,

But each upbore a stately tent Where cedar pales in scented row Kept out the flakes of the dancing brine, And an awning drooped the mast below, In fold on fold of the purple fine, That neither noontide nor starshine Nor moonlight cold which maketh maa,

Might pierce the regal tenement.
When the sun dawned, oh, gay and glad
We set the sail and plied the oar;
But when the night-wind blew like breath.

For joy of one day's voyage more, We sang together on the wide sea, Like men at peace on a peaceful shore; Each sail was loosed to the wind so free, Each helm made sure by the twilight star.

And in a sleep as calm as death,

We, the voyagers from afar,
Lay stretched along, each weary crew
In a circle round its wondrous tent

Whence gleamed soft light and curled rich scent,

And with light and perfume, music too:

So the stars wheeled round, and the darkness past,

And at morn we started beside the mast, And still each ship was sailing fast.

Now, one morn, land appeared—a speck Dim trembling betwixt sea and sky: "Avoid it," cried our pilot, "check

The shout, restrain the eager eye!"
But the heaving sea was black behind
For many a night and many a day,
And land, though but a rock, drew nigh; So, we broke the cedar pales away,

Let the purple awning flap in the wind, And a statue bright was on every deck!

We shouted, every man of us, And steered right into the harbor thus, With pomp and pæan glorious.

A hundred shapes of lucid stone! All day we built its shrine for each, A shrine of rock for every one, Nor paused till in the westering sun

We sat together on the beach To sing because our task was done. When lo! what shouts and merry songs! What laughter all the distance stirs! A loaded raft with happy throngs Of gentle islanders!

"Our isles are just at hand," they cried,

"Like cloudlets faint in even sleeping.

Our temple-gates are opened wide, Our olive-groves thick shade are keep-

For these majestic forms"—they cried. Oh, then we awoke with sudden start From our deep dream, and knew, coolate,

How bare the rock, how devolate, Which had received our precious, freight

Yet we called out—"Depart!
Our gifts, once given, must here abide.
Our work is done; we have no heart
To mar our work,"—we cried. 1835.

PORPHYRIA'S LOVER

The rain set early in to-night,
The sullen wind was soon awake,
It tore the elm-tops down for spite,
And did its worst to vex the lake:
I listened with heart fit to break.
When glided in Porphyria; straight
She shut the cold out and the storm,
And kneeled and made the cheerless grate

Blaze up, and all the cottage warm; Which done, she rose, and from her

Withdrew the dripping cloak and shawl.

And laid her soiled gloves by, untied Her hat and let the damp hair fall,

¹ This is the earliest of Browning's great series of dramatic poems in lyric form. It was first printed in the Monthly Repository, 1836, with Johannes Agricola in Meditation; was then included in the Dramatic Lyrics (1842); and is now classed among the Dramatic Romances.

Most of Brownin 2's poems are simply dramatic monologues, without stage directions, often without even the name of the speaker. The reader must remember that it is not Browning who is speaking or telling the story; and must first notice who is speaking, and under what circumstances. Once this is done, most of the alleged "obscurity" of Browning will be found to have disappeared forever.

And, last, she sat down by my side
And called me. When no voice replied,
She put my arm about her waist,

And made her smooth white shoulder bare

And all her yellow hair displaced,
And, stooping, made my cheek lie

And spread, o'er all, her yellow hair, Murmuring how she loved me—she Too weak, for all her heart's endeavor.

To set its struggling passion free
From pride, and vainer ties dissever,
And give herself to me forever.
But passion sometimes would prevail,
Nor could to-night's gay feast restrain

A sudden thought of one so pale
For love of her, and all in vain:
So, she was come through wind and rain.

Be sure I looked up at her eyes
Happy and proud; at last I knew
Porphyria worshipped me; surprise
Made my heart swell, and still it grew

While I debated what to do.

That moment she was mine, mine, fair,

Perfectly pure and good: I found A thing to do, and all her hair In one long yellow string I wound Three times her little throat around, And strangled her. No pain felt she; I am quite sure she felt no pain. As a shut bud that holds a bee,

I warily oped her lids; again
Laughed the blue eyes without a stain.
And I untightened next the tress
About her neck; her cheek once more

Blushed bright beneath my burning kiss:

I propped her head up as before, Only, this time my shoulder bore Her head, which droops upon it still: The smiling rosy little head, So glad it has its utmost will,

That all it scorned at once is fled, And I, its love, am gained instead! Porphyria's love: she guessed not how

Her darling one wish would be heard.

And thus we sit together now,

And all night long we have not stirred, And yet God has not said a word!

1836.

INTRODUCTION

NEW YEAR'S DAY AT ASOLO IN THE TRE-VISAN

A large mean airy chamber. A girl, Pippa, from the silk-mills, springing out of bed.

DAY!

Faster and more fast,

O'er night's brim, day boils at last:

Boils, pure gold, o'er the cloud-cui

Boils, pure gold, o'er the cloud-cup's brim

Where spurting and suppressed it lay, For not a froth-flake touched the rim Of yonder gap in the solid gray

Of the eastern cloud, an hour away;
But forth one wavelet, then another,

curled,
Till the whole sunrise, not to be suppressed,

Rose, reddened, and its seething breast Flickered in bounds, grew gold, then overflowed the world.

Oh Day, if I squander a wavelet of thee, A mite of my twelve-hours' treasure, The least of thy gazes or glances,

(Be they grants thou art bound to or gifts above measure)

One of thy choices or one of thy chances, (Be they tasks God imposed thee or freaks at thy pleasure)

—My Day, if I squander such labor or leisure,

Then shame fall on Asolo, mischief on me!

Thy long blue solemn hours serenely flowing.

Whence earth, we feel, gets steady help and good—

Thy fitful sunshine-minutes, coming, going,
As if earth turned from work in game-

All shall be mine! But thou must treat me not

As prosperous ones are treated, those who live

At hand here, and enjoy the higher lot, In readiness to take what thou wilt give, And free to let alone what thou refusest:

For, Day, my holiday, if thou ill-usest Me, who am only Pippa,—old-year's sorrow,

Cast off last night, will come again tomorrow:

Whereas, if thou prove gentle, I shall borrow

Sufficient strength of thee for new-year's sorrow.

All other men and women that this earth

Belongs to, who all days alike possess, Make general plenty cure particular dearth,

Get more joy one way, if another, less: Thou art my single day, God lends to leaven

What were all earth else, with a feel of heaven,—

Sole light that helps me through the year, thy sun's! Try now! Take Asolo's Four Happiest

Ones—

And let thy morning rain on that superb Great haughty Ottima; can rain disturb Her Sebald's homage? All the while thy rain

Beats fiercest on her shrub-house window pane

He will but press the closer, breathe more warm

Against her cheek; how should she mind the storm?

And, morning past, if mid-day shed a gloom

O'er Jules and Phene,—what care bride and groom

Save for their dear selves? 'T is their marriage day;

And while they leave church and go home their way,

Hand clasping band, within each breast would be

Sunbeams and pleasant weather spite of thee.

Then, for another trial, obscure thy eve With mist,—will Luigi and his mother grieve—

The lady and her child, unmatched, forsooth,

She in her age, as Luigi in his youth, For true content? The cheerful town, warm, close

And safe, the sooner that thou art morese.

Receives them. And yet once again, outbreak

In storm at night on Monsignor, they make

Such stir about,—whom they expect from Rome

To visit Asolo, his brothers' home, And say here masses proper to release

A soul from pain,—what storm dares hurt his peace?

Calm would be pray, with his own thoughts to ward

Thy thunder off, nor want the angels' guard.

But Pippa—just one such mischance would spoil

Her day that lightens the next twelvemonth's toil

At wearisome silk-winding, coil on coil! And here I let time slip for naught! Aha, you foolhardy sunbeam, caught With a single splash from my ewer! You that would mock the best pursuer, Was my basin over-deep?

One splash of water ruins you asleep, And up, up, fleet your brilliant bits Wheeling and counterwheeling. Realing broken beyond healing:

Reeling, broken beyond healing; Now grow together on the ceiling! That will task your wits.

Whoever it was quenched fire first, hoped to see

Morsel after morsel flee As merrily, as giddily . . .

Meantime, what lights my sunbeam on, Where settles by degrees the radiant cripple?

Oh, is it surely blown, my martagon? New-blown and ruddy as St. Agnes'

Plump as the flesh-bunch on some Turk bird's poll!

Be sure if corals, branching 'neath the ripple [roll

Of ocean, bud there, -fairies watch un

Such turban-flowers; I say, such lamps disperse

Thick red flame through that dusk green universe!

I am queen of thee, floweret! And each fleshy blossom Preserve I not—(safer Than leaves that embower it,

Or shells that embosom)
—From weevil and chafer?

Laugh through my pane then; solicit the bee;

Gibe him, be sure; and, in midst of thy glee,

Love thy queen, worship me!

-Worship whom else? For am I not,

Whate'er I please? What shall I please to-day?

My morn, noon, eve and night—how spend my day? To-morrow I must be Pippa who winds silk,

The whole year round, to earn just bread and milk:

But, this one day, I have leave to go,
And play out my fancy's fullest games;
I may fancy all day—and it shall be so—
That I taste of the pleasures, am called by the names

Of the Happiest Four in our Asolo!

See! Up the hillside yonder, through the morning.

Some one shall love me, as the world calls love:

I am no less than Ottima, take warning!
The gardens, and the great stone house above,

And other house for shrubs, all glass in front,

Are mine; where Sebald steals, as he is

Are mine; where Sebald steals, as he is wont,

To court me, while old Luca yet reposes:
And therefore, till the shrub house door
uncloses,

I . . . what now?—give abundant cause for prate

About me--Ottima, I mean -of late, Too bold, too confident she'll still face

down
The spitefullest of talkers in our town.
How we talk in the little town below!

But love, love, love—there's better love, I know!

This foolish love was only day's first offer:

I choose my next love to defy the scoffer

For do not our Bride and Bridegroom

Out of Possagno church at noon? Their house looks over Orcana valley: Why should not I be the bride as soon As Ottima? For I saw, beside, Arrive last night that little bride—

Saw, if you call it seeing her, one flash Of the pale snow-pure cheek and black bright tresses,

Blacker than all except the black eyelash;

I wonder she contrives those lids no dresses!

—So strict was she, the veil Should cover close her pale

Pure cheeks—a bride to look at and scarce touch,

Scarce touch, remember, Jules! For are not such

Used to be tended, flower-like, every feature,

As if one's breath would fray the lily of a creature?

A soft and easy life these ladies lead:
Whiteness in us were wonderful indeed.

Oh, save that brow its virgin dimness, Keep that foot its lady primness, Let those ankles never swerve From their exquisite reserve, Yet have to trip along the streets like me, All but naked to the knee! How will she ever grant her Jules a bliss

So startling as her real first infant kiss? Oh, no—not envy, this!

—Not envy, sure!—for if you gave me Leave to take or to refuse, In earnest, do you think I'd choose

That sort of new love to enslave me?

Mine should have lapped me round from the beginning;

As little fear of losing it as winning:
Lovers grow cold, men learn to hate their wives

their wives,
And only parents' love can last our lives.
At eve the Son and Mother, gentle pair,
Commune inside our turret: what prevents

My being Luigi? While that mossy lair Of lizards through the winter-time is stirred

With each to each imparting sweet intents

For this new-year, as brooding bird to bird—

(For I observe of late, the evening walk Of Luigi and his mother, always ends Inside our ruined turret, where they talk, Calmer than lovers, yet more kind than friends)

-Let me be cared about, kept out of harm.

And schemed for, safe in love as with a charm; Let me be Luigi! If I only knew

What was my mother's face—my father,

Nay, if you come to that, best love of all Is God's; then why not have God's love befall

Myself as, in the palace by the Dome, Monsignor?—who to-night will bless the home

Of his dead brother; and God bless in turn

That heart which beats, those eyes which mildly burn

With love for all men! I, to-night at least,

Would be that holy and beloved priest,

Now wait!—even I already seem to share In God's love: what does New-year's hymn declare? What other meaning do these verses

What other meaning do these verses bear?

All service ranks the same with God:
If now, as formerly he trod
Paradise, his presence fills
Our earth, each only as God wills
Can work—God's puppets, best and

Are we; there is no last nor first.

worst.

Say not "a small event!" Why "small?"

Costs it more pain that this, ye call

A "great event," should come to pass,

Than that? Untwine me from the

Of deeds which make up life, one deed Power shall fall short in or exceed!

And more of it, and more of it!—oh yes— I will pass each, and see their happiness, And envy none—being just as great, no doubt,

Useful to men, and dear to God as they!
A pretty thing to care about

So mightily, this single holiday!
But let the sun shine! Wherefore repine?

-With thee to lead me, O Day of mine,

Down the grass path gray with dew, Under the pine-wood, blind with boughs, Where the swallow never flew

Nor yet cicala dared carouse— No. dared carouse!

[She enters the street.

I. MORNING

Up the Hillside, inside the Shrub-house. Luca's Wife, Ottima, and her Paramour, the German Sebald.

Sebald. [sings] Let the watching lids wink!

Day's ablaze with eyes, think!

Deep into the night, drink!

Ottima. Night: Such may be your Rhineland nights, perhaps;

But this blood-red beam through the shutter's chink

-We call such light, the morning: let us see!

Mind how you grope your way, though!

How these tall

Naked geraniums straggle! Push the lattice

Behind that frame !—Nay, do I bid you?
—Sebald,

It shakes the dust down on me! Why, of course

The slide-bolt catches. Well, are you content,

Or must I find you something else to spoil?

Kiss and be friends, my Sebald! Is 't full morning?

Oh, don't speak then!

Seb. Ay, thus it used to be!

Ever your house was, I remember, shut
Till mid-day; I observed that, as I strolled

On mornings through the vale here;

Were noisy, washing garments in the brook,

Hinds drove the slow white oxen up the hills:

But no, your house was mute, would ope no eye!

And wisely: you were plotting one thing
there.

Nature, another outside. I looked up—Rough white wood shutters, rusty iron bars.

Silent as death, blind in a flood of light.
Oh, I remember !—and the peasants laughed

And said, "The old man sleeps with the young wife."

This house was his, this chair, this window—his.

Otti. Ah, the clear morning! I can see Saint Mark's;

That black streak is the belfry. Stop: Vicenza

Should lie . . . there's Padua, plain enough, that blue!

Look o'er my shoulder, follow my finger!

Seb.

Morning?

It seems to me a night with a sun added.

Where's dew, where's freshness? That bruised plant, I bruised

In getting through the lattice yestereve, Droops as it did. See, here's my elbow's mark

I' the dust o' the sill.

Otti. Oh, shut the lattice, pray!
Seb. Let me lean out. I cannot scent blood here,

Foul as the morn may be.

There, shut the world out! How do you feel now, Ottima? There,

The world and all outside! Let us throw off

This mask: how do you bear yourself?

Let's out

With all of it!

Otti. Best never speak of it.
Seb. Best speak again and yet again
of it,

Till words cease to be more than words.
"His blood."

For instance—let those two words mean, "His blood"

And nothing more. Notice, I'll say them now, "His blood."

Otti. Assuredly if I repented
The deed—

Seb. Repent? Who should repent, or why?

What puts that in your head? Did I once say

That I repented?

Otti. No; I said the deed . . . Seb. "The deed" and "the event"— just now it was

"Our passion's fruit"—the devil take such cant!

Say, once and always, Luca was a wittol, I am his cut-throat, you are . . .

Otti. Here's the wine;
I brought it when we left the house
above,

And glasses too—wine of both sorts.
Black? White then?

Seb. But am not I his cut-throat? What are you?

Otti. There trudges on his business from the Duomo

Benet the Capuchin, with his brown

And bare feet; always in one place at church.

Close under the stone wall by the south entry.

I used to take him for a brown cold piece

Of the wall's self, as out of it he rose
To let me pass—at first, I say, I used:
Now, so has that dumb figure fastened on me.

I rather should account the plastered wall

A piece of him, so chilly does it strike. This, Sebald?

Seb. No, the white wine—the white wine!

Well, Ottima, I promised no new year Should rise on us the ancient shameful

Nor does it rise. Pour on! To your black eyes!

Do you remember last damned New Year's day?

Otti. You brought those foreign prints. We looked at them

Over the wine and fruit. I had to scheme

To get him from the fire. Nothing but saying
His own set wants the proof-mark, roused him up

To hunt them out.

Seb. 'Faith, he is not alive To fondle you before my face.

Otti. Do you Fondle me then! Who means to take your life

For that, my Sebald?

Seb. Hark you, Ottima!
One thing to guard against. We'll not make much

One of the other—that is, not make more

Parade of warmth, childish officious coil.

Than yesterday: as if, sweet, I supposed Proof upon proof were needed now, now first,

To show I love you—yes, still love you love you

In spite of Luca and what's come to him —Sure sign we had him ever in our thoughts,

White sneering old reproachful face and all!

We 'll even quarrel, love, at times, as if We still could lose each other, were not tied

By this: conceive you?

Otti. Love!

Seb. Not tied so sure! Because though I was wrought upon,

have struck
His insolence back into him—am I

So surely yours?—therefore forever yours?

Otti. Love, to be wise, (one counsel pays another,)

Should we have—months ago, when first we loved,

For instance that May morning we two stole Under the green ascent of sycamores—

Under the green ascent of sycamores— If we had come upon a thing like that Suddenly . . . Seb. "A thing"—there again—" a

Seb. "A thing"—there again—" a thing!"

Otti. Then, Venus' body, had we come upon

My husband Luca Gaddi's murdered corpse

Within there, at his couch-foot, covered close—

Would you have pored upon it? Why persist
In poring now upon it? For 't is here

As much as there in the deserted house:
You cannot rid your eyes of it. For me.
Now he is dead I hate him worse: I hate . . .

Dare you stay here? I would go back and hold

His two dead hands, and say, "I hate you worse, Luca, than"...

Seb. Off, off—take your hands off mine,

'T is the hot evening—off! oh, morning is it?

Otti. There's one thing must be done; you know what thing.

Come in and help to carry. We may sleep [night.

Anywhere in the whole wide house to-Seb. What would come, think you, if we let him lie

Just as he is? Let him lie there until The angels take him! He is turned by this Off from his face beside, as you will see. Otti. This dusty pane might serve for looking-glass.

Three, four—four gray hairs! Is it so you said

A plait of hair should wave across my neck?

No-this way.

Seb. Ottima, I would give your neck, Each splendid shoulder, both those breasts of yours.

That this were undone! Killing! Kill

the world,

So Luca lives again !- av, lives to sputter His fulsome dotage on you-ves, and feign

Surprise that I return at eve to sup, When all the morning I was loitering here-

Bid me dispatch my business and begone. I would . . . See!

Seb. No. I'll finish. Do you think I fear to speak the bare truth once for all?

All we have talked of, is, at bottom, fine To suffer; there's a recompense in guilt; One must be venturous and fortunate: What is one young for, else? In age

we'll sigh

O'er the wild reckless wicked days flown over:

Still, we have lived: the vice was in its place.

But to have eaten Luca's bread, have

His clothes, have felt his money swell my purse-

Do lovers in romances sin that way? Why, I was starving when I used to call And teach you music, starving while you plucked me

These flowers to smell!

Otti. My poor lost friend! Seb. He gave me Life, nothing less: what if he did reproach

My perfidy, and threaten, and do more-Had he no right? What was to wonder at?

He sat by us at table quietly:

Why must you lean across till our cheeks touched?

Could be do less than make pretence to strike?

'Tis not the crime's sake-I'd commit ten crimes Grater, to have this crime wiped out, undone!

And you-O how feel you? Feel you for me!

Otti. Well then, I love you better now than ever, (von) -And best (look at me while I speak to Best for the crime; nor do I grieve, in truth.

This mask, this simulated ignorance, This affectation of simplicity,

Falls off our crime; this naked crime of

May not now be looked over: look it down!

Great? let it be great; but the joys it brought,

Pay they or no its price? Come: they or it!

Speak not! The past, would you give up the past

Such as it is, pleasure and crime together?

Give up that noon I owned my love for you?

The garden's silence: even the single

Persisting in his toil, suddenly stopped, And where he hid you only could surmise.

By some campanula chalice set a-swing. Who stammered-"Yes, I love you?" And I drew Seb.

Back; put far back your face with both my hands

Lest you should grow too full of mevour face

So seemed athirst for my whole soul and body!

Otti. And when I ventured to receive you here, Made you steal hither in the mornings-

When I used to look up 'neath the shrub-house here, Till the red fire on its glazed windows spread

To a vellow haze?

Ah-my sign was, the sun Inflamed the sere side of you chestnuttree

Nipped by the first frost.

You would always laugh Seb. At my wet boots: I had to stride through grass

Over my ankles.

Otti. Then our crowning night! S.b. The July night?

The day of it too, Sebald! When heaven's pillars seemed o'erbowed with heat.

Its black blue canopy suffered descend Close on us both, to weigh down each to

And smother up all life except our life. So lay we till the storm came.

Seb. How it came!
Otti. Buried in woods we lay, you recollect:

Swift ran the searching tempest overhead:

And ever and anon some bright white shaft

Burned through the pine-tree roof, here burned and there,

As if God's messenger through the close wood screen

Plunged and replunged his weapon at a venture,

Feeling for guilty thee and me: then broke

The thunder like a whole sea overhead—Seb. Yes!

Otti.--While I stretched myself upon

you, hands
To hands, my mouth to your hot mouth,

and shook

All my locks loose, and covered you with them-

You. Sebald, the same you!

Seb. Slower, Ottima! Otti. And as we lay—

Seb. Less vehemently! Love me! Forgive me! Take not words, mere words, to heart!

Your breath is worse than wine. Breathe slow, speak slow!

Do not lean on me!

Otti. Sebald, as we lay, Rising and falling only with our pants, Who said, "Let death come now! 'T is right to die!

Right to be punished! Naught completes such bliss

But wee!" Who said that?

Seb. How did we ever rise?
Was 't that we slept? Why did it end?
Otti. I felt you

Taper into a point the ruffled ends
Of my loose locks 'twixt both your humid lips,

My hair is fallen now: knot it again!
Seb. I kiss you now, dear Ottima, now and now!

This way? Will you forgive me—be once more

My great queen?

Otti. Bind it thrice about my brow; Crown me your queen, your spirit's arbitress, Magnificent in sin. Say that!

My great white queen, my spirit's arbi-

Magnific at . . .

[From without is heard the voice of Pippa singing-

The year's at the spring And day's at the morn; Morning's at seven; The hillside's dew-pearled; The lark's on the wing; The snail's on the thorn: God's in his heaven—All's right with the world!

[PIPPA passes.

Seb. God's in his heaven! Do you hear that? Who spoke?

You, you spoke!

Otti. Oh—that little ragged girl!
She must have rested on the step: we give them

But this one holiday the whole year round

Did you ever see our silk-mills—their inside?

There are ten silk-mills now belong to you.

She stoops to pick my double heartsease . . . Sh!

She does not hear: call you out louder!
Seb.
Leave me!
Go, get your clothes on—dress those shoulders!

Otti. Sebald?
Seb. Wipe off that paint! I hate you.
Otti. Miserable!
Seb. My God, and she is emptied of it

Outright now!—how miraculously gone All of the grace—had she not strange grace once?

Why, the blank cheek hangs listless as it likes,

No purpose holds the features up together,

Only the cloven brow and puckered chin Stay in their places: and the very hair, That seemed to have a sort of life in it, Drops, a dead web!

Otti. Speak to me—not of me! Seb.—That round great full-orbed face, where not an angle

Broke the delicious indolence—all broken!

Otti. To me-not of me! Ungrateful, perjured cheat!

A coward too: but ingrate's worse than all!

Beggar-my slave-a fawning, eringing lie!

Leave me! Betray me! I can see your drift!

A lie that walks and eats and drinks!

Seb. My God!

Those morbid olive faultless shoulderblades—

I should have known there was no blood beneath!

Otti. You hate me then? You hate me then?

Seb. To think

She would succeed in her absurd attempt, And fascinate by sinning, show herself Superior—guilt from its excess superior To innocence! That little peasant's voice Has righted all again. Though I be lost, I know which is the better, never fear, Of vice or virtue, purity or lust, Nature or trick! I see what I have done,

Nature or trick! I see what I have done, Entirely now! Oh I am proud to feel Such torments—let the world take credit thence-

I, having done my deed, pay too its price!

I hate, hate—curse you! God's in his heaven!

Otti. —Me!
Me! no, no, Sebald, not yourself—kill
me!

Mine is the whole crime. Do but kill me—then

Yourself—then—presently—first hear me speak!

I always meant to kill myself—wait, you!

Lean on my breast—not as a breast; don't love me

The more because you lean on me, my

Heart's Sebald! There, there, both deaths presently!

Seb. My brain is drowned now—quite drowned; all I feel

Is...is, at swift-recurring intervals,
A hurry-down within me, as of waters
Loosened to smother up some ghastly pit:

There they go--whirls from a black fiery sea!

Otti. Not me —to him, O God, be merciful!

Talk by the way, while PIPPA is passing from the hillside to Orcana. Foreign Students of painting and sculpture, from Venice, assembled opposite the house of JULES, a young French statuary, at Passagno.

Ist Student. Attention! My own post is beneath this window, but the pomegranate clump yonder will hide three or four of you with a little squeezing, and Schramm and his pipe must be flat in the balcony. Four, five—who's a defaulter? We want everybody, for Jules must not be suffered to hurt his bride when the jest's found out.

hurt his bride when the jest's found out.

2d Stud. All here! Only our poet's away—never having much meant to be present, moonstrike him! The airs of that fellow, that Giovacchino! He was in violent love with himself, and had a fair prospect of thriving in his suit, so unmolested was it,—when suddenly a woman falls in love with him, too; and out of pure jealousy he takes himself off to Trieste, immortal poem and all: whereto is this prophetical epitaph appended already, as
Bluphocks assures me,—"Here a mummoth-poem lies, Fouled to death by butterflies." His own fault, the simpleton!
Instead of cramp couplets, each like a knife
in your entrails, he should write, says
Bluphocks, both classically and intelligibly.
—Æsculapius, an Epic. Catalogue of the drugs; Helw's Plaister—One strip Cools your lip. Phabus' emulsion—One bottle
Clears your throttle. Mercury's bolus—
One box Cures...

2d Stud. Subside my fine fellow! If the 3d Stud. Subside, my fine fellow! If the marriage was over by ten o'clock, Jules will certainly be here in a minute with his bride.

2d Stud. Good!—only, so should the poet's muse have been universally acceptable, says Bluphoeks, et canibus nostris... and Delia not better known to our literary dogs than the boy Giovacchino! 1st Stud. To the point, now. Where's Gottlieb, the new-comer? Oh,—listen, Gottlieb, to what has called down this piece of friendly vengeance on Jules, of which we now assemble to witness the winding-up. We are all agreed, all in a tale, observe, when Jules shall burst out on us in a fury by and by; I am spokesman—the verses that are to undeceive Jules bear my name of Lutwyche—but each professes himself alike insulted by this strutting stonesquarer, who came along from Paris to Munich, and thence with a crowd of us to Venice and Possagno here, but proceeds in a day or two alone again-oh, alone indubitably! to Rome and Florence. He, forsooth, take up his portion with these dissolute, brutalized, heartless bunglers!—so he was heard to call us all. Now, is Schramm brutalized, I should like to know? Am I

Gottlieb. Why, somewhat heartless; for, suppose Jules a coxcomb as much as you choose, still, for this mere coxcombry, you will have brushed off—what do folks style it?—the bloom of his life. It is too late to alter? These love letters, now, you call his—I can't laugh at them.

4th Stud. Because you never read the sham letters of our inditing which drew

Gott. His discovery of the truth will be frightful.

4th Stud. That's the joke. But you should have joined us at the beginning: there's no doubt he loves the girl-loves a model he might hire by the hour!

Gott. See here! "He has been accustomed," he writes, "to have Canova's women about him, in stone, and the world's women beside him, in flesh; these being as much below, as those above, his soul's aspiration: but now he is to have the reality." There you laugh again! I say, you wipe off the very dew of his youth.

1st Stud. Schramm! (Take the pipe out of his mouth, somebody!) Will Jules lose the bloom of his youth?

Schramm. Nothing worth keeping is ever lost in this world: look at a blossom it drops presently, having done its service and lasted its time; but fruits succeed, and where would be the blossom's place could it continue? As well affirm that your eye is no longer in your body, because its earliest favorite, whatever it may have first loved to look on, is dead and done with—as that any affection is lost to the soul when its first object, whatever happened first to satisfy it, is superseded in due course. Keep but ever looking, whether with the body's eye or the mind's, and you will soon find something to look on! Has a man done wondering at women?—there follow men, dead and alive, to wonder at. Has he done wondering at men?—there's God to wonder at: and the faculty of wonder may be, at the same time, old and tired enough with respect to its first object, and yet young and fresh sufficiently, so far as concerns its novel one. Thus . . . 1st Stud. Put Schramm's pipe into his mouth again! There, you see! Well, this Jules . . . a wretched fribble—oh, I watched his disportings at Possagno, the other day! Canova's gallery-you know; There he marches first resolvedly past great works by the dozen without vouchsafing an eye: all at once he stops full at the Psiche-fanciulla-cannot pass that old acquaintance without a nod of encouragement-"In your new place, beauty? Then behave yourself as well here as at Munich -I see you!" Next he posts himself deliberately before the unfinished Pictà for half an hour without moving, till up he starts of a sudden, and thrusts his very nose into -I say, into—the group; by which gesture you are informed that precisely the sole point he had not fully mastered in Canova's practice was a certain method of using the drill in the articulation of the knee-jointand that, likewise, has he mastered at Isseth! Good-by, therefore, to poor Canova -whose gallery no longer needs detain his successor Jules, the predestinated novel thinker in marble!

5th Stud. Tell him about the women: go on to the women!

1st Stud. Why, on that matter he could never be supercilious enough. How should we be other (he said) than the poor devils, you see, with those debasing habits we cherish! He was not to wallow in that mire, at least; he would wait, and love only at the proper time, and meanwhile put up with the Psiche-fanciulla. Now, I hap pened to hear of a young Greek—real Greek girl at Malamocco: a true Islander, do you see, with Alciphron's "hair like seamoss" - Schramm knows! - white and quiet as an apparition, and fourteen years old at farthest,—a daughter of Natalia, so she swears-that hag Natalia, who helps us to models at three lire an hour. We selected this girl for the heroine of our jest. So, first, Jules received a scented lettersomebody had seen his Tydeus at the Academy, and my picture was nothing to it: a profound admirer bade him perseverewould make herself known to him ere long. (Paolina, my little friend of the Fenice, transcribes divinely.) And in due time, the mysterious correspondent gave certain hints of her peculiar charms-the pale cheeks, the black hair-whatever, in short, had struck us in our Malamocco model; we retained her name, too-Phene, which is, by interpretation, sea-eagle. Now, think of Jules finding himself distinguished from the herd of us by such a creature! In his very first answer he proposed marrying his monitress: and fancy us over these letters, two, three times a day, to receive and dispatch! I concocted the main of it: relations were in the way—secrecy must be observed in fine, would he wed her on trust, and only speak to her when they were indissolubly united? St-st-Here they come!

6th Stud. Both of them! Heaven's love, speak softly, speak within yourselves!

5th Stud. Look at the bridgroom! Half his hair in storm and half in calm,-patted down over the left temple,-like a frothy cup one blows on to cool it: and the same old blouse that he murders the marble in.

2d Stud. Not a rich vest like yours, Hannibal Scratchy !-rich, that your face may the better set it off.

6th Stud. And the bride! Yes, sure enough, our Phene! Should you have known her in her clothes? How magnificently pale.

Gott. She does not also take it for earnest, I hope?

1st Stud. Oh, Natalia's concern, that is. We settle with Natalia.

6th Stud. She does not speak—has evidently let out no word. The only thing is, will she equally remember the rest of her lesson, and repeat correctly all those verses which are to break the secret to Jules?

Gott. How he gazes on her! Pity—pity! 1st Stud. They go in; now, silence! You three,—not nearer the window, mind,

, my that bomegranate; just where the a tre girl, who a few minutes ago passed us singing, is seated.

II. NOON

Over Orcana. The house of Jules, who crosses its threshold with Phene: she is silent, on which Jules begins-

Do not die, Phene! I am yours now,

Are mine now; let fate reach me how she likes.

If you'll not die: so, never die! Sit

My work-room's single seat. I overlean

This length of hair and lustrous front: they turn

Like an entire flower upward: eves, lins, last

Your chin-no, last your throat turns: 't is their scent

Pulls down my face upon you. Nay, look ever

This one way till I change, grow you- ${f I}$ could Change into you, beloved!

You by me.

And I by you; this is your han lin mine. And side by side we sit: all's true.

I have spoken: speak you!

O my life to come!

My Tydeus must be carved that 's there

Yet how be carved, with you about the

Where must I place you? When I think that once

This room-full of rough block-work seemed my heaven

Without you! Shall I ever work again, Get fairly into my old ways again,

Bid each conception stand while, trait by trait.

My hand transfers its lineaments to Stone?

Will my mere fancies live near you, their truth-

The live truth, passing and repassing

Sitting beside me?

Now speak!

Only first.

See, all your letters! Was 't not well contrived?

Their hiding-place is Psyche's robe; she keeps

Your letters next her skin: which drops out foremost?

Ah.—this that swam down like a first moonbeam

Into my world!

Again those eves complete

Their melancholy survey, sweet and slow,

Of all my room holds; to return and

On me, with pity, yet some wonder too: As if God bade some spirit plague a world. prise

And this were the one moment of sur-And sorrow while she took her station, pausing

O'er what she sees, finds good, and must destroy!

What gaze you at? Those? Books, I told you of;

Let your first word to me rejoice them,

This minion, a Coluthus, writ in red, Bistre and azure by Bessarion's scribe—

Read this line . . . no, shame—Homer's be the Greek

First breathed me from the lips of my Greek girl!

This Odyssey in coarse black vivid type With faded vellow blossoms 'twixt page and page.

To mark great places with due gratitude; " He said, and on Antinous directed

A bitter shaft" . . . a flower blots out the rest!

Again upon your search? My statues. then!

-Ah, do not mind that—better that will

When cast in bronze—an Almaign Kaiser, that,

Swart-green and gold, with truncheon based on hip.

This, rather, turn to! What, unrecognized?

I thought you would have seen that here you sit

As I imagined you,—Hippolyta,

Naked upon her bright Numidian horse. Recall you this then? "Carve in bold relief "--

So you commanded—"carve, against I come,

A Greek, in Athens, as our fashion was, Feasting, bay-filleted and thunder-free, Who rises neath the lifted myrtle. branch.

Praise those who slew Hipparchus! cry the guests,

While o'er thy head the singer's myrtle waves

As erst above our champion: stand up, all!"

See, I have labored to express your thought.

Quite round, a cluster of mere hands and arms

(Thrust in all senses, all ways, from all sides,

Only consenting at the branch's end

They strain toward) serves for frame to a sole face,

The Praiser's, in the centre: who with

Sightless, so bend they back to light inside

His brain where visionary forms throng up,

Sings, nunding not that palpitating arch Of hands and arms, nor the quick drip of wine

From the drenched leaves o'erhead, nor crowns cast off,

Violet and parsley crowns to trample

Sings, pausing as the patron-ghosts approve,

Devoutly their unconquerable hymn.

But you must say a "well" to that—say "well!"

Because you gaze — am I fantastic, sweet?

Gaze like my very life's-stuff, marble—marbly

Even to the silence! Why, before I found The real flesh Phene, I inured myself

To see, throughout all nature, varied stuff

For better nature's birth by means of

art:
With me, each substance tended to one form

Of beauty—to the human archetype.

On every side occurred suggestive germs Of that—the tree, the flower—or take the fruit.—

Some rosy shape, continuing the peach, Curved beewise o'er its bough; as rosy limbs,

Depending, nestled in the leaves; and just

From a cleft rose-peach the whole Dryad sprang.

But of the stuffs one can be master of,

How I divined their capabilities!
From the soft-rinded smoothening facile

That yields your outline to the air's em-

Half-softened by a halo's pearly gloom; Down to the crisp imperious steel, so

To cut its one confided thought clean out Of all the world. But marble!—neath my tools

More pliable than jelly—as it were

Some clear primordial creature dug from depths

In the earth's heart, where itself breeds itself,

And whence all baser substance may be worked;

Refine it off to air, you may,—condense
it
Down to the diamond;—is not metal

there,
When o'er the sudden speck my chisel trips?

—Not flesh, as flake off flake I scale, approach, Lay bare those bluish veins of blood asleep? Lurks flame in no strange windings where, surprised

By the swift implement sent home at once,

Flushes and glowings radiate and hover About its track?

Phene? what—why is this? That whitening cheek, those still dilating eyes!

Ah, you will die—I knew that you would die!

Phene begins, on his having long remained

Phene. Now the end's coming; to be sure, it must Have ended sometime! Tush, why need I speak

Their foolish speech? I cannot bring to

One half of it, beside; and do not care For old Natalia now, nor any of them. Oh, you—what are you?—if I do not try

To say the words Natalia made me learn, [self

To please your friends,—it is to keep my-Where your voice lifted me, by letting that

Proceed: but can it? Even you, perhaps,

Cannot take up, now you have once let fall,

The music's life, and me along with that—

No, or you would; We 'll stay, then, as we are:

Above the world.

You creature with the eyes!

If I could look forever up to them,

As now you let me,—I believe, all sin,
All memory of wrong done, suffering borne.

Would drop down, low and lower, to the

Whence all that's low comes, and there touch and stay

-Never to overtake the rest of mar, All that, unspotted, reaches up to you, Drawn by those eyes! What rises is myself,

Not me the shame and suffering; but they sink,

Are left, I rise above them. Keep me

Above the world!

But you sink, for your eyes

Are altering—altered! Stay—"I love you, love"....

I could prevent it if I understood:

More of your words to me: was 't in the tone

Or the words, your power?

Cheir speech, if that contents you!

Only change
No more, and I shall find it presently Far back here, in the brain yourself filled up.

Natalia threatened me that harm should follow

Unless I spoke their lesson to the end. But harm to me, I thought she meant, not you.

Your friends,—Natalia said they were your friends

And meant you well, — because, I doubted it,

Observing (what was very strange to see)

On every face, so different in all else, The same smile girls like me are used to bear,

But never men, men cannot stoop so low; Yet your friends, speaking of you, used that smile,

That hateful smirk of boundless selfconceit

Which seems to take possession of the

And make of God a tame confederate.

Purveyor to their appetites......you know!

But still Natalia said they were your friends, [the more, And they assented though they smiled

And all came round me,—that thin Englishman

With light lank hair seemed leader of the rest;

He held a paper—"What we want," said he,

Ending some explanation to his friends—
"Is something slow, involved and mystical.

To hold Jules long in doubt, yet take his taste

And lure him on until, at innermost Where he seeks sweetness' soul, he may find—this!

—As in the apple's core, the noisome fly:

—As in the apple's core, the noisome fly:
For insects on the rind are seen at once,
And brushed aside as soon, but this is found

Only when on the lips or loathing tongue."

And so he read what I have got by heart:
I'll speak it.—"Do not die, love! I am yours"....

No—is not that, or like that, part of words

Yourself began by speaking? Strange to lose

What cost such pains to learn! Is this more right?

I am a painter who cannot paint;
In my life, a deril rather than saint;
In my brain, as poor a creature too;
No end to all I cannot do!
Yet do one thing at least I can—
Love a man or hate a man
Supremely; thus my lore began.
Through the Valley of Love I went,
In the lovingest spot to abide,
And just on the verge where I pitched my tent,

I found Hate dwelling beside,
(Let the Bridegroom ask what the painter meant.

Of his Bride, of the peerless Bride!)
And further, I traversed Hate's grove.
In the hatefullest nook to dwell;
But lo, where I flung myself prone,

couched Love
Where the shadow threefold fell.
(The meaning -those black bride's-eyes
above.

Not a painter's lip should tell!)

"And here," said he, "Jules probably will ask,

'You have black eyes, Love,—you are, sure enough, [deed My peerless bride,—then do you tell inWhat needs some explanation! What means this?"

-And I am to go on, without a word-

So. I grew wise in Love and Hate. From simple that I was of late Once, when I loved, I would enlace Breast, eyelids, hands, feet, form and face

Of her I loved, in one embrace -

As if by mere love I could love immense-

Once, when I hated, I would plunge My sword, and wipe with the first lunge My foe's whole life out like a sponge-As if by mere hate I could hate intensely! But now I am wiser, know better the fashion

How passion seeks aid from its opposite passion:

And if I see cause to love more, hate

Than ever man loved, ever hated before— And seek in the Valley of Love The nest, or the nook in Hate's Grove Where my soul may surely reach The essence, naught less, of each, The Hate of all Hates, the Love Of all Loves, in the Valley or Grove,— I find them the very warders Each of the other's borders. When Hove most, Love is disquised In Hate; and when Hate is surprised In Love, then I hate most; ask How Love smiles through Hate's iron casque,

Hate grins through Love's rose-braided

mask.-

And how, having hated thee, I sought long and painfully To reach thy heart, nor prick The skin but pierce to the quick-Ask this, my Jules, and be unswered straight

By thy bride—how the painter Lutwyche can hate!

Jules interposes.

Lutwyche! Who else? But them, no doubt.

Hated me: they at Venice—presently Their turn, however! You I shall not meet:

If I dreamed, saving this would wake

Keep What's here, the gold—we cannot meet again,

Consider, and the money was but meant For two years' travel, which is over now. All chance or hope or care or need of it. This—and what comes from selling these, my casts

And books and medals, except . . . let them go

Together, so the produce keeps you safe Out of Natalia's clutches! If by chance (For all's chance here) I should survive the gang

At Venice, root out all fifteen of them, We might meet somewhere, since the world is wide.

From without is heard the voice of Pippa, sing-

Give her but a least excuse to love me! When-where-

How-can this arm establish her above

If fortune fixed her as my lady there, There already, to eternally reprove me? (" Hist!"—said Kate the Queen; But " Oh!" cried the maiden, binding her tresses, "'T is only a page that carols unseen.

Crumbling your hounds their messes!") Is she wronged ?—To the rescue of her honor, My heart!

Is she poor ?—What costs it to be styled a donor?

Merely an earth to cleave, a sea to part. But that fortune should have thrust all this upon her!

(" Nay, list!"-bade Kate the Queen; And still cried the maiden, binding her tresses.

"T is only a page that carols unseen, Fitting your hawks their jesses!") Pippa passes.

Jules resumes.

What name was that the little girl sang forth?

Kate? The Cornaro, doubtless, who renounced

The crown of Cyprus to be lady here At Asolo, where still her memory stays. And peasants sing how once a certain

Pined for the grace of her so far above His power of doing good to, "Kate the Queen— She never could be wronged, be poor," he sighed.

"Need him to help her!"

Yes, a bitterthing

To see our lady above all need of us; Yet so we look ere we will love; not I, But the world looks so. If whoever

Must be, in some sort, god or worship-

The blessing or the blest one, queen or page.

Why should we always choose the page's part?

Here is a woman with utter need of me.-I find myself queen here, it seems!

How strange! Look at the woman here with the new soul.

Like my own Psyche,-fresh upon her lips

Alit, the visionary butterfly,

Waiting my word to enter and make bright,

Or flutter off and leave all blank as first. This body had no soul before, but slept Or stirred, was beauteous or ungainly,

From taint or foul with stain, as outward things

Fastened their image on its passiveness: Now it will wake, feel, live -or die again! Shall to produce form out of unshaped stuff

Be Art-and further, to evoke a soul From form be nothing? This new soul is mine!

Now, to kill Lutwyche, what would that do?-save

A wretched dauber, men will hoot to death

Without me, from their hooting. Oh, to hear

God's voice plain as I heard it first, be-

They broke in with their laughter! I heard them

Henceforth, not God.

To Ancona-Greece-some isle! I wanted silence only; there is clay

Everywhere. One may do whate'er one likes

In Art: the only thing is, to make sure That one does like it—which takes pains to know.

Scatter all this, my Phene-this mad

Who, what is Lutwyche, what Natalia's my own. What the whole world except our loveOwn Phene? But I told you, did I not, Ere night we travel for your land-some

With the sea's silence on it? Stand aside-I do but break these paltry models up To begin Art afresh. Meet Lutwyche

And save him from my statue meeting Some unsuspected isle in the far seas! Like a god going through his world.

there stands One mountain for a moment in the dusk. Whole brotherhoods of cedars on its

And you are ever by me while I gaze -Are in my arms as now—as now—as now!

Some unsuspected isle in the far seas! Some unsuspected isle in far-off seas!

Talk by the way, while PIPPA is passing from Or cana to the Turret. Two or three of the Austrian Police loilering with Bluphocks, an English vagabond, just in view of the Turret.

Bluphocks. So, that is your Pippa, the little girl who passed us singmg? Well, your Bishop's Intendant's money shall be honestly earned :- now, don't make me that sour face because I bring the Bishop's name into the business; we know he can have nothing to do with such horrors; we know that he is a saint and all that a bishop should be, who is a great man beside. Oh were but every worm a maggot, Every fly a grig. Every bough a Christmas tago. Every tune a ji 1! In fact, I have abjured all religions; but the last I inclined to was the Armenian: for I have travelled, do you see, and at Koenigsberg, Prussia Improper (so styled because there's a sort of bleak hungry sun there, you might remark, over a venerable house-porch, a certain Chaldee inscription; and brief as it is, a mere glance at it used absolutely to change the mood of every bearded passenger. In they turned, one and all; the young and lightsome, with no irreverent pause, the aged and decrepit, with a sensible alacrity: 'twas the Grand Rabbi's abode, in short. Struck with curiosity, I lost no time in learning Syriac (these are vowels, you dogs -follow my stick's end in the mud-Cclarent, Darii, Ferio!) and one morning presented myself, spelling-book in hand, a, b, c. I picked it out letter by letter, and what was the purport of this miraculous posy? Some cherished legend of the past, you'll say - 'How Moses hocuspocussed Egypt's hind with the and toenst," or "How to Jonah sounded harshish, Get thee up and go to Tarshish,"-or "How the angel meeting Bulaam, Straight his ass returned a salaam." In no wise! "Shackabrack-Boach-somebody or other-Isaach, Recci-ver, Pur-cha-ser and Ex-chan-ger of— Stolen Goods!" So talk to me of the religion of a bishop! I have renounced all bishops save Bishop Beveridge !--mean to live so--and die--As some Greek dog-sage dead and merry, Hellward bound in Charon's wherry, With food for both worlds, under and upper, Lupine-seed and Hecate's supper, And never an obolus. . . (though thanks to you, or this Intendant through you, or this Bishop through his Intendant-I possess a burning pocket-full of zwanzigers)...To pay the Stygian Ferry!
1st Policeman. There is the girl, then;

go and deserve them the moment you have pointed out to us Signor Luigi and his mother. [To the rest.] I have been noticing a house yonder, this long while: not a shutter unclosed since morning!

2d Pol. Old Luca Gaddi's, that owns the silk-mills here: he dozes by the hour, wakes up, sighs deeply, says he should like to be Prince Metternich, and then dozes again, after having bidden young Sebald, the foreigner, set his wife to playing draughts. Never molest such a household, they mean well.

Blup. Only, cannot you tell me something of this little Pippa. I must have to do with? One could make something of that name. Pippa—that is, short for Felippa rhyming to Panurge consults Hertrippa-Believest thou King Agrippa? Something might be done with that name.

2d Pol. Put into rhyme that your head and a ripe muskmelon would not be dear at half a zwanziger! Leave this fooling, and look out; the afternoon's over or nearly

3d Pol. Where in this passport of Signor Luigi does our Principal instruct you to watch him so narrowly? There? What's there beside a simple signature? (That English fool's busy watching.)

2d Pol. Flourish all round—"Put all possible obstacles in his way;" oblong dot at the end-"Detain him till further advices reach you;" scratch at bottom-" Send him back on pretence of some informality in the above;" ink-spirt on right hand side (which is the case here).-." Arrest him at once." Why and wherefore, I don't concern myself, but my instructions amount to this; if Signor Luigi leaves home to-night for Vienna-well and good, the passport deposed with us for our visa is really for his own use, they have misinformed the Office, and he means well; but let him stay over to-night—there has been the pretence we suspect, the accounts of his corresponding and holding intelligence with the Carbonari are correct, we arrest him at once, to-morrow comes Venice, and presently Spielberg. Bluphocks makes the signal, sure enough That is he, entering the turret with his mother, no doubt.

III. EVENING

Inside the Turret on the Hill above Asolo. Luigi and his Mother entering.

Mother. If there blew wind, you'd hear a long sigh, easing The utmost heaviness of music's heart.

Luigi. Here in the archway?

Mother. Oh no, no-in farther, Where the echo is made, on the ridge. Here surely, then.

How plain the tap of my heel as I leaped up!

Hark-"Lucius Junius!" The very ghost of a voice Whose body is caught and kept by . . .

what are those? Mere withered wallflowers, waving over-

They seem an elvish group with thin

bleached hair That lean out of their topmost fortress—

And listen, mountain men, to what we say,

Hand under chin of each grave earthy face.

Up and show faces all of you!—"All of you!" That 's the king dwarf with the scarlet comb; old Franz. Come down and meet your fate? Hark-

"Meet your fate!"

Mother. Let him not meet it, my Luigi -do not Go to his City! Putting crime aside, Half of these ills of Italy are feigned: Your Pellicos and writers for effect, Write for effect.

Luigi, Hush! Sav A writes, and B. Mother. These A's and B's write for effect, I sav.

Then, evil is in its nature loud, while good

Is silent; you hear each petty injury, None of his virtues; he is old beside, Quiet and kind, and densely stupid.

Why Do A and B kill not him themselves? Luigi. They teach Others to kill him-me-and, if I fail,

Others to succeed; now, if A tried and

I could not teach that: mine 's the lesser task.

Mother, they visit night by night . . . -You, Luigi? Ah, will you let me tell you what you are?

Luigi. Why not? Oh, the one thing you fear to hint,

You may assure yourself I say and say Ever to myself! At times—nay, even as now

We sit-I think my mind is touch'd, suspect

All is not sound: but is not knowing that.

What constitutes one sane or otherwise? I know I am thus—so, all is right again. I laugh at myself as through the town I walk,

And see men merry as if no Italy

Were suffering: then I ponder—"I am

Young, healthy; why should this fact trouble me,

More than it troubles these?" But it does trouble.

No, trouble 's a bad word: for as I walk There's springing and melody and giddiness.

And old quaint turns and passages of my youth,

Dreams long forgotten, little in themselves.

Return to me-whatever may amuse me: And earth seems in a truce with me, and Accords with me, all things suspend their strife.

The very cicala laughs "There goes he, and there!

Feast him, the time is short; he is on For the world's sake: feast him this once, our friend!" And in return for all this, I can trip

Cheerfully up the scaffold-steps. I go This evening, mother! Mother. But mistrust yourself-Mistrust the judgment you pronounce on him! Luigi. Oh, there I feel—am sure that I am right!

Mother. Mistrust your judgment then, of the mere means

To this wild enterprise: say, you are right,-

How should one in your state e'er bring to pass

What would require a cool head, a cool heart,

And a calm hand? You never will escape.

Luigi. Escape? To even wish that, would spoil all.

The dying is best part of it. Too much

Have I enjoyed these fifteen years of mine.

To leave myself excuse for longer life: Was not life pressed down, running o'er with joy, That I might finish with it ere my fellows

Who, sparelier feasted, make a longer stay?

I was put at the board-head, helped to

At first: I rise up happy and content. God must be glad one loves his world so much.

I can give news of earth to all the dead Who ask me:—last year's sunsets, and great stars

Which had a right to come first and see

The crimson wave that drifts the sun away-

Those crescent moons with notched and burning rims

That strengthened into sharp fire, and there stood.

Impatient of the azure—and that day In March, a double rainbow stopped the storm-

May's warm slow vellow moonlit summer

Gone are they, but I have them in my Mother. (He will not go!)

Luigi. You smile at me? 'T is true,— Voluptuousness, grotesqueness, ghastliness.

Environ my devotedness as quaintly As round about some antique altar wreathe

The rose festoons, goats' horns, and oxen's skulls.

Mother. See now: you reach the city, you must cross

His threshold—how?

Oh, that's if we conspired! Luiai. Then would come pains in plenty, as vou guess-

But guess not how the qualities most fit For such an office, qualities I have,

Would little stead me, otherwise employed.

Yet prove of rarest merit only here. Every one knows for what his excellence

Will serve, but no one ever will consider For what his worst defect might serve: and yet

Have you not seen me range our coppice vonder

In search of a distorted ash?—I find

The wry spoilt branch a natural perfect bow.

Fancy the thrice-sage, thrice-precautioned man

Arriving at the palace on my errand! No, no! I have a handsome dress packed

White satin here, to set off my black hair; In I shall march--for you may watch your life out

Behind thick walls, make friends there to betray you;

More than one man spoils everything.
March straight—

Only, no clumsy knife to fumble for, Take the great gate, and walk (not saunter) on

Through guards and guards—I have rehearsed it all

Inside the turret here a hundred times.

Don't ask the way of whom you meet, observe!

But where they cluster thickliest is the door

Of doors; they'll let you pass—they'll never blab

Each to the other, he knows not the favorite.

Whence he is bound and what's his business now.

Walk in—straight up to him; you have no knife:

Be prompt, how should be scream? Then out with you!

Italy, Italy, my Italy!

You're free, you're free! Oh mother, I could dream

They got about mo--Andrea from his exile,

Pier from his dungeon, Gualtier from his grave!

Mother. Well, you shall go. Yet seems this patriotism

The easiest virtue for a selfish man To acquire: he loves himself—and next,

the world—

If he must love beyond,—but naught between: [way As a short-sighted man sees naught mid-His body and the sun above. But you Are my adored Luigi, ever obedient

To my least wish, and running o'er with love:

I could not call you cruel or unkind.
Once more, your ground for killing him!
—then go!

Luigi. Now do you try me, or make sport of me?

How first the Austrians got these provinces . . .

(If that is all, I'll satisfy you soon)

—Never by conquest but by cunning, for That treaty whereby Mother. Well!

Luigi. (Sure, he's arrived, The tell-tale cuckoo: spring's his confi-

And he lets out her April purposes!)
Or . . . better go at once to modern time.

He has . . . they have . . . in fact, I understand

But can't restate the matter: that's my boast:

Others could reason it out to you, and prove

Things they have made me feel.

Mother. Why go to-night? Morn's for adventure. Jupiter is now A morning-star. I cannot hear you, Luigi!

Luigi. "I am the bright and morningstar," saith God-

And "to such an one I give the morningstar."

The gift of the morning-star! Have I God's gift

Of the morning-star?

Mother. Chiara will love to see
That Jupiter an evening-star next June.
Luigi. True, mother. Well for those who live through June!

Great noontides, thunder storms, all glaring pomps

That triumph at the heels of June the Leading his revel through our leafy world.

Yes, Chiara will be here.

Mother. In June: remember. Yourself appointed that month for her coming.

Luigi. Was that low noise the echo?

Mother. The night wind.

She must be grown—with her blue eyes upturned

As if life were one long and sweet surprise:

In June she comes.

Luigi. We were to see together The Titian at Treviso. There, again!

[From without is heard the voice of PIPPL singing-

A king lived long ago, In the morning of the world, When earth was nigher heaven than now; And the king's locks curled, Disparting o'er a forehead full As the milk-white space 'twixt horn and horn "

Of some sacrificial bull-Only calm as a babe new-born? For he was got to a sleepy mood, So safe from all decrepitude, Age with its bane, so sure gone by, (The gods so loved him while he dreamed) That, having lived thus long, there seemed No need the king should ever die.

Luigi. No need that sort of king should ever die!

Among the rocks his city was: Before his paluce, in the sun, He sat to see his people pass, And judge them every one From its threshold of smooth stone. They haled him many a valley-thief Caught in the sheep-pens, robber-chief Swarthy and shameless, beggar-cheat, Spy-prowler, or rough pirate found On the sea-sand left aground; And sometimes clung about his feet, With bleeding lip and burning cheek, A woman, bitterest wrong to speak Of one with sullen thickset brows: And sometimes from the prison-house The angry priests a pide wretch brought.

Who through some chink had pushed and pressed

On knees and elbows, belly and breast, Worm-like into the temple, - caught He was by the very go 1. Who ever in the darkness strode Backward and forward, keeping watch O'er his bruzen bowls, such rappes to cutch!

These, all and every one, The king judged, sitting in the sun.

Luigi. That king should still judge, sitting in the sun!

His councillors, on left and right, Looked anxious up, -but no surprise Disturbed the king's old smiling eyes Where the very blue had turned to

'T is said, a Python scared one day The breathless city, till he came, With forky tonque and eyes on flame, Where the old king sat to judge alway; But when he saw the sweepy hair Girt with a crown of berries rare Which the god will hardly give to wear To the maiden who singeth, dancing

In the altar-smoke by the pine-torch lights.

At his wondrous forest rites,-Seeing this he did not dare Approach that threshold in the sun, began!

Assault the old king smiling there. Such grace had kings when the world

Luigi. And such grace have they. now that the world ends!

The Python at the city, on the throne, And brave men, God would crown for slaving him,

Lurk in by-corners lest they fall his prev.

Are crowns yet to be won in this late time

Which weakness makes me hesitate to reach?

'T is God's voice calls: how could I stay? Farewell!

Talk by the way, while PIPPA is passing from the Turret to the Bishop's Brother's House, close to the Imomo S. Maria. Poor Girls sitting on the steps.

1st Girl. There goes a swallow to Venice—the stout seafarer!

Seeing those birds fly, makes one wish for wings.

Let us all wish; you, wish first! 2d Girl.

I? This sunset To finish.

That old — somebody I 3d Girl. know.

Graver and older than my grandfather, To give me the same treat he gave last Week-

Feeding me on his knee with figpeckers,

Lampreys and red Breganze-wine, and mumbling

The while some folly about how well I

Let sit and eat my supper quietly: Since had he not himself been late this

Detained at-never mind where,-had he not . . .

" Eh, baggage, had I not!"-2d Girl. How she can lie!

3d Girl. Look there—by the nails! 2d Girl. What makes your fingers red?

3d Girl. Dapping them into wine to write bad words with

On the bright table: how he laughed!

1st Girl.

My turn

Spring's come and summer's coming.
I would wear

A long loose gown, down to the feet and hands,

With plaits here, close about the throat, all day;

And all night lie, the cool long nights in bed;

And have new milk to drink, apples to eat.

Deuzans and junctings, leather-coats . . . ah, I should say,

This is away in the fields-miles!

3d Girl. Say at once You'd be at home: she'd always be at home!

Now comes the story of the farm among The cherry orchards, and how April snowed

White blossoms on her as she ran.
Why, fool,

They 've rubbed the chalk-mark out, how tall you were,

Twisted your starling's neck, broken his cage,

Made a dung-hill of your garden!

1st Girl. They destroy
My garden since I left them? well—perhaps

I would have done so: so I hope they have!

A fig-tree curled out of our cottage wall;

They called it mine, I have forgotten why.

It must have been there long ere I was born:

Cric—cric—I think I hear the wasps o'erhead

Pricking the papers strung to flutter there

And keep off birds in fruit-time—coarse long papers,

And the wasps eat them, prick them through and through.

3d Girl.—How her mouth twitches!
Where was I?—before

She broke in with her wishes and long gowns

And wasps—would I be such a fool!—Oh, here!

This is my way: I answer every one

Who asks me why I make so much of

(If you say "you love him"—straight "he 'll not be gulled!")

"He that seduced me when I was a girl

Thus high—had eyes like yours, or hair like yours,

Brown, red, white,"—as the case may be: that pleases.

See how that beetle burnishes in the path!

There sparkles he along the dust: and there—

Your journey to that maize tuft spoiled at least!

1st Girl. When I was young, they said if you killed one

Of those sunshiny beetles, that his friend Up there, would shine no more that day nor next.

2d Girl. When you were young? nor are you young, that 's true.

How your plump arms, that were, have dropped away!

Why, I can span them. Cecco beats you still?

No matter, so you keep your curious hair. [hair I wish they 'd find a way to dye our

Your color—any lighter tint, indeed Than black: the men say they are sick of black.

Black eyes, black hair!

4th (firl.) Sick of yours, like enough. Do you pretend you ever tasted lamprevs

And ortolans? Giovita, of the palace, Engaged (but there's no trusting him) to slice me

Polenta with a knife that had cut up An ortolan.

An ortolan.

2d Girl. Why, there! Is not that Pippa

We are to talk to, under the window,—quick!—

Where the lights are?

1st Girl. That she? No, or she would sing,

For the Intendant said . . .

3d Girl. Oh, you sing first!
Then, if she listens and comes close . . .
I'll tell you,—

Sing that song the young English noble made,

Who took you for the purest of the pure, And meant to leave the world for you what fun!

2d Girl. [Sings.]

You'll love me yet!—and I can tarry
Your love's protracted growing:

The record that bands of flavores we

June reared that bunch of flowers you carry,

From seeds of April's sowing.

I plant a heartfull now: some seed At least is sure to strike. And yield-what you'll not pluck indeed, Not love, but, may be, like.

You'll look at least on love's remains, A grave's one violet:

Your look ?—that pays a thousand pains. What's death? You'll love me yet!

3d Girl. [To PIPPA who approaches.] Oh, you may come closer-we shall not eat you! Why, you seem the very person that the great rich handsome Englishman has fallen so violently in love with. I'll tell you all about it.

IV. NIGHT

Inside the Palace by the Duomo. Monsignor, dismissing his Attendants.

Monsignor. Thanks, friends, many thanks! I chiefly desire life now, that I may recompense every one of you. Most I know something of already. What, a reknow something of already. What, a repast prepared? Benedicto benedicatur... ugh, ugh! Where was I? Oh, as you were remarking, Ugo, the weather is mild, very unlike winter-weather : but I am a Sicilian, you know, and shiver in your Julys here. To be sure, when 't was full summer at Messina, as we priests used to cross in procession the great square on Assumption Day, you might see our thickest yellow tapers twist suddenly in two, each like a falling star, or sink down on themselves in a gore of wax. But go, my friends, but go! [To the Intendant.] Not you, Ugo! [The others leave the apartment.] I have long wanted to converse with you, Ugo.

Intendant, Uguecio— Mon. . . . 'guecio Stefani, man! of Ascoli, Fermo and Fossombruno; -what I do need instructing about, are these accounts of your administration of my poor brother's affairs. Ugh! I shall never get through a third part of your accounts; take some of these dainties before we attempt it, however. Are you bashful to that degree? For me, a crust and water suffice.

Inten. Do you choose this especial night to question me

Mon. This night, Ugo. You have managed my late brother's affairs since the death of our elder brother: fourteen years and a month, all but three days. On the Third of December, I find him . . .

Inten. If you have so intimate an acquaintance with your brother's affairs, you will be tender of turning so far back : they will hardly bear looking into, so far back.

Mon. Ay, ay, ugh, ugh,—nothing but disappointments here below! I remarked a considerable payment made to yourself on this Third of December. Talk of disappointments! There was a young fellow here, Jules, a foreign sculptor I did my utmost to advance, that the Church might be a gainer by us both: he was going on hope fully enough, and of a sudden he notifies to me some marvellous change that has happened in his notions of Art. Here's his letter,—"He never had a clearly conceived Ideal within his brain till to-slay. Yet since his hand could manage a chisel, he has practised expressing other men's Ideals; and, in the very perfection he has attained to, he foresees an ultimate failure : his unconscious hand will pursue its prescribed course of old years, and will reproduce with a fatal expertness the ancient types, let the novel one appear never so palpably to his There is but one method of escape: confiding the virgin type to as chaste a hand, he will turn painter instead of sculptor, and paint, not carve, its characteristics,"-strike out, I dare say, a school like Correggio: how think you, Ugo?

Inten. Is Correggio a painter?

Mon. Foolish Jules! and yet, after all, why foolish? He may—probably will—fail egregiously; but if there should arise a new painter, will it not be in some such way, by a poet now, or a musician (spirits with how coveried and prefeated an Ideal). who have conceived and perfected an Ideal through some other channel), transferring it to this, and escaping our conventional roads by pure ignorance of them; eh, Ugo? If you have no appetite, talk at least, Ugo?

Inten. Sir, I can submit no longer to this course of yours. First, you select the group of which I formed one,-next you thin it gradually,—always retaining me with your smile, -and so do you proceed till you have fairly got me alone with you between four stone walls. And now then? Let this farce, this chatter end now: what is it you want with me?

Mon. Ugo! Inten. From the instant you arrived, I felt your smile on me as you questioned me about this and the other article in those papers—why your brother should have given me this villa, that poderc,—and your nod at the end meant, -what? Mon. Possibly that I wished for no loud talk here. If once you set me coughing,

I have your brother's hand and seal to all 1 possess; now ask me what for!

what service I did him—ask me!

Mon. I would better not: I should rip up old disgraces, let out my poor brother's weaknesses. By the way, Marieo of Forli, (which, I forgot to observe, is your true name,) was the interdict ever taken off you for robbing that church at Cesena?

Inten. No, nor needs be: for when I murdered your brother's friend, Pasquale, for him . . .

Mon. Ah, he employed you in that business, did he? Well, I must let you keep, as you say, this villa and that podere, for fear the world should find out my relations were of so indifferent a stamp? Maffeo, my family is the oldest in Messina, and century after century have my progenitors gone on polluting themselves with every wickedness under heaven: my own father . . . rest his soul!—I have, I know, a chapel to support that it may rest: my dear two dead brothers were, -what you know tolerably well; I, the youngest, might have rivalled them in vice, if not in wealth: but from my boyhood I came out from among them, and so am not partaker of their plagues. My glory springs from another source; or if from this, by contrast only,for I, the bishop, am the brother of your employers, Ugo. I hope to repair some of their wrong, however; so far as my brother's ill-gotten treasure reverts to me, I can stop the consequences of his crime: and not one soldo shall escape me. Maffeo, the sword we quiet men spurn away, you shrewd knaves pick up and commit murders with; what opportunities the virtuous forego, the villanous seize. Because, to pleasure myself apart from other considerations, my food would be millet-cake, my dress sackcloth, and my couch straw,-am I therefore to let you, the off-scouring of the earth, seduce the poor and ignorant by appropriating a pomp these will be sure to think lessens the abominations so unaccountably and exclusively associated with it? Must I let villas and poderi go to you, a murderer and thief, that you may beget by means of them other murderers and thieves? Noif my cough would but allow me to speak!

Inten. What am I to expect? You are going to punish me?

Mon. Must punish you, Maffeo. I cannot afford to cast away a chance. I have whole centuries of sin to redeem, and only a month or two of life to do it in. How should I dare to say . .

Inten. "Forgive us our trespasses"?

Mon. My friend, it is because I avow myself a very worm, sinful beyond measure, that I reject a line of conduct you would applaud perhaps. Shall I proceed, as it were, a-pardoning?—I?—who have no symptom of reason to assume that aught less than my strenuousest efforts will keep myself out of mortal sin, much less keep others out. No: I do trespass, but will not double that by allowing you to trespass.

Inten. And suppose the villas are not your brother's to give, nor yours to take?

Oh, you are hasty enough just now!
Mon. 1, 2—No 3!—ay, can you read the substance of a letter. No 3. I have received from Reene? It is precisely on the ground there mentioned, of the suspicion I have that a certain child of my late eld er brother, who would have succeeded to his estates, was murdered in infancy by you, Maffeo, at the instigation of my late younger brother—that the Pontiff enjoins on me not merely the bringing that Maffeo to condign punishment, but the taking all pains, as guardian of the infant's heritage for the Church, to recover it parcel by parcel, howsoever, whensoever, and wheresoever. While you are now gnawing those fingers, the police are engaged in sealing up your papers, Maffeo, and the mere raising my voice brings my people from the next room to dispose of yourself. But I want you to confess quietly, and save me raising my voice. Why, man, do I not know the old story? The heir between the succeeding heir, and this heir's ruffianly instrument, and their complot's effect, and the life of fear and bribes and ominous smiling silence? Did you throttle or stab my brother's infant? Come now!

Inten. So old a story, and tell it no better? When did such an instrument ever produce such an effect? Either the child smiles in his face; or, most likely, he is not fool enough to put himself in the employer's power so thoroughly: the child is always ready to produce—as you say—howsoever, wheresover, and whensoever.

Mon. Liar! Inten. Strike me? Ah, so might a father chastise! I shall sleep soundly to-night at least, though the gallows await me to-morrow; for what a life did I lead! Carlo of Cesena reminds me of his connivance, every time I pay his annuity; which happens commonly thrice a year. If I remonstrate, he will confess all to the good bishop -vou!

Mon. I see through the trick, caitiff! I would you spoke truth for once. All shall be sifted, however—seven times sifted.

Inten. And how my absurd riches encumbered me! I dared not lay claim to above half of my possessions. Let me but once unbosom myself, glorify Heaven, and

Sir, you are no brutal dastardly idiot like your brother I frightened to death: let us understand one another. Sir, I will make away with her for you—the girl—here close at hand: not the stupid obvious kind of killing; do not speak—know nothing of her nor of me! I see her every day—saw her this morning: of course there is to be no killing; but at Rome the courtesans perish off every three years, and I can entice her thither—have indeed begun operations already. There is a certain lusty blue-eyed florid-complexioned English knave, I and the Police employ occasionally. You assent I provide the policy of the polic sent, I perceive—no, that's not it—assent I do not say—but you will let me convert my present havings and holdings into cash, and give me time to cross the Alps? "I is but a little black-eyed pretty singing Febut a little black-eyed pretty singing re-lippa, gay silk-winding girl. I have kept her out of harm's way up to this present; for I always intended to make your life a plague to you with her. 'I is as well settled once and forever. Some women I have procured will pass Bluphocks, my hand-some scoundrel, off for somebody; and once Pippa entangled!—you conceive? Through her singing. Unit of heresing? Through her singing? Is it a bargain?

[From without is heard the voice of PIPPA singing-

Overhead the tree-tops meet,

Flowers and grass spring 'neath one's feet;

There was naught above me, naught below.

My childhood had not learned to know: For, what are the voices of birds

-Ah, and of beasts, but words, our words.

Only so much more sweet?

The knowledge of that with my life be-

But I had so near made out the sun. And counted your stars, the seven and

Like the fingers of my hand:

Nay, I could all but understand Wherefore through heaven the white moon ranges: And just when out of her soft fifty changes No unfamiliar face might over-look

Suddenly God took me.

[PIPPA passes.

Mon. [Springing up.] My people—one and all—within there! Gag this villain tie him hand and foot! He dares . . . I know not half he dares—but remove him—quick! Miserere mei, Domine! Quick,

PIPPA's Chamber again. She enters it.

The bee with his comb. The mouse at her dray, The grub in his tomb,

While winter away:

But the fire-fly and hedge-shrew and lob-worm. I pray,

How fare they?

Ha, ha, thanks for your counsel, my Zanze!

"Feast upon lampreys, quaff Breganze"-

The summer of life so easy to spend, And care for to-morrow so soon put away!

But winter hastens at summer's end. And fire-fly, hedge-shrew, lob-worm, I pray,

How fare they?

No bidding me then to . . . what did Zanze sav?

"Pare vour nails pearlwise, get your small feet shoes

More like" . . . (what said she?)—"and less like canoes!"

How pert that girl was!—would I be those pert

Impudent staring women! It had done

However, surely no such mighty hurt To learn his name who passed that jest upon me:

No foreigner, that I can recollect, Came, as she says, a month since, to inspect Our silk-mills-none with blue eyes and thick rings Of raw-silk-colored hair, at all events. Well, if old Luca keep his good intents,

We shall do better, see what next year brings! I may buy shoes, my Zanze, not appear

More destitute than you perhaps next

Bluph . . . something! I had caught the uncouth name

But for Monsignor's people's sudden clatter

Above us-bound to spoil such idle chatter

As ours: it were indeed a serious matter If silly talk like ours should put to shame The pious man, the man devoid of blame, The . . . ah but—ah but, all the same,

No mere mortal has a right To carry that exalted air;

Best people are not angels quite:

While-not the worst of people's doings spare!

The devil; so there's that proud look to Which is mere counsel to myself, mind! for

I have just been the holy Monsignor: And I was you, too, Luigi's gentle mother,

And you too, Luigi!—how that Luigi started Out of the turret—doubtlessly departed On some good errand or another.

For he passed just now in a traveller's trim.

And the sullen company that prowled About his path, I noticed, scowled As if they had lost a prey in him.

And I was Jules the sculptor's bride, And I was Ottima beside, And now what am 1?—tired of fooling.

And now what am 1?—Hired of fooling Day for folly, hight for schooling!

New year's day is over and spent,
Ill or well, I must be content.

Even my lily's asleep, I vow: Wake up—here's a friend I've plucked ton! Call this flower a heart's-ease now! Something rare, let me instruct you, Is this, with petals triply swollen, Three times spotted, thrice the pollen; While the leaves and parts that witness Old proportions and their fitness, Here remain unchanged, unmoved now; Call this pampered thing improved now! Suppose there's a king of the flowers And a girl-show held in his bowers-"Look ye, buds, this growth of ours," Says he, "Zanze from the Brenta, I have made her gorge polenta Till both cheeks are near as bouncing As her . . . name there's no pronouncing!

See this heightened color too,
For she swilled Breganze wine
Till her nose turned deep carmine;
'T was but white when wild she grew.
And only by this Zanze's eyes
Of which we could not change the size,
The magnitude of all achieved
Otherwise, may be perceived."

Oh what a drear dark close to my poor

How could that red sun drop in that

How could that red sun drop in that black cloud?

Ah Pippa, morning's rule is moved away, Dispensed with, mever more to be allowed!

Day's turn is over, now arrives the night's.

Oh lark, be day's apostle To mavis, merle and throstle, Bid them their betters jostle From day and its delights!

But at night, brother owlet, over the woods,

Toll the world to thy chantry;
Sing to the bats' sleek sisterhoods
Full complines with gallantry:
Then, owls and bats,
Cowls and twats,
Monks and nuns, in a cloister's moods,

Adjourn to the oak-stump pantry!

[After she has begun to a dress herself.

Now, one thing I should like to really know:

How near I ever might approach all these

I only fancied being, this long day:

—Approach, I mean, so as to touch them.

As to . . . in some way . . . move them—
if you please,

Do good or evil to them some slight way. For instance, if I wind

Silk to morrow, my silk may bind
[Sitting on the bedside.
And border Ottima's cloak's hem.

Ah me, and my important part with

This morning's hymn half promised when I rose!

True in some sense or other, I suppose.

[As she lies down.
God bless me! I can pray no more to-

night.
No doubt, some way or other, hymns say right.

All service ranks the same with God— With God. whose puppets, best and worst, Are we; there is no last nor first.
[She sleeps.

CAVALIER TUNES

I. MARCHING ALONG

KENTISH Sir Byng stood for his King, Bidding the crop-headed Parliament swing:

And, pressing a troop unable to stoop And see the rogues flourish and honest folk droop,

Marched them along, fifty-score strong, Great-hearted gentlemen, singing this song.

God for King Charles! Pym and such

To the Devil that prompts 'em their treasonous parles!

Cavaliers, up! Lips from the cup, Hands from the pasty, nor bite take nor Till you 're-

CHORUS.—Marching along, fifty-score strong,

Great-hearted gentlemen, singing this song.

Hampden to hell, and his obsequies' knell.

Serve Hazelrig, Fiennes, and young Harry as well!

England, good cheer! Rupert is near! Kentish and lovalists, keep we not here, CHORUS.—Marching along, fifty-score strong.

Great-hearted gentlemen, singing this song?

Then, God for King Charles! Pvm and his snarls

To the Devil that pricks on such pestilent carles!

Hold by the right, you double your might:

So, onward to Nottingham, fresh for the fight,

CHORUS. -- March we along, fifty-score strong,

Great-hearted gentlemen, singing this song!

II. GIVE A ROUSE

King Charles, and who'll do him right now?

King Charles, and who's ripe for fight now?

Give a rouse: here 's, in hell's despite now,

King Charles! Who gave me the goods that went since? Who raised me the house that sank once? Who helped me to gold I spent since?

Who found me in wine you drank once? CHORUS.—King Charles, and who'll do him right now?

King Charles, and who's ripe for light now? Give a rouse: here 's, in hell's despite now.

King Charles!

To whom used my boy George quaffelse. By the old fool's side that begot him? For whom did he cheer and laugh else, While Noll's damued troopers shot him? CHORUS.-King Charles, and who'll do him right now? King Charles, and who's ripe for fight now?

Give a rouse: here's, in hell's despite now,

King Charles!

III. BOOT AND SADDLE

Boot, saddle, to horse and away ! Rescue my castle before the hot day Brightens to blue from its silvery grav. CHORUS.—Boot, saddle, to horse and away!

Ride past the suburbs, asleep as you'd

Many's the friend there, will listen and pray

"God's luck to gallants that strike up the lav-

CHORUS.—Boot, saddle, to horse, and awav!"

Forty miles off, like a roebuck at bay, Flouts Castle Brancepeth the Roundheads' array:

Who laughs, "Good fellows ere this, by my fay,

CHORUS.—Boot, saddle, to horse, and away!"

Who? My wife Gertrude; that, honest and gay,

Laughs when you talk of surrendering. "Nay!

I've better counsellors; what counsel thev?

Сно.—Boot, saddle, to horse, and away!" 1842.

THROUGH THE METIDJA TO ABD-EL-KADR

As I ride, as I ride. With a full heart for my guide. So its tide rocks my side, As I ride, as I ride, That, as I were double-eved. He, in whom our Tribes confide. Is descried, ways untried. As I ride, as I ride.

As I ride, as I ride To our Chief and his Allied. Who dares chide my heart's pride As I ride, as I ride? Or are witnesses denied-Through the desert waste and wide Do I glide unespied As I ride, as I ride?

As I ride, as I ride, When an inner voice has cried. The sands slide, nor abide (As I ride, as I ride) O'er each visioned homicide That came vaunting (has he lied?) To reside—where he died, As I ride, as I ride.

As I ride, as I ride, Ne'er has spur my swift horse plied. Yet his hide, streaked and pied.

As I ride, as I ride, Shows where sweat has sprung and dried, –Zebra-footed, ostrich-fhighed— How has vied stride with stride As I ride, as I ride!

As I ride, as I ride. Could I loose what Fate has tied, Ere I pried, she should hide (As I ride, as I ride) All that's meant me—satisfied When the Prophet and the Bride Stop veins I'd have subside As I ride, as I ride! 1842.

CRISTINA

THE should never have looked at me If she meant I should not love her! There are plenty . . . men you call such, I suppose . . . she may discover All her soul to, if she pleases, And yet leave much as she found them:

But I'm not so, and she knew it When she fixed me, glancing round

What? To fix me thus meant nothing? But I can't tell (there 's my weakness) What her look said !- no vile cant, sure, About "need to strew the bleakness Of some lone shore with its pearl-seed,

That the sea feels"—no "strange vearning

That such souls have, most to lavish Where there's chance of least return-

Oh, we're sunk enough here, God knows! But not quite so sunk that moments, Sure though seldom, are denied us, When the spirit's true endowments Stand out plainly from its false ones, And apprise it if pursuing Or the right way or the wrong way, To its triumph or undoing.

There are flashes struck from midnights. There are fire-flames noondays kindle, Whereby piled up honors perish, Whereby sworlen ambitions dwindle, While just this or that poor impulse, Which for once had play unstifled, Seems the sole work of a lifetime, That away the rest have trifled.

Doubt you if, in some such moment, As she fixed me, she felt clearly, Ages past the soul existed,

Here an age 't is resting merely. And hence fleets again for ages, While the true end, sole and single. It stops here for is, this love-way. With some other soul to mingle?

Else it loses what it lived for. And eternally must lose it: Better ends may be in prospect, Deeper blisses (if you choose it), But this life's end and this love-bliss Have been lost here. Doubt vou whether

This she felt as, looking at me, Mine and her souls rushed together?

Oh, observe! Of course, next moment, The world's honors in derision. Trampled out the light forever: Never fear but there's provision Of the devil's to quench knowledge Lest we walk the earth in rapture! —Making those who catch God's secret Just so much more prize their capture!

Such am I; the secret's mine now! She has lost me, I have gained her; Her soul's mine: and thus, grown per-

I shall pass my life's remainder, Life will just hold out the proving Both our powers, alone and blended: And then come the next life quickly! This world's use will have been ended. 1842.

INCIDENT OF THE FRENCH CAMP

You know, we French stormed Ratisbon:

A mile or so away, On a little mound, Napoleon Stood on our storming-day; With neck out-thrust, you fancy how, Legs wide, arms locked behind, As if to balance the prone brow Oppressive with its mind.

Just as perhaps he mused "My plans That soar, to earth may fall, Let once my army-leader Lannes Waver at yonder wall,"-Out 'twixt the battery-smokes there flew

A rider, bound on bound Full-galloping; nor bridle drew Until he reached the mound.

Then off there flung in smiling joy, And held himself erect

By just his horse's mane, a boy: You hardly could suspect-

(So tight he kept his lips compressed, Scarce any blood came through)

You looked twice ere you saw his breast Was all but shot in two.

"Well," cried he, "Emperor, by God's we 've got you Ratisbon!

The Marshal's in the market-place,

And you'll be there anon To see your flag-bird flap his vans Where I, to heart's desire,

Perched him!" The chief's eve flashed: his plans

Soared up again like fire.

The chief's eye flashed; but presently Softened itself, as sheathes

A film the mother-eagle's eve

When her bruised eaglet breathes; "You're wounded!" "Nay," the soldier's pride Touched to the quick, he said: "I'm killed, Sire!" And his chief beside.

Smiling the boy fell dead. 1842.

MY LAST DUCHESS

FERRARA

THAT'S my last Duchess painted on the wall.

Looking as if she were alive. I call

That piece a wonder, now: Frà Pandolf's hands

Worked busily a day, and there she stands.

Will't please you sit and look at her? I said

"Frà Pandolf" by design, for never read

Strangers like you that pictured countenance.

The depth and passion of its earnest glance.

But to myself they turned (since none puts by

The curtain I have drawn for you, but I) And seemed as they would ask me, if they durst,

How such a glance came there; so, not the first

Are you to turn and ask thus. Sir,'t was not

Her husband's presence only, called that spot

Of joy into the Duchess' cheek: perhaps Frà Pandolf chanced to sav, "Her mantle laps

Over my lady's wrist too much," or .. Paint

Must never hope to reproduce the faint Half-flush that dies along her throat:" such stuff

Was courtesy, she thought, and cause enough

For calling up that spot of joy. She had A heart-how shall I say?-too soon made glad.

Too easily impressed: she liked whate'er She looked on, and her looks went everywhere.

Sir, 't was all one! My favor at her breast.

The dropping of the daylight in the West,

The bough of cherries some officious

Broke in the orchard for her, the white mule

She rode with round the terrace—all and each

Would draw from her alike the approving speech,

Or blush, at least. She thanked men,good! but thanked

Somehow-I know not how-as if she ranked

My gift of a nine-hundred-years-old

With anybody's gift. Who 'd stoop to blame This sort of trifling? Even had you skill

In speech—(which I have not)—to make your will

Quite clear to such an one, and say, "Just this

Or that in you disgusts me; here you miss,

Or there exceed the mark "-and if she let

Herself be lessoned so, nor plainly set Her wits to yours, forsooth, and made excuse,

—E'en then would be some stooping; and I choose

Never to stoop. Oh sir, she smiled, no doubt,

Whene'er I passed her; but who passed without

Much the same smile? This grew; I gave commands;

Then all smiles stopped together. There she stands I'll meet As if alive. Will't please you rise? We

The company below, then. I repeat, The Count your master's known munifi-

Is ample warrant that no just pretence Of mine for dowry will be disaflowed; Though his fair daughter's self, as I avowed

At starting, is my object. Nay, we'll go Together down, sir. Notice Neptune, though, Taming a sea-horse, thought a rarity, Which Claus of Innsbruck cast in bronze 1842.

IN A GONDOLA

He sings

I send my heart up to thee, all my heart In this my singing.

For the stars help me, and the sea bears part;

The very night is clinging Closer to Venice' streets to leave one Above me, whence thy face May light my joyous heart to thee its dwelling place.

She speaks

Say after me, and try to say My very words, as if each word Came from you of your own accord, In your own voice, in your own way: "This woman's heart and soul and brain Are mine as much as this gold chain She bids me wear; which " (say again) "I choose to make by cherishing A precious thing, or choose to fling Over the boat-side, ring by ring." And yet once more say . . . no word more!

Since words are only words. Give o'er!

Unless you call me, all the same, Familiarly by my pet name, Which if the Three should hear you call, And me reply to, would proclaim At once our secret to them all. Ask of me, too, command me, blame,— Do, break down the partition-wall T wixt us, the daylight world beholds Curtained in dusk and splendid folds! What's left but—all of me to take? I am the Three's: prevent them, slake Your thirst! T is said, the Arab sage, In practising with gems, can loose Their subtle spirit in his cruce And leave but ashes: so, sweet mageLeave them my ashes when thy use Sucks out my soul, thy heritage!

He sings

Past we glide, and past, and past! What's that poor Agnese doing Where they make the shutters fast? Gray Zanobi 's just a-wooing To his couch the purchased bride: Past we glide!

Past we glide, and past, and past! Why's the Pucci Palace flaring Like a beacon to the blast? Guests by hundreds, not one caring If the dear host's neck were wried: Past we glide!

She sings

The moth's kiss, first! Kiss me as if you made believe You were not sure, this eve, How my face, your flower, had pursed Its petals up; so, here and there You brush it, till I grow aware Who wants me, and wide ope I burst.

The bee's kiss, now! Kiss me as if you entered gay My heart at some noonday, A bud that dares not disallow The claim, so all is rendered up, And passively its shattered cup Over your head to sleep I bow.

He sings

What are we two? I am a Jew, And carry thee, farther than friends can pursue,

To a feast of our tribe; Where they need thee to bribe The devil that blasts them unless he imbibe

Thy . . . Scatter the vision forever! And now,

As of old, I am I, thou art thou!

Say again, what we are? The sprite of a star, I lure thee above where the destinies bar My plumes their full play Till a ruddier ray Than my pale one announce there is withering away

Some . . . Scatter the vision forever! And now, As of old, I am I, thou art thou!

He muses

Oh, which were best, to roam or rest?
The land's lap or the water's breast?
To sleep on yellow millet-sheaves,
Or swim in lucid shallows just
Eluding water-lily leaves,
An inch from Death's black fingers, thrust

To lock you, whom release he must; Which life were best on Summer eves?

He speaks, musing

Lie back; could thought of mine improve you?

From this shoulder let there spring A wing; from this, another wing;
Wings, not legs and feet, shall move you!

Snow white must they spring, to blend With your flesh, but I intend They shall deepen to the end, Broader, into burning gold, Till both wings crescent-wise enfold Your perfect self, from 'neath your feet To o'er your head, where, lo, they meet As if a million sword-blades hurled Defiance from you to the world!

Rescue me thou, the only real!
And scare away this mad ideal
That came, nor motions to depart!
Thanks! Now, stay ever as thou art!

Still he muses

What if the Three should catch at last Thy serenader? While there's cast Paul's cloak about my head, and fast Gian pinions me, Himself has past His stylet through my back; I reel; And . . . is it thou I feel?

They trail me, these three godless knaves, Past every church that saints and saves, Nor stop till, where the cold sea raves By Lido's wet accursed graves, They scoop mine, roll me to its brink, And... on thy breast I sink!

She replies, musing.

Dip your arm o'er the boat-side, elbow-deep.

As I do: thus: were death so unlike sleep,

Caught this way? Death 's to fear from flame or steel,

Or poison doubtless; but from waterfeel! Go find the bottom! Would you stay me? There! [guass Now pluck a great blade of that ribbon-To plait in where the foolish jewel was. I flung away: since you have praised my hair,

'T is proper to be choice in what I wear.

He speaks

Row home? must we row home? Too surely

Know I where its front 's demurely Over the Giudecca piled; Window just with window mating, Door on door exactly waiting, All's the set face of a child: But behind it, where 's a trace Of the staidness and reserve. And formal lines without a curve, In the same child's playing-face? No two windows look one way O'er the small sea-water thread Below them. Ah, the autumn day I, passing, saw you overhead! First, out a cloud of curtain blew, Then a sweet cry, and last came you -To catch your lory that must needs Escape just then, of all times then, To peck a tall plant's fleecy seeds, And make me happiest of men. I scarce could breathe to see you reach So far back o'er the balcony To catch him ere he climbed too high Above you in the Smyrna peach, That quick the round smooth cord of gold,

This coiled hair on your head, unrolled, Fell down you like a gorgeous snake The Roman girls were wont, of old. When Rome there was, for coolness' sake To let lie curling o'er their bosoms. Dear lory, may his beak retain Ever its delicate rose stain As if the wounded lotus-blossoms. Had marked their thief to know again!

Stay longer yet, for others' sake Than mine! What should your chamber do?

-With all its rarities that ache
In silence while day lasts, but wake
At night-time and their life renew,
Suspended just to pleasure you
Who brought against their will together
These objects, and, while day lasts, weave

Around them such a magic tether
That dumb they look: your harp, believe,

With all the sensitive tight strings Which dare not speak, now to itself Breathes slumberously, as if some elf

Went in and out the chords, his wings Make murmur wheresoe'er they graze, As an angel may, between the maze Of midnight palace-pillars, on And on, to sow God's plagues, have gone Through guilty glorious Babylon. And while such murmurs flow, the nymph Bends o'er the harp-top from her shell As the dry limpet for the lymph Come with a tune he knows so well. And how your statues' hearts must swell!

And how your pictures must descend To see each other, friend with friend! Oh, could you take them by surprise, You'd find Schidone's eager Duke Doing the quaintest courtesies To that prim saint by Haste-thee-Luke! And, deeper into her rock den, Bold Castelfranco's Magdalen You'd find retreated from the ken Of that robed counsel-keeping Ser-As if the Tizian thinks of her, And is not, rather, gravely bent On seeing for himself what toys Are these, his progeny invent, What litter now the board employs Whereon he signed a document That got him murdered! Each enjoys Its night so well, you cannot break The sport up, so, indeed must make More stay with me, for others' sake.

She speaks

To-morrow, if a harp-string, say, Is used to tie the jasmine back That overfloods my room with sweets, Contrive your Zorzi somehow meets My Zanze! If the ribbon's black, The Three are watching: keep away!

Your gondola—let Zorzi wreathe A mesh of water-weeds about Its prow, as if he unaware Had struck some quay or bridge-foot stair!

That I may throw a paper out As you and he go underneath.

There's Zanze's vigilant taper; safe are Only one minute more to-night with Resume your past self of a month ago! Be you the bashful gallant, I will be

The lady with the colder breast than snow.

Now bow you, as becomes, nor touch my hand

More than I touch yours when I step to

And say, "All thanks, Siora!"-

Heart to heart And lips to lips! Yet once more, ere we part,

Clasp me and make me thine, as mine thou art!

[He is surprised, and stabbed. It was ordained to be so, sweet!—and best

Comes now, beneath thine eyes, upon thy breast.

Still kiss me! Care not for the cowards!

Only to put aside thy beauteous hair My blood will hurt! The Three, I do not scorn

To death, because they never lived: but I Have lived indeed, and so-(vet one more kiss)—can die! 1842.

THE PIED PIPER OF HAMELIN

A CHILD'S STORY

(Written for, and inscribed to, W. M. the Younger.) 1

HAMELIN Town 's in Brunswick, By famous Hanover city; The river Weser, deep and wide, Washes its wall on the southern side; A pleasanter spot you never spied; But, when begins my ditty, Almost five hundred years ago, To see the townsfolk suffer so From vermin, was a pity.

Rats! They fought the dogs and killed the cats, And bit the babies in the cradles, And ate the cheeses out of the vats, And licked the soup from the cooks' own ladles.

Split open the kegs of salted sprats, Made nests inside men's Sunday hats, And even spoiled the women's chats By drowning their speaking

With shricking and squeaking In fifty different sharps and flats.

1 The son of William Macready, the famous actor.

III

At last the people in a body

To the Town Hall came flocking:
"T is clear," cried they, "our Mayor's a noddy;

And as for our Corporation—shocking
To think we buy gowns lined with ermine

For dolts that can't or won't determine What 's best to rid us of our vermin! You hope, because you 're old and obese, To find in the furry civic robe ease? Rouse up, sirs! Give your brains a racking

To find the remedy we're lacking, Or, sure as fate, we'll send you packing!"

At this the Mayor and Corporation Quaked with a mighty consternation.

IV

An hour they sat in council:

At length the Mayor broke silence:
"For a guilder I'd my ermine gown sell.

I wish I were a mile hence!

It's easy to bid one rack one's brain—
I'm sure my poor head aches again,
I've scratched it so, and all in vain.
Oh for a trap, a trap!

Just as he said this, what should hap
At the chamber-door but a gentle tap?

"Bless us," cried the Mayor, "what's that?"
(With the Corporation as he sat, Looking little though wondrous fat; Nor brighter was his eye, nor moister Than a too-long-opened oyster.

Save when at noon his paunch grew mutinous

For a plate of turtle green and glutinous)
"Only a scraping of shoes on the mat?
Anything like the sound of a rat
Makes my heart go pit-a-pat!"

"Come in!"—the Mayor cried, looking bigger:

And in did come the strangest figure! His queer long coat from heel to head Was half of yellow and half of red, And he himself was tall and thin, With sharp blue eyes, each like a pin, And light loose hair, yet swarthy skin, No tuft on cheek nor beard on chin. But lips where smiles went out and in; There was no guessing his kith and kin: And nobody could enough admire

The tall man and his quaint attire. Quoth one: "It 's as my great-grand-

Starting up at the Trump of Doom's tone.

Had walked this way from his painted tombstone!"

VI

He advanced to the council-table: And, "Please your honors," said he, "I'm able,

By means of a secret charm, to draw All creatures living beneath the sun, That creep or swim or fly or run, After me so as you never saw! And I chiefly use my charm On creatures that do people harm, The mole and toad and newt and viper; And people call me the Pied Piper." (And here they noticed round his neck A scarf of red and yellow stripe, To match with his coat of the self-same check;

And at the scarf's end hung a pipe;
And his fingers, they noticed, were ever straying

As if impatient to be playing
Upon this pipe, as low it dangled
Over his vesture so old-fangled.)
"Yet," said he, "poor piper as I am,

In Tartary I freed the Cham, Last June, from his huge swarms of gnats;

I eased in Asia the Nizam
Of a monstrous brood of vampire-bats:
And as for what your brain bewilders,
If I can rid your town of rats
Will you give mea thousand guilders?"
"One? fifty thousand!"—was the exclamation

Of the astonished Mayor and Corpora-

VII

Into the street the Piper stepped, Smiling first a little smile, As if he knew what magic slept

In his quiet pipe the while; Then, like a musical adept, To blow the pipe his lips he wri

To blow the pipe his lips he wrinkled, And green and blue his sharp eyes twinkled,

Like a candle-flame where salt is sprinkled;

And ere three shrill notes the pipe uttered,

You heard as if an army muttered; And the muttering grew to a grumbling; And the grumbling grew to a mighty rumbling;

And out of the houses the rats came tumbling.

Great rats, small rats, lean rats, brawny

Brown rats, black rats, gray rats, tawny rats.

Grave old plodders, gay young friskers, Fathers, mothers, uncles, cousins, Cocking tails and pricking whiskers,

Families by tens and dozens, Brothers, sisters, husbands, wives— Followed the Piper for their lives. From street to street he piped advancing.

And step for step they followed dancing,
Until they came to the river Weser,
Wherein all plunged and perished!
—Save one who, stout as Julius Cæsar,
Swam across and lived to carry
(As he, the manuscript he cherished)
To Rat-land home his commentary:
Which was, "At the first shrill notes of the pipe.

I heard a sound as of scraping tripe, And putting apples, wondrous ripe, Into a cider-press's gripe:

And a moving away of pickle-tub-boards, And a leaving ajar of conserve-cupboards.

And a drawing the corks of train-oil-flasks,

And a breaking the hoops of buttercasks:

And it seemed as if a voice (Sweeter far than by harp or by psaltery Is breathed) called out, 'Oh rats, rejoice!

The world is grown to one vast drysaltery!

saltery!

So munch on, crunch on, take your nuncheon,
Breakfast, supper, dinner, luncheon!'

And just as a bulky sugar puncheon?
And just as a bulky sugar puncheon,
All ready staved, like a great sun shone
Glorious scarce an inch before me,
Just as methought it said, 'Come, bore
me!'

-I found the Weser rolling o'er me."

VIII

You should have heard the Hamelin people Ringing the bells till they rocked the steeple.

"Go," cried the Mayor, "and get long poles, [holes! Poke out the nests and block up the Consult with carpenters and builders, And leave in our town not even a trace Of the rats!"—when suddenly, up the face

Of the Piper perked in the market-place, With a, "First, if you please, my thousand guilders!"

IΧ

A thousand guilders! The Mayor looked blue;

So did the Corporation too.

For council dinners made rare havoc With Claret, Moselle, Vin-de-Grave, Hock;

And half the money would replenish Their cellar's biggest butt with Rhenish. To pay this sum to a wandering fellow With a gypsy coat of red and yellow! "Beside," quoth the Mayor with a knowing wink,

"Our business was done at the river's brink;

We saw with our eyes the vermin sink, And what's dead can't come to life, I think.

So, friend, we're not the folks to shrink From the duty of giving you something for drink,

And a matter of money to put in your poke;

But as for the guilders, what we spoke Of them, as you very well know, was in joke.

Beside, our losses have made us thrifty. A thousand guilders! Come, take fifty!"

X

The Piper's face fell, and he cried,
"No trifling! I can't wait, beside!
I've promised to visit by dinner time
Bagdad, and accept the prime
Of the Head-Cook's pottage, all he's rich in.

Fight in, For having left, in the Caliph's kitchen, Of a nest of scorpions no survivor: With him I proved no bargain-driver, With you, don't think I'll bate a stiver! And folks who put me in a passion May find me pipe after another fashion."

IX

"How?" cried the Mayor, "d'ye think I brook
Being worse treated than a Cook?
Insulted by a lazy ribald
With idle pipe and vesture piebald?
You threaten us, fellow? Do your worst,
Blow your pipe there till you burst!"

XII

Once more he stepped into the street, And to his lips again

Laid his long pipe of smooth straight cane:

And ere he blew three notes (such sweet

Soft notes as yet musician's cunning Never gave the enraptured air)

There was a rustling that seemed like a bustling

Of merry crowds justling at pitching and hustling;

Small feet were pattering, wooden shoes clattering.

Little hands clapping and little tongues chattering,

And, like fowls in a farm-yard when barley is scattering,

Out came the children running.
All the little boys and girls,
With rosy cheeks and flaxen curls,
And sparkling eyes and teeth like pearls,
Tripping and skipping, ran merrily after
The wonderful music with shouting and laughter.

XIII

The Mayor was dumb, and the Council stood

As if they were changed into blocks of wood.

Unable to move a step, or cry
To the children merrily skipping by,
—Could only follow with the eye
That joyous crowd at the Piper's back.
But how the Mayor was on the rack,
And the wretched Council's bosoms beat,
As the Piper turned from the High Street
To where the Weser rolled its waters
Right in the way of their sons and daughters!

However, he turned from South to West, And to Koppelberg Hill his steps addressed.

And after him the children pressed; Great was the joy in every breast.
"He never can cross that mighty top! He's forced to let the piping drop, And we shall see our children stop!"
When, lo, as they reached the mountainside,

A wondrous portal opened wide.
As if a cavern was suddenly hollowed;
And the Piper advanced and the children followed.

And when all were in to the very last. The door in the mountain-side shut fast. Did I say all? No! One was lame,
And could not dance the whole of the
way;

And in after years if you would blame
His sadness, he was used to say,—
"It's dull in our town since my playmates left!

I can't forget that I'm bereft Of all the pleasant sights they see, Which the Piper also promised me. For he led us, he said, to a joyous land, Joining the town and just at hand, Where waters gushed and fruit-trees

And flowers put forth a fairer hue, And everything was strange and new; The sparrows were brighter than peacocks here.

And their dogs outran our fallow deer, And honey-bees had lost their stings, And horses were born with eagles'

wings;
And just as I became assured
My lame foot would be speedily cured,
The music stopped and I stood still,
And found myself outside the hill,
Left alone against my will,
To go now limping as before,
And never hear of that country more!"

XIV

Alas, alas for Hamelin!

grew

There came into many a burgher's pate A text which says that heaven's gate Opes to the rich at as easy rate

As the needle's eye takes a camel in!
The Mayor sent East, West, North and South,

To offer the Piper, by word of mouth,
Wherever it was men's lot to find him,
Silver and gold to his heart's content,
If he'd only return the way he went,

And bring the children behind him.
But when they saw 't was a lost endeavor,

And Piper and dancers were gone forever,

They made a decree that lawyers never Should think their records dated duly If, after the day of the month and year, These words did not as well appear.

These words and not as well appear,
"And so long after what happened here
On the Twenty-second of July,
Thirteen hundred and seventy-six:"

Thirteen hundred and seventy-six:"
And the better in memory to fix
The place of the children's last retreat,
They called it, the Pied Piper's Street—
Where any one playing on pipe or tabor
Was sure for the future to lose his labor.

Nor suffered they hostely or tavern To shock with mirth a street so solemn:

But opposite the place of the cavern

They wrote the story on a column. And on the great church-window painted The same, to make the world acquainted How their children were stolen away, And there it stands to this very day. And I must not omit to say That in Transylvania there's a tribe

Of alien people who ascribe*
The outlandish ways and dress
On which their neighbors lay such stress,
To their fathers and mothers having risen

Out of some subterraneous prison Into which they were trepanned Long time ago in a mighty band Out of Hamelin town in Brunswick land, But how or why, they don't understand.

XV

So, Willy, let me and you be wipers Of scores out with all men—especially pipers!

And, whether they pipe us free from rats or from mice,

If we've promised them aught, let us keep our promise! 1842.

RUDEL TO THE LADY OF TRIPOLI

I know a Mount, the gracious Sun perceives

First, when he visits, last, too, when he leaves

The world; and, vainly favored, it repays
The day-long glory of his steadfast gaze
By no change of its large calm front of snow.

And underneath the Mount, a Flower I know,

He cannot have perceived, that changes

At his approach; and, in the lost endeavor

To live his life, has parted, one by one, With all a flower's true graces, for the grace

Of being but a foolish mimic sun, With ray-like florets round a disk-li

With ray-like florets round a disk-like face.

Men nobly call by many a name the Mount

As over many a land of theirs its large Calm front of snow like a triumphal targe Is reared, and still with old names, fresh names vie,

Each to its proper praise and own account:

Men call the Flower the Sunflower, sportively.

II

Oh, Angel of the East, one, one gold look Across the waters to this twilight nook, —The far sad waters, Angel, to this nook!

III

Dear Pilgrim, art thou for the East indeed?

Go!—saying ever as thou dost proceed,
That I, French Rudel, choose for n.y
device

A sunflower outspread like a sacrifice Before its idol. See! These inexpert And hurried fingers could not fail to hurt

The woven picture; 't is a woman's skill Indeed; but nothing baffled me, so, ill Or well, the work is finished. Say, men feed

On songs I sing, and therefore bask the bees

On my flower's breast as on a platform broad:

But as the flower's concern is not for these

But solely for the sun, so men applaud In vain this Rudel, he not looking here But to the East—the East! Go, say this, Pilgrim dear! 1842.

THERE'S A WOMAN LIKE A DEW-DROP

[FROM A BLOT IN THE SCUTCHEON]

THERE'S a woman like a dewdrop, she's so purer than the purest;

And her noble heart's the noblest, yes, and her sure faith's the surest:

And her eyes are dark and humid, like the depth on depth of lustre

Hid i' the harebell, while her tresses, sunnier than the wild-grape cluster, Gush in golden-tinted plenty down her neck's rose-misted marble:

Then her voice's music . . . call it the well's bubbling, the bird's warble!

And this woman says, "My days were sunless and my nights were moonless, Parched the pleasant April herbage, and the lark's heart's outbreak tune-

If you loved me not!" And I who—(ah, for words of flame!) adore her,

Who am mad to lay my spirit prostrate palpably before her—

I may enter at her portal soon, as now her lattice takes me.

And by noontide as by midnight make her mine, as hers she makes me! 1843.

THE LOST LEADER!

JUST for a handful of silver he left us,
Just for a riband to stick in his coat—
Found the one gift of which fortune bereft us,

Lost all the others she lets us devote; They, with the gold to give, doled him out silver.

So much was theirs who so little allowed:

How all our copper had gone for his service!

Rags—were they purple, his heart had been proud!

¹ Browning admitted that in writing this poem he had Wordsworth in mind, but insisted that he did not mean it as an exact portrait of Wordsworth. Browning's mature judgment on the matter is best expressed in his own words: 'I did in my hasty youth presume to use the great and venerated personality of Wordsworth as a sort of painter's model; one from which this or the other particular feature may be selected and turned to account; had I intended more, above all such a boldness as portraying the entire man. I should not have talked about 'handfuls of silver and bits of ribbon.' These never influenced the change of politics in the great poet, whose defection. nevertheless, accompanied as it was by a regular face-about of his special party, was to my juvenile apprehension, and even mature consideration, an event to deplore,'' See also Mrs. Orr's Browning (Life and Letters), 1, 191. TO WORDSWORTH

POET of Nature, thou hast wept to know That things depart which never may return: Childhood and youth, friendship and love's first glow,

Have fled like sweet dreams, leaving thee to mourn.

mourn.
These common woes I feel. One loss is mine
Which thou too feel'st, yet I alone deplore.
Thou wert as a lone star, whose light did shine
On some frail bark in winter's midnight roar:
Thou hast like to a rock-built refuge stood
Above the blind and battling multitude:
In honored poverty thy voice did weave
Songs consecrate to truth and liberty.
Deserting these, then leavest me to grieve,
Thus having been, that thou shouldst cease to be.

We that had loved him so, followed him, honored him,

Lived in his mild and magnificent eye,

Learned his great language, caught his clear accents,

Made him our pattern to live and to die! Shakespeare was of us, Milton was for Burns, Shelley, were with us,—they watch from their graves!

He alone breaks from the van and the freemen,

-He alone sinks to the rear and the slaves!

We shall march prospering,— not through his presence;

Songs may inspirit us,—not from his

Deeds will be done,—while he boasts his quiescence,

Still bidding crouch whom the rest bade aspire:

Blot out his name, then, record one lost soul more.

One task more declined, one more footpath untrod,

One more devils'-triumph and sorrow for angels,

One wrong more to man, one more insult to God!

Life's night begins: let him never come back to us!

There would be doubt, hesitation and

Forced praise on our part—the glimmer of twilight,

Never glad confident morning again!
Best fight on well, for we taught him—
strike gallantly,

Menace our heart ere we master his own;

Then let him receive the new knowledge and wait us.

Pardoned in heaven, the first by the throne! 1845.

HOW THEY BROUGHT THE GOOD NEWS FROM GHENT TO AIX ¹

I SPRANG to the stirrup, and Joris, and

I galloped, Dirck galloped, we galloped all three;

¹ This galloping ballad, which has no historical foundation, was written at sea, off Cape St. Vincent. See Mrs. Orr's Browning, I, 144-45.

"Good speed!" cried the watch, as the gatebolts undrew;

"Speed!" echoed the wall to us gallop-

Behind shut the postern, the lights sank to rest,

And into the midnight we galloped abreast.

Not a word to each other; we kept the great pace

Neck by neck, stride by stride, never changing our place;

I turned in my saddle and made its girths tight,

Then shortened each stirrup, and set the pique right,

Rebuckled the cheek-strap, chained slacker the bit,

Nor galloped less steadily Roland a whit.

'T was moonset at starting; but while we drew near

Lokeren, the cocks crew and twilight dawned clear;

At Boom, a great yellow star came out to see;

At Düffeld, 't was morning as plain as could be;

And from Mecheln church-steeple we heard the half-chime, So Joris broke silence with, "Yet there is time!"

At Aershot, up leaped of a sudden the

And against him the cattle stood black every one, fing past,

To stare through the mist at us gallop-And I saw my stout galloper Roland at last.

With resolute shoulders, each butting

The haze, as some bluff river headland its spray:

And his low head and crest, just one sharp ear bent back

For my voice, and the other pricked out on his track;

And one eye's black intelligence,—ever that glance

O'er its white edge at me, his own master, askance!

And the thick heavy spume-flakes which ave and anon fing on. His fierce lips shook upwards in gallop-

By Hasselt, Dirck groaned; and cried Joris, "Stay spur!

Your Roos galloped bravely, the fault's not in her.

We'll remember at Aix"—for one heard the quick wheeze

Of her chest, saw the stretched neck and staggering knees,

And sunk tail, and horrible heave of the flank, As down on her haunches she shuddered and sank.

So, we were left galloping, Joris and I, Past Looz and past Tongres, no cloud in the sky: The broad sun above laughed a pitiless

'Neath our feet broke the brittle bright stubble like chaff;

Till over by Dalhem a dome-spire sprang white.

And "Gallop," gasped Joris, " for Aix is in sight!"

"How they 'll greet us!"—and all in a moment his roan

Rolled neck and croup over, lay dead as a stone:

And there was my Roland to bear the whole weight Of the news which alone could save Aix from her fate, With his nostrils like pits full of blood to the brim.

And with circles of red for his eyesockets' rim.

Then I cast loose my buffcoat, each holster let fall.

Shook off both my jack-boots, let go belt This ear. and all,

Stood up in the stirrup, leaned, patted Called my Roland his pet-name, my horse without peer;

Clapped my hands, laughed and sang, any noise, bad or good,

Till at length into Aix Roland galloped and stood.

And all I remember is—friends flocking round

As I sat with his head 'twixt my knees on the ground;

And no voice but was praising this Roland of mine, As I poured down his throat our last measure of wine,

Which (the burgesses voted by common consent)

Was no more than his due who brought good news from Ghent.

EARTH'S IMMORTALITIES

FAME

SEE, as the prettiest graves will do in time,

Our poet's wants the freshness of its prime;
Spite of the sexton's browsing horse, the sods

Have struggled through its binding osier rods;

Headstone and half-sunk footstone lean awry,

Wanting the brick-work promised byand-by;

How the minute gray lichens, plate o'er plate,

Have softened down the crisp-cut name and date!

LOVE

So, the year 's done with!

(Love me forever!)

All March begun with,
April's endeavor;

May-wreaths that bound me
June needs must sever;

Now snows fall round me,
Quenching June's fever—
(Love me forever!)

1845.

MEETING AT NIGHT

THE gray sea and the long black land; And the yellow half-moon large and low; And the startled little waves that leap In fiery ringlets from their sleep, As I gain the cove with pushing prow, And quench its speed i' the slushy sand.

Then a mile of warm sea-scented beach;
Three fields to cross till a farm appears;
A tap at the pane, the quick sharp scratch
And blue spurt of a lighted match,
And a voice less loud, through its joys
and fears,

Than the two hearts beating each to each!

PARTING AT MORNING

Round the cape of a sudden came the sea.

And the sun looked over the mountain's rim:

And straight was a path of gold for him, And the need of a world of men for me. 1845.

SONG

NAY but you, who do not love her, Is she not pure gold, my mistress? Holds earth aught—speak truth—above her?

Aught like this tress, see, and this tress, And this last fairest tress of all, So fair, see, ere I let it fall?

Because you spend your lives in praising;
To praise, you search the wide world over:

Then why not witness, calmly gazing,
If earth holds aught—speak truth—
above her?

Above this tress, and this, I touch But cannot praise, I love so much!

HOME-THOUGHTS, FROM ABROAD

OH, to be in England Now that April's there, And whoever wakes in England Sees, some morning, unaware,

That the lowest boughs and the brushwood sheaf

Round the elm-tree bole are in tiny leaf, While the chaffinch sings on the orchard bough

In England—now!

And after April, when May follows, And the whitethroat builds, and all the swallows!

Hark, where my blossomed pear-tree in the hedge

Leans to the field and scatters on the Blossoms and dewdrops—at the bent spray's edge—

That 's the wise thrush; he sings each song twice over,

Lest you should think he never could recapture

The first fine careless rapture!

And though the fields look rough with heary dew.

All will be gay when noontide wakes anew
The buttercups, the little children's dower

-Far brighter than this gaudy melonflower! 1845.

HOME-THOUGHTS, FROM THE SEA

Nobly, nobly Cape Saint Vincent to the Northwest died away;

Sunset ran, one glorious blood-red, reeking into Cadiz Bay;

Bluish mid the burning water, full in face Trafalgar lay;

In the dimmest Northeast distance dawned Gibraltar grand and gray; "Here and here did England help me: how can I help England?"—say,

Whose turns as I, this evening, turn to God to praise and pray, While Jove's planet rises yonder, silent over Africa. 1838. 1845.

TIME'S REVENGES

l 've a Friend, over the sea;
like him, but he loves me.
It all grew out of the books I write;
They find such favor in his sight
That he slaughters you with savage looks
Because you don't admire my books.
He does himself though,—and if some vein

Were to snap to-night in this heavy brain.

To-morrow month, if I lived to try, Round should I just turn quietly, Or out of the bedclothes stretch my hand Till I found him, come from his foreign

land

To be my nurse in this poor place,
And make my broth and wash my face
And light my fire and, all the while,
Bear with his old good-humored smile
That I told him "Better have kept away
Than come and kill me, night and day,
With, worse than fever throbs and shoots,

The creaking of his clumsy boots."
I am as sure that this he would do,
As that Saint Paul's is striking two.
And I think I rather . . woe is me!

-Yes, rather should see him than not see,

If lifting a hand could seat him there Before me in the empty chair To-night, when my head aches indeed, And I can neither think nor read, Nor make these purple fingers hold The pen; this garret's freezing cold!

And I've a Lady—there he wakes, The laughing fiend and prince of snakes Within me, at her name, to pray Fate send some creature in the way Of my love for her, to be down-torn, Upthrust and outward-borne, So I might prove myself that sea
Of passion which I needs must be!
Call my thoughts false and my fancies

And my style infirm and its figures faint, all the critics say and more blame yet, and not one angry word you get. But, please you, wonder I would put My cheek beneath that lady's foot Rather than trample under mine The laurels of the Florentine, and you shall see how the devil spends A fire God gave for other ends! I tell you, I ride up and down This garret, crowned with love's best crown,

And feasted with love's perfect feast,
To think I kill for her, at least,
Body and soul and peace and fame,
Alike youth's end and manhood's aim,
—So is my spirit, as flesh with sin,
Filled full, eaten out and in
With the face of her, the eyes of her,
The lips, the little chin, the stir
Of shadow round her mouth; and she
—I'll tell you—calmly would decree
That I should roast at a slow fire,
If that would compass her desire
And make her one whom they invite
To the famous ball to-morrow night.

There may be heaven; there must be hell;

Meantime, there is our earth here—well! 1845.

THE ITALIAN IN ENGLAND

THAT second time they hunted me From hill to plain, from shore to sea, And Austria, hounding far and wide Her blood-hounds through the countryside,

Breathed hot and instant on my trace,—I made six days a hiding-place Of that dry green old aqueduct Where I and Charles, when boys, have plucked

The fire-flies from the roof above,
Bright creeping through the moss they

love:

—How long it seems since Charles was lost!

Six days the soldiers crossed and crossed
The country in my very sight;
And when that peril ceased at night,
The sky broke out in red dismay
With signal fires; well, there I lay
Close covered o'er in my recess,

Up to the neck in ferns and cress, Thinking on Metternich our friend, And Charles's miserable end, And much beside, two days; the third, Hunger o'ercame me when I heard The peasants from the village go To work among the maize; you know, With us in Lombardy, they bring Provisions packed on mules, a string With little bells that cheer their task, And casks, and boughs on every cask To keep the sun's heat from the wine; These I let pass in jingling line, And, close on them, dear noisy crew, The peasants from the village, too; For at the very rear would troop Their wives and sisters in a group To help, I knew. When these had passed,

I threw my glove to strike the last,
Taking the chance: she did not start,
Much less cry out, but stooped apart,
One instant rapidly glanced round,
And saw me beckon from the ground;
A wild bush grows and hides my crypt:
She picked my glove up while she stripped

A branch off, then rejoined the rest With that; my glove lay in her breast. Then I drew breath: they disappeared: It was for Italy I feared.

An hour, and she returned alone
Exactly where my glove was thrown.
Meanwhile came many thoughts; on me
Rested the hopes of Italy;
I had devised a certain tale
Which, when 't was told her, could not fail
Persuade a passent of its truth.

Persuade a peasant of its truth; I meant to call a freak of youth This hiding, and give hopes of pay, And no temptation to betray. But when I saw that woman's face, Its calm simplicity of grace, Our Italy's own attitude In which she walked thus far, and stood, Planting each naked foot so firm, To crush the snake and spare the worm-At first sight of her eyes, I said, "I am that man upon whose head They fix the price, because I hate The Austrians over us: the State Will give you gold—oh, gold so much!— If you betray me to their clutch, And be your death, for aught I know, If once they find you saved their foe. Now, you must bring me food and drink, And also paper, pen and ink,

And carry safe what I shall write
To Padua, which you'll reach at night
Before the duomo shuts; go in,
And wait till Tenebræ begin;
Walk to the third confessional.
Between the pillar and the wall,
And kneeling whisper, Whence comes

peace?

Say it a second time, then cease; And if the voice inside returns, From Christ and Freedom; what concerns The cause of Peace?—for answer, slip My letter where you placed your lip; Then come back happy we have done Our mother service—I. the son, As you the daughter of our land!"

Three mornings more, she took her stand

In the same place, with the same eves:

In the same place, with the same eyes: I was no surer of sunrise Than of her coming. We conferred Of her own prospects, and I heard She had a lover-stout and tall, She said—then let her eyelids fall, "He could do much"—as if some doubt Entered her heart,—then, passing out, "She could not speak for others, who Had other thoughts; herself she knew:" And so she brought me drink and food. After four days, the scouts pursued Another path; at last arrived The help my Paduan friends contrived To furnish me: she brought the news. For the first time I could not choose But kiss her hand, and lay my own Upon her head—"This faith was shown To Italy, our mother; she Uses my hand and blesses thee." She followed down to the sea-shore; I left and never saw her more.

How very long since I have thought Concerning—much less wished for aught

Beside the good of Italy,
For which I live and mean to die!
I never was in love; and since
Charles proved false, what shall now convince

My inmost heart I have a friend?
However, if I pleased to spend
Real wishes on myself—say, three—
I know at least what one should be.
I would grasp Metternich until
I felt his red wet throat distil
In blood through these two hands. And next

-Nor much for that am I perplexed-

Charles, perjured traitor, for his part, Should die slow of a broken heart Under his new employers. Last—Ah, there, what should I wish? For fact.

Do I grow old and out of strength. If I resolved to seek at length My father's house again, how seared They all would look, and unprepared! My brothers live in Austria's pay -Disowned me long ago, men say; And all my early mates who used To praise me so-perhaps induced More than one early step of mine-Are turning wise: while some opine "Freedom grows licence," some suspect "Haste breeds delay," and recollect They always said, such premature Beginnings never could endure! So, with a sullen "All's for best." The land seems settling to its rest. I think then, I should wish to stand This evening in that dear, lost land, Over the sea the thousand miles, And know if yet that woman smiles With the calm smile; some little farm She lives in there, no doubt: what harm If I sat on the door-side bench, And, while her spindle made a trench Fantastically in the dust, Inquired of all her fortunes—just Her children's ages and their names, And what may be the husband's aims For each of them. I'd talk this out, And sit there, for an hour about, Then kiss her hand once more, and lay Mine on her head, and go my way.

So much for idle wishing—how It steals the time! To business now.

PICTOR IGNOTUS

FLORENCE, 15-

I could have painted pictures like that youth's

Ye praise so. How my soul springs up! No bar

Stayed me—ah, thought which saddens while it soothes!

-Never did fate forbid me, star by star.

To outburst on your night with all my

Of fires from God: nor would my flesh have shrunk

From seconding my soul, with eyes uplift.

And wide to heaven, or, straight like thunder, sunk

To the centre, of an instant; or around Turned calmly and inquisitive, to scan The license and the limit, space and bound.

Allowed to truth made visible in man. And, like that youth ye praise so, all I

Over the canvas could my hand have flung,

Each face obedient to its passion's law, Each passion clear proclaimed without a tongue;

Whether Hope rose at once in all the blood,

01000

A-tiptoe for the blessing of embrace, Or Rapture drooped the eyes, as when her brood

Pull down the nesting dove's heart to its place;

Or Confidence lit swift the forehead up, And locked the mouth fast, like a castle braved,—

O human faces, hath it spilt, my cup? What did ye give me that I have not saved?

Nor will I say I have not dreamed (how well!)

Of going—I, in each new picture,—forth,

As, making new hearts beat and bosoms swell, To Pope or Kaiser, East, West, South,

To Pope or Kaiser, East, West, South, or North,

Bound for the calmly satisfied great State,

Or glad aspiring little burgh, it went, Flowers cast upon the car which bore the freight,

Through old streets named afresh from the event,

Till it reached home, where learned age should greet

My face, and youth, the star not yet distinct

Above his hair, lie learning at my feet!—Oh, thus to live, I and my picture, linked

With love about, and praise, till life should end,

And then not go to heaven, but linger

here, Here on my earth, earth's every man my friend,—

The thought grew frightful,'t was so wildly dear!

But a voice changed it. Glimpses of such sights

Have scared me, like the revels through a door

Of some strange house of idols at its rites!

This world seemed not the world it was before:

Mixed with my loving trusting ones, there trooped

... Who summoned those cold faces that begun

To press on me and judge me? Though I stooped

Shrinking, as from the soldiery a nun,

They drew me forth, and spite of me...

These buy and sell our pictures, take and give,

Count them for garniture and householdstuff.

And where they live needs must our pictures live

And see their faces, listen to their prate,

Partakers of their daily pettiness, Discussed of,—"This I love, or this I

This likes me more, and this affects me less!"

Wherefore I chose my portion. If at whiles

My heart sinks, as monotonous I paint These endless cloisters and eternal aisles With the same series, Virgin, Babe and Saint,

With the same cold calm beautiful regard,—

At least no merchant traffics in my heart;

The sanctuary's gloom at least shall ward

Vain tongues from where my pictures stand apart:

Only prayer breaks the silence of the shrine

While, blackening in the daily candlesmoke,

They moulder on the damp wall's travertine,

'Mid echoes the light footstep never woke.

co, die my pictures! surely, gently die!

O youth, men praise so,—holds their praise its worth?

Slown harshly, keeps the trump its golden cry?

Tastes sweet the water with such specks of earth? 1845.

THE BISHOP ORDERS HIS TOMB AT SAINT PRAXED'S CHURCH.

Old Gandolf envied me, so fair she was! What's done is done, and she is dead beside,

Dead long ago, and I am Bishop since, And as she died so must we die ourselves.

And thence ye may perceive the world 's a dream.

Life, how and what is it? As here I lie In this state-chamber, dying by degrees, Hours and long hours in the dead night, I ask

"Do I live, am I dead?" Peace, peace seems all.

Saint Praxed's ever was the church for peace;

Peach-blossom marble all, the rare, the ripe

Knelt down to the God of my fathers, and role on my feet,

And ran o'er the sand burnt to powder.
The tent was unlooped;

I pulled up the pear that obstructed, and under I stooped;

Hand and kneet on the shippery grasspatch, all withered and gone,

That extend to the second enclosure, I groped my way on Till I telt where the fold kirt fly open.

Then once more I prayed,

And opened the fold kirts and entered, and was not afraid

But polic, "Here is David, thy servant!" And no voice replied.

A something more black than the black-and low into ight Green a figure again toit, gigantic and

Green a figure again to it, gigantic and blackest of all.

Then a unbeam, that but through the tent-roof, howed Saul.

IV

He tood as erect as that tent-prop, both arm stretched out wide on the erest cross upport in the centre, that goes to each side;

He related not a mu cle, but hung there as, caught in his pangs

And waiting his change, the king-serpent all heavily hangs,

Far away from his kind, in the pine, till deliverance come

With the spring-time, -so agonized Saul. drear and stark, blind and dumb.

Then I tuned my harp,—took off the lilies we twine round its chords

Lest they snap 'neath the stress of the noontide-those sunbeams like swords! And I first played the tune all our sheep know, as, one after one,

So docile they come to the pen-door till folding be done.

They are white and untorn by the bushes, for lo, they have fed

Where the long grasses stifle the water within the stream's bed:

And now one after one seeks its lodging. as star follows star

Into eve and the blue far above us,—so blue and so far!

VI

-Then the tune for which quails on the cornland will each leave his mate

To fly after the player; then, what makes the crickets elate

Till for boldness they fight one another; and then, what has weight

To set the quick jerboa a-musing outside his sand house-

There are none such as he for a wonder. half bird and half mouse!

God made all the creatures and gave them our love and our fear,

To give sign, we and they are his children, one family here.

Then I played the help-tune of our reapers, their wine-song, when hand

Grasps at hand, eye lights eye in good friendship, and great hearts expand And grow one in the sense of this world's life.—And then, the last song When the dead man is praised on his journey-" Bear, bear him along, With his few faults shut up like dead flowerets! Are balm seeds not here

To console us? The land has none left such as he on the bier.

Oh, would we might keep thee, my brother!"—And then, the glad chant Of the marriage,-first go the young maidens, next, she whom we vaunt

As the beauty, the pride of our dwelling .- And then, the great march

Wherein man runs to man to assist him and buttress an arch

Naught can break; who shall harm them. our friends? Then, the chorus intoned As the Levites go up to the altar in glory enthroned. But I stopped here: for here in the darkness Saul groaned.

And I paused, held my breath in such silence, and listened apart:

And the tent shook, for mighty Saul shuddered: and sparkles 'gan dart From the jewels that woke in his turban, at once, with a start. All its lordly male-sapphires, and rubies courageous at heart.

So the head: but the body still moved not, still hung there erect.

And I bent once again to my playing, pursued it unchecked, As I sang :-

"Oh, our manhood's prime vigor! No spirit feels waste,

Not a muscle is stopped in its playing nor sinew unbraced. Oh, the wild joys of living! the leaping from rock up to rock, The strong rending of boughs from the fir-tree, the cool silver shock Of the plunge in a pool's living water, the hunt of the bear, And the sultriness showing the lion is couched in his lair. And the meal, the rich dates yellowed over with gold dust divine,

And the locust-flesh steeped in the pitcher, the full draught of wine,

And the sleep in the dried river-channel where bulrushes tell

That the water was wont to go warbling so softly and well.

How good is man's life, the mere living! how fit to employ

All the heart and the soul and the senses forever in joy!

Hast thou loved the white locks of thy father, whose sword thou didst guard When he trusted thee forth with the armies, for glorious reward?

Didst thou see the thin hands of thy mother, held up as men sung

The low song of the nearly-departed, and hear her faint tongue

Joining in while it could to the witness, "Let one more attest,

I have lived, seen God's hand through a lifetime, and all was for best?"

Then they sung through their tears in strong triumph, not much, but the rest.

And thy brothers, the help and the contest, the working whence grew

Such result as, from seething grapebundles, the spirit strained true:

And the friends of thy boyhood-that boyhood of wonder and hope,

Present promise and wealth of the future beyond the eye's scope,—

Till lo, thou art grown to a monarch; a people is thine;

And all gifts, which the world offers singly, on one head combine!

On one head, all the beauty and strength, love and rage (like the throe

That, a-work in the rock, helps its labor and lets the gold go)

High ambition and deeds which surpass it, fame crowning them,—all

Brought to blaze on the head of one creature—King Saul!"

X

And lo, with that leap of my spirit. heart, hand, harp and voice,

Each lifting Saul's name out of sorrow, each bidding rejoice

Saul's fame in the light it was made for —as when, dare I say,

The Lord's army, in rapture of service, strains through its array,

And upsoareth the cherubim-chariot—
"Saul!" cried I, and stopped,

And waited the thing that should follow.

Then Saul, who hung propped
By the tent's cross-support in the centre,

By the tent's cross-support in the centre, was struck by his name.

Have ye seen when Spring's arrowy summons goes right to the aim.

And some mountain, the last to withstand her, that held (he alone.

While the vale laughed in freedom and flowers) on a broad bust of stone

A year's snow bound about for a breast-

A year's snow bound about for a breastplate,—leaves grasp of the sheet? Fold on fold all at once it crowds thun-

Fold on fold all at once it crowds thunderously down to his feet.

And there fronts you, stark, black, but alive yet, your mountain of old, With his rents, the successive bequeath-

With his rents, the successive bequeathing of ages untold—

Yea, each harm got in fighting your battles, each furrow and scar

Of his heal thrust 'twixt you and the tempest—all hail, there they are!

-Now again to be softened with verdure, again hold the nest

Of the dove, tempt the goat and its young to the green on his crest

For their food in the ardors of summer.
One long shudder thrilled

All the tent till the very air tingled, then sank and was stilled

At the King's self left standing before me, released and aware.

What was gone, what remained? All to traverse 'twixt hope and despair,

Death was past, life not come: so he waited. Awhile his right hand

Held the brow, helped the eyes left too vacant forthwith to remaind

To their place what new objects should enter: 't was Saul as before.

I looked up and dared gaze at those eyes, nor was hurt any more

Than by slow palli I sausets in autumn, ye watch from the shore,

At their sad level gaze o'er the ocean—a sun's slow decline

Over hills which, resolved in stern silence, o'erlap and entwine

Base with base to knit strength more intensely: so, arm folded arm

O'er the chest whose slow heavings subsided.

XI

What spell or what charm, (For awhile there was trouble within me), what next should I urge

To sustain him where song had restored him?—Song filled to the verge

His cup with the wine of this life, pressing all that it yields

Of mere fruitage, the strength and the beauty: beyond, on what fields,

Glean a vintage more potent and perfect to brighten the eye

And bring blood to the lip, and commend them the cup they put by?

He saith, "It is good;" still he drinks not; he lets me praise life,

Gives assent, yet would die for his own part.

XII

Then fancies grew rife
Which had come long ago on the pasture, when round me the sheep

Fed in silence—above, the one eagle wheeled slow as in sleep;

And I lay in my hollow and mused on the world that might lie 'Neath his ken, though I saw but the strip 'twixt the hill and the sky:

And I laughed-"Since my days are ordained to be passed with my flocks. Let me people at least, with my fancies, the plains and the rocks,

Dream the life I am never to mix with. and image the show

Of mankind as they live in those fashions I hardly shall know!

Schemes of life, its best rules and right uses, the courage that gains,

And the prudence that keeps what men strive for." And now these old trains Of vague thought came again; I grew surer; so, once more the string Of my harp made response to my spirit, as thus-

XIII

"Yea, my King,"

I began—"thou dost well in rejecting mere comforts that spring

From the mere mortal life held in common by man and by brute:

In our flesh grows the branch of this life, in our soul it bears fruit.

Thou hast marked the slow rise of the tree,-how its stem trembled first

Till it passed the kid's lip, the stag's antler: then safely outburst

The fan-branches all round; and thou mindest when these too, in turn. Broke a-bloom and the palm-tree seemed perfect: yet more was to learn,

E'en the good that comes in with the palm-fruit. Our dates shall we slight, When their juice brings a cure for all sorrow? or care for the plight

Of the palm's self whose slow growth produced them? Not so! stem and

Shall decay, nor be known in their place, while the palm-wine shall stanch

Every wound of man's spirit in winter. I pour thee such wine,

Leave the flesh to the fate it was fit for! the spirit be thine!

By the spirit, when age shall o'ercome thee, thou still shalt enjoy

More indeed, than at first when inconscious, the life of a boy.

Crush that life, and behold its wine running! Each deed thou hast done

Dies, revives, goes to work in the world! until e'en as the sun

Looking down on the earth, though clouds spoil him, though tempests efface,

Can find nothing his own deed produced not, must everywhere trace

The results of his past summer-prime,so, each ray of thy will,

Every flash of thy passion and prowess. long over, shall thrill

Thy whole people, the countless, with ardor, till they too give forth

A like cheer to their sons, who in turn, fill the South and the North

With the radiance thy deed was the germ of. Carouse in the past!

But the license of age has its limit; thou diest at last:

As the lion when age dims his eyeball, the rose at her height,

So with man-so his power and his beauty forever take flight.

No! Again a long draught of my soulwine! Look forth o'er the years!

Thou hast done now with eyes for the actual; begin with the seer's!

Is Saul dead? In the depth of the vale make his tomb—bid arise

A gray mountain of marble heaped foursquare, till, built to the skies,

Let it mark where the great First King slumbers: whose fame would ye know? Up above see the rock's naked face, where the record shall go

In great characters cut by the scribe.— Such was Saul, so he did:

With the sages directing the work, by the populace chid,-

For not half, they'll affirm, is comprised there! Which fault to amend,

In the grove with his kind grows the cedar, whereon they shall spend (See, in tablets 't is level before them) their praise, and record With the gold of the graver, Saul's story, the stateman's great word Side by side with the poet's sweet comment. The river 's a-wave With smooth paper-reeds grazing each other when prophet-winds rave: So the pen gives unborn generations their due and their part

In thy being! Then, first of the mighty, thank God that thou art!"

XIV

And behold while I sang . . . but O Thou who didst grant me that day, And before it not seldom hast granted thy help to essay,

Carry on and complete an adventure,... my shield and my sword

In that act where my soul was thy servant, thy word was my word,--

Still be with me, who then at the summit of human endeavor

And scaling the highest, man's thought could, gazed hopeless as ever

On the new stretch of heaven above me

—till, mighty to save,

Just one lift of thy hand cleared that distance-God's throne from man's grave!

Let me tell out my tale to its ending-

my voice to my heart

Which can scarce dare believe in what marvels last night I took part,

As this morning I gather the fragments,

alone with my sheep,

And still fear lest the terrible glory evanish like sleep!

For I wake in the gray dewy covert, while Hebron upheaves The dawn struggling with night on his shoulder, and Kidron retrieves Slow the damage of yesterday's sunshine.

I say then,—my song While I sang thus, assuring the monarch, and ever more strong

Made a proffer of good to console him-

he slowly resumed His old motions and habitudes kingly.

The right hand replumed His black locks to their wonted composure, adjusted the swathes

Of his turban, and see-the huge sweat that his countenance bathes. He wipes off with the robe; and he girds now his loins as of vore,

And feels slow for the armlets of price, with the clasp set before.

He is Saul, ye remember in glory,—ere error had bent

The broad brow from the daily communion; and still, though much spent Be the life and the bearing that front you, the same, God did choose,

To receive what a man may waste, desecrate, never quite lose.

So sank he along by the tent-prop till,

staved by the pile Of his armor and war-cloak and garments, he leaned there awhile,

And sat out my singing, -- one arm round the tent-prop, to raise

His bent head, and the other hung slack -till I touched on the praise

I foresaw from all men in all time, to the man patient there;

And thus ended, the harp falling forward. Then first I was ware

That he sat, as I say, with my head just above his vast knees

Which were thrust out on each side around me, like oak roots which please To encircle a lamb when it slumbers.

I looked up to know

If the best I could do had brought solace: he spoke not, but slow

Lifted up the hand slack at his side, till he laid it with care

Soft and grave, but in mild settled will, on my brow: through my hair

The large fingers were pushed, and he bent back my head, with kind power-All my face back, intent to peruse it, as men do a flower.

Thus held he me there with his great eyes that scrutinized mine-And oh, all my heart how it loved him!

but where was the sign? I vearned-" Could I help thee, my father, inventing a bliss. I would add, to that life of the past, both the future and this: I would give thee new life altogether, as good, ages hence,

As this moment, -had love but the warrant, love's heart to dispense!"

XVI

Then the truth came upon me. No harp more—no song more! outbroke—

IIVX

"I have gone the whole round of creation: I saw and I spoke:

I, a work of God's hand for that purpose, received in my brain

And pronounced on the rest of his handwork—returned him again

His creation's approval or censure: I spoke as I saw:

I report, as a man may of God's workall's love, yet all's law.

Now I lay down the judgeship he lent me. Each faculty tasked

To perceive him, has gained an abyss, where a dewdrop was asked.

Have I knowledge? confounded it shrivels at Wisdom laid bare.

Have I forethought? how purblind, how blank to the Infinite Care!

Do I task any faculty highest, to image success?

I but open my eyes,—and perfection, no more and no less,

In the kind I imagined, full-fronts me, and God is seen God

In the star, in the stone, in the flesh, in the soul and the cled.

And thus looking within and around me, I what thingh

(With that stoop of the soul which in bending upraises it too)

The submission of man's nothing-perfect to God's all-complete,

As by each new obeisance in spirit. I climb to his feet.

Yet with all this abounding experience, this deity known,

I shall dare to discover some province, some gift of my own.

There's a faculty pleasant to exercise, hard to hoodwink.

I am fain to keep still in abeyance, (I laugh as 1 think)

Lest, insisting to claim and parade in it, wot ye, I worst

E'en the Giver in one gift.—Behold, I could love if I durst!

But I sink the pretension as fearing a man may o'ertake

God's own speed in the one way of love: I abstain for love's sake.

-What, my soul? see thus far and no farther? when doors great and small.

Nine-and-ninety flew ope at our touch, should the hundredth appall?

In the least things have faith, yet distrust in the greatest of all?

Do I find love so full in my nature, God's ultimate gift,

That I doubt his own love can compete with it? Here, the parts shift? Here, the creature surpass the Creator,-- the end, what Began?

Would I fain in my impotent yearning do all for this man,

And dare doubt he alone shall not help him, who yet alone can?

Would it ever have entered my mind, the bare will, much less power.

To bestow on this Saul what I sang of, the marvellous dower

Of the life he was gifted and filled with? to make such a soul,

Such a body, and then such an earth for insphering the whole?

And doth it not enter my mind (as my warm tears attest)

These good things being given, to go on, and give one more, the best?

Ay, to save and redeem and restore him, maintain at the height

This perfection,—succeed with life's day-spring, death's minute of night? Interpose at the difficult minute, snatch

Saul the mistake.

Saul the failure, the ruin he seems now -and bid him awake

From the dream, the probation, the prelude, to find himself set

Clear and safe in new light and new life, -a new harmony yet

To be run, and continued, and ended who knows?-or endure!

The man taught enough by life's dream, of the rest to make sure;

By the pain-throb, triumphantly winning intensified bliss,

And the next world's reward and repose, by the struggles in this.

XVIII

"I believe it! Tis thou, God, that givest, 't is I who receive:

In the first is the last, in thy will is my power to believe.

All's one gift: thou canst grant it moreover, as prompt to my prayer

As I breathe out this breath, as I open these arms to the air.

From thy will stream the worlds, life and nature, thy dread Sabaoth:

will?—the mere atoms despise me! Why am I not loth To look that, even that in the face too?

Why is it I dare

Think but lightly of such impuissance? What stops my despair?

This;—'t is not what man Does which exalts him, but what man Would do! See the King-I would help him but cannot, the wishes fall through.

Could I wrestle to raise him from sorrow, grow poor to enrich, To fill up his life, starve my own out, I would-knowing which,

I know that my service is perfect. Oh, speak through me now!

Would I suffer for him that I love?

So wouldst thou—so wilt thou! So shall crown thee the topmost, ineffablest, uttermost crown-

And thy love fill infinitude wholly, nor leave up nor down

One spot for the creature to stand in! It is by no breath,

Turn of eye, wave of hand, that salvation joins issue with death!

As thy Love is discovered almighty, almighty be proved

Thy power, that exists with and for it, of being Beloved!

He who did most, shall bear most; the strongest shall stand the most weak.

"T is the weakness in strength, that I cry for! my flesh, that I seek In the Godhead! I seek and I find it. O

Saul, it shall be

A Face like my face that receives thee: a Man like to me,

Thou shalt love and be loved by, forever: a Hand like this hand

Shall throw open the gates of new life to thee! See the Christ stand!"

XIX

I know not too well how I found my way home in the night.

There were witnesses, cohorts about me, to left and to right,

Angels, powers, the unuttered, unseen, the alive, the aware:

I repressed, I got through them as hardly, as strugglingly there,

As a runner beset by the populace famished for news-

Life or death. The whole earth was awakened, hell loosed with her crews; And the stars of night beat with emotion, and tingled and shot Out in fire the strong pain of pent knowledge: but I fainted not,

For the Hand still impelled me at once and supported, suppressed

All the tumult, and quenched it with quiet, and holy behest,

Till the rapture was shut in itself, and the earth sank to rest. Anon at the dawn, all that trouble had withered from earth-Not so much, but I saw it die out in the day's tender birth; In the gathered intensity brought to the gray of the hills; In the shuddering forests' held breath;

in the sudden wind-thrills; In the startled wild beasts that bore off, each with eye sidling still Though averted with wonder and dread;

in the birds stiff and chill

That rose heavily, as I approached them, made stupid with awe:

E'en the serpent that slid away silent,he felt the new law.

The same stared in the white humid faces upturned by the flowers;

The same worked in the heart of the cedar and moved the vine-bowers:

And the little brooks witnessing murmured, persistent and low,

With their obstinate, all but hushed voices-"E'en so, it is so!"

A WOMAN'S LAST WORD

LET'S contend no more, Love. Strive nor weep: All be as before, Love, -Only sleep!

What so wild as words are? I and thou In debate, as birds are, Hawk on bough!

See the creature stalking While we speak! Hush and hide the talking, Cheek on cheek!

What so false as truth is, False to thee? Where the serpent's tooth is Shun the tree—

Where the apple reddens Never pry— Lest we lose our Edens, Eve and I.

Be a god and hold me With a charm! Be a man and fold me With thine arm!

Teach me, only teach, Love! As I ought I will speak thy speech, Love, Think thy thought-

Meet, if thou require it, Both demands, Laying flesh and spirit In thy hands.

That shall be to-morrow, Not to-night. I must bury sorrow Out of sight:

-Must a little weep, Love, (Foolish me!) And so fall asleep, Love, 1855. Loved by thee.

EVELYN HOPE

BEAUTIFUL Evelyn Hope is dead! Sit and watch by her side an hour, That is her book-shelf, this her bed;

She plucked that piece of geraniumflower.

Beginning to die too, in the glass; Little has yet been changed, I think:

The shutters are shut, no light may pass

Save two long rays through the hinge's chink.

Sixteen years old when she died! Perhaps she had scarcely heard my name:

It was not her time to love; beside, Her life had many a hope and aim,

Duties enough and little cares, And now was quiet, now astir,

Till God's hand beckoned unawares .-And the sweet white brow is all of her.

Is it too late then, Evelyn Hope? What, your soul was pure and true,

The good stars met in your horoscope, Made you of spirit, fire and dew-

And, just because I was thrice as old And our paths in the world diverged so wide.

Each was naught to each, must I be told?

We were fellow mortals, naught beside?

No, indeed! for God above

Is great to grant, as mighty to make, And creates the love to reward the love:

I claim you still, for my own love's sake!

Delayed it may be for more lives yet, Through worlds I shall traverse, not a few:

Much is to learn, much to forget Ere the time be come for taking you.

But the time will come—at last it will, When, Evelyn Hope, what meant (I shall say)

In the lower earth, in the years long still,

That body and soul so pure and gay? Why your hair was amber, I shall divine,

And your mouth of your own geranium's redAnd what you would do with me, in

In the new life come in the old life's stead.

I have lived (I shall say) so much since

Given up myself so many times,

Gained me the gains of various men, Ransacked the ages, spoiled the climes:

Yet one thing, one, in my soul's full scope,

Either I missed or itself missed me: And I want and find you, Evelyn Hope! What is the issue? Let us see!

I loved you, Evelyn, all the while!

My heart seemed full as it could hold; There was place and to spare for the frank young smile,

And the red young mouth, and the hair's young gold.

So, hush,-I will give you this leaf to keep:

See, I shut it inside the sweet cold hand!

There, that is our secret: go to sleep! You will wake, and remember, and understand.

LOVE AMONG THE RUINS

Where the quiet-colored end of evening smiles

Miles and miles

On the solitary pastures where our sheep Half-asleep

Tinkle homeward through the twilight, stray or stop As they crop—

Was the site once of a city great and (So they say)

Of our country's very capital, its prince Ages since

Held his court in, gathered councils, wielding far Peace or war.

Now.—the country does not even boast a tree,

As you see,

To distinguish slopes of verdure, certain

From the hills Intersect and give a name to, (else they

Into one.)

Where the domed and daring palace shot its spires

Up like fires

O'er the hundred-gated circuit of a wall Bounding all,

Made of marble, men might march on nor be pressed,

Twelve abreast.

And such plenty and perfection, see, of Never was!

Such a carpet as, this summer-time, o'erspreads

And embeds

Every vestige of the city, guessed alone, Stock or stone-

Where a multitude of men breathed joy and woe

Long ago:

Lust of glory pricked their hearts up, dread of shame

Struck them tame:

And that glory and that shame alike, the gold Bought and sold.

Now,-the single little turret that remains

On the plains,

By the caper overrooted, by the gourd Overscored,

While the patching houseleek's head of blossom winks

Through the chinks-

Marks the basement whence a tower in ancient time

Sprang sublime,

And a burning ring, all round, the chariots traced As they raced.

And the monarch and his minions and his dames

Viewed the games.

And I know, while thus the quiet-colored eve

Smiles to leave

To their folding, all our many-tinkling fleece

In such peace,

And the slopes and rills in undistinguished gray Melt away-

That a girl with eager eyes and yellow hair

Waits me there

In the turret whence the charioteers caught soul

For the goal,

When the king looked, where she looks now, breathless, dumb

Till I come.

But he looked upon the city, every side, Far and wide.

All the mountains topped with temples. all the grades

Colonnades. All the causeys, bridges, aqueducts,-and then.

All the men!

When I do come, she will speak not, she will stand.

Either hand

On my shoulder, give her eyes the first embrace

Of my face.

Ere we rush, ere we extinguish sight and speech

Each on each.

In one year they sent a million fighters

South and North,

And they built their gods a brazen pillar high

As the sky.

Yet reserved a thousand chariots in full force-

Gold, of course.

Oh heart! oh blood that freezes, blood that burns! Earth's returns

For whole centuries of folly, noise and sin!

Shut them in,

With their triumphs and their glories and the rest! Love is best. 1855.

UP AT A VILLA-DOWN IN THE CITY

(AS DISTINGUISHED BY AN ITALIAN PERSON OF QUALITY)

HAD I but plenty of money, money enough and to spare,

The house for me no doubt, were a house in the city-square;

Ah, such a life, such a life, as one leads at the window there!

Something to see, by Bacchus, something to hear, at least!

There, the whole day long, one's life is a perfect feast;

While up at a villa one lives, I maintain it, no more than a beast.

Well now, look at our villa! stuck like the horn of a bull

Just on a mountain-edge as bare as the creature's skull.

Save a mere shag of a bush with hardly a leaf to pull!

—I scratch my own, sometimes, to see if the hair's turned wool.

But the city, oh the city—the square with the houses! Why,

They are stone-faced, white as a curd, there's something to take the eye!

Houses in four straight lines, not a single front awry;

You watch who crosses and gossips, who saunters, who hurries by;

Green blinds, as a matter of course, to draw when the sun gets high;

And the shops with fanciful signs which are painted properly.

What of a villa? Though winter be over in March by rights,

'T is May perhaps ere the snow shall have withered well off the heights:

You've the brown ploughed land before

You've the brown ploughed land before, where the oxen steam and wheeze, And the hills over-smoked behind by the faint gray olive-trees.

Is it better in May, I ask you? You've summer all at once;

In a day he leaps complete with a few strong April suns.

'Mid the sharp short emerald wheat, scarce risen three fingers well,

The wild tulip, at end of its tube, blows out its great red bell

Like a thin clear bubble of blood, for the children to pick and sell.

Is it ever hot in the square? There 's a fountain to spout and splash!

In the shade it sings and springs: in the shine such foambows flash

On the horses with curling fish-tails, that prance and paddle and pash

Round the lady atop in her conch—fifty gazers do not abash,

Though all that she wears is some weeds round her waist in a sort of sash.

All the year long at the villa, nothing to see though you linger,

Except yon cypress that points like death's lean lifted forefinger.

Some think fireflies pretty, when they mix i' the corn and mingle,

Or thrid the stinking hemp till the stalks of it seem a-tingle.

Late August or early September, the stunning cicala is shrill,

And the bees keep their tiresome whine round the resinous firs on the hill.

Enough of the seasons,—I spare you the months of the fever and chill.

Ere you open your eyes in the city, the blessed church-bells begin:

No sooner the bells leave off than the diligence rattles in:
You get the pick of the news, and it costs you never a pin.

By and by there's the travelling doctor gives pills, lets blood, draws teeth; Or the Pulcinello-trumpet breaks up the market beneath.

At the post-office such a scene-picture—

the new play, piping hot!

And a notice how, only this morning,

three liberal thieves were shot.

Above it, behold the Archbishop's most

Above it, behold the Archbishop's mos fatherly of rebukes,

And beneath, with his crown and his lion, some little new law of the Duke's!

Or a sonnet with flowery marge, to the Reverend Don So-and-so,

Who is Dante, Boccaccio, Petrarca, Saint Jerome, and Cicero,

"And moreover," (the sonnet goes rhyming,) "the skirts of Saint Paul has reached,

Having preached us those six Lentlectures more unctuous than ever he preached."

Noon strikes,—here sweeps the procession! our Lady borne smiling and smart

With a pink gauze gown all spangles, and seven swords stuck in her heart! Bang-whang-whang goes the drum, tootle-te-tootle the fife;

No keeping one's haunches still: it's the greatest pleasure in life.

But bless you, it's dear—it 's dear! fowls, wine, at double the rate.

They have clapped a new tax upon salt, and what oil pays passing the gate

It's a horror to think of. And so, the villa for me, not the city!

Beggars can scarcely be choosers: but still—ah, the pity, the pity!

Look, two and two go the priests, then the monks with cowls and sandals,

And the penitents dressed in white shirts, a-holding the yellow candles; One, he carries a flag up straight, and another across with handles.

And the Duke's guard brings up the rear, for the better prevention of scandals: Bang-whang-whang goes the drum, tootlete-tootle the fife.

Oh, a day in the city-square, there is no such pleasure in life ! 1855.

A TOCCATA OF GALUPPI'S

OH Galuppi, Baldassare, this is very sad to find!

I can hardly misconceive you: it would prove me deaf and blind;

But although I take your meaning, 'tis with such a heavy mind!

Here you come with your old music, and here 's all the good it brings.

What, they lived once thus at Venice where the merchants were the kings, Where St. Mark's is, where the Doges used to wed the sea with rings?

Ay, because the sea 's the street there; and 't is arched by . . . what you call . . . Shylock's bridge with houses on it, where they kept the carnival:

I was never out of England—it 's as if I saw it all.

Did young people take their pleasure when the sea was warm in May? Balls and masks begun at midnight, burning ever to mid-day,

When they made up fresh adventures for the morrow, do you say?

Was a lady such a lady, cheeks so round and lips so red,—

On her neck the small face buoyant, like a bell-flower on its bed,

O'er the breast's superb abundance where a man might base his head?

Well, and it was graceful of themthey 'd break talk off and afford

-She, to bite her mask's black velvethe, to finger on his sword,

While you sat and played Toccatas, stately at the clavichord?

What? Those lesser thirds so plaintive, sixths diminished, sigh on sigh,

Told them something? Those suspensions those solutions - " Must we die?"

Those commiserating sevenths--"Life might last! we can but try!"

"Were you happy?"-"Yes."-"And are you still as happy?"-" Yes. And Then, more kisses!"-"Did I stop them, when a million seemed so few?"

Hark, the dominant's persistence till it must be answered to!

So, an octave struck the answer. Oh, they praised you, I dare say!

" Brave Galuppi! that was music! good alike at grave and gay!

I can always leave off talking when I hear a master play!"

Then they left you for their pleasure: till in due time, one by one,

Some with lives that came to nothing, some with deeds as well undone,

Death stepped tacitly and took them where they never see the sun.

But when I sit down to reason, think to take my stand nor swerve,

While I triumph o'er a secret wrung from nature's close reserve,

In you come with your cold music till I creep through every nerve.

Yes, you, like a ghostly cricket, creaking where a house was burned:

"Dust and ashes, dead and done with, Venice spent what Venice earned.

The soul, doubtless, is immortal—where a soul can be discerned.

"Yours for instance: you know physics, something of geology,

Mathematics aré your pastime; souls shall rise in their degree;

Butterflies may dread extinction,—you'll not die, it cannot be!

"As for Venice and her people, merely born to bloom and drop,

Here on earth they bore their fruitage, mirth and folly were the crop:

What of soul was left, I wonder, when the kissing had to stop?

"Dust and ashes!" So you creak it, and I want the heart to scold.

Dear dead women, with such hair, too -what's become of all the gold

Used to hang and brush their bosoms! I feel chilly and grown old.

OLD PICTURES IN FLORENCE

THE morn when first it thunders in March,

The eel in the pond gives a leap, they say:

As I leaned and looked over the aloed arch

Of the villa-gate this warm March day, No flash snapped, no dumb thunder rolled In the valley beneath where, white and wide

And washed by the morning water gold, Florence lay out on the mountain-side.

River and bridge and street and square Lay mine, as much at my beck and call, Through the live translucent bath of air, As the sights in a magic crystal ball. And of all I saw and of all I praised.

The most to praise and the best to see,
Was the startling bell-tower Giotto raised:

But why did it more than startle me?

Giotto, how, with that soul of yours, Could you play me false who loved you so?

Some slights if a certain heart endures Yet it feels, I would have your fellows know!

I' faith, I perceive not why I should care
To break a silence that suits them best,
But the thing grows somewhat hard to bear

When I find a Giotto join the rest.

On the arch where olives overhead Print the blue sky with twig and leaf, (That sharp-curled leaf which they never shed)

'Twixt the aloes, I used to lean in chief,
And mark through the winter after-

By a gift God grants me now and then,
In the mild decline of those suns like moons.

Who walked in Florence, besides her men.

They might chirp and chaffer, come and go

For pleasure or profit, her men alive— My business was hardly with them, I trow.

But with empty cells of the human hive;

-With the chapter-room, the cloister-porch,

The church's apsis, aisle or nave, Its crypt, one fingers along with a torch, Its face set full for the sun to shave.

Wherever a fresco peels and drops,
Wherever an outline weakens and wanes

Till the latest life in the painting stops,
Stands One whom each fainter pulsetick pains:

One, wishful each scrap should clutch the brick,

Each tinge not wholly escape the plaster,

—A lion who dies of an ass's kick,

The wronged great soul of an ancient Master.

For oh, this world and the wrong it does!

They are safe in heaven with their backs to it,

The Michaels and Rafaels, you hum and buzz

Round the works of, you of the little wit!

Do their eyes contract to the earth's old scope,

Now that they see God face to face, And have all attained to be poets, I hope? 'T is their holiday now, in any case.

Much they reck of your praise and you!
But the wronged great souls—can they be quit

Of a world where their work is all to do, Where you style them, you of the little

Old Master This and Early the Other, Not dreaming that Old and New are fellows:

A younger succeeds to an elder brother,
Da Vincis derive in good time from Dellos.

And here where your praise might yield returns,

And a handsome word or two give help,

Here, after your kind, the mastiff girns
And the puppy pack of poodles yelp.
What, not a word for Stefano there,

Of brow once prominent and starry, Called Nature's Ape, and the world's despair

For his peerless painting? (See Vasari.)

There stands the Master. Study, my friends,

What a man's work comes to! So he plans it,

Performs it, perfects it, makes amends For the toiling and moiling, and then. sic transit!

Happier the thrifty blind-folk labor,

With upturned eve while the hand is busy.

Not sidling a glance at the coin of their neighbor!

'T is looking downward that makes one dizzy.

"If you knew their work you would deal your dole."

May I take upon me to instruct you? When Greek Art ran and reached the goal.

Thus much had the world to boast in fructu-

The Truth of Man, as by God first spoken, Which the actual generations garble, Was re-uttered, and Soul (which Limbs betoken)

And Limbs (Soul informs) made new in marble.

So vou saw vourself as you wished you were.

As you might have been, as you cannot be:

Earth here, rebuked by Olympus there: And grew content in your poor degree With your little power, by those statues' godhead,

And your little scope, by their eyes' full swav.

And your little grace, by their grace embodied And your little date, by their forms that stay.

You would fain be kinglier, say, than I am?

Even so, you will not sit like Theseus. You would prove a model? The Son of Priam,

Has yet the advantage in arms' and knees' use.

You're wroth—can you slay your snake like Apollo? You're grieved-still Niobe 's the grander!

You live-there's the Racers' frieze to

You die-there's the dying Alexander.

So, testing your weakness by their strength.

Your meagre charms by their rounded beauty,

Measured by Art in your breadth and length.

You learned—to submit is a mortal's duty.

-When I say "you" 'tis the common soul.

The collective, I mean: the race of

That receives life in parts to live in a whole.

And grow here according to God's clear plan.

Growth came when, looking your last on them all.

You turned your eyes inwardly one fine day

And cried with a start—What if we so small

Be greater and grander the while than thev?

Are they perfect of lineament, perfect of stature?

In both, of such lower types are we Precisely because of our wider nature; For time, theirs—ours, for eternity,

To-day's brief passion limits their range; It seethes with the morrow for us and more.

They are perfect—how else? they shall never change:

We are faulty—why not? we have time in store.

The Artificer's hand is not arrested

With us; we are rough-hewn, nowise polished:

They stand for our copy, and once, invested

With all they can teach, we shall see them abolished.

'T is a life-long toil till our lump be leaven--

The better! What's come to perfection perishes.

Things learned on earth, we shall practise in heaven:

Works done least rapidly, Art most cherishes.

Thyself shalt afford the example, Giotto! Thy one work, not to decrease or diminish.

Done at a stroke, was just (was it not?) · · O!"

Thy great Campanile is still to finish.

Is it true that we are now, and shall bo hereafter,

But what and where depend on life's minute?

Hails heavenly cheer or infernal laughter Our first step out of the gulf or in it? Shall Man, such step within his endeavor,

Man's face, have no more play and action

Than joy which is crystallized forever, Or grief, an eternal petrifaction?

On which I conclude, that the early painters,

To cries of "Greek Art and what more wish you?" eplied, "To become now self-ac-

Replied, "To quainters,

And paint man, man, whatever the issue!

Make new hopes shine through the flesh they fray,

New fears aggrandize the rags and tatters:

To bring the invisible full into play!

Let the visible go to the dogs—what matters?"

Give these, I exhort you, their guerdon and glory

For daring so much, before they well did it.

The first of the new, in our race's story,
Beats the last of the old; 't is no idle quiddit.

The worthies began a revolution,

Which if on earth you intend to acknowledge,

Why, honor them now! (ends my allocution)

Nor confer your degree when the folk leave college.

There's a fancy some lean to and others
hate—

That, when this life is ended, begins New work for the soul in another state, Where it strives and gets weary, loses and wins:

Where the strong and the weak, this world's congeries,

Repeat in large what they practised in small,

Through life after life in unlimited series:

Only the scale's to be changed, that's all.

Yet I hardly know. When a soul has seen

By the means of Evil that Good is best,

And, through earth and its noise, what is heaven's serene,—

When our faith in the same has stood the test—

Why the child grown man, you burn the rod,

The uses of labor are surely done; There remaineth a rest for the people of

And I have had troubles enough, for

And I have had troubles enough, for one.

But at any rate I have loved the season Of Art's spring-birth so dim and dewy; My sculptor is Nicolo the Pisan,

My painter—who but Cimabue?
Nor ever was man of them all indeed,
From these to Ghiberti and Ghirlandajo.

Could say that he missed my critic-meed.
So, now to my special grievance—
heigh-ho!

Their ghosts still stand, as I said before, Watching each fresco flaked and rasped,

Blocked up, knocked out, or whitewashed o'er:

—No getting again what the church has grasped! The works on the wall must take their chance;

"Works never conceded to England's thick clime!"

(I hope they prefer their inheritance

Of a bucketful of Italian quick-lime.)

When they go at length, with such a shaking

Of heads o'er the old delusion, sadly Each master his way through the black streets taking,

Where many a lost work breathes though badly—

Why don't they bethink them of who has merited?

Why not reveal, while their pictures dree

Such doom, how a captive might be outferreted?

Why is it they never remember me?

Not that I expect the great Bigordi, Nor Sandro to hear me, chivalric, bellicose;

Nor the wronged Lippino; and not a word I

Say of a scrap of Frà Angelico's: But are you too fine, Taddeo Gaddi, To grant me a taste of your intonaco, Some Jerome that seeks the heaven with a sad eve?

Not a churlish saint, Lorenzo Monaco?

Could not the ghost with the close red

My Pollajolo, the twice a craftsman,

Save me a sample, give me the hap
Of a muscular Christ that shows the draughtsman?

No Virgin by him the somewhat petty, Of finical touch and tempera crumbly— Could not Alesso Baldovinetti

Contribute so much, I ask him humbly?

Margheritone of Arezzo.

With the grave-clothes garb and swaddling barret,

(Why purse up mouth and beak in a pet

You bald old saturnine poll-clawed parrot?)

Not a poor glimmering Crucifixion,
Where in the foreground kneels the donor?

If such remain, as is my conviction,

The hoarding it does you but little honor.

They pass; for them the panels may thrill.

The tempera grow alive and tinglish;
Their pictures are left to the mercies
still

Of dealers and stealers, Jews and the English,

Who, seeing mere money's worth in their prize,

Will sell it to somebody calm as Zeno At naked High Art, and in ecstasies Before some clay-cold vile Carlino!

No matter for these! But Giotto, you. Have you allowed, as the town-tongues babble it.—

Oh, never! it shall not be counted true— That a certain precious little tablet

Which Buonarrotti eyed like a lover— Was buried so long in oblivion's womb And, left for another than I to discover.

Turns up at last! and to whom? — to whom?

I, that have haunted the dim San Spirito,

(Or was it rather the Ognissanti?)
Patient on altar-step planting a weary toe!

Nay, I shall have it yet! Detur amanti!
My Koh-i-noor—or (if that 's a platitude)

Jewel of Giamschid, the Persian Sofi's

So, in anticipative gratitude,

What if I take up my hope and prophesy?

When the hour grows ripe, and a certain dotard

Is pitched, no parcel that needs invoicing,

To the worse side of the Mont St. Gothard, We shall begin by way of rejoicing;

None of that shooting the sky (blank cartridge),

Nor a civic guard, all plumes and lacquer,

Hunting Radetzky's soul like a partridge Over Morello with squib and cracker.

This time we 'll shoot better game and bag 'em hot-

No mere display at the stone of Dante But a kind of sober Witanagemot

(Ex: "Casa Guidi," quod videas antey Shall ponder, once Freedom restored to Florence,

How Art may return that departed with her.

Go, hated house, go each trace of the Loraine's,

And bring us the days of Orgagna hither!

How we shall prologuize, how we shall perorate,

Utter fit things upon art and history, Feel truth at blood-heat and falsehood at zero rate.

Make of the want of the age no mystery;

Contrast the fructuous and sterile eras, Show—monarchy ever its uncouth cublicks

Out of the bear's shape into Chimæra's, While Pure Art's birth is still the republic's.

Then one shall propose in a speech (curt Tuscan,

Expurgate and sober, with scarcely an "issimo.")

To end now our half-told tale of Cambuscan,

And turn the bell-tower's alt to altissimo:

And fine as the beak of a young beccaccia The Campanile, the Duomo's fit ally, Shall sear up in gold full fifty braccia, Completing Florence, as Florence Italy,

Shall I be alive that morning the scaffold Is broken away, and the long-pent fire, Like the golden hope of the world, unbaffled

Springs from its sleep, and up goes the spire

While "God and the People" plain for its motto.

Thence the new tricolor flaps at the sky?

At least to foresee that glory of Giotto And Florence together, the first am I!

"DE GUSTIBUS--"

Your ghost will walk, you lover of trees, (If our loves remain) In an English lane,

By a cornfield-side a-flutter with poppies. Hark, those two in the hazel coppice— A boy and a girl, if the good fates please,

Making love, say,— The happier they!

Draw yourself up from the light of the moon,

And let them pass, as they will too soon.
With the beanflowers' boon,
And the blackbird's tune,
And May, and June!

What I love best in all the world Is a castle, precipice-encurled, In a gash of the wind-grieved Apennine. Or look for me, old fellow of mine, (If I get my head from out the mouth O' the grave, and loose my spirit's bands, And come again to the land of lands)—In a sea-side house to the farther South, Where the baked cicala dies of drouth, And one sharp tree—'t is a cypress—stands

By the many hundred years red-rusted, Rough iron-spiked, ripe fruit-o'ercrusted, My sentinel to guard the sands
To the water's edge. For, what expands Before the house, but the great opaque Blue breadth of sea without a break?
While, in the house, forever crumbles Some fragment of the frescoed walls. From blisters where a scorpion sprawls. A girl bare-footed brings, and tumbles Down on the pavement, green-flesh melons.

And says there 's news to-day—the king

Was shot at, touched in the liver-wing, Goes with his Bourbon arm in a sling,
—She hopes they have not caught the felous.

Italy, my Italy!

Queen Mary's saying serves for me—
(When fortune's malice Lost her, Calais)

Open my heart and you will see Graved inside of it, "Italy." Such lovers old are I and she: So it always was, so shall ever be!

1855,

MY STAR

All that I know
Of a certain star

Is, it can throw

(Like the angled spar) Now a dart of red,

Now a dart of blue:

Till my friends have said

They would fain see, too,
My star that dartles the red and the blue!

Then it stops like a bird; like a flower,

hangs furled:

They must solace themselves with the Saturn above it.

What matter to me if their star is a world?

Mine has opened its soul to me; therefore I love it. 1855.

ANY WIFE TO ANY HUSBAND

My love, this is the bitterest, that thou— Who art all truth, and who dost love me now

As thine eyes say, as thy voice breaks to say—

Shouldst love so truly, and couldst love me still

A whole long life through, had but love its will,

Would death that leads me from thee brook delay;—

I have but to be by thee, and thy hand Will never let mine go, nor heart withstand

The beating of my heart to reach its place.

place. When shall I look for thee and feel thee

When cry for the old comfort and find

Never, I know! Thy soul is in thy face.

Oh, I should fade—'t is willed so! Might I save.

Gladly I would, whatever beauty gave
Joy to thy sense, for that was precious too.

It is not to be granted. But the soul Whence the love comes, all ravage leaves that whole:

Vainly the flesh fades; soul makes all things new.

It would not be because my eye grew

Thou couldst not find the love there, thanks to Him

Who never is dishonored in the spark He gave us from his fire of fires and

Remember whence it sprang, nor be afraid

While that burns on, though all the rest grow dark.

So, how thou wouldst be perfect, white and clean

Outside as inside, soul and soul's demesne

Alike, this body given to show it by!
Oh, three-parts through the worst of life's abvss,

What plaudits from the next world after this.

Couldst thou repeat a stroke and gain the sky!—

And is it not the bitterer to think That disengage our hands and thou wilt hat disengage our hands and thou wilt sink

Although thy love was love in very deed?

I know that nature! Pass a festive day, Thou dost not throw its relic-flower away Nor bid its music's loitering echo speed.

'Thou let'st the stranger's glove lie where it fell;

If old things remain old things all is well,

For thou art grateful as becomes man

And hadst thou only heard me play one or viewed me from a window, not so

With thee would such things fade as with the rest.

I seem to see! We meet and part; 't is brief;

The book I opened keeps a folded leaf, The very chair I sat on, breaks the rank;

That is a portrait of me on the wall— Three lines, my face comes at so slight a call:

And for all this, one little hour to thank!

But now, because the hour through years was fixed.

Because inmost beings met and

Because they once hast loved me—wilt thou dare

Say to thy soul and Who may list beside, "Therefore she is immortally my bride;

Chance cannot change my love, nor time impair.

"So, what if in the dusk of life that's left,

I, a tired traveller of my sun bereft,

Look from my path when, mimicking the same,

The firefly glimpses past me, come and gone?

—Where was it till the sunset? Where anon

It will be at the sunrise! What's to blame?"

Is it so helpful to thee? Canst thou take

The mimic up, nor, for the true thing's sake,

Put gently by such efforts at a beam? Is the remainder of the way so long,

Thou need'st the little solace, thou the strong?

Watch out thy watch, let weak ones doze and dream!

Ah, but the fresher faces! "Is it true,"
Thou 'lt ask, "some eyes are beautiful and new?

Some hair,—how can one choose but grasp such wealth?

And if a man would press his lips to lips Fresh as the wilding hedge-rose-cup there slips

The dewdrop out of, must it be by stealth?

"It cannot change the love still kept for Her,

More than if such a picture I prefer

Passing a day with, to a room's bare side:

The painted form takes nothing she possessed.

Yet, while the Titian's Venus lies at rest, A man looks. Once more, what is there to chide?"

So must I see, from where I sit and watch.

My own self sell myself, my hand attach
Its warrant to the very thefts from me—

Thy singleness of soul that made me proud,

Thy purity of heart I loved aloud,

Thy man's-truth I was bold to bid God see!

Love so, then, if thou wilt! Give all thou canst

Away to the new faces—disentranced, (Say it and think it) obdurate no more:

Re-issue looks and words from the old mint.

Pass them afresh, no matter whose the print

Image and superscription once they bore!

Re-coin thyself and give it them to spend,—

It all comes to the same thing at the end,

Since mine thou wast, mine art and mine shalt be,

Faithful or faithless, sealing up the sum Or lavish of my treasure, thou must come Back to the heart's place here I keep for thee!

Only, why should it be with stain at all? Why must I, 'twixt the leaves of coronal,

Put any kiss of pardon on thy brow?
Why need the other women know so

And talk together, "Such the look and such

The smile he used to love with, then as now!"

Might I die last and show thee! Should I find

Such hardship in the few years left behind,

If free to take and light my lamp, and go

Into thy tomb, and shut the door and sit,

Seeing thy face on those four sides of it The better that they are so blank, I know!

Why, time was what I wanted, to turn o'er

Within my mind each look, get more and more

By heart each word, too much to learn at first:

And join thee all the fitter for the pause 'Neath the low doorway's lintel. That were cause

For lingering, though thou calledst, if I durst!

And yet thou art the nobler of us two: What dare I dream of, that thou canst not do,

Outstripping my ten small steps with one stride?

I 'll say then, here's a trial and a task— Is it to bear?—if easy, I 'll not ask:

Though love fail, I can trust on in thy pride.

Pride?—when those eyes forestall the life behind

The death I have to go through !—when I find,

Now that I want thy help most, all of thee!

What did I fear? Thy love shall hold me fast

Until the little minute's sleep is past And I wake saved.—And yet it will not be! 1855.

TWO IN THE CAMPAGNA

I WONDER do you feel to-day As I have felt since, hand in hand, We sat down on the grass, to stray In spirit better through the land, This morn of Rome and May?

For me, I touched a thought, I know Has tantalized me many times, (Like turns of thread the spiders throw Mocking across our path) for rhymes To catch at and let go.

Help me to hold it! First it left
The yellowing fennel. run to seed
There, branching from the brickwork's cleft.

Some old tomb's ruin; yonder weed Took up the floating weft,

Where one small orange cup amassed Five beetles—blind and green they

Among the honey-meal; and last, Everywhere on the grassy slope I traced it. Hold it fast!

The champaign with its endless fleece
Of feathery grasses everywhere!
Silence and passion, joy and peace,
An everlasting wash of air—
Rome's ghost since her decease.

Such life here, through such lengths of hours.

Such miracles performed in play, Such primal naked forms of flowers, Such letting nature have her way, While heaven looks from its towers!

How say you? Let us, O my dove, Let us be unashamed of soul, As earth lies bare to heaven above! How is it under our control To love or not to love?

I would that you were all to me, You that are just so much, no more. Nor yours nor mine, nor slave nor free! Where does the fault lie? What the core

O' the wound, since wound must be?

I would I could adopt your will, See with your eyes, and set my heart Beating by yours, and drink my fill At your soul's springs,—your part my part In life, for good and ill.

No. I yearn upward, touch you close, Then stand away. I kiss your cheek, Catch your soul's warmth,— I pluck the rose

And love it more than tongue can speak—

Then the good minute goes.

Already how am I so far Out of that minute? Must I go Still like the thistle-ball, no bar, Onward, whenever light winds blow, Fixed by no friendly star?

Just when I seemed about to learn!
Where is the thread now? Off again!
The old trick! Only I discern—
Infinite passion, and the pain
Of finite hearts that yearn. 1855.

MISCONCEPTIONS

This is a spray the Bird clung to,
Making it blossom with pleasure,
Ere the high tree-topshe sprung to,
Fit for her nest and her treasure.
Oh, what a hope beyond measure
Was the poor spray's, which the flying feet hung to,—

So to be singled out, built in, and sung to!

This is a heart the Queen leaned on,
Thrilled in a minute erratic,
Ere the true bosom she bent on,
Meet for love's regal dalmatic.
Oh, what a fancy ecstatic
Was the poor heart's, ere the wanderer went on—

Love to be saved for it, proffered to, spent on! 1855.

ONE WAY OF LOVE

ALL June I bound the rose in sheaves.

Now, rose by rose, I strip the leaves

And strew them where Pauline may

pass.

She will not turn aside? Alas! Let them lie. Suppose they die? The chance was they might take her eye.

How many a month I strove to suit These stubborn fingers to the lute! To-day I venture all I know. She will not hear my music? So! Break the string; fold music's wing: Suppose Pauline had bade me sing!

My whole life long I learned to love.
This hour my utmost art I prove
And speak my passion—heaven or hell?

She will not not give me heaven? 'T is well!

Lose who may—I still can say, Those who win heaven, blest are they!

ANOTHER WAY OF LOVE

June was not over
Though past the full,
And the best of her roses
Had yet to blow,
When a man I know
(But shall not discover,
Since ears are dull,
And time discloses)

Turned him and said with a man's true air.

Half sighing a smile in a yawn, as 't were.—

"If I tire of your June, will she greatly care?"

Well, dear, in-doors with you!
True! serene deadness
Tries a man's temper.

What's in the blossom
June wears on her bosom?
Can it clear scores with you?

Sweetness and redness, Eadem semper!

Go, let me care for it greatly or slightly!

If June mend her bower now, your hand left unsightly

By plucking the roses,—my June will do rightly.

And after, for pastime,
If June be refulgent
With flowers in completeness,
All petals, no prickles,

Delicious as trickles
Of wine poured at mass-time,—
And choose One indulgent
To redness and sweetness:

Or if, with experience of man and of spider,

June use my June-lightning, the strong insect-ridder,

And stop the fresh film-work,—why, June will consider. 1855.

RESPECTABILITY

DEAR, had the world in its caprice
Deigned to proclaim "I know you both.

Have recognized your plighted troth, Am sponsor for you: live in peace!"— How many precious months and years Of youth had passed, that speed so fast,

Before we found it out at last, The world, and what it fears!

How much of priceless life were spent With men that every virtue decks, And women models of their sex,

Society's true ornament,—

Ere we dared wander, nights like this, Through wind and rain, and watch the Seine,

And feel the Boulevard break again To warmth and light and bliss! I know! the world proscribes not love; Allows my finger to caress

Your lips' contour and downiness, Provided it supply a glove.

The world's good word!—the Institute!
Guizot receives Montalembert!

Eh? Down the court three lampions flare:

Put forward your best foot! 1855.

LOVE IN A LIFE

Room after room,
I hunt the house through

We inhabit together.

Heart, fear nothing, for, heart, thou shalt find her—

Next time, herself!—not the trouble behind her

Left in the curtain, the couch's perfume!
As she brushed it, the cornice-wreath
blossomed anew:

You looking-glass gleamed at the wave of her feather.

Yet the day wears,

And door succeeds door;

I try the fresh fortune—

Range the wide house from the wing to the center.

Still the same chance! she goes out as I enter.

Spend my whole day in the quest,—who cares?

But 't is twilight, you see,—with such suites to explore,

Such closets to search, such alcoves to importune! 1855.

LIFE IN A LOVE

Escape me? Never--Beloved!

While I am I, and you are you,
So long as the world contains us both,
Me the loving and you the loth,

While the one eludes, must the other pursue.

My life is a fault at last, I fear:

It seems too much like a fate, indeed! Though I do my best I shall scarce succeed.

But what if I fail of my purpose here? It is but to keep the nerves at strain,

To dry one's eyes and laugh at a fall,

And baffled, get up and begin again,— So the chase takes up one's life, that's all.

While, look but once from your farthest

At me so deep in the dust and dark, No sooner the old hope goes to ground Than a new one, straight to the self-same mark,

I shape me-

Ever

1855.

IN THREE DAYS

So, I shall see her in three days And just one night, but nights are short, Then two long hours, and that is morn. See how I come, unchanged, unworn! Feel, where my life broke off from thine, How fresh the splinters keep and fine,— Only a touch and we combine!

Too long, this time of year, the days! But nights, at least the nights are short. As night shows where her one moon is, A hand's-breadth of pure light and bliss, Solfe's night gives my lady birth And my eyes hold her! What is worth The rest of heaven, the rest of earth?

O loaded curls, release your store Of warmth and scent, as once before The tingling hair did, lights and darks Outbreaking into fairy sparks. When under curl and curl I pried After the warmth and scent inside, Through lights and darks how manifold—

The dark inspired, the light controlled! As early Art embrowns the gold.

What great fear, should one say, "Three days

That change the world might change as

Your fortune; and if joy delays,
Be happy that no worse befell!"
What small fear, if another says,
"Three days and one short night beside
May throw no shadow on your ways;
But years must teem with change untried.

With chance not easily defied,
With an end somewhere undescried."
No fear!—or if a fear be bern
This minute, it dies out in scorn.
Fear? I shall see her in three days
And one night, now the nights are short,
Then just two hours, and that is morn.

THE GUARDIAN-ANGEL

A PICTURE AT FANO

DEAR and great Angel, wouldst thou only leave

That child, when thou hast done with him, for me!

Let me sit all the day here, that when eve Shall find performed thy special ministry,

And time come for departure, thou, suspending

Thy flight, may'st see another child for tending,

Another still, to quiet and retrieve.

Then I shall feel thee step one step, no more,

From where thou standest now, to where I gaze,

—And suddenly my head is covered o'er
With those wings, white above the child who prays

Now on that tomb—and I shall feel thee guarding

Me, out of all the world; for me, discarding

You heaven thy home, that waits and opes its door.

I would not look up thither past thy

Because the door opes, like that child,
I know,

For I should have thy gracious face instead,

Thou bird of God! And wilt thou bend me low
Like him, and lay, like his, my hands together,

And lift them up to pray, and gently

tether

Me, as thy lamb there, with thy gar-

ment's spread?

If this was ever granted, I would rest
My head beneath thine, while thy healing hands

Close-covered both my eyes beside thy breast,

Pressing the brain, which too much thought expands,

Back to its proper size again, and smooth-

Distortion down till every nerve had soothing,

And all lay quiet, happy and suppressed.

How soon all worldly wrong would be repaired!

I think how I should view the earth and skies

And sea, when once again my brow was

After thy healing, with such different

O world, as God has made it! All is beauty:

And knowing this, is love, and love is duty.

What further may be sought for or declared?

Guercino drew this angel I saw teach (Alfred, dear friend!)—that little child to pray,

Holding the little hands up, each to each Pressed gently,—with his own head turned away

Over the earth where so much lay before

Of work to do, though heaven was opening o'er him,

And he was left at Fano by the beach.

We were at Fano, and three times we went

To sit and see him in his chapel there, And drink his beauty to our soul's con-

And glory comes this picture for a dower, [cent)—

Fraught with a pathos so magnifi-

And since he did not work thus earnestly
At all times, and has else endured some wrong—

I took one thought his picture struck from me,

And spread it out, translating it to song.

My love is here. Where are you, dear old friend?

How rolls the Wairoa at your world's far end?

This is Ancona, yonder is the sea.

1855.

MEMORABILIA

AH, did you once see Shelley plain, And did he stop and speak to you, And did you speak to him again? How strange it seems and new! But you were living before that,
And also you are living after;
And the memory I started at—
My starting moves your laughter!

I crossed a moor, with a name of its own And a certain use in the world no doubt,

Yet a hand's-breadth of it shines alone 'Mid the blank miles round about:

For there I picked up on the heather And there I put inside my breast A moulted feather, an eagle-feather! Well, I forget the rest. 1855.

POPULARITY

STAND still, true poet that you are! I know you; let me try and draw you, Some night you 'll fail us: when afar You rise, remember one man saw you, Knew you, and named a star!

My star, God's glow-worm! Why extend That loving hand of his which leads you.

Yet locks you safe from end to end
Of this dark world, unless he needs you.

Just saves your light to spend?

His clenched hand shall unclose at last, I know, and let out all the beauty: My poet holds the future fast, Accepts the coming ages' duty, Their present for this past.

That day the earth's feast-master's brow Shall clear, to God the chalice raising; "Others give best at first, but thou Forever set'st our table praising, Keep'st the good wine till now!"

Meantime, I'll draw you as you stand,
With few or none to watch and wonder:

I 'll say—a fisher, on the sand By Tyre the old, with ocean-plunder, A netful, brought to land.

Who has not heard how Tyrian shells Enclosed the blue, that dye of dyes Whereof one drop worked miracles, And colored like Astarte's eyes Raw silk the merchant sells?

And each bystander of them all Could criticise, and quote tradition

How depths of blue sublimed some pall

—To get which, pricked a king's ambition:

Worth sceptre, crown and ball.

Yet there 's the dye, in that rough mesh,
The sea has only just o'er-whispered!
Live whelks, each lip's beard dripping fresh,

As if they still the water's lisp heard Through foam the rock-weeds thresh.

Enough to furnish Solomon
Such hangings for his cedar-house,
That, when gold-robed he took the

In that abyss of blue, the Spouse Might swear his presence shone

Most like the centre-spike of gold Which burns deep in the bluebell's womb

What time, with ardors manifold,
The bee goes singing to her groom,
Drunken and overbold.

Mere conches! not fit for warp or woof!
Till cunning come to pound and squeeze

And clarify,—refine to proof
The liquor filtered by degrees,
While the world stands aloof.

And there 's the extract, flasked and fine.

And priced and salable at last!

And Hobbs, Nobbs, Stokes and Nokes

combine

To paint the future from the past, Put blue into their line.

Hobbs hints blue,—straight he turtle eats:

Nobbs prints blue,—claret crowns his cup:

Nokes outdares Stokes in azure feats,— Both gorge. Who fished the murex

What porridge had John Keats? 1

THE PATRIOT

AN OLD STORY

It was roses, roses, all the way,
With myrtle mixed in my path like mad;

The house-roofs seemed to heave and sway,

The church-spires flamed, such flags they had,

A year ago on this very day.

The air broke into a mist with bells,

The old walls rocked with the crowd and cries.

Had I said, "Good folk, mere noise repels—

But give me your sun from yonder skies!"

They had answered, "And afterward, what else?"

Alack, it was I who leaped at the sun To give it my loving friends to keep! Naught man could do, have I left un-

And you see my harvest, what I reap This very day, now a year is run.

There's nobody on the house-tops now—Just a palsied few at the windows set; For the best of the sight is, all allow, A't the Shambles' Gate—or, better yet, By the very scaffold's foot, I trow.

I go in the rain, and, more than needs, A rope cuts both my wrists behind; And I think, by the feel, my forehead bleeds,

For they fling, whoever has a mind,
Stones at me for my year's misdeeds.

Thus I entered, and thus I go!

In triumphs, people have dropped down dead.

"Paid by the world, what dost thou owe Me?"—God might question; now instead.

'T is God shall repay: I am safer so.

1855.

A LIGHT WOMAN

So far as our story approaches the end, Which do you pity the most of us three?--

My friend, or the mistress of my friend With her wanton eyes, or me?

My friend was already too good to lose, And seemed in the way of improvement yet,

When she crossed his path with her hunting-noose,

And over him drew her net.

When I saw him tangled in her toils, A shame, said I, if she adds just him To her nine-and ninety other spoils, The hundredth for a whim!

And before my friend be wholly hers, How easy to prove to him, I said, An eagle's the game her pride prefers, Though she snaps at a wren instead!

So, I gave her eyes my own eyes to take, My hand sought hers as in earnest need.

And round she turned for my noble sake. And gave me herself indeed.

The eagle am I, with my fame in the world.

The wren is he, with his maiden face. -You look away and your lip is curled? Patience, a moment's space!

For see, my friend goes shaking and white;

He eyes me as the basilisk:

I have turned, it appears, his day to night,

Eclipsing his sun's disk.

And I did it, he thinks, as a very thief: "Though I love her-that, he comprehends-

One should master one's passions, (love, in chief)

And be loval to one's friends!"

And she,—she lies in my hand as tame As a pear late basking over a wall; Just a touch to try and off it came; 'T is mine, -can I let it fall?

With no mind to eat it, that 's the worst! Were it thrown in the road, would the case assist?

'T was quenching a dozen blue-flies' thirst

When I gave its stalk a twist.

And I,—what I seem to my friend, you see:

What I soon shall seem to his love, you guess:

What I seem to myself, do you ask of me?

No hero, I confess.

'T is an awkward thing to play with

And matter enough to save one's own:

Yet think of my friend, and the burning

He played with for bits of stone!

One likes to show the truth for the truth:

That the woman was light is very

But suppose she says,—Never mind that vouth.

What wrong have I done to you?

Well, anyhow, here the story stays, So far at least as I understand; And, Robert Browning, you writer of Here 's a subject made to your hand! 1855.

THE LAST RIDE TOGETHER.

I SAID—Then dearest, since 't is so, Since now at length my fate I know, Since nothing all my love avails, Since all, my life seemed meant for, fails.

Since this was written and needs must be-

My whole heart rises up to bless Your name in pride and thankfulness! Take back the hope you gave,—I claim Only a memory of the same.

-And this beside, if you will not blame, Your leave for one more last ride with me.

My mistress bent that brow of hers; Those deep dark eyes where pride de-

When pity would be softening through, Fixed me a breathing-while or two

With life or death in the balance: right!

The blood replenished me again; My last thought was at least not vain: I and my mistress, side by side Shall be together, breathe and ride, So, one day more am I deified.

Who knows but the world may end

to-night?

Hush! if you saw some western cloud All billowy-bosomed, over-bowed By many benedictions—sun's

And moon's and evening-star's at once-And so, you, looking and loving best, Conscious grew, your passion drew

Cloud, sunset, moonrise, star-shine too, Down on you, near and yet more near,

Till flesh must fade for heaven was here !-

Thus leant she and lingered-joy and

Thus lay she a moment on my breast.

Then we began to ride. My soul Smoothed itself out, a long-cramped scroll Freshening and fluttering in the wind. Past hopes already lay behind.

What need to strive with a life awry? Had I said that, had I done this? So might I gain, so might I miss. Might she have loved me? just as well She might have hated, who can tell! Where had I been now if the worst be-

And here we are riding, she and I.

Fail I alone, in words and deeds? Why, all men strive, and who succeeds? We rode; it seemed, my spirit flew, Saw other regions, cities new,

As the world rushed by on either side. I thought,—All labor, yet no less Bear up beneath their unsuccess, Look at the end of work, contrast The petty done, the undone vast, This present of theirs with the hopeful

I hoped she would love me; here we ride.

What hand and brain went ever paired? What heart alike conceived and dared? What act proved all its thought had

What will but felt the fleshly screen? We ride and I see her bosom heave. There's many a crown for us who can

Ten lines, a statesman's life in each! The flag stuck on a heap of bones, A soldier's doing! what atones? They scratch his name on the Abbey-

My riding is better, by their leave.

What does it all mean, poet? Well, Your brains beat into rhythm, you tell What we felt only; you expressed You hold things beautiful the best,

And place them in rhyme so, side by

'Tis something, nay 't is much: but then, Have you yourself what's best for men? Are you-poor, sick, old ere your time-Nearer one whit your own sublime

Than we who never have turned a rhyme?

Sing, riding's a joy. For me, I ride.

And you, great sculptor—so, you gave A score of years to Art, her slave, And that's your Venus, whence we turn To yonder girl that fords the burn!

You acquiesce, and shall I repine? What, man of music, you grown gray With notes and nothing else to say, Is this your sole praise from a friend, "Greatly his opera's strains intend, But in music we know how fashions end!"

I gave my youth; but we ride, in fine.

Who knows what's fit for us? Had fate Proposed bliss here should sublimate My being—had I signed the bond— Still one must lead some life beyond, Have a bliss to die with, dim-descried. This foot once planted on the goal, This glory-garland round my soul, Could I descry such? Try and test! I sink back shuddering from the quest. Earth being so good, would heaven seem best?

Now, heaven and she are beyond this ride.

And yet—she has not spoke so long! What if heaven be that, fair and strong At life's best, with our eyes upturned Whither life's flower is first discerned,

We, fixed so, ever should so abide? What if we still ride on, we two, With life forever old yet new, Changed not in kind but in degree, The instant made eternity,-And heaven just prove that I and she Ride, ride together, forever ride? 1855.

A GRAMMARIAN'S FUNERAL

SHORTLY AFTER THE REVIVAL OF LEARN-ING IN EUROPE

LET us begin and carry up this corpse, Singing together.

Leave we the common crofts, the vulgar thorpes

Each in its tether

Sleeping safe on the bosom of the plain, Cared-for till cock-crow:

Look out if vonder be not day again Rimming the rock-row!

That's the appropriate country; there, man's thought,

Rarer, intenser.

Self-gathered for an outbreak, as it ought.

Chafes in the censer.

Leave we the unlettered plain its herd and crop:

Seek we sepulture

On a tall mountain, citied to the top, Crowded with culture!

All the peaks soar, but one the rest excels:

Clouds overcome it:

No! yonder sparkle is the citadel's

Circling its summit.

Thither our path lies; wind we up the heights:

Wait ye the warning?

Our low life was the level's and the night's:

He's for the morning.

Step to a tune, square chests, erect each head.

'Ware the beholders!

This is our master, famous, calm and dead.

Borne on our shoulders.

Sleep, crop and herd! sleep, darkling thorpe and croft,

Safe from the weather!

He, whom we convoy to his grave aloft, Singing together,

He was a man born with thy face and throat.

Lyric Apollo!
Long he lived nameless: how should Spring take note

Winter would follow?

Till lo, the little touch, and youth was gone!

Cramped and diminished,

Moaned he, "New measures, other feet My dance is finished?"

No, that 's the world's way: (keep the mountain-side. Make for the city!)

He knew the signal, and stepped on with pride

Over men's pity;

Left play for work, and grappled with the world

Bent on escaping:

"What's in the scroll," quoth he, "thou keepest furled?

Show me their shaping, Theirs who most studied man, the bard and sage,-Give!"-So, he gowned him, Straight got by heart that book to its last page:

Learned, we found him. Yea, but we found him bald too, eyes like lead.

Accents uncertain:

"Time to taste life," another would have said,

"Up with the curtain!"

This man said rather, "Actual life comes next?

Patience a moment!

Grant I have mastered learning's crabbed

Still there's the comment.

Let me know all! Prate not of most or least,

Painful or easy!

Even to the crumbs I'd fain eat up the

Ay, nor feel queasy."

Oh, such a life as he resolved to live, When he had learned it.

When he had gathered all books had to give!

Sooner, he spurned it.

Image the whole, then execute the parts-

Fancy the fabric

Quite, ere you build, ere steel strike fire from quartz,

Ere mortar dab brick!

(Here's the town-gate reached: there's the market-place Gaping before us.)

Yea, this in him was the peculiar grace (Hearten our chorus!)

That before living he'd learn how to live-

No end to learning:

Earn the means first—God surely will contrive

Use for our earning.

Others mistrust and say, "But time escapes:

Live now or never!"

He said, "What's time? Leave Now for dogs and apes!

Man has Forever."

Back to his book then: deeper drooped his head:

Calculus racked him:

Leaden before, his eyes grew dross of lead:

Tussis attacked him.

"Now, master, take a little rest!"-not (Caution redoubled,

Step two abreast, the way winds nar rowly!)

Not a whit troubled.

Back to his studies, fresher than at first. Fierce as a dragon

He (soul-hydroptic with a sacred thirst) Sucked at the flagon.

Oh, if we draw a circle premature, Heedless of far gain,

Greedy for quick returns of profit, sure Bad is our bargain!

Was it not great? did not he throw on God.

(He loves the burthen)-

God's task to make the heavenly period Perfect the earthen?

Did not he magnify the mind, show clear Just what it all meant?

He would not discount life, as fools do

Paid by instalment.

He ventured neck or nothing-heaven's

Found, or earth's failure:

"Wilt thou trust death or not?" He answered "Yes!

Hence with life's pale lure!"

That low man seeks a little thing to do, Sees it and does it:

This high man, with a great thing to pursue,

Dies ere he knows it.

That low man goes on adding one to one, His hundred's soon hit:

This high man, aiming at a million, Misses an unit.

That, has the world here—should he need the next. Let the world mind him!

This, throws himself on God, and unperplexed

Seeking shall find him.

So, with the throttling hands of death at strife.

Ground he at grammar;

Still, through the rattle, parts of speech were rife:

While he could stammer

He settled Hoti's business—let it be !— Properly based Oun-

Gave us the doctrine of the enclitic De, Dead from the waist down.

Well, here's the platform, here's the proper place:

Hail to your purlieus,

All ve highfliers of the feathered race. Swallows and curlews!

Here's the top-peak; the multitude be-Live, for they can, there:

This man decided not to Live but Know-Bury this man there?

Here-here's his place, where meteors shoot, clouds form,

Lightnings are loosened, Stars come and go! Let joy break with the storm,

Peace let the dew send!

Lofty designs must close in like effects: Loftily lying,

Leave him—still loftier than the world suspects.

Living and dving. 1855.

THE STATUE AND THE BUST

THERE'S a palace in Florence, the world knows well,

And a statue watches it from the square. And this story of both do our townsmen tell.

Ages ago, a lady there.

At the farthest window facing the East Asked, "Who rides by with the royal

The bridesmaids' prattle around her ceased:

She leaned forth, one on either hand; They saw how the blush of the bride increased-

They felt by its beats her heart expand— As one at each ear and both in a breath Whispered, "The Great-Duke Ferdinand."

That selfsame instant, underneath, The Duke rode past in his idle way, Empty and fine like a swordless sheath.

Gay he rode, with a friend as gay, Till he threw his head back-"Who is she?"

-"A bride the Riccardi brings home to-day."

Hair in heaps lay heavily Over a pale brow spirit-pure-Carved like the heart of the coal-black tree,

Crisped like a war steed's encolure— And vainly sought to dissemble her eyes Of the blackest black our eyes endure,

And lo, a blade for a knight's emprise Filled the fine empty sheath of a man,— The Duke grew straightway brave and wise.

He looked at her as a lover can; She looked at him, as one who awakes: The past was a sleep, and her life began.

Now, love so ordered for both their sakes,

A feast was held that selfsame night In the pile which the mighty shadow makes.

(For Via Larga is three-parts light, But the palace overshadows one, Because of a crime, which may God requite!

To Florence and God the wrong was done,

Through the first republic's murder there By Cosimo and his cursed son.)

The Duke (with the statue's face in the square)

Turned in the midst of his multitude

At the bright approach of the bridal pair.

Face to face the lovers stood
A single minute and no more
While the bridegroom bent as a man subdued—

Bowed till his bonnet brushed the floor— For the Duke on the lady a kiss conferred.

As the courtly custom was of yore.

In a minute can lovers exchange a word? If a word did pass, which I do not think, Only one out of a thousand heard.

That was the bridegroom./ At day's brink

He and his bride were alone at last In a bed chamber by a taper's blink.

Calmly he said that her lot was cast,
That the door she had passed was shut
on her

Till the final catafalk repassed.

The world meanwhile, its noise and stir, I hrough a certain window facing the East

She could watch like a convent's chronicler.

Since passing the door might lead to a feast.

And a feast might lead to so much beside,

He, of many evils, chose the least.

"Freely I choose too," said the bride—
"Your window and its world suffice," Replied the tongue, while the heart replied—

"If I spend the night with that devil twice,

May his window serve as my loop of hell Whence a damned soul looks on paradise!

"I fly to the Duke who loves me well, Sit by his side and laugh at sorrow Ere I count another ave-bell.

"'T is only the coat of a page to borrow.

And tie my hair in a horse-boy's trim,

And I save my soul—but not to-morrow—"

(She checked herself and her eye grew dim)

"My father tarries to bless my state: I must keep it one day more for him.

"Is one day more so long to wait? Moreover the Duke rides past, I know; We shall see each other, sure as fate."

She turned on her side and slept. Just

So we resolve on a thing and sleep: So did the lady, ages ago.

That night the Duke said, "Dear or cheap

As the cost of this cup of bliss may prove

To body or soul, I will drain it deep."

And on the morrow, bold with love, He beckoned the bridegroom (close on call,

As his duty bade, by the Duke's alcove)

And smiled "'T was a very funeral, Your lady will think, this feast of ours,--

A shame to efface whate'er befall!

"What if we break from the Arno bowers.

And try if Petraja, cool and green, Cure last night's faults with this morning's flowers?"

The bridegroom, not a thought to be seen

On his steady brow and quiet mouth, Said, "Too much favor for me so mean!

"But alas! my ladv leaves the South: Each wind that comes from the Apen-

Is a menace to her tender youth:

"Nor a way exists, the wise opine, If she quits her palace twice this year. To avert the flower of life's decline."

Quoth the Duke, "A sage and a kindly fear.

Moreover Petraja is cold this spring: Be our feast to-night as usual here!

And then to himself-" Which night shall bring
Thy bride to her lover's embraces, fool—

Or I am the fool, and thou art the king!

"Yet my passion must wait a night, nor cool-

For to-night the Envoy arrives from France

Whose heart I unlock with thyself, my

"I need thee still and might miss perchance.

To-day is not wholly lost, beside, With its hope of my lady's countenance:

"For I ride-what should I do but ride? And passing her palace, if I list, May glance at its window—well betide!"

So said, so done: nor the lady missed One ray that broke from the ardent brow.

Nor a curl of the lips where the spirit kissed.

Be sure that each renewed the vow. No morrow's sun should arise and set And leave them then as it left them now.

But next day passed, and next day yet, With still fresh cause to wait one day more

Ere each leaped over the parapet.

And still, as love's brief morning wore, With a gentle start, half smile, half sigh, They found love not as it seemed before.

They thought it would work infallibly, But not in despite of heaven and earth: The rose would blow when the storm passed by.

Meantime they could profit in winter's dearth

By store of fruits that supplant the rose: The world and its ways have a certain worth:

And to press a point while these oppose Were simple policy; better wait: We lose no friends and we gain no foes.

Meantime, worse fates than a lover's fate.

Who daily may ride and pass and look Where his lady watches behind the grate!

And she—she watched the square like a

Holding one picture and only one, Which daily to find she undertook:

When the picture was reached the book was done.

And she turned from the picture at night to scheme Of tearing it out for herself next sun.

So weeks grew months, years; gleam by gleam The glory dropped from their youth and

And both perceived they had dreamed a

Which hovered as dreams do, still

dream:

above: But who can take a dream for a truth? Oh, hide our eyes from the next remove!

One day as the lady saw her youth Depart, and the silver thread that streaked

Her hair, and, worn by the serpent's tooth.

The brow so puckered, the chin so peaked,-

And wondered who the woman was, Hollow-eyed and haggard-cheeked,

Fronting her silent in the glass-"Summon here," she suddenly said, "Before the rest of my old self pass,

"Him, the Carver, a hand to aid, Who fashions the clay no love wil change,

And fixes a beauty never to fade.

"Let Robbia's craft so apt and strange Arrest the remains of young and fair, And rivet them while the seasons range.

"Make me a face on the window there. Waiting as ever, mute the while, My love to pass below in the square!

"And let me think that it may beguile Dreary days which the dead must spend Down in their darkness under the aisle,

"To say, 'What matters it at the end? I did no more while my heart was warm Than does that image, my pale-faced friend.'

'Where is the use of the lip's red

The heaven of hair, the pride of the brow.

And the blood that blues the inside arm—

"Unless we turn, as the soul knows how, The earthly gift to an end divine? A lady of clay is as good, I trow."

But long ere Robbia's cornice, fine, With flowers and fruits which leaves enlace.

Was set where now is the empty shrine-

(And, leaning out of a bright blue space, As a ghost might lean from a chink of sky,

The passionate pale lady's face—

Eying ever, with earnest eye
And quick-turned neck at its breathless stretch,

Some one who ever is passing by—)

The duke had sighed like the simplest wretch

In Florence, "Youth—my dream escapes!

Will its record stay?" And he bade them fetch

Some subtle moulder of brazen shapes— "Can the soul, the will, die out of a man

Ere his body find the grave that gapes?

"John of Douay shall effect my plan, Set me on horseback here aloft, Alive, as the crafty sculptor can, "In the very square I have crossed so oft:

That men may admire, when future suns Shall touch the eyes to a purpose soft,

"While the mouth and the brow stay brave in bronze—

Admire and say, 'When he was alive How he would take his pleasure once!'

"And it shall go hard but I contrive
To listen the while, and laugh in my tomb

At idleness which aspires to strive."

So! While these wait the trump of

How do their spirits pass, I wonder, Nights and days in the narrow room?

Still, I suppose, they sit and ponder What a gift life was, ages ago, Six steps out of the chapel yonder.

Only they see not God, I know, Nor all that chivalry of his, The soldier-saints who, row on row,

Burn upward each to his point of bliss—Since, the end of life being manifest,
He had burned his way through the world to this.

I hear you reproach, "But delay was best,

For their end was a crime."—Oh, a crime will do

As well, I reply, to serve for a test,

As a virtue golden through and through, Sufficient to vindicate itself

And prove its worth at a moment's view!

Must a game be played for the sake of pelf?

Where a button goes, 't were an epigram To offer the stamp of the very Guelph.

The true has no value beyond the sham; As well the counter as coin, I submit, When your table's a hat, and your prize, a dram.

Stake your counter as boldly every whit, Venture as warily, use the same skill, Do your best, whether winning or losing it. If you choose to play !—is my principle. Let a man contend to the uttermost For his life's set prize, be it what it will!

The counter our lovers staked was lost
As surely as if it were lawful coin:
And the sin I impute to each frustrate ghost

Is—the unlit lamp and the ungirt loin, Though the end in sight was a vice, I say.

You of the virtue (we issue join) How strive you? De te, fabula!

1855.

"CHILDE ROLAND TO THE DARK TOWER CAME"

See Edgar's song in Lear.

My first thought was, he lied in every word.

That hoary cripple, with malicious eye Askance to watch the working of his lie

On mine, and mouth scarce able to afford Suppression of the glee, that pursed and scored

Its edge, at one more victim gained thereby.

What else should he be set for, with his staff?

What, save to waylay with his lies, ensnare

All travellers who might find him posted there,

And ask the road? I guessed what skull-like laugh

Would break, what crutch 'gin write my epitaph

For pastime in the dusty thoroughfare,

If at his counsel I should turn aside
Into that ominous tract which, all agree,

Hides the Dark Tower. Yet acquiescingly

I did turn as he pointed: neither pride Nor hope rekindling at the end descried, So much as gladness that some end might be.

For, what with my whole world-wide wandering,

What with my search drawn out through years, my hope

Dwindled into a ghost not fit to cope

With that obstreperous joy success would bring,—

I hardly tried now to rebuke the spring My heart made, finding failure in its scope.

As when a sick man very near to death Seems dead indeed, and feels begin and end

The tears, and takes the farewell of each friend.

And hears one bid the other go, draw breath

Freelier outside, ("since all is o'er," he saith,

"And the blow fallen no grieving can amend;")

While some discuss if near the other graves

Be room enough for this, and when a day

Suits best for carrying the corpse away, With care about the banners, scarves and stayes:

And still the man hears all, and only

He may not shame such tender love and stay.

Thus, I had so long suffered in this quest, Heard failure prophesied so oft, been writ

So many times among "The Band"—to wit,

The knights who to the Dark Tower's search addressed

Their steps—that just to fail as they, seemed best,

And all the doubt was now—should I be fit?

So, quiet as despair, I turned from him, That hateful cripple, out of his highway

Into the path he pointed. All the day Had been a dreary one at best, and dim Was settling to its close, yet shot one grim

Red leer to see the plain catch its estray.

For mark! no sooner was I fairly found Pledged to the plain, after a pace or two.

Than, pausing to throw backward a last view

O'er the safe road, 't was gone; gray plain all round:

Nothing but plain to the horizon's bound.

I might go on; naught else remained to do.

So, on I went. I think I never saw Such starved ignoble nature; nothing throve:

For flowers—as well expect a cedar grove!

But cockle, spurge, according to their law

Might propagate their kind, with none to awe,

You 'd think: a burr had been a treasure trove.

No! penury, inertness and grimace, In some strange sort, were the land's portion, "See

Or shut your eyes," said Nature peevishly,

"It nothing skills: I cannot help my case:

'T is the Last Judgment's fire must cure this place.

Calcine its clods and set my prisoners free."

If there pushed any ragged thistle-stalk Above its mates, the head was chopped; the bents

Were jealous else. What made those holes and rents

In the dock's harsh swarth leaves, bruised as to balk

All hope of greenness? 't is a brute must walk

Pashing their life out, with a brute's intents.

As for the grass, it grew as scant as hair In leprosy; thin dry blades pricked the mud

Which underneath looked kneaded up with blood.

One stiff blind horse, his every bone astare,

Stood stupefied, however he came there:
Thrust out past service from the devil's stud!

Alive? he might be dead for aught I know,

With that red gaunt and colloped neck a-strain,

And shut eyes underneath the rusty mane;

Seldom went such grotesqueness with such woe:

I never saw a brute I hated so:

He must be wicked to deserve such pain.

I shut my eyes and turned them on my heart.

As a man calls for wine before he fights,

I asked one draught of earlier, happier sights,

Ere fitly I could hope to play my part.
Think first, fight afterwards—the soldier's art:

One taste of the old time sets all to rights.

Not it! I fancied Cuthbert's reddening face

Beneath its garniture of curly gold, Dear fellow, till I almost felt him 13ld An arm in mine to fix me to the place,

That way he used. Alas, one night's disgrace!

Out went my heart's new fire and left it cold.

Giles then, the soul of honor—there he stands

Frank as ten years ago when knighted first.

What honest man should dare (he said) he durst.

Good—but the scene shifts—faugh! what hangman hands

Pin to his breast a parchment? His own bands

Read it. Poor traitor, spit upon and curst!

Better this present than a past like that;
Back therefore to my darkening path
again!

No sound, no sight as far as eye could strain.

Will the night send a howlet or a bat?
I asked: when something on the dismal

Came to arrest my thoughts and change their train.

A sudden little river crossed my path As unexpected as a serpent comes.

No sluggish tide congenial to the glooms;

This, as it frothed by, might have been a bath

For the fiend's glowing hoof—to see the wrath

Of its black eddy bespate with flakes and spumes.

So petty, yet so spiteful! All along, Low scrubby alders kneeled down over it:

Drenched willows flung them headlong in a fit

Of mute despair, a suicidal throng:

The river which had done them all the wrong.
Whate'er that was, rolled by, deterred

Whate'er that was, rolled by, deterred no whit.

Which, while I forded.—good saints, how I feared

To set my foot upon a dead man's cheek,

Each step, or feel the spear I thrust to seek

For hollows, tangled in his hair or heard!

—It may have been a water-rat I speared,
But, ugh, it sounded like a baby's shriek.

Glad was I when I reached the other bank.

Now for a better country. Vain presage!

Who were the strugglers, what war did they wage,

Whose savage trample thus could pad the dank

Soil to a plash? Toads in a poisoned tank,

Or wild cats in a red-hot iron cage-

The fight must so have seemed in that fell cirque.

What penned them there, with all the plain to choose?

No footprint leading to that horrid mews.

None out of it. Mad brewage set to work

Their brains, no doubt, like galleyslaves the Turk

Pits for his pastime, Christians against Jews.

And more than that—a furlong on—why, there!

What bad use was that engine for, that wheel,

Or brake, not wheel—that harrow fit to reel [air

Men's bodies out like silk? with all the Of Tophet's tool, on earth left unaware. Or brought to sharpen its rusty teeth of steel.

Then came a bit of stubbed ground, once a wood,

Next a marsh, it would seem, and now mere earth

Desperate and done with: (so a fool finds mirth,

Makes a thing and then mars it, till his

Changes and off he goes!) within a rood— Bog, clay and rubble, sand and stark black dearth.

Now blotches rankling, colored gay and grim.

Now patches where some leanness of the soil's

Broke into moss or substances like boils;

Then came some palsied oak, a cleft in him

Like a distorted mouth that splits its rim Gaping at death, and dies while it recoils.

And just as far as ever from the end!

Naught in the distance but the evening, naught

To point my footstep further! At the thought,

A great black bird, Apollyon's bosomfriend,

Sailed past, nor beat his wide wing dragon-penned

That brushed my cap—perchance the guide I sought.

For, looking up, aware I somehow grew, 'Spite of the dusk, the plain had given place

All round to mountains—with such name to grace

Mere ugly heights and heaps now stolen in view.

How thus they had surprised me,—solve it, you!

How to get from them was no clearer case.

Yet half I seemed to recognize some trick

Of mischief happened to me, God knows when—

In a bad dream perhaps. Here ended, then, [nick

Progress this way. When, in the very Of giving up, one time more, came a click [the den!

As when a trap shuts—you're inside

Burningly it came on me all at once,
This was the place! those two hills on the right,

Crouched like two bulls locked horn in horn in fight;

While to the left, a tall scalped mountain

Dotard, a-dozing at the very nonce,

After a life spent training for the sight!

What in the midst lay but the Tower itself?

The round squat turret, blind as the fool's heart,

Built of brown stone, without a counterpart

In the whole world. The tempest's mocking elf

Points to the shipman thus the unseen shelf

He strikes on, only when the timbers start.

Not see? because of night perhaps?—why, day

Came back again for that! before it left

The dying sunset kindled through a cleft:

The hills, like giants at a hunting, lay, Chin upon hand, to see the game at bay.—

"Now stab and end the creature—to the heft!"

Not hear? when noise was everywhere!

Increasing like a bell. Names in my ears,

Of all the lost adventurers my peers,— How such a one was strong, and such was bold.

And such was fortunate, yet each of old Lost, lost! one moment knelled the woe of years.

There they stood, ranged along the hillsides, met

To view the last of me, a living frame For one more picture! in a sheet of flame

I saw them and I knew them all. And vet

Dauntless the slug-horn to my lips I set, And blew: "Childe Roland to the Dark Tower came." 1855.

FRA LIPPO LIPPI

I AM poor brother Lippo, by your leave! You need not clap your torches to my face.

Zooks, what 's to blame? you think you see a monk!

What, 't is past midnight, and you go the rounds,

And here you catch me at an alley's end Where sportive ladies leave their doors ajar?

The Carmine's my cloister: hunt it up. Do,—harry out, if you must show your zeal,

Whatever rat, there, haps on his wrong hole,

And nip each softling of a wee white mouse,

Weke, weke, that 's crept to keep him company!

Aha, you know your betters! Then, you'll take

Your hand away that 's fiddling on my throat.

And please to know me likewise. Who am I?
Why, one, sir, who is lodging with a friend

Three streets off—he's a certain...how d' ye call? Master—a... Cosimo of the Medici.

I' the house that caps the corner. Boh! you were best!

Remember and tell me, the day you 're hanged,
How you affected such a gullet's-gripe!

But you, sir, it concerns you that your knaves

Pick up a manner nor discredit you: Zooks, are we pilchards, that they sweep the streets

And count fair prize what comes into their net?

He's Judas to a tittle, that man is!
Just such a face! Why, sir, you make amends.

Lord, I'm not angry! Bid your hangdogs go

Drink out this quarter-florin to the health
Of the munificent House that harbors

me
(And many more beside, lads! more beside!)

And all 's come square again. I 'd like his face—

His, elbowing on his comrade in this door With the pike and lantern,—for the slave that holds

John Baptist's head a-dangle by the hair
With one hand ("Look you, now," as who should say)

And his weapon in the other, yet unwiped!

It's not your chance to have a bit of chalk.

A wood-coal or the like? or you should

Yes. I'm the painter, since you style me

What, brother Lippo's doings, up and down

You know them and they take you? like enough!

I saw the proper twinkle in your eye-Tell you, I liked your looks at very first. Let's sit and set things straight now, hip to haunch.

Here's spring come, and the nights one makes up bands

To roam the town and sing our carnival. And I've been three weeks shut within my mew,

A-painting for the great man, saints and saints And saints again. I could not paint all night-

Ouf! I leaned out of window for fresh

There came a hurry of feet and little feet, A sweep of lute strings, laughs, and whifts of song,-

Flower o' the broom.

Take away love, and our earth is a tomb!

Flower o' the quince,

I let Lisa go, and what good in life since? Flower o' the thyme—and so on. Round they went.

Scarce had they turned the corner when a titter

Like the skipping of rabbits by moonlight,—three slim shapes, And a face that looked up . . . zooks, sir, flesh and blood.

That's all I'm made of! Into shreds it went.

Curtain and counterpane and coverlet, All the bed-furniture—a dozen knots,

There was a ladder! Down I let myself. Hands and feet, scrambling somehow, and so dropped,

And after them. I came up with the Hard by Saint Laurence, hail fellow, well met .-

Flower o' the rose,

If I've been merry, what matter who knows?

And so as I was stealing back again To get to bed and have a bit of sleen

Ere I rise up to-morrow and go work On Jerome knocking at his poor old breast

With his great round stone to subdue the flesh. You snap me of the sudden. Ah, I see!

Though your eye twinkles still, you shake vour head-

Mine's shaved-a monk, you say-the sting's in that!

If Master Cosimo announced himself, Mum's the word naturally; but a monk! Come, what am I a beast for? tell us,

now!

I was a baby when my mother died

And father died and left me in the street. I starved there, God knows how, a year or two

On fig-skins, melon-parings, rinds and shucks.

Refuse and rubbish. One fine frosty day, My stomach being empty as your hat,

The wind doubled me up and down I went.

Old Aunt Lapaccia trussed me with one

(Its fellow was a stinger as I knew) And so along the wall, over the bridge,

By the straight cut to the convent. Six words there.

While I stood munching my first bread that month:

"So, boy, you're minded," quoth the good fat father,

Wiping his own mouth, 't was refection-

"To quit this very miserable world? Will you renounce"..."the mouthful of bread?" thought I;

By no means! Brief, they made a monk of me:

I did renounce the world, its pride and greed,

Palace, farm, villa, shop, and bankinghouse,

Trash, such as these poor devils of Medici

Have given their hearts to—all at eight vears old.

Well, sir, I found in time, you may be

'T was not for nothing-the good bellyful, The warm serge and the rope that goes all round,

And day-long blessed idleness beside! "Let's see what the urchin's fit for" -that came next.

Not overmuch their way, I must confess.

Such a to-do! They tried me with their books;

Lord, they'd have taught me Latin in pure waste!

Flower o' the clove.

All the Latin I construe is "amo," I love!

But, mind you, when a boy starves in the streets

Eight years together, as my fortune was, Watching folk's faces to know who will

The bit of half-stripped grape-bunch he desires.

And who will curse or kick him for his pains,-

Which gentleman processional and fine, Holding a candle to the Sacrament.

Will wink and let him lift a plate and catch

The droppings of the wax to sell again, Or holla for the Eight and have him whipped,-

How say 1?-nay, which dog bites, which lets drop

His bone from the heap of offal in the street .-

Why, soul and sense of him grow sharp alike,

He learns the look of things, and none the less

For admonition from the hunger-pinch. I had a store of such remarks, be sure,

Which, after I found leisure, turned to use.

I drew men's faces on my copy-books. Scrawled them within the antiphonary's marge,

Joined legs and arms to the long music-

Found eyes and nose and chin for A's and B's,

And made a string of pictures of the world

Betwixt the ins and outs of verb and noun,

On the wall, the bench, the door. The monks looked black.

"Nay," quoth the Prior, "turn him out. d'ye say?

In no wise. Lose a crow and catch a lark.

What if at last we get our man of parts, We Carmelites, like those Camaldolese And Preaching Friars, to do our church up fine

And put the front on it that ought to be!"

And hereupon he bade me daub away.

Thank you! my head being crammed, the walls a blank,

Never was such prompt disemburdening. First, every sort of monk, the black and white.

I drew them, fat and lean: then, folk at church.

From good old gossips waiting to confess Their cribs of barrel-droppings, candleends,-

To the breathless fellow at the altar-foot. Fresh from his murder, safe and sitting there

With the little children round him in a

Of admiration, half for his beard and

For that white anger of his victim's son Shaking a fist at him with one fierce arm.

Signing himself with the other because of Christ

(Whose sad face on the cross sees only this

After the passion of a thousand years) Till some poor girl, her apron o'er her head.

(Which the intense eyes looked through) came at eve

On tiptoe, said a word, dropped in a loaf, Her pair of earrings and a bunch of flowers (The brute took growling), prayed, and so was gone. I painted all, then cried "'T is ask and have: Choose, for more's ready!"—laid the ladder flat, And showed my covered bit of cloister-

The monks closed in a circle and praised

Till checked, taught what to see and not to see. Being simple bodies,-" That's the very man! Look at the boy who stoops to pat the dog!

That woman's like the Prior's niece who comes

To care about his asthma: it's the life!" But there my triumph's straw-fire flared and funked;

Their betters took their turn to see and say:

The Prior and the learned pulled a face And stopped all that in no time. "How? what's here? [us all!

Quite from the mark of painting, bless

Faces, arms, legs, and bodies like the

As much as pea and pea! it's devil'sgame!

Your business is not to catch men with show.

With homage to the perishable clay, But lift them over it, ignore it all,

Make them forget there's such a thing as flesh.

Your business is to paint the souls of Man's soul, and it 's a fire, smoke . . . no, it 's not . .

It's vapor done up like a new-born babe-

(In that shape when you die it leaves your mouth)

It's . . . well, what matters talking. it's the soul!

Give us no more of body than shows soul!

Here's Giotto, with his Saint a-praising God,

That sets us praising,—why not stop with him?

Why put all thoughts of praise out of our head

With wonder at lines, colors, and what not?

Paint the soul, never mind the legs and arms!

Rub all out, try at it a second time.

Oh, that white smallish female with the breasts.

She 's just my niece . . . Herodias, I would say,-Who went and danced and got men's heads cut off! Have it all out!" Now, is this sense, I

A fine way to paint soul, by painting

body

So ill, the eye can't stop there, must go further

And can't fare worse! Thus, yellow does for white

When what you put for yellow's simply black.

And any sort of meaning looks intense When all beside itself means and looks naught.

Why can't a painter lift each foot in

Left foot and right foot, go a double step,

Make his flesh liker and his soul more Iface.

Both in their order? Take the prettiest

The Prior's niece . . . patron-saint-is it so pretty

You can't discover if it means hope, fear.

Sorrow or joy? won't beauty go with these ? Suppose I've made her eyes all right and blue, Can't I take breath and try to add life's flash,

And then add soul and heighten them three-fold?

Or say there's beauty with no soul at all -

(I never saw it—put the case the same—) If you get simple beauty and naught else, You get about the best thing God invents:

That 's somewhat: and you'll find the soul you have missed,

Within yourself, when you return him thanks.

"Rub all out!" Well, well, there 's my life, in short,

And so the thing has gone on ever since. I 'm grown a man no doubt, I 've broken bounds:

You should not take a fellow eight years And make him swear to never kiss the girls. I'm my own master, paint now as I please-

Having a friend, you see, in the Cornerhouse!

Lord, it's fast holding by the rings in front-

Those great rings serve more purposes than just

To plant a flag in, or tie up a horse! And yet the old schooling sticks, the old grave eves

Are peeping o'er my shoulder as I work, The heads shake still—"It 's art's decline, my son!

You're not of the true painters, great and old:

Brother Angelico's the man, you'll find; Brother Lorenzo stands his single peer: Fag on at flesh, you'll never make the third!"

Flower o' the pine,

You keep your mistr . . . manners, and I'll stick to mine!

I'm not the third, then: bless us, they must know!

Don't you think they 're the likeliest to know, my rage, They with their Latin? So, I swallow Clench my teeth, suck my lips in tight, and paint

To please them—sometimes do and sometimes don't;

For, doing most, there's pretty sure to

A turn, some warm eve finds me at my saints—

A laugh, a cry, the business of the world—

(Flower o' the Peach,

Death for us all, and his own life for each!)

And my whole soul revolves, the cup runs over,

The world and life 's too big to pass for a dream,

And I do these wild things in sheer despite,

And play the fooleries you catch me at, In pure rage! The old mill-horse, out at grass

After hard years, throws up his stiff heels so.

Although the miller does not preach to him

The only good of grass is to make chaff. What would men have? Do they like grass or no—

May they or may n't they? all I want's the thing

Settled forever one way. As it is.

You tell too many lies and hurt yourself:

You don't like what you only like too much,

You do like what, if given you at your word,

You find abundantly detestable.

For me, I think I speak as I was taught; I always see the garden and God there A-making man's wife; and, my lesson learned,

The value and significance of flesh,

The value and significance of flesh, I can't unlearn ten minutes afterwards.

You understand me: I'm a beast, I know.

But see, now—why, I see as certainly
As that the morning-star 's about to shine.

what will hap some day. We've a youngster here

Comes to our convent, studies what I do, Slouches and stares and lets no atom drop:

His name is Guidi—he 'll not mind the monks— [talk—

They call him Hulking Tom, he lets them

He picks my practice up—he 'll paint apace.

I hope so—though I never live so long, I know what's sure to follow. You be judge!

You speak no Latin more than I, belike; However, you 're my man, you 've seen the world

The beauty and the wonder and the

The shapes of things, their colors, lights and shades,

Changes, surprises,—and God made it

-For what? Do you feel thankful, ay

For this fair town's face, yonder river's line,

The mountain round it and the sky above, Much more the figures of man, woman, child,

To be passed over, despised? or dwelt upon,

Wondered at? oh, this last of course!—

But why not do as well as say, point

But why not do as well as say,—paint these

God's works—paint any one, and count

To let a truth slip. Don't object, "His works

Are here already; nature is complete: Suppose you reproduce her—(which you can't)

There's no advantage! you must beat her, then."

For, don't you mark? we 're made so that we love

First when we see them painted, things we have passed

Perhaps a hundred times nor cared to see;

And so they are better, painted—better to us,

Which is the same thing. Art was given for that;

God uses us to help each other so,

Lending our minds out. Have you noticed, now,

Your cullion's hanging face? A bit of chalk,

And trust me but you should, though!

How much more,

If I drew higher things with the same truth!

That were to take the Prior's pulpitplace.

Interpret God to all of you! Oh, oh, It makes me mad to see what men shall

And we in our graves! This world's no blot for us.

Nor blank; it means intensely, and means good:

To find its meaning is my meat and drink.

"Ay, but you don't so instigate to prayer!"

Strikes in the Prior: "when your meaning 's plain

It does not say to folk-remember matins,

Or, mind you fast next Friday!" Why, for this

What need of art at all? A skull and bones.

ANDREA DEL SARTO

CALLED "THE FAULTLESS PAINTER"

But do not let us quarrel any more, No, my Lucrezia; bear with me for once:

Sit down and all shall happen as you wish.

You turn your face, but does it bring your heart?

I'll work then for your friend's friend, never fear,

Treat his own subject after his own way, Fix his own time, accept too his own price.

And shut the money into this small hand When next it takes mine. Will it?

Oh, I'll content him, -- but to-morrow, Love!

I often am much wearier than you think, This evening more than usual, and it seems

As if—forgive now—should you let me

Here by the window with your hand in mine

And look a half-hour forth on Fiesole, Both of one mind, as married people use, Quietly, quietly the evening through, I might get up to-morrow to my work Cheerful and fresh as ever. Let us try. To-morrow, how you shall be glad for this!

Your soft hand is a woman of itself, And mine the man's bared breast she curls inside.

Don't count the time lost, neither; you must serve

For each of the five pictures we require: It saves a model. So! keep looking so—My serpentining beauty, rounds on rounds!

-How could you ever prick those perfect ears.

Even to put the pearl there! oh, so

My face, my moon, my everybody's moon,

Which everybody looks on and calls his, And, I suppose, is looked on by in turn, While she looks—no one's: very dear, no less,

You smile? why, there's my picture ready made,

There 's what we painters call our harmony!

A common grayness silvers everything,—All in a twilight, you and I alike

—You, at the point of your first pride in

(That 's gone you know),—but I, at every point;

My youth, my hope, my art, being all toned down

To yonder sober pleasant Fiesole. There's the bell clinking from the chapel-top; That length of convent-wall across the

Holds the trees safer, huddled more inside:

The last monk leaves the garden; days decrease,

And autumn grows, autumn in everything,

Eh? the whole seems to fall into a shape As if I saw alike my work and self

And all that I was born to be and do, A twilight-piece. Love, we are in God's hand. How strange now looks the life he makes us lead; So free we seem, so fettered fast we are!

I feel he laid the fetter: let it lie!
This chamber for example—turn your

All that 's behind us! You don't under

Nor care to understand about my art. But you can hear at least when people speak:

And that cartoon, the second from the

Behold Madonna !- I am bold to say. I can do with my pencil what I know, What I see, what at bottom of my heart I wish for, if I ever wish so deep-Do easily, too-when I say, perfectly,

I do not boast, perhaps: yourself are judge.

Who listened to the Legate's talk last week, And just as much they used to say in France.

At any rate 't is easy, all of it!

No sketches first, no studies, that 's long past:

I do what many dream of all their lives. -Dream? strive to do, and agonize to

And fail in doing. I could count twenty such

On twice your fingers, and not leave this town.

Who strive-you don't know how the others strive

To paint a little thing like that you smeared

.Carelessly passing with your robes afloat .-

Yet do much less, so much less, Someone says,

Well, less is more, Lucrezia: I am judged.

My works are nearer heaven, but I sit

His hue mistaken; what of that? or

Rightly traced and well ordered; what of that?

Speak as they please, what does the mountain care?

Ah, but a man's reach should exceed his grasp,

Or what 's a heaven for? All is silver-

Placid and perfect with my art: the worse!

I know both what I want and what might

And yet how profitless to know, to sigh "Had I been two, another and myself, Our head would have o'erlooked the world!" No doubt.

Yonder's a work now, of that famous vouth

Some women do so. Had the mouth there urged

"God and the glory! never care for gain. The present by the future, what is that? Live for fame, side by side with Agnolo! Rafael is waiting: up to God, all three!" I might have done it for you. So it seems:

Perhaps not. All is as God overrules. Beside, incentives come from the soul's

God, I conclude, compensates, punishes. 'T is safer for me, if the award be strict, That I am something underrated here, Poor this long while, despised, to speak the truth.

I dared not, do you know, leave home all day.

For fear of chancing on the Paris lords. The best is when they pass and look aside;

But they speak sometimes: I must bear it all.

Well may they speak! That Francis. that first time,

And that long festal year at Fontainebleau!

I surely then could sometimes leave the ground,

Put on the glory, Rafael's daily wear, In that humane great monarch's golden look.-

One finger in his beard or twisted curl Over his mouth's good mark that made the smile,

One arm about my shoulder, round my neck.

The jingle of his gold chain in my ear, I painting proudly with his breath on

All his court round him, seeing with his

Such frank French eyes, and such a fire of souls

Profuse, my hand kept plying by those hearts,-

And, best of all, this, this, this face bevond.

This in the background, waiting on my work.

To crown the issue with a last reward! A good time, was it not, my kingly days? And had you not grown restless . . . but I know-

'T is done and past; 't was right, my instinct said:

Too live the life grew, golden and not And I'm the weak-eyed bat no sun should tempt Out of the grange whose four walls make his world.

How could it end in any other way? You called me, and I came home to your heart.

The triumph was—to reach and stay there; since

I reached itere the triumph, what is lost? Let my hands frame your face in your hair's gold.

You beautiful Lucrezia that are mine! "Rafael did this, Andrea painted that; The Roman's is the better when you pray, But still the other's Virgin was his wife"-

Men will excuse me. I am glad to judge Both pictures in your presence; clearer grows

My better fortune, I resolve to think. For, do you know, Lucrezia, as God lives, Said one day Agnolo, his very self, To Rafael . . . I have known it all these years . . .

(When the young man was flaming out his thoughts

Upon a palace-wall for Rome to see, Too lifted up in heart because of it) "Friend, there's a certain sorry little scrub

Goes up and down our Florence, none cares how,

Who, were he set to plan and execute As you are, pricked on by your popes and kings,

Would bring the sweat into that brov of yours!"

To Rafael's!—And indeed the arm is wrong.

I hardly dare . . . yet, only you to see, Give the chalk here—quick, thus the line should go!

Ay, but the soul! he's Rafael! rub it out!

Still, all I care for, if he spoke the truth, (Whathe? why, who but Michel Agnolo? Do you forget already words like those?) If really there was such a chance, so lost,-

Is, whether you 're-not grateful-but more pleased.

Well, let me think so. And you smile indeed!

This hour has been an hour! Another smile?

If you would sit thus by me every night I should work better, do you comprehend?

I mean that I should earn more, give you more.

See, it is settled dusk now; there's a

Inside the melancholy little house

We built to be so gay with. God is just. King Francis may forgive me: oft at nights

When I look up from painting, eyes tired

The walls become illumined, brick from brick

Distinct, instead of mortar, fierce bright gold.

That gold of his I did cement them with! Let us but love each other. Must you go? That Cousin here again? he waits outside?

Must see you-you, and not with me? Those loans?

More gaming debts to pay? you smiled for that?

Well, let smiles buy me! have you more to spend?

While hand and eye and something of a

I take the subjects for his corridor,

Finish the portrait out of hand—there.

And throw him in another thing or two If he demurs; the whole should prove enough

To pay for this same Cousin's freak. Beside.

What's better and what's all I care about.

Get you the thirteen scudi for the ruff! Love, does that please you? Ah, but what does he,

The Cousin! what does he to please you more?

I am grown peaceful as old age tonight.

I regret little, I would change still less. Since there my past life lies, why alter

The very wrong to Francis!—it is true I took his coin, was tempted and complied.

And built this house and sinned, and all is said.

My father and my mother died of want. Well, had I riches of my own? you see How one gets rich! Let each one bear his lot.

They were born poor, lived poor, and poor they died;

And I have labored somewhat in my time

You loved me quite enough, it seems to-night.

This must suffice me here. What would one have?

Again the Cousin's whistle! Go, my Love. 1855.

ONE WORD MORE.1

TO E. B. B.

London, September, 1855.

THERE they are, my fifty men and women

Naming me the fifty poems finished! Take them. Love, the book and me together:

Where the heart lies, let the brain lie

Rafael made a century of sonnets. Made and wrote them in a certain volume

Dinted with the silver-pointed pencil Else he only used to draw Madonnas: These, the world might view—but one, the volume.

Who that one, you ask? Your heart instructs you.

Did she live and love it all her lifetime? Did she drop, his lady of the sonnets, Die, and let it drop beside her pillow Where it lay in place of Rafael's glory, Rafael's cheek so duteous and so loving, Cheek, the world was wont to hail a painter's,

Guido Reni dying, all Bologna

Suddenly, as rare things will, it vanished.

Wherefore? Heaven's gift takes earth's abatement!

He who smites the rock and spreads the water,

Bidding drink and live a crowd beneath him.

Even he, the minute makes immortal, Proves, perchance, but mortal in the minute.

Desecrates, belike, the deed in doing.
While he smites, how can he but remember,

So he smote before, in such a peril, When they stood and mocked—"Shall smiting help us?"

When they drank and sneered — "A stroke is easy!"

When they wiped their mouths and went their journey,

Throwing him for thanks—"But drought was pleasant."

Thus old memories mar the actual triumph;

Thus the doing savors of disrelish;

Thus achievement lacks a gracious somewhat;

O'er-importuned brows becloud the mandate,

Carelessness or consciousness—the ges-

For he bears an ancient wrong about him, Sees and knows again those phalanxed faces.

Hears, yet one time more, the 'customed prelude—

"How shouldst thou, of all men, smite, and save us?"

Guesses what is like to prove the sequel— "Egypt's flesh-pots—nay, the drought was better."

\mathbf{X}

Oh, the crowd must have emphatic warrant!

Theirs, the Sinai-forehead's cloven brilliance,

Right-arm's rod-sweep, tongue's imperial fiat.

Never dares the man put off the prophet.

XI

Did he love one face from out the thousands,

(Were she Jethro's daughter, white and wifely.

Were she but the Æthiopian bondslave,) He would envy yon dumb patient camel, Keeping a reserve of scanty water Meant to save his own life in the desert:

Ready in the desert to deliver

(Kneeling down to let his breast be opened)

Hoard and life together for his mistress.

IIX

I shall never, in the years remaining, Paint you pictures, no, nor carve you statues,

Make you music that should all-expreseme:

So it seems: I stand on my attainment This of verse alone, one life allows me Verse and nothing else have I to give you Other heights in other lives, God willing All the gifts from all the heights, you own, Love!

IIIX

Yet a semblance of resource avails us— Shade so finely touched, love's sense must seize it.

Take these lines, look lovingly and nearly.

Lines I write the first time and the last time.

He who works in fresco, steals a hairbrush,

Curbs the liberal hand, subservient proudly,

Cramps his spirit, crowds its all in little Makes a strange art of an art familiar,

Fills his lady's missal-marge with flowerets.

He who blows through bronze, may breathe through silver, Fitly serenade a slumbrous princess.

He who writes, may write for once as I

xiv

Love, you saw me gather men and women,

Live or dead or fashioned by my fancy, Enter each and all, and use their service, Speak from every mouth,—the speech, a poem.

Hardly shall I tell my joys and sorrows, Hope and fears, belief and disbelieving: I am mine and yours—the rest be all

Karshish, Cleon, Norbert, and the fifty. Let me speak this once in my true per-

Not as Lippo, Roland, or Andrea,

Though the fruit of speech be just this sentence:

Pray you, look on these my men and women.

Take and keep my fifty poems finished; Where my heart lies, let my brain lie also!

Poor the speech; be how I speak, for all things.

XV

Not but that you know me! Lo, the moon's self!

Here in London, yonder late in Florence, Still we find her face, the thrice-transfigured.

Curving on a sky imbrued with color, Drifted over Fiesole by twilight.

Came she, our new crescent of a hair'sbreadth.

Full she flared it, lamping Samminiato, Rounder 'twixt the cypresses and rounder.

Perfect till the nightingales applauded. Now, a piece of her old self, impoverished. Hard to greet, she traverses the houseroofs.

Hurries with unhandsome thrift of silver. Goes dispiritedly, glad to finish.

What, there's nothing in the moon noteworthy?

Nay: for if that moon could love a mortal. Use, to charm him (so to fit a fancy), All her magic ('t is the old sweet mythos), She would turn a new side to her mortal, Side unseen of herdsman, huntsman,

Blank to Zoroaster on his terrace.

Blind to Galileo on his turret.

steersman-

Dumb to Homer, dumb to Keats-him, even!

Think, the wonder of the moonstruck mortal-

When she turns round, comes again in heaven.

Opens out anew for worse or better !

Proves she like some portent of an ice-

Swimming full upon the ship it founders. Hungry with huge teeth of splintered crystals?

Proves she as the paved work of a sapphire Seen by Moses when he climbed the mountain?

Moses, Aaron, Nadab and Abihu

Climbed and saw the very God, the Highest,

Stand upon the paved work of a sapphire. Like the bodied heaven in his clearness Shone the stone, the sapphire of that paved work,

When they ate and drank and saw God also!

XVII

What were seen? None knows, none ever shall know.

Only this is sure—the sight were other, Not the moon's same side, born late in Florence.

Dying now impoverished here in London. God be thanked, the meanest of his creatures

Boasts two soul-sides, one to face the world with,

One to show a woman when he loves her!

XVIII

This I say of me, but think of you, Love! This to you-yourself my moon of poets! Ah, but that 's the world's side, there 's the wonder.

Thus they see you, praise you, think they know you!

There, in turn I stand with them and praise you-

Out of my own self, I dare to phrase it. But the best is when I glide from out them.

Cross a step or two of dubious twilight, Come out on the other side, the novel Silent silver lights and darks undreamed

Where I hush and bless myself with silence.

XIX

Oh, their Rafael of the dear Madonnas, Oh, their Dante of the dread Inferno, Wrote one song—and in my brain I sing

Drew one angel-borne, see, on my bosom!

BEN KARSHOOK'S WISDOM

Ι

"Would a man 'scape the rod?"
Rabbi Ben Karshook saith,

"See that he turn to God The day before his death."

"Ay, could a man inquire When it shall come!" I say, The Rabbi's eye shoots fire— "Then let him turn to-day!"

H

Quoth a young Sadducee:
"Reader of many rolls,
Is it so certain we
Have, as they tell us, souls?"

"Son, there is no reply!"
The Rabbi bit his beard:

"Certain, a soul have I—
We may have none," he sneered.

Thus Karshook, the Hiram's-Hammer, The Right-hand Temple-column,

Taught babes in grace their grammar, And struck the simple, solemn.

AMONG THE ROCKS

Oh, good gigantic smile o' the brown old earth,

This autumn morning! How he sets his bones

To bask i' the sun, and thrusts out knees and feet

For the ripple to run over in its

Listening the while, where on the heap of stones

The white breast of the sea-lark twitters sweet.

That is the doctrine, simple, ancient, true:

Such is life's trial, as old earth smiles and knows.

If you loved only what were worth your love,

Love were clear gain, and wholly well for you:

Make the low nature better by your throes!

Give earth yourself, go up for gain above! 1864.

ABT VOGLER

(AFTER HE HAS BEEN EXTEMPORIZING UPON THE MUSICAL INSTRUMENT OF HIS INVENTION)

Would that the structure brave, the manifold music I build,

Bidding my organ obey, calling its keys to their work,

Claiming each slave of the sound, at a touch, as when Solomon willed

Armies of angels that soar, legions of demons that lurk.

Man, brute, reptile, fly,—alien of end and of aim,

Adverse, each from the other heavenhigh, hell-deep removed,—

Should rush into sight at once as he named the ineffable Name,

And pile him a palace straight, to pleasure the princess he loved!

Would it might tarry like his, the beautiful building of mine.

This which my keys in a crowd pressed and importuned to raise!

Ah, one and all, how they helped, would dispart now and now combine.

Zealous to hasten the work, heighten their master his praise!

And one would bury his brow with a blind plunge down to hell,

Burrow awhile and build, broad on the roots of things.

Then up again swim into sight, having based me my palace well,

Founded it, fearless of flame, flat on the nether springs.

And another would mount and march, like the excellent minion he was,

Ay, another and yet another, one crowd but with many a crest.

Raising my rampired walls of gold as transparent as glass,

Eager to do and die, yield each his place to the rest:

For higher still and higher (as a runner tips with fire,

When a great illumination surprises a festal night-

Outlined round and round Rome's dome from space to spire)

Up, the pinnacled glory reached, and the pride of my soul was in sight.

In sight? Not half! for it seemed, it was certain, to match man's birth,

Nature in turn conceived, obeying an impulse as I:

And the emulous heaven yearned down, made effort to reach the earth,

As the earth had done her best, in my passion, to scale the sky:

Novel splendors burst forth, grew familiar and dwelt with mine.

Not a point nor peak but found and fixed its wandering star;

Meteor-moons, balls of blaze: and they did not pale nor pine,

For earth had attained to heaven, there was no more near nor far.

Nay more; for there wanted not who walked in the glare and glow,

Presences plain in the place; or, fresh from the Protoplast,

Furnished for ages to come, when a kindlier wind should blow,

Lured now to begin and live, in a house to their liking at last;

Or else the wonderful Dead who have passed through the body and gone, But were back once more to breathe in an old world worth their new: What never had been, was now; what was, as it shall be anon: And what is, -shall I say, matched both? for I was made perfect too.

All through my keys that gave their sounds to a wish of my soul,

All through my soul that praised as its wish flowed visibly forth,

All through music and me! For think, had I painted the whole,

Why, there it had stood, to see, nor the process so wonder-worth: Had I written the same, made verse—

still, effect proceeds from cause, Ye know why the forms are fair, ve hear how the tale is told; It is all triumphant art, but art in obedience to laws,

Painter and poet are proud in the artist-list enrolled :-

But here is the finger of God, a flash of the will that can,

Existent behind all laws, that made them and, lo, they are!

And I know not if, save in this, such gift be allowed to man,

That out of three sounds he frame, not a fourth sound, but a star.

Consider it well: each tone of our scale in itself is naught:

It is everywhere in the world-loud, soft, and all is said:

Give it to me to use! I mix it with two in my thought:

And there! Ye have heard and seen: consider and bow the head!

Well, it is gone at last, the palace of music I reared:

Gone! and the good tears start, the praises that come too slow:

For one is assured at first, one scarce can say that he feared,

That he even gave it a thought, the gone thing was to go.

Never to be again! But many more of the kind

As good, nay, better, perchance: is this your comfort to me?

To me, who must be saved because I cling with my mind

To the same, same self, same love, same God: ay, what was, shall be.

Therefore to whom turn I but to thee. the ineffable Name?

Builder and maker, thou, of houses not made with hands!

What, have fear of change from thee who art ever the same?

Doubt that thy power can fill the heart that thy power expands?

There shall never be one lost good! What was, shall live as before;

The evil is null, is naught, is silence implying sound;

What was good shall be good, with, for evil, so much good more;

On the earth the broken arcs; in the heaven a perfect round.

All we have willed or hoped or dreamed of good shall exist; Not its semblance, but itself; no beauty, nor good, nor power

Whose voice has gone forth, but each survives for the melodist

When eternity affirms the conception of an hour,

The high that proved too high, the heroic for earth too hard,

The passion that left the ground to lose itself in the sky.

Are music sent up to God by the lover and the bard:

Enough that he heard it once: we shall hear it by and by.

And what is our failure here but a triumph's evidence

For the fulness of the days? Have we withered or agonized?

Why else was the pause prolonged but that singing might issue thence? Why rushed the discords in, but that harmony should be prized?

Sorrow is hard to bear, and doubt is slow to clear,

Each sufferer says his say, his scheme of the weal and woe:

But God has a few of us whom he whispers in the ear;

The rest may reason and welcome; 't is we musicians know.

Well, it is earth with me; silence resumes her reign:

I will be patient and proud, and soberly acquiesce.

Give me the keys. I feel for the common chord again, Sliding by semitones till I sink to the minor,-yes,

And I blunt it into a ninth, and I stand on alien ground,

Surveying awhile the heights I rolled from into the deep;

Which, hark, I have dared and done, for my resting-place is found, The C Major of this life: so, now I will 1864. try to sleep.

RABBI BEN EZRA

Grow old along with me! The best is yet to be, The last of life, for which the first was made:

Our times are in his hand Who saith, "A whole I planned,

Youth shows but half; trust God: see all, nor be afraid!"

Not that, amassing flowers, Youth sighed, "Which rose make ours,

Which lily leave and then as best re-call?" Not that, admiring stars, It yearned, "Nor Jove, nor Mars;

Mine be some figured flame which blends, transcends them all!"

Not for such hopes and fears Annulling youth's brief years, Do I remonstrate: folly wide the mark! Rather I prize the doubt Low kinds exist without, Finished and finite clods, untroubled by a spark.

Poor vaunt of life indeed, Were man but formed to feed On joy, to solely seek and find a feast: Such feasting ended, then As sure an end to men: Irks care the crop-full bird? Frets doubt the maw-crammed beast?

Rejoice we are allied To that which doth provide And not partake, effect and not receive! A spark disturbs our clod; Nearer we hold of God Who gives, than of his tribes that take. I must believe.

Then, welcome each rebuff That turns earth's smoothness rough, Each sting that bids nor sit nor stand but go!

Be our joys three-parts pain! Strive, and hold cheap the strain; Learn, nor account the pang; dare, never grudge the throe!

For thence,—a paradox Which comforts while it mocks,— Shall life succeed in that it seems to fail: What Taspired to be, And was not, comforts me:

A brute I might have been, but would not sink i' the scale.

What is he but a brute Whose flesh has soul to suit, Whose spirit works lest arms and legs want play? To man, propose this test-Thy body at its best, How far can that project thy soul on its lone way?

Yet gifts should prove their use: I own the Past profuse Of power each side, perfection every turn: Eyes, ears took in their dole, Brain treasured up the whole; Should not the heart beat once "How good to live and learn"?

Not once beat "Praise be thine! I see the whole design, I, who saw power, see now Love perfect too:

Perfect I call thy plan: Thanks that I was a man! Maker, remake, complete,—I trust what thou shalt do!"

Our soul, in its rose-mesh Pulled ever to the earth, still yearns for rest: Would we some prize might hold

For pleasant is this flesh:

Would we some prize might hold
To match those manifold Possessions of the brute,—gain most, as we did best!

Let us not always say,
"Spite of this flesh to day
I strove, made head, gained ground upon the whole!"
As the bird wings and sings,
Let us cry, "All good things
Are ours, nor soul helps flesh more, now, than flesh helps soul!"

Therefore I summon age
To grant youth's heritage,
Life's struggle having so far reached its term:
Thence shall I pass, approved
A man, for aye removed
From the developed brute; a God though

And I shall thereupon
Take rest, ere I be gone
Once more on my adventure brave and new:

in the germ.

Fearless and unperplexed,
When I wage battle next,
What weapons to select, what armor to indue.

Youth ended, I shall try
My gain or loss thereby;
Leave the fire ashes, what survives is gold:
And I shall weigh the same,

And I shall weigh the same,
Give life its praise or blame;
Young, all lay in dispute; I shall know,
being old.

For note, when evening shuts,
A certain moment cuts
The deed off, calls the glory from the gray:

A whisper from the west Shoots—"Add this to the rest. Take it and try its worth: here dies another day."

So, still within this life, Though lifted o'er its strife, Let me discern, compare, pronounce at last.

"This rage was right i' the main,

That acquiescence vain:
The Future I may face now I have proved the Past."

For more is not reserved
To man, with soul just nerved
To act to-morrow what he learns to-day:
Here, work enough to watch
The Master work, and catch Hints of the proper craft, tricks of the tool's true play.

As it was better, youth
Should strive, through acts uncouth,
Toward making, than repose on aught found made:
So, better, age, exempt
From strife, should know, than tempt
Further. Thou waitedstage: wait death

Enough now, if the Right
And Good and Infinite
Be named here, as thou callest thy hand
thine own,

With knowledge absolute, Subject to no dispute

nor be afraid!

From fools that crowded youth, nor let thee feel alone.

Be there, for once and all,
Severed great minds from small,
Announced to each his station in the Past!
Was I, the world arraigned,

Were they, my soul disdained, Right? Let age speak the truth and give us peace at last!

Now, who shall arbitrate?
Ten men love what I hate,
Shun what I follow, slight what I receive;

Ten, who in ears and eyes
Match me; we all surmise,
They this thing, and I that: whom shall my soul believe?

Not on the vulgar mass Called "work," must sentence pass, Things done, that took the eye and had the price;

O'er which, from level stand,
The low world laid its hand,
Found straightway to its mind, could value in a trice:

But all, the world's coarse thumb And finger failed to plumb, So passed in making up the main account:

All instincts immature, All purposes unsure,

That weighed not as his work, yet swelled the man's amount:

Thoughts hardly to be packed Into a narrow act.

Fancies that broke through language and escaped;

All I could never be, All, men ignored in me.

This, I was worth to God, whose wheel the pitcher shaped.

Ay, note that Potter's wheel, That metaphor! and feel

Why time spins fast, why passive lies our clay,

Thou, to whom fools propound, When the wine makes its round,

"Since life fleets, all is change; the Past gone, seize to-day!"

Fool! All that is, at all, Lasts ever, past recall;

Earth changes, but thy soul and God stand sure:

What entered into thee, That was, is, and shall be:

Time's wheel runs back or stops: Potter and clay endure.

He fixed thee 'mid this dance Of plastic circumstance,

This Present, thou, for sooth, would fain arrest:

Machinery just meant To give thy soul its bent.

Try thee and turn thee forth, sufficiently impressed.

What though the earlier grooves, Which ran the laughing loves

Around thy base, no longer pause and press?

What though, about thy rim, Skull-things in order grim

Grow out, in graver mood, obey the sterner stress?

Look not thou down but up!

To uses of a cup. The festal board, lamp's flash and trumpet's peal.

The new wine's foaming flow,

The master's lips aglow!

Thou, heaven's consummate cup, what needst thou with earth's wheel?

But I need, now as then,

Thee, God, who mouldest men:

And since, not even while the whirl was

Did I—to the wheel of life With shapes and colors rife,

Bound dizzily-mistake my end, to slake thy thirst:

So, take and use thy work:

Amend what flaws may lurk,

What strain o' the stuff, what warpings past the aim!

My times be in thy hand! Perfect the cup as planned!

Let age approve of youth, and death complete the same!

CALIBAN UPON SETEBOS:

OR, NATURAL THEOLOGY IN THE ISLAND

"Thou thoughtest that I was altogether such an one as thyself."

['WILL sprawl, now that the heat of day is best.

Flat on his belly in the pit's much mire. With elbows wide, fists clenched to prop his chin.

And, while he kicks both feet in the cool slush,

And feels about his spine small eft-things course,

Run in and out each arm, and make him laugh: And while above his head a pompion-

Coating the cave-top as a brow its eve. Creeps down to touch and tickle hair and beard.

And now a flower drops with a bee inside, And now a fruit to snap at, catch and crunch,-

He looks out o'er you sea which sunbeams cross

And recross till they weave a spider-web. (Meshes of fire, some great fish breaks [please. at times,)

And talks to his own self, howe'er he Touching that other, whom his dam called God.

Because to talk about Him, vexes---ha, Could He but know! and time to vex is

When talk is safer than in winter-time. Moreover Prosper and Miranda sleep

In confidence he drudges at their task, And it is good to chent the pair, and gibe, Letting the rank tongue blossom into speech.

Setebos, Setebos, and Setebos!

'Thinketh, He dwelleth i' the cold o' the moon.

"Thinketh He made it, with the sun to match,

But not the stars; the stars came otherwise;

Only made clouds, winds, meteors, such as that:

Also this isle, what lives and grows thereon,

And snaky sea which rounds and ends the same.

'Thinketh, it came of being ill at ease: He hated that He cannot change His cold,

Nor cure its ache. 'Hath spied an icy

That longed to 'scape the rock-stream where she lived,

And thaw herself within the lukewarm brine

O' the lazy sea her stream thrusts far amid.

A crystal spike 'twixt two warm walls of wave:

Only, she ever sickened, found repulse
At the other kind of water, not her life, (Green-dense and dim-delicious, bred o'
the sun,)

Flounced back from bliss she was not born to breathe.

And in her old bounds buried her despair, Hating and loving warmth alike: so He.

'Thinketh, He made thereat the sun, this isle,

Trees and the fowls here, beast and creeping thing.

You otter, sleek-wet, black, lithe as a leech:

You auk, one fire-eye in a ball of foam, That floats and feeds; a certain badger brown

He hath watched hunt with that slant whitewedge eye

By moonlight; and the pie with the long tongue

That pricks deep into oakwarts for a worm,

And says a plain word when she finds her prize, [selves

But will not eat the ants; the ants them-That build a wall of seeds and settled stalks

About their hole—He made all these and more,

Made all we see, and us, in spite: how else?

He could not, Himself, make a second self

To be His mate; as well have made Himself:

He would not make what He mislikes or slights,

An eyesore to Him, or not worth His pains:

But did, in envy, listlessness or sport, Make what Himself would fain, in a manner, be—

Weaker in most points, stronger in a few, Worthy, and yet mere playthings all the while,

Things He admires and mocks too,—that is it.

Because, so brave, so better though they be,

It nothing skills if He begin to plague. Look now, I melt a gourd-fruit into mash, Add honeycomb and pods, I have perceived,

Which bite like finches when they bill and kiss,—

Then, when froth rises bladdery, drink up all,

Quick, quick, till maggots scamper through my brain;

Last, throw me on my back i' the seeded thyme,

And wanton, wishing I were born a bird. Put case, unable to be what I wish,

I yet could make a live bird out of clay:
Would not I take clay, pinch my Caliban
Able to fly?—for, there, see, he hath
wings,

And great comb like the hoopoe's to admire,

And there, a sting to do his foes offence, There, and I will that he begin to live, Fly to you rock-top, nip me off the horns Of grigs high up that make the merry din Saucy through their veined wings, and mind me not.

In which feat, if his leg snapped, brittle clay,

And he lay stupid-like,—why I should laugh;

And if he, spying me should fall to weep Beseech me to be good, repair his wrong, Bid his poor leg smart less or grow again.—

Well, as the chance were this might take or else

Not take my fancy: I might hear his cry And give the manikin three sound legs for one, Or pluck the other off, leave him like an egg,

And lessoned he was mine and merely clay.

Were this no pleasure lying in the thyme,

Drinking the mash, with brain become alive

Making and marring clay at will? So He.

'Thinketh such shows nor right nor wrong in Him,

Nor kind nor cruel: He is strong and Lord.

'Am strong myself compared to yonder crabs

That march now from the mountain to the sea:

'Let twenty pass and stone the twentyfirst,

Loving not, hating not, just choosing so.
'Say, the first straggler that boasts purple spots

Shall join the file, one pincer twisted off; 'Say this bruised fellow shall receive a worm.

And two worms he whose nippers end in red:

As it likes me each time I do: so He.

Well then, 'supposeth He is good i' the main,

Placable if His mind and ways were guessed,

But rougher than His handiwork, be sure!

Oh, He hath made things worthier than Himself.

And envieth that, so helped, such things do more

Than He who made them! What consoles but this?

That they, unless through Him, do naught at all,

And must submit; what other use in things?

'Hath cut a pipe of pithless elder-joint That, blown through, gives exact the scream o' the jay

When from her wing you twitch the feathers blue:

Sound this, and little birds that hate the jay

Flock within stone's throw, glad their foe is hurt:

Put case such pipe could prattle and boast forsooth, [thing, "I catch the birds, I am the crafty

I make the cry my maker cannot make With his great round mouth; he must blow through mine!"

Would not I smash it with my foot? So He.

But wherefore rough, why cold and ill at ease?

Aha, that is a question! Ask, for that, What knows,—the something over Setebos

That made Him, or He, may be, found and fought,

Worsted, drove off and did to nothing, perchance.

There may be something quiet o'er His head,

Out of His reach, that feels nor joy nor grief,

Since both derive from weakness in some way.

I joy because the quails come; would not joy

Could I bring quails here when I have a mind:

This Quiet, all it hath a mind to, doth.
'Esteemeth stars the outposts of its couch,

But never spends much thought nor care that way.

It may look up, work up, the worse for those

It works on! 'Careth but for Setebos
The many-handed as a cuttle-fish,

Who, making Himself feared through what He does,
Looks up, first, and perceives he cannot soar

To what is quiet and hath happy life;

Next looks down here, and out of very spite

Makes this a bauble-world to ape you real,

These good things to match those as hips do grapes.

'Tis solace making baubles, ay, and sport.

Himself peeped late, eyed Prosper at his books

Careless and lofty, lord now of the isle; Vexed, 'stitched a book of broad leaves, arrow-shaped,

arrow-shaped,
Wrote thereon, he knows what, prodigious words;

Has peeled a wand and called it by a name:

Weareth at whiles for an enchanter's robe

The eyed skin of a supple oncelot;

And hath an ounce sleeker than youngling mole,

A four legged serpent he makes cower and couch,

Now snarl, now hold its breath and mind his eye,

And saith she is Miranda and my wife: 'Keeps for his Ariel a tall pouch-bill crane

He bids go wade for fish and straight disgorge:

Also a sea-beast, lumpish, which he snared,

Blinded the eyes of and brought somewhat tame,

And split its toe-webs, and now pens the drudge

In a hole o'the rock, and calls him Caliban;

A bitter heart that bides its time and bites.

'Plays thus at being Prosper in a way.

Taketh his mirth with make-believes: so

He.

His dam held that the Quiet made all things

Which Setebos vexed only: 'holds not so.

Who made them weak, meant weakness He might vex.

Had He meant other, while His hand was in,

Why not make horny eyes no thorn could prick,

Or plate my scalp with bone against the snow,

Or overscale my flesh 'neath joint and joint Like an ore's armor? Ay,—so spoil His sport!

He is the One now: only He doth all.

ito is the one now to only 110 doon with

'Saith. He may like, perchance, what profits him.

Ay, himself loves what does him good:

but why?

'Gets good no otherwise. This blinded beast

Loves whose places flesh-meat on his nose,

But, had he eyes, would want no help, but hate

Or love, just as it liked him: he hath

Also it pleases Setebos to work,

Use all His hands, and exercise much craft, [worked. By no means for the love of what is

'Tasteth himself, no finer good i' the world

When all goes right, in this safe summertime,

And he wants little, hungers, aches not much,

Than trying what to do with wit and strength.

Talls to make something: 'piled you pile of turfs,

And squared and stuck there squares of soft white chalk,

And, with a fish-tooth, scratched a moon on each,

And set up endwise certain spikes of tree,

And crowned the whole with a sloth's skull a-top,

Found dead i' the woods, too hard for one to kill.

No use at all i' the work, for work's sole sake;

'Shall some day knock it down again: so He.

'Saith He is terrible: watch His feats in proof!

One hu ricane will spoil six good months' hope.

He hath a spite against me, that I know, Just as He favors Prosper, who knows why?

So it is, all the same, as well I find.

'Wove wattles half the winter, fenced them firm

With stone and stake to stop shetortoises

Crawling to lay their eggs here: well,
one wave,

Feeling the foot of Him upon its neck, Gaped as a snake does, lolled out its large tongue,

large tongue,
And licked the whole labor flat: so much for spite.

'Saw a ball flame down late (yonder it lies)

Where half an hour before, I slept i' the shade:

Often they scatter sparkles: there is force!

'Dug up a newt He may have envied once

And turned to stone, shut up inside a stone.

Please Him and hinder this?—What Prosper does?

Aha, if He would tell me how! Not He! There is the sport: discover how or die! All need not die, for of the things o' the isle

Some flee afar, some dive, some run up trees;

Those at His mercy,—why they please Him most

When . . . when . . . well, never try the same way twice!

Repeat what act has pleased, He may grow wroth.

You must not know His ways, and play Him off,

Sure of the issue. Doth the like himself:

'Spareth a squirrel that it nothing fears
But steals the nut from underneath my thumb,

And when I threat, bites stoutly in defence:

'Spareth an urchin that contrariwise, Curls up into a ball, pretending death For fright at my approach: the two ways please.

But what would move my choler more than this,

That either creature counted on its life To-morrow and next day and all days to come

Saying, forsooth, in the inmost of its heart.

"Because he did so yesterday with me, And otherwise with such another brute, So must he do henceforth and always."— Av?

Would teach the reasoning couple what "must" means!

'Doth as he likes, or wherefore Lord?

'Conceiveth all things will continue thus, And we shall have to live in fear of Him So long as He lives, keeps his strength: no change.

If He have done His best, make no new world

To please Him more, so leave off watching this,—

If He surprise not even the Quiet's self Some strange day,—or, suppose, grow into it

As grubs grow butterflies: else, here we are, [all.

And there is He, and nowhere help at

'Believeth with the life, the pain shall stop.

His dam held different, that after death
He both plagued enemies and feasted
friends:

Idly! He doth His worst in this our life.

Giving just respite lest we die through pain,

Saving last pain for worst,—with which, an end.

Meanwhile, the best way to escape His ire

Is, not to seem too happy. 'Sees, him-

Yonder two flies, with purple films and pink,

Bask on the pompion-bell above: kills both.

'Sees two black painful beetles roll their ball

On head and tail as if to save their lives:
Moves them the stick away they strive to clear.

Even so,' would have him misconceive, suppose

This Caliban strives hard and ails no less, And always, above all else, envies Him; Wherefore he mainly dances on dark nights,

Moans in the sun, gets under holes to laugh,

And never speaks his mind save housed as now:

Outside, 'groans, curses. If He caught me here,

O'erheard this speech, and asked "What chucklest at?"

'Would, to appease Him, cut a finger off, Or of my three kid yearlings burn the best,

Or let the toothsome apples rot on tree, Or push my tame beast for the orc to taste:

While myself lit a fire, and made a song And sung it, "What I hate, be consecrate, To celebrate Thee and Thy state, no mate For Thee; what see for envy in poor me?"

Hoping the while, since evils sometimes mend.

Warts rub away and sores are cured with slime,

That some strange day, will either the Quiet catch

And conquer Setebos, or likelier He Decrepit may doze, doze, as good as die.

[What, what? A curtain o'er the world at once!

Crickets stop hissing; not a bird—or,

There sends His raven that has told Him all!

It was fool's play, this prattling! Ha!

The wind

Shoulders the pillared dust, death's house o' the move,

And fast invading fires begin! White blaze—

A tree's head snaps—and there, there, there, there,

His thunder follows! Fool to gibe at Him!

Lo! Lieth flat and loveth Setebos! Maketh his teeth meet through his upper lip, [month Will let those quails fly, will not eat this One little mess of whelks, so he may

CONFESSIONS

What is he buzzing in my ears?
"Now that I come to die,
Do I view the world as a vale of tears?"

'scape!]

Ah, reverend sir, not I!

What I viewed there once, what I view again

Where the physic bottles stand On the table's edge,—is a suburb lane, With a wall to my bedside hand.

That lane sloped, much as the bottles do, From a house you could descry O'er the garden-wall; is the curtain blue

Or green to a healthy eye?

To mine, it serves for the old June weather

Blue above lane and wall:

And that farthest bottle labelled "Ether"

Is the house o'ertopping all.

At a terrace, somewhere near the stopper.

There watched for me, one June, A girl: I know, sir, it is improper, My poor mind is out of tune.

Only, there was a way . . . you crept Close by the side, to dodge

Eyes in the house, two eyes except:
They styled their house "The Lodge."

What right had a lounger up their lane? But, by creeping very close,

With the good wall's help,—their eyes might strain

And stretch themselves to Oes,

Yet never catch her and me together, As she left the attic, there.

By the rim of the bottle labelled "Ether,"

And stole from stair to stair,

And stood by the rose-wreathed gate Alas,

We loved, sir—used to meet:
How sad and bad and mad it was—
But, then, how it was sweet! 1864

YOUTH AND ART

It once might have been, once only:
We lodged in a street together,
You, a sparrow on the house top lonely.
I, a lone she-bird of his feather.

Your trade was with sticks and clay, You thumbed, thrust, patted and polished,

Then laughed "They will see some day Smith made, and Gibson demolished."

My business was song, song, song;
I chirped, cheeped, trilled and twittered,

"Kate Brown's on the boards ere long, And Grisi's existence embittered!"

I earned no more by a warble
Than you by a sketch in plaster:
You wanted a piece of marble,
I needed a music-master.

We studied hard in our styles,
Chipped each at a crust like Hindoos,
For air, looked out on the tiles,
For fun, watched each other's windows.

You lounged, like a boy of the South, Cap and blouse—nay, a bit of beard too:

Or you got it, rubbing your mouth With fingers the clay adhered to.

And I—soon managed to find
Weak points in the flower-fence facing,
Was forced to put up a blind
And be safe in my corset-lacing.

No harm! It was not my fault
If you never turned your eye's tail up
As I shook upon E in alt.,
Or ran the chromatic scale up:

For spring bade the sparrows pair, And the boys and girls gave guesses, And stalls in our street looked rare With bulrush and watercresses.

Why did not you pinch a flower In a pellet of clay and fling it? Why did not I put a power Of thanks in a look, or sing it?

I did look, sharp as a lynx. (And yet the memory rankles,) When models arrived, some minx Tripped up-stairs, she and her ankles.

But I think I gave you as good! "That foreign fellow,—who can know How she pays, in a playful mood.

For his tuning her that piano?" Could you say so, and never say,

"Suppose we join hands and fortunes." And I fetch her from over the way. Her, piano, and long tunes and short tunes?"

No, no: you would not be rash, Nor I rasher and something over: You've to settle yet Gibson's hash, And Grisi yet lives in clover.

But you meet the Prince at the Board, I'm queen myself at bals-paré, I've married a rich old lord,

And you 're dubbed knight and an R. A.

Each life unfulfilled, you see; It hangs still, patchy and scrappy: We have not sighed deep, laughed free, Starved, feasted, despaired,—been happy.

And nobody calls you a dunce, . And people suppose me clever: This could but have happened once, And we missed it, lost it forever.

1864.

A FACE

IF one could have that little head of hers Painted upon a background of pale gold, Such as the Tuscan's early art prefers! No shade encroaching on the matchless mould

Of those two lips, which should be opening soft

In the pure profile: not as when she laughs,

For that spoils all: but rather as if aloft Yon hyacinth, she loves so, leaned its staff's

Burden of honey-colored buds to kiss And capture 'twixt the lips apart for

Then her lithe neck, three fingers might surround,

How it should waver on the pale gold ground

Up to the fruit-shaped, perfect chin it

I know, Correggio loves to mass, in rifts Of heaven, his angel faces, orb on orb Breaking its outline, burning shades absorb: But these are only massed there, I should think. Waiting to see some wonder momently

Grow out, stand full, fade slow against

(That 's the pale ground you 'd see this sweet face by),

All heaven, meanwhile, condensed into one eye

Which fears to lose the wonder, should it wink. 1864.

PROSPICE

FEAR death?—to feel the fog in my throat.

The mist in my face,

When the snows begin, and the blasts denote

I am nearing the place,

The power of the night, the press of the

The post of the foe;

Where he stands, the Arch Fear in a visible form,

Yet the strong man must go:

For the journey is done and the summit attained.

And the barriers fall,

Though a battle's to fight ere the guerdon be gained, The reward of it all.

I was ever a fighter, so—one fight more, The best and the last! I would hate that death bandaged my eyes, and forbore, And bade me creep past.

No! let me taste the whole of it, fare like my peers The heroes of old,

Bear the brunt, in a minute pay glad life's arrears

Of pain, darkness and cold.

For sudden the worst turns the best to the brave,

The black minute's at end,

And the elements' rage, the fiend-voices that rave.

Shall dwindle, shall blend.

Shall change, shall become first a peace out of pain,

Then a light, then thy breast,

O thou soul of my soul! I shall clasp thee again.

And with God be the rest! 1861, 1864.

EPILOGUE

TO DRAMATIS PERSONÆ

WITLESS alike of will and way divine, How heaven's high with earth's low should intertwine!

Friends, I have seen through your eyes:

now use mine!

Take the least man of all mankind, as I: Look at his head and heart, find how and why

He differs from his fellows utterly:

Then, like me, watch when nature by degrees

Grows alive round him, as in Arctic seas (They said of old) the instinctive water flees

Toward some elected point of central

As though, for its sake only, roamed the flock

Of waves about the waste: awhile they mock

With radiance caught for the occasion. Of blackest hell now, now such reds and

As only heaven could fitly interfuse,—

The mimic monarch of the whirlpool, O' the current for a minute: then they wring

Up by the roots and oversweep the thing.

And hasten off, to play again elsewhere The same part, choose another peak as

They find and flatter, feast and finish there.

When you see what I tell you,—nature

About each man of us, retire, advance, As though the pageant's end were to enhance

His worth, and—once the life, his product, gained-

Roll away elsewhere, keep the strife sustained,

And show thus real, a thing the North but feigned-

When you acknowledge that one world could do

All the diverse work, old yet ever new, Divide us, each from other, me from vou.-

Why, where's the need of Temple, when the walls

O' the world are that? What use of swells and falls

From Levites' choir, Priests' cries, and trumpet-calls?

That one Face, far from vanish, rather grows.

Or decomposes but to recompose,

Become my universe that feels and knows! 1864.

DEDICATION OF THE RING AND THE BOOK

(END OF BOOK I)

Such, British Public, ve who like me not. (God love you!)—whom I yet have labored for,

Perchance more careful whose runs may read

Than erst when all, it seemed, could read who ran .-

Perchance more careless whose reads may praise

Than late when he who praised and read and wrote

Was apt to find himself the selfsame me,-

Such labor had such issue, so I wrought This are, by furtherance of such alloy, And so, by one spirt, take away its trace Till, justifiably golden, rounds my ring.

Reached thee amid thy chambers, blanched their blue.

And bared them of the glory—to drop down.

To toil for man, to suffer or to die,--This is the same voice: can thy soul know change?

Hail then, and harken from the realms of help!

Never may I commence my song, my due To God who best taught song by gift of

HERVÉ RIEL

On the sea and at the Hogue, sixteen hundred ninety-two.

Did the English fight the French,—woe to France!

And, the thirty-first of May, helterskelter through the blue,

Like a crowd of frightened porpoises a shoal of sharks pursue,

Came crowding ship on ship to Saint Malo on the Rance.

With the English fleet in view.

'T was the squadron that escaped, with the victor in full chase; First and foremost of the drove, in his great ship, Damfreville; Close on him fled, great and small,

Twenty-two good ships in all;

And they signalled to the place "Help the winners of a race!

Get us guidance, give us harbor, take us quick-or, quicker still,

Here 's the English can and will!"

Then the pilots of the place put out brisk and leaped on board;

"Why what hope or chance have ships like these to pass?" laughed they: "Rocks to starboard, rocks to port, all the passage scarred and scored, Shall the 'Formidable' here with her twelve and eighty guns Think to make the river-mouth by the single narrow way, Trust to enter where 't is ticklish for a craft of twenty tons, And with flow at full beside?

Now, 't is slackest ebb of tide. Reach the mooring? Rather say, While rock stands or water runs, Not a ship will leave the bay!"

TV

Then was called a council straight. Brief and bitter the debate:

"Here's the English at our heels; would you have them take in tow

All that's left us of the fleet, linked together stern and bow,

For a prize to Plymouth Sound? Better run the ships aground!" (Ended Damfreville his speech). "Not a minute more to wait!

Let the Captains all and each Shove ashore, then blow up, burn the vessels on the beach!

France must undergo her fate.

"Give the word!" But no such word Was ever spoke or heard:

For up stood, for out stepped, for in struck amid all these

- A Captain? A Lieutenant? A Matefirst, second, third?

No such man of mark, and meet With his betters to compete!

But a simple Breton sailor pressed by Tourville for the fleet,

A poor coasting-pilot he, Hervé Riel the Croisickese.

VI

And "What mockery or malice have we here?" cries Hervé Riel:

"Are you mad, you Malouins? Are you cowards, fools, or rogues?

Talk to me of rocks and shoals, me who took the soundings, tell

On my fingers every bank, every shallow, every swell,

'Twixt the offing here and Grève where the river disembogues?

Are you bought by English gold? Is it love the lying's for?

Morn and eve, night and day,

Have I piloted your bay,

Entered free and anchored fast at the foot of Solidor.

Burn the fleet and ruin France? That were worse than fifty Hogues! Sirs, they know I speak the truth! Sirs, believe me there's a way!

Only let me lead the line,

Have the biggest ship to steer, Get this 'Formidable' clear,

Make the others follow mine, And I lead them, most and least, by a passage I know well,

Right to Solidor past Grève, And there lay them safe and sound: And if one ship misbehave,

And if one ship misbehave,

-Keel so much as grate the ground,

Why I've nothing but my life,—here's my head!" cries Hervé Riel.

VII

Not a minute more to wait,
"Steer us in, then, small and great!
Take the helm, lead the line, save the squadron!" cried its chief.
Captains, give the sailor place!
He is Admiral, in brief.
Still the north-wind, by God's grace!
See the noble fellow's face
As the big ship, with a bound,
Clears the entry like a hound,

Keeps the passage as its inch of way were the wide sea's profound!

See, safe through shoal and rock,

How they follow in a flock, Not a ship that misbehaves, not a keel that grates the ground,

Not a spar that comes to grief! The peril, see, is past,

All are harbored to the last, And just as Hervé Riel hollas "Anchor!"—sure as fate,

Up the English come—too late!

VIII

So, the storm subsides to calm: They see the green trees wave On the heights o'erlooking Grève. Hearts that bled are stanched with balm, "Just our rapture to enhance,

Let the English rake the bay, Gnash their teeth and glare askance As they cannonade away!

Neath rampired Solidor pleasant riding on the Rance!"

How hope succeeds despair on each Captain's countenance!

Out burst all with one accord, "This is Paradise for Hell! Let France, let France's King Thank the man that did the thing!" What a shout, and all one word, "Hervé Riel!"

As he stepped in front once more, Not a symptom of surprise In the frank blue Breton eyes, Just the same man as before.

IX

Then said Damfreville, "My friend, I must speak out at the end,
Though I find the speaking hard.
Praise is deeper than the lips:
You have saved the King his ships,
You must name your own reward.
'Faith, our sun was near eclipse!
Demand whate'er you will,
France remains your debtor still.
Ask to heart's content and have! or my name's not Damfreville."

v

Then a beam of fun outbroke
On the bearded mouth that spoke,
As the honest heart laughed through
Those frank eyes of Breton blue:
"Since I needs must say my say,
Since on board the duty's done,
And from Malo Roads to Croisic Point,
what is it but a run?—
Since 't is ask and have, I may—
Since the others go ashore—

Come! A good whole holiday!
Leave to go and see my wife, whom I call the Belle Aurore!"
That he asked and that he got,—nothing more.

XI.

Name and deed alike are lost:
Not a pillar nor a post
In his Croisic keeps alive the feat as it befell;
Not a head in white and black
On a single fishing-smack,

In memory of the man but for whom had gone to wrack

All that France saved from the fight whence England bore the bell.

Go to Paris: rank on rank Search the heroes flung pell-mell

On the Louvre, face and flank!
You shall look long enough ere you

You shall look long enough ere you come to Hervé Riel.

So, for better and for worse, Hervé Riel, accept my verse,

In my verse, Hervé Řiel, do thou once more

Save the squadron, honor France, love thy wife, the Belle Aurore! 1871.

FIFINE AT THE FAIR

PROLOGUE

AMPHIBIAN

THE fancy I had to-day,
Fancy which turned a fear!
1 swam far out in the bay,
Since waves laughed warm and clear.

I lay and looked at the sun,
The noon-sun looked at me:
Between us two, no one
Live creature, that I could see.

Yes! There came floating by Me, who lay floating too, Such a strange butterfly! Creature as dear as new:

Because the membraned wings So wonderful, so wide, So sun-suffused, were things Like soul and naught beside.

A handbreadth overhead!
All of the sea my own,
It owned the sky instead;
Both of us were alone.

I never shall join its flight,
For, naught buoys flesh in air.
If it touch the sea—good night!
Death sure and swift waits there.

Can the insect feel the better
For watching the uncouth play
Of limbs that slip the fetter,
Pretend as they were not clay?

Undoubtedly I rejoice
That the air comports so well
With a creature which had the choice
Of the land once. Who can tell?

What if a certain soul
Which early slipped its sheath,
And has for its home the whole
Of heaven, thus look beneath,

Thus watch one who, in the world,
Both lives and likes life's way;
Nor wishes the wings unfurled
That sleep in the worm, they say?

But sometimes when the weather
Is blue, and warm waves tempt
To free one's self of tether,
And try a life exempt

From worldly noise and dust,
In the sphere which overbrims
With passion and thought,—why, just
Unable to fly, one swims!

By passion and thought upborne, One smiles to one's self—"They fare Scarce better, they need not scorn Our sea, who live in the air!"

Emancipate through passion
And thought, with sea for sky,
We substitute, in a fashion,
For heaven—poetry:

Which sea, to all intent,
Gives flesh such noon-disport
As a finer element
Affords the spirit-sort.

Whatever they are, we seem:
Imagine the thing they know;
All deeds they do, we dream;
Can heaven be else but so?

And meantime, yonder streak
Meets the horizon's verge;
That is the land, to seek
If we tire or dread the surge

Land the solid and safe—
To welcome again (confess!)
When, high and dry, we chafe
The body, and don the dress.

Does she look, pity, wonder
At one who mimies flight,
Swims—heaven above, sea under,
Yet always earth in sight?

1872.

EPILOGUE

THE HOUSEHOLDER

SAVAGE I was sitting in my house, late, lone:

Dreary, weary with the long day's work:

Head of me, heart of me, stupid as a stone:

Tongue-tied now, now blaspheming like a Turk :

When, in a moment, just a knock, call,

Half a pang and all a rapture, there again were we!-

"What, and is it really you again?" quoth I:

"I again, what else did you expect?" quoth She.

"Never mind, hie away from this old house-

Every crumbling brick embrowned with sin and shame!

Quick, in its corners ere certain shapes arouse!

Let them—every devil of the night lay claim,

Make and mend, or rap and rend, for me! Good-by!

God be their guard from disturbance at their glee,

Till, crash, comes down the carcass in a heap!" quoth I:

"Nay, but there's a decency required!" quoth She.

"Ah, but if you knew how time has dragged, days, nights!

All the neighbor-talk with man and maid—such men!

All the fuss and trouble of street-sounds, window-sights:

All the worry of flapping door and echoing roof; and then,

All the fancies . . . Who were they had leave, dared try

Darker arts that almost struck despair in me?

If you knew but how I dwelt down here!" quoth I:

"And was I so better off up there?" quoth She.

"Help and get it over! Reunited to his wife

(How draw up the paper lets the parish people know?)

Lies M. or N., departed from this life, Day the this or that, month and year the so and so.

What i'the way of final flourish? Prose, verse? Try!

Affliction sore long time he bore, or, what is it to be?

Till God did please to grant him ease.

Do end!" quoth I:

"I end with—Love is all, and Death is nought!" quoth She.

HOUSE

SHALL I sonnet-sing you about myself? Do I live in a house you would like to see?

Is it scant of gear, has it store of pelf? "Unlock my heart with a sonnet-key?"

Invite the world, as my betters have done?

"Take notice: this building remains on view.

Its suites of reception every one,

Its private apartment and bedroom too:

"For a ticket, apply to the Publisher." No: thanking the public, I must decline.

A peep through my window, if folk pre-

But, please you, no foot over threshold of mine!

I have mixed with a crowd and heard free talk

In a foreign land where an earthquake

And a house stood gaping, naught to balk

Man's eye wherever he gazed or glanced.

The whole of the frontage shaven sheer, The inside gaped: exposed to day,

Right and wrong and common and

Bare, as the palm of your hand, it lay.

The owner? Oh, he had been crushed, no doubt!

"Odd tables and chairs for a man of wealth!

What a parcel of musty old books about! He smoked,—no wonder he lost his health!

"I doubt if he bathed before he dressed. A brasier?—the pagan, he burned perfumes!

You see it is proved, what the neighbors guessed:

His wife and himself had separate rooms,"

Friends, the good man of the house at least

Kept house to himself till an earthquake came:

'T is the fall of its frontage permits you feast

On the inside arrangement you praise or blame.

Outside should suffice for evidence:
And whose desires to penetrate

Deeper, must dive by the spirit-sense— No optics like yours, at any rate!

"Hoity-toity! A street to explore, Your house the exception!" With this same key Shakespeare unlocked his heart!"--

Once more,

Did Shakespeare? If so, the less Shakespeare he! 1876.

FEARS AND SCRUPLES

HERE's my case. Of old I used to love him,

This same unseen friend, before I knew:

Dream there was none like him, none above him,—

Wake to hope and trust my dream was true.

Loved I not his letters full of beauty?
Not his actions famous far and wide?
Absent, he would know I vowed him duty;

Present, he would find me at his side.

Pleasant fancy! for I had but letters, Only knew of actions by hearsay:

He himself was busied with my betters; What of that? My turn must come some day.

"Some day" proving—no day! Here's the puzzle.

Passed and passed my turn is. Why complain?

He's so busied! If I could but muzzle People's foolish mouths that give me pain!

"Letters?" (hear them!) "You a judge of writing?

Ask the experts! How they shake the head

O'er these characters, your friend's inditing-

Call them forgery from A to Z!

"Actions? Where's your certain proof (they bother)

"He, of all you find so great and

good,

He, he only, claims this, that, the other Action—claimed by men, a multitude?"

I can simply wish I might refute you,
Wish my friend would,—by a word, a wink.—

Bid me stop that foolish mouth,—you brute you!

He keeps absent,—why, I cannot think.

Never mind! Though foolishness may flout me,

One thing 's sure enough: 't is neither frost.

No, nor fire, shall freeze or burn from out me

Thanks for truth—though falsehood, gained—though lost.

All my days, I'll go the softlier, sadlier, For that dream's sake! How forget the thrill

Through and through me as I thought
"The gladlier

Lives my friend because I love him still!"

Ah, but there 's a menace some one utters!

"What and if your friend at home play tricks?

Peep at hide-and-seek behind the shutters?

Mean your eyes should pierce through solid bricks?

"What and if he, frowning, wake you, dreamy?

Lay on you the blame that bricks-

Say, 'At least I saw who did not see me.
Does see now, and presently shall feel'?

"Why, that makes your friend a monster!" say you:

"Had his house no window? At first

Would you not have hailed him?"
Hush, I pray you!

What if this friend happened to be-God? 1876.

NATURAL MAGIC

All I can say is-I saw it!

The room was as bare as your hand.

I locked in the swarth little lady,—I swear,

From the head to the foot of her—well, quite as bare!

"No Nautch shall cheat me," said I, "taking my stand

At this bolt which I draw!" And this bolt—I withdraw it,

And there laughs the lady, not bare, but embowered

With—who knows what verdure, o'erfruited, o'erflowered? Impossible! Only—I saw it!

All I can sing is—I feel it!

This life was as blank as that room;
I let you pass in here. Precaution, indeed?

Walls, ceiling and floor,—not a chance for a weed!

Wide opens the entrance: where 's cold now, where 's gloom?

No May to sow seed here, no June to reveal it,

Behold you enshrined in these blooms of your bringing,

These fruits of your bearing—nay, birds of your winging!

A fairy-tale! Only—I feel it! 1876.

MAGICAL NATURE

FLOWER—I never fancied, jewel—I profess you!

Bright I see and soft I feel the outside of a flower.

of a flower.

Save but glow inside and—jewel, I should guess you,

Dim to sight and rough to touch: the glory is the dower.

You, for sooth, a flower? Nay, my love, a jewel—

Jewel at no mercy of a moment in your prime!

Time may fray the flower-face: kind be time or cruel,

Jewel, from each facet, flash your laugh at time! 1876.

APPEARANCES

AND so you found that poor room dull, Dark, hardly to your taste, my dear? Its features seemed unbeautiful: But this I know—'t was there, not here, You plighted troth to me, the word Which—ask that poor room how it heard.

And this rich room obtains your praise Unqualified,—so bright, so fair, So all whereat perfection stays?

Ay, but remember—here, not there.

The other word was spoken!—Ask
This rich room how you dropped the mask!

EPILOGUE

TO THE PACCHIAROTTO VOLUME

μεστοί . . . οί δ' ἀμφορῆς οἴνου μέλανος ἀνθοσμίου.

"THE poets pour us wine—"
Said the dearest poet I ever knew,
Dearest and greatest and best to me.
You clamor athirst for poetry—
We pour. "But when shall a vintage

be"—
You cry—" strong grape, squeezed

gold from screw,
Yet sweet juice, flavored flowery-fine?
That were indeed the wine!"

One pours your cup—stark strength, Meat for a man; and you eye the pulp Strained, turbid still, from the viscous blood

Of the snaky bough: and you grumble "Good!

For it swells resolve, breeds hardihood; Dispatch it, then, in a single gulp!" So, down, with a wry face, goes at length

The liquor: stuff for strength.

One pours your cup—sheer sweet,
The fragrant fumes of a year condensed:

Suspicion of all that 's ripe or rathe, From the bud on branch to the grass in swathe,

"We suck mere milk of the seasons," saith

A curl of each nostril--"dew, dispensed

Nowise for nerving man to feat:
Boys sip such honeyed sweet!"

And thus who wants wine strong, Waves each sweet smell of the year away;

Who likes to swoon as the sweets suffuse

His brain with a mixture of beams and dews

Turned syrupy drink—rough strength eschews;

"What though in our veins your winestock stay?

The lack of the bloom does our palate wrong.

Give us wine sweet, not strong!"

Yet wine is-some affirm-

Prime wine is found in the world somewhere,

Of portable strength with sweet to match.

You double your heart its dose, yet catch—

As the draught descends—a violetsmatch,

Softness—however it came there,

Through drops expressed by the fire and worm:

Strong sweet wine—some affirm.

Body and bouquet both?

'Tis easy to ticket a bottle so;
But what was the case in the cask, my friends?

Cask? Nay, the vat—where the maker mends

His strong with his sweet (you suppose) and blends

and blends
His rough with his smooth, till none
can know

How it comes you may tipple, nothing loth.

Body and bouquet both.

"You" being just—the world.

No poets—who turn, themselves, the winch

Of the press; no critics—I'll even say, (Being flustered and easy of faith today,)

Who for love of the work have learned the way

Till themselves produce home-made, at a pinch:

No! You are the world, and wine ne'er purled

Except to please the world!

"For, oh the common heart! And, ah the irremissible sin

Of poets who please themselves, not us! Strong wine yet sweet wine pouring thus!

How please still—Pindar and Æschylus! Drink-dipped into by the bearded chin

Alike and the bloomy lip—no part Denied the common heart!

"And might we get such grace,

And did you moderns but stock our vault

With the true half-brandy half-attar-gul, How would seniors indulge at a hearty

While juniors tossed off their thimble ful!

Our Shakespeare and Milton escaped your fault,

So, they reign supreme o'er the weaker race

That wants the ancient grace!"

If I paid myself with words

(As the French say well) I were dupe indeed!

I were found in belief that you quaffed and bowsed

At your Shakespeare the whole day long, caroused

In your Milton pottle-deep nor drowsed A moment of night—toped on, took heed

Of nothing like modern cream-andcurds.

Pay me with deeds, not words!

For—see your cellarage!

There are forty barrels with Shakespeare's brand.

Some five or six are abroach: the rest Stand spigoted, fauceted. Try and test What yourselves call best of the very best!

How comes it that still untouched they stand?

Why don't you try tap, advance a stage With the rest in the cellarage?

For—see your cellarage!

There are four big butts of Milton's brew.

How comes it you make old drips and drops

Do duty, and there devotion stops?

Leave such an abyss of malt and hops
Embellied in butts which bungs still glue?

[rage 1]

You hate your bard! A fig for your Free him from cellarage!

T is said I brew stiff drink,

But the deuce a flavor of grape is there.

Hardly a May-go-down, 't is just A sort of a gruff Go-down-it-must-No Merry-go-down, no gracious gust Commingles the racy with Springtide's rare!

"What wonder," say you, "that we cough, and blink

At Autumn's heady drink?"

Is it a fancy, friends?

Mighty and mellow are never mixed, Though mighty and mellow be born at once.

Sweet for the future,—strong for the nonce!

Stuff you should stow away, ensconce In the deep and dark, to be found fastfixed

At the century's close: such time strength spends A-sweetening for my friends!

And then—why, what you quaff

With a smack of lip and a cluck of tongue.

Is leakage and leavings—just what haps From the tun some learned taster taps With a promise "Prepare your watery chaps!

Here 's properest wine for old and young!

Dispute its perfection? You make us laugh!

Have faith, give thanks, butquaff!"

Leakage, I say, or-worse-Leavings suffice, pot-valiant souls.

Somebody, brimful, long ago, Frothed flagon he drained to the dregs;

and, lo. Down whisker and beard what an overflow!

Lick spilth that has trickled from classic jowls,

Sup the single scene, sip the only verse-Old wine, not new and worse!

I grant you: worse by much!

Renounce that new where you never gained

One glow at heart, one gleam at head, And stick to the warrant of age instead!

No dwarf's-lap! Fatten, by giants fed! You fatten, with oceans of drink undrained?

You feed-who would choke did a cobweb smutch

The Age you love so much?

A mine's beneath a moor:

Acres of moor roof fathoms of mine Which diamonds dot where you please to dig :

Yet who plies spade for the bright and big?

Your product is—truffles, you hunt with a pig!

Since bright-and-big, when a man would dine,

Suits badly: and therefore the Kohi noor

May sleep in mine 'neath moor!

Wine, pulse in might from me! It may never emerge in must from Never fill cask nor furnish can,

Never end sweet, which strong began-God's gift to gladden the heart of man: But spirit's at proof, I promise that!

No sparing of juice spoils what should he

Fit brewage—mine for me.

Man's thoughts and loves and hates! Earth is my vineyard, these grew there:

From grape of the ground, I made or marred

My vintage; easy the task or hard, Who set it—his praise be my reward!

Earth's vield! Who yearn for the Dark Blue Sea's.

Let them "lay, pray, bray"—the addlepates!

Mine be Man's thoughts, loves, hates!

But some one says, "Good Sir!"

('T is a worthy versed in what concerns The making such labor turn out well,) "You don't suppose that the nosegay-

Needs always come from the grape? Each bell

At your foot, each bud that your culture spurns

The very cowslip would act like myrrh On the stiffest brew-good Sir!

" Cowslips, abundant birth

O'er meadow and hillside, vineyard

—Like a schoolboy's scrawlings in and out

Distasteful lesson-book—all about

Greece and Rome, victory and rout-Love-verses instead of such vain ado! So, fancies frolic it o'er the earth Where thoughts have rightlier birth.

" Nay, thoughtlings they themselves; Loves, hates-in little and less and least!

Thoughts? 'What is a man beside a mount!'

Loves? 'Absent—poor lovers the min-utes count!'

Hates? 'Fie—Pope's letters to Martha Blount!'

These furnish a wine for a children's

Insipid to man, they suit the elves Like thoughts, loves, hates, themselves."

And, friends, beyond dispute I too have the cowslips dewy and dear. Punctual as Springtide forth peep they: I leave them to make my meadow gay. But I ought to pluck and impound them, eh?

Not let them alone, but deftly shear And shred and reduce to-what may suit

Children, beyond dispute?

And, here 's May-month, all bloom, All bounty: what if I sacrifice? If I out with shears and shear, nor stop Shearing till prostrate, lo, the crop? And will you prefer it to ginger-pop When I've made you wine of the memories Which leave as bare as a churchyard

My meadow, late all bloom?

Nay, what ingratitude Should I hesitate to amuse the wits That have pulled so long at my flask, nor grudged

The headache that paid their pains, nor budged

From bunghole before they sighed and judged

"Too rough for our taste, to-day,

The racy and right when the years conclude!"

Out on ingratitude!

Grateful or ingrate-none, No cowslip of all my fairy crew Shall help to concoct what makes you

And goes to your head till you think you think!

I like them alive: the printer's ink Would sensibly tell on the perfume

I may use up my nettles, ere I 've done; But of cowslips—friends get none!

Don't nettles make a broth

Wholesome for blood grown lazy and thick?

Maws out of sorts make mouths out of taste.

My Thirty-four Port-no need to waste On a tongue that's fur and a palatepaste!

A magnum for friends who are sound! the sick-

I'll posset and cosset them, nothing

Henceforward with nettle-broth! 1876.

Waft of soul's wing What lies above? Sunshine and Love Skyblue and Spring! Body hides-where? Ferns of all feather. Mosses and heather, Yours be the care! 1878.

THE TWO POETS OF CROISIC

PROLOGUE

Such a starved bank of moss Till, that May-morn, Blue ran the flash across: Violets were born!

Sky—what a scowl of cloud Till, near and far, Ray on ray split the shroud: Splendid, a star!

World—how it walled about Life with disgrace Till God's own smile came out: That was thy face!

EPILOGUE

What a pretty tale you told me
Once upon a time
—Said you found it somewhere (scold
me!)

Was it prose or was it rhyme, Greek or Latin? Greek, you said, While your shoulder propped my head.

Anyhow there 's no forgetting
This much if no more,
That a poet (pray, no petting!)
Yes, a bard, sir, famed of yore,
Went where suchlike used to go,
Singing for a prize, you know.

Well, he had to sing, nor merely Sing but play the lyre; Playing was important clearly Quite as singing: I desire, Sir, you keep the fact in mind For a purpose that's behind.

There stood he, while deep attention Held the judges round, —Judges able, I should mention, To detect the slightest sound Sung or played amiss: such ears Had old judges, it appears!

None the less he sang out boldly, Played in time and tune, Till the judges, weighing coldly Each note's worth, seemed, late or soon.

Sure to smile "In vain one tries Picking faults out: take the prize!"

When, a mischief! Were they seven Strings the lyre possessed? Oh, and afterwards eleven, Thank you! Well, sir,—who had guessed Such ill luck in store?—it happed

One of those same seven strings snapped.

All was lost, then! No! a cricket
(What "cicada"? Pooh!)
—Some mad thing that left its thicket

For mere love of music—flew With its little heart on fire, Lighted on the crippled lyre.

So that when (Ah, joy!) our singer For his truant string Feels with disconcerted finger, What does cricket else but fling Fiery heart forth, sound the note Wanted by the throbbing throat?

Ay and, ever to the ending, Cricket chirps at need, Executes the hand's intending, Promptly, perfectly,—indeed Saves the singer from defeat With her chirrup low and sweet.

Till, at ending, all the judges
Cry with one assent
"Take the prize—a prize who grudges
Such a voice and instrument?
Why, we took your lyre for harp,
So it shrilled us forth F sharp!"

Did the conqueror spurn the creature, Once its service done? That 's no such uncommon feature In the case when Music's son Finds his Lotte's power too spent For aiding soul-development.

No! This other, on returning Homeward, prize in hand, Satisfied his bosom's yearning: (Sir, I hope you understand!)—Said "Some record there must be Of this cricket's help to me!"

So, he made himself a statue:
Marble stood, life-size;
On the lyre, he pointed at you,
Perched his partner in the prize;
Never more apart you found
Her, he throned, from him, she crowned,

That 's the tale: its application? Somebody I know
Hopes one day for reputation
Through his poetry that 's—Oh,
All so learned and so wise
And deserving of a prize!

If he gains one, will some ticket,
When his statue 's built,
Tell the gazer "'Twas a cricket
Helped my crippled lyre, whose lilt
Sweet and low, when strength usurped
Softness' place i' the scale, she chirped?

"For as victory was nighest, While I sang and played,— With my lyre at lowest, highest, Right alike,—one string that made "Love' sound soft was snapt in twain Never to be heard again,—

"Had not a kind cricket fluttered,
Perched upon the place
Vacant left, and duly uttered
'Love, Love, Love,' whene'er the bass
Asked the treble to atone
For its somewhat sombre drone,"

But you don't know music! Wherefore Keep on casting pearls
To a—poet? All I care for Is—to tell him that a girl's
"Love" comes aptly in when gruff
Grows his singing. (There, enough!)

TRAY

Sing me a hero! Quench my thirst Of soul, ye bards! Quoth Bard the first:
"Sir Olaf, the good knight, did don His helm and eke his habergeon"...
Sir Olaf and his bard!

"That sin-scathed brow" (quoth Bard the second),

"That eye wide ope as though Fate beckoned

My hero to some steep, beneath
Which precipice smiled tempting
death"...

You too without your host have reckoned;

"A beggar child" (let 's hear this third!)
"Sat on a quay's edge: like a bird

Sang to herself at careless play,
And fell into the stream. 'Dismay!
Help, you the standers-by!' None stirred.

"Bystanders reason, think of wives
And children ere they risk their lives.
Over the ballustrade has bounced
A mere instinctive dog, and pounced
Plumb on the prize. 'How well he dives!

""Up he comes with the child, see, tight In mouth, alive too, clutched from quite A depth of ten feet—twelve, I bet! Good dog! What, off again? There's yet Another child to save? All right!

"How strange we saw no other fall! It's instinct in the animal. Good dog! But he's a long while under: If he got drowned I should not wonder—Strong current, that against the wall!

""Here he comes, holds in mouth this time

—What may the thing be? Well, that's prime!

Now, did you ever? Reason reigns
In man alone, since all Tray's pains
Have fished—the child's doll from the slime!'

"And so, amid the laughter gay, Trotted my hero off,—old Tray,— Till somebody, prerogatived With reason, reasoned: 'Why he dived, His brain would show us, I should say,

"'John, go and catch—or, if needs be, Purchase that animal for me! By vivisection, at expense Of half-an-hour and eighteenpence, How brain secretes dog's soul, we'll see!'"

ECHETLOS

Here is a story, shall stir you! Stand up, Greeks dead and gone, Who breasted, beat Barbarians, stemmed

Persia rolling on,

Did the deed and saved the world, for the day was Marathon!

No man but did his manliest, kept rank and fought away In his tribe and file: up, back, out,

down—was the spear-arm play:
Like a wind-whipt branchy wood, all spear-arms.a-swing that day!

But one man kept no rank, and his sole arm plied no spear,

As a flashing came and went, and a form i' the van, the rear,

Brightened the battle up, for he blazed now there, now here.

Nor helmed nor shielded, he! but, a goat-skin all his wear,

Like a tiller of the soil, with a clown's limbs broad and bare,

Went he ploughing on and on: he pushed with a ploughman's share.

Did the weak mid-line give way, as tunnies on whom the shark

Precipitates his bulk? Did the rightwing halt when, stark

On his heap of slain lay stretched Kallimachos Polemarch?

Did the steady phalanx falter? To the rescue, at the need,

The clown was ploughing Persia, clearing Greek earth of weed,

As he routed through the Sakian and rooted up the Mede.

But the deed done, battle won,—nowhere to be descried

On the meadow, by the stream, at the marsh,—look far and wide

From the foot of the mountain, no, to the last blood-plashed sea-side,—

Not anywhere on view blazed the large limbs thonged and brown,

Shearing and clearing still with the share before which—down

To the dust went Persia's pomp, as he ploughed for Greece, that clown!

How spake the Oracle? "Care for no name at all!

Say but just this: 'We praise one helpful whom we call

The Holder of the Ploughshare.' The great deed ne'er grows small."

Not the great name! Sing—woe for the great name Miltiadés

And its end at Paros isle! Woe for Themistokles —Satrap in Sardis court! Name not the clown like these! 1880.

EPILOGUE TO DRAMATIC IDYLS

"Touch him ne'er so lightly, into song he broke:

Soil so quick-receptive,—not one featherseed,

Not one flower-dust fell but straight its fall awoke

Vitalizing virtue: song would song succeed

Sudden as spontaneous—prove a poet-soul!"

Rock's the song-soil rather, surface hard and bare:

Sun and dew their mildness, storm and frost their rage

Vainly both expend,—few flowers awaken there:

Quiet in its cleft broods—what the afterage

Knows and names a pine, a nation's heritage. 1880.

WANTING IS-WHAT?

Wanting is—what? Summer redundant, Blueness abundant, —Where is the blot?

Beamy the world, yet a blank all the same,

-Framework which waits for a picture to frame:

What of the leafage, what of the flower?
Roses embowering with naught they embower!

Come then, complete incompletion, O

Pant through the blueness, perfect the summer!

Breathe but one breath Rose-beauty above, And all that was death Grows life, grows love, Grows love!

1883.

ADAM, LILITH, AND EVE

One day, it thundered and lightened.
Two women, fairly frightened,

Sank to their knees, transformed, transfixed,

At the feet of the man who sat betwixt; And "Mercy!" cried each—" if I tell the truth

Of a passage in my youth!"

Said This: "Do you mind the morning I met your love with scorning?

As the worst of the venom left my lips, I thought, 'If, despite this lie, he strips The mask from my soul with a kiss—I

His slave,—soul, body, and all!'"

Said that: "We stood to be married; The priest, or some one, tarried;

¹ Having been criticised for speaking thus of his own work (as well he might, if he chose). Browning wrote the following lines in an album, for an American girl, at Venice;

Thus I wrote in London, musing on my betters, Poets dead and gone; and lo, the critics cried, "Out on such a boast!" as if I dreamed that fetters

Binding Dante bind up—me! as if true pride Were not also humble!....

'If Paradise-door prove locked?' smiled you.

I thought, as I nodded, smiling too, 'Did one, that 's away, arrive—nor late

'Did one, that 's away, arrive—nor late Nor soon should unlock Hell's gate!'"

It ceased to lighten and thunder. Up started both in wonder.

Looked round and saw that the sky was clear,

Then laughed "Confess you believed us, Dear!"

"I saw through the joke!" the man replied.

They re-seated themselves beside.

1883.

NEVER THE TIME AND THE PLACE

Never the time and the place
And the loved one all together!

This path—how soft to pace!
This May—what magic weather!
Where is the loved one's face?

In a dream that loved one's face meets mine,

But the house is narrow, the place is bleak

Where, outside, rain and wind combine With a furtive ear, if I strive to speak, With a hostile eye at my flushing cheek.

With a malice that marks each word, each sign!

O enemy sly and serpentine,

Uncoil thee from the waking man!
Do I hold the Past

Thus firm and fast

Yet doubt if the Future hold I can? This path so soft to pace shall lead

Through the magic of May to herself indeed!

Or narrow if needs the house must be, Outside are the storms and strangers:

Oh, close, safe, warm, sleep I and she, I and she.

SONGS FROM FERISHTAH'S FANCIES

ROUND us the wild creatures, overhead the trees,

Underfoot the moss-tracks,—life and love with these!

I to wear a fawn-skin, thou to dress in flowers:

All the long lone summer-day, that greenwood life of ours!

Rich-pavilioned, rather,—still the world without.—

Inside—gold-roofed silk-walled silence round about!

Queen it thou on purple,—I, at watch and ward,

Couched beneath the columns, gaze, thy slave, love's guard!

So, for us no world? Let throngs press thee to me!

Up and down amid men, heart by heart fare we!

Welcome squalid vesture, harsh voice, hateful face!

God is soul, souls I and thou: with souls should souls have place.

Wish no word unspoken, want no look away!

What if words were but mistake, and looks—too sudden, say!

Be unjust for once, Love! Bear it—well I may!

Do me justice always? Bid my heart—their shrine—

Render back its store of gifts, old looks and words of thine

—Oh, so all unjust—the less deserved, the more divine?

Fire is in the flint: true, once a spark escapes.

Fire forgets the kinship, soars till fancy shapes

Some befitting cradle where the babe had birth—

Wholly heaven's the product, unallied to earth.

Splendors recognized as perfect in the star!

In our flint their home was, housed as now they are.

Verse-making was least of my virtues:
I viewed with despair

Wealth that never yet was but might be--all that verse-making were

If the life would but lengthen to wish, let the mind be laid bare.

So I said "To do little is bad, to do nothing is worse"—

And made verse.

Love-making,—how simple a matter!
No depths to explore,

No heights in a life to ascend! No disheartening Before,

No affrighting Hereafter,—love now will be love evermore.

So I felt "To keep silence were folly."

—all language above,

I made love.

Ask not one least word of praise!
Words declare your eyes are bright?
What then meant that summer day's Silence spent in one long gaze?
Was my silence wrong or right?

Words of praise were all to seek!
Face of you and form of you,
Did they find the praise so weak
When my lips just touched your cheek—
Touch which let my soul come through?

"Why from the world," Ferishtah smiled, "should thanks

Go to this work of mine? If worthy praise,

Praised let it be and welcome: as verse ranks,

So rate my verse: if good therein outweighs

Aught faulty judged, judge justly!

Justice says:

Be just to fact, or blaming or approving: But—generous? No, nor loving!

"Loving! what claim to love has work of mine?

Concede my life were emptied of its gains

To furnish forth and fill work's strict confine,

Who works so for the world's sake he complains

With cause when hate, not love, rewards his pains.

I looked beyond the world for truth and beauty:

Sought, found, and did my duty."

1884.

WHY I AM A LIBERAL

"Why?" Because all I haply can and do, All that I am now, all I hope to be.— Whence comes it save from fortune setting free Body and soul the purpose to pursue, God traced for both? If fetters not a few,

Of prejudice, convention, fall from me, These shall I bid men—each in his degree

Also God-guided-bear, and gayly, too?

But little do or can the best of us:
That little is achieved through Liberty.
Who, then, dares hold, emancipated thus,

His fellow shall continue bound? Not I, Who live, love, labor freely, nor discuss A brother's right to freedom. That is "Why." 1885.

ROSNY

Woe, he went galloping into the war, Clara, Clara!

Let us two dream: shall he 'scape with a scar?

Scarcely disfigurement, rather a grace Making for manhood which nowise we See, while I kiss it, the flush on his face—

Rosny, Rosny!

Light does he laugh: "With your love in my soul"

(Clara, Clara!)
"How could I other than—sound, safe,

and whole— Cleave who opposed me asunder, yet

stand
Scatheless beside you, as, touching love's goal,

Who won the race kneels, craves reward at your hand—

Rosny, Rosny?"

Ay, but if certain who envied should see!

Clara, Clara, Certain who simper: "The hero for me Hardly of life were so chary as miss

Death—death and fame—that's love's guerdon when She

Boasts, proud bereaved one, her choice fell on this

Rosny, Rosny!"

So,—go on dreaming,—he lies mid a heap (Clara, Clara,)

Of the slain by his hand: what is death but a sleep?

Dead, with my portrait displayed on his breast:

Love wrought his undoing: "No prudence could keep The love-maddened wretch from his

The love-maddened wretch from his fate." That is best,
Rosny, Rosny! 1889.

POETICS

"So say the foolish!" Say the foolish so, Love?

"Flower she is, my rose"—or else,
"My very swan is she"—

Or perhaps, "You maid-moon, blessing earth below, Love, earth below, Love,

That art thou! "—to them, belike: no such vain words from me.

"Hush, rose, blush! no balm like breath," I chide it: "Bend thy neck its best, swan,—hers

"Bend thy neck its best, swan,—hers the whiter curve!"

Be the moon the moon: my Love I place beside it:

What is she? Her human self,—no lower word will serve. 1889.

SUMMUM BONUM

ALL the breath and the bloom of the year in the bag of one bee:

All the wonder and wealth of the mine in the heart of one gem:

In the core of one pearl all the shade and the shine of the sea:

Breath and bloom, shade and shine, wonder, wealth, and—how far above them—

> Truth, that's brighter than gem, Trust, that's purer than pearl—

Brightest truth, purest trust in the universe—all were for me
In the kiss of one girl. 1889.

A PEARL, A GIRL

A SIMPLE ring with a single stone, To the vulgar eye no stone of price:

Whisper the right word, that alone—
Forth starts a sprite, like fire from ice,
And lo, you are lord (says an Eastern scroll)
[sole

Of heaven and earth, lord whole and Through the power in a pearl.

A woman ('t is I this time that say)
With little the world counts worthy
praise:

Utter the true word—out and away
Escapes her soul: I am wrapt in blaze,
Creation's lord, of heaven and earth

Lord whole and sole—by a minute's birth—

Through the love in a girl! 1889.

MUCKLE-MOUTH MEG

FROWNED the Laird on the Lord: "So, redhanded I catch thee?"

Death-doomed by our Law of the Border!

We've a gallows outside and a chiel to dispatch thee:

Who trespasses—hangs: all 's in order."

He met frown with smile, did the young English gallant:

Then the Laird's dame: "Nay, Husband, I beg!

He's comely: be merciful! Grace for the callant

—If he marries our Muckle-mouth Meg!

"No mile-wide-mouthed monster of yours do I marry:

Grant rather the gallows!"laughed he.
"Foul fare kith and kin of you—why do you tarry?"

"To tame your fierce temper!" quoth she.

"Shove him quick in the Hole, shut him fast for a week:

Cold, darkness, and hunger work wonders:

Who lion-like roars now, mouse-fashion will squeak,

And 'it rains' soon succeed to 'it thunders.'"

A week did he bide in the cold and the dark

—Not hunger: for duly at morning
In flitted a lass, and a voice like a lark
Chirped. "Muckle-mouth Meg stil

Chirped, "Muckle-mouth Meg still ye're scorning?

"Go hang, but here 's parritch to hearten ye first!"

"Did Meg's muckle-mouth boast within some

Such music as yours, mine should match it or burst:

No frog-jaws! So tell folk, my Winsome!"

Soon week came to end, and, from Hole's door set wide,

Out he marched, and there waited the lassie:

"You gallows, or Muckle-mouth Meg for a bride!

Consider! Sky 's blue and turf 's grassy:

Life 's sweet: shall I say ye wed Muckle-mouth Meg?"

"Not I," quoth the stout heart: "too eerie

The mouth that can swallow a bubbly-jock's egg;

Shall I let it munch mine? Never, Dearie!"

"Not Muckle-mouth Meg? Wow, the obstinate man!

Perhaps he would rather wed me!"
"Ay, would he—with just for a dowry your can!"

"I'm Muckle-mouth Meg," chirruped she.

"Then so—so—so—so—" as he kissed her apace—

"Will I widen thee out till thou turnest

From Margaret Minnikin-mou', by God's grace,

To Muckle-mouth Meg in good earnest!" 1889.

DEVELOPMENT

My Father was a scholar and knew Greek.

When I was five years old, I asked him

"What do you read about?"

"The siege of Troy."

"What is a siege, and what is Troy?" Whereas

He piled up chairs and tables for a town, Set me a-top for Priam, called our cat—Helen, enticed away from home (he said)

By wicked Paris, who couched somewhere close

Under the footstool, being cowardly,
But whom—since she was worth the pains, poor puss— Towzer and Tray,—our dogs, the Atreidai,—sought

dai,—sought
By taking Troy to get possession of —Always when great Achilles ceased to sulk,

(My pony in the stable)—forth would prance

And put to flight Hector—our page-boy's self.

This taught me who was who and what was what:

So far I rightly understood the case At five years old; a huge delight it

And still proves—thanks to that instructor sage

My Father, who knew better than turn straight

Learning's full flare on weak-eyed ignorance,

Or, worse yet, leave weak eyes to grow sand-blind,

Content with darkness and vacuity.

It happened, two or three years afterward,

That—I and playmates playing at Troy's
Siege—

My Father came upon our make-believe.
"How would you like to read yourself
the tale

Properly told, of which I gave you first Merely such notion as a boy could bear?

Pope, now, would give you the precise account

Of what, some day, by dint of scholarship,

You 'll hear — who knows? — from Homer's very mouth.

Learn Greek by all means, read the 'Blind Old Man,

Sweetest of Singers '-tuphlos which means 'blind,'

Hedistos which means 'sweetest'. Time enough!

Try, anyhow, to master him some day; Until when, take what serves for substitute,

Read Pope, by all means!"
So I ran through Pope.

Enjoyed the tale—what history so true?
Also attacked my Primer, duly drudged,
Grew fitter thus for what was promised
next—

The very thing itself, the actual words, When I could turn—say, Buttmann to account.

Time passed, I ripened somewhat: one fine day,
"Quite ready for the Iliad, nothing less?

"Quite ready for the Iliad, nothing less? There's Heine, where the big books block the shelf:

Don't skip a word, thumb well the Lexicon!"

I thumbed well and skipped nowise till I learned

Who was who, what was what, from Homer's tongue.

And there an end of learning. Had you

The all-accomplished scholar, twelve years old.

"Who was it wrote the Iliad?"-what a laugh!

"Why, Homer, all the world knows: of his life

Doubtless some facts exist: it 's everywhere:

We have not settled, though, his place of birth:

He begged, for certain, and was blind beside:

Seven cities claimed him-Scio, with best right, Thinks Byron. What he wrote? Those Hymns we have.

Then there's the 'Battle of the Frogs and Mice.

That's all-unless they dig 'Margites' up (I'd like that) nothing more remains to know."

Thus did youth spend a comfortable

Until-" What's this the Germans say in

That Wolf found out first? It's unpleasant work

Their chop and change, unsettling one's belief:

All the same, where we live, we learn, that's sure."

So, I bent brow o'er Prolegomena. And after Wolf, a dozen of his like Proved there was never any Troy at all,

Neither Besiegers nor Besieged,—nay, Worse.-No actual Homer, no authentic text,

No warrant for the fiction I, as fact, Had treasured in my heart and soul so long-

Ay, mark you! and as fact held still, still hold.

Spite of new knowledge, in my heart of

And soul of souls, fact's essence freed and

From accidental fancy's guardian sheath. Assuredly thenceforward-thank my stars .-

However it got there, deprive who could-

Wring from the shrine my precious tenantry,

Helen, Ulysses, Hector and his Spouse, Achilles and his Friend ?--though Wolf -ah, Wolf!

Why must he needs come doubting, spoil a dream?

But then, "No dream's worth waking"-Browning says:

And here 's the reason why I tell thus

I, now mature man, you anticipate, May blame my Father justifiably

For letting me dream out my nonage thus.

And only by such slow and sure degrees Permitting me to sift the grain from chaff.

Get truth and falsehood known and named as such.

Why did he ever let me dream at all. Not bid me taste the story in its strength?

Suppose my childhood was scarce qualified To rightly understand mythology,

Silence at least was in his power to keep: I might have-somehow-correspondingly-

Well, who knows by what method. gained my gains,

Been taught, by forthrights not meanderings,

My aim should be to loathe, like Peleus' A lie as Hell's Gate, love my wedded

Like Hector, and so on with all the rest. Could not I have excogitated this Without believing such men really were? That is-he might have put into my hand

The "Ethics"? In translation, if you please,

Exact, no pretty lying that improves To suit the modern taste: no more no less--

The "Ethics:" 't is a treatise I find hard To read aright now that my hair is gray, And I can manage the original.

At five years old-how ill had fared its leaves!

Now, growing double o'er the Stagirite, At least I soil no page with bread and milk.

Nor crumple, dogs-ear and deface-boys' way.

EPILOGUE

AT the midnight in the silence of the sleep-time,

When you set your fancies free,

Will they pass to where—by death, fools think, imprisoned—

Low he lies who once so loved you, whom you loved so,

-Pity me?

Oh to love so, be so loved, yet so mistaken!

What had I on earth to do

With the slothful, with the mawkish, the unmanly?

Like the aimless, helpless, hopeless, did I drivel

-Being-who?

One who never turned his back but marched breast forward.

Never doubted clouds would break, Never dreamed, though right were worsted, wrong would triumph,

Held we fall to rise, are baffled to fight better,

Sleep to wake.

No, at noonday in the bustle of man's work-time

Greet the unseen with a cheer!
Bid him forward, breast and back as either should be,

"Strive and thrive!" cry "Speed,— fight on, fare ever
There as here!"

IN A LECTURE-ROOM

Away, haunt thou not me,
Thou vain Philosophy!
Little hast thou bestead.
Save to perplex the head,
And leave the spirit dead.
Unto thy broken cisterns wherefore go,
While from the secret treasure-depths
below,
Fed by the skiev shower,

And clouds that sink and rest on hilltops high,

Wisdom at once, and Power, Are welling, bubbling forth, unseen, incessantly?

Why labor at the dull mechanic oar,
When the fresh breeze is blowing,
And the strong current flowing,
Right onward to the Eternal Shore?
1840. 1849.

BLANK MISGIVINGS

How often sit I, poring o'er
My strange distorted youth,
Seeking in vain, in all my store,
One feeling based on truth;
Amid the maze of petty life,
A clue whereby to move,
A spot whereon in toil and strife
To dare to rest and love.
So constant as my heart would be,
So fickle as it must,
'T were well for others as for me
'T were dry as summer dust.
Excitements come, and act and speech
Flow freely forth;—but no,

The buried world below.

1841. 1849.

How will the heart, which now thoy trustest, then

QUA CURSUM VENTUS

As ships, becalmed at eve, that lay
With canvas drooping, side by side,
Two-towers of sail at dawn of day
Are scarce long leagues apart descried;

When fell the night, upsprung the breeze.

And all the darkling hours they plied, Nor dreamt but each the self-same seas By each was cleaving, side by side: E'en so, but why the tale reveal Of those, whom year by year unchanged,

Brief absence joined anew to feel,
Astounded, soul from soul estranged?

At dead of night their sails were filled, And onward each rejoicing steered— Ah, neither blame, for neither willed, Or wist, what first with dawn appeared!

To veer, how vain! On, onward strain, Brave barks! In light, in darkness too,

Through winds and tides one compass guides—
To that, and your own selves, he true

To that, and your own selves, be true.

But O blithe breeze; and O great seas,
Though ne'er, that earliest parting
past,

On your wide plain they join again, Together lead them home at last.

One port, methought, alike they sought, One purpose hold where'er they fare,— O bounding breeze, O rushing seas!

At last, at last, unite them there!

THE NEW SINAL

Lo, here is God, and there is God!
Believe it not, O Man;
In such vain sort to this and that
The ancient heathen ran:
Though old Religion shake her head,
And say in bitter grief,
The day behold, at first foretold,
Of atheist unbelief:
Take better part, with manly heart,
Thine adult spirit can;
Receive it not, believe it not,

As men at dead of night awaked
With cries, "The king is here,"
Rush forth and greet whome'er they meet.
Wheelers also lifered appears

Whoe'er shall first appear; And still repeat, to all the street, "Tis he,—the king is here;"

Believe it not, O Man!

The long procession moveth on, Each nobler form they see, With changeful suit they still salute And cry, "Tis he, 'tis he!"

So, even so, when men were young, And earth and heaven were new, And His immediate presence He
From human hearts withdrew,
The soul perplexed and daily vexed
With sensuous False and True,

Amazed, bereaved, no less believed, And fain would see Him too:

"He is!" the prophet-tongues proclaimed; In ice and hasty foor

In joy and hasty fear, "He is!" aloud replied the crowd, "Is here, and here, and here."

"He is! They are!" in distance seen On you Olympus high.

In those Avernian woods abide
And walk this azure sky:
"They are! They are!"—to ev

"They are! They are!"—to every show

Its eyes the baby turned, And blazes sacrificial, tall, On thousand altars burned: "They are! They are!"—On Sinai's top

Far seen the lightnings shone,

The thunder broke, a trumpet spoke, And God said, "I am One."

God spake it out, "I, God, am One;"
The unheeding ages ran.

And baby-thoughts again, again,
Have dogged the growing man:
And as of old from Sinai's top
God said that God is One.

By Science strict so speaks He now To tell us, There is None!

Earth goes by chemic forces; Heaven's
A Mécanique Céleste!

And heart and mind of human kind A watch-work as the rest!

Is this a Voice, as was the Voice, Whose speaking told abroad, When thunder pealed, and mountain reeled.

The ancient truth of God?
Ah, not the Voice; 'tis but the cloud,
The outer-darkness dense,

Where image none, nor e'er was seen Similitude of sense.

That wrapt the Mount around;
While in amaze the people stays,

While in amaze the people stays,
To hear the Coming Sound.

Is there no prophet-soul the while To dare, sublimely meek, Within the shroud of blackest cloud The Deity to seek?

'Midst atheistic systems dark, And darker hearts' despair,

That soul has heard perchance His word,

And on the dusky air His skirts, as passed He by, to see Hath strained on their behalf, Who on the plain, with dance amain, Adore the Golden Calf.

'Tis but the cloudy darkness dense: Though blank the tale it tells, No God, no Truth! yet He, in sooth, Is there-within it dwells: Within the sceptic darkness deep He dwells that none may see, Till idol forms and idle thoughts Have passed and ceased to be: No God, no Truth! ah though, in sooth So stand the doctrine's half: On Egypt's track return not back. Nor own the Golden Calf.

Take better part, with manlier heart, Thine adult spirit can; No God, no Truth, receive it ne'er-Believe it ne'er-O Man! But turn not then to seek again What first the ill began; No God, it saith; ah, wait in faith God's self-completing plan; Receive it not, but leave it not, And wait it out, O man!

"The Man that went the cloud within Is gone and vanished quite; He cometh not," the people cries, " Nor bringeth God to sight: Lo these thy gods, that safety give, Adore and keep the feast!" Deluding and deluded cries The Prophet's brother-Priest: And Israel all bows down to fall Before the gilded beast.

Devout, indeed! that priestly creed. O Man, reject as sin; The clouded hill attend thou still, And him that went within. He yet shall bring some worthy thing For waiting souls to see: Some sacred word that he hath heard

Their light and life shall be; Some lofty part, than which the heart Adopt no nobler can,

Thou shalt receive, thou shalt believe And thou shalt do, O Man! 1845. 1869.

THE QUESTIONING SPIRIT

THE human spirits saw I on a day, Sitting and looking each a different way; And hardly tasking, subtly questioning,

Another spirit went around the ring To each and each: and as he ceased his

Each after each, I heard them singly sing,

Some querulously high, some softly, sadly low,

We know not-what avails to know? We know not—wherefore need we know? This answer gave they still unto his suing. We know not, let us do as we are doing. Dost thou not know that these things only seem?--

I know not, let me dream my dream. Are dust and ashes fit to make a treasure?-

I know not, let me take my pleasure. What shall avail the knowledge thou hast sought?--

I know not, let me think my thought. What is the end of strife?-I know not, let me live my life. How many days or e'er thou mean'st to move?-

I know not, let me love my love. Were not things old once new?-I know not, let me do as others do. And when the rest were over past, I know not, I will do my duty, said the last.

Thy duty do? rejoined the voice, Ah, do it, do it, and rejoice; But shalt thou then, when all is done, Enjoy a love, embrace a beauty Like these, that may be seen and won In life, whose course will then be run; Or wilt thou be where there is none? I know not, I will do my duty.

And taking up the word around, above, below.

Some querulously high, some softly,

sadly low,
We know not, sang they all, nor ever need we know.

We know not, sang they, what avails to know?

Whereat the questioning spirit, some short space,

Though unabashed, stood quiet in his place.

But as the echoing chorus died away And to their dreams the rest returned apace,

By the one spirit I saw him kneeling

And in a silvery whisper heard him say:

Truly, thou know'st not, and thou need'st not know;

Hope only, hope thou, and believe al-

way;

I also know not, and I need not know, Only with questionings pass I to and

Perplexing these that sleep, and in their

Imbreeding doubt and sceptic melancholy:

Till that, their dreams deserting, they with me

Come all to this true ignorance and thee. 1847. 1862.

BETHESDA

A SEQUEL

I saw again the spirits on a day.

Where on the earth in mournful case they lay;

Five porches were there, and a pool, and

Huddling in blankets, strewn upon the ground,

Tied-up and bandaged, weary, sore and spent.

The maimed and halt, diseased and impotent.

For a great angel came, 't was said, and stirred

The pool at certain seasons, and the

Who in the waters here their limbs should lay

Before the motion on the surface ceased Should of their torment straightway be released.

So with shrunk bodies and with heads down-dropped,

Stretched on the steps, and at the pillars propped,

Watching by day and listening through the night.

They filled the place, a miserable sight. And I beheld that on the stony floor

He too, that spoke of duty once before, No otherwise than others here to-day. Foredone and sick and sadly muttering

"I know not, I will do-what is it I would say:

What was that word which once sufficed alone for all.

Which now I seek in vain, and never can recall?"

And then, as weary of in vain renew-

His question, thus his mournful thought pursuing,

With his small company into that sad place.

And breathing hope into the sick man's

Further than this I saw not, neither know. 1849, 1862.

FROM AMOURS DE VOYAGE

EN ROUTE

Over the great windy waters, and over the clear-crested summits,

Unto the sun and the sky, and unto the perfecter earth,

Come, let us go,-to a land wherein gods of the old time wandered,

Where every breath even now changes to ether divine.

Come let us go; though withal a voice whisper, "The world that we live in. Whithersoever we turn, still is the same narrow crib;

'Tis but to prove limitation, and measure a cord, that we travel:

¹ Clough's long poem in hexameters, The Bothie of Tober-Na-Vuolich, interesting as it is, is of too little importance and poetic value in proportion to its length, to be included in these selections; and no parts of it are detachable as extracts. Some examples of ('lough's use of hexameters (and elegiacs) may however be taken from his other long poem, the Amours de Voy-age, which suffer comparatively little in being separated from their context, and are equally churacteristic of some of Clough's moods. They are also interesting as a contrast to Byron's verses on Rome, in Childe Horold and elsewhere. On the Amours de Voyage, see especially Bagehot's Essay on Clough.

Let who would 'scape and be free go to his chamber and think;

Tis but to change idle funcies for memories wilfully falser; 'Tis but to go and have been."-Come,

little bark! let us go.

Rome disappoints me still; but I shrink and adapt myself to it.

Somehow a tyrannous sense of a superincumbent oppression

Still, wherever I go, accompanies ever, and makes me

Feel like a tree (shall I say?) buried under a ruin of brickwork

Rome, believe me, my friend, is like its own Monte Testaceo,

Merely a marvelous mass of broken and castaway wine-pots. Ze gods! what do I want with this rubbish of ages departed,

Things that Nature abhors, the experiments that she has failed in?

What do I find in the Forum? An archway and two or three pillars.

Well, but St. Peter's? Alas, Bernini has filled it with sculpture!

No one can cavil, I grant, at the size of the great Coliseum.

Doubtless the notion of grand and capacious and massive amusement,

This the old Romans had; but tell me,

is this an idea? Yet of solidity much, but of splendor little is extant:

"Brickwork I found thee, and marble I left thee!" their Emperor vaunted;

"Marble I thought thee, and brickwork I find thee!" the Tourist may answer.

THE PANTHEON

No, great Dome of Agrippa, thou art not Christian! canst not,

Strip and replaster and daub and do what they will with thee, be so!

Here underneath the great porch of colossal Corinthian columns,

Here as I walk, do I dream of the Christian belfries above them?

Or, on a bench as I sit and abide for long hours, till thy whole vast

Round grows dim as in dreams to my eyes, I repeople thy niches,

Not with the Martyrs, and Saints, and Confessors, and Virgins, and children, But with the mightier forms of an older, austerer worship;

And I recite to myself, how Eager for battle here

Stood Vulcan, here matronal Juno, And with the bow to his shoulder

He, who with pure dew laveth of Castaly His flowing locks, who holdeth of Lycia The oak forest and the wood that bore

Delos' and Patara's own Apollo.

ON MONTORIO'S HEIGHT

TIBUR is beautiful, too, and the orchard slopes, and the Anio

Falling, falling yet, to the ancient lyri cal cadence :

Tibur and Anio's tide; and cool from Lucretilis ever,

With the Digentian stream, and with the Bandusian fountain,

Folded in Sabine recesses, the valley and villa of Horace :—

So not seeing I sang; so seeing and listening say I,

Here as I sit by the stream, as I gaze at the cell of the Sibyl,

Here with Albunea's home and the grove of Tiburnus beside me;

Tivoli beautiful is, and musical, O Teverone.

Dashing from mountain to plain, thy parted impetuous waters, Tivoli's waters and rocks; and fair unto Monte Gennaro (Haunt, even yet, I must think, as I wander and gaze, of the shadows, Faded and pale, yet immortal, of Faunus, the Nymphs, and the Graces),

Fair in itself, and yet fairer with human completing creations,

Folded in Sabine recesses the valley and villa of Horace:—

So not seeing I sang; so now—Nor seeing, nor hearing,

Neither by waterfall lulled, nor folded in sylvan embraces.

Neither by cell of the Sibyl, nor stepping the Monte Gennaro,

Seated on Anio's bank, nor sipping Bandusian waters,

But on Montorio's height, looking down on the tile-clad streets, the

Cupolas, crosses, and domes, the bushes and kitchen-gardens,

Which, by the grace of the Tibur, prothemselves Rome of the claim -Romans,-

But on Montorio's height, looking forth to the vapory mountains,

Cheating the prisoner Hope with illusions of vision and fancy,—

But on Montorio's height, with these weary soldiers by me,

Waiting till Oudinot enter, to reinstate Pope and Tourist.

THE REAL QUESTION

Action will furnish belief,—but will that belief be the true one?

This is the point, you know. However, it doesn't much matter.

What one wants, I suppose, is to predetermine the action,

So as to make it entail, not a chance belief, but the true one.

Out of the question, you say; if a thing isn't wrong we may do it.

Ah! but this wrong, you see—but I do not know that it matters. . . .

SCEPTIC MOODS

ROME is fallen, I hear, the gallant Medici taken.

Noble Manara slain, and Garibaldi has lost il Moro;—

Rome is fallen; and fallen, or falling, heroical Venice.

I, meanwhile, for the loss of a single small chit of a girl, sit

Moping and mourning here,—for her, and myself much smaller.

Whither depart the souls of the brave that die in the battle,

Die in the lost, lost fight, for the cause that perishes with them?

Are they upborne from the field on the slumberous pinions of angels

Unto a far-off home, where the weary rest from their labor,

And the deep wounds are healed, and the bitter and burning moisture

Wiped from the generous eyes? or do they linger, unhappy,

Pining, and haunting the grave of their by-gone hope and endeavor?

All declamation, alas! though I talk, I care not for Rome nor

Italy; feebly and faintly, and but with the lips, can lament the Wreck of the Lombard youth, and the victory of the oppressor.

Whither depart the brave !—God knows; I certainly do not.

ENVOI

So go forth to the world, to the good report and the evil!

Go, little book! thy tale, is it not evil and good?

Go, and if strangers revile, pass quietly by without answer.

Go, and if curious friends ask of thy rearing and age.

Say, " I am flitting about many years from brain unto brain of

Feeble and restless youths born to inglorious days:

But," so finish the word, "I was writ in a Roman chamber,

When from Janiculan heights thundered the cannon of France." 1848-1849, 1858,

PESCHIERA

What voice did on my spirit fall, Peschiera, when thy bridge I crost? "Tis better to have fought and lost. Than never to have fought at all."

The tricolor—a trampled rag— Lies, dirt and dust; the lines I track By sentry boxes yellow-black, Lead up to no Italian flag.

I see the Croat soldier stand Upon the grass of your redoubts; The eagle with his black wings flouts The breadth and beauty of your land.

Yet not in vain, although in vain, O men of Brescia, on the day Of loss past hope, I heard you say Your welcome to the noble pain.

You say, "Since so it is,—good-bye Sweet life, high hope; but whatsoe'er May be, or must, no tongue shall dare To tell, 'The Lombard feared to die!'"

You said (there shall be answer fit), "And if our children must obey, They must: but thinking on this day 'Twill less debase them to submit."

You said (Oh not in vain you said), "Haste, brothers, haste, while yet we may;

The hours ebb fast of this one day When blood may yet be nobly shed."

Ah! not for idle hatred, not For honor, fame, nor self-applause, But for the glory of the cause, You did, what will not be forgot.

And though the stranger stand, 'tis true,' By force and fortune's right he stands;

By fortune, which is in God's hands, And strength, which yet shall spring in you.

This voice did on my spirit fall, Peschiera, when thy bridge I crost, "Tis better to have fought and lost, Than never to have fought at all."

1849. 1862.

ALTERAM PARTEM

OR shall I say, Vain word, false thought, Since Prudence hath her martyrs too, And Wisdom dictates not to do, Till doing shall be not for nought?

Not ours to give or lose is life; Will Nature, when her brave ones fall, Remake her work? or songs recall Death's victim slain in useless strife?

That rivers flow into the sea Is loss and waste, the foolish say, Nor know that back they find their way, Unseen, to where they wont to be.

Showers fall upon the hills, springs flow, The river runneth still at hand, Brave men are born into the land, And whence the foolish do not know.

No! no vain voice did on me fall, Peschiera, when thy bridge I crost, "T is better to have fought and lost, Than never to have fought at all."

1849. 1862.

IN THE DEPTHS

It is not sweet content, be sure,
That moves the nobler Muse to song,
Yet when could truth come whole and
pure

From hearts that inly writhe with wrong?

'T is not the calm and peaceful breast That sees or reads the problem true; They only know, on whom 't has prest Too hard to hope to solve it too.

Our ills are worse than at their ease
These blameless happy souls suspect,
They only study the disease,
Alas, who live not to detect. 1862.

THE LATEST DECALOGUE

Thou shalt have one God only; who Would be at the expense of two?

No graven images may be
Worshipped, except the currency:
Swear not at all; for, for thy curse
Thine enemy is none the worse:
At church on Sunday to attend
Will serve to keep the world thy friend:
Honor thy parents: that is, all
From whom advancement may befall;
Thou shalt not kill; but need'st not strive
Officiously to keep alive:

Officiously to keep alive:
Do not adultery commit;
Advantage rarely comes of it:
Thou shalt not steal; an empty feat,
When it 's so lucrative to cheat:
Bear not false witness; let the lie
Have time on its own wings to fly:
Thou shalt not covet, but tradition
Approves all forms of competition.

FROM DIPSYCHUS

"THERE is no God," the wicked saith,
"And truly it 's a blessing,
For what He might have done with us
It 's better only guessing."

"There is no God," a youngster thinks,
"Or really, if there may be,
He surely did not mean a man
Always to be a baby."

"There is no God, or if there is,"
The tradesman thinks, "'t were funny
If He should take it ill in me
To make a little money."

"Whether there be," the rich man says.
"It matters very little,
For I and mine, thank somebody,
Are not in want of victual."

Some others, also, to themselves, Who scarce so much as doubt it, Think there is none, when they are well And do not think about it.

But country folks who live beneath
The shadow of the steeple;
The parson and the parson's wife,
And mostly married people;

Youths green and happy in first love, So thankful for illusion; And men caught out in what the world Calls guilt, in first confusion;

And almost every one when age, Disease, or sorrows strike him, Inclines to think there is a God, Or something very like Him. 1849. 1862.

Our gaieties, our luxuries, Our pleasures and our glee, Mere insolence and wantonness, Alas! they feel to me.

How shall I laugh and sing and dance? My very heart recoils,

While here to give my mirth a chance A hungry brother toils.

The joy that does not spring from joy Which I in others see,

How can I venture to employ, Or find it joy for me? 1849. 1869.

This world is very odd we see, We do not comprehend it; But in one fact we all agree. God won't, and we can't mend it.

Being common sense, it can't be sin To take it as I find it; The pleasure to take pleasure in; The pain, try not to mind it.

These juicy meats, this flashing wine, May be an unreal mere appearance; Only—for my inside, in fine, They have a singular coherence.

Oh yes, my pensive youth, abstain; And any empty sick sensation, Remember, anything like pain Is only your imagination.

Trust me, I've read your German sage To far more purpose e'er than you did; You find it in his wisest page, Whom God deludes is well deluded.

1849. 1869.

Where are the great, whom thou would'st wish to praise thee?

Where are the pure, whom thou would'st choose to love thee?

Where are the brave, to stand supreme above thee,

Whose high commands would cheer, whose chiding raise thee?

Seek, seeker, in thyself; submit to find

In the stones, bread, and life in the blank mind. 1849. 1862.

When the enemy is near thee. Call on us! In our hands we will upbear thee.

He shall neither scathe nor scare thee, He shall fly thee, and shall fear thee. Call on us!

Call when all good friends have left thee. Of all good sights and sounds bereft thee; Call when hope and heart are sinking, And the brain is sick with thinking, Help, O help!

Call, and following close behind thee There shall haste, and there shall find thee.

Help, sure help.

When the panic comes upon thee, When necessity seems on thee, Hope and choice have all forgone thee, Fate and force are closing o'er thee, And but one way stands before thee-Call on us!

Oh, and if thou dost not call, Be but faithful, that is all. Go right on, and close behind thee There shall follow still and find thee, Help, sure help.

SAY NOT THE STRUGGLE NOUGHT AVAILETH

SAY not the struggle nought availeth. The labor and the wounds are vain, The enemy faints not, nor faileth, And as things have been they remain.

If hopes were dupes, fears may be liars; It may be, in you smoke concealed, Your comrades chase e'en now the fliers, And, but for you, possess the field.

For while the tired waves, vainly break-

Seem here no painful inch to gain, Far back, through creeks and inlets making,

Comes silent, flooding in, the main.

And not by eastern windows only, When daylight comes, comes in the light. slowly, In front, the sun climbs slow, how

But westward, look, the land is bright. 1849. 1862.

EASTER DAY

NAPLES, 1849

THROUGH the great sinful streets of Naples as I passed,

With fiercer heat than flamed above my head

My heart was hot within me; till at last

My brain was lightened when my tongue had said-

Christ is not risen!

Christ is not risen, no-He lies and moulders low:

Christ is not risen!

What though the stone were rolled away, and though

The grave found empty there?-If not there, then elsewhere:

If not where Joseph laid Him first, why then

Where other men

Translaid Him after, in some humbler clay.

Long ere to-day

Corruption that sad perfect work hath done,

Which here she scarcely, lightly had begun:

The foul engendered worm

Feeds on the flesh of the life-giving

Of our most Holy and Anointed One.

He is not riseu, no-

He lies and moulders low; Christ is not risen!

What if the women, ere the dawn was

Saw one or more great angels, as they

(Angels, or Him himself)? Yet neither there, nor then,

Nor afterwards, nor elsewhere, nor at

Hath He appeared to Peter or the Ten; Nor save in thunderous terror, to blind Saul;

Save in an after Gospel and late Creed, He is not risen, indeed,-Christ is not risen!

Or, what if e'en, as runs a tale, the Ten Saw, heard, and touched, again and yet again?

What if at Emmaüs' inn, and by Capernaum's Lake,

Came One, the bread that brake-

Came One that spake as never mortal spake.

And with them ate, and drank, and stood, and walked about?

Ah? "some did well to doubt!" Ah! the true Christ, while these things came to pass,

Nor heard, nor spake, nor walked, nor lived, alas!

He was not risen, no-He lay and mouldered low, Christ was not risen!

As circulates in some great city crowd A rumor changeful, vague, importunate, and loud.

From no determined centre or of fact Or authorship exact,

Which no man can deny

Nor verify;

So spread the wondrous fame;

He all the same Lay senseless, mouldering, low:

He was not risen, no-Christ was not risen!

Ashes to ashes, dust to dust;

As of the unjust, also of the just— Yea, of that Just One, too!

This is the one sad Gospel that is true-Christ is not risen!

Is He not risen, and shall we not rise? Oh, we unwise!

What did we dream, what wake we to discover?

Ye hills, fall on us, and ye mountains, cover !

In darkness and great gloom Come ere we thought it is our day of doom:

From the cursed world, which is one tomb.

Christ is not risen!

Eat, drink, and play, and think that this is bliss:

There is no heaven but this;

There is no hell,

Save earth, which serves the purpose doubly well,

Seeing it visits still

With equalest apportionment of ill Both good and bad alike, and brings to one same dust

> The unjust and the just With Christ, who is not risen.

Eat, drink, and die, for we are souls bereaved:

Of all the creatures under heaven's wide cope

We are most hopeless, who had once most hope, [lieved.

And most beliefless, that had most be-Ashes to ashes, dust to dust; As of the unjust, also of the just— Yea, of that Just One too!

It is the one sad Gospel that is true—

Christ is not risen!

Weep not beside the tomb,

Ye women, unto whom [Him; He was great solace while ye tended Ye who with napkin o'er the head

And folds of linen round each wounded limb

Laid out the Sacred Dead;

And thou that bar'st Him in thy wondering womb;

Yea, Daughters of Jerusalem, depart, Bind up as best ye may your own sad bleeding heart:

Go to your homes, your living children tend.

Your earthly spouses love;

Set your affections not on things above,

Which moth and rust corrupt, which quickliest come to end:

Or pray, if pray ye must, and pray, if pray ye can,

For death; since dead is He whom ye deemed more than man,

Who is not risen: no— But lies and moulders low— Who is not risen!

Ye men of Galilee!

Why stand ye looking up to heaven,
where Him ye ne'er may see,
Neither ascending hence, nor returning hither again?

Ye ignorant and idle fishermen! Hence to your huts, and boats, and inland native shore,

And catch not men, but fish: Whate'er things ye might wish,

Him neither here nor there ye e'er shall meet with more.

Ye poor deluded youths, go home, Mend the old nets ye left to roam, Tie the split oar, patch the torn sail: It was indeed an "idle tale"—

He was not risen!
And, oh, good men of ages yet to be,
Who shall believe because ye did not

Oh, be ye warned, be wise! Nor more with pleading eyes, And sobs of strong desire,

Unto the empty vacant void aspire, Seeking another and impossible birth That is not of your own, and only mother earth.

But if there is no other life for you, Sit down and be content, since this must even do:

He is not risen!

One look, and then depart,

Ye humble and ye holy men of heart:

And ye! ye ministers and stewards of a Word

Which ye would preach, because another heard—

Ye worshippers of that ye do not know,

Take these things hence and go:—
He is not risen!

Here, on our Easter Day

We rise, we come, and lo! we find Him not,

Gardener nor other, on the sacred spot: Where they have laid Him there is none to say:

No sound, nor in, nor out—no word

Of where to seek the dead or meet the living Lord.

There is no glistering of an angel's wings,

There is no voice of heavenly clear behest:

Let us go hence, and think upon these things

In silence, which is best.
Is He not risen? No—
But lies and moulders low?
Christ is not risen?

EASTER DAY

II

So in the sinful streets, abstracted and alone,

I with my secret self held communing of mine own.

So in the southern city spake the tongue

Of one that somewhat overwildly sung, But in a later hour I sat and heard

Another voice that spake—another graver word.

Weep not, it bade, whatever hath been said.

Though He be dead, He is not dead.

see-

In the true creed He is yet risen indeed; Christ is yet risen.

Weep not beside His Tomb, Ye women unto whom

He was great comfort and yet greater grief;

Nor ye, ye faithful few that wont with Him to roam,

Seek sadly what for Him ye left, go hopeless to your home;

Nor ye despair, ye sharers yet to be of their belief;

Though He be dead, He is not dead,
Nor gone, though fled,
Not lost, though vanished;
Though He return not, though
He lies and moulders low;
In the true creed
He is yet risen indeed;

de is yet risen indeed; Christ is yet risen.

Sit if ye will, sit down upon the ground, Yet not to weep and wail, but calmly look around.

Whate'er befell, Earth is not hell;

Now, too, as when it first began, Life is yet life, and man is man.

For all that breathe beneath the heaven's high cope,

Joy with grief mixes, with despondence hope.

Hope conquers cowardice, joy grief; Or at least, faith unbelief.

Though dead, not dead;
Not gone, though fled;
Not lost, though vanished.
In the great gospel and true creed,
He is yet risen indeed;
Christ is yet risen. 1849. 1869.

HOPE EVERMORE AND BELIEVE!

Hope evermore and believe, O man, for e'en as thy thought

So are the things that thou see'st; e'en as thy hope and belief.

Cowardly art thou and timid? they rise to provoke thee against them; Hast thou courage? enough, see them exulting to yield.

Yea, the rough rock, the dull earth, the wild sea's furying waters

(Violent say'st thou and hard, mighty

(Violent say'st thou and hard, mighty thou think'st to destroy),

All with ineffable longing are waiting their Invader,

All, with one varying voice, call to him, Come and subdue;

Still for their Conqueror call, and, but for the joy of being conquered (Rapture they will not forego), dare to resist and rebel:

Still, when resisting and raging, in soft undervoice say unto him,

Fear not, retire not, O man; hope evermore and believe.

Go from the east to the west, as the sun and the stars direct thee,

Go with the girdle of man, go and encompass the earth.

Not for the gain of the gold; for the getting, the hoarding, the having, But for the joy of the deed; but for the Duty to do.

Go with the spiritual life, the higher volition and action,

With the great girdle of God, go and encompass the earth.

Go; say not in thy heart, And what then were it accomplished,

Were the wild impulse allayed, what were the use or the good!

Go, when the instinct is stilled, and when the deed is accomplished, What thou hast done and shalt do,

shall be declared to thee then.
Go with the sun and the stars, and yet evermore in thy spirit

Say to thyself: It is good: yet is there better than it.

This that I see is not all, and this that I do is but little:

Nevertheless it is good, though there is better than it. 1862.

QUI LABORAT, ORAT

O only Source of all our light and life, Whom as our truth, our strength, we see and feel,

But whom the hours of mortal moral strife

Alone aright reveal!

Mine inmost soul, before Thee inly brought,

Thy presence owns ineffable, divine; Chastised each rebel self-encentered thought,

My will adoreth Thine.

With eye down-dropped, if then this earthly mind

Speechless remain, or speechless e'en depart;

Nor seek to see—for what of earthly kind

Can see Thee as Thou art?-

If well-assured 'tis but profanely bold In thought's abstractest forms to seem to see.

It dare not dare the dread communion hold

In ways unworthy Thee,

O not unowned, thou shalt unnamed forgive,

In worldly walks the prayerless heart prepare;

And if in work its life it seem to live, Shalt make that work be prayer.

Nor times shall lack, when while the work it plies,

Unsummoned powers the blinding film shall part,

And scarce by happy tears made dim, the eyes

In recognition start.

But, as thou willest, give or e'en forbear
The beatific supersensual sight,
So, with Thy blessing blessed, that humbler prayer
Approach Thee morn and night.

1862.

O Thou whose image in the shrine Of human spirits dwells divine; Which from that precinct once conveyed,

To be to outer day displayed, Doth vanish, part, and leave behind Mere blank and void of empty mind, Which wilful fancy seeks in vain With casual shapes to fill again!

O Thou that in our bosom's shrine
Dost dwell, unknown because divine!
I thought to speak, I thought to say,
"The light is here," "behold the way,"
"The voice was thus," and "thus the word,"

And "thus I saw," and "that I heard."—But from the lips that half essayed The imperfect utterance fell unmade.

O Thou, in that mysterious shrine Enthroned, as I must say, divine! I will not frame one thought of what Thou mayest either be or not. I will not prate of "thus" and "so," And be profane with "yes" and "no," Enough that in our soul and heart Thou, whatsoe'er Thou may'st be, art.

Unseen, secure in that high shrine Acknowledged present and divine, I will not ask some upper air, Some future day to place Thee there; Nor say, nor yet deny, such men And women saw Thee thus and then: Thy name was such, and there or here To him or her Thou didst appear.

Do only Thou in that dim shrine, Unknown or known, remain, divine; There, or if not, at least in eyes That scan the fact that round them lies, The hand to sway, the judgment guide, In sight and sense Thyself divide: Be Thou but there,—in soul and heart, I will not ask to feel Thou art. 1862.

"THROUGH A GLASS DARKLY"

What we, when face to face we see The Father of our souls, shall be, John tells us, doth not yet appear; Ah! did he tell what we are here!

A mind for thoughts to pass into, A heart for loves to travel through, Five senses to detect things near, Is this the whole that we are here?

Rules baffle instincts—instincts rules, Wise men are bad—and good are fools, Facts evil—wishes vain appear, We cannot go, why are we here?

O may we for assurance' sake, Some arbitrary judgment take, And wilfully pronounce it clear, For this or that 'tis we are here?

Or is it right, and will it do, To pace the sad confusion through. And say:—It doth not yet appear, What we shall be, what we are here?

Ah yet. when all is thought and said, The heart still overrules the head; Still what we hope we must believe, And what is given us receive;

Must still believe, for still we hope That in a world of larger scope, What here is faithfully begun Will be completed, not undone. My child, we still must think, when we That ampler life together see, Some true result will yet appear Of what we are, together, here. 1862.

AH! YET CONSIDER IT AGAIN!

"OLD things need not be therefore true,"
O brother men, nor yet the new;
Ah! still awhile the old thought retain,
And yet consider it again!

The souls of now two thousand years Have laid up here their toils and fears, And all the earnings of their pain,—Ah, yet consider it again!

We! what do we see? each a space Of some few yards before his face; Does that the whole wide plan explain? Ah, yet consider it again!

Alas! the great world goes its way, And takes its truth from each new day; They do not quit, nor can retain, Far less consider it again. 1851. 1862.

SONGS IN ABSENCE

Come home, come home! and where is home for me, [sea?]

Whose ship is driving o'er the trackless To the frail bark here plunging on its way,

To the wild waters, shall I turn and say To the plunging bark, or to the salt sea

You are my home?

Fields once I walked in, faces once I knew,

Familiar things so old my heart believed them true,

These far, far back, behind me lie, before

The dark clouds mutter, and the deep seas roar,

And speak to them that 'neath and o'er them roam

No words of home.

Beyond the clouds, beyond the waves that roar,

There may indeed, or may not be a shore, Where fields as green, and hands and hearts as true,

The old forgotten semblance may renew, And offer exiles driven far o'er the salt sea foam

Another home.

But toil and pain must wear out many a

And days bear weeks, and weeks bear months away,

Ere, if at all, the weary traveller hear, With accents whispered in his wayworn ear.

A voice he dares to listen to, say, Come To thy true home.

Come home, come home! and where a home hath he [sea?]
Whose ship is driving o'er the driving Through clouds that mutter, and o'er waves that roar, [shore Say, shall we find, or shall we not, a

That is, as is not ship or ocean foam, Indeed our home? 1852. 1862.

GREEN fields of England! wheresoe'er Across this watery waste we fare, Your image at our hearts we bear, Green fields of England, everywhere.

Sweet eyes in England, I must flee Past where the waves' last confines be, Ere your loved smile I cease to see, Sweet eyes in England, dear to me.

Dear home in England, safe and fast If but in thee my lot lie cast, The past shall seem a nothing past To thee, dear home, if won at last; Dear home in England, won at last.

1852. 1862.

COME back, come back! behold with straining mast

And swelling sail, behold her steaming fast;

With one new sun to see her voyage o'er, With morning light to touch her native shore.

Come back! come back.

Come back, come back! while westward laboring by,

With sailless yards, a bare black hulk we fly.

See how the gale we fight with sweeps her back,

To our lost home, on our forsaken track. Come back, come back.

Come back, come back! across the fly ing foam,

We hear faint far-off voices call us home:

Come back, ye seem to say; ye seek in vain;

We went, we sought, and homeward turned again.

Come back, come back.

Come back, come back; and whither back or why?

To fan quenched hopes, forsaken schemes to try;

Walk the old fields; pace the familiar street;

Dream with the idlers, with the bards compete.

Come back, come back.

Come back, come back; and whither and for what?

To finger idly some old Gordian knot, Unskilled to sunder, and too weak to cleave.

And with much toil attain to half-believe.

Come back, come back.

Come back, come back; yea back, indeed, do go

Sighs panting thick, and tears that want to flow;

Fond fluttering hopes upraise their useless wings,

And wishes idly struggle in the strings; Come back, come back.

Come back, come back, more eager than the breeze,

The flying fancies sweep across the seas, And lighter far than ocean's flying foam, The heart's fond message hurries to its

Come back, come back.

Come back, come back!

Back flies the foam; the hoisted flag streams back;

The long smoke wavers on the homeward track,

Back fly with winds things which the winds obey,

The strong ship follows its appointed way. 1862. 1862.

When we have proved, each on his course alone,

The wider world, and learned what's now unknown,

Have made life clear, and worked out each a way,

We'll meet again,—we shall have much to say.

With happier mood, and feelings born anew,

Our boyhood's bygone fancies we'll review. [play, Talk o'er old talks, play as we used to

Where lies the land to which the ship would go?

Far, far ahead, is all her seamen know.
And where the land she travels from?

Away.

Far, far behind, is all that they can say

On sunny noons upon the deck's smooth face,

Linked arm in arm, how pleasant here to pace;

Or, o'er the stern reclining, watch below The foaming wake far widening as we go.

On stormy nights when wild northwesters rave.

How proud a thing to fight with wind and wave!

The dripping sailor on the reeling mast Exults to bear, and scorns to wish it past.

Where lies the land to which the ship would go?

Far, far ahead, is all her seamen know.
And where the land she travels from?

Far, far behind, is all that they can say 1852. 1862.

WERE you with me, or I with you,
There's nought, methinks, I might not do:

Could venture here, and venture there, And never fear, nor ever care.

To things before, and things behind, Could turn my thoughts, and turn my mind,

On this and that, day after day, Could dare to throw myself away.

Secure, when all was o'er, to find My proper thought, my perfect mind, And unimpaired receive anew My own and better self in you.

1853. 1862.

O SHIP, ship, ship, That travellest over the sea. What are the tidings, I pray thee, Thou bearest hither to me?

Are they tidings of comfort and joy,
That shall make me seem to see
The sweet lips softly moving
And whispering love to me?

Or are they of trouble and grief, Estrangement, sorrow, and doubt, To turn into torture my hopes, And drive me from Paradise out?

O ship, ship, ship,
That comest over the sea,
Whatever it be thou bringest,
Come quickly with it to me.
1853. 1869.

THE STREAM OF LIFE

O STREAM descending to the sea,
Thy mossy banks between,
The flow'rets blow, the grasses grow,
The leafy trees are green.

In garden plots the children play, The fields the laborers till, And houses stand on either hand, And thou descendest still.

O life descending into death, Our waking eyes behold, Parent and friend thy lapse attend, Companions young and old.

Strong purposes our mind possess, Our hearts affections fill, We toil and earn, we seek and learn, And thou descendest still. O end to which our currents tend, Inevitable sea, To which we flow, what do we know,

What shall we guess of thee?

A roar we hear upon thy shore, As we our course fulfil; Scarce we divine a sun will shine And be above us still. 1862.

"WITH WHOM IS NO VARIABLE NESS, NEITHER SHADOW OF TURNING"

It fortifies my soul to know That, though I perish, Truth is so: That, howsoe'er I stray and range, Whate'er I do, Thou dost not change. I steadier step when I recall That, if I slip, Thou dost not fall. 1862.

ITE DOMUM SATURÆ, VENIT HESPERUS

THE skies have sunk, and hid the upper snow

(Home, Rose, and home, Provence and La Palie),

The rainy clouds are filing fast below, And wet will be the path, and wet shall we.

Home, Rose, and home, Provence and La Palie.

Ah dear, and where is he, a year agone, Who stepped beside and cheered us on and on?

My sweetheart wanders far away from me,

In foreign land or on a foreign sea. Home, Rose, and home, Provence and La Palie.

The lightning zigzags shoot across the sky

(Home, Rose, and home, Provence and La Palie),

And through the vale the rains go sweeping by;

Ah me, and when in shelter shall we be? Home, Rose, and home, Provence and La Palie.

Cold, dreary cold, the stormy winds feel they

O'er foreign lands and foreign seas that

(Home, Rose, and home, Provence and La Palie). And doth he e'er, I wonder, bring to mind

The pleasant huts and herds he left behind?

And doth he sometimes in his slumbering see

The feeding kine, and doth he think of me,

My sweetheart wandering whereso'er it be?

Home, Rose, and home, Provence and La Palie.

The thunder bellows far from snow to snow

(Home, Rose, and home, Provence and La Palie).

And loud and louder roars the flood below.

Heigho! but soon in shelter shall we be: Home, Rose, and home, Provence and La Palie),

Or shall he find before his term be sped, Some comelier maid that he shall wish to wed?

(Home, Rose, and home, Provence and La Palie.)

For weary is work, and weary day by day To have your comfort miles on miles away.

Home, Rose, and home, Provence and La Palie.

Or may it be that I shall find my mate, And he returning see himself too late? For work we must, and what we see, we

And God he knows, and what must be, must be

When sweethearts wander far away from me.

Home, Rose, and home, Provence and La Palie.

The sky behind is brightening up anew (Home, Rose, and home, Provence and La Palie).

The rain is ending, and our journey too: Heigho! aha! for here at home are we:—In, Rose, and in, Provence and La Palic.

CURRENTE CALAMO

QUICK, painter, quick, the moment seize Amid the snowy Pyrenees;
More evanescent than the snow,
The pictures come, are seen, and go:
Quick, quick, currente calamo.

I do not ask the tints that fill
The gate of day 'twixt hill and hill;
I ask not for the hues that fleet
Above the distant peaks; my feet
Are on a poplar-bordered road.
Where with a saddle and a load
A donkey, old and ashen-gray,
Reluctant works his dusty way.
Before him, still with might and main
Pulling his rope, the rustic rein,
A girl: before both him and me,
Frequent she turns and lets me see,
Unconscious, lets me scan and trace
The sunny darkness of her face
And outlines full of southern grace.

Following I notice, yet and yet, Her olive skin, dark eyes deep set, And black, and blacker e'en than jet, The escaping hair that scantly showed, Since o'er it in the country mode, For winter warmth and summer shade. The lap of scarlet cloth is laid. And then, back-falling from the head, A crimson kerchief overspread Her jacket blue; thence passing down, A skirt of darkest yellow-brown, Coarse stuff, allowing to the view The smooth limb to the woollen shoe.

But who—here 's some one following too,—

A priest, and reading at his book! Read on, O priest, and do not look; Consider,—she is but a child,— Yet might your fancy be beguiled. Read on, O priest, and pass and go! But see, succeeding in a row, Two, three, and four, a motley train, Musicians wandering back to Spain; With fiddle and with tambourine, A man with women following seen. What dresses, ribbon ends, and flowers! And, - sight to wonder at for hours, -The man, -- to Phillip has he sat?--With butterfly-like velvet hat: One dame his big bassoon conveys, On one his gentle arm he lays; They stop, and look, and something say, And to "España" ask the way.

But while I speak, and point them

Alas! my dearer friends are gone;
The dark-eyed maiden and the ass
Have had the time the bridge to pass.
Vainly, beyond it far descried,
Adieu, and peace with you abide,
Gray donkey, and your beauteous guide
The pictures come, the pictures go,
Quick, quick, currente calamo.

COME, POET, COME!

Come, Poet, come! A thousand laborers ply their task, And what it tends to scarcely ask, And trembling thinkers on the brink Shiver, and know not how to think, To tell the purport of their pain, And what our silly joys contain; In lasting lineaments portray The substance of the shadowy day; Our real and inner deeds rehearse, And make our meaning clear in verse: Come, Poet, come! for but in vain We do the work or feel the pain, And gather up the seeming gain, Unless before the end thou come To take, ere they are lost, their sum.

Come, Poet, come!
To give an utterance to the dumb,
And make vain habblers signt, come;
A thousand dupes point here and there,
Bewildered by the show and glare;
And wise men half have learned to doubt

Whether we are not best without. Come, Poet; both but wait to see Their error proved to them in thee.

Come, Poet, come!
In vain I seem to call. And yet
Think not the living times forget.
Ages of heroes fought and fell
That Homer in the end might tell;
O'er grovelling generations past
Upstood the Doric fane at last;
And countless hearts on countless years
Had wasted thoughts, and hopes, and fears.

Rude laughter and unmeaning tears, Ere England Shakespeare saw, or Rome The pure perfection of her dome. Others, I doubt not, if not we, The issue of our toils shall see; Young children gather as their own The harvest that the dead had sown, The dead forgotten and unknown.

THE HIDDEN LOVE

OLET me love my love unto myself alone, And know my knowledge to the world unknown; No witness to my vision call, Beholding, unbeheld of all; And worship Thee, with Thee withdrawn apart,

Within the closest veil of mine own inmost heart.

Whoe'er, Whate'er Thou art,

What is it then to me If others are inquisitive to see? Why should I quit my place to go and ask

If other men are working at their task? Leave my own buried roots to go And see that brother plants shall grow; And turn away from Thee, O Thou most

Holy Light
To look if other orbs their orbits keep aright,

Around their proper sun,
Deserting Thee, and being undone.

O let me love my love unto myself alone, And know my knowledge to the world unknown;

And worship Thee, O hid One, O much sought,

As but man can or ought,
Within the abstracted'st shrine of my least breathed on thought.

Better it were, thou sayest, to consent; Feast while we may, and live ere life be spent;

Close up clear eyes, and call the unstable sure,

The unlovely lovely, and the filthy pure; In self-belyings, self-deceivings roll, And lose in Action, Passion, Talk, the soul.

Nay, better far to mark off thus much air,
And call it Heaven: place bliss and glory there; [sky, Fix perfect homes in the unsubstantial And say, what is not, will be by-and-bye.

PERCHE PENSA? PENSANDO S' IN-VECCHIA

To spend uncounted years of pain, Again, again, and yet again, In working out in heart and brain

The problem of our being here;
To gather facts from far and near,
Upon the mind to hold them clear,
And, knowing more may yet appear,
Unto one's latest breath to fear,
The premature result to draw—
Is this the object, end and law,

And purpose of our being here?

1869.

LIFE IS STRUGGLE

To wear out heart, and nerves, and brain.

And give-oneself a world of pain; Be eager, angry, fierce, and hot, Imperious, supple—God knows what, For what's all one to have or not; O false, unwise, absurd, and vain! For 'tis not joy, it is not gain, It is not in itself a bliss, Only it is precisely this

That keeps us all alive.

To say we truly feel the pain,
And quite are sinking with the strain;—
Entirely, simply, undeceived,
Believe, and say we ne'er believed
The object, e'en were it achieved,
A thing we e'er had cared to keep;
With heart and soul to hold it cheap,
And then to go and try it again;
O false, unwise, absurd, and vain!
O, 'tis not joy, and 'tis not bliss,
Only it is precisely this
That keeps us still alive.

SONNETS ON THE THOUGHT OF DEATH

If it is thou whose casual hand with-

What it at first as casually did make,
Say what amount of ages it will take
With tardy rare concurrences of laws,
And subtle multiplicities of cause,
The thing they once had made us to remake;
[awake,

May hopes dead slumbering dare to re-E'en after utmost interval of pause, What revolutions must have passed, before

The great celestial cycles shall restore The starry sign whose present hour is gone;

What worse than dubious chances interpose, [pose With sland and supply gloom to pose.]

With cloud and sunny gleam to recom-The skiey picture we had gazed upon.

But if as not by that the soul desired Swayed in the judgment, wisest men have thought

And furnishing the evidence it sought,
Man's heart hath ever fervently required,
And story, for that reason deemed inspired,

To every clime, in every age, hath taught;

If in this human complex there be aught Not lost in death, as not in birth acquired, O then, though cold the lips that did convey

Rich freights of meaning, dead each living sphere

Where thought abode, and fancy loved to play,

Thou yet, we think, somewhere somehow still art,

And satisfied with that the patient heart
The where and how doth not desire to hear. 1869.

IN A LONDON SQUARE

Put forth thy leaf, thou lofty plane,
East wind and frost are safely gone;
With zephyr mild and balmy rain
The summer comes serenely on;
Earth, air, and sun and skies combine
To promise all that's kind and fair:—
But thou, O human heart of mine,
Be still, contain thyself, and bear.

December days were brief and chill,

The winds of March were wild and drear.

And, nearing and receding still,
Spring never would, we thought, be

The leaves that burst, the suns that shine,
Had, not the less, their certain date:
And thou, O human heart of mine,
Be still, refrain thyself, and wait.

ALL IS WELL

WHATE'ER you dream, with doubt possessed.

Keep, keep it snug within your breast, And lay you down and take your rest; Forget in sleep the doubt and pain, And when you wake, to work again. The wind it blows, the vessel goes, And where and whither, no one knows.

'Twill all be well: no need of care; Though how it will, and when, and where,

We cannot see, and can't declare.
In spite of dreams, in spite of thought,
Tis not in vain, and not for nought,
The wind it blows, the ship it goes,
Though where and whither, no one knows.

One lesson which in every wind is blown.

One lesson of two duties kept at one Though the loud world proclaim their

Of toil unsever'd from tranquillity! Of labor, that in lasting fruit outgrows Far noisier schemes, accomplish'd in repose,

TO A FRIEND

Who prop, thou ask'st, in these bad days, my mind?—

He much, the old man, who, clearest-soul'd of men,

Saw The Wide Prospect, and the Asian Fen,

And Tmolus hill, and Smyrna bay, though blind.

Much he, whose friendship I not long since won,

OTHERS abide our question. Thou art free.

We ask and ask—Thou smilest and art still,

Out-topping knowledge. For the loftiest hill,

THE FORSAKEN MERMAN

COME, dear children, let us away; Down and away below! Now my brothers call from the bay, Now the great winds shoreward blow, Now the salt tides seaward flow; Now the wild white horses play, Champ and chafe and toss in the spray Children dear, let us away!

This way, this way!

Call her once before you go-Call once yet!

In a voice that she will know: "Margaret! Margaret!"

Children's voices should be dear (Call once more) to a mother's ear; Children's voices, wild with pain-

Surely she will come again! Call her once and come away;

This way, this way!

"Mother dear, we cannot stay! The wild white horses foam and fret." Margaret! Margaret!

Come, dear children, come away down; Call no more!

One last look at the white-wall'd town. And the little gray church on the windy shore,

Then come down!

She will not come though you call all day:

Come away, come away!

Children dear, was it vesterday We heard the sweet bells over the bay?

In the caverns where we lay, Through the surf and through the swell. The far-off sound of a silver bell? Sand-strewn caverns, cool and deep, Where the winds are all asleep;

Where the spent lights quiver and gleam,

Where the salt weed sways in the stream,

Where the sea-beasts, ranged all round, Feed in the ooze of their pastureground;

Where the sea-snakes coil and twine, Dry their mail and bask in the brine; Where great whales come sailing by. Sail and sail, with unshut eve. Round the world for ever and ave? When did music come this way? Children dear, was it vesterday?

Children dear, was it yesterday (Call yet once) that she went away? Once she sate with you and me, On a red gold throne in the heart of the sea, And the youngest sate on her knee.

She comb'd its bright hair, and she tended it well,

When down swung the sound of a far-off

She sigh'd, she look'd up through the clear green sea;

She said: "I must go, for my kinsfolk

In the little gray church on the shore to-

'T will be Easter-time in the world-ah

And I lose my poor soul, Merman! here with thee."

I said: "Go up, dear heart, through the Say thy prayer, and come back to the kind sea-caves!"

She smiled, she went up through the surf in the bay.

Children dear, was it vesterday?

Children dear, were we long alone?

"The sea grows stormy, the little ones moan:

Long prayers," I said, "in the world thev say;

Come!" I said; and we rose through the surf in the bay.

We went up the beach, by the sandy

Where the sea-stocks bloom, to the white-wall'd town:

Through the narrow paved streets, where all was still.

To the little gray church on the windy

From the church came a murmur of folk at their prayers,

But we stood without in the cold blow-

We climb'd on the graves, on the stones worn with rains,

And we gazed up the aisle through the small leaded panes.

She sate by the pillar; we saw her clear: "Margaret, hist! come quick, we are here!

Dear heart," I said, "we are long alone; The sea grows stormy, the little ones moan."

But, ah, she gave me never a look,

For her eyes were seal'd to the holy book!

Loud prays the priest; shut stands the door.

Come away, children, call no more! Come away, come down, call no more!

Down, down, down!

Down to the depths of the sea!

She sits at her wheel in the humming

Singing most joyfully. Hark what she sings: "O joy, O joy,

For the humming street, and the child with its toy! [well; For the priest and the bell, and the holy For the wheel where I spun, And the blessed light of the sun!" And so she sings her fill, Singing most joyfully, Till the spindle drops from her hand, And the whizzing wheel stands still. She steals to the window, and looks at the sand

the sand,
And over the sand at the sea;
And her eyes are set in a stare;
And anon there breaks a sigh,
And anon there drops a tear,
From a sorrow-clouded eye,
And a heart sorrow-laden,
A long, long sigh;
For the cold strange eyes of a little Mermaiden

And the gleam of her golden hair.

Come away, away children; Come children, come down! The hoarse wind blows coldly; Lights shine in the town. She will start from her slumber When gusts shake the door; She will hear the winds howling, Will hear the waves roar. We shall see, while above us The waves roar and whirl, A ceiling of amber, A pavement of pearl. Singing: "Here came a mortal, But faithless was she! And alone dwell for ever The kings of the sea."

But, children, at midnight, When soft the winds blow, When clear falls the moonlight, When spring tides are low; When sweet airs come seaward From heaths starr'd with broom, And high rocks throw mildly On the blanch'd sands a gloom; Up the still, glistening beaches, Up the creeks we will hie, Over banks of bright seaweed The ebb-tide leaves dry. We will gaze, from the sand hills, At the white, sleeping town; At the church on the hill-side-And then come back down. Singing: "There dwells a loved one, But cruel is she! She left lonely for ever 1849. The kings of the sea."

THE STRAYED REVELLER

THE PORTICO OF CIRCE'S PALACE EVENING

A Youth. Circe

The Youth

FASTER, faster, O Circe, Goddess, Let the wild, thronging train, The bright procession Of eddying forms, Sweep through my soul!

Thou standest, smiling
Down on me! thy right arm,
Lean'd up against the column there.
Props thy soft check;
Thy left holds, hanging loosely,
The deep cup, ivy-cinctured,
I held but now:

Is it, then, evening
So soon? I see, the night-dews,
Cluster'd in thick beads, dim
The agate brooch-stones
On thy white shoulder;
The cool night-wind, too,
Blows through the portico,
Stirs thy hair. Goddess,
Waves thy white robe!

Circe

Whence art thou, sleeper?

The Youth

When the white dawn first
Through the rough fir-planks
Of my hut, by the chestnuts,
Up at the valley-head,
Came breaking. Goddess!
I sprang up, I threw round me
My dappled fawn-skin;
Passing out, from the wet turf,
Where they lay, by the hut door,
I snatch'd up my vine-crown, my fir-staff,
All drench'd in dew-Came swift down to join
The rout early gather'd
In the town, round the temple,
Iacchus' white fane
On yonder hill.

Quick I pass'd, following The wood-cutters' cart-track Down the dark valley;—I saw On my left, through the beeches, Thy palace, Goddess, Smokeless, empty! Trembling, I enter'd; beheld The court all silent, The lions sleeping. On the altar this bowl. I drank, Goddess! And sank down here, sleeping, On the steps of thy portico.

Circe

Foolish boy! Why tremblest thou? Thou lovest it, then, my wine? Wouldst more of it? See, how glows, Through the delicate, flush'd marble, The red, creaming liquor, Strown with dark seeds! Drink, then! I chide thee not, Deny thee not my bowl. Come, stretch forth thy hand, then—so! Drink—drink again!

The Youth

Thanks, gracious one!
Ah, the sweet fumes again!
More soft, ah me,
More subtle-winding
Than Pan's flute-music!
Faint—faint! Ah me,
Again the sweet sleep!

Circe

Hist! Thou—within there! Come forth, Ulysses! Art tired with hunting? While we range the woodland, See what the day brings.

Hast thou then lured hither.

That he sits, overweigh'd

Wonderful Goddess, by thy art,

Ever new magic!

Ulysses

The young, languid-eyed Ampelus, Iacchus' darling—
Or some youth beloved of Pan,
Of Pan and the Nymphs?
That he sits, bending downward
His white, delicate neck
To the ivy-wreathed marge
Of thy cup; the bright, glancing vineleaves
That crown his hair.
Falling forward, mingling
With the dark ivy-plants—
His fawn-skin, half untied,
Smear'd with red wine-stains? Who is

By fumes of wine and sleep, So late, in thy portico? What youth, Goddess,—what guest Of Gods or mortals?

Circe

Hist! he wakes! I lured him not hither, Ulysses. Nay, ask him!

The Youth

Who speaks? Ah, who comes forth To thy side, Goddess, from within? How shall I name him? This spare, dark-featured, Quick-eyed stranger? Ah, and I see too His sailor's bonnet. His short coat, travel-tarnish'd, With one arm bare !-Art thou not he, whom fame This long time rumors The favor'd guest of Circe, brought by the waves? Art thou he, stranger? The wise Ulysses. Laertes' son?

Ulysses

I am Ulysses. And thou, too, sleeper? Thy voice is sweet. It may be thou hast follow'd Through the islands some divine bard, By age taught many things, Age and the Muses; And heard him delighting The chiefs and people In the banquet, and learn'd his songs, Of Gods and Heroes, Of war and arts, And peopled cities, Inland, or built By the gray sea.—If so, then hail! I honor and welcome thee.

The Youth

The Gods are happy.
They turn on all sides
Their shining eyes,
And see below them
The earth and men.

They see Tiresias Sitting, staff in hand, On the warm, grassy Asopus bank, His robe drawn over His old, sightless head, Revolving inly The doom of Thebes.

They see the Centaurs In the upper glens Of Pelion, in the streams, Where red-berried ashes fringe The clear-brown shallow pools, With streaming flanks, and heads Rear'd proudly, snuffing The mountain wind.

They see the Indian
Drifting, knife in hand,
His frail boat moor'd to
A floating isle thick-matted
With large-leaved, low-creeping melon-

And the dark cucumber.
He reaps, and stows them,
Drifting—drifting;—round him,
Round his green harvest-plot,
Flow the cool lake-waves,
The mountains ring them.

They see the Scythian
On the wide stepp, unharnessing
His wheel'd house at noon.
He tethers his beast down, and makes his meal—
Mares' milk, and bread
Baked on the embers:—all around

Mares mink, and bread
Baked on the embers;—all around
The boundless, waving grass-plains
stretch, thick-starr'd
With saffron and the yellow hollyhock
And flag-leaved iris-flowers.
Sitting in his cart [miles,
He makes his meal; before him, for long
Alive with bright green lizards,
And the springing bustard-fowl,
The track, a straight black line,
Furrows the rich soil; here and there
Clusters of lonely mounds
Topp'd with rough-hewn,
Gray, rain-blear'd statues, overpeer
The sunny waste.

They see the ferry
On the broad, clay-laden
Lone Chorasmian stream; thereon,
With snort and strain,
Two horses, strongly swimming, tow
The ferry-boat, with woven ropes
To either how
Firm harnes'd by the mane; a chief
With shout and shaken spear,
Stands at the prow, and guides them;
but astern

The cowering merchants, in long robes Sit pale beside their wealth Of silk-bales and of balsam-drops, Of gold and ivory, Of turquoise-carth and amethyst, Jasper and chalcedony, And milk-barr'd onyx-stones. The loaded boat swings groaning In the yellow eddies; The Gods behold them.

They see the Heroes Sitting in the dark ship On the foamless, long-heaving Violet sea, At sunset nearing The Happy Islands.

These things, Ulysses, The wise bards also Behold and sing. But oh, what labor! O prince, what pain!

They too can see Tiresias;—but the Gods, Who give them vision, Added this law: That they should bear too His groping blindness, His dark foreboding, His scorn'd white hairs; Bear Hera's anger Through a life lengthen'd To seven ages.

They see the Centaurs
On Pelion;—then they feel,
They too, the maddening wine
Swell their large veins to bursting; in wild pain
They field be hitting green.

They feel the biting spears
Of the grim Lapithæ, and Theseus, drive,
Drive crashing through their bones;
they feel

High on a jutting rock in the red stream Alcmena's dreadful son Ply his bow; such a price The Gods exact for song: To become what we sing.

They see the Indian On his mountain lake; but squalls Make their skiff reel, and worms In the unkind spring have gnawn Their melon-harvest to the heart.—They

The Scythian; but long frosts
Parch them in winter-time on the bare stepp,

1849.

Till they too fade like grass; they crawl Like shadows forth in spring.

They see the merchants On the Oxus stream ;—but care Must visit first them too, and make them pale.

Whether, through whirling sand, A cloud of desert robber-horse have burst

Upon their caravan; or greedy kings, In the wall'd cities the way passes through,

Crush'd them with tolls; or fever-airs, On some great river's marge, Mown them down, far from home.

They see the Heroes Near harbor; -but they share Their lives, and former violent toil in Thebes.

Seven-gated Thebes, or Troy; Or where the echoing oars Of Argo first Startled the unknown sea.

The old Silenus Came, lolling in the sunshine, From the dewy forest-coverts, This way at noon. Sitting by me, while his Fauns Down at the water-side Sprinkled and smoothed His drooping garland, He told me these things.

But I. Ulysses. Sitting on the warm steps, Looking over the valley, All day long, have seen, Without pain, without labor, Sometimes a wild-hair'd Manad-Sometimes a Faun with torches-And sometimes, for a moment, Passing through the dark stems Flowing-robed, the beloved, The desire, the divine, Beloved Iacchus.

Ah, cool night-wind, tremulous stars! Ah, glimmering water, Fitful earth-murmur, Dreaming woods! Ah, golden-haired, strangely smiling Goddess, And thou, proved, much enduring, Wave-toss'd Wanderer! Who can stand still? Ye fade, ye swim, ye waver before me-The cup again!

Faster, faster, O Circe, Goddess. Let the wild, thronging train. The bright procession Of eddying forms, Sweep through my soul!

MEMORIAL VERSES

APRIL, 1850

GOETHE in Weimar sleeps, and Greece. Long since, saw Byron's struggle cease, But one such death remain'd to come; The last poetic voice is dumb-We stand to-day by Wordsworth's tomb.

When Byron's eyes were shut in death, We bow'd our head and held our breath. He taught us little; but our soul Had felt him like the thunder's roll. With shivering heart the strife we saw Of passion with eternal law; And yet with reverential awe We watch'd the fount of fiery life Which served for that Titanic strife.

When Goethe's death was told, we

Sunk, then, is Europe's sagest head. Physician of the iron age, Goethe has done his pilgrimage. He took the suffering human race, He read each wound, each weakness clear:

And struck his finger on the place, And said: Thou ailest here, and here! He look'd on Europe's dying hour Of fitful dream and feverish power; His eye plunged down the weltering strife.

The turmoil of expiring life-He said: The end is everywhere, Art still has truth, take refuge there! And he was happy, if to know Causes of things, and far below His feet to see the lurid flow Of terror, and insane distress, And headlong fate, be happiness.

And Wordsworth!-Ah, pale ghosts rejoice!

For never has such soothing voice Been to your shadowy world convey'd, Since erst, at morn, some wandering

Heard the clear song of Orpheus come Through Hades, and the mournful gloom.

Wordsworth has gone from us-and ye, Ah, may ye feel his voice as we! He too upon a wintry clime Had fallen--on this iron time Of doubts, disputes, distractions, fears. He found us when the age had bound Our souls in its benumbing round; He spoke, and loosed our heart in tears. He laid us as we lay at birth On the cool flowery lap of earth, Smiles broke from us and we had ease: The hills were round us, and the breeze Went o'er the sun-lit fields again: Our foreheads felt the wind and rain. Our youth returned; for there was shed On spirits that had long been dead. Spirits dried up and closely furl'd, The freshness of the early world.

Ah! since dark days still bring to light Man's prudence and man's fiery might, Time may restore us in his course Goethe's sage mind and Byron's force; But where will Europe's latter hour Again find Wordsworth's healing power?

Others will teach us how to dare, And against fear our breast to steel; Others will strengthen us to bear— But who, ah! who, will make us feel? The cloud of mortal destiny, Others will front it fearlessly—

But who, like him, will put it by?
Keep fresh the grass upon his grave
O Rotha, with thy living wave!

Sing him thy best! for few or none Hears thy voice right, now he is gone.

SELF-DECEPTION

SAY, what blinds us, that we claim the glory

Of possessing powers not our share?
—Since man woke on earth, he knows his story,

But, before we woke on earth, we were.

Long, long since, undower'd yet, our spirit

Roam'd, ere birth, the treasuries of God; Saw the gifts, the powers it might inherit.

Ask'd an outfit for its earthly road.

Then, as now, this tremulous, eager being

Strain'd and long'd and grasp'd each gift it saw;

Then, as now, a Power beyond our seeing,

Staved us back, and gave our choice the law.

Ah, whose hand that day through Heaven guided

Man's new spirit, since it was not we? Ah, who swayed our choice and who decided

What our gifts, and what our wants should be?

For, alas! he left us each retaining Shreds of gifts which he refused in full. Still these waste us with their hopeless straining,

Still the attempt to use them proves them null.

And on earth we wander, groping, reeling;

Powers stir in us, stir and disappear.

Ah! and he, who placed our masterfeeling,

Fail'd to place that master-feeling clear.

We but dream we have our wish'd-for powers,

Ends we seek we never shall attain.
Ah! some power exists there, which is ours?

Some end is there, we indeed may gain?

THE SECOND BEST

Moderate tasks and moderate leisure, Quiet living, strict-kept measure Both in suffering and in pleasure— 'Tis for this thy nature yearns.

But so many books thou readest, But so many schemes thou breedest, But so many wishes feedest, That thy poor head almost turns,

And (the world 's so madly jangled, Human things so fast entangled) Nature's wish must now be strangled For that best which she discerns.

So it must be! yet, while leading A strain'd life, while overfeeding, Like the rest, his wit with reading, No small profit that man earns,

Who through all he meets can steer him, Can reject what cannot clear him, Cling to what can truly cheer him; Who each day more surely learns That an impulse, from the distance Of his deepest, best existence. To the words, "Hope, Light, Persistence,"

Strongly sets and truly burns.

LYRIC STANZAS OF EMPEDOCLES

THE out-spread world to span
A cord the Gods first slung,
And then the soul of man
There, like a mirror, hung,
And bade the winds through space impel the gusty toy.

Hither and thither spins
The wind-borne, mirroring soul,
A thousand glimpses wins,
And never sees a whole;
Looks once, and drives elsewhere, and leaves its last employ.

The Gods laugh in their sleeve
To watch man doubt and fear
Who knows not what to believe
Since he sees nothing clear, and dares stamp nothing false when

And dares stamp nothing false where he finds nothing sure.

Is this, Pausanias, so?
And can our souls not strive,
But with the winds must go,
And hurry where they drive?
Is fate indeed so strong, man's strength indeed so poor?

I will not judge. That man,
Howbeit, I judge as lost,
Whose mind allows a plan,
Which would degrade it most;
And he treats doubt the best who tries to see least ill.

Be not, then, fear's blind slave!
Thou art my friend; to thee,
All knowledge that I have,
All skill I wield, are free.
Ask not the latest news of the last miracle.

Ask not what days and nights
In trance Pantheia lay,
But ask how thou such sights
May'st see without dismay;
Ask what most helps when known, thou son of Anchitus!

What? hate, and awe, and shame Fill thee to see our time;

Thou feelest thy soul's frame Shaken and out of chime? What? life and chance go hard with thee too, as with us;

Thy citizens, 'tis said, Envy thee and oppress, Thy goodness no men aid, All strive to make it less;

Tyranny, pride, and lust, fill Sicily's abodes;

Heaven is with earth at strife, Signs make thy soul afraid, The dead return to life, Rivers are dried, winds stay'd;

Scarce can one think in calm, so threatening are the Gods;

And we feel, day and night,
The burden of ourselves—
Well, then, the wiser wight
In his own bosom delves,

And asks what ails him so, and gets what cure he can.

The sophist sneers: Fool, take
Thy pleasure, right or wrong.
The pious wail: Forsake
A world these sophists throng.

Be neither saint nor sophist-led, but be a man!

These hundred doctors try
To preach thee to their school.
We have the truth! they cry;
And yet their oracle,

Trumpet it as they will, is but the same as thine.

Once read thy own breast right, And thou hast done with fears; Man gets no other light, Search he a thousand years.

Sink in thyself! there ask what ails thee, at that shrine!

What makes thee struggle and rave?
Why are men ill at ease?—
'Tis that the lot they have
Fails their own will to please;

For man would make no murmuring were his will obey'd.

And why is it, that still
Man with his lot thus fights?—
'Tis that he makes this will
The measure of his rights,

And believes Nature outraged if his will's gainsaid.

Couldst thou, Pausanias, learn How deep a fault is this; Couldst thou but once discern Thou hast no right to bliss,

No title from the Gods to welfare and repose;

Then thou wouldst look less mazed Whene'er of bliss debarr'd, Nor think the Gods were crazed When thy own lot went hard. But we are all the same—the fools of our own woes!

For, from the first faint morn Of life, the thirst for bliss Deep in man's heart is born; And, sceptic as he is,

He fails not to judge clear if this be quench'd or no.

Nor is the thirst to blame.

Man errs not that he deems
His welfare his true aim,
He errs because he dreams
a world does but exist that w

The world does but exist that welfare to bestow.

We mortals are no kings
For each of whom to sway
A new-made world up-springs,
Meant merely for his play;
No, we are strangers here; the world is from of old.

In vain our pent wills fret, And would the world subdue, Limits we did not set Condition all we do; Born into life we are, and life must be our mould.

Born into life !—man grows
Forth from his parents' stem,
And blends their bloods, as those
Of theirs are blent in them;
So each new man strikes root into a far fore-time.

Born into life!—we bring
A bias with us here,
And, when here, each new thing
Affects us we come near;
To tunes we did not call our being must keep chime.

Born into life!—in vain, Opinions, those or these, Unalter'd to retain The obstinate mind decrees;
Experience, like a sea, soaks all-effacing in.

Born into life!— who lists
May what is false hold dear,
And for himself make mists
Through which to see less clear;
The world is what it is, for all our dust
and din.

Born into life!—'tis we,
And not the world, are new;
Our cry for bliss, our plea,
Others have urged it too—
Our wants have all been felt, our errors made before.

No eye could be too sound
To observe a world so vast,
No patience too profound
To sort what's here amass'd;
How man may here best live no care too great to explore.

But we—as some rude guest
Would change, where'er he roam,
The manners there profess'd
To those he brings from home—
We mark not the world's course, but would have it take ours.

The world's course proves the terms On which man wins content; Reason the proof confirms— We spurn it, and invent

A false course for the world, and for ourselves, false powers.

Riches we wish to get,
Yet remain spendthrifts still;
We would have health, and yet
Still use our bodies ill;
Bafflers of our own prayers, from youth to life's last scenes.

We would have inward peace,

Yet will not look within;
We would have misery cease,
Yet will not cease from sin;
We want all pleasant ends, but will use
no harsh means;

We do not what we ought,
What we ought not, we do,
And lean upon the thought
That chance will bring us through;
But our own acts, for good or ill, are mightier powers.

Yet, even when man forsakes
All sin,—is just, is pure,
Abandons all which makes
His welfare insecure,— ther evistances there are that of

Other existences there are, that clash with ours.

Like us, the lightning-fires Love to have scope and play; The stream, like us, desires An unimpeded way;

Like us, the Libyan wind delights to roam at large.

Streams will not curb their pride The just man not to entomb, Nor lightnings go aside To give his virtues room;

Nor is that wind less rough which blows a good man's barge.

Nature, with equal mind,
Sees all her sons at play;
Sees man control the wind,
The wind sweep man away;
Allows the proudly-riding and the foundering bark.

And, lastly, though of ours No weakness spoil our lot, Though the non-human powers Of Nature harm us not,

The ill deeds of other men make often our life dark.

What were the wise man's plan?—
Through this sharp, toil-set life,
To work as best he can.
And win what's won by strife.—
But we an easier way to cheat our pains have found.

Scratch'd by a fall, with moans
As children of weak age
Lend life to the dumb stones
Whereon to vent their rage,
And bend their little lists, and rate the senseless ground;

So, leath to suffer mute,
We, peopling the void air,
Make Gods to whom to impute
The ills we ought to bear;
With God and Fate to rail at, suffering easily.

Yet grant—as sense long miss'd Things that are now perceived, And much may still exist Which is not yet believed—Grant that the world were full of Gods we cannot see;

All things the world which fill

Of but one stuff are spun,
That we who rail are still,
With what we rail at, one;
with the o'erlabored Power tha

One with the o'erlabored Power that through the breadth and length

Of earth, and air, and sea,

And patiently exact

In men, and plants, and stones,
Hath toil perpetually,
And travails, pants, and moans;
Fain would do all things well, but sometimes fails in strength.

This universal God
Alike to any act
Proceeds at any nod,
And quietly declaims the cursings of himself.

This is not what man hates, Yet he can curse but this. Harsh Gods and hostile Fates Are dreams! this only is

Is everywhere; sustains the wise, the foolish elf.

Not only, in the intent
To attach blame elsewhere,
Do we at will invent
Stern Powers who make their care
To embitter human life, malignant
Deities:

But, next, we would reverse
The scheme ourselves have spun,
And what we made to curse
We now would lean upon,
And feign kind Gods who perfect why man vainly tries.

Look, the world tempts our eye, And we would know it all!
We map the starry sky.
We mine this earthen ball.

We measure the sea-tides, we number the sea-sands;

We scrutinise the dates
Of long-past human things,
The bounds of effaced states,
The lines of deceased kings;
We search out dead men's words, and works of dead men's hands:

We shut our eyes, and muse How our own minds are made, What springs of thought they use, How righten'd, how betray'd—

And spend our wit to name what most employ unnamed.

But still, as we proceed The mass swells more and more Of volumes yet to read, Of secrets yet to explore.

Our hair grows gray, our eyes ardimm'd, our heat is tamed;

We rest our faculties,
And thus address the Gods:
"True science if there is,
It stays in your abodes!
Man's measures cannot mete the immeasurable All.

"You only can take in
The world's immense design.
Our desperate search was sin,
Which henceforth we resign,
Sure only that your mind sees all things which befall."

Fools! That in man's brief term He cannot all things view, Affords no ground to affirm That there are Gods who do; Nor does being weary prove that he has where to rest.

Again.—Our youthful blood
Claims rapture as its right;
The world, a rolling flood
Of newness and delight,
Draws in the enamor'd gazer to its shining breast;

Pleasure, to our hot grasp, Gives flowers after flowers; With passionate warmth we clasp Hand after hand in ours; Now do we soon perceive how fast our youth is spent.

At once our eyes grow clear!
We see, in blank dismay,
Year posting after year,
Sense after sense decay;
Our shivering heart is mined by secret discontent;

Yet still, in spite of truth, In spite of hopes entomb'd, That longing of our youth Burns ever unconsumed, Still hungrier for delight as delights grow more rare.

We pause; we hush our heart,
And thus address the Gods:
"The world hath fail'd to impart
The joy our youth forebodes, Fail'd to fill up the void which in our breasts we bear.

"Changeful till now, we still Look'd on to something new; Let us, with changeless will, Henceforth look on to you, find with you the joy we in vain here

To find with you the joy we in vain here require!"

Fools! That so often here

Happiness mock'd our prayer, I think, might make us fear A like event elsewhere; ke us, not fly to dreams, but moderate

Make us, not fly to dreams, but moderate desire.

And yet, for those who know Themselves, who wisely take Their way through life, and bow To what they cannot break, by should I say that life need yield

Why should I say that life need yield but moderate bliss?

Shall we, with temper spoil'd,
Health sapp'd by living ill,
And judgment all embroil'd
By sadness and self-will,
Shall we judge what for man is not true
bliss or is?

Is it so small a thing
To have enjoy'd the sun,
To have lived light in the spring,
To have loved, to have thought, to have done:

To have advanced true friends, and beat down baffling foes—

That we must feign a bliss
Of doubtful future date,
And, while we dream on this,
Lose all our present state,
And relegate to worlds yet distant our repose?

Not much, I know, you prize
What pleasures may be had,
Who look on life with eyes
Estranged, like mine, and sad;
And yet the village-churl feels the truth
more than you.

Who's loath to leave this life
Which to him little yields—
His hard-task'd sunburnt wife,
His often-labor'd fields,
The boors with whom he talk'd, the country-spots he knew.

But thou, because thou hear'st Men scoff at Heaven and Fate, Because the Gods thou fear'st

Fail to make blest thy state,
Tremblest, and wilt not dare to trust
the joys there are!

I say: Fear not! Life still Leaves human effort scope.
But, since life teems with ill,
Nurse no extravagant hope;
Because thou must not dream, thou need'st not then despair! 1852.

CALLICLES' SONG

FROM EMPEDOCLES ON ETNA

THROUGH the black, rushing smokebursts, Thick breaks the red flame; All Etna heaves fiercely Her forest-clothed frame,

Not here, O Apollo!
Are haunts meet for thee.
But, where Helicon breaks down
In cliff to the sea,

Where the moon-silver'd inlets Send far their light voice Up the still vale of Thisbe, O speed, and rejoice!

On the sward at the cliff-top Lie strewn the white flocks, On the cliff-side the pigeons Roost deep in the rocks.

In the moonlight the shepherds, Soft lull'd by the rills, Lie wrapped in their blankets Asleep on the hills.

—What forms are these coming So white through the gloom? What garments out-glistening The gold-flower'd broom?

What sweet-breathing presence Out-perfumes the thyme? What voices enrapture The night's balmy prime?— 'Tis Apollo comes leading His choir, the Nine.
—The leader is fairest, But all are divine.

They are lost in the hollows! They stream up again! What seeks on this mountain The glorified train?—

They bathe on this mountain, In the spring by their road; Then on to Olympus, Their endless abode.

—Whose praise do they mention.
Of what is it told?—
What will be for ever;
What was from of old.

First hymn they the Father Of all things; and then, The rest of immortals, The action of men;

The day in his hotness, The strife with the palm; The night in her silence, The stars in their calm.

THE YOUTH OF NATURE

RAISED are the dripping oars, Silent the boat! the lake, Lovely and soft as a dream, Swims in the sheen of the moon. The mountains stand at its head Clear in the pure June-night, But the valleys are flooded with haze. Rydal and Fairfield are there; In the shadow Wordsworth lies dead. So it is, so it will be for aye. Nature is fresh as of old, Is lovely; a mortal is dead.

The spots which recall him survive, For he lent a new life to these hills. The Pillar still broods o'er the fields Which border Ennerdale Lake, And Egremont sleeps by the sea. The gleam of The Evening Star Twinkles on Grasmere no more, But ruin'd and solemn and gray The sheepfold of Michael survives; And, far to the south, the heath Still blows in the Quantock coombs By the favorite waters of Ruth. These survive!—yet not without pain. Pain and dejection to-night, Can I feel that their poet is gone.

He grew old in an age he condemn'd. He look'd on the rushing decay Of the times which had shelter'd his youth,

Felt the dissolving throes
Of a social order he loved;
Outlived his brethren, his peers;
And, like the Theban seer,
Died in his enemies' day.

Cold bubbled the spring of Tilphusa, Copais lay bright in the moon, Helicon glass'd in the lake Its firs, and afar rose the peaks Of Parnassus, snowily clear; Thebes was behind him in flames, And the clang of arms in his ear, When his awe-struck captors led The Theban seer to the spring. Tiresias drank and died. Nor did reviving Thebes See such a prophet again.

Well may we mourn, when the head
Of a sacred poet lies low
In an age which can rear them no more!
The complaining millions of men
Darken in labor and pain;
But he was a priest to us all
Of the wonder and bloom of the world,
Which we saw with his eyes, and were glad.

He is dead, and the fruit-bearing day Of his race is past on the earth; And darkness returns to our eyes.

For, oh! is it you, is it you, Moonlight, and shadow, and lake. And mountains, that fill us with joy, Or the poet who sings you so well? Is it you, O beauty, O grace, O charm, O romance, that we feel, Or the voice which reveals what you are? Are ye, like daylight and sun, Shared and rejoiced in by all? Or are ve immersed in the mass Of matter, and hard to extract, Or sunk at the core of the world Too deep for the most to discern? Like stars in the deep of the sky, Which arise on the glass of the sage, But are lost when their watcher is gone.

They are here "—I heard, as men heard In Mysian Ida the voice Of the Mighty Mother, or Crete, The murmur of Nature reply— "Loveliness, magic, and grace, They are here! they are set in the world. They abide; and the finest of sours Hath not been thrill'd by them all,
Nor the dullest been dead to them quite.
The poet who sings them may die,
But they are immortal and live,
For they are the life of the world.
Will ye not learn it, and know,
When ye mourn that a poet is dead,
That the singer was less than his themes,
Life, and emotion, and I?

"More than the singer are these. Weak is the tremor of pain That thrills in his mournfullest chord To that which once ran through his soul. Cold the elation of joy In his gladdest, airiest song, To that which of old in his youth Fill'd him and made him divine. Hardly his voice at its best Gives us a sense of the awe, The vastness, the grandeur, the gloom Of the unlit gulf of himself.

"Ye know not yourselves; and your bards--

The clearest, the best, who have read
Most in themselves—have beheld
Less than they left unreveal'd.
Ye express not yourselves;—can you make

With marble, with color, with word, What charm'd you in others re-live? Can thy pencil, O artist! restore The figure, the bloom of thy love, As she was in her morning of spring? Canst thou paint the ineffable smile Of her eyes as they rested on thine? Can the image of life have the glow, The motion of life itself?

"Yourselves and your fellows ye know not; and me,

The mateless, the one, will ye know?
Will ye scan me, and read me, and tell
Of the thoughts that ferment in my
breast,

My longing, my sadness, my joy?
Will ye claim for your great ones the gift

To have render'd the gleam of my skies,
To have echoed the moan of my seas,
Utter'd the voice of my hills?
When your great ones depart, will ye
say:

All things have suffer'd a loss, Nature is hid in their grave?

"Race after race, man after man, Have thought that my secret was theirs, Have dream'd that I lived but for them, That they were my glory and joy. -They are dust, they are changed, they are gone!

1852.

SELF-DEPENDENCE

WEARY of myself, and sick of asking What I am, and what I ought to be. At this vessel's prow I stand, which bears

Forwards, forwards, o'er the starlit sea.

And a look of passionate desire O'er the sea and to the stars I send: "Ye who from my childhood up have calm'd me, Calm me, ah, compose me to the end!

"Ah, once more," I cried, "ye stars, ye waters, On my heart your mighty charm renew;

Still, still let me, as I gaze upon you, Feel my soul becoming vast like you!"

From the intense, clear, star-sown vault of heaven.

Over the lit sea's unquiet way, In the rustling night-air came the an-[thev.

"Wouldst thou be as these are? Live as "Unaffrighted by the silence round them.

Undistracted by the sights they see. These demand not that the things without them

Yield them love, amusement, sympathy.

"And with joy the stars perform their shining,

And the sea its long moon-silver'd roll; For self-poised they live, nor pine with noting

All the fever of some differing soul.

"Bounded by themselves, and unregard-

In what state God's other works may be, In their own tasks all their powers pouring,

These attain the mighty life you see."

O air-born voice! long since, severely clear,

A cry like thine in mine own heart I he. hear:

"Resolve to be thyself; and know that Who finds himself, loses his misery!" 1852.

MORALITY

WE cannot kindle when we will The fire which in the heart resides: The spirit bloweth and is still, In mystery our soul abides.

But tasks in hours of insight will'd Can be through hours of gloom fulfill'd.

With aching hands and bleeding feet We dig and heap, lay stone on stone; We bear the burden and the heat Of the long day, and wish 't were done. Not till the hours of light return. All we have built do we discern.

Then, when the clouds are off the soul. When thou dost bask in Nature's eye, Ask, how she view'd thy self-control, Thy struggling, task'd morality-

Nature, whose free, light, cheerful air, Oft made thee, in thy gloom, despair.

And she, whose censure thou dost dread. Whose eye thou wast afraid to seek, See, on her face a glow is spread, A strong emotion on her cheek!

"Ah, child!" she cries, "that strife divine.

Whence was it, for it is not mine?

"There is no effort on my brow— I do not strive, I do not weep; I rush with the swift spheres and glow In joy, and when I will, I sleep. Yet that severe, that earnest air. I saw, I felt it once-but where?

"I knew not yet the gauge of time, Nor wore the manacles of space; I felt it in some other clime, I saw it in some other place.

Twas when the heavenly house I trod, And lay upon the breast of God." 1852.

A SUMMER NIGHT

In the deserted, moon-blanch'd street, How lonely rings the echo of my feet! Those windows, which I gaze at, frown, Silent and white, unopening down, Repellant as the world :-but see, A break between the housetops shows The moon! and, lost behind her, fading

Into the dewy dark obscurity Down at the far horizon's rim. Doth a whole tract of heaven disclose!

And to my mind the thought Is on a sudden brought Of a past night, and a far different scene. Headlands stood out into the moonlit deep

As clearly as at noon; The spring-tide's brimming flow Heaved dazzlingly between;

Houses, with long white sweep, (firdled the glistening bay; Behind, through the soft air, The blue haze-cradled mountains spread away,

The night was far more fair-But the same restless pacings to and fro, And the same vainly throbbing heart was there.

And the same bright, calm moon.

And the calm moonlight seems to say: Hist thou then still the old unquiet breast, Which neither deadens into rest, Nor ever feels the fiery glow That whirls the spirit from itself away, But fluctuates to and fro, Never by passion quite possess'd And never quite benumb'd by the world's sway?-

And I. I know not if to pray Still to be what I am, or yield and be Like all the other men I see.

For most men in a brazen prison live, Where, in the sun's hot eye, With heads bent o'er their toil, they languidly

Their lives to some unmeaning taskwork give,

Dreaming of nought beyond their prison wall.

And as, year after year, Fresh products of their barren labor fall From their tired hands, and rest Never yet comes more near,

Gloom settles slowly down over their breast; And while they try to stem

The waves of mournful thought by which they are pressed, Death in their prison reaches them, Unfreed, having seen nothing, still unblest.

And the rest, a few, Escape their prison and depart On the wide ocean of life anew. There the freed prisoner, where'er his heart

Listeth, will sail; Nor doth he know how there prevail.

Despotic on that sea,

Trade-winds which cross it from eternity Awhile he holds some false way, unde-

By thwarting signs, and braves

The freshening wind and blackening

And then the tempest strikes him; and between

The lightning-bursts is seen Only a driving wreck,

And the pale master on his spar-strewn

With anguish'd face and flying hair Grasping the rudder hard,

Still bent to make some port he knows not where,

Still standing for some false, impossible shore.

And sterner comes the roar Of sea and wind, and through the deepening gloom Fainter and fainter wreck and helmsman

And he too disappears, and comes no more.

Is there no life, but these alone? Madman or slave, must man be one?

Plainness and clearness without shadow of stain!

Clearness divine!

Ye heavens, whose pure dark regions have no sign

Of languor, though so calm, and, though so great,

Are yet untroubled and unpassionate: Who, though so noble, share in the world's toil,

And, though so task'd, keep free from dust and soil!

I will not say that your mild deeps retain A tinge, it may be, of their silent pain Who have long'd deeply once, and long'd in vain-

But I will rather say that you remain A world above man's head, to let him

How boundless might his soul's horizons

How vast, yet of what clear transparency!

How it were good to abide there, and breathe free;

How fair a lot to fill Is left to each man still!

1852.

THE BURIED LIFE

LIGHT flows our war of mocking words, and yet,

Behold, with tears mine eyes are wet! I feel a nameless sadness o'er me roll, Yes, yes, we know that we can jest, We know, we know that we can smile!

But there's a something in this breast, To which thy light words bring no rest. And thy gay smiles no anodyne. Give me thy hand, and hush awhile, And turn those limpid eyes on mine,

And let me read there, love! thy inmost soul.

Alas! is even love too weak To unlock the heart, and let it speak? Are even lovers powerless to reveal To one another what indeed they feel? I knew the mass of men conceal'd Their thoughts, for fear that if reveal'd They would by other men be met With blank indifference, or with blame reproved:

I knew they lived and moved Trick'd in disguises, alien to the rest Of men, and alien to themselves—and

The same heart beats in every human breast!

But we, my love !-doth a like spell be-

Our hearts, our voices?—must we too be

Ah! well for us, if even we, Even for a moment, can get free Our heart, and have our lips unchain'd; For that which seals them hath been deep-ordain'd!

Fate, which foresaw

How frivolous a baby man would be-By what distractions he would be possess'd.

How he would pour himself in every strife.

And well-nigh change his own identity— That it might keep from his capricious

His genuine self, and force him to obey Even in his own despite his being's law, Bade through the deep recesses of our breast

The unregarded river of our life Pursue with indiscernible flow its way: And that we should not see The buried stream, and seem to be Eddving at large in blind uncertainty. Though driving on with it eternally.

But often, in the world's most crowded streets.

But often, in the din of strife,

There rises an unspeakable desire

After the knowledge of our buried life; A thirst to spend our fire and restless

In tracking out our true, original course:

A longing to inquire

Into the mystery of this heart which

So wild, so deep in us—to know

Whence our lives come and where they

And many a man in his own breast then delves.

But deep enough, alas! none ever mines. And we have been on many thousand

And we have shown, on each, spirit and power;

But hardly have we, for one little hour, Been on our own line, have we been

Hardly had skill to utter one of all The nameless feelings that course through our breast, But they course on for ever unexpress'd. And long we try in vain to speak and act Our hidden self, and what we say and do

Is eloquent, is well—but 'tis not true! And then we will no more be rack'd With inward striving, and demand Of all the thousand nothings of the hour

Their stupefying power; Ah yes, and they benumb us at our call! Yet still, from time to time, vague and forlorn. From the soul's subterranean depth upborne

As from an infinitely distant land, Come airs, and floating echoes, and con-

A melancholy into all our day.

Only—but this is rare— When a beloved hand is laid in ours,

When, jaded with the rush and glare Of the interminable hours,

Our eyes can in another's eyes read clear,

When our world-deafen'd ear

Is by the tones of a loved voice caress'd-A bolt is shot back somewhere in our breast.

And a lost pulse of feeling stirs again.

The eye sinks inward, and the heart lies plain,

And what we mean, we say, and what we would, we know.

A man becomes aware of his life's flow, And hears its winding murmur; and he

The meadows where it glides, the sun, the breeze.

And there arrives a lull in the hot race Wherein he doth for ever chase That flying and elusive shadow, rest. An air of coolness plays upon his face, And an unwonted calm pervades his breast.

And then he thinks he knows The hills where his life rose, And the sea where it goes. 1852.

LINES

WRITTEN IN KENSINGTON GARDENS

In this lone, open glade I lie, Screen'd by deep boughs on either hand; And at its end, to stay the eye, Those black-crown'd, red-boled pinetrees stand!

Birds here make song, each bird has his, Across the girdling city's hum. How green under the boughs it is! How thick the tremulous sheep-cries come!

Sometimes a child will cross the glade To take his nurse his broken toy; Sometimes a thrush flit overhead Deep in her unknown day's employ.

Here at my feet what wonders pass, What endless, active life is here! What blowing daisies, fragrant grass! An air-stirr'd forest, fresh and clear.

Scarce fresher is the mountain-sod Where the tired angler lies, stretch'd out,

And, eased of basket and of rod, Counts his day's spoil, the spotted trout.

In the huge world, which roars hard by, Be others happy if they can!
But in my helpless cradle I
Was breathed on by the rural Pan.

I. on men's impious uproar hurl'd, Think often, as I hear them rave. That peace has left the upper world And now keeps only in the grave. Yet here is peace for ever new! When I who watch them am away, Still all things in this glade go through The changes of their quiet day.

Then to their happy rest they pass! The flowers upclose, the birds are fed, The night comes down upon the grass, The child sleeps warmly in his bed.

Calm soul of all things! make it mine To feel, amid the city's jar, That there abides a peace of thine, Man did not make, and cannot mar,

The will to neither strive nor cry,
The power to feel with others give!
Calm, calm me more! nor let me die
Before I have begun to live. 1852.

THE FUTURE

A WANDERER is man from his birth.
He was born in a ship
On the breast of the river of Time;
Brimming with wonder and joy
He spreads out his arms to the light,
Rivets his gaze on the banks of the stream.

As what he sees is, so have his thoughts been.
Whether he wakes

Where the snowy mountainous pass, Echoing the screams of the eagles, Hems in its gorges the bed Of the new-born clear-flowing stream; Whether he first sees light Where the river in gleaming rings Sluggishly winds through the plain; Whether in sound of the swallowing sea-As is the world on the banks, So is the mind of the man.

Vainly does each, as he glides,
Fable and dream
Of the lands which the river of Time
Had left ere he woke on its breast,
Or shall reach when his eyes have been closed.

Only the tract where he sails He wots of; only the thoughts, Raised by the objects he passes, are his.

Who can see the green earth any more As she was by the sources of Time? Who imagines her fields as they lay In the sunshine, unworn by the plough? Who thinks as they thought, [breast, The tribes who then roun'd on her Her vigorous, primitive sons? What girl
Now reads in her bosom as clear
As Rebekah read, when she sate
At eve by the palm-shaded well?
Who guards in her breast
As deep, as pellucid a spring
Of feeling, as tranquil, as sure?

What bard,
At the height of his vision, can deem
Of God, of the world, of the soul,
With a plainness as near,
As flashing as Moses felt
When he lay in the night by his flock
On the starlit Arabian waste?
Can rise and obey
The beck of the Spirit like him?

This tract which the river of Time Now flows through with us, is the plain. Gone is the calm of its earlier shore. Border'd by cities and hoarse With a thousand cries is its stream. And we on its breast, our minds Are confused as the cries which we hear, Changing and shot as the sights which we see.

And we say that repose has fled
For ever the course of the river of Time.
That cities will crowd to its edge
In a blacker, incessanter line;
That the din will be more on its banks,
Denser the trade on its stream,
Flatter the plain where it flows,
Fiercer the sun overhead.
That never will those on its breast
See an ennobling sight,
Drink of the feeling of quiet again.

But what was before us we know not, And we know not what shall succeed.

Haply, the river of Time— As it grows, as the towns on its marge Fling their wavering lights On a wider, statelier stream— May acquire, if not the calm Of its early mountainous shore, Yet a solemn peace of its own.

And the width of the waters, the hush
Of the gray expanse where he floats, Freshening its current and spotted with foam

As it draws to the Ocean, may strike Peace to the soul of the man on its breast—

As the pale waste widens around him, As the banks fade dimmer away, As the stars come out, and the nightwind

Brings up the stream
Murmurs and scents of the infinite sea.

STANZAS IN MEMORY OF THE AUTHOR OF "OBERMANN"

In front the awful Alpine track Crawls up its rocky stair; The autumn storm-winds drive the rack, Close o'er it, in the air.

Senancour was born in 1770. He was educated for the priesthood, and passed some time in the seminary of St. Sulpice; broke away from the Seminary and from France itself, and passed some years in Switzerland, where he married; returned to France in middle life, and followed thenceforward the career of a man of letters, but with hardly any fame or success. He diedan old man in 1846, desiring that on his grave might be placed these words only; Eternité, deviens mon visibe!

The influence of Rousseau, and certain affinities with more famous and fortunate authors of his own day.—Chateaubriand and Madame de Staël.—are everywhere visible in Senancour. But though, like these eminent personages, he may be called a sentimental writer, and though Obermann, a collection of letters from Switzerland treating almost entirely of nature and of the human soul, may be called a work of sentiment. Senancour has a gravity and severity which distinguish him from all other writers of the sentimental selbod. The world is with him it his solitude far less than it is with them; of all writers he is the most perfectly isolated and the least attitudinizing. His chief work, too, has a value and power of its own, apart from these merits of its author. The stir of all the main forces, by which modern life is and has been impelled, lives in the letters of Obermann; the dissolving agencies of the eighteenth century, the fiery storm of the French Revolution, the first faint promise and dawn of that new world which our own time is but more fully bringing to light, all these are to be felt, almost to be touched, there. To me, indeed, it will always seem that the impressiveness of this production can hardly be rated too high.

Beside Obermann there is one other of Semaneour's works which, for those spirits who feel his attraction, is very interesting: its title is, Libres Meditations dan Solitaire Incomm. Arnold snote. The passage of George Sand alluded to may be found in her Questions d'Art et de Littérature. Saime Beuve has several times written of Senancour; especially in his Portraits Contemporains, Vol. I, and in Chalcaubriand et son Groupe littéraire, Chap. 14.)

Behind are the abandon'd baths ¹
Mute in their meadows lone;
The leaves are on the valley-paths,
The mists are on the Rhone—

The white mists rolling like a sea! I hear the torrents roar.

—Yes, Obermann, all speaks of thee; I feel thee near once more!

I turn thy leaves! I feel their breath Once more upon me roll; That air of languor, cold, and death, Which brooded o'er thy soul.

Fly hence, poor wretch, whoe'er thou art, Condemn'd to cast about, All shipwreck in thy own weak heart, For comfort from without!

A fever in these pages burns Beneath the calm they feign; A wounded human spirit turns, Here, on its bed of pain.

Yes, though the virgin mountain-air Fresh through these pages blows; Though to these leaves the glaciers spare The soul of their white snows;

Though here a mountain-murmur swells Of many a dark-bough'd pine; Though, as you read, you hear the bells Of the high-pasturing kine—

Yet, through the hum of torrent lone, And brooding mountain-bee, There sobs I know not what ground-tone Of human agony.

Is it for this, because the sound Is fraught too deep with pain, That, Obermann! the world around So little loves thy strain?

Some secrets may the poet tell, For the world loves new ways; To tell too deep ones is not well— It knows not what he says.

Yet, of the spirits who have reign'd In this our troubled day, I know but two, who have attain'd Save thee, to see their way.

By England's lakes, in gray old age, His quiet home one keeps; And one, the strong much-toiling sage, In German Weimar sleeps,

But Wordsworth's eyes avert their ken From half of human fate; And Goethe's course few sons of men May think to emulate.

For he pursued a lonely road, His eyes on Nature's plan; Neither made man too much a God, Nor God too much a man.

Strong was he, with a spirit free From mists, and sane, and clear; Clearer, how much! than ours—yet we Have a worse course to steer.

For though his manhood bore the blast Of a tremendous time, Yet in a tranquil world was pass'd His tenderer youthful prime.

But we, brought forth and rear'd in hours Of change, alarm, surprise— What shelter to grow ripe is ours? What leisure to grow wise?

Like children bathing on the shore, Buried a wave beneath, The second wave succeeds, before We have had time to breathe.

Too fast we live, too much are tried, Too harass'd, to attain Wordsworth's sweet calm, or Goethe's wide

And luminous view to gain.

And then we turn, thou sadder sage, To thee! we feel thy spell!

—The hopeless tangle of our age, Thou too hast scann'd it well!

Immoveable thou sittest, still As death, composed to bear! Thy head is clear, thy feeling chill, And icy thy despair.

Yes, as the son of Thetis said, I hear thee saying now: Greater by far than thou are dead; Strive not! die also thou!

Ah! two desires toss about
The poet's feverish blood.
One drives him to the world without,
And one to solitude.

¹ The Baths of Leuk. This poem was conceived, and partly composed, in the valley going down from the foot of the Gemmi Pass towards the Rhone. (Arnold.)

The glow, he cries, the thrill of life, Where, where do these abound?—Not in the world, not in the strife Of men, shall they be found.

He who hath watch'd, not shared, the strife,

Knows how the day hath gone. He only lives with the world's life, Who hath renounced his own.

To thee we come, then! Clouds are roll'd Where thou, O seer! art set;
Thy realm of thought is drear and cold—
The world is colder yet!

And thou hast pleasures, too, to share With those who come to thee—Balms floating on thy mountain-air, And healing sights to see.

How often, where the slopes are green On Jaman, hast thou sate By some high chalet-door, and seen The summer-day grow late;

And darkness steal o'er the wet grass With the pale crocus starr'd, And reach that glimmering sheet of glass Beneath the piny sward,

Lake Leman's waters, far below!
And watch'd the rosy light
Fade from the distant peaks of snow;
And on the air of night

Heard accents of the eternal tongue Through the pine branches play— Listen'd, and felt thyself grow young! Listeu'd and wept—Away!

Away the dreams that but deceive And thou, sad guide, adieu! I go, fate drives me; but I leave Half of my life with you.

We, in some unknown Power's employ, Move on a rigorous line; Can neither, when we will, enjoy, Nor, when we will, resign.

I in the world must live; but thou, Thou melancholy shade! Wilt not, if thou canst see me now, Condemn me, nor upbraid.

For thou art gone away from earth, And place with those dost claim, The Children of the Second Birth, Whom the world could not tame; And with that small, transfigured band, Whom many a different way Conducted to their common land, Thou learn'st to think as they.

Christian and pagan, king and slave, Soldier and anchorite, Distinctions we esteem so grave, Are nothing in their sight.

They do not ask, who pined unseen, Who was on action hurl'd. Whose one bond is, that all have been Unspotted by the world.

There without anger thou wilt see Him who obeys thy spell No more, so he but rest, like thee, Unsoil'd!—and so, farewell.

Farewell!—Whether thou now liest near That much-loved inland sea, The ripples of whose blue waves cheer Vevey and Meillerie:

And in that gracious region bland, Where with clear-rustling wave The scented pines of Switzerland Stand dark round thy green grave,

Between the dusty vineyard-walls Issuing on that green place The early peasant still recalls The pensive stranger's face,

And stoops to clear thy moss-grown date
Ere he plods on again;—
Or whether, by maligner fate,
Among the swarms of men,

Where between granite terraces
The blue Seine rolls her wave,
The Capital of Pleasure sees
The hardly-heard-of grave;—

Farewell! Under the sky we part, In the stern Alpine dell. O unstrung will! O broken heart! A last, a last farewell! 1852.

REQUIESCAT

STREW on her roses, roses, And never a spray of yew! In quiet she reposes; Ah, would that I did too!

Her mirth the world required;
She bathed it in smiles of glee.
But her heart was tired, tired,
And now they let her be.

Her life was turning, turning, In mazes of heat and sound. But for peace her soul was vearning, And now peace laps her round.

Her cabin'd, ample spirit, It flutter'd and fail'd for breath. To-night it doth inherit 1853. The vasty hall of death.

SOHRAB AND RUSTUM

And the fog rose out of the Oxus stream. But all the Tartar camp along the stream Was hush'd, and still the men were plunged in sleep;

Sohrab alone, he slept not : all night long He had lain wakeful, tossing on his bed; But when the gray dawn stole into his

He rose, and clad himself, and girt his sword.

And took his horseman's cloak, and left

And went abroad into the cold wet fog, Through the dim camp to Peran-Wisa's

Through the black Tartar tents he pass'd, which stood

Clustering like beehives on the low flat strand

Of Oxus, where, the summer-floods o'erflow

When the sun melts the snows in high Pamere:

Through the black tents he pass'd, o'er that low strand,

And to a hillock came, a little back

From the stream's brink—the spot where first a boat,

Crossing the stream in summer, scrapes the land.

The men of former times had crown'd the top

With a clay fort; but that was fall'n, and now

The Tartars built there Peran-Wisa's tent, A dome of laths, and o'er it felts were

And Sohrab came there, and went in, and

Upon the thick piled carpets in the tent, And found the old man sleeping on his

Of rugs and felts, and near him lay his Step And Peran-Wisa heard him, though the

Was dull'd; for he slept light, an old man's sleep;

And he rose quickly on one arm, and said:-

"Who art thou? for it is not yet clear dawn.

Speak! is there news, or any night alarm?"

But Sohrab came to the bedside, and said:-

"Thou know'st me, Peran-Wisa! it is I. The sun is not yet risen, and the foe

Sleep; but I sleep not; all night long
I lie

Tossing and wakeful, and I come to thee. For so did King Afrasiab bid me seek Thy counsel, and to heed thee as thy son, In Samarcand, before the army march'd; And I will tell thee what my heart desires.

Thou know's if, since from Ader-baijan

I came among the Tartars and bore arms, I have still served Afrasiab well, and shown,

At my boy's years, the courage of a man. This too thou know'st, that while I still bear on

The conquering Tartar ensigns through the world.

And beat the Persians back on every field.

I seek one man, one man, and one alone-Rustum, my father; who I hoped should greet,

Should one day greet, upon some wellfought field.

His not unworthy, not inglerious son. So I long hoped, but him I never find. Come then, hear now, and grant me what I ask.

Let the two armies rest to-day; but I Will challenge forth the bravest Per sian lords

To meet me, man to man; if I prevail, Rustum will surely hear it; if I fall— Old man, the dead need no one, claim no kin.

Dim is the rumor of a common fight, Where host meets host, and many names are sunk:

But of a single combat fame speaks clear."

He spoke; and Peran-Wisa took the hand

Of the young man in his, and sigh'd, and said :-

"O Sohrab, an unquiet heart is thine!

Canst thou not rest among the Tartar chiefs,

And share the battle's common chance with us

Who love thee, but must press for ever first.

In single fight incurring single risk,

To find a father thou hast never seen? That were far best, my son, to stay with

Unmurmuring; in our tents, while it is war,

And when 't is truce, then in Afrasiab's towns.

But, if this one desire indeed rules all, To seek out Rustum—seek him not through fight!

Seek him in peace, and carry to his arms,

O Sohrab, carry an unwounded son!
But far hence seek him, for he is not

For now it is not as when I was young.
When Rustum was in front or every fray:

But now he keeps apart, and sits at home.

In Seistan, with Zal, his father old.

Whether that his own mighty strength at last

Feels the abhorr'd approaches of old age, Or in some quarrel with the Persian King.

There go!—Thou wilt not? Yet my heart forebodes

Danger or death awaits thee on this field.

Fain would I know thee safe and well, though lost

To us; fain therefore send thee hence, in peace

To seek thy father, not seek single fights

In vain;—but who can keep the lion's cub

From ravening, and who govern Rustum's son?

Go, I will grant thee what thy heart desires."

So said he, and dropp'd Sohrab's hand, and left

His bed, and the warm rugs whereon he lay;

And o'er his chilly limbs his woollen coat

He pass'd, and tied his sandals on his feet.

And threw a white cloak round him, and he took

In his right hand a ruler's staff, no sword;

And on his head he set his sheep-skin cap.

Rlack glassy curl'd the fleece of Kara-

Black, giossy, curl'd, the fleece of Kara-Kul;

And raised the curtain of his tent, and call'd

His herald to his side, and went abroad.

The sun by this had risen, and clear'd the fog

From the broad Oxus and the glittering sands.

And from their tents the Tartar horsemen filed

Into the open plain; so Haman bade—Haman, who next to Peran-Wisa ruled

The host, and still was in his lusty prime.

From their black tents, long files of horse, they stream'd:

As when some gray November morn the files,

In marching order spread, of long-neck'd cranes

Stream over Casbin and the southern slopes

Of Elburz, from the Aralian estuaries, Or some frore Casplan reed-bed, southward bound

For the warm Persian sea-board—so they stream'd.

The Tartars of the Oxus, the King's guard,
First, with black sheep-skin caps and with long spears;

Large men, large steeds; who from Bokhara come And Khiva, and ferment the milk of mares. Next, the more temperate Toorkmuns of the south,

The Tukes, and the lances of Salore

The Tukas, and the lances of Salore, And those from Attruck and the Caspian sands;

Light men and on light steeds, who only

The acrid milk of camels, and their wells.

And then a swarm of wandering horse,

From far, and a more doubtful service own'd:

The Tartars of Ferghana, from the banks

Of the Jaxartes, men with scanty beards
And close-set skull-caps; and those wilder hordes fern waste.

Who roam o'er Kipchak and the north

Kalmucks and unkempt Kuzzaks, tribes who stray

Nearest the Pole, and wandering Kirghizzes,

Who come on shaggy ponies from Pamere:

These all filed out from camp into the plain.

And on the other side the Persians form'd:—

First a light cloud of horse, Tartars they seem'd.

The Ilyats of Khorassan; and behind,
The royal troops of Persia, horse and
foot,

Marshall'd battalions bright in burnish'd steel.

But Perau-Wisa with his herald came, Threading the Tartar squadrons to the front,

And with his staff kept back the foremost ranks.

And when Ferood, who led the Persians,

That Peran-Wisa kept the Tartars back, He took his spear, and to the front he came,

And check'd his ranks, and fix'd them

where they stood.

And the old Tartar came upon the sand Betwixt the silent hosts, and spake, and said:

"Ferood, and ye, Persians and Tartars, hear!

Let there be truce between the hosts to-

But choose a champion from the Persian lords

To fight our champion Sohrab, man to man."

As, in the country, on a morn in June, When the dew glistens on the pearled ears.

A shiver runs through the deep corn for joy—

So, when they heard what Peran-Wisa said.

A thrill through all the Tartar squadrons ran

Of pride and hope for Sohrab, whom they loved.

But as a troop of pedlars, from Cabool,

Cross underneath the Indian Caucasus, That vast sky-neighboring mountain of milk snow;

Crossing so high, that, as they mount, they pass [the snow, Long flocks of travelling birds dead on Choked by the air, and scarce can they themselves

Slake their parch'd throats with sugar'd mulberries—

In single file they move, and stop their breath,

For fear they should dislodge the o'erhanging snows—

So the pale Persians held their breath with fear.

And to Ferood his brother chiefs came up

To counsel: Gudurz and Zoarrah came, And Feraburz, who ruled the Persian host

Second, and was the uncle of the King; These came and counsell'd, and then Gudurz said:—

"Ferood, shame bids us take their challenge up,

Yet champion have we none to match this youth.

He has the wild stag's foot, the lion's heart:

But Rustum came last night; aloof he sits

And sullen, and has pitch'd his tents apart.

Him will I seek, and carry to his ear

The Tartar challenge, and this young man's name.

Haply he will forget his wrath, and fight.

Stand forth the while, and take their challenge up."

So spake he; and Ferood stood forth and cried:—

"Old man, be it agreed as thou hast

said!
Let Sohrab arm, and we will find a

man."
He spake: and Peran-Wisa turn'd,

and strode
Back through the opening squadrons to his tent.

But through the anxious Persians Gud-

urz ran, And cross'd the camp which lay behind, and reach'd, Out on the sands beyond it, Rustum's tents.

Of scarlet cloth they were, and glittering gay,

Just pitch'd; the high pavilion in the

Just pitch'd; the high pavilion in the midst

Was Rustum's, and his men lay camp'd around.

And Gudurz enter'd Rustum's tent, and found [but still Rustum; his morning meal was done,

The table stood before him, charged with food --

A side of roasted sheep, and cakes of bread.

And dark green melons; and there Rustum sate

Listless, and held a falcon on his wrist, And play'd with it; but Gudurz came and stood

Before him; and he look'd, and saw him stand.

And with a cry sprang up and dropp'd the bird.

And greeted Gudurz with both hands, and said :-

"Welcome! these eyes could see no better sight.

What news? but sit down first, and eat and drink."

But Gudurz stood in the tent door, and said :-

"Not now! a time will come to eat and drink.

But not to-day; to-day has other needs. The armies are drawn out, and stand at gaze;
For from the Tartars is a challenge

brought

To pick a champion from the Persian lords

To fight their champion—and thou know'st his name-

Sohrab men call him, but his birth is hid.

O Rustum, like thy might is this young man's!

He has the wild stag's foot, the lion's heart:

And he is young, and Iran's chiefs are

Or else too weak; and all eyes turn to Come down and help us, Rustum, or we lose!"

He spoke: but Rustum answer'd with a smile:-

Go to! if Iran's chiefs are old, then I Am older; if the young are weak, the

Errs strangely; for the King, for Kai Khosroo,

Himself is young, and honors younger

And lets the aged moulder to their graves.

Rustum he loves no more, but loves the

The young may rise at Sohrab's vaunts, not I.

For what care I, though all speak Sohrab's fame?

For would that I myself had such a son, And not that one slight helpless girl I

A son so famed, so brave, to send to war. And I to tarry with the snow-hair'd Zal, My father, whom the robber Afghans

And clip his borders short, and drive his herds.

And he has none to guard his weak old

There would I go, and hang my armor

And with my great name fence that weak old man.

And spend the goodly treasures I have

And rest my age, and hear of Sohrab's fame.

And leave to death the hosts of thankless kings.

And with these slaughterous hands draw sword no more."

He spoke and smiled; and Gudurz made reply ;--

"What then, O Rustum, will men say to this,

When Sohrab dares our bravest forth. and seeks

Thee most of all, and thou, whom most he seeks. Hidest thy face? Take heed lest men should say: Like some old miser, Rustum hoards his fame.

And shuns to peril it with younger men." And greatly moved, then Rustum made reply :-

"O Gudurz, wherefore dost thou say such words?

Thou knowest better words than this to

What is one more, one less, obscure or famed.

Valiant or craven, young or old, to me? Are not they mortal, am not I myself? But who for men of nought would do great deeds?

Come, thou shalt see how Rustum hoards his fame!

But I will fight unknown, and in plain

Let not men say of Rustum, he was match'd

In single fight with any mortal man." He spoke, and frown'd; and Gudurz turn'd, and ran

Back quickly through the camp in fear and joy—

Fear at his wrath, but joy that Rustum came.

But Rustum strode to his tent-door, and call'd

His followers in, and bade them bring his arms,

And clad himself in steel; the arms he chose

Were plain, and on his shield was no device,

Only his helm was rich, inlaid with gold, And, from the fluted spine atop, a plume Of horsehair waved, a scarlet horsehair plume.

So arm'd, he issued forth; and Ruksh, his horse,

Follow'd him like a faithful hound at heel—

Ruksh, whose renown was noised through all the earth,

The horse, whom Rustum on a foray once

Did in Bokhara by the river find

A colt beneath its dam, and drove him home,

And rear'd him; a bright bay, with lofty crest,

Dight with a saddle-cloth of broider'd green

Crusted with gold, and on the ground were work'd

All beasts of chase, all beasts which hunters know.

So follow'd, Rustum left his tents, and cross'd

The camp, and to the Persian host appear'd.

And all the Persians knew him, and with shouts

Hail'd; but the Tartars knew not who he was.

And dear as the wet diver to the eyes Of his pale wife who waits and weeps on shore,

By sandy Bahrein, in the Persian Gulf, Plunging all day in the blue waves, at night,

Having made up his tale of precious pearls.

Rejoins her in their hut upon the sands—So dear to the pale Persians Rustum came.

And Rustum to the Persian front advanced,

And Sohrab arm'd in Haman's tent, and came.

And as afield the reapers cut a swath

Down through the middle of a rich man's corn,

And on each side are squares of standing corn,

And in the midst a stubble, short and bare—

So on each side were squares of men, with spears

Bristling, and in the midst, the open sand.

And Rustum came upon the sand, and cast

His eyes toward the Tartar tents, and saw

Sohrab come forth, and eyed him as he came.

As some rich woman, on a winter's morn,
Eyes through her silken curtains the poor drudge Who with numb blacken'd fingers makes

Who with numb blacken'd fingers makes her fire—

At cock-crow, on a starlit winter's morn. When the frost flowers the whiten'd window-panes—

And wonders how she lives, and what the thoughts

Of that poor drudge may be; so Rustum eyed

The unknown adventurous youth, who from afar

Came seeking Rustum, and defying forth All the most valiant chiefs; long he perused

His spirited air, and wonder'd who he was.

For very young he seem'd, tenderly rear'd; Like some young cypress, tall, and dark,

and straight,
Which in a queen's secluded garden

throws Its slight dark shadow on the moonlit

turf, By midnight, to a bubbling fountain's

sound—
So slender Sohrab seem'd, so softly rear'd.

And a deep pity enter'd Rustum's soul
As he beheld him coming; and he stood,
And beckon'd to him with his hand, and
said:—

"O thou young man, the air of Heaven is soft,

And warm, and pleasant; but the grave is cold!

Heaven's air is better than the cold dead grave.

Behold me! I am vast, and clad in iron,

And tried; and I have stood on many a field

Of blood, and I have fought with many a foe-

Never was that field lost, or that foe saved.

O Sohrab, wherefore wilt thou This on death?

Be govern'd! quit the Tartar host, and

To Iran, and be as my son to me,

And fight beneath my banner till I die! There are no youths in Iran brave as thou."

So he spake, mildly; Sohrabheard his voice,

The mighty voice of Rustum, and he saw His giant figure planted on the sand,

Sole, like some single tower, which a

Hath builded on the waste in former years

Against the robbers; and he saw that head,

Streak'd with its first gray hairs;—hope filled his soul,

And he ran forward and embraced his knees,

And clasp'd his hand within his own, and said:—

"O, by thy father's head! by thine own soul! Art thou not Rustum? speak! art thou not he?"

But Rustum eyed askance the kneel-

But Rustum eyed askance the kneeling youth,
And turn'd away, and spake to his own

soul:—

"Ah me, I muse what this young fox

may mean!
False, wily, boastful, are these Tartar

boys.
For if I now confess this thing he asks.
And hide it not, but say: Rustum is here!
He will not yield indeed, nor quit our

But he will find some pretext not to fight, And praise my fame, and proffer courteous gifts

A belt or sword perhaps, and go his way.
And on a feast-tide, in Afrasiab's hall,
In Samarcand, he will arise and cry:

'I challenged once, when the two armies camp'd

Beside the Oxus, all the Persian lords
To cope with me in single fight; but they Shrank, only Rustum dared; then he and I [away.'
Changed gifts, and went on equal terms

So will he speak, perhaps, while men applaud;

Then were the chiefs of Iran shamed through me."

And then he turn'd, and sternly spake aloud:--

"Rise! wherefore dost thou vainly question thus

Of Rustum? I am here, whom thou hast call'd

By challenge forth; make good thy

By challenge forth; make good thy vaunt, or yield!

Is it with Rustum only thou wouldst fight?

Rash boy, men look on Rustum's face and flee!

For well I know, that did great Rustum stand

Before thy face this day, and were reveal'd,

There would be then no talk of fighting more.

But being what I am, I tell thee this—Do thou record it in thine inmost soul: Either thou shalt renounce thy vaunt and yield,

Or else thy bones shall strew this sand, till winds

Bleach them, or Oxus with his summerfloods.

Oxus in summer wash them all away."
He spoke; and Sohrab answer'd, on his feet:—

"Art thou so fierce? Thou wilt not fright me so!

I am no girl, to be made pale by words. Yet this thou hast said well, did Rustum stand

Here on this field, there were no fighting then.

But Rustum is far hence, and we stand here.

Begin! thou art more vast, more dread than I.

And thou art proved, I know, and I am young—

But yet success sways with the breath of Heaven.

And though thou thinkest that thou knowest sure [know.

Thy victory, yet thou canst not surely For we are all, like swimmers in the sea, Poised on the top of a luge wave of fate, Which hangs uncertain to which side to fall.

And whether it will heave us up to land,
Or whether it will roll us out to sea,

Back out to sea, to the deep waves of death,

We know not, and no search will make us know;

Only the event will teach us in its hour."

He spoke, and Rustum- answer'd not,
but hurl'd

His spear; down from the shoulder,

down it came,

As on some partridge in the corn a hawk, That long has tower'd in the airy clouds, Drops like a plummet; Sohrab saw it come.

And sprang aside, quick as a flash; the spear

speat

Hiss'd, and went quivering down into the sand,

Which it sent flying wide;—then Sohrab threw

In turn, and full struck Rustum's shield; sharp rang,

The iron plates rang sharp, but turn'd the spear.

And Rustum seized his club, which none but he Could wield; an unlopp'd trunk it was, and huge,

Still rough—like those which men in treeless plains

To build them boats fish from the flooded rivers,

Hyphasis or Hydaspes, when, high up By their dark springs, the wind in winter-time

Hath made in Himalayan forests wrack, And strewn the channels with torn boughs—so huge

The club which Rustum lifted now, and struck

One stroke; but again Sohrab sprang aside,

Lithe as the glancing snake, and the club came

Thundering to earth, and leapt from Rustum's hand.

And Rustum follow'd his own blow, and fell

To his knees, and with his fingers clutch'd the sand;

And now might Sohrab have unsheathed his sword,

And pierced the mighty Rustum while he lay

Dizzy, and on his knees, and choked with sand;

But he look'd on, and smiled, nor bared his sword,

But courteously drew back, and spoke, and said:—

"Thou strik'st too hard! that club of thine will float Upon the summer-floods, and not my bones.

But rise, and be not wroth! not wroth am I;

No, when I see thee, wrath forsakes my soul.

Thou say'st, thou art not Rustum; be it so!

Who art thou then, that canst so touch my soul?

Boy as I am, I have seen battles too— Have waded foremost in their bloody waves.

And heard their hollow roar of dying men;

But never was my heart thus touch'd before.

Are they from Heaven, these softenings of the heart?

O thou old warrior, let us yield to Heaven!

Come, plant we here in earth our angry spears,

And make a truce, and sit upon this sand,

And pledge each other in red wine, like friends,

And thou shalt talk to me of Rustum's deeds.

There are enough foes in the Persian host,
Whom I may meet, and strike, and feel no pang; Champions enough Afrasiab has, whom thou

Mayst fight; fight them, when they confront thy spear!

But oh, let there be peace 'twixt thee

and me!"
He ceased, but while he spake, Rus-

tum had risen,
And stood erect, trembling with rage;

his club

He left to lie but had regain'd his spear

He left to lie, but had regain'd his spear, Whose fiery point now in his mail'd right-hand

Blazed bright and baleful, like that autumn-star,

The baleful sign of fevers; dust had soil'd His stately crest, and dimm'd his glittering arms.

His breast heaved, his lips foam'd, and twice his voice

Was choked with rage; at last these words broke way:—

"Girl! nimble with thy feet, not with thy hands!

Curl'd minion, dancer, coiner of sweet words!

Fight, let me hear thy hateful voice no more!

Thou art not in Afrasiab's gardens now With Tartar girls, with whom thou art wont to dance:

But on the Oxus-sands, and in the dance Of battle, and with me, who make no play

Of war; I fight it out, and hand to hand. Speak not to me of truce, and pledge, and wine!

Remember all thy valor; try thy feints And cunning! all the pity I had is gone; Because thou hast shamed me before both the hosts

With thy light skipping tricks, and thy girl's wiles.

He spoke, and Sohrab kindled at his taunts,

And he too drew his sword; at once

they rush'd
Together, as (we eagles on one prev

Come rushing down together from the

One from the east, one from the west;

their shields
Dash'd with a clang together, and a din
Rose, such as that the sinewy wood-cutters

Make often in the forest's heart at morn, Of hewing axes, crashing trees—such blows

Rustum and Sohrab on each other hail'd.

And you would say that sun and stars took part took part

In that unnatural conflict; for a cloud Grew suddenly in Heaven, and dark'd the sun

Over the fighters' heads; and a wind rose

Under their feet, and moaning swept the plain,

the plain,
And in a sandy whirlwind wrapp'd the

In gloom they twain were wrapp'd, and they alone:

For both the on-looking hosts on either hand

Stood in broad daylight, and the sky was pure.

And the sun sparkled on the Oxus stream.

But in the gloom they fought, with bloodshot eyes

And laboring breath; first Rustum struck the shield

Which Sohrab held stiff out; the steelspiked spear

Rent the tough plates, but fail'd to reach the skin,

And Rustum pluck'd it back with angry groan.

Then Sohrab with his sword smote Rustum's helm,

Nor clove its steel quite through; but all the crest

He shore away, and that proud horsehair plume,

Never till now defiled, sank to the dust; And Rustum bow'd his head; but then the gloom

Grew blacker, thunder rumbled in the air,

And lightnings rent the cloud; and Ruksh, the horse,

Who stood at hand, utter'd a dreadful ery;—

No horse's cry was that, most like the roar

Of some pain'd desert-lion, who all day Hath trail'd the hunter's javelin in his side,

And comes at night to die upon the sand. The two hosts heard that cry, and quaked for fear,

And Oxus curdled as it cross'd his stream.

But Sohrab heard, and quail'd not, but rush'd on.

And struck again; and again Rustum

His head; but this time all the blade, like glass.

Sprang in a thousand shivers on the helm.

And in the hand the hilt remain'd alone. Then Rustum raised his head; his dreadful eyes

Glared, and he shook on high his menacing spear,

And shouted: Rustum !—Sohrab heard that shout,

And shrank amazed; back he recoil'd one step,

And scann'd with blinking eyes the advancing form;

And then he stood bewilder'd; and he dropp'd

His covering shield, and the spear pierced his side.

He reel'd, and staggering back, sank to the ground,

And then the gloom dispersed, and the wind fell.

And the bright sun broke forth, and melted all

The cloud; and the two armies saw the pair—

Saw Rustum standing, safe upon his

And Sohrab, wounded, on the bloody

Then, with a bitter smile, Rustum began :-

"Sohrab, thou thoughtest in thy mind to kill

A Persian lord this day, and strip his corpse,

And bear thy trophies to Afrasiab's tent. Or else that the great Rustum would come down

Himself to fight, and that thy wiles would move

His heart to take a gift, and let thee go. And then that all the Tartar host would praise

Thy courage or thy craft, and spread thy fame,

To glad thy father in his weak old age. Fool, thou art slain, and by an unknown

Dearer to the red jackals shalt thou be Than to thy friends, and to thy father old."

And, with a fearless mien, Sohrab replied:-

"Unknown thou art; yet thy fierce vaunt is vain.

Thou dost not slay me, proud and boastful man!

No! Rustum slays me, and this filial heart.

For were I match'd with ten such men as thee,

And I were that which till to-day I was, They should be lying here, I standing there.

But that belovéd name unnerved my arm-

That name, and something, I confess, in thee.

Which troubles all my heart, and made my shield

Fall; and thy spear transfix'd an unarm'd foe.

And now thou boastest, and insult'st my

But hear thou this, fierce man, tremble to hear

The mighty Rustum shall avenge my death!

My father, whom I seek through all the world,

He shall avenge my death, and punish thee!

As when some hunter in the spring hath found

A breeding eagle sitting on her nest, Upon the craggy isle of a hill-lake, And pierced her with an arrow as she

And follow'd her to find her where she

Far off;—anon her mate comes winging

From hunting, and a great way off de-scries His huddling young left sole; at that,

he checks His pinion, and with short uneasy sweeps

Circles above his evry, with loud screams Chiding his mate back to her nest; but

Lies dying, with the arrow in her side, In some far stony gorge out of his ken, A heap of fluttering feathers - never more Shall the lake glass her, flying over it; Never the black and dripping precipices Echo her stormy scream as she sails by— As that poor bird flies home, nor knows his loss,

So Rustum knew not his own loss, but

Over his dying son, and knew him not. But, with a cold incredulous voice, he said :--

"What prate is this of fathers and revenge?

The mighty Rustum never had a son." And, with a failing voice, Sohrab replied:-

"Ah yes, he had! and that lost son am I. Surely the news will one day reach his Reach Rustum, where he sits, and tarries long.

Somewhere, I know not where, but far from here

And pierce him like a stab, and make him leap

To arms, and cry for vengeance upon thee.

Fierce man, bethink thee, for an only son!

What will that grief, what will that vengeance be?

Oh, could I live, till I that grief had

Yet him I pity not so much, but her, My mother, who in Ader-baijan dwells With that old king, her father, who grows gray

With age, and rules over the valiant

Koords.

Her most I pity, who no more will see Sohrab returning from the Tartar camp, With spoils and honor, when the war is done.

But a dark rumor will be bruited up, From tribe to tribe, until it reach her

And then will that defenceless woman learn

That Sohrab will rejoice her sight no more,

But that in battle with a nameless foe, By the far-distant Oxus, he is slain."

He spoke; and as he ceased, he wept aloud,

Thinking of her he left, and his own death.

He spoke; but Rustum listen'd, plunged in thought.

Nor did he yet believe it was his son Who spoke, although he call'd back names he knew;

For he had had sure tidings that the babe,

Which was in Ader-baijan born to him,
Had been a puny girl, no boy at all—
So that sad mother sent him word, for fear

Rustum should seek the boy, to train in arms

And so he deem'd that either Sohrab took.

By a false boast, the style of Rustum's son;

Or that men gave it him, to swell his fame.

So deem'd he; yet he listen'd, plunged in thought

And his soul set to grief, as the vast tide Of the bright rocking Ocean sets to shore

At the full moon; tears gather'd in his eyes;

For he remember'd his own early youth, And all its bounding rapture; as, at dawn,

The shepherd from his mountain-lodge descries

A far, bright city, smitten by the sun, Through many rolling clouds—so Rustum saw

His youth; saw Sohrab's mother, in her bloom:

And that old king, her father, who loved well

His wandering guest, and gave him his fair child

With joy; and all the pleasant life they led,

They three, in that long-distant summer-

The castle, and the dewy woods, and hunt

And hound, and morn on those delightful hills

In Ader-baijan. And he saw that Youth, Of age and looks to be his own dear son, Piteous and lovely, lying on the sand. Like some rich hyacinth which by the scythe

Of an unskilful gardener has been cut,
Mowing the garden grass-plots near its bed.

And lies, a fragrant tower of purple bloom.

On the mown, dying grass—so Sohrab lay,

Lovely in death, upon the common sand. And Rustum gazed on him with grief, and said:—

"O Sohrab, thou indeed art such a son Whom Rustum, wert thou his, might well have loved.

Yet here thou errest, Sohrab, or else men Have told thee false—thou art not Rustum's son.

For Rustum had no son; one child he had—

But one—a girl; who with her mother now

Plies some light female task, nor dreams

Of us she dreams not, nor of wounds, nor war."

But Sohrab answer'd him in wrath:

for now
The anguish of the deep-fix'd spear grew fierce,

And he desired to draw forth the steel,

And he desired to draw forth the steel,
And let the blood flow free, and so to die—

But first he would convince his stubborn foe;

And, rising sternly on one arm, he said:--

"Man, who art thou who dost deny my words?

Truth sits upon the lips of dying men, And falsehood, while I lived, was far from mine.

I tell thee, prick'd upon this arm I bear That seal which Rustum to my mother gave,

That she might prick it on the babe she bore."

He spoke; and all the blood left Rustum's cheeks,

And his knees totter'd, and he smote his hand

Against his breast, his heavy mailed hand.

That the hard iron corslet clank'd aloud; And to his heart he press'd the other hand,

And in a hollow voice he spake, and said:—

"Sohrab, that were a proof which could not lie!

If thou show this, then art thou Rustun's son."

Then, with weak hasty fingers, Sohrab loosed

His belt, and near the shoulder bared his arm,

And show'd a sign in faint vermilion points

Prick'd; as a cunning workman, in Pekin,

Pricks with vermilion some clear porce-

An emperor's gift—at early morn he paints,

And all day long, and, when night comes, the lamp

Lights up his studious forehead and thin hands—

So delicately prick'd the sign appear'd On Sohrab's arm, the sign of Rustum's seal.

It was that griffin, which of old rear'd Zal,

Rustum's great father, whom they left to die,

A helpless babe, among the mountain-rocks;

Him that kind creature found, and rear'd, and loved—

Then Rustum took it for his glorious sign.

And Sohrab bared that image on his arm,

And himself scann'd it long with mournful eyes,

And then he touch'd it with his hand and said:—

"How say'st thou? Is that sign the proper sign

Of Rustum's son, or of some other man's?"

He spoke; but Rustum gazed, and gazed, and stood Speechless; and then he utter'd one sharp cry:

Oboy—thy father!—and his voice choked
there. [eyes,

And then a dark cloud pass'd before his

And his head swam, and he sank down to earth.

But Sohrab crawl'd to where he lay, and cast

His arms about his neck, and kiss'd his lips,

And with fond faltering fingers stroked his cheeks,

Trying to call him back to life; and life Came back to Rustum, and he oped his eyes,

And they stood wide with horror; and he seized

In both his hands the dust which lay

around,
And threw it on his head, and smirch'd

his hair,— His hair, and face, and beard, and glittering arms;

And strong convulsive groanings shook his breast,

And his sobs choked him; and he clutch'd his sword.

To draw it, and for ever let life out.

But Sohrab saw his thought, and held his hands,

And with a soothing voice he spake, and said:—
"Father, forbear! for I but meet to-

day
The doom which at my birth was written down

In Heaven, and thou art Heaven's unconscious hand.

Surely my heart cried out that it was thou, When first I saw thee; and thy heart

spoke too,
I know it! but fate trod those promptings down

Under its iron heel; fate, fate engaged The strife, and hurl'd me on my father's spear.

But let us speak no more of this! I find My father; let me feel that I have found!

Come, sit beside me on this sand, and take

My head betwixt thy hands, and kiss my cheeks,

And wash them with thy tears, and say:

My son!

Quick! quick! for number'd are my sands of life,

And swift; for like the lightning to this field

I came, and like the wind I go away—Sudden; and swift, and like a passing wind.

But it was writ in Heaven that this should be."

So said he, and his voice released the heart

Of Rustum, and his tears broke forth; he cast

His arms round his son's neck, and wept aloud,

And kiss'd him. And awe fell on both the hosts,

When they saw Rustum's grief; and Ruksh, the horse,

With his head bowing to the ground and mane

Sweeping the dust, came near, and in mute woe

First to the one, then to the other moved His head, as if inquiring what their grief

Might mean; and from his dark, compassionate eyes,

The big warm tears roll'd down, and caked the sand.

But Rustum chid him with stern voice, and said:—

"Ruksh, now thou grievest; but, O Ruksh; thy feet

Should first have rotted on their nimble joints,

Or ere they brought thy master to this field!"

But Sohrab look'd upon the horse and said :—

"Is this, then, Ruksh? How often, in past days,

My mother told me of thee, thou brave steed,

My terrible father's terrible horse! and said,

That I should one day find thy lord and thee.

Come, let me lay my hand upon thy mane!

O Ruksh, thouart more fortunate than I; For thou hast gone where I shall never

And snuff'd the breezes of my father's home,

And thou hast trod the sands of Seistan,

And seen the River of Helmund, and the Lake

Of Zirrah, and the aged Zal himself Has often stroked thy neck, and given thee food,

Corn in a golden platter soak'd with

wine,
And said; O Ruksh! bear Rustum well!
—but I

Have never known my grandsire's furrow'd face,

Nor seen his lofty house in Seistan,

Nor slaked my thirst at the clear Helmund stream;

But lodged among my father's foes, and seen

Afrasiab's cities only, Samarcand,

Bokhara, and lone Khiva in the waste, And the black Toorkmun tents; and only drunk

The desert rivers, Moorghab and Tejend, Kohik, and where the Kalmuks feed their sheep,

The northern Sir; and this great Oxus stream,

The yellow Oxus, by whose brink I die."
Then, with a heavy groan, Rustum bewail'd:—

"Oh, that its waves were flowing over me!

Oh, that I saw its grains of yellow silt Roll tumbling in the current o'er my

head!"
But, with a grave mild voice, Sohrab

replied:—
"Desire not that, my father! thou must

For some are born to do great deeds, and live.

As some are born to be obscured, and die.

Do thou the deeds I die too young to do, And reap a second glory in thine age; Thou art my father, and thy gain is mine.

But come! thou seest this great host of men

Which follow me; I pray thee, slay not these!

Let me entreat for them; what have they done? They follow'd me, my hope, my fame,

my star.

Let them all cross the Oxus back in

But me thou must bear hence, not send with them,

But carry me with thee to Seistan,

And place me on a bed, and mourn for me,

Thou, and the snow-hair'd Zal, and all thy friends.

And thou must lay me in that lovely earth,

And heap a stately mound above my bones,

And plant a far-seen pillar over all.

That so the passing horseman on the waste

May see my tomb a great way off, and

Sohrab, the mighty Rustum's son, lies

there.

Whom his great father did in ignorance kill!

And I be not forgotten in my grave." And, with a mournful voice, Rustum replied :-

· Fear not, as thou hast said, Sohrab,

my son,

So shall it be; for I will burn my tents, And quit the host, and bear thee hence with me,

And carry thee away to Seistan.

And place thee on a bed, and mourn for thee.

With the snow-headed Zal, and all my friends,

And I will lay thee in that lovely earth. And heap a stately mound above thy bones.

And plant a far-seen pillar over all,

And men shall not forget thee in thy grave.

And I will spare thy host; yea, let them go!

Let them all cross the Oxus back in peace!

What should I do with slaving any more?

For would that all that I have ever slain

Might be once more alive; my bitterest

And they who were call'd champions in their time.

And through whose death I won that fame I have-

And I were nothing but a common man, A poor, mean soldier, and without renown,

So thou mightest live too, my son, my son!

Or rather would that I, even I myself, Might now be lying on this bloody sand. Near death, and by an ignorant stroke of thine,

Not thou of mine! and I might die, not thou:

And I, not thou, be borne to Seistan: And Zal might weep above my grave, not thine; And say: O son I weep thee not too sore, For willingly, I know, thou met'st thine end!

But now in blood and battles was my vouth.

And full of blood and battles is my age,

And I shall never end this life of blood.' Then, at the point of death, Sohrab replied : -

"A life of blood indeed, thou dreadful man!

But thou shalt yet have peace; only not now.

Not yet! but thou shalt have it on that

When thou shalt sail in a high-masted ship.

Thou and the other peers of Kai Khosroo,

Returning home over the salt blue sea. From laying thy dear master in his grave.

And Rustum gazed in Sohrab's face, and said :-

"Soon be that day, my son, and deep that sea!

Till then, if fate so wills, let me endure." He spoke: and Sohrab smiled on him. and took

The spear, and drew it from his side, and eased

His wound's imperious anguish; but the

Came welling from the open gash, and life

Flow'd with the stream;—all down his cold white side

The crimson torrent ran, dim now and soil'd. Like the soil'd tissue of white violets

Left, freshly gather'd, on the native bank,

By children whom their nurses call with haste

Indoors from the sun's eye; his head droop'd low,

His limbs grew slack: motionless, white, he lav-

White, with eyes closed; only when heavy gasps,

Deep heavy gasps quivering through all his frame,

Convulsed him back to life, he open'd them. And fix'd them feebly on his father's face;

Till now all strength was ebb'd, and from his limbs,

Unwillingly the spirit fled away,

Regretting the warm mansion which it

And youth, and bloom, and this delightful world.

So, on the bloody sand, Sohrab lay dead;

And the great Rustum drew his horseman's cloak

Down o'er his face, and sate by his dead

As those black granite pillars, once high-rear'd

By Jemshid in Persepolis, to bear

His house, now 'mid their broken flights of steps

Lie prone, enormous, down the mountain side-

So in the sand lav Rustum by his son. And night came down over the solemn waste.

And the two gazing hosts, and that sole

And darken'd all; and a cold fog, with night. Crept from the Oxus, Soon a hum

As of a great assembly loosed, and fires Began to twinkle through the fog; for Both armies moved to camp, and took their meal:

The Persians took it on the open sands Southward, the Tartars by the river marge:

And Rustum and his son were left alone. But the majestic river floated on.

Out of the mist and hum of that low land.

Into the frosty starlight, and there moved.

Rejoicing, through the hush'd Chorasmian waste,

Under the solitary moon :- he flow'd Right for the polar star, past Orguniè. Brimming, and bright, and large: then sands began

To hem his watery march, and dam his streams,

And split his currents; that for many a league

The shorn and parcell'd Oxus strains

Through beds of sand and matted rushy

Oxus, forgetting the bright speed he had In his high mountain-cradle in Pamere. A foil'd circuitous wanderer—till at last The long'd-for dash of waves is heard, and wide

His luminous home of waters opens, bright And tranquil, from whose floor the new-bathed stars

Emerge, and shine upon the Aral Sea. 1853.

PHILOMELA

HARK! ah, the nightingale-The tawny-throated!

Hark, from that moonlit cedar what a burst!

What triumph! hark!—what pain!

O wanderer from a Grecian shore. Still, after many years, in distant lands, Still nourishing in thy bewilder'd brain

That wild, unquench'd, deep-sunken, old-world pain-

Say, will it never heal? And can this fragrant lawn With its cool trees, and night. And the sweet, tranquil Thames, And moonshine, and the dew, To thy rack'd heart and brain Afford no balm?

Dost thou to-night behold, Here, through the moonlight on this English grass,

The unfriendly palace in the Thracian wild?

Dost thou again peruse

With hot cheeks and sear'd eves

The too clear web, and thy dumb sister's shame?

Dost thou once more assay

Thy flight, and feel come over thee, Poor fugitive, the feathery change

Once more, and once more seem to make

With love and hate, triumph and agony, Lone Daulis, and the high Cephissian vale?

Listen, Eugenia-

How thick the bursts come crowding through the leaves!

Again-thou hearest?

Eternal passion!

Eternal pain! 1853.

THE SCHOLAR-GIPSY

Go, for they call you, shepherd, from the

Go, shepherd, and untie the wattled cotes!

No longer leave thy wistful flock un-

Nor let thy bawling fellows rack their throats,

Nor the cropp'd herbage shoot another head.

But when the fields are still.

And the tired men and dogs all gone to rest,

And only the white sheep are sometimes seen

Cross and recross the strips of moonblanch'd green,

Come, shepherd, and again begin the quest!

Here, where the reaper was at work of late--

In this high field's dark corner, where he leaves

His coat, his basket, and his earthen cruse,

And in the sun all morning binds the sheaves,

Then here, at noon, comes back his stores to use—

Here will I sit and wait,

While to my ear from uplands far away
The bleating of the folded flocks is borne.

With distant cries of reapers in the

All the live murmur of a summer's day.

Screen'd is this nook o'er the high, halfreap'd field,

And here till sun-down, shepherd! will I be.

Through the thick corn the scarlet poppies peep,

And round green roots and yellowing stalks I see

Pale pink convolvulus in tendrils creep;

And air-swept lindens yield

Their scent, and rustle down their perfumed showers

Of bloom on the bent grass where I am laid,

And bower me from the August sun with shade;

And the eye travels down to Oxford's towers.

And near me on the grass lies Glanvil's book—

Come, let me read the oft-read tale again!

The story of the Oxford scholar poor, Of pregnant parts and quick inventive brain,

Who, tired of knocking at preferment's door,

One summer-morn forsook

His friends, and went to learn the gipsylore,

And roam'd the world with that wild brotherhood,

And came, as most men deem'd, to little good.

But came to Oxford and his friends no more.

But once, years after, in the country-lanes,

Two scholars, whom at college erst he knew,

Met him, and of his way of life enquired;

Whereat he answer'd, that the gipsycrew,

His mates, had arts to rule as they desired

The workings of men's brains, And they can bind them to what thoughts they will.

"And I," he said, "the secret of their

When fully learn'd, will to the world impart;

But it needs heaven-sent moments for this skill."

This said, he left them, and return'd no more.—

But rumors hung about the countryside,
That the lost Scholar long was seen to stray, Seen by rare glimpses, pensive and tongue-tied,

In hat of antique shape, and cloak of gray,

The same the gipsies wore.

Shepherds had met him on the Hurst in spring;
At some lone alehouse in the Berkshire moors,

On the warm ingle-bench, the smockfrock'd boors Had found him seated at their entering,

But, 'mid their drink and clatter, he would fly.

And I myself seem half to know thy looks.

And put the shepherds, wanderer! on thy trace;

And boys who in lone wheatfields scare

the rooks
I ask if thou hast pass'd their quiet
place;

Or in my boat I lie

Moor'd to the cool bank in the summerheats,

'Mid wide grass meadows which the sunshine fills,

And watch the warm, green-muffled Cumner hills,

And wonder if thou haunt'st their shy retreats.

For most, I know, thou lov'st retired ground!

Thee at the ferry Oxford riders blithe, Returning home on summer-nights, have met

Crossing the stripling Thames at Bablock-hithe,

Trailing in the cool stream thy fingers wet,

As the punt's rope chops round;

And leaning backward in a pensive dream,

And fostering in thy lap a heap of flowers

Pluck'd in shy fields and distant Wychwood bowers.

And thine eyes resting on the moonlit stream.

And then they land, and thou art seen no more!—

Maidens, who from the distant hamlets come

To dance around the Fyfield elm in May,

Oft through the darkening fields have seen thee roam,

Or cross a stile into the public way.
Oft thou hast given them store

Of flowers—the frail-leaf'd, white anemone,

Dark bluebells drench'd with dews of summer eves,

And purple orchises with spotted leaves—

But none hath words she can report of thee.

And, above Godstow Bridge, when haytime 's here

In June, and many a scythe in sunshine flames.

Men who through those wide fields of breezy grass Where black-wing'd swallows haunt the glittering Thames,

To bothe in the abandon'd lasher pass

To bathe in the abandon'd lasher pass, Have often pass'd thee near

Sitting upon the river bank o'ergrown; Mark'd thine outlandish garb, thy figure spare.

figure spare.

Thy dark vague eyes, and soft abstracted air— [wast gone!]

But, when they came from bathing, thou

At some lone homestead in the Cumner hills,

Where at her open door the housewife darns,

Thou hast been seen, or hanging on a gate

To watch the threshers in the mossy barns.

Children, who early range these slopes and late

For cresses from the rills,

Have known thee eying, all an Aprilday,

The springing pastures and the feeding kine;

And mark'd thee, when the stars come out and shine,

Through the long dewy grass move slow away.

In autumn, on the skirts of Bagley
Wood—

Where most the gipsies by the turf-edged way

Pitch their smoked tents, and every bush you see

With scarlet patches tagg'd and shreds of gray,

Above the forest-ground called Thessaly—

The blackbird, picking food,

Sees thee, nor stops his meal, nor fears at all;

So often has he known thee past him stray,

Rapt, twirling in thy hand a wither'd spray,

And waiting for the spark from heaven to fall.

And once, in winter, on the causeway chill

Where home through flooded fields foottravellers go,

Have I not pass'd thee on the wooden bridge,

Wrapt in thy cloak and battling with the snow,

Thy face tow'rd Hinksey and its win-

Thy face tow'rd Hinksey and its wir try ridge?

And thou hast climb'd the hill, And gain'd the white brow of the Cum-ner range;

Turn'd once to watch, while thick the snowflakes fall, The line of festal light in Christ-Church hall—

Then sought thy straw in some sequester'd grange.

But what —I dream! Two hundred years are flown

Since first thy story ran through Oxford halls,

And the grave Glanvil did the tale inscribe

That thou wert wander'd from the studious walls

To learn strange arts, and join a gipsytribe:

And thou from earth art gone

Long since, and in some quiet churchyard laid—

Some country-nook, where o'er thy unknown grave

Tall grasses and white flowering nettles wave,

Under a dark, red-fruited yew-tree's shade.

-No, no, thou hast not felt the lapse of hours!

For what wears out the life of mortal men?

'Tis that from change to change their being rolls;

'Tis that repeated shocks, again, again, Exhaust the energy of strongest souls And numb the elastic powers.

Till having used our nerves with bliss and teen,

And tired upon a thousand schemes our wit,

To the just-pausing Genius we remit Our worn-out life, and are—what we have been.

Thou hast not lived, why should'st thou perish, so?

Thou hadst one aim, one business, one desire;

Else wert thou long since number'd with the dead!

Else hadst thou spent, like other men, thy fire!

The generations of thy peers are fled, And we ourselves shall go;

But thou possessest an immortal lot, And we imagine thee exempt from age And living as thou liv'st on Glanvil's

Because thou hadst—what we, alas!

For early didst thou leave the world, with powers

Fresh, undiverted to the world without, Firm to their mark, not spent on other things; Free from the sick fatigue, the languid doubt,

Which much to have tried, in much been baffled, brings.

O life unlike to ours!

Who fluctuate idly without term or scope.

Of whom each strives, nor knows for what he strives,

And each half lives a hundred different lives;

Who wait like thee, but not, like thee, in hope.

Thou waitest for the spark from heaven! and we,

Light half-believers of our casual creeds, Who never deeply felt, nor clearly will'd,

Whose insight never has borne fruit in deeds,

Whose vague resolves never have been fulfill'd;

For whom each year we see

Breeds new beginnings, disappointments new;

Who hesitate and falter life away,
And lose to-morrow the ground won
to-day—

Ah! do not we, wanderer! await it too?

Yes, we await it !—but it still delays, And then we suffer ! and amongst us one, Who most has suffer 'd, takes dejectedly

His seat upon the intellectual throne;
And all his store of sad experience he
Lays bare of wretched days;

Tells us his misery's birth and growth and signs,

And how the dying spark of hope was fed,

And how the breast was soothed, and how the head,

And all his hourly varied anodynes.

This for our wisest! and we others pine,
And wish the long unhappy dream
would end,

And waive all claim to bliss, and try

With close-lipp'd patience for our only friend,

Sad patience, too near neighbor to despair—

But none has hope like thine!

Thou through the fields and through the woods dost stray,

Roaming the country-side, a truant boy,

Nursing thy project in unclouded joy. And every doubt long blown by time away.

O born in days when wits were fresh and clear,

And life ran gaily as the sparkling Thames:

Before the strange disease of modern life,

With its sick hurry, its divided aims, Its heads o'ertax'd, its palsied hearts. was rife-

Fly hence, our contact fear!

Still fly, plunge deeper in the bowering

Averse, as Dido did with gesture stern From her false friend's approach in Hades turn.

Wave us away and keep thy solitude!

Still nursing the unconquerable hope, Still clutching the inviolable shade.

With a free onward impulse brushing through,

By night, the silver'd branches of the glade-

Far on the forest-skirts, where none

On some mild pastoral slope

Emerge, and resting on the moonlit pales Freshen thy flowers as in former years With dew, or listen with enchanted ears,

From the dark dingles, to the nightingales!

But fly our paths, our feverish contact

For strong the infection of our mental strife.

Which, though it gives no bliss, vet spoils for rest;

And we should win thee from thy own fair life.

Like us distracted, and like us unblest. Soon, soon thy cheer would die.

Thy hopes grow timorous, and unfix'd thy powers,

And thy clear aims be cross and shifting made;

And then thy glad perennial youth would fade,

Fade and grow old at last, and die like ours.

Then fly our greetings, fly our speech and smiles!

-As some grave Tyrian trader, from the sea.

Descried at sunrise an emerging prow Lifting the cool-hair'd creepers stealthily. The fringes of a southward-facing brow Among the Ægæan Isles:

And saw the merry Grecian coaster come. Freighted with amber grapes, and Chian wine.

Green, bursting figs, and tunnies steep'd in brine-

And knew the intruders on his ancient home.

The young light-hearted masters of the waves-

And snatch'd his rudder, and shook out more sail:

And day and night held on indignantly O'er the Blue Midland waters with the gale,

Betwixt the Syrtes and soft Sicily, To where the Atlantic raves

Outside the western straits: and unbent sails

There, where down cloudy cliffs, through sheets of foam,

Shy traffickers, the dark Iberians come ;

And on the beach undid his corded bales. 1853.

FROM BALDER DEAD

SECTION III

THE Gods held talk together, group'd in knots.

Round Balder's corpse, which they had thither borne;

And Hermod came down tow'rds them from the gate.

And Lok, the father of the serpent, first Beheld him come, and to his neighbor spake :-

"See, here is Hermod, who comes single back

From Hell; and shall I tell thee how he seems?

Like as a farmer, who hath lost his dog. Some morn, at market, in a crowded town-

Through many streets the poor beast runs in vain,

And follows this man after that, for hours:

And, late at evening, spent and panting,

Before a stranger's threshold, not his home,

With flanks a-tremble, and his slender tongue

Hangs quivering out between his dustsmear'd jaws.

And piteously he eyes the passers by: But home his master comes to his own farm. Far in the country, wondering where he

So Hermod comes to-day unfollow'd home."

And straight his neighbor, moved with wrath, replied:—

"Deceiver! fair in form, but false in heart!

Enemy, mocker, whom, though Gods, we hate-Peace, lest our father Odin hear thee gibe!

Would I might see him snatch thee in his hand.

And bind thy carcase, like a bale, with

And hurl thee in a lake, to sink or swim! If clear from plotting Balder's death, to swim:

But deep, if thou devisedst it, to drown, And perish, against fate, before thy day.'

So they two soft to one another spake. But Odin look'd toward the land, and saw His messenger; and he stood forth, and cried.

And Hermod came, and leapt from Sleipner down,

And in his father's hand put Sleipner's

And greeted Odin and the Gods, and said:

"Odin, my father, and ye, Gods of Heaven!

Lo, home, having perform'd your will, I come.

Into the joyless kingdom have I been. Below, and look'd upon the shadowy tribes

Of ghosts, and communed with their solemn queen;

And to your prayer she sends you this reply:

Show her through all the world the signs of grief!

Fails but one thing to grieve, there Balder

Let Gods, men, brutes, beweep him; plants and stones:

So shall she know your loss was dear in-

And bend her heart and give you Balder back."

He spoke; and all the Gods to Odin look'd:

And straight the Father of the ages

"Ye Gods, these terms may keep another day.

But now, put on your arms, and mount your steeds,

And in procession all come near, and weep

Balder; for that is what the dead desire. When ye enough have wept, then build a pile

Of the heap'd wood, and burn his corpse with fire

Out of our sight; that we may turn from grief.

And lead, as erst, our daily life in Heaven."

He spoke, and the Gods arm'd; and Odin donn'd

His dazzling corslet and his helm of gold. And led the way on Sleipner; and the Follow'd, in tears, their father and their king.

And thrice in arms around the dead they rode,

Weeping; the sands were wetted, and their arms.

With their thick-falling tears—so good a friend

They mourn'd that day, so bright, so loved a God.

And Odin came, and laid his kingly hands On Balder's breast, and thus began the wail :-"Farewell, O Balder, bright and loved, my son! In that great day, the twilight of the Gods.

When Muspel's children shall beleaguer Heaven.

Then we shall miss thy counsel and thy arm.

Thou camest near the next, O warrior Thor!

Shouldering thy hammer, in thy chariot drawn,

Swaying the long-hair'd goats with silver'd rein;

And over Balder's corpse these words didst say :-

"Brother, thou dwellest in the darksome land,

And talkest with the feeble tribes of ghosts.

Now, and I know not how they prize thee there— [and mourn'd.

But here, I know, thou wilt be miss'd

For haughty spirits and high wraths are rife

Among the Gods and Heroes here in Heaven,

As among those whose joy and work is war:

And daily strifes arise, and angry words. But from thy lips, O Balder, night or day,

Heard no one ever an injurious word To God or Hero, but thou keptest back The others, laboring to compose their brawls.

Be ye then kind, as Balder too was kind! For we lose him, who smoothed all strife in Heaven."

He spake, and all the Gods assenting wail'd.

And Freya next came nigh, with golden

tears;
The loveliest Goddess she in Heaven, by

Most honor'd after Frea, Odin's wife. Her long ago the wandering Oder took

To mate, but left her to roam distant lands;

Since then she seeks him, and weeps tears of gold.

Names hath she many; Vanadis on earth

They call her, Freya is her name in Heaven; She in her hands took Balder's head, and spake:—

"Balder, my brother, thou art gone a

Unknown and long, and haply on that

My long-lost wandering Oder thou hast met.

For in the paths of Heaven he is not found.

Oh, if it be so, tell him what thou wast To his neglected wife, and what he is,

And wring his heart with shame, to hear thy word!

For ne, my husband, left me here to pine, Not long a wife, when his unquiet heart First drove him from me into distant lands;

Since then I vainly seek him through the world,

And weep from shore to shore my golden tears.

But neither god nor mortal heeds my pain.

Thou only, Balder, wast for ever kind,
To take my hand, and wipe my tears,
and say:

Weep not, O Freya, weep no golden tears! One day the wandering Oder will return! Or thou wilt find him in thy faithfu search

On some great road, or resting in an inn, Or at a ford, or sleeping by a tree.

So Balder said ;—but Oder, well I know, My truant Oder I shall see no more

To the world's end; and Balder now is gone,

And I am left uncomforted in Heaven."
She spake; and all the Goddesses bewail'd.

Last from among the Heroes one came near,

No God, but of the hero-troop the chief— Regner, who swept the northern sea with fleets,

And ruled o'er Denmark and the heathy isles,

Living; but Ella captured him and slew;—

A king whose fame then fill'd the vast of Heaven.

Now time obscures it, and men's later deeds.

He last approach'd the corpse, and spake, and said:—

"Balder, there yet are many Scalds in Heaven

Still left, and that chief Scald, thy brother Brage,

Whom we may bid to sing, though thou art gone.

And all these gladly, while we drink.

we hear,
After the feast is done, in Odin's hall;

But they harp ever on one string, and wake

Remembrance in our soul of wars alone, Such as on earth we valiantly have waged,

And blood, and ringing blows, and violent death.

But when thou sangest, Balder, thou didst strike

Another note, and, like a bird in spring, Thy voice of joyance minded us, and youth,

And wife, and children, and our ancient home.

Yes, and I, too, remember'd then no more

My dungeon, where the serpents stung me dead,

Nor Ella's victory on the English coast— But I heard Thora laugh in Gothland Isle,

And saw my shepherdess Aslauga, tend

Her flock along the white Norwegian beach.

Tears started to mine eyes with yearning joy,

Therefore with grateful heart I mourn thee dead."

So Regner spake, and all the Heroes groan'd.

But now the sun had pass'd the height of Heaven,

And soon had all that day been spent in wail:

But then the Father of the ages said:— "Ye Gods, there well may be too much of wail!

Bring now the gather'd wood to Balder's

Heap on the deck the logs, and build the pyre."

But when the Gods and Heroes heard.

they brought The wood to Balder's ship, and built a pile,

Full the deck's breadth, and lofty; then the corpse

Of Balder on the highest top they laid. With Nanna on his right, and on his Hoder, his brother, whom his own hand slew.

And they set jars of wine and oil to lean Against the bodies, and stuck torches near,

Splinters of pine-wood, soak'd with turpentine;

And brought his arms and gold, and all his stuff,

And slew the dogs who at his table fed, And his horse, Balder's horse, whom most he loved,

And placed them on the pyre, and Odin threw

A last choice gift thereon, his golden ring.

The mast they fixed, and hoisted up the sails.

Then they put fire to the wood; and Thor Istern

Set his stout shoulder hard against the To push the ship through the thick sand; sparks flew

From the deep trench she plough'd, so strong a God

Furrow'd it; and the water gurgled in. And the ship floated on the waves, and rock'd.

But in the hills a strong east-wind arose, And came down moaning to the sea; first squalls

Ran black o'er the sea's face, then steady rush'd

The breeze, and fill'd the sails, and blew the fire.

And wreathed in smoke the ship stood out to sea.

Soon with a roaring rose the mighty fire,

And the pile crackled; and between the Sharp quivering tongues of flame shot out, and leaped. Curling and darting, higher, until they lick'd The summit of the pile, the dead, the mast, And ate the shrivelling sails: but still the ship Drove on, ablaze above her hull with

And the Gods stood upon the beach, and gazed.

And while they gazed, the sun went lurid down

Into the smoke-wrapt sea, and night came on. Then the wind fell, with night, and there was calm;

But through the dark they watch'd the burning ship Still carried o'er the distant waters on,

Farther and farther, like an eye of fire. And long, in the far dark, blazed Balder's pile;

But fainter, as the stars rose high, it flared. The bodies were consumed, ash choked the pile. And as, in a decaying winter-fire,

A charr'd log, falling, makes a shower of sparks-

So with a shower of sparks the pile fell

Reddening the sea around; and all was dark.

But the Gods went by starlight up the shore

To Asgard, and sate down in Odin's hall At table, and the funeral-feast began.

All night they ate the boar Serimner's flesh,

And from their horns, with silver rimm'd, drank mead,

Silent, and waited for the sacred morn. And morning over all the world was spread.

Then from their loathed feasts the Gods

And took their horses, and set forth to

O'er the bridge Bifrost, where is Heimdall's watch,

To the ash Igdrasil, and Ida's plain; Thor came on foot, the rest on horseback rode. And they found Mimir sitting by his fount

Of wisdom, which beneath the ashtree springs:

And saw the Nornies watering the roots Of that world-shadowing tree with honev-dew.

There came the Gods, and sate them down on stones:

And thus the Father of the ages said:-"Ye Gods, the terms ye know, which Hermod brought.

Accept them or reject them! both have grounds.

Accept them, and they bind us, unfulfill'd,

To leave for ever Balder in the grave, An unrecover'd prisoner, shade with shades.

But how, ye say, should the fulfilment fail?-

Smooth sound the terms, and light to be fulfill'd:

For dear-beloved was Balder while he lived

In Heaven and earth, and who would grudge him tears?

But from the traitorous seed of Lok they come.

These terms, and I suspect some hidden frau l.

Bethink ye, Gods, is there no other wav :-

Speak, were not this a way, the way for Gods?

If I, if Odin, clad in radiant arms,

Mounted on Sleipner, with the warrior Thor

Drawn in his car beside me, and my sons,

All the strong brood of Heaven, to swell my train.

Should make irruption into Hela's realm, And set the fields of gloom ablaze with light,

And bring in triumph Balder back to Heaven?"

He spake, and his fierce sons applauded loud.

But Frea, mother of the Gods, arose,

Daughter and wife of Odin; thus she

"Odin, thou whirlwind, what a threat is this!

Thou threatenest what transcends thy might, even thine.

For of all powers the mightiest far art thou.

Lord over men on earth, and Gods in Heaven:

Yet even from thee thyself hath been withheld

One thing—to undo what thou thyself hast ruled.

For all which hath been fixt, was fixt by thee.

In the beginning, ere the Gods were

Before the Heavens were builded, thou didst slay

The giant Ymir, whom the abyss brought forth.

Thou and thy brethren fierce, the sons of Bor,

And cast his trunk to choke the abysmal void.

But of his flesh and members thou didst build

The earth and Ocean, and above them Heaven.

And from the flaming world, where Muspel reigns, Thou sent'st and fetched'st fire, and madest lights.

Sun, moon, and stars, which thou hast hung in Heaven,

Dividing clear the paths of night and dav. And Asgard thou didst build, and Midgard fort; Then me thou mad'st; of us the Gods were born. Last, walking by the sea, thou foundest spars

Of wood, and framed'st men, who till the earth.

Or on the sea, the field of pirates, sail. And all the race of Ymir thou didst drown,

Save one, Bergelmer;—he on shipboard

Thy deluge, and from him the giants sprang.

But all that brood thou hast removed far off, And set by Ocean's utmost marge to dwell:

But Hela into Niflheim thou threw'st.

And gav'st her nine unlighted worlds to rule.

A queen, and empire over all the dead. That empire wilt thou now invade, light up

Her darkness, from her grasp a subject tear?-

Try it; but I, for one, will not applaud. Nor do I merit, Odin, thou should'st slight Me and my words, though thou be first in Heaven:

For I too am a Goddess, born of thee, Thine eldest, and of me the Gods are

sprung;

And all that is to come I know, but lock In mine own breast, and have to none reveal'd.

Come then! since Hela holds by right her prev.

But offers terms for his release to Heaven.

Accept the chance: thou canst no more obtain.

Send through the world thy messengers: entreat

All living and unliving things to weep For Balder; if thou haply thus may'st

Hela, and win the loved one back to Heaven."

She spake, and on her face let fall her veil,

And bow'd her head, and sate with folded hands.

Nor did the all-ruling Odin slight her word:

Straightway he spake, and thus address'd the Gods:

"Go quickly forth through all the world, and pray

All living and unliving things to weep Balder, if haply he may thus be won."
When the Gods heard, they straight arose, and took Their horses, and rode forth through all the world:

North, south, east, west, they struck, and roam'd the world

Entreating all things to weep Balder's death.

And all that lived, and all without life, wept.

And as in winter, when the frost breaks

At winter's end, before the spring begins,

And a warm west-wind blows, and thaw sets in-

After an hour a dripping sound is heard In all the forests, and the soft-strewn

Under the trees is dibbled thick with holes, [shuffle down; And from the boughs the snowloads And, in fields sloping to the south, dark

Of grass peep out amid surrounding snow,

And widen, and the peasant's heart is glad-

So through the world was heard a dripping noise
Of all things weeping to bring Balder

back;

And there fell joy upon the Gods to hear. But Hermod rode with Niord, whom he took

To show him spits and beaches of the sea Far off, where some unwarn'd might fail to weep-

Niord, the God of storms, whom fishers know;

Not born in Heaven; he was in Vanheim rear'd. With men, but lives a hostage with the Gods:

He knows each frith, and every rocky creek Fringed with dark pines, and sands

where seafowl scream-They two scour'd every coast, and all things wept. And they rode home together, through the wood Of Jarnvid, which to east of Midgard lies Bordering the giants, where the trees are iron; There in the wood before a cave they came, Where sate, in the cave's mouth, askinny

hag, Toothless and old; she gibes the passers

Thok is she call'd, but now Lok wore her shape:

She greeted them the first, and laugh'd, and said :-

"Ye Gods, good lack, is it so dull in Heaven.

That ye come pleasuring to Thok's iron wood? Lovers of change ye are, fastidious sprites. Look, as in some boor's yard a sweetbreath'd cow, Whose manger is stuff'd full of good fresh hay, Snuffs at it daintily, and stoops her head

To chew the straw, her litter, at her feet-So ye grow squeamish, Gods, and sniff at Heaven!"

She spake; but Hermod answer'd her and said :-

"Thok, not for gibes we come, we come for tears.

Balder is dead, and Hela holds her prev. But will restore, if all things give him tears.

Begrudge not thine! to all was Balder dear.

Then, with a louder laugh, the hag replied :-

"Is Balder dead? and do ye come for tears?

Thok with dry eyes will weep o'er Balder's pyre.

Weep him all other things, if weep they will--

I weep him not! let Hela keep her prev." She spake, and to the cavern's depth she fled,

Mocking; and Hermod knew their toil was vain.

And as seafaring men, who long have wrought

In the great deep for gain, at last come home.

And towards evening see the headlands

Of their dear country, and can plain descry

A fire of wither'd furze which boys have

Upon the cliffs, or smoke of burning weeds

Out of a till'd field inland:—then the Catches them, and drives out again to

And they go long days tossing up and

Over the gray sea-ridges, and the glimpse Of port they had makes bitterer far their toil-

So the Gods' cross was bitterer for their

Then, sad at heart, to Niord Hermod spake:-

"It is the accuser Lok, who flouts us all! Ride back, and tell in Heaven this heavy news;

I must again below, to Hela's realm." He spoke; and Niord set forth back to Heaven.

But northward Hermod rode, the way below.

The way he knew; and traversed Giall's stream.

And down to Ocean groped, and cross'd the ice.

And came beneath the wall, and found the grate

Still lifted: well was his return foreknown.

And once more Hermod saw around him spread

The joyless plains, and heard the streams of Hell.

But as he enter'd, on the extremest hound

Of Niflheim, he saw one ghost come near.

Hovering, and stopping oft, as if afraid— Hoder, the unhappy, whom his own hand slew.

Hermod look'd, and knew his And brother's ghost,

And call'd him by his name, and sternly said :-

"Hoder, ill-fated, blind in heart and eyes!

Why tarriest thou to plunge thee in the gulf

Of the deep inner gloom, but flittest here, In twilight, on the lonely verge of Hell, Far from the other ghosts, and Hela's throne?

Doubtless thou fearest to meet Balder's voice.

Thy brother, whom through folly thou didst slav."

He spoke; but Hoder answer'd him, and said :-

"Hermod the nimble, dost thou still pursue

The unhappy with reproach, even in the grave?

For this I died, and fled beneath the gloom,

Not daily to endure abhorring Gods, Nor with a hateful presence cumber Heaven;

And canst thou not, even here, pass pitying by?

No less than Balder have I lost the light Of Heaven, and communion with my kin; I too had once a wife, and once a child,

And substance, and a golden house in Heaven-

But all I left of my own act, and fled Below, and dost thou hate me even here? Balder upbraids me not, nor hates at all, Though he has cause, have any cause; but he.

When that with downcast looks I hither

Stretch'd forth his hand, and with benignant voice,

Welcome, he said, if there be welcome here.

Brother and fellow-sport of Lok with me!

And not to offend thee, Hermod, nor to force

My hated converse on thee, came I up From the deep gloom, where I will now return:

But earnestly I long'd to hover near,

Not too far off, when that thou camest by; To feel the presence of a brother God,

And hear the passage of a horse of Heaven.

For the last time—for here thou com'st no more."

He spake, and turn'd to go to the inner gloom.

But Hermod stay'd him with mild words, and said:—

"Thou doest well to chide me, Hoder blind!

Truly thou say'st, the planning guilty mind

Was Lok's; the unwitting hand alone was thine.

But Gods are like the sons of men in this

When they have woe, they blame the nearest cause.

Howbeit stay, and be appeased! and tell:

Sits Balder still in pomp by Hela's side, Or is he mingled with the unnumber'd dead?"

And the blind Hoder answer'd him and spake:—

"His place of state remains by Hela's side,

But empty; for his wife, for Nanna came

Lately below, and join'd him; and the Frequent the still recesses of the realm Of Hela, and hold converse undisturb'd. But they too, doubtless, will have breathed the balm.

Which floats before a visitant from Heaven.

And have drawn upward to this verge of Hell."

He spake; and, as he ceased, a puff of wind

Roll'd heavily the leaden mist aside Round where they stood, and they beheld two forms

Make toward them o'er the stretching cloudy plain.

And Hermod straight perceived them, who they were

Balder and Nanna; and to Balder said:—
"Balder, too truly thou foresaw'st a snare!

Lok triumphs still, and Hela keeps her prev.

No more to Asgard shalt thou come, nor lodge

In thy own house, Breidablik, nor enjoy The love all bear toward thee, nor train up

Forset, thy son, to be beloved like thee. Here must thou lie, and wait an endless age.

Therefore for the last time, O Balder, hail!"

He spake; and Balder answer'd him, and said:—

"Hail and farewell! for here thou com'st no more.

Yet mourn not for me, Hermod, when thou sitt'st

In Heaven, nor let the other Gods lament,

As wholly to be pitied, quite forlorn. For Nanna hath rejoin'd me, who, of old, In Heaven, was seldom parted from my side;

And still the acceptance follows me, which crown'd

My former life, and cheers me even here.
The iron frown of Hela is relax'd
When I draw nigh, and the wan tribes

When I draw nigh, and the wan tribes
of dead

Love me, and gladly bring for my award Their ineffectual feuds and feeble hates— Shadows of hates, but they distress them still."

And the fleet-footed Hermod made reply:—

"Thou hast then all the solace death allows.

Esteem and function; and so far is well. Yet here thou liest, Balder, underground, Rusting for ever; and the years roll on, The generations pass, the ages grow, And bring us nearer to the final day

When from the south shall march the fiery band

And cross the bridge of Heaven, with Lok for guide,
And Fenris at his heel with broken

And Fenris at his heel with broken chain;

While from the east the giant Rymer steers

His ship, and the great serpent makes to land;

And all are marshall'd in one flaming square

Against the Gods, upon the plains of Heaven.

I mourn thee, that thou canst not help us then."

He spake; but Balder answer'd him, and said:—

"Mourn not for me! Mourn, Hermod, for the Gods;

Mourn for the men on earth, the Gods in Heaven,

Who live, and with their eyes shall see that day!

The day will come, when fall shall Asgard's towers,

And Odin, and his sons, the seed of Heaven;

But what were I, to save them in that hour?

If strength might save them, could not Odin save.

My father, and his pride, the warrior Thor.

Vidar the silent, the impecuous Tyr? I, what were I, when these can nought avail?

Yet, doubtless, when the day of battle comes.

And the two hosts are marshall'd, and in Heaven

The golden-crested cock shall sound alarm,

And his black brother-bird from hence reply.

And bucklers clash, and spears begin to pour—

Longing will stir within my breast, though vain.

But not to me so grievous, as, I know,
To other Gods it were, is my enforced
Absence from fields where I could nothing aid;

For I am long since weary of your storm Of carnage, and find, Hermod, in your life

Something too much of war and broils, which make

Life one perpetual fight, a bath of blood.

Mine eyes are dizzy with the arrowy hail:

Mine ears are stunn'd with blows, and sick for calm.

Inactive therefore let me lie, in gloom, Unarm'd, inglorious; I attend the course Of ages, and my late return to light, In times less alien to a spirit mild,

In new-recover'd seats, the happier day."
He spake; and the fleet Hermod thus

replied:—
"Brother, what seats are these, what happier day?

Tell me, that I may ponder it when gone." [him:—
And the ray-crowned Balder answer'd

"Far to the south, beyond the blue, there spreads

Another Heaven, the boundless—no one yet

Hath reach'd it; there hereafter shall arise

The second Asgard, with another name.

Thither, when o'er this present earth and Heavens

The tempest of the latter days hath swept,

And they from sight have disappear'd, and sunk,

Shall a small remnant of the Gods repair;

Hoder and I shall join them from the grave.

There re-assembling we shall see emerge From the bright Ocean at our feet an earth

More fresh, more verdant than the last, with fruits

Self-springing, and a seed of man preserved,

Who then shall live in peace, as now in war.

But we in Heaven shall find again with joy

The ruin'd palaces of Odin, seats

Familiar, halls where we have supp'd of

Re-enter them with wonder, never fill Our eyes with gazing, and rebuild with tears.

And we shall tread once more the well-known plain

Of Ida, and among the grass shall find The golden dice wherewith we play'd of yore;

And that will bring to mind the former life

And pastime of the Gods, the wise discourse

Of Odin, the delights of other days.

O Hermod, pray that thou may'st join us then!

Such for the future is my hope; meanwhile,

I rest the thrall of Hela, and endure Death, and the gloom which round me even now

Thickens, and to its inner gulf recalls.

Farewell, for longer speech is not allow'd!"

He spoke, and waved farewell, and gave his hand

To Nanna; and she gave their brother blind [the three
Her hand, in turn, for guidance; and

Departed o'er the cloudy plain, and soon Faded from sight into the interior gloom. But Hermod stood beside his drooping horse,

Mute, gazing after them in tears; and

Fain had he follow'd their receding steps, Though they to death were bound, and he to Heaven,

Then; but a power he could not break withheld.

And as a stork which idle boys have trapp'd,

And tied him in a yard, at autumn sees Flocks of his kind pass flying o'er his head

To warmer lands, and coasts that keep the sun :--

He strains to join their flight, and from his shed

Follows them with a long complaining

So Hermod gazed, and yearn'd to join his kin.

At last he sigh'd, and set forth back to Heaven. 1855.

STANZAS FROM THE GRANDE CHARTREUSE

THROUGH Alpine meadows soft-suffused With rain, where thick the crocus blows, Past the dark forges long disused, The mule-track from Saint Laurent goes. The bridge is cross'd, and slow we ride, Through forest, up the mountain-side.

The autumnal evening darkens round, The wind is up, and drives the rain; While, hark! far down, with strangled sound

Doth the Dead Guier's stream complain, Where that wet smoke, among the woods.

Over his boiling cauldron broods.

Swift rush the spectral vapors white Past limestone scars with ragged pines, Showing—then blotting from our sight!—

Halt—through the cloud-drift something shines!

High in the valley, wet and drear, The huts of Courrerie appear.

Strike leftward! cries our guide; and higher

Mounts up the stony forest-way.
At last the encircling trees retire;

Look! through the showery twilight gray

What pointed roofs are these advance?—A palace of the Kings of France?

Approach, for what we seek is here! Alight, and sparely sup, and wait For rest in this outbuilding near; Then cross the sward and reach that

Knock; pass the wicket! Thou art

To the Carthusians' world-famed home.

The silent courts, where night and day
Into their stone-carved basins cold
The splashing icy fountains play—
The humid corridors behold!
Where, ghostlike in the deepening night
Cowl'd forms brush by in gleaming
white.

The chapel, where no organ's peal Invests the stern and naked prayer— With penitential cries they kneel And wrestle; rising then, with bare And white uplifted faces stand, Passing the Host from hand to hand;

Each takes, and then his visage wan Is buried in his cowl once more. The cells!—the suffering Son of Man Upon the wall—the knee-worn floor—And where they sleep, that wooden bed, Which shall their coffin be, when dead!

The library, where tract and tome Not to feed priestly pride are there, To hymn the conquering march of Rome, Nor yet to amuse, as ours are! They paint of souls the inner strife, Their drops of blood, their death in life.

The garden, overgrown—yet mild, See, fragrant herbs are flowering there! Strong children of the Alpine wild Whose culture is the brethren's care; Of human tasks their only one, And cheerful works beneath the sun.

Those halls, too, destined to contain Each its own pilgrim-host of old, From England, Germany, or Spain—All are before me! I behold The House, the Brotherhood austere!—And what am I, that I am here?

For rigorous teachers seized my youth, And purged its faith, and trimm'd its fire, Show'd me the high, white star of Truth, There bade me gaze, and there aspire. Even now their whispers pierce the gloom;

What dost thou in this living tomb?

Forgive me, masters of the mind!
At whose behest I long ago
So much unlearnt, so much resign'd—
I come not here to be your foe!
I seek these anchorites, not in ruth,
To curse and to deny your truth;

Not as their friend, or child, I speak! But as, on some far northern strand, Thinking of his own Gods, a Greek In pity and mournful awe might stand Before some fallen Runic stone— For both were faiths, and both are gone.

Wandering between two worlds, one dead,

The other powerless to be born, With nowhere yet to rest my head, Like these, on earth I wait forlorn. Their faith, my tears, the world deride—I come to shed them at their side.

Oh, hide me in your gloom profound, Ye solemn seats of holy pain! Take me, cowl'd forms, and fence me round

Till I possess my soul again; Till free my thoughts before me roll, Not chafed by hourly false control!

For the world cries your faith is now But a dead time's exploded dream; My melancholy, sciolists say, Is a pass'd mode, an outworn theme—As if the world had ever had A faith, or sciolists been sad!

Ah, if it be pass'd, take away, At least, the restlessness, the pain; Be man henceforth no more a prey To these out-dated stings again! The nobleness of grief is gone— Ah, leave us not the fret aione!

But—if you cannot give us ease— Last of the race of them who grieve Here leave us to die out with these Last of the people who believe! Silent, while years engrave the brow; Silent—the best are silent now.

Achilles ponders in his tent. The kings of modern thought are dumb; Silent they are, though not content, And wait to see the future come. They have the grief men had of yore, But they contend and cry no more.

Our fathers water'd with their tears
This sea of time whereon we sail,
Their voices were in all men's ears
We pass'd within their puissant hail.
Still the same ocean round us raves,
But we stand mute, and watch the waves.

For what avail'd it, all the noise
And outery of the former men?—
Say, have their sons achieved more joys,
Say, is life lighter now than then;
The sufferers died, they left their pain—
The pangs which tortured them remain.

What helps it now, that Byron bore, With haughty scorn which mock'd the smart,

Through Europe to the Ætolian shore The pageant of his bleeding heart? That thousands counted every groan, And Europe made his woe her own?

What boots it, Shelley! that the breeze Carried thy lovely wail away,
Musical through Italian trees
Which fringe thy soft blue Spezzian bay?

Inheritors of thy distress Have restless hearts one throb the less?

Or are we easier, to have read, O Obermann! the sad, stern page, Which tells us how thou hidd'st thy

From the fierce tempest of thine age In the lone brakes of Fontainebleau, Or chalets near the Alpine snow?

Ye slumber in your silent grave!—
The world, which for an idle day
Grace to your mood of sadness gave,
Long since hath flung her weeds away.
The eternal trifler breaks your spell;
But we—we learned your lore too well!

Years hence, perhaps, may dawn an age, More fortunate, alas! than we, Which without hardness will be sage, And gay without frivolity. Sons of the world, oh. speed those years; But, while we wait, allow our tears!

Allow them! We admire with awe The exulting thunder of your race: You give the universe your law,

You triumph over time and space! Your pride of life, your tireless powers, We laud them, but they are not ours.

We are like children rear'd in shade Beneath some old-world abbey wall. Forgotten in a forest-glade, And secret from the eyes of all. Deep, deep the greenwood round them waves.

Their abbey, and its close of graves!

But, where the road runs near the stream. Oft through the trees they catch a glance Of passing troops in the sun's beam-Pennon, and plume, and flashing lance! Forth to the world those soldiers fare, To life, to cities, and to war!

And through the wood, another way, Faint bugle-notes from far are borne, Where hunters gather, staghounds bay, Round some fair forest-lodge at morn. Gay dames are there, in sylvan green; Laughter and cries—those notes between!

The banners flashing through the trees Make their blood dance and chain their eyes;

That bugle-music on the breeze Arrests them with a charm'd surprise. Banner by turns and bugle woo: Ye shy recluses, follow too!

O children, what do ve reply?— "Action and pleasure, will ye roam Through these secluded dells to cry And call us?—but too late ye come! Too late for us your call ye blow, Whose bent was taken long ago.

"Long since we pace this shadow'd nave; We watch those yellow tapers shine, Emblems of hope over the grave, In the high altar's depth divine; The organ carries to our ear Its accents of another sphere.

"Fenced early in this cloistral round Of reverie, of shade, of prayer, How should we grow in other ground? How can we flower in foreign air? -Pass, banners, pass, and bugles, cease; And leave our desert to its peace!"

FROM SWITZERLAND

ISOLATION. TO MARGUERITE

WE were apart: yet, day by day. I bade my heart more constant be. I bade it keep the world away, And grow a home for only thee: Nor fear'd but thy love likewise grew, Like mine, each day, more tried, more true.

The fault was grave! I might have known. What far too soon, alas! I learn'd-The heart can bind itself alone, And faith may oft be unreturn'd.

Self-sway'd our feelings ebb and swell-Thou lov'st no more; —Farewell! Farewell!

Farewell!—and thou, thou lonely heart, Which never yet without remorse Even for a moment didst depart From thy remote and sphered course To haunt the place where passions reign— Back to thy solitude again!

Back! with the conscious thrill of shame Which Luna felt, that summer-night. Flash through her pure immortal frame, When she forsook the starry height To hang over Endymion's sleep Upon the pine-grown Latmian steep.

Yet she, chaste queen, had never proved How vain a thing is mortal love, Wandering in Heaven, far removed. But thou hast long had place to prove This truth—to prove, and make thine

"Thou hast been, shalt be, art, alone."

Or, if not quite alone, yet they Which touch thee are unmating things-Ocean and clouds and night and day; Lorn autumns and triumphant springs; And life, and others' joy and pain, And love, if love, of happier men.

Of happier men-for they, at least, Have dream'd two human hearts might blend

In one, and were through faith released From isolation without end Prolong'd; nor knew, although not less Alone than thou, their loneliness.

TO MARGUERITE—CONTINUED

YES! in the sea of life enisled,
With echoing straits between us thrown,
Dotting the shoreless watery wild,
We mortal millions live alone.
The islands feel the enclasping flow,
And then their endless bounds they
know,

But when the moon their hollows lights, And they are swept by balms of spring, And in their glens on starry nights, The nightingales divinely sing; And lovely notes, from shore to shore, Across the sounds and channels pour—

Oh! then a longing like despair Is to their farthest caverns sent; For surely once, they feel, we were Parts of a single continent! Now round us spreads the watery plain— Oh, might our marges meet again!

Who order'd, that their longing's fire Should be, as soon as kindled, cool'd? Who renders vain their deep desire?—A God, a God their severance ruled! And bade betwixt their shores to be The unplumb'd, salt, estranging sea.

THYRSIS2

A Monody, to commemorate the author's friend,

ARTHUR HUGH CLOUGH, who died at Florence, 1861

How changed is here each spot man makes or fills!

In the two Hinkseys nothing keeps the same;

The village street its haunted mansion lacks,

And from the sign is gone Sibylla's

And from the roofs the twisted chimney-stacks-

¹Standing alone, under the title: To Marquerite.
² 'There are in the English language three elegiac poems so great that they eclipse and efface all the elegiac poetry we know; all of Iralian, all of Greek. It is only because the latest born is yet new to us that it can seem strange or rash to say so. The Thypsis of Mr. Arnold makes a third with Lycidas and Adonais. . . . Thyrsis, like Lycidas, has a quiet and tender undertone which gives it something of sacred." (Swinburne.)

Are ye too changed, ye hills? See, 'tis no foot of unfamiliar men

To-night from Oxford up your pathway strays!

IIere came I often, often, in old days— Thyrsis and I; we still had Thyrsis then.

Runs it not here, the track by Childsworth Farm,

Past the high wood, to where the elmtree crowns

The hill behind whose ridge the sunset flames?

The signal-elm, that looks on Ilsley Downs,

The Vale, the three lone weirs, the youthful Thames?--

This winter-eve is warm,

Humid the air! leafless, yet soft as spring,

The tender purple spray on copse and briars!

And that sweet city with her dreaming spires,

She needs not June for beauty's heightening.

Lovely all times she lies, lovely tonight!—

Only, methinks, some loss of habit's power

Befalls me wandering through this upland dim.

Once pass'd I blindfold here, at any hour;
Now seldom come I, since I came with him.

That single elm-tree bright

Against the west—I miss it! is it gone?
We prized it dearly; while it stood,
we said.

Our friend, the Gipsy-Scholar, was not dead;

While the tree lived, he in these fields lived on.

Too rare, too rare, grow now my visits here,

But once I knew each field, each flower, each stick;

And with the country-folk acquaintance made

By barn in threshing-time, by newbuilt rick.

Here, too, our shepherd-pipes we first assay'd.

Ah me! this many a year My pipe is lost, my shepherd's holi-ly pipe is lost, my shepherd's hold day! Needs must I lose them, needs with heavy heart

Into the world and wave of men de-

But Thyrsis of his own will went away.

It irk'd him to be here, he could not rest. He loved each simple joy the country vields.

> He loved his mates; but yet he could not keep,

For that a shadow lour'd on the fields, Here with the shepherds and the silly sheep.

Some life of men unblest

He knew, which made him droop, and fill'd his head.

He went; his piping took a troubled sound storms that rage outside our happy ground;

He could not wait their passing, he is dead.

So, some tempestuous morn in early [is o'er,

When the year's primal burst of bloom Before the roses and the longest dayffloor

When garden-walks and all the grassy With blossoms red and white of fallen May

And chestnut-flowers are strewn-So have I heard the cuckoo's parting

From the wet field, through the vext garden-trees,

Come with the volleying rain and tossing breeze:

The bloom is gone, and with the bloom go I!

Too quick despairer, wherefore wilt thou gor

Soon will the high Midsummer pomps come on,

Soon will the musk carnations break and swell.

Soon shall we have gold-dusted snapdragon.

Sweet-William with his homely cottage-smell,

And stocks in fragrant blow;

Roses that down the alleys shine afar, And open, jasmine-muffled lattices, And groups under the dreaming garden trees.

And the full moon, and the white evening-star.

He harkens not! light comer, he is flown!

What matters it? next year he will return, And we shall have him in the sweet spring-days,

With whitening hedges, and uncrumpling fern,

And blue-bells trembling by the forest-ways.

And scent of hav new-mown. But Thyrsis never more we swains shall see;

See him come back, and cut a smoother reed.

And blow a strain the world at last shall heed-

For Time, not Corydon, hath conquer'd thee !

Alack, for Corydon no rival now!-But when Sicilian shepherds lost a mate.

Some good survivor with his flute would go,

Piping a ditty sad for Bion's fate;

And cross the unpermitted ferry's

And relax Pluto's brow,

And make leap up with joy the beauteous head

Proserpine, among crowned hair

Are flowers first open'd on Sicilian

And flute his friend, like Orpheus, from the dead.

O easy access to the hearer's grace

When Dorian shepherds sang to Proserpine!

For she herself had trod Sicilian fields.

She knew the Dorian water's gush divine, She knew each lily white which

Enna yields,

Each rose with blushing face; She loved the Dorian pipe, the Dorian strain. But ah, of our poor Thames she never heard! [stirr'd;

Her foot the Cumner cowslips never And we should tease her with our plaint in vain!

Well! wind-dispersed and vain the words will be, Yet, Thyrsis, let me give my grief its In the old haunt, and find our tree-topp'd hill!

Who, if not I, for questing here hath power?

I know the wood which hides the daffodil,

I know the Fyfield tree,

I know what white, what purple fritillaries

The grassy harvest of the river-fields,

Above by Ensham, down by Sandford, yields,

And what sedged brooks are Thames's tributaries;

I know these slopes; who knows them if not I?—

But many a dingle on the loved hill-side,

With thorns once studded, old, white-blossom'd trees,

Where thick the cowslips grew, and far descried

High tower'd the spikes of purple orchises,

Hath since our day put by

The coronals of that forgotten time;

Down each green bank hath gone
the ploughboy's team,

And only in the hidden brookside gleam

Primroses, orphans of the flowery prime.

Where is the girl, who by the boatman's door,

Above the locks, above the boating throng,

Unmoor'd our skiff when through the Wytham flats,

Red loosestrife and blond meadowsweet among

And darting swallows and light water-gnats,

We track'd the shy Thames shore? Where are the mowers, who, as the tiny swell

Of our boat passing heaved the rivergrass,

Stood with suspended scythe to see us pass?—

They all are gone, and thou art gone as well!

Yes, thou art gone! and round me too

In ever-nearing circle weaves her shade.

I see her veil draw soft across the day.

I feel her slowly chilling breath invade
The cheek grown thin, the brown hair sprent with gray;
I feel her finger light

Laid pausefully upon life's headlong train;—

The foot less prompt to meet the morning dew,

The heart less bounding at emotion new,

And hope, once crush'd, less quick to spring again.

And long the way appears, which seem'd so short

To the less practised eye of sanguine youth;

And high the mountain-tops, in cloudy air,

The mountain-tops where is the throne of Truth.

Tops in life's morning-sun so bright and bare!

Unbreachable the fort

Of the long-batter'd world uplifts its wall;

And strange and vain the earthly turmoil grows,

And near and real the charm of thy repose,

And night as welcome as a friend would fall.

But hush! the upland hath a sudden loss

Of quiet!—Look, adown the dusk hill-side, A troop of Oxford hunters going home,

As in old days, jovial and talking.

As in old days, jovial and talking, ride!

From hunting with the Berkshire hounds they come,

Quick! let me fly, and cross
Into you further field!—'Tis done,
and see,

Back'd by the sunset, which dot'n glorify

The orange and pale violet evening-

sky,
Bare on its lonely ridge, the Tree!

I take the omen! Eve lets down her veil,

The white fog creeps from bush to bush about,

The west unflushes, the high stars grow bright,

And in the scatter'd farms the lights come out.

I cannot reach the signal-tree tonight,

Yet, happy omen, hail!

Hear it from thy broad lucent Arnovale

(For there thine earth-forgetting eyelids keep

The morningless and unawakening sleep

Under the flowery oleanders pale),

Hear it, O Thyrsis, still our tree is there!—

Ah, vain! These English fields, this upland dim,

These brambles pale with mist engarlanded,

That lone, sky-pointing tree, are not for him;

To a boon southern country he is fled,

And now in happier air,

Wandering with the great Mother's train divine

(And purer or more subtle soul than thee.

I trow, the mighty Mother doth not see)

Within a folding of the Apennine,

Thou hearest the immortal chants of old!—

Putting his sickle to the perilous grain

In the hot cornfield of the Phrygian king,

For thee the Lityerses-song again

Young Daphnis with his silver voice doth sing; Sings his Sicilian fold, bings his bieman rold,

His sheep, his hapless love, his blinded eyes— And how a call celestial round him rang,

And heavenward from the fountain-

brink he sprang,

And all the marvel of the golden skies.

There thou art gone, and me thou leavest here

Sole in these fields! yet will I not despair.

Despair I will not, while I yet descry

'Neath the mild canopy of English air That lonely tree against the western sky.

Still, still these slopes, 'tis clear, Our Gipsy-Scholar haunts, outliving thee!

Fields where soft sheep from cages pull the hay,

Woods with anemones in flower till May,

Know him a wanderer still; then why not me?

A fugitive and gracious light he seeks, Shy to illumine; and I seek it too.

This does not come with houses or with gold,

With place, with honor, and a flattering crew;

'Tis not in the world's market bought and sold—

But the smooth-slipping weeks
Drop by, and leave its seeker still untired;

Out of the heed of mortals he is gone,

He wends unfollow'd, he must house alone;

Yet on he fares, by his own heart inspired.

Thou too, O Thyrsis, on like quest wast bound;

Thou wanderedst with me for a little hour!

Men gave thee nothing; but this happy quest,

If men esteemed thee feeble, gave thee

power,

If men procured thee trouble, gave thee rest.

And this rude Cumner ground,

Its fir-topped Hurst, its farms, its quiet fields,

Here cams't thou in thy jocund youthful time,

Here was thine height of strength, thy golden prime!

And still the haunt beloved a virtue yields.

What though the music of thy rustic flute

Kept not for long its happy, country tone;

Lost it too soon, and learnt a stormy

Of men contention-tost, of men who groan,

Which task'd thy pipe too sore, and tired thy throat—

It fail'd, and thou wast mute!
Yet hadst thou always visions of our light,

And long with men of care thou couldst not stay.

And soon thy foot resumed its wandering way,

Left human haunt, and on alone till night.

Too rare, too rare, grow now my visits here!

'Mid city-noise, not, as with thee of Thyrsis! in reach of sheep-bells is my home.

—Then through the great town's harsh, heart-wearving roar,

Let in thy voice a whisper often come,

To chase fatigue and fear:
Why faintest thou! I wander'd till I died.
Roam on! The light we sought is shining still.

Dost thou ask proof? Our tree yet crowns the hill, Our Scholar travels yet the loved hill-side.

YOUTH AND CALM

'Tis death! and peace, indeed, is here, And ease from shame, and rest from fear. There's nothing can dismarble now The smoothness of that limpid brow. But is a calm like this, in truth, The crowning end of life and youth, And when this boon rewards the dead, Are all debts paid, has all been said? And is the heart of youth so light, Its step so firm, its eyes so bright, Because on its hot brow there blows A wind of promise and repose From the far grave, to which it goes; Because it hath the hope to come, One day, to harbor in the tomb? Ah no, the bliss youth dreams is one For daylight, for the cheerful sun, For feeling nerves and living breath— Youth dreams a bliss on this side death. It dreams a rest, if not more deep, More grateful than this marble sleep; It hears a voice within it tell: Calm's not life's crown, though calm is

'T is all perhaps which man acquires, But 'tis not what our youth desires. (1852). 1867. AUSTERITY OF POETRY

THAT son of Italy who tried to blow, Ere Dante came, the trump of sacred song,

In his light youth amid a festal throng Sate with his bride to see a public show. Fair was the bride, and on her front did glow

Youth like a star; and what to youth belong—

Gay raiment, sparkling gauds, elation strong.

A prop gave way! crash fell a platform!

'Mid struggling sufferers, hurt to death, she lay!

Shuddering, they drew her garments off—and found

A robe of sackcloth next the smooth, white skin.

Such, poets, is your bride, the Muse!

Radiant, adorn'd outside; a hidden ground

Of thought and of austerity within.

WORLDLY PLACE

Even in a palace, life may be led well!
So spake the imperial sage, purest of men,
Marcus Aurelius. But the stifling den
Of common life, where, crowded up pell-mell.

Our freedom for a little bread we sell, And drudge under some foolish master's

Who rates us if we peer outside our

Match'd with a palace, is not this a hell? Even in a palace! On his truth sincere, Who spoke these words, no shadow ever came:

And when my ill-school'd spirit is aflame Some nobler, ampler stage of life to win, I'll stop, and say: "There were no succor here!

The aids to noble life are all within."

EAST LONDON

'Twas August, and the fierce sun overhead

Smote on the squalid streets of Bethnal Green,

And the pale weaver, through his windows seen

In Spitalfields, look'd thrice dispirited.

I met a preacher there I knew, and said: "Ill and o'erwork'd, how fare you in this scene?"-

"Bravely!" said he: "for I of late have been

Much cheer'd with thoughts of Christ, the living bread."

O human soul! as long as thou canst so Set up a mark of everlasting light, Above the howling senses' ebb and flow,

To cheer thee, and to right thee if thou roam-

Not with lost toil thou laborest through the night!

Thou mak'st the heaven thou hop'st indeed thy home. 1867.

WEST LONDON

CROUCH'D on the pavement, close by Belgrave Square.

A tramp I saw, ill, moody, and tongue-tied.

A babe was in her arms, and at her side A girl; their clothes were rags, their feet were bare.

Some laboring men, whose work lay somewhere there,

Pass'd opposite; she touch'd her girl, who hied

Across, and begg'd, and came back satisfied.

The rich she had let pass with frozen stare. Thought I: "Above her state this spirit towers: She will not ask of aliens, but of friends,

Of sharers in a common human fate. She turns from that cold succor, which attends

The unknown little from the unknowing great,

And points us to a better time than ours." 1867.

EAST AND WEST

In the bare midst of Anglesey they show Two springs which close by one another play;

And, "Thirteen hundred years agone,"

they say,

"Two saints met often where those waters flow.

One came from Penmon westward, and a glow Whiten'd his face from the sun's fronting ray;

Eastward the other, from the dying day,

And he with unsunn'd face did always go." Seiriol the Bright, Kybi the Dark! men said.

The seer from the East was then in light. The seer from the West was then in shade.

Ah! now 'tis changed. In conquering sunshine bright

The man of the bold West now comes array'd:

He of the mystic East is touch'd with night. 1867.

THE BETTER PART

Long fed on boundless hopes, O race of How angrily thou spurn'st all simpler fare!

"Christ," some one says, "was human as we are;

No judge eyes us from Heaven, our sin to scan;

We live no more, when we have done our span."

"Well, then, for Christ," thou answerest, "who can care?

From sin, which Heaven records not, why forbear?

Live we like brutes our life without a plan!"

So answerest thou; but why not rather sav:

"Hath man no second life?—Pitch this one high! Sits there no judge in Heaven, our sin to see ?-More strictly, then, the inward judge obeu!

Was Christ a man like us? Ah! let us try If we then, too, can be such men as he!" 1867.

IMMORTALITY

Foil'd by our fellow-men, depress'd, outworn.

We leave the brutal world to take its way,

And, Patience! in another life, we say, The world shall be thrust down, and we up-borne.

And will not, then, the immortal armies scorn

The world's poor, routed leavings? or will they.

Who fail'd under the heat of this life's day,

Support the fervors of the heavenly morn?

No, no! the energy of life may be Kept on after the grave, but not begun; And he who flagg'd not in the earthly strife

From strength to strength advancing—only he,

His soul well-knit, and all his battles

Mounts, and that hardly, to eternal life. 1867.

DOVER BEACH

The sea is calm to-night,
The tide is full, the moon lies fair
Upon the straits:—on the Freuch

Upon the straits;—on the French coast the light

Gleams and is gone; the cliffs of England stand,

Glimmering and vast, out in the tranquil bay.

Come to the window, sweet is the night-air!

Only, from the long line of spray Where the sea meets the moon-blanch'd land.

Listen! you hear the grating roar
Of pebbles which the waves draw back,
and fling.

and fling,
At their return, up the high strand,
Begin, and cease, and then again begin,
With tremulous cadence slow, and bring
The eternal note of sadness in.

Sophocles long ago Heard it on the Ægæan, and it brought Into his mind the turbid ebb and flow Of human misery; we Find also in the sound a thought.

Find also in the sound a thought, Hearing it by this distant northern sea.

The Sea of Faith
Was once, too, at the full, and round earth's shore

Lay like the folds of a bright girdle furl'd. But now I only hear

Its melancholy, long, withdrawing roar, Retreating, to the breath

Of the night-wind, down the vast edges drear

And naked shingles of the world. Ah, love, let us be true

To one another! for the world, which

To lie before us like a land of dreams, So various, so beautiful, so new,

Hath really neither joy, nor love, nor light,

Nor certitude, nor peace, nor help for pain;

And we are here as on a darkling plain Swept with confused alarms of struggle and flight.

Where ignorant armies clash by night.

GROWING OLD

What is it to grow old?
Is it to lose the glory of the form,
The lustre of the eye?
Is it for beauty to forego her wreath?

—Yes, but not this alone.

Is it to feel our strength—
Not our bloom only, but our strength—decay?

Is it to feel each limb Grow stiffer, every function less exact, Each nerve more loosely strung?

Yes, this, and more; but not
Ah, 't is not what in youth we dream'd
't would be!

'T is not to have our life
Mellow'd and soften'd as with sunsetglow,

A golden day's decline.

'T is not to see the world
As from a height, with rapt prophetic

And heart profoundly stirr'd;
And weep, and feel the fulness of the past.

The years that are no more.

It is to spend long days And not once feel that we were ever young;

It is to add, immured
In the hot prison of the present, month

To month with weary pain.

It is to suffer this,
And feel but half, and feebly, what we feel.

Deep in our hidden heart
Festers the dull remembrance of a change,

But no emotion—none.

It is—last stage of all— When we are frozen up within, and quite The phantom of ourselves, To hear the world appland the hollow ghost Which blamed the living man, 1867.

PIS-ALLER

"MAN is blind because of sin, Revelation makes him sure; Without that, who looks within, Looks in vain, for all 's obscure."

Nay, look closer into man!
Tell me, can you find indeed
Nothing sure, no moral plan
Clear prescribed, without your creed?

"No, I nothing can perceive! Without that, all's dark for men. That, or nothing, I believe."—For God's sake, believe it then!

1867.

THE LAST WORD

CREEP into thy narrow bed, Creep, and let no more be said! Vain thy onset! all stands fast. Thou thyself must break at last.

Let the long contention cease! Geese are swans, and swans are geese. Let them have it how they will! Thou art tired; best be still.

They out-talk'd thee, hiss'd thee, tore thee?

Better men fared thus before thee;
Fired their ringing shot and pass'd,

Hotly charged—and sank at last.

Charge once more, then, and be dumb! Let the victors, when they come, When the forts of folly fall, Find thy body by the wall! 1867.

BACCHANALIA;

OR,

THE NEW AGE

т

The evening comes, the fields are still. The tinkle of the thirsty rill, Unheard all day, ascends again; Deserted is the half-mown plain, Silent the swaths! the ringing wain, The mower's cry, the dog's alarms, All housed within the sleeping farms! The business of the day is done, The last-left haymaker is gone. And from the thyme upon the height, And from the elder-blossom white

And rale dog-roses in the hedge, And from the mint-plant in the sedge, In puffs of balm the night-air blows The perfume which the day foregoes. And on the pure horizon far, See, pulsing with the first-born star, The liquid sky above the hill! The evening comes, the fields are still.

Loitering and leaping, With saunter, with bounds-Flickering and circling In files and in rounds— Gaily their pine-staff green Tossing in air, Loose o'er their shoulders white Showering their hair— See! the wild Mænads Break from the wood, Youth and Iacchus Maddening their blood. See! through the quiet land Rioting they pass— Fling the fresh heaps about, Trample the grass. Tear from the rifled hedge Garlands, their prize; Fill with their sports the field, Fill with their cries.

Shepherd, what ails thee, then? Shepherd, why mute? Forth with thy joyous song! Forth with thy flute! Tempts not the revel blithe? Lure not their cries? Glow not their shoulders smooth? Melt not their eyes? Is not, on cheeks like those, Lovely the flush?—Ah, so the quiet was! So was the hush!

 $_{\rm II}$

The epoch ends, the world is still.
The age has talk'd and work'd its fill—
The famous orators have shone,
The famous poets sung and gone,
The famous men of war have fought,
The famous speculators thought,
The famous players, sculptors, wrought,
The famous painters fill'd their wall,
The famous critics judged it all.
The combatants are parted now—
Uphung the spear, unbent the bow,
The puissant crown'd, the weak laid low.
And in the after-silence sweet,
Now strifes are hush'd, our ears doth
meet,

Ascending pure, the bell-like fame
Of this or that down-trodden name,
Delicate spirits, push'd away
In the hot press of the noon-day.
And o'er the plain, where the dead age
Did its now silent warfare wage—
O'er that wide plain, now wrapt in gloom,

Where many a splendor finds its tomb,
Many spent fames and fallen mights—
The one or two immortal lights
Rise slowly up into the sky
To shine there everlastingly,
Like stars over the bounding hill.
The epoch ends, the world is still.

Thundering and bursting In torrents, in waves-Carolling and shouting Over tombs, amid graves-See! on the cumber'd plain Clearing a stage, Scattering the past about, Comes the new age. Bards make new poems, Thinkers new schools. Statesmen new systems, Critics new rules. All things begin again; Life is their prize; Earth with their deeds they fill, Fill with their cries.

Poet, what ails thee, then? Say, why so mute? Forth with thy praising voice! Forth with thy flute! Loiterer! why sittest thou Sunk in thy dream? Tempts not the bright new age? Shines not its stream? Look, ah, what genius, Art, science, wit! Soldiers like Cæsar, Statesmen like Pitt! Sculptors like Phidias, Raphaels in shoals, Poets like Shakespeare— Beautiful souls! See, on their glowing cheeks Heavenly the flush! -Ah, so the silence was! So was the hush!

The world but feels the present's spell, The poet feels the past as well; Whatever men have done, might do, Whatever thought, might think it too. 1867.

PALLADIUM

SET where the upper streams of Simois

Was the Palladium, high 'mid rock and wood:

And Hector was in Ilium, far below, And fought, and saw it not—but there it stood!

It stood, and sun and moonshine rain'd their light

On the pure columns of its glen-built hall.

Backward and forward roll'd the waves of fight

Round Troy—but while this stood, Troy could not fall.

So, in its lovely moonlight, lives the Mountains surround it and sweet virgin air:

Cold plashing, past it, crystal waters roll;

We visit it by moments, ah, too rare!

We shall renew the battle in the plain To-morrow; red with blood will Xanthus be:

Hector and Ajax will be there again, Helen will come upon the wall to see.

Then we shall rust in shade, or shine in strife.

And fluctuate 'twixt blind hopes and blind despairs,

And fancy that we put forth all our life, And never know how with the soul it fares.

Still doth the soul, from its lone fastness high,

Upon our life a ruling effluence send. And when it fails, fight as we will, we

And while it lasts, we cannot wholly end.

A WISH

I ASK not that my bed of death From bands of greedy heirs be free; For these besiege the latest breath Of fortune's favor'd sons, not me.

I ask not each kind soul to keep Tearless, when of my death he hears. Let those who will, if any, weep! There are worse plagues on earth than tears.

I ask but that my death may find The Freedom to my life denied; Ask but the folly of mankind Then, then at last, to quit my side.

Spare me the whispering, crowded room, The friends who come, and gape, and go; The ceremonious air of gloom— All, which makes death a hideous show!

Nor bring, to see me cease to live. Some doctor full of phrase and fame, To shake his sapient head, and give The ill he cannot cure a name.

Nor fetch, to take the accustom'd toll Of the poor sinner bound for death, His brother-doctor of the soul, To canyass with official breath

The future and its viewless things—
That undiscover'd mystery
Which one who feels death's winnowing
wings

Must needs read clearer, sure, than he!

Bring none of these; but let me be, While all around in silence lies, Moved to the window near, and see Once more, before my dying eyes,

Bathed in the sacred dews of morn The wide aerial landscape spread— The world which was ere I was born, The world which lasts when I am dead;

Which never was the friend of one, Nor promised love it could not give, But lit for all its generous sun, And lived itself, and made us live.

There let me gaze, till I become In soul, with what I gaze on, wed! To feel the universe my home; To have before my mind—instead

Of the sick room, the mortal strife, The turmoil for a little breath— The pure eternal course of life, Not human combatings with death!

Thus feeling, gazing, might I grow Composed, refresh'd, ennobled, clear; Then willing let my spirit go To work or wait elsewhere or here!

RUGBY CHAPEL

NOVEMBER 1857

Coldly, sadly descends
The autumn-evening. The field
Strewn with its dank yellow drifts
Of wither'd leaves, and the elms,
Fade into dimness apace,
Silent;—hardly a shout
From a few boys late at their play!
The lights come out in the street.
In the school-room windows;—but cold
Solemn, unlighted, austere,
Through the gathering darkness, arise
The chapel-walls, in whose bound
Thou, my father! art laid.

There thou dost lie, in the gloom Of the autumn evening. But ah! That word, gloom, to my mind Brings thee back, in the light Of thy radiant vigor, again; In the gloom of November we pass'd Days not dark at thy side; Seasons impair'd not the ray Of thy buoyant cheerfulness clear. Such thou wast! and I stand In the autumn evening and think Of bygone autumns with thee.

Fifteen years have gone round Since thou arosest to tread, In the summer-morning, the road Of death, at a call unforeseen, Sudden. For fifteen years, We who till then in thy shade Rested as under the boughs Of a mighty oak, have endured Sunshine and rain as we might, Bare, unshaded, alone, Lacking the shelter of thee.

O strong soul, by what shore Tarriest thou now? For that force, Surely, has not been left vain! Somewhere, surely, afar, In the sounding labor-house vast Of being, is practised that strength, Zealous, beneficent, firm!

Yes, in some far-shining sphere, Conscious or not of the past, Still thou performest the word Of the Spirit in whom thou dost live— Prompt, unwearied, as here! Still thou upraisest with zeal The humble good from the ground, Sternly repressest the bad! Still, like a trumpet, dost rouse Those who with half-open eyes Tread the border-land dim Twixt vice and virtue; reviv'st, Succorest!—this was thy work; This was thy life upon earth.

What is the course of the life
Of mortal men on the earth?—
Most men eddy about
Here and there—eat and drink,
Chatter and love and hate,
Gather and squander, are raised
Aloft, are hurl'd in the dust,
Striving blindly, achieving
Nothing; and then they die—
Perish;—and no one asks
Who or what they have been,
More than he asks what waves,
In the moonlit solitudes mild
Of the midmost Ocean, have swell'd,
Foam'd for a moment, and gone.

And there are some, whom a thirst Ardent, unquenchable, fires. Not with the crowd to be spent, Not without aim to go round In an eddy of purposeless dust, Effort unmeaning and vain. Ah yes! some of us strive Not without action to die Fruitless, but something to snatch From dull oblivion, nor all Glut the devouring grave! We, we have chosen our path-Path to a clear-purposed goal, Path of advance !- but it leads A long, steep journey, through sunk Gorges, o'er mountains in snow. Cheerful, with friends, we set forth-Then on the height, comes the storm. Thunder crashes from rock To rock, the cataracts reply, Lightnings dazzle our eyes. Roaring torrents have breach'd The track, the stream-bed descends In the place where the wayfarer once Planted his footstep—the spray Boils o'er its borders! aloft The unseen snow-beds dislodge Their hanging ruin; alas, Havoc is made in our train! Friends who set forth at our side, Falter, are lost in the storm. We, we only are left! With frowning foreheads, with lips Sternly compress'd, we strain on, On -- and at nightfall at last Come to the end of our way, To the lonely inn 'mid the rocks;

Where the gaunt and taciturn host Stands on the threshold, the wind Shaking his thin white hairs— Holds his lantern to scan Our storm-beat figures, and asks: Whom in our party we bring? Whom we have left in the snow?

Sadly we answer: We bring Only ourselves! we lost Sight of the rest in the storm. Hardly ourselves we fought through, Stripp'd, without friends, as we are. Friends, companions, and train, The avalanche swept from our side.

But thou would'st not alone
Be saved, my father! alone
Conquer and come to thy goal,
Leaving the rest in the wild.
We were weary, and we
Fearful, and we in our march
Fain to drop down and to die.
Still thou turnedst, and still Beckonedst the trembler, and still Gavest the weary thy hand.

If, in the paths of the world, Stones might have wounded thy feet, Toil or dejection have tried Thy spirit, of that we saw Nothing-to us thou wast still Cheerful, and helpful, and firm! Therefore to thee it was given Many to save with thyself; And, at the end of thy day, O faithful shepherd! to come, Bringing thy sheep in thy hand. And through thee I believe In the noble and great who are gone; Pure souls honor'd and blest By former ages, who else— Such, so soulless, so poor, Is the race of men whom I see-Seem'd but a dream of the heart, Seem'd but a cry of desire. Yes! I believe that there lived Others like thee in the past, Not like the men of the crowd Who all round me to-day Bluster or cringe, and make life Hideous, and arid, and vile; But souls temper'd with fire, Fervent, heroic, and good, Helpers and friends of mankind.

Servants of God!—or sons Shall I not call you? because Not as servants ye knew Your Father's innermost mind, His, who unwillingly sees One of his little ones lost— Yours is the praise, if mankind Hath not as yet in its march Fainted, and fallen, and died!

See! In the rocks of the world Marches the host of mankind. A feeble, wavering line. Where are they tending ?-A God Marshall'd them, gave them their goal. Ah, but the way is so long! Years they have been in the wild! Sore thirst plagues them, the rocks, Rising all round, overawe; Factions divide them, their host Threatens to break, to dissolve. -Ah, keep, keep them combined! Else, of the myriads who fill That army, not one shall arrive; Sole they shall stray; in the rocks Stagger for ever in vain. Die one by one in the waste.

Then, in such hour of need Of your fainting, dispirited race, Ye, like angels, appear, Radiant with ardor divine! Beacons of hope, ye appear! Languor is not in your heart, Weakness is not in your word, Weariness not on your brow. Ye alight in our van! at your voice, Panic, despair, flee away. Ye move through the ranks, recall The stragglers, refresh the outworn, Praise, re-inspire the brave! Order, courage, return; Eyes rekindling, and prayers, Follow your steps as ye go. Ye fill up the gaps in our files, Strengthen the wavering line, Stablish, continue our march, On, to the bound of the waste, 1867. On, to the City of God.

HEINE

(FROM HEINE'S GRAVE)

The Spirit of the world,
Beholding the absurdity of men—
Their vaunts, their feats—let a sardonic smile,

For one short moment, wander o'er his lips.

That smile was Heine!—for its earthly hour

The strange guest sparkled: now 'tis pass'd away.

That was Heine! and we, Myriads who live, who have lived, What are we all, but a mood, A single mood, of the life Of the Spirit in whom we exist, Who alone is all things in one? Spirit, who fillest us all! Spirit, who utterest in each New-coming son of mankind Such of thy thoughts as thou wilt! O thou, one of whose moods, Bitter and strange, was the life Of Heine—his strange, alas, His bitter life !-- may a life Other and milder be mine! May'st thou a mood more serene. Happier, have utter'd in mine! May'st thou the rapture of peace Deep have embreathed at its core; Made it a ray of thy thought, Made it a beat of thy joy! 1867.

OBERMANN ONCE MORE

Savez-vous quelque bien qui console du regret d'un monde? Obermann.

GLION?—Ah, twenty years, it cuts ¹
All meaning from a name!
White houses prank where once were huts.
Glion, but not the same!

And yet I know not! All unchanged The turf, the pines, the sky! The hills in their old order ranged; The lake, with Chillon by!

And, 'neath those chestnut-trees, where stiff
And stony mounts the way,
The crackling husk-heaps burn, as if

Across the valley, on that slope, The huts of Avant shine! Its pines, under their branches, ope Ways for the pasturing kine.

I left them yesterday!

Full-foaming milk-pails, Alpine fare, Sweet heaps of fresh-cut grass, Invite to rest the traveller there Before he climb the pass—

¹ Probably all who know the Vevey end of the Lake of Geneva, will recollect Glion, the mountain-village above the castle of Chillon. Glion now has hotels, pensions, and villas; but twenty years ago it was hardly more than the huts of Avani opposite to it,—huts through which goes that beautiful path over the Col de Jaman, followed by so many foot-travellers on their way from Vevey to the Simmenthal and Thun.

(Arnold).

The gentian-flower'd pass, its crown With yellow spires aflame; Whence drops the path to Allière down, And walls where Byron came.¹

By their green river, who doth change His birth-name just below; Orchard, and croft, and full-stored grange Nursed by his pastoral flow.

But stop!—to fetch back thoughts that stray
Beyond this gracious bound,
The cone of Jaman, pale and gray,
See, in the blue profound!

Ah, Jaman! delicately tall
Above his sun-warm'd firs—
What thoughts to me his rocks recall,
What memories he stirs!

And who but thou must be, in truth, Obermann! with me here? Thou master of my wandering youth, But left this many a year!

Yes, I forget the world's work wrought, Its warfare waged with pain; An eremite with thee, in thought Once more I slip my chain,

And to thy mountain-chalet come, And lie beside its door, And hear the wild bee's Alpine hum, And thy sad, tranquil lore!

Again I feel the words inspire Their mournful calm; serene, Yet tinged with infinite desire For all that might have been—

The harmony from which man swerved Made his life's rule once more! The universal order served, Earth happier than before!

—While thus I mused, night gently ran Down over hill and wood. Then, still and sudden, Obermann On the grass near me stood.

Those pensive features well I knew, On my mind, years before, Imaged so oft! imaged so true! —A shepherd's garb he wore,

A mountain-flower was in his hand, A book was in his breast. Bent on my face, with gaze which scann'd My soul, his eyes did rest.

- "And is it thou," he cried, "so long Held by the world which we Loved not, who turnest from the throng Back to thy youth and me?
- "And from thy world, with heart opprest,
 Choosest thou now to turn?—
 Ah me! we anchorites read things best,
 Clearest their course discern!
- "Thou fledst me when the ungenial earth,
 Man's work-place, lay in gloom.
 Return'st thou in her hour of birth,
 Of hopes and hearts in bloom?
- "Perceiv'st thou not the change of day?
 Ah! Carry back thy ken,
 What, some two thousand years! Survey

The world as it was then!

- "Like ours it look'd in outward air. Its head was clear and true, Sumptuous its clothing, rich its fare, No pause its action knew;
- "Stout was its arm, each thew and bone Seem'd puissant and alive— But, ah! its heart, its heart was stone, And so it could not thrive!
- "On that hard Pagan world disgust And secret loathing fell. Deep weariness and sated lust Made human life a hell.
- "In his cool hall, with haggard eyes, The Roman noble lay; He drove abroad, in furious guise, Along the Appian way.
- "He made a feast, drank fierce and fast, And crown'd his hair with flowers— No easier nor no quicker pass'd The impracticable hours.
- "The brooding East with awe beheld Her impious younger world. The Roman tempest swell'd and swell'd, And on her head was hurl'd.

- "The East bow'd low before the blast In patient, deep disdain; She let the legions thunder past, And plunged in thought again.
- "So well she mused, a morning broke Across her spirit gray; A conquering, new-born joy awoke, And fill'd her life with day.
- "'Poor world,' she cried, 'so deep accurst,
 That runn'st from pole to pole
 To seek a draught to slake thy thirst—
 Go, seek it in thy soul!
- "She heard it, the victorious West, In crown and sword array'd! She felt the void which mined her breast, She shiver'd and obey'd.
- "She veil'd her eagles, snapp'd her sword,
 And laid her sceptre down;
 Her stately purple she abhorr'd,
 And her imperial crown.
- "She broke her flutes, she stopp'd her sports,
 Her artists could not please;

Her artists could not please; She tore her books, she shut her courts, She fled her palaces;

- "Lust of the eye and pride of life She left it all behind, And hurried, torn with inward strife, The wilderness to find.
- "Tears wash'd the trouble from her face! She changed into a child! 'Mid weeds and wrecks she stood—a place
 Of ruin—but she smiled!
- "Oh, had I lived in that great day,
 How had its glory new Fill'd earth and heaven, and caught
 away
 My rayish'd spirit too!
- "No thoughts that to the world belong Had stood against the wave Of love which set so deep and strong From Christ's then open grave.
- "No cloister-floor of humid stone Had been too cold for me. For me no Eastern desert lone Had been too far to flee.

- "No lonely life had pass'd too slow, When I could hourly scan Upon his Cross, with head sunk low, That nail'd, thorn-crowned Man!
- "Could see the Mother with her Child Whose tender winning arts Have to his little arms beguiled So many wounded hearts!
- "And centuries came and ran their course,
 And unspent all that time
 Still, still went forth that Child's dear force.
- "Ay, ages long endured his span
 Of life—'tis true received—
 That gracious Child, that thorn-crown'd
 Man!
- -He lived while we believed.

And still was at its prime.

"While we believed, on earth he went, And open stood his grave. Men call'd from chamber, church, and tent;

And Christ was by to save.

- "Now he is dead! Far hence he lies In the lorn Syrian town; And on his grave, with shining eyes, The Syrian stars look down.
- "In vain men still, with hoping new, Regard his death-place dumb, And say the stone is not yet to, And wait for words to come.
- "Ah, o'er that silent sacred land,
 Of sun, and arid stone,
 And crumbling wall, and sultry sand,
 Sounds now one word alone!
- "Unduped of fancy, henceforth man Must labor!—must resign His all too human creeds and scan Simply the way divine!
- "But slow that tide of common thought, Which bathed our life, retired; Slow, slow the old world wore to nought, And pulse by pulse expired.
- "Its frame yet stood without a breach When blood and warmth were fled; And still it spake its wonted speech— But every word was dead.

- "And oh, we cried, that on this corse Might fall a freshening storm! Rive its dry bones, and with new force A new-sprung world inform!
- "—Down came the storm! O'er France it pass'd
 In sheets of scathing fire;
 All Europe felt that fiery blast,
 And shook as it rush'd by her.
- "Down came the storm! In ruins fell The worn-out world we knew. --It pass'd, that elemental swell! Again appear'd the blue;
- "The sun shone in the new-wash'd sky, And what from heaven saw he? Blocks of the past, like icebergs high, Float on a rolling sea!
- "Upon them plies the race of man All it before endeavor'd; 'Ye live,' I cried, 'ye work and plan, And know not ye are sever'd!
- "'Poor fragments of a broken world Whereon men pitch their tent! Why were ye too to death not hurl'd When your world's day was spent?
- ... That glow of central fire is done
 Which with its fusing flame
 Knit all your parts, and kept you one—
 But ye, ye are the same!
- "'The past, its mask of union on, Had ceased to live and thrive. The past, its mask of union gone, Say, is it more alive?
- "'Your creeds are dead, your rites are dead.
 Your social order too!
 Where tarries he, the Power who said:
 See, I make all things new?
- "'The millions suffer still, and grieve, And what can helpers heal With old-world cures men half believe For woes they wholly feel?
- "And yet men have such need of joy! But joy whose grounds are true; And joy that should all hearts employ As when the past was new.
- "Ah, not the emotion of that past, Its common hope, were vain! Some new such hope must dawn at last, Or man must toss in pain.

- "" But now the old is out of date, The new is not yet born, And who can be alone elate, While the world lies forlorn?"
- "Then to the wilderness I fled.— There among Alpine snows And pastoral huts I hid my head, And sought and found repose.
- "It was not yet the appointed hour. Sad, patient, and resign'd, I watch'd the crocus fade and flower, I felt the sun and wind.
- "The day I lived in was not mine, Man gets no second day. In dreams I saw the future shine— But ah! I could not stay!
- "Action I had not, followers, fame; I pass'd obscure, alone.
 The after-world forgets my name,
 Nor do I wish it known.
- "Composed to bear, I lived and died, And knew my life was vain, With fate I murmur not, nor chide. At Sèvres by the Seine
- "(If Paris that brief flight allow)
 My humble tomb explore!
 It bears: Eternity, be thou
 My refuge! and no more.
- "But thou, whom fellowship of mood Did make from haunts of strife Come to my mountain-solitude, And learn my frustrate life;
- "O thou, who, ere thy flying span Was past of cheerful youth, Didst find the solitary man And love his cheerless truth—
- "Despair not thou as I despair'd, Nor be cold gloom thy prison! Forward the gracious hours have fared, And see! the sun is risen!
- "He breaks the winter of the past; A green, new earth appears. Millions, whose life in ice lay fast, Have thoughts, and smiles, and tears.
- "What though there still need effort, strife? Though much be still unwon? Yet warm it mounts, the hour of life!

Death's frozen hour is done!

"The world's great order dawns in sheen,

After long darkness rude.

After long darkness rude, Divinelier imaged, clearer seen, With happier zeal pursued.

"With hope extinct and brow composed I mark'd the present die; Its term of life was nearly closed, Yet it had more than I.

"But thou, though to the world's new hour
Thou come with aspect marr'd,

Thou come with aspect marr'd, Shorn of the joy, the bloom, the power Which best befits its bard—

"Though more than half thy years be past,

And spent thy youthful prime:

And spent thy youthful prime; Though, round thy firmer manhood cast Hang weeds of our sad time

"Whereof thy youth felt all the spell, And traversed all the shade— Though late, though dimm'd, though weak, yet tell Hope to a world new-made!

"Help it to fill that deep desire, The want which rack'd our brain, Consumed our heart with thirst like fire, Immedicable pain;

"Which to the wilderness drove out Our life, to Alpine snow, And palsied all our word with doubt, And all our work with woe—

"What still of strength is left, employ, This end to help attain: One common wave of thought and joy Lifting mankind again!"

—The vision ended. I awoke As out of sleep, and no Voice moved;—only the torrent broke The silence, far below.

Soft darkness on the turf did lie. Solemn, o'er hut and wood, In the yet star-sown nightly sky, The peak of Jaman stood.

Still in my soul the voice I heard Of Obermann!——away I turn'd; by some vague impulse stirr'd, Along the rocks of Naye

Past Sonchaud's piny flanks I gaze And the blanch'd summit bare Of Malatrait, to where in haze The Valais opens fair,

And the domed Velan, with his snows, Behind the upcrowding hills, Doth all the heavenly opening close Which the Rhone's murmur fills;—

And glorious there, without a sound, Across the glimmering lake, High in the Valais-depth profound, I saw the morning break. 1867.

MY SISTER'S SLEEP

SHE fell asleep on Christmas Eve:
At length the long-ungranted shade
Of weary eyelids overweigh'd
The pain nought else might yet relieve.

Our mother, who had leaned all day
Over the bed from chime to chime,
Then raised herself for the first time,
And as she sat her down, did pray.

Her little work-table was spread
With work to finish. For the glare
Made by her candle, she had care
To work some distance from the bed.

Without, there was a cold moon up, Of winter radiance sheer and thin; The hollow halo it was in Was like an icy crystal cup.

Through the small room, with subtle sound

Of flame, by vents the fireshine drove And reddened. In its dim alcove The mirror shed a clearness round.

I had been sitting up some nights,
And my tired mind felt weak and blank;

Like a sharp strengthening wine it drank

The stillness and the broken lights.

Twelve struck. That sound, by dwindling years

Heard in each hour, crept off; and then

The ruffled silence spread again, Like water that a pebble stirs.

Our mother rose from where she sat: Her needles, as she laid them down, Met lightly, and her silken gown Settled: no other noise than that.

"Glory unto the Newly Born!"
So, as said angels, she did say;

Because we were in Christmas Day, Though it would still be long till morn.

Just then in the room over us
There was a pushing back of chairs,
As some who had sat unawares
So late, now heard the hour, and rose.

With anxious softly-stepping haste
Our mother went where Margaret lay, Fearing the sounds o'erhead—should they

Have broken her long watched-for rest!

She stooped an instant, calm, and turned;

But suddenly turned back again;
And all her features seemed in pain
With woe, and her eyes gazed and yearned.

For my part, I but hid my face,
And held my breath, and spoke no
word:

There was none spoken; but I heard The silence for a little space.

Our mother bowed herself and wept:

And both my arms fell, and I said,

"God knows I knew that she was dead."

And there, all white, my sister slept.

Then kneeling, upon Christmas morn A little after twelve o'clock
We said, ere the first quarter struck,
"Christ's blessing on the newly born!" 1847. 1850.

THE BLESSED DAMOZEL

The blessed damozel leaned out
From the gold bar of Heaven;
Her eyes were deeper than the depth
Of waters stilled at even;
She had three lilies in her hand,
And the stars in her hair were seven.

Her robe, ungirt from clasp to hem, No wrought flowers did adorn, But a white rose of Mary's gift, For service meetly worn; Her hair that lay along her back Was yellow like ripe corn.

Herseemed she scarce had been a day One of God's choristers; The wonder was not yet quite gone

From that still look of hers; Albeit, to them she left, her day Had counted as ten years.

(To one, it is ten years of years.
Yet now, and in this place,
Surely she leaned o'er me—her hair
Fell all about my face.
Nothing: the autumn fall of leaves.
The whole year sets apace.)

It was the rampart of God's house
That she was standing on:
By God built over the sheer depth
The which is Space begun:
So high, that looking downward thence
She scarce could see the sun.

It lies in Heaven, across the flood Of ether, as a bridge. Beneath the tides of day and night With flame and darkness ridge The void, as low as where this earth Spins like a fretful midge.

Around her, lovers, newly met
'Mid deathless love's acclaims,
Spoke evermore among themselves
Their heart-remembered names;
And the souls mounting up to God
Went by her like thin flames.

And still she bowed herself and stooped Out of the circling charm; Until her bosom must have made The bar she leaned on warm, And the lilies lay as if asleep Along her bended arm.

From the fixed place of Heaven she saw Time like a pulse shake fierce Through all the worlds. Her gaze still strove

Within the gulf to pierce
Its path; and now she spoke as when
The stars sang in their spheres.

The sun was gone now: the curled moon Was like a little feather

Fluttering far down the gulf; and now She spoke through the still weather. Her voice was like the voice the stars Had when they sang together. (Ah sweet! Even now, in that bird's song,

Strove not her accents there. Fain to be harkened? When those bells Possescod the mid-day air,

Strove not her steps to reach my side

Down all the echoing stair?)

"I wish that he were come to me, For he will come," she said.

"Have I not prayed in Heaven?—on earth,

Lord, Lord, has he not pray'd? Are not two prayers a perfect strength? And shall I feel afraid?

"When round his head the aureole clings,
And he is clothed in white,

I'll take his hand and go with him
To the deep wells of light;
As unto a stream we will step down,

And bathe there in God's sight.

"We two will stand beside that shrine, Occult, withheld, untrod, Whose lamps are stirred continually

With prayer sent up to God; And see our old prayers, granted, melt Each like a little cloud.

"We two will lie i' the shadow of That living mystic tree

Within whose secret growth the Dove Is sometimes felt to be,

While every leaf that His plumes touch Saith His Name audibly.

"And I myself will teach to him, I myself, lying so,

The songs I sing here; which his voice
Shall pause in, hushed and slow,
And find some knowledge at each pause,
Or some new thing to know."

(Alas! We two, we two, thou say'st! Yea, one wast thou with me That once of old. But shall God lift

To endless unity
The soul whose likeness with thy sou

The soul whose likeness with thy soul Was but its love for thee?)

"We two," she said, "will seek the groves

Where the lady Mary is,

With her five handmaidens whose names

Are five sweet symphonies, Cecily, Gertrude, Magdalen, Margaret and Rosalys.

'Circlewise sit they, with bound locks And foreheads garlanded; Into the fine cloth white like flame Weaving the golden thread, To fashion the birth-robes for them

Who are just born, being dead.

"He shall fear, haply, and be dumb: Then will I lay my cheek To his, and tell about our love, Not once abashed or weak: And the dear Mother will approve My pride, and let me speak.

" Herself shall bring us, hand in hand, To Him round whom all souls Kneel, the clear-ranged unnumbered heads

Bowed with their aureoles: And angels meeting us shall sing To their citherns and citoles.

"There will I ask of Christ the Lord Thus much for him and me:-Only to live as once on earth With Love, only to be, As then awhile, for ever now. Together, I and he."

She gazed and listened and then said. Less sad of speech than mild,-"All this is when he comes." She ceased.

The light thrilled towards her, fill'd With angels in strong level flight. Her eyes prayed, and she smil'd.

(I saw her smile.) But soon their path Was vague in distant spheres: And then she cast her arms along The golden barriers, And laid her face between her hands. And wept. (I heard her tears.) 1847. 1850.

AUTUMN SONG

Know's thou not at the fall of the leaf How the heart feels a languid grief Laid on it for a covering; And how sleep seems a goodly thing In Autumn at the fall of the leaf?

And how the swift beat of the brain Falters because it is in vain, In Autumn at the fall of the leaf Knowest thou not? and how the chief Of joys seems—not to suffer pain?

Know'st thou not at the fall of the leaf How the soul feels like a dried sheaf Bound up at length for harvesting, And how death seems a comely thing In Autumn at the fall of the leaf? 1884.1

THE PORTRAIT

It seems a thing to wonder on, As though mine image in the glass Should tarry when myself am gone. I gaze until she seems to stir.— Until mine eyes almost aver That now, even now, the sweet lips

To breathe the words of the sweet heart :-

And yet the earth is over her.

This is her picture as she was:

Alas! even such the thin-drawn ray That makes the prison-depths more rude,-

The drip of water night and day Giving a tongue to solitude. Yet only this, of love's whole prize, Remains; save what in mournful guise Takes counsel with my soul alone. Save what is secret and unknown, Below the earth, above the skies.

In painting her I shrined her face 'Mid mystic trees, where light falls in Hardly at all; a covert place

Where you might think to find a din Of doubtful talk, and a live flame Wandering, and many a shape whose

Not itself knoweth, and old dew, And your own footsteps meeting you, And all things going as they came.

A deep dim wood; and there she stands As in that wood that day: for so Was the still movement of her hands And such the pure line's gracious

And passing fair the type must seem, Unknown the presence and the dream. 'T is she: though of herself, alas! Less than her shadow on the grass

Or than her image in the stream.

That day we met there, I and she One with the other all alone; And we were blithe; yet memory

¹ W. M. Rossetti classes this among the earliest poems, in date of writing. It was published as a song in 1884, and in the Poetical Works, 1886.

Saddens those hours, as when the moon

Looks upon daylight. And with her I stooped to drink the spring-water, Athirst where other waters sprang; And where the echo is, she sang,-My soul another echo there.

But when that hour my soul won strength

For words whose silence wastes and kills.

Dull raindrops smote us, and at length Thundered the heat within the hills. That eve I spoke those words again Beside the pelted window-pane; And there she harkened what I said.

With under-glances that surveyed The empty pastures blind with rain.

Next day the memories of these things. Like leaves through which a bird has flown.

Still vibrated with Love's warm wings: Till I must make them all my own And paint this picture. So, 'twixt ease Of talk and sweet long silences,

She stood among the plants in bloom At windows of a summer room, To feigh the shadow of the trees.

And as I wrought, while all above And all around was fragrant air, In the sick burthen of my love It seemed each sun-thrilled blossom

Beat like a heart among the leaves. O heart that never beats nor heaves, In that one darkness lying still, What now to thee my love's great will, Or the fine web the sunshine weaves?

For now doth daylight disavow Those days,—nought left to see or hear. Only in solemn whispers now

At night-time these things reach mine

When the leaf-shadows at a breath Shrink in the road, and all the heath, Forest and water, far and wide, In limpid starlight glorified, Lie like the mystery of death.

Last night at last I could have slept, And yet delayed my sleep till dawn, Still wandering. Then it was I wept: For unawares I came upon

Those glades where once she walked

with me:

And as I stood there suddenly, All wan with traversing the night, Upon the desolate verge of light Yearned loud the iron-bosomed sea.

Even so, where Heaven holds breath and hears

The beating heart of Love's own breast.

Where round the secret of all spheres All angels lay their wings to rest,-How shall my soul stand rapt and awed, When, by the new birth borne abroad Throughout the music of the suns, It enters in her soul at once And knows the silence there for God!

Here with her face doth memory sit Meanwhile, and wait the day's decline, Till other eyes shall look from it, Eyes of the spirit's Palestine, Even than the old gaze tenderer: While hopes and aims long lost with her Stand round her image side by side, Like tombs of pilgrims that have died About the Holy Sepulchre. 1847, 1870.

THE CARD-DEALER

COULD you not drink her gaze like wine? Yet though its splendor swoon Into the silence languidly As a tune into a tune, Those eyes unravel the coiled night And know the stars at noon.

The gold that's heaped beside her hand, In truth rich prize it were; And rich the dreams that wreathe her brows With magic stillness there; And he were rich who should unwind That woven golden hair.

Around her, where she sits, the dance Now breathes its eager heat; And not more lightly or more true Fall there the dancers' feet Than fall her cards on the bright board As 'twere an heart that beat.

Her fingers let them softly through, Smooth polished silent things; And each one as it falls reflects In swift light-shadowings, Blood-red and purple, green and blue, The great eyes of her rings.

Whom plays she with? With thee, who lov'st

Those gems upon her hand; With me, who search her secret brows; With all men, bless'd or bann'd. We play together, she and we,

We play together, she and we, Within a vain strange land:

A land without any order,—
Day even as night, (one saith,)—
Where who lieth down ariseth not
Nor the sleeper awakeneth;
A land of darkness as darkness itself

And of the shadow of death.

What be her cards, you ask? Even these:—

The heart, that doth but crave More, having fed; the diamond, Skilled to make base seem brave; The club, for smiting in the dark; The spade, to dig a grave.

And do you ask what game she plays?
With me 'tis lost or won:

With thee it is playing still; with him It is not well begun;

But 'tis a game she plays with all Beneath the sway o' the sun.

Thou seest the card that falls, she knows
The card that followeth:

Her game in thy tongue is called Life,
As ebbs thy daily breath:

When she shall speak, thou'lt learn her tongue

And know she calls it Death. 1870.

AT THE SUNRISE IN 1848

GoD said, Let there be light! and there was light.

Then heard we sounds as though the Earth did sing

And the Earth's angel cried upon the wing:

We saw priests fall together and turn white:

And covered in the dust from the sun's sight,

A king was spied, and yet another king. We said: "The round world keeps its balancing;

On this globe, they and we are opposite,— If it is day with us, with them 't is night. Still, Man, in thy just pride, remember this:

Thou hadst not made that thy sons' sons shall ask

What the word king may mean in their day's task,

But for the light that led: and if light is, It is because God said, Let there be light." 1848. 1886.

ON REFUSAL OF AID BETWEEN NATIONS

Not that the earth is changing, O my God!

Nor that the seasons totter in their walk,—

Not that the virulent ill of act and talk Seethes ever as a winepress ever trod,— Not therefore are we certain that the rod Weighs in thine hand to smite thy world; though now

Beneath thine hand so many nations bow,

So many kings:—not therefore, O my God!—

But because Man is parcelled out in men To-day; because, for any wrongful blow, No man not stricken asks, "I would be told

Why thou dost thus;" but his heart whispers then,
"He is he, I am I." By this we know.

"He is he, I am I." By this we know. That the earth falls asunder, being old.

1848 or 1849. 1870.

MARY'S GIRLHOOD

(For a Picture)

Ι

This is that blessed Mary, pre-elect God's Virgin. Gone is a great while, and she Dwelt young in Nazareth of Galilee.

Unto God's will she brought devout respect,

Profound simplicity of intellect,

And supreme patience. From her mother's knee

Faithful and hopeful; wise in charity; Strong in grave peace; in pity circumspect.

So held she through her girlhood; as it were

An angel-watered lily, that near God Grows and is quiet. Till, one dawn at home

She woke in her white bed, and had no fear

At all,—yet wept till sunshine, and felt awed:

Because the fulness of the time was come.

11

THESE are the symbols. On that cloth of red

I' the centre is the Tripoint: perfect each, Except the second of its points, to teach That Christ is not yet born. The books —whose head

Is golden Charity, as Paul hath said— Those virtues are wherein the soul is rich:

Therefore on them the lily standeth, which

Is Innocence, being interpreted.
The seven-thorn'd briar and the palm seven-leaved

Are her great sorrow and her great reward.

Until the end be full, the Holy One Abides without. She soon shall have achieved

Her perfect purity: yea, God the Lord Shall soon vouchsafe His Son to be her Son. 1848, 1850. 1849, 1870.

FOR A VENETIAN PASTORAL

By GIORGIONE

(In the Louvre)

WATER, for anguish of the solstice:

nay,

But dip the vessel, slowly,—nay, but

But dip the vessel, slowly,—nay, but lean

And hark how at its verge the wave sighs in

Reluctant. Hush! Beyond all depth away

The heat lies silent at the brink of day: Now the hand trails upon the viol-string That sobs, and the brown faces cease to sing,

Sad with the whole of pleasure. Whither stray
Her eyes now, from whose mouth the slim pipes creep And leave it pouting, while the shadowed

Is cool against her naked side? Let be:—Say nothing now unto her lest she weep, Nor name this ever. Be it as it was.—Life touching lips with Immortality.

1850.

THE SEA-LIMITS

CONSIDER the sea's listless chime:
Time's self it is, made audible,—
The murmur of the earth's own shell.

Secret continuance sublime

Is the sea's end: our sight may pass
No furlong further. Since time was
This sound hath told the lapse of time.

No quiet, which is death's,—it hath The mournfulness of ancient life, Enduring always at dull strife. As the world's heart of rest and wrath, Its painful pulse is in the sands.

Last utterly, the whole sky stands, Gray and not known, along its path.

Listen alone beside the sea,
Listen alone among the woods;
Those voices of twin solitudes
Shall have one sound alike to thee:

Hark where the murmurs of thronged men

Surge and sink back and surge again,—Still the one voice of wave and tree.

Gather a shell from the strown beach
And listen at its lips: they sigh
The same desire and mystery,
The echo of the whole sea's speech.
And all mankind is thus at heart
Not anything but what thou art:
And Earth, Sea, Man, are all in each.

THE MIRROR

SHE knew it not,—most perfect pain
To learn: this too she knew not. Strife
For me, calm hers, as from the first.
'T was but another bubble burst
Upon the curdling draught of life,—
My silent patience mine again.

As who, of forms that crowd unknows Within a distant mirror's shade,

Deems such an one himself, and makes

Some sign; but when the image shakes

No whit, he finds his thought betray'd, And must seek elsewhere for his own. 1850. 1886.

A YOUNG FIR-WOOD

THESE little firs to-day are things
To clasp into a giant's cap,
Or fans to suit his lady's lap.
From many winters many springs
Shall cherish them in strength and sap,
Till they be marked upon the map,
A wood for the wind's wanderings.

All seed is in the sower's hands: And what at first was trained to spread Its shelter for some single head,-Yea, even such fellowship of wands,-May hide the sunset, and the shade Of its great multitude be laid

Upon the earth and elder sands. November, 1850. 1870.

PENUMBRA

I DID not look upon her eyes, (Though scarcely seen, with no surprise, 'Mid many eyes a single look,) Because they should not gaze rebuke, At night, from stars in sky and brook.

I did not take her by the hand, (Though little was to understand From touch of hand all friends might take,)

Because it should not prove a flake Burnt in my palm to boil and ache.

I did not listen to her voice. (Though none had noted, where at choice All might rejoice in listening,) Because no such a thing should cling In the wood's moan at evening.

I did not cross her shadow once, (Though from the hollow west the sun's Last shadow runs along so far,) Because in June it should not bar My ways, at noon when fevers are.

They told me she was sad that day, (Though wherefore tell what love's soothsay, Sooner than they, did register?) And my heart leapt and wept to her, And yet I did not speak nor stir.

So shall the tongues of the sea's foam (Though many voices therewith come From drowned hope's home to cry to me.)

Bewail one hour the more, when sea And wind are one with memory. 1870.

SISTER HELEN

"WHY did you melt your waxen man, Sister Helen? To-day is the third since you began."

"The time was long, yet the time ran, Little brother."

(O Mother, Mary Mother, Three days to-day, between Hell and Heaven!)

"But if you have done your work aright, Sister Helen. You'll let me play, for you said I might."

"Be very still in your play to-night, Little brother.

(O Mother, Mary Mother, Third night, to-night, between Hell and Heaven!)

"You said it must melt ere vesper-bell, Sister Helen;

If now it be molten, all is well."

"Even so,—nay, peace! you cannot tell, Little brother." (O Mother, Mary Mother, O what is this, between Hell and Heaven?)

"Oh the waxen knave was plump to-day, Sister Helen;

How like dead folk he has dropped away!" "Nay now, of the dead what can you

sav, Little brother?"

(O Mother, Mary Mother, What of the dead, between Hell and Heaven ?)

"See, see, the sunken pile of wood, Sister Helen, Shines through the thinned wax red as blood! "Nay now, when looked you yet on blood. Little brother?" (O Mother, Mary Mother,

How pale she is, between Hell and Heaven!)

"Now close your eyes, for they're sick and sore, Sister Helen,

And I'll play without the gallery door." "Aye, let me rest,—I'll lie on the floor, Little brother."

(O Mother, Mary Mother, What rest to-night, between Hell and Heaven?)

"Here high up in the balcony, Sister Helen,

The moon flies face to face with me." "Aye, look and say whatever you see, Little brother."

(O Mother, Mary Mother, What sight to-night, between Hell and Heaven?)

"Outside it's merry in the wind's wake, Sister Helen:

In the shaken trees the chill stars shake.

"Hush, heard you a horse-tread as you spake,

Little brother?"

(O Mother, Mary Mother, What sound to-night, between Hell and Heaven ?)

"I hear a horse-tread, and I see,

Sister Helen,
Three horsemen that ride terribly."

"Little brother, whence come the three, Little brother?" (O Mother, Mary Mother, Whence should they come, between Hell and Heaven ?)

"They come by the hill-verge from Boyne Bar,

Sister Helen.

And one draws nigh, but two are afar." "Look, look, do you know them who they are,

Little brother?"

(O Mother, Mary Mother, Who should they be, between Hell and Heaven?)

"Oh, it's Keith of Eastholm rides so fast, Sister Helen.

For I know the white mane on the blast." "The hour has come, has come at last, Little brother!"

(O Mother, Mary Mother, Her hour at last, between Hell and Heaven!)

"He has made a sign and called Halloo! Sister Helen,

And he says that he would speak with VO11.

"Oh tell him I fear the frozen dew,

Little brother."
(O Mother, Mary Mother, Why laughs she thus, between Hell and Heaven!)

"The wind is loud, but I hear him cry. Sister Helen,

That Keith of Ewern's like to die. "And he and thou, and thou and I,

(O Mother, Mary Mother, And they and we, between Hell and Heaven!)

"Three days ago, on his marriage-morn, Sister Helen,

He sickened, and lies since then forlorn."

' For bridegroom's side is the bride a thorn.

Little brother?" (O Mother, Mary Mother,

Cold bridal cheer, between Hell and Heaven!)

"Three days and nights he has lain abed.

Sister Helen. And he prays in torment to be dead."

"The thing may chance, if he have prayed, Little brother!"

(O Mother, Mary Mother,

If he have prayed, between Hell and Heaven!)

"But he has not ceased to cry to-day, Sister Helen,

That you should take your curse away." "My prayer was heard,-he need but

Little brother!"

(O Mother, Mary Mother, Shall God not hear, between Hell and Heaven?)

"But he says, till you take back your ban.

Sister Helen, His soul would pass, yet never can."

"Nay then, shall I slay a living man, Little brother?"

(O Mother, Mary Mother, A living soul, between Hell and Heaven!)

"But he calls for ever on your name, Sister Helen.

And says that he melts before a flame." "My heart for his pleasure fared the same.

Little brother."

(O Mother, Mary Mother, Fire at the heart, between Hell and Heaven!)

"Here's Keith of Westholm riding fast, Sister Helen,

For I know the white plume on the blast."

"The hour, the sweet hour I forecast, Little brother!"

(O Mother, Mary Mother,

Is the hour sweet, between Hell and Heaven?)

"He stops to speak, and he stills his horse. Sister Helen:

But his words are drowned in the wind's course.

"Nay hear, nay hear, you must hear perforce,

Little brother!"

(O Mother, Mary Mother, What word now heard, between Hell and Heaven?)

"Oh he says that Keith of Ewern's cry, Sister Helen,

Is ever to see you ere he die."

"In all that his soul sees, there am I, Little brother!" (O Mother, Mary Mother,

The soul's one sight, between Hell and Heaven!)

"He sends a ring and a broken coin, Sister Helen.

And bids you mind the banks of Boyne." "What else he broke will he ever join, Little brother?"

(O Mother, Mary Mother, No, never joined, between Hell and Heaven !)

"He yields you these and craves full fain, Sister Helen.

You pardon him in his mortal pain." "What else he took will he give again, Little brother?

(O Mother, Mary Mother,

Not twice to give, between Hell and Heaven!)

"He calls your name in an agony, Sister Helen,

That even dead Love must weep to see." "Hate, born of Love, is blind as he, Little brother!"

(O Mother, Mary Mother, Love turned to hate, between Hell and Heaven!)

"Oh it's Keith of Keith now that rides fast.

Sister Helen. For I know the white hair on the blast." "The short, short hour will soon be past, Little brother!"

(O Mother, Mary Mother, Will soon be past, between Hell and Heaven!

"He looks at me and he tries to speak, Sister Helen,

But oh! his voice is sad and weak!" "What here should the mighty Baron seek.

Little brother?" (O Mother, Mary Mother, Is this the end, between Hell and Heaven ?

"Oh his son still cries, if you forgive, Sister Helen,

The body dies, but the soul shall live."
"Fire shall forgive me as I forgive, Little brother!"

(O Mother, Mary Mother, As she forgives, between Hell and Heaven!)

"Oh he prays you, as his heart would

Sister Helen,

To save his dear son's soul alive. " Fire cannot slay it, it shall thrive, Little brother!"

(O Mother, Mary Mother, Alas, alas, between Hell and Heaven!)

"He cries to you, kneeling in the road, Sister Helen,

To go with him for the love of God!" "The way is long to his son's abode, Little brother."

(O Mother, Mary Mother, The way is long, between Hell and Heaven!)

"A lady's here, by a dark steed brought, Sister Helen.

So darkly clad, I saw her not." "See her now or never see aught,

Little brother! (O Mother, Mary Mother, What more to see, between Hell and Heaven ?) "Her hood falls back, and the moon

shines fair, Sister Helen,

On the Lady of Ewern's golden hair." "Blest hour of my power and her despair, Little brother!"

(O Mother, Mary Mother, Hour blest and bann'd, between Hell and Heaven!)

"Pale, pale her cheeks, that in pride did glow.

Sister Helen.

'Neath the bridal-wreath three days ago." "One morn for pride and three days for woe.

Little brother!" (O Mother, Mary Mother, Three days, three nights, between Hell and Heaven!)

"Her clasped hands stretch from her bending head,
Sister Helen;

With the loud wind's wail her sobs are wed."

"What wedding-strains hath her bridalbed.

Little brother?"
(O Mother, Mary Mother,

What strain but death's, between Hell and Heaven?)

"She may not speak, she sinks in a swoon,

Sister Helen,
She lifts her lips and gasps on the moon."
"Oh! might I but hear her soul's blithe tune.

Little brother!"
(O Mother, Mary Mother,
Her woe's dumb cry, between Hell and Heaven!)

"They've caught her to Westholm's saddle-bow.

And her moonlit hair gleams white in its flow."

"Let it turn whiter than winter snow, Little brother!"

(O Mother, Mary Mother, Woe-withered gold, between Hell and Heaven!)

"O Sister Helen, you heard the bell, Sister Helen!

More loud than the vesper-chime it fell."
"No vesper-chime, but a dying knell,
Little brother!"

(O Mother, Mary Mother,

His dying knell, between Hell and Heaven!)

"Alas! but I fear the heavy sound,
Sister Helen;
Is it in the sky or in the ground?"

Is it in the sky or in the ground?"
"Say, have they turned their horses round,

Little brother?"
(O Mother, Mary Mother, emore, between Hell and What would she more, between Hell and Heaven?)

"They have raised the old man from his knee,

Sister Helen,
And they ride in silence hastily."
"More fast the naked soul doth flee,
Little brother!"

The naked soul, between Hell and Heaven!)

"Flank to flank are the three steeds gone,

Sister Helen,
But the lady's dark steed goes alone."
"And lonely her bridegroom's soul hath flown.

Little brother."
(O Mother, Mary Mother.
The lonely ghost, between Hell and

The lonely ghost, between Hell and Heaven!)

"Oh the wind is sad in the iron chill, Sister Helen,

And weary sad they look by the hill."
"But he and I are sadder still,

Little brother!"
(O Mother, Mary Mother,
Most sad of all, between Hell and

Heaven!)

"See, see, the wax has dropped from its place,
Sister Helen.

And the flames are winning up apace!"
"Yet here they burn but for a space,
Little brother!"

(O Mother, Mary Mother, Here for a space, between Hell and Heaven?)

"Ah! what white thing at the door has cross'd,

Sister Helen?
Ah! what is this that sighs in the frost?"

"A soul that's lost as mine is lost,
Little brother!"

Lost, lost, all lost, between Hell and Heaven!) 1853, 1870.

THE BURDEN OF NINEVEH

In our Museum galleries To-day I lingered o'er the prize Dead Greece vouchsafes to living eyes,— Her Art for ever in fresh wise

From hour to hour rejoicing me.
Sighing I turned at last to win
Once more the London dirt and din;
And as I made the swing-door spin
And issued, they were hoisting in
A wingéd beast from Nineveh.

A human face the creature wore, And hoofs behind and hoofs before, And flanks with dark runes fretted o'er. 'T was bull, 't was mitred Minotaur,
A dead disbowelled mystery;
The mummy of a buried faith
Stark from the charnel without scathe.
Its wings stood for the light to bathe.—
Such fossil cerements as might swathe
The very corpse of Nineveh.

The print of its first rush-wrapping,
Wound ere it dried, still ribbed the thing.

What song did the brown maidens sing, From purple mouths alternating, When that was woven languidly?

What vows, what rites, what prayers preferr'd.

What songs has the strange image heard?

In what blind vigil stood interr'd For ages, till an English word Broke silence first at Nineveh?

Oh when upon each sculptured court, Where even the wind might not resort.—

O'er which Time passed, of like import With the wild Arab boys at sport,—

A living face looked in to see: Solution of the seemed it not—the spell once broke—As though the carven warriors woke, As though the shaft the string forsook, The cymbals clashed, the chariots shook, And there was life in Nineveh?

On London stones our sun anew The beast's recovered shadow threw. (No shade that plague of darkness knew, No light, no shade, while older grew By ages the old earth and sea.)

Lo thou! could all thy priests have shown

Such proof to make thy godhead known? From their dead Past thou liv'st alone And still thy shadow is thine own Even as of yore in Nineveh.

That day whereof we keep record, When near thy city-gates the Lord Sheltered his Jonah with a gourd, This sun, (I said) here present, pour'd

Even thus this shadow that I see.
This shadow has been shed the same
From sun and moon,—from lamps which came

For prayer,—from fifteen days of flame, The last, while smouldered to a name Sardanapalus' Nineveh.

Within thy shadow, haply, once Sennacherib has knelt, whose sons

Smote him between the altar-stones:
Or pale Semiramis her zones

Of gold, her incense brought to thee, In love for grace, in war for aid:... Ay, and who else?... till 'neath thy

Within his trenches newly made Last year the Christian knelt and prav'd—

Not to thy strength-in Ninevell.

Now, thou poor god, within this hall Where the blank windows blind the wall From pedestal to pedestal.

The kind of light shall on thee fall Which London takes the day to be: While school-foundations in the act Of holiday, three files compact, Shall learn to view thee as a fact Connected with that zealous tract: "Rome,—Babylon and Nineveh."

Deemed they of this, those worshippers, When, in some mythic chain of verse Which man shall not again rehearse, The faces of thy ministers

Yearned pale with bitter ecstasy? Greece, Egypt, Rome,—did any god Before whose feet men knelt unshod Deem that in this unblest abode Another scarce more unknown god Should house with him, from Nineveh?

Ah! in what quarries lay the stone From which this pygmy pile has grown, Unto man's need how long unknown, Since thy vast temples, court and cone,

Rose far in desert history?
Ah! what is here that does not lie
All strange to thine awakened eye?
Ah! what is here can testify
(Save that dumb presence of the sky)
Unto thy day and Nineveh?

Why, of those mummies in the room Above, there might indeed have come One out of Egypt to thy home, An alien. Nay, but were not some

Of these thine own "antiquity"?
And now,—they and their gods and thou
All relics here together,—now
Whose profit? whether bull or cow,
Isis or Ibis, who or how,

Whether of Thebes or Nineveh?

The consecrated metals found, And ivory tablets, underground, Winged teraphim and creatures crown'd When air and daylight filled the mound, Fell into dust immediately.
And even as these, the images
Of awe and worship.—even as these,—
So, smitten with the sun's increase,
Her glory mouldered and did cease
From immemorial Nineveh.

The day her builders made their halt, Those cities of the lake of salt Stood firmly 'stablished without fault, Made proud with pillars of basalt,

With sardonyx and porphyry.
The day that Jonah bore abroad
To Nineveh the voice of God,
A brackish lake lay in his road,
Where erst Pride fixed her sure abode,
As then in royal Nineveh.

The day when he, Pride's lord and Man's, Showed all the kingdoms at a glance To Him before whose countenance The years recede, the years advance,

And said, Fall down and worship me:—
'Mid all the pomp beneath that look,
Then stirred there, haply, some rebuke,
Where to the wind the salt pools shook,
And in those tracts, of life forsook,
That knew thee not, O Nineveh!

Delicate harlot! On thy throne
Thou with a world beneath thee prone
In state for ages sat'st alone;
And needs were years and lustres flown
Ere strength of man could vanquish

Whom even thy victor foes must bring, Still royal, among maids that sing As with doves' voices, taboring Upon their breasts, unto the King,—A kingly conquest, Nineveh!

.... Here woke my thought. The wind's slow sway

Had waxed; and like the human play Of scorn that smiling spreads away, The sunshine shivered off the day:

The callous wind, it seemed to me, Swept up the shadow from the ground: And pale as whom the Fates astound, The god forlorn stood winged and crown'd:

Within I knew the cry lay bound Of the dumb soul of Nineveh.

And as I turned, my sense half shut Still saw the crowds of kerb and rut Go past as marshalled to the strut Of ranks in gypsum quaintly cut. It seemed in one same pageantry They followed forms which had been erst:

To pass, till on my sight should burst That future of the best or worst When some may question which was first,

Of London or of Nineveh.

For as that Bull-god once did stand And watched the burial-clouds of sand, Till these at last without a hand Rose o'er his eyes, another land,

And blinded him with destiny:—So may he stand again; till now, In ships of unknown sail and prow, Some tribe of the Australian plough Bear him afar,—a relic now

Of London, not of Nineveh!

Or it may chance indeed that when Man's age is hoary among men,— His centuries threescore and ten,— His furthest childhood shall seem then

More clear than later times may be: Who, finding in this desert place
This form, shall hold us for some race
That walked not in Christ's lowly ways,
But bowed its pride and vowed its praise
Unto the god of Nineveh.

The smile rose first,—anon drew nigh The thought:... Those heavy wings spread high

So sure of flight, which do not fly; That set gaze never on the sky;

Those scriptured flanks it cannot see;
Its crown, a brow-contracting load;
Its planted feet which trust the sod:...
(So grew the image as I trod;)
O Nineveh, was this thy God,—

Thine also, mighty Nineveh? 1856. MARY MAGDALENE

AT THE DOOR OF SIMON THE PHARISEE

(For a Drawing 1)

"Why wilt thou cast the roses from thine

hair?
Nay, be thou all a rose,—wreath, lips,
and cheek.

Nay, not this house,—that banquethouse we seek;

See how they kiss and enter; come thou there.

This delicate day of love we two will share

Till at our ear love's whispering night shall speak.

What, sweet one,—hold'st thou still the foolish freak?

Nay, when I kiss thy feet they 'll leave the stair."

"Oh loose me! See'st thou not my Bridegroom's face

That draws me to Him? For His feet my kiss,

My hair, my tears He craves to-day:—
and oh!

What words can tell what other day and place

Shall see me clasp those blood-stained feet of His?

He needs me, calls me, loves me: let me go!" 1856-7. 1870.

ASPECTA MEDUSA

(For a Drawing)

Andromeda, by Perseus saved and wed, Hankered each day to see the Gorgon's head:

Till o'er a fount he held it, bade her lean, And mirrored in the wave was safely

That death she lived by.

Let not thine eyes know Any forbidden thing itself, although It once should save as well as kill: but be

Its shadow upon life enough for thee. 1870.

LOVE'S NOCTURN

Master of the murmuring courts
Where the shapes of sleep convene!—
Lo! my spirit here exhorts
All the powers of thy demesne
For their aid to woo my queen.

What reports

Yield thy jealous courts unseen? Vaporous, unaccountable, Dreamland lies forlorn of light.

Hollow like a breathing shell.

Ah! that from all dreams I might
Choose one dream and guide its flight!

I know well

What her sleep should tell to-night.

There the dreams are multitudes:
Some that will not wait for sleep,
Deep within the August woods;
Some that hum while rest may steep

Weary labor laid a-heap;
Interludes,
Some, of grievous moods that ween.

Poets' fancies all are there:
There the elf-girls flood with wings
Valleys full of plaintive air;
There breathe perfumes; there in rings

Whirl the foam-bewildered springs ·
Siren there

Winds her dizzy hair and sings.

Thence the one dream mutually Dreamed in bridal unison,
Less than waking ecstasy;
Half-formed visions that make moan
In the house of birth alone;
And what we,
At death's wicket, see, unknown,

But for mine own sleep, it lies
In one gracious form's control,
Fair with honorable eyes,
Lamps of a translucent soul;
O their glance is loftiest dole,
Sweet and wise,
Wherein Love descries his goal.

Reft of her, my dreams are all Clammy trance that fears the sky: Changing footpaths shift and fall; From polluted coverts nigh, Miserable phantoms sigh:

Quakes the pall,
And the funeral goes by.

Master, is it soothly said
That, as echoes of man's speech
Far in secret clefts are made,
So do all men's bodies reach
Shadows o'er thy sunken beach,—
Shape or shade
In those halls portrayed of each?

Ah! might I, by thy good grace
Groping in the windy stair,
(Darkness and the breath of space
Like loud waters everywhere),
Meeting mine own image there
Face to face,
Send it from that place to her!

Nay, not I; but oh! do thou,
Master, from thy shadow kind
Call my body's phantom now:
Bid it bear its face declin'd
Till its flight her slumbers find,
And her brow
Feel its presence bow like wind.

Where in groves the gracile Spring
Trembles, with mute orison
Confidently strengthening,
Water's voice and wind's as one
Shed an echo in the sun.
Soft as Spring,
Master, bid it sing and moan.

Song shall tell how glad and strong
Is the night she soothes alway;
Moan shall grieve with that parched tongue

Of the brazen hours of day:
Sounds as of the springtide they,
Moan and song,
While the chill months long for May.

Not the prayers which with all leave
The world's fluent woes prefer,—
Not the praise the world doth give,
Dulcet fulsome whisperer;—
Let it yield my love to her,
And achieve
Strength that shall not grieve or err.

Iheresoe'er my dreams befall,
Both at night-watch (let it say),
And where round the sun-dial
The reluctant hours of day,
Heartless, hopeless of their way,
Rest and call;
There her glance doth fall and stay.

Suddenly her face is there;
So do mounting vapors wreathe
Subtle-scented transports where
The black fir-wood sets its teeth.
Part the boughs and look beneath,—
Lilies share
Secret waters there, and breathe.

Master, bid my shadow bend
Whispering thus till birth of light,
Lest new shapes that sleep may send
Scatter all its work to flight;
Master, master of the night,
Bid it spend
Speech, song, prayer, and end aright.

Yet, ah me! if at her head
There another phantom lean
Murmuring o'er the fragrant bed,—
Ah! and if my spirit's queen
Smile those alien words between,—
Ah! poor shade!
Shall it strive, or fade unseen?

How should love's own messenger Strive with love and be love's foe? Master, nay! If thus, in her, Sleep a wedded heart should show,—Silent let mine image go,

Its old share
Of thy spell-bound air to know,

Like a vapor wan and mute,
Like a flame, so let it pass;
One low sigh across her lute,
One dull breath against her glass;
And to my sad soul, alas!
One salute
Cold as when death's foot shall pass.

Then, too, let all hopes of mine,
All vain hopes by night and day,
Slowly at thy summoning sign
Rise up pallid and obey.
Dreams, if this is thus, were they:

Be they thine,
And to dreamworld pine away.

Yet from old time, life, not death,
Master, in thy rule is rife:
Lo! through thee, with mingling breath,
Adam woke beside his wife.
O Love bring me so, for strife,
Force and faith,
Bring me so not death but life!

Yea, to Love himself is pour'd
This frail song of hope and fear.
Thou art Love, of one accord
With kind Sleep to bring her near,
Still-eyed, deep-eyed, ah how dear!
Master, Lord,
In her name implor'd, O hear! 1870.

FIRST LOVE REMEMBERED

PEACE in her chamber, wheresoe'er
It be, a holy place:
The thought still brings my soul such grace
As morning meadows wear.

Whether it still be small and light, A maid's who dreams alone, As from her orchard-gate the moon Its ceiling showed at night:

Or whether, in a shadow dense As nuptial hymns invoke, Innocent maidenhood awoke To married innocence:

There still the thanks unheard await
The unconscious gift bequeathed;
For there my soul this hour has breathed
An air inviolate.
1870.

PLIGHTED PROMISE

In a soft-complexioned sky, Fleeting rose and kindling gray, Have you seen Aurora fly At the break of day? So my maiden, so my plighted may Blushing cheek and gleaming eye Lifts to look my way.

Where the inmost leaf is stirred With the heart-beat of the grove, Have you heard a hidden bird Cast her note above?

So my lady, so my lovely love, Echoing Cupid's prompted word, Makes a tune thereof.

Have you seen, at heaven's mid-height, In the moon-rack's ebb and tide, Venus leap forth burning white,

Dian pale and hide?
So my bright breast-jewel, so my bride,
One sweet night when fear takes

One sweet night, when fear takes flight,
Shall leap against my side. 1870.

SUDDEN LIGHT

I HAVE been here before,
But when or how I cannot tell:
I know the grass beyond the door,
The sweet keen smell,
The sighing sound, the lights around the shore.

You have been mine before,—
How long ago I may not know:
But just when at that swallow's soar
Your neck turned so,
Some veil did fall,—I knew it all of yore,

Has this been thus before?
And shall not thus time's eddying flight

Still with our lives our loves restore In death's despite,

And day and night yield one delight once more? 1863.

THE WOODSPURGE

THE wind flapped loose, the wind was still,

Shaken out dead from tree and hill: I had walked on at the wind's will,—I sat now, for the wind was still.

Between my knees my forehead was,—My lips, drawn in, said not Alas!

My hair was over in the grass, My naked ears heard the day pass.

My eyes, wide open, had the run
Of some ten weeds to fix upon;
Among those few, out of the sun,
The woodspurge flowered, three cups in one.

From perfect grief there need not be Wisdom or even memory:
One thing then learnt remains to me.—
The woodspurge has a cup of three. 1870.

THE HONEYSUCKLE

I PLUCKED a honeysuckle where
The hedge on high is quick with thorn,
And climbing for the prize, was torn,
And fouled my feet in quag-water;
And by the thorns and by the wind
The blossom that I took was thinn'd
And yet I found it sweet and fair.

Thence to a richer growth I came,
Where, nursed in mellow intercourse,
The honeysuckles sprang by scores,
Not harried like my single stem,
All virgin lamps of scent and dew.
So from my hand that first I threw.
Yet plucked not any more of them. 1870.

A LITTLE WHILE

A LITTLE while a little love
The hour yet bears for thee and me
Who have not drawn the veil to see
If still our heaven be lit above.
Thou merely, at the day's last sigh,
Hast felt thy soul prolong the tone,
And I have heard the night-wind cry
And deemed its speech mine own.

A little while a little love
The scattering autumn hoards for us
Whose bower is not yet ruinous
Nor quite unleaved our songless grove.
Only across the shaken boughs
We hear the flood-tides seek the sea,
And deep in both our hearts they rouse
One wail for thee and me.

A little while a little love
May yet be ours who have not said
The word it makes our eyes afraid
To know that each is thinking of.
Not yet the end: be our lips dumb
In smiles a little season yet:
I'll tell thee, when the end is come,

How we may best forget. 1870.

TROY TOWN

HEAVENBORN HELEN. Sparta's queen, (O Troy Town!)

Had two breasts of heavenly sheen, The sun and moon of the heart's desire: All Love's lordship lay between.

(O Troy's down, Tall Troy's on fire!)

Tall Troy's on fire!)

Helen knelt at Venus' shrine, (O Troy Town!) Saving "A little gift is mine, A little gift for a heart's desire. Hear me speak and make me a sign! (O Tron's down.

"Look, I bring thee a carven cup; (O Troy Town!) See it here as I hold it up,-Shaped it is to the heart's desire, Fit to fill when the gods would sup. (O Troy's down,

Tall Troy's on fire!)

"It was moulded like my breast; (O Troy Town!) He that sees it may not rest, Rest at all for his heart's desire. O give ear to my heart's behest!

(O Troy's down, Tall Troy's on fire!)

"See my breast, how like it is; (O Troy Town!) See it bare for the air to kiss! Is the cup to thy heart's desire?

O for the breast, O make it his! (O Troy's down, Tall Troy's on fire!)

"Yea, for my bosom here I sue: (O Troy Town!)
Thou must give it where it is due, Give it there to the heart's desire. Whom do I give my bosom to? (O Troy's down, Tall Troy's on fire!)

"Each twin breast is an apple sweet! (O Troy Town!) Once an apple stirred the beat Of thy heart with the heart's desire: Say, who brought it then to thy feet?

(O Troy's down. Tall Troy's on fire!)

"They that claimed it then were three: (O Troy Town!) For thy sake two hearts did he Make forlorn of the heart's desire. Do for him as he did for thee! (O Troy's down, Tall Troy's on fire!)

"Mine are apples grown to the south, O Troy Town!) Grown to taste in the days of drouth, Taste and waste to the heart's desire: Mine are apples meet for his mouth!"

(O Troy's down, Tall Troy's on fire!)

Venus looked on Helen's gift, (O Troy Town!)

Looked and smiled with subtle drift, Saw the work of her heart's desire :-"There thou kneel'st for Love to lift!" (O Trou's down.

Tall Troy's on fire!)

Venus looked in Helen's face, (O Troy Town!)

Knew far off an hour and place, And fire lit from the heart's desire; Laughed and said, "Thy gift hath grace!"

(O Troy's down, Tall Troy's on fire!)

Cupid looked on Helen's breast, (O Troy Town!)

Saw the heart within its nest, Saw the flame of the heart's desire,— Marked his arrow's burning crest.

(O Troy's down, Tall Trou's on fire!)

Cupid took another dart,

(O Troy Town!) Fledged it for another heart,

Winged the shaft with the heart's desire, Drew the string and said, "Depart!"
(O Troy's down,

Tall Troy's on fire!)

Paris turned upon his bed, (O Troy Town!) Turned upon his bed and said, Dead at heart with the heart's desire,-

"O to clasp her golden head!" (O Troy's down,

> Tall Troy's on fire!) 1870.

THE STREAM'S SECRET

WHAT thing unto mine ear Wouldst thou convey, -what secret thing.

O wandering water ever whispering?

Surely thy speech shall be of her.

Thou water, O thou whispering wanderer,

What message dost thou bring?

Say, hath not Love leaned low This hour beside thy far well-head, And there through jealous hollowed fingers said

The thing that most I long to know,— Murmuring with curls all dabbled in thy flow

And washed lips rosy red?

He told it to thee there
Where thy voice hath a louder tone;
But where it welters to this little moan
His will decrees that I should hear.

Now speak: for with the silence is no fear,

And I am all alone.

Shall Time not still endow
One hour with life, and I and she
Slake in one kiss the thirst of memory?
Say, stream; lest Love should disavow
Thy service, and the bird upon the bough

Sing first to tell it me.

What whisperest thou? Nay, why Name the dead hours? I mind them well.

Their ghosts in many darkened doorways dwell

With desolate eyes to know them by.

That hour must still be born ere it can die

Of that I'd have thee tell.

But hear, before thou speak!
Withhold, I pray, the vain behest
That while the maze hath still its bower for quest

My burning heart should cease to seek. Be sure that Love ordained for souls more meek

His roadside dells of rest.

Stream, when this silver thread In flood-time is a torrent brown, May any bulwark bind thy foaming crown?

Shall not the waters surge and spread And to the crannied boulders of their

Still shoot the dead drift down?

Let no rebuke find place In speech of thine: or it shall prove That thou dost ill expound the words of Love.

Even as thine eddy's rippling race
Would blur the perfect image of his face
I will have none thereof.

O learn and understand That 'gainst the wrongs himself did wreak

Love sought her aid; until her shadowy cheek

And eyes beseeching gave command; And compassed in her close compassionate hand

My heart must burn and speak.

For then at last we spoke
What eyes so oft had told to eyes
Through that long-lingering silence whose half-sighs

Alone the buried secret broke, Which with snatched hands and lips' reverberate stroke

Then from the heart did rise.

But she is far away Now; nor the hours of night grown hoar

Bring yet to me, long gazing from the

The wind-stirred robe of roseate gray
And rose-crown of the hour that leads
the day

When we shall meet once more.

Dark as thy blinded wave
When brimming midnight floods the glen,—

Bright as the laughter of thy runnels when

The dawn yields all the light they crave;

Even so these hours to wound and that to save

Are sisters in Love's ken.

Oh sweet her bending grace
Then when I kneel beside her feet;
And sweet her eyes' o'erhanging heaven; and sweet

The gathering folds of her embrace; And her fall'n hair at last shed round my face

When breaths and tears shall meet.

Beneath her sheltering hair, In the warm silence near her breast, Our kisses and our sobs shall sink to rest; As in some still trance made aware That day and night have wrought to fulness there

And Love has built our nest.

And as in the dim grove.

When the rains cease that hushed them long,

'Mid glistening boughs the song-birds wake to song,-

So from our hearts deep-shrined in love.

While the leaves throb beneath, around, above.

The quivering notes shall throng.

Till tenderest words found vain Draw back to wonder mute and deep, And closed lips in closed arms a silence keep,

Subdued by memory's circling strain,-The wind-rapt sound that the wind brings again

While all the willows weep.

Then by her summoning art Shall memory conjure back the sere Autumnal Springs, from many a dying year

Born dead; and, bitter to the heart, The very ways where now we walk apart Who then shall cling so near.

And with each thought new-grown, Some sweet caress or some sweet name Low-breathed shall let me know her thought the same:

Making me rich with every tone And touch of the dear heaven so long unknown

That filled my dreams with flame.

Pity and love shall burn

In her pressed cheek and cherishing hands;

And from the living spirit of love that stands

Between her lips to soothe and yearn, Each separate breath shall clasp me round in turn

And loose my spirit's bands.

Oh passing sweet and dear, Then when the worshipped form and face

Are felt at length in darkling close embrace;

Round which so oft the sun shone clear, With mocking light and pitiless atmosphere,

In many an hour and place.

Ah me! with what proud growth Shall that hour's thirsting race be run: While, for each several sweetness still begun

Afresh, endures love's endless drouth: Sweet hands, sweet hair, sweet cheeks, sweet eyes, sweet mouth.

Each singly wooed and won.

Yet most with the sweet soul Shall love's espousals then be knit; What time the governing cloud sheds peace from it

O'er tremulous wings that touch the

And on the unmeasured height of Love's control The lustral fires are lit.

Therefore, when breast and cheek Now part, from long embraces free,— Each on the other gazing shall but see A self that has no need to speak:

All things unsought, yet nothing more to seek,-

One love in unity.

O water wandering past,— Albeit to thee I speak this thing, O water, thou that wanderest whispering, Thou keep'st thy counsel to the last. What spell upon thy bosom should Love cast.

Its secret thence to wring?

Nay, must thou hear the tale Of the past days,—the heavy debt Of life that obdurate time withholds, ere yet

To win thine ear these prayers prevail, And by thy voice Love's self with high All-hail

Yield up the amulet?

How should all this be told?— All the sad sum of wayworn days;— Heart's anguish in the impenetrable maze;

And on the waste uncolored wold The visible burthen of the sun grown

And the moon's laboring gaze?

Alas! shall hope be nurs'd On life's all-succoring breast in vain, And made so perfect only to be slain? Or shall not rather the sweet thirst Even yet rejoice the heart with warmth dispers'd And strength grown fair again?

Stands it not by the door—

Love's Hour—till she and I shall meet With bodiless form and unapparent feet That cast no shadow yet before,

Though round its head the dawn begins to pour

The breath that makes day sweet?

Its eves invisible

Watch till the dial's thin-thrown shade Be born,—yea, till the journeying line be laid

Upon the point that wakes the spell, And there in lovelier light than tongue can tell

Its presence stand array'd.

Its soul remembers yet

Those sunless hours that passed it by; And still it hears the night's disconsolate cry,

And feels the branches wringing wet Cast on its brow, that may not once for-

Dumb tears from the blind sky.

But oh! when now her foot Draws near, for whose sake night and
day

Were long in weary longing sighed

The hour of Love, 'mid airs grown

Shall sing beside the door, and Love's own lute

Thrill to the passionate lay.

Thou know'st, for Love has told Within thine ear, O stream, how soon That song shall lift its sweet appointed tune.

O tell me, for my lips are cold,
And in my veins the blood is waxing old

Even while I beg the boon.

So, in that hour of sighs
Assuaged, shall we beside this stone
Yield thanks for grace; while in thy mirror shown

The twofold image softly lies, Until we kiss, and each in other's eyes Is imaged all alone.

Still silent? Can no art
Of Love's then move thy pity? Nay,
To thee let nothing come that owns his
sway:

Let happy lovers have no part

With thee; nor even so sad and poor a heart

As thou hast spurned to-day.

To-day? Lo! night is here.
The glen grows heavy with some veil Risen from the earth or fall'n to make earth pale;

And all stands hushed to eye and ear, Until the night-wind shake the shade like fear

And every covert quail.

Ah! by another wave
On other airs the hour must come
Which to thy heart, my love, shall call me home.

Between the lips of the low cave
Against that night the lapping waters lave.

And the dark lips are dumb.

But there Love's self doth stand, And with Life's weary wings far flown, And with Death's eyes that make the water moan.

Gathers the water in his hand:
And they that drink know nought of sky or land

But only love alone.

O soul-sequestered face Far off,—O were that night but now! So even beside that stream even I and

Through thirsting lips should draw Love's grace,

And in the zone of that supreme embrace Bind aching breast and brow.

O water whispering
Still through the dark into mine ears,—
As with mine eyes, is it not now with hers?—

Mine eyes that add to thy cold spring, Wan water, wandering water weltering, This hidden tide of tears. 1870.

LOVE-LILY

Between the hands, between the brows, Between the lips of Love-Lily, A spirit is born whose birth endows

My blood with fire to burn through

Who breathes upon my gazing eyes,
Who laughs and murmurs in mine ear,
At whose least touch my color flies,

And whom my life grows faint to hear.

Within the voice, within the heart, Within the mind of Love-Lily,

A spirit is born who lifts apart
His tremulous wings and looks at me;

Who on my mouth his finger lays,
And shows, while whispering lutes confer.

That Eden of Love's watered ways Whose winds and spirits worship her.

Brows, hands, and lips, heart, mind, and voice,

Kisses and words of Love-Lily,— Oh! bid me with your joy rejoice Till riotous longing rest in me! Ah! let not hope be still distraught, But find in her its gracious goal,

Whose speech Truth knows not from her thought

Nor Love her body from her soul. 1870.

THE HOUSE OF LIFE

THE SONNET

A Sonnet is a moment's monument,— Memorial from the Soul's eternity To one dead deathless hour. Look that it be,

Whether for lustral rite or dire portent, Of its own arduous fulness reverent: Carve it in ivory or in chony,

As Day or Night may rule; and let

Its flowering crest impearled and orient.
A Sonnet is a coin: its face reveals

The Soul.—its converse, to what Power 'tis due:—

Whether for tribute to the august appeals
Of Life, or dower in Love's high retinue,
It serve; or 'mid the dark wharf's cavernous breath.

In Charon's palm it pay the toll to Death.

PART I. YOUTH AND CHANGE

I. LOVE ENTHRONED

I MARKED all kindred Powers the heart finds fair:—

Truth, with awed lips; and Hope, with eyes upcast;

And Fame, whose loud wings fan the ashen Past

To signal-fires, Oblivion's flight to scare; And Youth, with still some single golden hair Unto his shoulder clinging, since the

Embrace wherein two sweet arms held him fast;

And Life, still wreathing flowers for Death to wear.

Love's throne was not with these; but far above

All passionate wind of welcome and farewell

He sat in breathless bowers they dream not of;

Though Truth foreknow Love's heart, and Hope foretell,

And Fame be for Love's sake desirable, And Youth be dear, and Life be sweet to Love.

II. BRIDAL BIRTH

As when desire, long darkling, dawns, and first

The mother looks upon the new-born child,

Even so my Lady stood at gaze and smiled

When her soul knew at length the Love it nurs'd.

Born with her life, creature of poignant thirst

And exquisite hunger, at her heart Love lay Quickening in darkness, till a voice that day

Cried on him, and the bonds of birth

were burst.
Now, shadowed by his wings, our faces

yearn Together, as his fullgrown feet now range The grove, and his warm hands our couch prepare:

Till to his song our bodiless souls in turn
Re born his children, when Death's nun-

Be born his children, when Death's nuptial change

Leaves us for light the halo of his hair.

III. LOVE'S TESTAMENT

O THOU who at Love's hour ecstatically Unto my heart dost ever more present, Clothed with his fire, thy heart his testament;

Whom I have neared and felt thy breath to be

The inmost incense of his sanctuary:

Who without speech hast owned him, and, intent

Upon his will, thy life with mine hast blent,

And murmured, "I am thine, thou 'rt one with me!"

O what from thee the grace, to me the

And what to Love the glory,—when the whole

Of the deep stair thou tread'st to the dim shoal

And weary water of the place of sighs, And there dost work deliverance, as thine eves

Draw up my prisoned spirit to thy soul!

IV. LOVESIGHT

WHEN do I see thee most, beloved one? When in the light the spirits of mine eyes Before thy face, their altar, solemnize The worship of that Love through thee made known?

Or when in the dusk hours, (we two alone.)

Close-kissed and eloquent of still replies Thy twilight-hidden glimmering visage

And my soul only sees thy soul its own? O love, my love! if I no more should see Thyself, nor on the earth the shadow of thee,

Nor image of thine eyes in any spring,-How then should sound upon Life's darkening slope

The ground-whirl of the perished leaves of Hope,

The wind of Death's imperishable wing?

V. HEART'S HOPE

By what word's power, the key of paths untrod.

Shall I the difficult deeps of Love explore. Till parted waves of Song yield up the shore

Even as that sea which Israel crossed dryshod?

For lo! in some poor rhythmic period, Lady, I fain would tell how evermore Thy soul I know not from thy body, nor Thee from myself, neither our love from God.

Yea, in God's name, and Love's, and thine, would I from one loving heart such evidence

As to all hearts all things shall signify; Tender as dawn's first hill-fire, and in-

As instantaneous penetrating sense, In Spring's birth-hour, of other Springs gone by.

VIII. LOVE'S LOVERS

Some ladies love the jewels in Love's

And gold-tipped darts he hath for painless play

In idle scornful hours he flings away; And some that listen to his lute's soft

Do love to vaunt the silver praise their own:

Some prize his blindfold sight; and there be they

Who kissed his wings which brought him vesterday

And thank his wings to-day that he is flown.

My lady only loves the heart of Love: Therefore Love's heart, my lady, hath for thee

His bower of unimagined flower and

There kneels he now, and all-anhungered of Thine eyes gray-lit in shadowing hair above. Seals with thy mouth his immortality.

IX. PASSION AND WORSHIP

ONE flame-winged brought a whitewinged harp-player

Even where my lady and I lay all alone; Saying: "Behold, this minstrel is unknown:

Bid him depart, for I am minstrel here: Only my strains are to Love's dear ones dear."

Then said I: "Through thine hautboy's rapturous tone

Unto my lady still this harp makes moan,

And still she deems the cadence deep and clear."

Then said my lady: "Thou art Passion of Love,

And this Love's Worship: both he plights to me.

Thy mastering music walks the sunlit

But where wan water trembles in the grove

And the wan moon is all the light there-

This harp still makes my name its voluntary."

X. THE PORTRAIT

O LORD of all compassionate control, O Love! let this my lady's picture glow Under my hand to praise her name, and show

Even of her inner self the perfect whole: That he who seeks her beauty's furthest goal,

Beyond the light that the sweet glances throw

And refluent wave of the sweet smile, may know

The very sky and sea-line of her soul.

Lo! it is done. Above the enthroning throat

The mouth's mould testifies of voice and kiss,

The shadowed eyes remember and foresee.

Her face is made her shrine. Let all men note

That in all years (O Love, thy gift is this!)

They that would look on her must come to me.

XI. THE LOVE-LETTER

Warmed by her hand and shadowed by her hair

As close she leaned and poured her heart through thee,

Whereof the articulate throbs accompany

The smooth black stream that makes thy whiteness fair.—

Sweet fluttering sheet, even of her breath aware,—

Oh let thy silent song disclose to me

That soul wherewith her lips and eyes agree

Like married music in Love's answering air.

Fain had I watched her when, at some fond thought,

Her bosom to the writing closelier press'd,

And her breast's secrets peered into her breast;

When, through eyes raised an instant, her soul sought

My soul, and from the sudden confluence caught

The words that made her love the loveliest.

XII. THE LOVERS' WALK

Sweet twining hedgeflowers wind-stirred in no wise

On this June day; and hand that clings in hand:—

Still glades; and meeting faces scarcely fann'd:

An osier-odored stream that draws the skies

Deep to its heart; and mirrored eyes in eyes:—

Fresh hourly wonder o'er the Summer land

Of light and cloud; and two souls softly spann'd

With one o'erarching heaven of smiles and sighs:—

Even such their path, whose bodies lean unto

Each other's visible sweetness amorously.—

Whose passionate hearts lean by Love's high decree

Together on his heart for ever true, As the cloud-foaming firmamental blue

As the cloud-foaming firmamental blue Rests on the blue line of a foamless sea.

XIII. YOUTH'S ANTIPHONY

"I LOVE you, sweet: how can you ever learn

How much I love you?" "You I love even so,

And so I learn it." "Sweet, you cannot know

How fair you are." "If fair enough to

Your love, so much is all my love's concern."

"My love grows hourly, sweet." "Mine too doth grow,
Yet love seemed full so many hours ago!"

Thus lovers speak, till kisses claim their turn.

Ah! happy they to whom such words as these

In youth have served for speech the whole day long, Hour after hour, remote from the world's throng, Work, contest, fame, all life's confederate pleas,—

What while Love breathed in sighs and silences

Through two blent souls one rapturous undersong.

XIV. YOUTH'S SPRING-TRIBUTE

On this sweet bank your head thrice sweet and dear

I lay, and spread your hair on either side,

And see the newborn woodflowers bashful-eved

Look through the golden tresses here and there.

On these debateable borders of the year

Spring's foot half falters; scarce she yet may know

The leafless blackthorn-blossom from the snow:

And through her bowers the wind's way still is clear.

But April's sun strikes down the glades to-day:

So shut your eyes upturned, and feel my

Creep, as the Spring now thrills through every spray, Up your warm throat to your warm lips; for this

Is even the hour of Love's sworn suitservice.

With whom cold hearts are counted castaway.

XV. THE BIRTH-BOND

HAVE you not noted, in some family Where two were born of a first marriagebed.

How still they own their gracious bond, though fed

And nursed on the forgotten breast and knee?-

How to their father's children they shall

In act and thought of one goodwill; but

Shall for the other have, in silence speech,

And in a word complete community? Even so, when first I saw you, seemed it, love,

That among souls allied to mine was yet One nearer kindred than life hinted of. O born with me somewhere that men forget,

And though in years of sight and sound unmet.

Known for my soul's birth-partner well enough!

XVII. BEAUTY'S PAGEANT

What dawn-pulse at the heart of heaven. or last

Incarnate flower of culminating day.— What marshalled marvels on the skirts of May,

Or song full-quired, sweet June's encomiast:

What glory of change by nature's hand amass'd

Can vie with all those moods of varying

Which o'er one loveliest woman's form and face

Within this hour, within this room, have pass'd?

Love's very vesture and elect disguise Was each fine movement,—wonder newbegot

Of lily or swan or swan-stemmed galiot: Joy to his sight who now the sadlier sighs.

Parted again, and sorrow yet for eyes Unborn, that read these words and saw her not.

XVIII. GENIUS IN BEAUTY

BEAUTY like hers is genius. Not the call Of Homer's or of Dante's heart sublime,-

Not Michael's hand furrowing the zones of time.-

Is more with compassed mysteries musical:

Nay, not in Spring's or Summer's sweet footfall

More gathered gifts exuberant Life bequeathes

Than doth this sovereign face, whose love-spell breathes

Even from its shadowed contour on the wall.

As many men are poets in their youth. But for one sweet-strung soul the wires prolong

Even through all change the indomitable song; So in like wise the envenomed years, whose tooth.

Rends shallower grace with ruin void of ruth, Upon this beauty's power shall wreak no wrong.

XIX. SILENT NOON

Your hands lie open in the long, fresh grass,-

The finger-points look through like rosy blooms:

Your eyes smile peace. The pasture gleams and glooms

'Neath billowing skies that scatter and amass.

All round our nest, far as the eye can pass,

Are golden kingcup-fields with silver edge

Where the cow-parsley skirts the hawthorn hedge.

"T is visible silence, still as the hourglass.

Deep in the sun-searched growths the dragon-fly

Hangs like a blue thread loosened from the sky.—

So this wing'd hour is dropped to us from above.

Oh! clasp we to our hearts, for deathless dower,

This close-companioned inarticulate hour

When twofold silence was the song of love.

XXI. LOVE-SWEETNESS

Sweet dimness of her loosened hair's downfall

About thy face; her sweet hands round thy head

In gracious fostering union garlanded; Her tremulous smiles; her glances'

sweet recall
Of love; her murmuring sighs memo-

Of love; her murmuring sighs memorial;

Her mouth's culled sweetness by thy kisses shed On cheeks and neck and eyelids, and so led

Back to her mouth, which answers there for all:—

What sweeter than these things, except the thing

In lacking which all these would lose their sweet:—

The confident heart's still fervor: the swift beat

And soft subsidence of the spirit's wing,

Then when it feels, in cloud-girt way-faring,

The breath of kindred plumes against its feet?

XXIV. PRIDE OF YOUTH

Even as a child, of sorrow that we give The dead, but little in his heart can find,

Since without need of thought to his clear mind

Their turn it is to die and his to live:

Even so the winged New Love smiles to receive

Along his eddying plumes the auroral wind.

Nor, forward glorying, casts one look behind

Where night-rack shrouds the Old Love fugitive.

There is a change in every hour's recall, And the last cowslip in the fields we see On the same day with the first cornpoppy.

Alas for hourly change! Alas for all
The loves that from his hand proud
Youth lets fall.

Even as the beads of a told rosary!

XXVI. MID-RAPTURE

Thou lovely and beloved, thou my love; Whose kiss seems still the first; whose summoning eyes,

Even now, as for our love-world's new sunrise,

Shed very dawn; whose voice, attuned above

All modulation of the deep-bowered dove,

Is like a hand laid softly on the soul; Whose hand is like a sweet voice to con-

Those worn tired brows it hath the keeping of:—

What word can answer to thy word—what gaze

To thine, which now absorbs within its sphere

My worshipping face, till I am mirrored there

Light-circled in a heaven of deep-drawn rays?

What clasp, what kiss mine inmost heart can prove.

O lovely and beloved, O my love?

XXVII. HEART'S COMPASS

SOMETIMES thou seem'st not as thyself alone.

But as the meaning of all things that are;

A breathless wonder, shadowing forth afar

Some heavenly solstice hushed and halcyon;

Whose unstirred lips are music's visible tone;

Whose eyes the sun-gate of the soul unbar,

Being of its furthest fires oracular —

The evident heart of all life sown and mown.

Even such love is; and is not thy name Love?

Yea, by thy hand the Love-god rends apart

All gathering clouds of Night's ambiguous art:

Flings them far down, and sets thine eyes above;

And simply, as some gage of flower or glove,

giove,

Stakes with a smile the world against thy heart.

XXXI. HER GIFTS

High grace, the dower of queens; and therewithal Some wood-born wonder's sweet simplicity;

A glance like water brimming with the sky

Or hyacinth-light where forest-shadows fall:

Such thrilling pallor of cheek as doth enthral

The heart; a mouth whose passionate forms imply

All music and all silence held thereby;
Deep golden locks, her sovereign coronal;
A round reared neck, meet column of Love's shrine

To cling to when the heart takes sanctuary;

Hands which for ever at Love's bidding be,

And soft-stirred feet still answering to his sign:—

These are her gifts, as tongue may tell them o'er.

Breathe low her name, my soul; for that means more.

XXXII, EQUAL TROTH

Not by one measure mayst thou mete our love:

For how should I be loved as I love thee?—I, graceless, joyless, lacking absolutely All gifts that with thy queenship best behove:—

Thou, throned in every heart's elect alcove,

And crowned with garlands culled from every tree,

Which for no head but thine, by Love's decree,

All beauties and all mysteries interwove. But here thine eyes and lips yield soft rebuke:— "Then only," (say'st thou) "could I love thee less,

When thou couldst doubt my love's equality."

Peace, sweet! If not to sum but worth we look,

Thy heart's transcendence, not my heart's excess,—

Then more a thousandfold thou lov'st than I.

XXXIII. VENUS VICTRIX

Could Juno's self more sovereign presence wear

Than thou, 'mid other ladies throned in grace?—

Or Pallas, when thou bend'st with soulstilled face

O'er poet's page gold-shadowed in thy hair?

Dost thou than Venus seem less heavenly fair

When o'er the sea of love's tumultuous trance

Hovers thy smile, and mingles with thy glance

That sweet voice like the last wave murmuring there?

Before such triune loveliness divine

Awestruck I ask, which goddess here most claims

The prize that, howsoe'er adjudged, is thine?

Then Love breathes low the sweetest of thy names;

And Venus Victrix to my heart doth

Herself, the Helen of her guerdoning.

XXXIV. THE DARK GLASS

Not I myself know all my love for thee: How should I reach so far, who cannot weigh

To-morrow's dower by gage of yesterday? Shall birth and death, and all dark names that be

As doors and windows bared to some loud sea,

Lash deaf mine ears and blind my face with spray;

And shall my sense pierce love,—the last relay

And ultimate outpost of eternity?

Lo! what am I to Love, the lord of all?
One murmuring shell he gathers from
the sand,

One little heart-flame sheltered in his

Yet through thine eyes he grants me clearest call

And veriest touch of powers primordial That any hour-girt life may understand.

XL. SEVERED SELVES

Two separate divided silences,

Which, brought together, would find loving voice: Two glances which together would re-

In love, now lost like stars beyond dark

Two hands apart whose touch alone gives

Two bosoms which, heart-shrined with mutual flame.

Would, meeting in one clasp, be made the same;

Two souls, the shores wave-mocked of sundering seas :-

Such are we now. Ah! may our hope forecast

Indeed one hour again, when on this stream

Of darkened love once more the light shall gleam ?-

An hour how slow to come, how quickly

Which blooms and fades, and only leaves at last.

Faint as shed flowers, the attenuated dream.

XLI. THROUGH DEATH TO LOVE

LIKE labor-laden moonclouds faint to flee From winds that sweep the winterbitten wold.-

Like multiform circumfluence manifold Of night's flood-tide,—like terrors that

Of hoarse-tongued fire and inarticulate sea.-

Even such, within some glass dimmed by our breath,

Our hearts discern wild images of Death. Shadows and shoals that edge eternity.

Howbeit athwart Death's imminent shade doth soar

One Power, than flow of stream or flight of dove

Sweeter to glide around, to brood above. Tell me, my heart,—what angel-greeted door

Or threshold of wing-winnowed threshing-floor

Hath guest fire-fledged as thine, whose lord is Love?

XLVIII. DEATH-IN-LOVE

There came an image in Life's retinue That had Love's wings and bore his gonfalon:

Fair was the web, and nobly wrought thereon.

O soul-sequestered face, thy form and hue I

Bewildering sounds, such as Spring wakens to,

Shook in its folds; and through my heart its power

Sped trackless as the immemorable hour When birth's dark portal groaned and all was new.

But a veiled woman followed, and she caught

The banner round its staff, to furl and cling,-

Then plucked a feather from the bearer's wing,

And held it to his lips that stirred it not. And said to me, "Behold, there is no

I and this Love are one, and I am Death."

XLIX. WILLOWWOOD-I

I SAT with Love upon a woodside well. Leaning across the water, I and he; Nor ever did he speak nor looked at me. But touched his lute wherein was audible The certain secret thing he had to tell: Only our mirrored eyes met silently

In the low wave; and that sound came to be

The passionate voice I knew; and my tears fell.

And at their fall, his eyes beneath grew hers; And with his foot and with his wing-feathers

He swept the spring that watered my heart's drouth.

Then the dark ripples spread to waving hair,

And as I stooped, her own lips rising

Bubbled with brimming kisses at my mouth.

L. WILLOWWOOD-II

AND now Love sang: but his was such a song,

So meshed with half-remembrance hard to free.

As souls disused in death's sterility May sing when the new birthday tarries And I was made aware of a dumb throng That stood aloof, one form by every tree, All mournful forms, for each was I or she, The shades of those our days that had no tongue.

They looked on us, and knew us and were known:

While fast together, alive from the abvss, Clung the soul-wrung implacable close kiss:

And pity of self through all made broken moan

Which said, "For once, for once, for once alone!"

And still Love sang, and what he sang was this :-

LL. WILLOWWOOD-EI

"O YE, all ve that walk in Willowwood, That walk with hollow faces burning white:

What fathom-depth of soul-struck widowhood.

What long, what longer hours, one lifelong night.

Ere ye again, who so in vain have wooed Your last hope lost, who so in vain invite Your lips to that their unforgotten food, Ere ye, ere ye again shall see the light! Alas! the bitter banks in Willowwood, With tear-spurge wan, with blood-wort burning red:

Alas! if ever such a pillow could

Steep deep the soul in sleep till she were

dead.-

Better all life forget her than this thing, That Willowwood should hold her wandering!"

LII. WILLOWWOOD-IV

So sang he: and as meeting rose and rose

Together cling through the wind's well-

Nor change at once, yet near the end of

The leaves drop loosened where the heart-stain glows,-

So when the song died did the kiss unclose:

And her face fell back drowned, and was as grav

As its gray eyes; and if it ever may Meet mine again I know not if Love knows.

Only I know that I leaned low and drank A long draught from the water where she sank.

Her breath and all her tears and all her soul:

And as I leaned, I know I felt Love's face

Pressed on my neck with moan of pity and grace,

Till both our heads were in his aureole.

LIII. WITHOUT HER.

WHAT of her glass without her? The blank grav

There where the pool is blind of the moon's face.

The tossed Her dress without her? empty space

Of cloud-rack whence the moon has passed away.

Her paths without her? Day's appointed sway Usurped by desolate night. Her pillowed place Without her? Tears, ah me! for love's good grace,

And cold forgetfulness of night or day. What of the heart without her? Nay, poor heart,

Of thee what word remains ere speech be still?

A wayfarer by barren ways and chill, Steep ways and weary, without her thou art,

Where the long cloud, the long wood's counterpart,

Sheds doubled darkness up the laboring hill.

LV. STILLBORN LOVE

THE hour which might have been yet might not be,

Which man's and woman's heart conceived and bore

Yet whereof life was barren,—on what

Bides it the breaking of Time's weary sea?

Bondchild of all consummate joys set

It somewhere sighs and serves, and mute before

The house of Love, hears through the echoing door

His hours elect in choral consonancy. But lo! what wedded souls now hand in hand Together tread at last the immortal strand

With eyes where burning memory lights love home?

Lo! how the little outcast hour has

And leaped to them and in their faces yearned:—

"I am your child: O parents, ye have come!"

LVI. TRUE WOMAN-I. HERSELF

To be a sweetness more desired than Spring;

A bodily beauty more acceptable

Than the wild rose-tree's arch that crowns the fell;

To be an essence more environing

Than wine's drained juice; a music rayishing

More than the passionate pulse of Philomel:—

To be all this 'neath one soft bosom's swell

That is the flower of life:—how strange a thing!

How strange a thing to be what Man

can know
But as a sacred secret! Heaven's own

Screen

Hides her soul's purest depth and loveliest glow;

Closely withheld, as all things most un-

The wave-bowered pearl,—the heartshaped seal of green That flecks the snowdrop underneath the snow.

LVII. TRUE WOMAN-II. HER LOVE

SHE loves him; for her infinite soul is Love,

And he her lodestar. Passion in her is A glass facing his fire, where the bright bliss

Is mirrored, and the heat returned. Yet move

That glass, a stranger's amorous flame to prove,

And it shall turn, by instant contraries, Ice to the moon; while her pure fire to his

For whom it burns, clings close i' the heart's alcove.

Lo! they are one. With wifely breast to breast

And circling arms, she welcomes all command

Of love, -her soul to answering ardors fann'd:

Yet as morn springs or twilight sinks to rest,

Ah! who shall say she deems not loveliest

The hour of sisterly sweet hand-in-hand?

LVIII. TRUE WOMAN-III. HER HEAVEN

If to grow old in Heaven is to grow young,

(As the Seer saw and said,) then blest were he

With youth for evermore, whose heaven should be

True Woman, she whom these weak notes have sung,

Here and hereafter,—choir-strains of her tongue,—

Sky-spaces of her eyes,—sweet signs that flee

About her soul's immediate sanctuary.—
Were Paradise all uttermost worlds among.

The sunrise blooms and withers on the

Like any hillflower; and the noblest troth

Dies here to dust. Yet shall Heaven's promise clothe

Even yet those lovers who have cherished still

This test for love:—in every kiss sealed fast

To feel the first kiss and forbode the last.

LIX. LOVE'S LAST GIFT

Love to his singer held a glistening leaf, And said: "The rose-tree and the appletree

Have fruits to vaunt or flowers to lure the bee:

And golden shafts are in the feathered sheaf

Of the great harvest-marshal, the year's chief,

Victorious Summer; aye, and 'neath warm sea

Strange secret grasses lurk inviolably Between the filtering channels of sunk reef.

All are my blooms; and all sweet blooms of love

To thee I gave while Spring and Summer sang;

But Autumn stops to listen, with some pang

From those w rse things the wind is mouning f.

Only this laurel dreads no winter days: Take my last gift; thy heart hath sung my praise."

PART II. CHANGE AND FATE

LX. TRANSFIGURED LIFE

As growth of form or momentary glance In a child's features will recall to mind The father's with the mother's face combin'd.-

Sweet interchange that memories still enhance:

And yet, as childhood's years and youth's advance.

The gradual mouldings leave one stamp behind.

Till in the blended likeness now we find A separate man's or woman's countenance :-

So in the Song, the singer's Joy and Pain, Its very parents, evermore expand

To bid the passion's fullgrown birth re-

By Art's transfiguring essence subtly spann'd:

And from that song-cloud shaped as a man's hand

There comes the sound as of abundant rain.

LXI. THE SONG-THROE

By thine own tears thy song must tears beget,

O Singer! Magic mirror thou hast none Except thy manifest heart; and save thine own Anguish or ardor, else no amulet.

Cisterned in Pride, verse is the feathery

Of soulless air-flung fountains; nay, more dry

Than the Dead Sea for throats that thirst and sigh,

That song o'er which no singer's lids grew wet.

The Song-god-He the Sun-god-is no slave

Of thine: thy Hunter he, who for thy soul Fledges his shaft: to no august control Of thy skilled hand his quivered store he gave:

But if thy lips' loud cry leap to his smart.

The inspir'd recoil shall pierce thy brother's heart.

LXV. KNOWN IN VAIN

As two whose love, first foolish, widening scope.

Knows suddenly, to music high and soft,

The Holy of holies; who because they scoff'd

Are now amazed with shame, nor dare to cope With the whole truth aloud, lest heaven should one: Yet, at their meetings, laugh not as they laugh'd

In speech; nor speak, at length; but sitting oft

Together, within hopeless sight of hope For hours are silent:—So it happeneth When Work and Will awake too late, to gaze

After their life sailed by, and hold their breath.

Ah! who shall dare to search through what sad maze

Thenceforth their incommunicable ways Follow the desultory feet of Death?

LXVI. THE HEART OF THE NIGHT

From child to youth: from youth to arduous man;

From lethargy to fever of the heart;

From faithful life to dream-dowered days apart;

From trust to doubt; from doubt to brink of ban ;-

Thus much of change in one swift cycle

Till now. Alas, the soul !-how soon must she

Accept her primal immortality,-

The flesh resume its dust whence it began?

O Lord of work and peace! O Lord of life! O Lord, the awful Lord of will! though late, Even yet renew this soul with duteous breath: That when the peace is garnered in from strife.

The work retrieved, the will regenerate, This soul may see thy face, O Lord of death!

LXVII. THE LANDMARK

Was that the landmark? What—the foolish well

Whose wave, low down, I did not stoop to drink,

But sat and flung the pebbles from its brink

In sport to send its imaged skies pellmell.

(And mine own image, had I noted well!)-

Was that my point of turning?-I had thought

The stations of my course should rise unsought.

As altar-stone or ensigned citadel.

But lo! the path is missed, I must go back,

And thirst to drink when next I reach the spring

Which once I stained, which since may have grown black.

Yet though no light be left nor bird now

As here I turn, I'll thank God, hasten-

That the same goal is still on the same track.

LXX. THE HILL SUMMIT

THIS feast-day of the sun, his altar there In the broad west has blazed for vespersong;

And I have loitered in the vale too long And gaze now a belated worshipper. Yet may I not forget that I was 'ware,

So journeying, of his face at intervals Transfigured where the fringed horizon falls,-

A fiery bush with coruscating hair. And now that I have climbed and won this height. .

I must tread downward through the sloping shade

And travel the bewildered tracks till night. Yet for this hour I still may here be staved And see the gold air and the silver fade And the last bird fly into the last light.

LXXI. THE CHOICE-I

EAT thou and drink; to-morrow thou shalt die.

Surely the earth, that's wise being very

Needs not our help. Then loose me, love, and hold

Thy sultry hair up from my face; that I May pour for thee this golden wine, brim-high,

Till round the glass thy fingers glow like gold.

We'll drown all hours: thy song, while hours are toll'd,

Shall leap, as fountains veil the changing sky.

Now kiss, and think that there are really those.

My own high-bosomed beauty, who increase

Vain gold, vain lore, and yet might choose our way!

Through many years they toil; then on a day

They die not,-for their life was death, -but cease:

And round their narrow lips the mould falls close.

LXXII. THE CHOICE-II

Watch thou and fear; to-morrow thou shalt die.

Or art thou sure thou shalt have time for death?

Is not the day which God's word promis-

To come man knows not when? In vonder sky, Now while we speak, the sun speeds forth: can I Or thou assure him of his goal? God's breath Even at this moment haply quickeneth The air to a flame; till spirits, always nigh Though screened and hid, shall walk the daylight here. And dost thou prate of all that man shall do?

Canst thou, who hast but plagues, presume to be Glad in his gladness that comes after thee?

Will his strength slay thy worm in Hell? Go to:

Cover thy countenance, and watch, and fear.

LXXIII. THE CHOICE-III

THINK thou and act; to-morrow thou shalt die.

Outstretched in the sun's warmth upon the shore,

Thou say'st: "Man's measured path is all gone o'er:

Up all his years, steeply, with strain and sigh.

Man clomb until he touched the truth; and I,

Even I, am he whom it was destined for."

How should this be? Art thou then so much more

Than they who sowed, that thou shouldst reap thereby?

Nay, come up hither. From this wavewashed mound

Unto the furthest flood-brim look with

Then reach on with thy thought till it be drown'd.

Miles and miles distant though the last line be,

And though thy soul sail leagues and leagues beyond,-

Still, leagues beyond those leagues, there is more sea.

LXXIV, OLD AND NEW ART-I

ST. LUKE THE PAINTER

GIVE honor unto Luke Evangelist; For he it was (the aged legends say) Who first taught Art to fold her hands and prav.

Scarcely at once she dared to rend the mist

Of devious symbols; but soon having wist

How sky-breadth and field-silence and this day

Are symbols also in some deeper way, She looked through these to God and was God's priest.

And if, past noon, her toil began to irk, And she sought talismans, and turned in vain

To soulless self-reflections of man's skill.-

Yet now, in this the twilight, she might

Kneel in the latter grass to pray again, Ere the night cometh and she may not work.

LXXV. OLD AND NEW ART-II

NOT AS THESE

"I am not as these are," the poet saith In youth's pride, and the painter, among

At bay, where never pencil comes nor pen,

And shut about with his own frozen breath.

To others, for whom only rhyme wins faith

As poets,—only paint as painters,—then He turns in the cold silence; and again Shrinking, "I am not as these are," he

And say that this is so, what follows it?

For were thine eyes set backwards in thine head.

Such words were well: but they see on. and far.

Unto the lights of the great Past, new-lit Fair for the Future's track, look thou instead.—

Say thou instead, "I am not as these are."

LXXVI, OLD AND NEW ART-III

THE HUSBANDMAN

Though God, as one that is an householder.

Called these to labor in his vineyard first, Before the husk of darkness was well burst

Bidding them grope their way out and bestir.

(Who, questioned of their wages, answered, "Sir,

Unto each man a penny:") though the worst

Burthen of heat was theirs and the dry thirst

Though God hath since found none such as these were

To do their work like them:—Because of this

Stand not ve idle in the market-place.

Which of ye knoweth he is not that last Who may be first by faith and will? yea, his

The hand which after the appointed days

And hours shall give a Future to their Past?

LXXVII. SOUL'S BEAUTY

(Sibulla Palmifera)

UNDER the arch of Life, where love and death.

Terror and mystery, guard her shrine, I

Beauty enthroned; and though her gaze struck awe,

I drew it in as simply as my breath.

Hers are the eyes which, over and beneath,

The sky and sea bend on thee,—which can draw,

By sea or sky or woman, to one law,

The allotted bondman of her palm and wreath.

This is that Lady Beauty, in whose praise Thy voice and hand shake still; long known to thee

By flying hair and fluttering hem, -- the beat

Following her daily of thy heart and feet.

How passionately and irretrievably. In what fond flight, how many ways and days!

LXXVIII. BODY'S BEAUTY

(Lilith)

OF Adam's first wife, Lilith, it is told (The witch he loved before the gift of Eve.)

That, ere the snake's, her sweet tongue could deceive.

And her enchanted hair was the first gold. And still she sits, young while the earth

And, subtly of herself contemplative. Draws men to watch the bright web she can weave,

Till heart and body and life are in its

The rose and poppy are her flowers; for where

Is he not found, O Lilith, whom shed scent

And soft-shed kisses and soft sleep shall snare?

Lo! as that youth's eyes burned at thine, so went

Thy spell through him, and left his straight neck bent

And round his heart one strangling golden hair.

LXXXI. MEMORIAL THRESHOLDS

What place so strange,-though unrevealed snow

With unimaginable fires arise

At the earth's end,—what passion of surprise

Like frost-bound fire-girt scenes of long

Lo! this is none but I this hour; and lo! This is the very place which to mine

Those mortal hours in vain immortalize, 'Mid hurrying crowds, with what alone I know.

City, of thine a single simple door,

By some new Power reduplicate, must 1)112

Even vet my life porch in eternity,

Even with one presence filled, as once of yore:

Or mocking winds whirl round a chaffstrown floor

Thee and thy years and these my words and me.

LXXXII. HOARDED JOY

I SAID: "Nav. pluck not.—let the first fruit be:

Even as thou savest, it is sweet and red, But let it ripen still. The tree's bent head

Sees in the stream its own fecundity

And bides the day of fulness. Shall not we

At the sun's hour that day possess the shade.

And claim our fruit before its ripeness

And eat it from the branch and praise the tree?"

I say: "Alas! our fruit hath wooed the

Too long,—'t is fallen and floats adown the stream.

Lo, the last clusters! Pluck them every one,

And let us sup with summer; ere the gleam Of autumn set the year's pent sorrow

And the woods wail like echoes from the sea."

LXXXIII. BARREN SPRING

ONCE more the changed year's turning wheel returns:

And as a girl sails balanced in the wind, And now before and now again behind Stoops as it swoops, with cheek that laughs and burns,-

So Spring comes merry towards me here, but earns

No answering smile from me, whose life is twin'd

With the dead boughs that winter still must bind,

And whom to-day the Spring no more

Behold, this crocus is a withering flame; This snowdrop, now; this apple-blossom's part

To breed the fruit that breeds the serpent's art.

Nay, for these Spring-flowers, turn thy face from them,

Nor stay till on the year's last lily-stem The white cup shrivels round the golden LXXXIV. FAREWELL TO THE GLEN

Sweet stream-fed glen, why say "farewell" to thee

Who far'st so well and find'st for ever

The brow of Time where man may read no ruth?

Nay, do thou rather say "farewell" to me,

Who now fare forth in bitterer fantasy
Than erst was mine where other shade might soothe

By other streams, what while in fragrant

. youth

The bliss of being sad made melancholy.

And yet, farewell! For better shalt thou fare

When children bathe sweet faces in thy

And happy lovers blend sweet shadows there

In hours to come, than when an hour ago

Thine echoes had but one man's sighs to bear

And thy trees whispered what he feared to know.

LXXXVI. LOST DAYS

THE lost days of my life until to-day,
What were they, could I see them on the street

Lie as they fell? Would they be ears of wheat

Sown once for focd but trodden into clay?

Or golden coins squandered and still to

Or drops of blood dabbling the guilty feet?

Or such spilt water as in dreams must

The undying throats of Hell, athirst alway?

I do not see them here; but after death God knows I know the faces I shall see, Each one a murdered self, with low last breath.

"I am thyself,—what hast thou done to me?"

"And I—and I—thyself," (lo! each one saith,)

" And thou thyself to all eternity!"

LXXXIX. THE TREES OF THE GARDEN

YE who have passed Death's haggard hills; and ye

Whom trees that knew your sires shall cease to know

And still stand silent:—is it all a show,—
A wisp that laughs upon the wall?—
decree

Of some inexorable supremacy

Which ever, as man strains his blind surmise

From depth to ominous depth, looks past his eyes,

Sphinx-faced with unabashed augury? Nay, rather question the Earth's self. Invoke

The storm-felled forest-trees moss-grown to-day

Whose roots are hillocks where the children play:

Or ask the silver sapling 'neath what voke

Those stars, his spray-crown's clustering gems, shall wage

Their journey still when his boughs shrink with age.

XC. "RETRO ME, SATHANA!"

GET thee behind me. Even as, heavycurled,

Stooping against the wind, a charioteer Is snatched from out his chariot by the hair.

So shall Time be; and as the void car, hurled

Abroad by reinless steeds, even so the world:

Yea, even as chariot-dust upon the air, It shall be sought and not found anywhere.

Get thee behind me, Satan. Oft unfurled,

Thy perilous wings can beat and break like lath

Much mightiness of men to win thee praise.

Leave these weak feet to tread in narrow ways.

Thou still, upon the broad vine-sheltered path,

Mayst wait the turning of the phials of wrath

For certain years, for certain months and days.

XCI. LOST ON BOTH SIDES

As when two men have loved a woman well,

Each hating each, through Love's and Death's deceit;

Since not for either this stark marriagesheet

And the long pauses of this weddingbell;

Yet o'er her grave the night and day dispel

At last their feud forlorn, with cold and heat

Nor other than dear friends to death may fleet The two lives left that most of her can tell:—

So separate hopes, which in a soul had wooed

The one same Peace, strove with each other long,

And Peace before their faces perished

since:
So through that soul, in restless brother-

They roam together now, and wind among

Its bye-streets, knocking at the dusty inns.

XCIV. MICHELANGELO'S KISS

GREAT Michelangelo, with age grown bleak

And uttermost labors, having once o'ersaid

All grievous memories on his long life shed,

This worst regret to one true heart could speak:—

That when, with sorrowing love and reverence meek,

He stooped o'er sweet Colonna's dying bed,

His Muse and dominant Lady, spiritwed.—

Her hand he kissed, but not her brow or cheek.

O Buonarrotti, — good at Art's firewheels

To urge her chariot!—even thus the Soul,

Touching at length some sorely-chastened goal,

Earns oftenest but a little: her appeals
Were deep and mute,—lowly her claim.
Let be:

What holds for her Death's garner?
And for thee?

XCVI. LIFE THE BELOVED

As thy friend's face, with shadow of soul o'erspread, [hath been Somewhile unto thy sight perchance

Ghastly and strange, yet never so is seen

In thought, but to all fortunate favor wed;

As thy love's death-bound features never dead

To memory's glass return, but contravene

Frail fugitive days, and alway keep, I ween,

Than all new life a livelier lovelihead:
So Life herself, thy spirit's friend and love,

Even still as Spring's authentic harbinger

Glows with fresh hours for hope to glorify; Though pale she lay when in the winter grove

Her funeral flowers were snow-flakes shed on her

And the red wings of frost-fire rent the sky.

XCVII. A SUPERSCRIPTION

Look in my face; my name is Mighthave-been;

I am also called No-more, Too-late, Farewell;

Unto thine ear I hold the dead-sea shell Cast up thy Life's foam-fretted feet between;

Unto thine eyes the glass where that is seen

Which had Life's form and Love's, but by my spell

Is now a shaken shadow intolerable, Of ultimate things unuttered the frail screen.

Mark me, how still I am! But should there dart

One moment through thy soul the soft surprise

Of that winged Peace which lulls the breath of sighs,—

Then shalt thou see me smile, and turn apart

Thy visage to mine ambush at thy heart Sleepless with cold commemorative eyes.

XCIX. NEWBORN DEATH-I

To-day Death seems to me an infant child

Which her worn mother Life upon my

Has set to grow my friend and play with me;

If haply so my heart might be beguil'd To find no terrors in a face so mild,—

If haply so my weary heart might be Unto the newborn milky eyes of thee, O Death, before resentment reconcild. How long, O Death? And shall thy feet depart

(Cheer o

Still a young child's with mine, or wilt thou stand

Fullgrown the helpful daughter of my heart.

What time with thee indeed I reach the strand

Of the pale wave which knows thee what thou art,

And drink it in the hollow of thy hand?

C. NEWBORN DEATH-II

And thou, O Life, the lady of all bliss, With whom, when our first heart beat full and fast,

I wandered till the haunts of men were pass'd.

And in fair places found all bowers amiss
Till only woods and waves might hear our kiss,

While to the winds all thought of Death we cast:—

Ah, Life! and must I have from thee at

No smile to greet me and no babe but

Lo! Love, the child once ours; and Song, whose hair

Song, whose hair Blew like a flame and blossomed like a wreath:

And Art, whose eyes were worlds by God found fair;

These o'er the book of Nature mixed their breath

With neck-twined arms, as oft we watched them there:

And did these die that thou mightst bear me Death?

CL. THE ONE HOPE

When vain desire at last and vain regret

Go hand in hand to death, and all is vain,

What shall assuage the unforgotten pain And teach the unforgetful to forget? Shall Peace be still a sunk stream long unmet,-

Or may the soul at once in a green plain Stoop through the spray of some sweet life-fountain

And cull the dew-drenched flowering amulet?

Ah! when the wan soul in that golden air

Between the scriptured petals softly blown

Peers breathless for the gift of grace unknown,

Ah! let none other alien spell soe'er
But only the one Hope's one name be
there.—

Not less nor more, but even that word *alone. 1869, 1870, 1881.1

THE CLOUD CONFINES

The day is dark and the night
To him that would search their heart;
No lips of cloud that will part

Nor morning song in the light:

Only, gazing alone,
To him wild shadows are shown,
Deep under deep unknown
And height above unknown height.

Still we say as we go,—
"Strange to think by the way,
Whatever there is to know,
That shall we know one day."

The Past is over and fled;
Named new, we name it the old;
Thereof some tale hath been told,
But no word comes from the dead;
Whether at all they be,
Or whether as bond or free,
Or whether they too were we,
Or by what spell they have sped.

Still we say as we go,—
"Strange to think by the way,
Whatever there is to know,
That shall we know one day."

What of the heart of hate
That beats in thy breast, O Time?—
Red strife from the furthest prime,
And anguish of fierce debate;
War that shatters her slain,
And peace that grinds them as grain,
And eyes fixed ever in vain

On the pitiless eyes of Fate.

Still we say as we go,—
"Strange to think by the way,

1 Sixteen Sonnets, Numbers 25, 39, 47, 49-52, 63, 65, 67, 86, 91, 97, 99, and 100, were published in the Fortnightly Review, 1869. Fifty Sonnets (for the exact list see W. M. Rossetti's edition of the callected Works, I. 517) were published, with eleven lyrics, as "Sonnets and Songs towards a work to be entitled The House of Life," in the Poems. 1870. The House of Life, as it now stands, consisting of sonnets only, was published in Ballads and Sonnets, 1881.

Whatever there is to know, That shall we know one day."

What of the heart of love
That bleeds in thy breast, O Man?
Thy kisses snatched 'neath the ban
Of fangs that mock them above:
Thy bells prolonged unto knells,
Thy hope that a breath dispels,
Thy bitter forlorn farewells
And the empty echoes thereof?

Still we say as we go,—
"Strange to think by the way,
Whatever there is to know.
That shall we know one day."

The sky leans dumb on the sea,
Aweary with all its wings;
And oh! the song the sea sings
Is dark everlastingly.
Our past is clean forgot,
Our present is and is not,
Our future's a sealed seedplot,
And what betwixt them are we?—

We who say as we go,—
"Strange to think by the way,
Whatever there is to know,
That shall we know one day."
1872.

THREE SHADOWS

I LOOKED and saw your eyes
In the shadow of your hair,
As a traveller sees the stream
In the shadow of the wood;
And I said, "My faint heart sighs,
Ah me! to linger there,
To drink deep and to dream
In that sweet solitude."

I looked and saw your heart
In the shadow of your eyes,
As a seeker sees the gold
In the shadow of the stream;
And I said, "Ah me? what art
Should win the immortal prize,
Whose want must make life cold
And Heaven a hollow dream?"

I looked and saw your love
In the shadow of your heart,
As a diver sees the pearl
In the shadow of the sea;
And I murmured, not above
My breath, but all apart,—
"Ah! you can love, true girl,
And is your love for me?"

1881.

INSOMNIA

THIN are the night-skirts left behind
By daybreak hours that onward creep,
And thin, alas! the shred of sleep
That wavers with the spirit's wind:
But in half-dreams that shift and roll
And still remember and forget,
My soul this hour has drawn your soul
A little nearer yet.

Our lives, most dear, are never near,
Our thoughts are never far apart,
Though all that draws us heart to heart
Seems fainter now and now more clear.
To-night Love claims his full control,
And with desire and with regret
My soul this hour has drawn your soul
A little nearer yet.

Is there a home where heavy earth Melts to bright air that breathes no pain,

Where water leaves no thirst again
And springing fire is Love's new birth?
If faith long bound to one true goal
May there at length its hope beget,
My soul that hour shall draw your soul
For ever nearer yet.

SOOTHSAY

Let no man ask thee of anything
Not yearborn between Spring and Spring.

More of all worlds than he can know, Each day the single sun doth show. A trustier gloss than thou canst give From all wise scrolls demonstrative, The sea doth sigh and the wind sing.

Let no man awe thee on any height Of earthly kingship's mouldering might. The dust his heel holds meet for thy brow

Hath all of it been what both are now; And thou and he may plague together A beggar's eyes in some dusty weather When noue that is now knows sound or sight.

Crave thou no dower of earthly things Unworthy Hope's imaginings. To have brought true birth of Song to be And to have won hearts to Poesy, Or anywhere in the sun or rain To have loved and been beloved again, Is loftiest reach of Hope's bright wings.

The wild waifs cast up by the sea Are diverse ever seasonably. Even so the soul-tides still may land A different drift upon the sand. But one the sea is evermore: And one be still, 'twixt shore and shore, As the sea's life, thy soul in thee.

Say, hast thou pride? How then may fit Thy mood with flatterer's silk-spun wit? Haply the sweet voice lifts thy crest, A breeze of fame made manifest. Nay, but then chaf'st at flattery? Pause: Be sure thy wrath is not because It makes thee feel thou lovest it.

Let thy soul strive that still the same Be early friendship's sacred flame. The affinities have strongest part In youth, and draw men heart to heart: As life wears on and finds no rest, The individual in each breast Is tyrannous to sunder them.

In the life-drama's stern cue-call, A friend 's a part well-prized by all: And if thou meet an enemy,
What art thou that none such should be?
Even so: but if the two parts run
Into each other and grow one,
Then comes the curtain's cue to fall.

Whate'er by other's need is claimed More than by thine,—to him unblamed Resign it: and if he should hold What more than he thou lack'st, bread, gold.

Or any good whereby we live,—
To thee such substance let him give Freely: nor he nor thou be shamed.

Strive that thy works prove equal: lest That work which thou hast done the best Should come to be to thee at length (Even as to envy seems the strength Of others) hateful and abhorr'd,—
Thine own above thyself made lord,—
Of self-rebuke the bitterest.

Unto the man of yearning thought And aspiration, to do nought Is in itself almost an act,—Being chasm-fire and cataract Of the soul's utter depths unseal'd. Yet woe to thee if once thou yield Unto the act of doing nought!

How callous seems beyond revoke The clock with its last listless stroke! How much too late at length!—to trace The hour on its forewarning face, The thing thou hast not dared to do!.... Behold, this may be thus! Ere true It prove, arise and bear thy yoke.

Let lore of all Theology
Be to thy soul what it can be:
But know,—the Power that fashions man
Measured not out thy little span
For thee to take the meting-rod
In turn, and so approve on God
Thy science of Theometry.

To God at best, to Chance at worst, Give thanks for good things, last as first. But windstrown blossom is that good Whose apple is not gratitude. Even if no prayer uplift thy face, Let the sweet right to render grace As thy soul's cherished child be nurs'd.

Didst ever say, "Lo, I forget?"
Such thought was to remember yet.
As in a gravegarth, count to see
The monuments of memory.

Be this thy soul's appointed scope:— Gaze onward without claim to hope, Nor, gazing backward, court regret. 1881.

ON BURNS

In whomsoe'er, since Poesy began, A Poet most of all men we may scan, Burns of all poets is the most a Man.

FIVE ENGLISH POETS

I. THOMAS CHATTERTON

With Shakespeare's manhood at a boy's wild heart,—

Through Hamlet's doubt to Shakespeare near allied,

And kin to Milton through his Satan's pride,—

At Douth's gold door he steeped and

At Death's sole door he stooped, and craved a dart;

And to the dear new bower of England's art,—

Even to that shrine Time else had deified,

The unuttered heart that soared against his side.—

Drove the fell point, and smote life's seals apart.

Thy nested home-loves, noble Chatter-ton;

The angel-trodden stair thy soul could trace

Up Redcliffe's spire; and in the world's armed space Thy gallant sword-play:—these to many an one

Are sweet for ever; as thy grave unknown

And love-dream of thine unrecorded face.

II. WILLIAM BLAKE

(To Frederick Shields, on his Sketch of Blake's work-room and death-room, 3 Fountain Court, Strand.)

This is the place. Even here the dauntless soul,

The unflinching hand, wrought on; till in that nook,

As on that very bed, his life partook
New birth, and passed. You river's dusky shoal,

Whereto the close-built coiling lanes unroll,

Faced his work-window, whence his eyes would stare,

Thought-wandering, unto nought that met them there.

But to the unfettered irreversible goal. This cupboard, Holy of Holies, held the cloud

Of his soul writ and limned: this other

His true wife's charge, full oft to their abode

Yielded for daily bread the martyr's

Ere yet their food might be that Bread alone,

The words now home-speech of the mouth of God.

III. SAMUEL TAYLOR COLERIDGE

His Soul fared forth (as from the deep home-grove

The father-songster plies the hour-long quest.)

To feed his soul-brood hungering in the nest:

But his warm Heart, the mother-bird,

Their callow fledgling progeny still hove With tented roof of wings and fostering breast

Till the Soul fed the soul-brood. Richly

From Heaven their growth, whose food was Human Love.

Yet ah! Like desert pools that show the stars

Once in long leagues,—even such the scarce-snatched hours

Which deepening pain left to his lordliest powers :-

Heaven lost through spider-trammelled prison-bars.

Six years, from sixty saved! Yet kindling skies

Own them, a beacon to our centuries.

IV. JOHN KEATS

THE weltering London ways where children weep

And girls whom none call maidens laugh,—strange road

Miring his outward steps, who inly trode

The bright Castalian brink and Latmos' steep:-

Even such his life's cross-paths; till deathly deep

He toiled through sands of Lethe; and long pain,

Weary with labor spurned and love found vain.

In dead Rome's sheltering shadow wrapped his sleep.

O pang-dowered Poet, whose reverberant lips

And heart-strung lyre awoke the Moon's eclipse,-

Thou whom the daisies glory in growing o'er.-

Their fragrance clings around thy name, not writ

But rumor'd in water, while the fame

Along Time's flood goes echoing evermore.

V. PERCY BYSSHE SHELLEY

(INSCRIPTION FOR THE COUCH, STILL PRESERVED, ON WHICH HE PASSED THE LAST NIGHT OF HIS LIFE.)

'Twixt those twin worlds.—the world of Sleep, which gave

No dream to warm,—the tidal world of Death.

Which the earth's sea, as the earth, replenisheth,-

Shelley, Song's orient sun, to breast the Rose from this couch that morn. Ah! did he brave

Only the sea?—or did man's deed of hell Engulf his bark 'mid mists impenetrable? . . .

No eye discerned, nor any power might save.

When that mist cleared, O Shelley!

what dread veil Was rent for thee, to whom far-darkling

Reigned sovereign guide through thy brief ageless youth?

Was the Truth thy Truth, Shelley?-Hush! All-Hail, Past doubt, thou gav'st it; and in Truth's bright sphere

Art first of praisers, being most praised here. 1881.

THE KING'S TRAGEDY

JAMES I OF SCOTS. -20TH FEBRUARY, 1437.

I CATHERINE am a Douglas born. A name to all Scots dear;

And Kate Barlass they've called me now Through many a waning year.

This old arm's withered now. 'T was once

Most deft 'mong maidens all To rein the steed, to wing the shaft, To smite the palm-play ball.

In hall adown the close-linked dance
It has shone most white and fair;
It has been the rest for a true lord's head,
And many a sweet babe's nursing-bed,
And the bar to a King's chambère.

Aye, lasses, draw round Kate Barlass, And hark with bated breath How good King James, King Robert's son,

Was foully done to death.

Through all the days of his gallant youth
The princely James was pent,
By his friends at first and then by his foes,

In long imprisonment.

For the elder Prince, the kingdom's heir, By treason's murderous brood Was slain; and the father quaked for the child

With the royal mortal blood.

I' the Bass Rock fort, by his father's care, Was his childhood's life assured; And Hanry the subtle Bolingbroke. Proud England's King, 'neath the south-

ron yoke
His youth for long years immured.

Yet in all things meet for a kingly man Himself did he approve; And the nightingale through his prison-

Taught him both lore and love.

For once, when the bird's song drew him

To the opened window-pane, In her bowers beneath a lady stood, A light of life to his sorrowful mood, Like a lily amid the rain.

And for her sake, to the sweet bird's note, He framed a sweeter Song,

More sweet than ever a poet's heart Gave yet to the English tongue.

She was a lady of royal blood;
And when, past sorrow and teen,
He stood where still through his crownless years

His Scottish realm had been,

At Scone were the happy lovers crowned, A heart-wed King and Queen.

But the bird may fall from the bough of youth,

And song be turned to moan,

And Love's storm-cloud be the shadow of Hate,

When the tempest-waves of a troubled State

Are beating against a throne.

Yet well they loved; and the god of Love,
Whom well the King had sung,
Wight find on the court was true hearts

Might find on the earth no truer hearts His lowliest swains among.

From the days when first she rode abroad With Scottish maids in her train, I Catherine Douglas won the trust Of my mistress, sweet Queen Jane.

And oft she sighed, "To be born a King!"

And oft along the way

When she saw the homely lovers pass She has said, "Alack the day!"

Years waned,—the loving and toiling years:

Till England's wrong renewed Drove James, by outrage cast on his

To the open field of feud.

'T was when the King and his host were

At the leaguer of Roxbro' hold, The Queen o' the sudden sought his camp With a tale of dread to be told.

And she showed him a secret letter writ That spoke of treasonous strife,

And how a band of his noblest lords Were sworn to take his life.

"And it may be here or it may be there, In the camp or the court," she said:

"But for my sake come to your people's arms

And guard your royal head."

Quoth he, "T is the fifteenth day of the siege,

And the castle 's nigh to yield."

"O face your foes on your throne," she cried,

"And show the power you wield; And under your Scottish people's love You shall sit as under your shield." At the fair Queen's side I stood that day When he bade them raise the siege, And back to his Court he sped to know How the lords would meet their Liege.

But when he summoned his Parliament, The louring brows hung round,

Like clouds that circle the mountainhead

Ere the first low thunders sound.

For he had tamed the nobles' lust
And curbed their power and pride,
And reached out an arm to right the

Through Scotland far and wide;
And many a lordly wrong-doer
By the headsman's axe had died.

"T was then upspoke Sir Robert Græme, The bold o'ermastering man:—

"O King, in the name of your Three Estates

I set you under their ban!

"For, as your lords made oath to you Of service and fealty,

Even in likewise you pledged your oath Their faithful sire to be:—

"Yet all we here that are nobly sprung Have mourned dear kith and kin Since first for the Scottish Barons' curse Did your bloody rule begin."

With that he laid his hands on his King:—

"Is this not so, my lords?"

But of all who had sworn to league with him

Not one spake back to his words.

Quoth the King:—"Thou speak'st but for one Estate,

Nor doth it avow thy gage.

Let my liege lords hale this traitor hence!"

The Græme fired dark with rage:—
"Who works for lesser men than himself,
He earns but a witless wage!"

But soon from the dungeon where he lay He won by privy plots,

And forth he fled with a price on his head

To the country of the Wild Scots.

And word there came from Sir Robert Græme

To the King at Edinbro':-

"No Liege of mine thou art; but I see From this day forth alone in thee God's creature, my mortal foe,

"Through thee are my wife and children lost,

My heritage and lands; And when my God shall show me a way, Thyself my mortal foe will I slay With these my proper hands."

Against the coming of Christmastide
That year the King bade call
I' the Black Friars' Charterhouse of Perth
A solemn festival.

And we of his household rode with him In a close-ranked company; But not till the sun had sunk from his throne

Did we reach the Scottish Sea.

That eve was clenched for a boding storm, 'Neath a toilsome moon half seen;
The cloud stooped low and the surf rose high;

And where there was a line of the sky, Wild wings loomed dark between.

And on a rock of the black beach-side,
By the veiled moon dimly lit,
There was something seemed to heave with life
As the King drew nigh to it.

And was it only the tossing furze Or brake of the waste sea-wold? Or was it an eagle bent to the blast? When near we came, we knew it at last For a woman tattered and old.

But it seemed as though by a fire within Her writhen limbs were wrung; And as soon as the King was close to her, She stood up gaunt and strong.

'T was then the moon sailed clear of the

On high in her hollow dome;
And still as aloft with hoary crest
Each clamorous wave rang home,
Like fire in show the moonlight blazed

Amid the champing foam.

And the woman held his eyes with her eyes:—

"O King, thou art come at last; But thy wraith has haunted the Scottish Sea

To my sight for four years past.

"Four years it is since first I met, Twixt the Duchray and the Dhu,

A shape whose feet clung close in a shroud,

And that shape for thine I knew.

"A year again, and on Inchkeith Isle
I saw thee pass in the breeze,
With the cerecleth rise above thy fe

With the cerecloth risen above thy feet And wound about thy knees.

"And yet a year, in the Links of Forth, As a wanderer without rest,

Thou cam'st with both thine arms i' the shroud

That clung high up thy breast.

"And in this hour I find thee here, And well mine eyes may note

That the winding-sheet hath passed thy breast

And risen around thy throat.

"And when I meet thee again, O King,
That of death hast such sore drouth,—
Except thou turn again on this shore,—

The winding-sheet shall have moved once more

And covered thine eyes and mouth.

"O King, whom poor men bless for their King,

Of thy fate be not so fain;

But these my words for God's message take,

And turn thy steed, O King, for her sake Who rides beside thy rein!"

While the woman spoke, the King's horse reared

As if it would breast the sea,

And the Queen turned pale as she heard on the gale

The voice die dolorously.

When the woman ceased, the steed was still,

But the King gazed on her yet,

And in silence save for the wail of the sea His eyes and her eyes met.

At last he said:—"God's ways are His own;

Man is but shadow and dust.

Last night I prayed by His alter

Last night I prayed by His altar-stone; To-night I wend to the feast of His Son; And in Him I set my trust.

"I have held my people in sacred charge, And have not feared the sting Of proud men's hate,—to His will resign'd Who has but one same death for a hind And one same death for a King.

"And if God in His wisdom have brought close

The day when I must die,
That day by water or fire or air
My feet shall fall in the destined snare
Wherever my road may lie.

"What man can say but the Fiend hath set

Thy sorcery on my path, My heart with the fear of death to fill, And turn me against God's very will To sink in His burning wrath?"

The woman stood as the train rode past, And moved nor limb nor eye; And when we were shipped, we saw her there Still standing against the sky.

As the ship made way, the moon once more more

Sank slow in her rising pall;
And I thought of the shrouded wraith
of the King,

And I said, "The Heavens knew all."

And now, ye lasses, must ye hear How my name is Kate Barlass:— But a little thing, when all the tale Is told of the weary mass

Of crime and woe which in Scotland's realm

God's will let come to pass.

'T was in the Charterhouse of Perth That the King and all his Court Were met, the Christmas Feast being done,

For solace and disport.

T was a wind-wild eve in February,
And against the casement-pane

The branches smote like summoning hands

And muttered the driving rain.

And when the wind swooped over the

And made the whole heaven frown, It seemed a grip was laid on the walls To tug the housetop down.

And the Queen was there, more stately fair

Than a lily in garden set;

And the king was loth to stir from her side:

For as on the day when she was his bride, Even so he loved her yet.

And the Earl of Athole, the King's false friend,

Sat with him at the board; And Robert Stuart the chamberlain Who had sold his sovereign Lord.

Yet the traitor Christopher Chaumber there

Would fain have told him all,

And vainly four times that night he strove

To reach the King through the hall.

But the wine is bright at the goblet's brim

Though the poison lurk beneath;
And the apples still are red on the tree
Within whose shade may the adder be
That shall turn thy life to death.

There was a knight of the King's fast friends

Whom he called the King of Love; And to such bright cheer and courtesy That name might best behove.

And the King and Queen both loved him well

For his gentle knightliness;

And with him the King, as that eve wore on,

Was playing at the chess.

And the King said, (for he thought to jest

And soothe the Queen thereby;)—
"In a book 't is writ that this same year
A King shall in Scotland die.

"And I have pondered the matter o'er, And this have I found, Sir Hugh,— There are but two Kings on Scottish

And those Kings are I and you.

ground,

"And I have a wife and a newborn heir, And you are yourself alone;

So stand you stark at my side with me To guard our double throne.

"For here sit I and my wife and child, As well your heart shall approve,

In full surrender and soothfastness, Beneath your Kingdom of Love." And the Knight laughed, and the Queen too smiled;

But I knew her heavy thought,

And I strove to find in the good King's jest

What cheer might thence be wrought.

And I said, "My Liege, for the Queen's dear love

Now sing the song that of old You made, when a captive Prince you

And the nightingale sang sweet on the spray,

In Windsor's castle-hold."

Then he smiled the smile I knew so well When he thought to please the Queen; The smile which under all bitter frowns

Of hate that rose between, For ever dwelt at the poet's heart Like the bird of love unseen.

And he kissed her hand and took his harp,

And the music sweetly rang; And when the song burst forth, it seemed

'T was the nightingale that sang.

"Worship, ye lovers, on this May:
Of bliss your kalends are begun:
Sing with us, Away, Winter, away!

Come, Summer, the sweet season and sun!

Awake for shame,—your heaven is won,—

And amorously your heads lift all:
Thank Love, that you to his grace doth
call!"

But when he bent to the Queen, and

The speech whose praise was hers,
It seemed his voice was the voice of the Spring

And the voice of the bygone years.

"The fairest and the freshest flower That ever I saw before that hour, The which o' the sudden made to start The blood of my body to my heart.

Ah sweet, are ye a worldly creature Or heavenly thing in form of nature?"

And the song was long, and richly stored With wonder and beauteous things; And the harp was tuned to every change Of minstrel ministerings;

But when he spoke of the Queen at the last.

Its strings were his own heart-strings.

"Unworthy but only of her grace, Upon Love's rock that's easy and sure, In guerdon of all my love's space

She took me her humble creature. Thus fell my blissful aventure In youth of love that from day to day Flowereth aye new, and further I say.

"To reckon all the circumstance

As it happed when lessen gan my sore, Of my rancor and woful chance,

It were too long,—I have done therefor.
And of this flower I say no more
But unto my help her heart hath tended
And even from death her man defended."

"Aye, even from death," to myself I said;

For I thought of the day when she Had borne him the news, at Roxbro' siege.

Of the fell confederacy.

But Death even then took aim as he sang With an arrow deadly bright;

And the grinning skull lurked grimly aloof.

And the wings were spread far over the roof

More dark than the winter night.

Yet truly along the amorous song
Of Love's high pomp and state,
There were words of Fortune's trackless
doom

And the dreadful face of Fate.

And oft have I heard again in dreams
The voice of dire appeal

In which the King then sang of the pit That is under Fortune's wheel.

"And under the wheel beheld I there
An ugly Pit as deep as hell,
That to behold I quaked for fear:
And this I heard, that who therein fell
Came no more up, tidings to tell:
Whereat, astound of the fearful sight,

And oft has my thought called up again
These words of the changeful song:
"Wist thou thy pain and thy travåil
To come, well might'st thou weep and wail!"

And our wail, O God ! is long.

I wist not what to do for fright."

But the song's end was all of his love; And well his heart was grac'd With her smiling lips and her tear-bright

As his arm went round her waist.

And on the swell of her long fair throat Close clung the necklet-chain As he bent her pearl-tir'd head aside, And in the warmth of his love and pride He kissed her lips full fain.

And her true face was a rosy red,
The very red of the rose
That, couched on the happy garden-bed,
In the summer sunlight glows.

And all the wondrous things of love
That sang so sweet through the song
Were in the look that met in their eyes,
And the look was deep and long.

T was then a knock came at the outer gate,

And the usher sought the King.
"The woman you met by the Scottish

Sea,
My Liege, would tell you a thing;

My Liege, would tell you a thing;
And she says that her present need for speech

Will bear no gainsaying."

And the King said:—"The hour is late; To-morrow will serve, I ween." Then he charged the usher strictly, and said:

"No word of this to the Queen."

But the usher came again to the King, "Shall I call her back? "quoth he: "For as she went on her way, she cried, 'Woe! Woe! then the thing must be!'"

And the King paused, but he did not speak.

Then he called for the Voidee-cup:
And as we heard the twelfth hour strike,
There by true lips and false lips alike
Was the draught of trust drained up.

So with reverence meet to King and Queen,

To bed went all from the board; And the last to leave of the courtly train Was Robert Stuart the chamberlain Who had sold his sovereign lord.

And all the locks of the chamber-door Had the traitor riven and brast; And that Fate might win sure way from afar.

He had drawn out every bolt and bar That made the entrance fast.

And now at midnight he stole his way
To the moat of the outer wall,

And laid strong hurdles closely across Where the traitors' tread should fall.

But we that were the Queen's bowermaids

Alone were left behind;

And with heed we drew the curtains close

Against the winter wind.

And now that all was still through the

More clearly we heard the rain
That clamored ever against the glass
And the boughs that beat on the pane.

But the fire was bright in the ingle-nook, And through empty space around The shadows cast on the arras'd wall 'Mid the pictured kings stood sudden and

Like spectres sprung from the ground.

And the bed was dight in a deep alcove; And as he stood by the fire

The king was still in talk with the Queen While he doffed his goodly attire.

And the song had brought the image back

Of many a bygone year;

And many a loving word they said
With hand in hand and head laid to head:

And none of us went anear.

But Love was weeping outside the house, A child in the piteous rain;

And as he watched the arrow of Death, He wailed for his own shafts close in the sheath

That never should fly again.

And now beneath the window arose A wild voice suddenly:

And the King reared straight, but the Queen fell back

As for bitter dule to dree; And all of us knew the woman's voice Who spoke by the Scottish Sea.

"O King," she cried, "in an evil hour They drove me from thy gate;

And yet my voice must rise to thine ears:

But alas! it comes too late!

"Last night at mid-watch, by Aberdour, When the moon was dead in the skies O King, in a death-light of thine own I saw thy shape arise.

"And in full season, as erst I said,
The doom had gained its growth;
And the shroud had risen above thy neck
And covered thine eyes and mouth.

"And no moon woke, but the pale dawn broke,

And still thy soul stood there; And I thought its silence cried to my soul

As the first rays crowned its hair.

"Since then have I journeyed fast and

In very despite of Fate,

Lest Hope might still be found in God's will:

But they drove me from thy gate.

"For every man on God's ground, O King,

His death grows up from his birth In a shadow-plant perpetually;

And thine towers high, a black yewtree,

O'er the Charterhouse of Perth!"

That room was built far out from the house;

And none but we in the room
Might hear the voice that rose beneath,
Nor the tread of the coming doom.

For now there came a torchlight-glare, And a clang of arms there came; And not a soul in that space but thought Of the foe Sir Robert Greene.

Yea, from the country of the Wild Scots, O'er mountain, valley, and glen.

He had brought with him in murderous league

Three hundred armèd men.

Nor weapon lay to his hand.

The King knew all in an instant's flash,
And like a King did he stand;
But there was no armor in all the room,

And all we women flew to the door

And all we women new to the door And thought to have made it fast:

But the bolts were gone and the bars were gone

And the locks were riven and brast.

And he caught the pale queen in his

As the iron footsteps fell,-

Then loosed her, standing alone, and

"Our bliss was our farewell!"

And 'twixt his lips he murmured a prayer,

And he crossed his brow and breast; And proudly in royal hardihood Even so with folded arms he stood, -The prize of the bloody quest.

Then on me leaped the Queen like a deer :

"Catherine, help!" she cried.

And low at his feet we clasped his knees Together side by side.

"Oh! even a King, for his people's

From treasonous death must hide!"

"For her sake most!" I cried, and I marked

The pang that my words would wring. And the iron tongs from the chimney-

I snatched and held to the King:-"Wrench up the plank! and the vault beneath Shall yield safe harboring."

With brows low-bent, from my eager

The heavy heft did he take;

And the plank at his feet he wrenched and tore;

And as he frowned through the open

Again I said, "For her sake!"

Then he cried to the Queen, "God's will be done!"

For her hands were clasped in prayer. And down he sprang to the inner crypt; And straight we closed the plank he had ripp'd

And toiled to smoothe it fair

(Alas! in that vault a gap once was Wherethro' the King might have fled; But three days since close-walled had it

By his will; for the ball would roll When without at the palm he play'd.) Then the Queen cried, "Catherine, keep the door.

And I to this will suffice!"

At her word I rose all dazed to my feet, And my heart was fire and ice.

And louder ever the voices grew, And the tramp of men in mail; Until to my brain it seemed to be As though I tossed on a ship at sea In the teeth of a crashing gale.

Then back I flew to the rest; and hard We strove with sinews knit To force the table against the door: But we might not compass it.

Then my wild gaze sped far down the

To the place of the hearthstone-sill; And the Queen bent ever above the

For the plank was rising still.

And now the rush was heard on the

And "God, what help?" was our cry. And was I frenzied or was I bold? I looked at each empty stanchion-hold,

And no bar but my arm had I! Like iron felt my arm, as through

The staple I made it pass:—
Alack! it was flesh and bone—no more! 'T was Catherine Douglas sprang to the door,

But I fell back Kate Barlass.

With that they all thronged into the Half dim to my failing ken; And the space that was but a void before Was a crowd of wrathful men.

Behind the door I had fall'n and lay, Yet my sense was wildly aware,

And for all the pain of my shattered arm

I never fainted there.

Even as I fell, my eyes were cast Where the King leaped down to the

And lo! the plank was smooth in itplace.

And the Queen stood far from it.

And under the litters and through the

And within the presses all

The traitors sought for the King, and pierced

The arras around the wall.

And through the chamber they ramped and stormed

Like lions loose in the lair.

And scarce could trust to their very eyes.—

For behold! no King was there.

Than one of them seized the Queen, and cried.—

"Now tell us, where is thy lord?"

And he held the sharp point over her heart:

[start,

She drooped not her eyes nor did she But she answered never a word.

Then the sword half pierced the true true breast:

But it was the Græme's own son Cried, "This is a woman,—we seek a man!"

And away from her girdle-zone
He struck the point of the murderous steel:

And that foul deed was not done.

And forth flowed all the throng like a sea,

And 't was empty space once more; And my eyes sought out the wounded Queen

As I lay behind the door.

And I said: "Dear Lady, leave me here, For I cannot help you now;

But fly while you may, and none shall reck

Of my place here lying low."

And she said, "My Catherine, God help thee!"

Then she looked to the distant floor,
And clasping her hands, "Oh God help
him,"

She sobbed, " for we can no more!"

But God He knows what help may mean, If it mean to live or to die;

And what sore sorrow and mighty moan On earth it may cost ere yet a throne Be filled in His house on high.

And now the ladies fled with the Queen:
And through the open door

The night-wind wailed round the empty

And the rushes shook on the floor.

And the bed drooped low in the dark recess

Whence the arras was rent away;
And the firelight still shone over the space

Where our hidden secret lay.

And the rain had ceased, and the moonbeams lit

The window high in the wall,--

Bright beams that on the plank that I knew

Through the painted pane did fall And gleamed with the splendor of Scotland's crown

And shield armorial.

But then a great wind swept up the skies, And the climbing moon fell back; And the royal blazon fled from the floor,

And nought remained on its track; And high in the darkened window-pane The shield and the crown were black.

And what I say next I partly saw
And partly I heard in sooth,
And partly since from the murderers'

The torture wrung the truth.

For now again came the arméd tread And fast through the hall it fell; But the throng was less; and ere I saw, By the voice without I could tell

That Robert Stuart Itad come with them Who knew that chamber well.

And over the space the Græme strode dark

With his mantle round him flung; And in his eye was a flaming light But not a word on his tongue.

And Stuart held a torch to the floor,
And he found the thing he sought;
And they slashed the plank away with their swords;

And O God! I fainted not!

And the traitor held his torch in the gap, All smoking and smouldering; And through the vapor and fire, beneath

In the dark crypt's narrow ring,
With a shout that pealed to the room's high roof

They saw their naked King.

Half naked he stood, but stood as one Who yet could do and dare:

With the crown, the King was stript away,-

The Knight was reft of his battlearray.—

But still the Man was there.

From the rout then stepped a villain forth.—

Sir John Hall was his name;

With a knife unsheathed he leapt to the vault

Beneath the torchlight-flame.

Of his person and stature was the King
A man right manly strong,

And mightily by the shoulder-blades His foe to his feet he flung.

Then the traitor's brother, Sir Thomas Hall,

Sprang down to work his worst;

And the King caught the second man by the neck

And flung him above the first.

And he smote and trampled them under him;

And a long month thence they bare
All black their throats with the grip of his hands

When the hangman's hand came there.

And sore he strove to have had their knives.

But the sharp blades gashed his hands. Oh James! so armed, thou hadst battled there

Till help had come of thy bands; And oh! once more thou hadst held our

And ruled thy Scottish lands!

But while the King o'er his foes still raged

With a heart that nought could tame, Another man sprang down to the crypt; And with his sword in his hand hardgripp'd

There stood Sir Robert Græme.

(Now shame on the recreant traitor's heart

Who durst not face his King
Till the body unarmed was wearied out
With two-fold combating!

Ah! well might the people sing and say, As oft ye have heard aright:— "O Robert Grame, O Robert Grame, Who slew our King, God give thee shame!"

For he slew him not as a knight.)

And the naked King turned round at bay, But his strength had passed the goal, And he could but gasp:—"Mine hour is

come;

But oh! to succor thine own soul's doom,

Let a priest now shrive my soul!"

And the traitor looked on the King's spent strength,

And said:—" Have I kept my word?— Yea, King, the mortal pledge that I

No black friar's shrift thy soul shall save, But the shrift of this red sword!"

With that he smote his King through the breast;

And all they three in that pen
Fell on him and stabbed and stabbed him
there

Like merciless murderous men.

Yet seemed it now that Sir Robert Græme,

Ere the King's last breath was o'er, Turned sick at heart with the deadly sight

And would have done no more.

But a cry came from the troop above: "If him thou do not slay,

The price of his life that thou dost spare
Thy forfeit life shall pay!"

O God! what more did I hear or see, Or how should I tell the rest? But there at length our King lay slain With sixteen wounds in his breast.

O God! and now did a bell boom forth,
And the murderers turned and fled;
Too late, too late, O God, did it sound!
And I heard the true men mustering
round.

And the cries and the coming tread.

But ere they came to the black death-

gap Somewise did I creep and steal;

And lo! or ever I swooned away, Through the dusk I saw where the white face lay

In the Pit of Fortune's Wheel.

And now, ye Scottish maids who have heard

Dread things of the days grown old,— Even at the last, of true Queen Jane May somewhat yet be told,

And how she dealt for her dearlord's sake Dire vengeance manifold.

'T was in the Charterhouse of Perth, In the fair-lit Death-chapelle, That the slain King's corpse on bier was lain With chaut and requiem-knell.

And all with royal wealth of balm Was the body purified:

And none could trace on the brow and lips

The death that he had died.

In his robes of state he lay asleep
With orb and sceptre in hand;
And by the crown he wore on his throne
Was his kingly forehead spann'd.

And, girls, 't was a sweet sad thing to see How the curling golden hair,As in the day of the poet's youth,From the King's crown clustered there.

And if all had come to pass in the brain That throbbed beneath those curls, Then Scots had said in the days to come That this their soil was a different home And a different Scotland, girls!

And the Queen sat by him night and day, And oft she knelt in prayer, All wan and pale in the widow's veil

All wan and pale in the widow's veil That shrouded her shining hair.

And I had got good help of my hurt:
And only to me some sign
She made; and save the priests that were there

No face would she see but mine.

And the month of March wore on apace; And now fresh couriers fared Still from the country of the Wild Scots With news of the traitors snared.

And still as I told her day by day, Her pallor changed to sight, And the frost grew to a furnace-flame That burnt her visage white.

And evermore as I brought her word,
She bent to her dead King James,
And in the cold ear with fire-drawn
breath

She spoke the traitors' names.

But when the name of Sir Robert Græme
Was the one she had to give,
I ran to hold her up from the floor;
For the froth was on her lips, and sore
I feared that she could not live.

And the month of March wore nigh to its end,

And still was the death-pall spread; For she would not bury her slaughtered lord

Till his slayers all were dead.

And now of their dooms dread tidings came,

And of torments fierce and dire; And nought she spake,—she had ceased to speak,—

But her eyes were a soul on fire.

But when I told her the bitter end
Of the stern and just award,
She leaned o'er the bier, and thrice
three times
She kissed the lips of her lord.

And then she said,—"My King, they are dead!"

And she knelt on the chapel-floor, And whispered low with a strange proud smile,—

"James, James, they suffered more!"

Last she stood up to her queenly height, But she shook like an autumn leaf, As though the fire wherein she burned Then left her body, and all were turned To winter of life-long grief.

And "O James!" she said,—"My James!" she said.—
"Alas for the woful thing,
That a poet true and a friend of man,
In desperate days of bale and ban,
Should needs be born a King!" 1881

WINTER WEATHER

WE rode together
In the winter weather
To the broad mead under the hill;
Though the skies did shiver
With the cold, the river
Ran, and was never still,

No cloud did darken
The night; we did harken
The hound's bark far away.
It was solemn midnight
In that dread, dread night,
In the years that have pass'd for aye.

Two rode beside me,
My banner did hide me,
As it drooped adown from my lance;
With its deep blue trapping,
The mail over-lapping,
My gallant horse did prance.

So ever together
In the sparkling weather
Moved my banner and lance;
And its laurel trapping,
The steel over-lapping,
The stars saw quiver and dance.

We met together
In the winter weather
By the town-walls under the hill;
His mail rings came clinking,
They broke on my thinking,
For the night was hush'd and still.

Two rode beside him,
His banner did hide him,
As it drooped down straight from his lance;
With its blood-red trapping,
The meil over lawing.

The mail over-lapping.
His mighty horse did prance.

And ever together
In the solemn weather
Moved his banner and lance;
And the holly trapping.
The steel over-lapping.
Did shimmer and shiver, and dance.

Back reined the squires
Till they saw the spires
Over the city wall;
Ten fathoms between us,
No dames could have seen us
Tilt from the city wall.

There we sat upright
Till the full midnight
Should be told from the city's chimes;
Sharp from the towers
Leaped forth the showers
Of the many clanging rhymes.

'Twas the midnight hour,
Deep from the tower
Boom'd the following bell;
Down go our lances,
Shout for the lances!
The last toll was his knell.

There he lay, dying;
He had, for his lying,
A spear in his traitorous mouth;
A false tale made he
Of my true, true lady;
But the spear went through his mouth.

In the winter weather
We rode back together
From the broad mead under the hill;
And the cock sung his warning
As it grew toward morning,
But the far-off hound was still.

Black grew his tower
As we rode down lower,
Black from the barren hill;
And our horses strode
Up the winding road
To the gateway dim and still.

At the gate of his tower,
In the quiet hour,
We laid his body there;
But his helmet broken,
We took as a token;
Shout for my lady fair!

We rode back together
In the wintry weather
From the broad mead under the bill;

No cloud did darken The night; we did harken How the hound bay'd from the hill. January, 1856.¹

RIDING TOGETHER

For many, many days together
The wind blew steady from the East:
For many days hot grew the weather,
About the time of our Lady's Feast.

For many days we rode together, Yet met we neither friend nor foe; Hotter and clearer grew the weather, Steadily did the East wind blow.

We saw the trees in the hot, bright weather, Clear-cut, with shadows very black,

As freely we rode on together
With helms unlaced and bridles slack.

And often as we rode together,
We, looking down the green-bank'd
stream,

Saw flowers in the sunny weather, And saw the bubble-making bream.

And in the night lay down together,
And hung above our heads the rood,
Or watch'd night-long in the dewy
weather,

The while the moon did watch the

Our spears stood bright and thick together,

Straight out the banners stream'd behind,

As we gallop'd on in the sunny weather, With faces turn'd towards the wind.

Down sank our threescore spears together,

As thick we saw the pagans ride; His eager face in the clear fresh weather, Shone out that last time by my side.

Up the sweep of the bridge we dash'd together,

It rock'd to the crash of the meeting spears,

The constree flowers fell like tears.

There, as we roll'd and writhed together, I threw my arms above my head. For close by my side, in the lovely weather.

I saw him reel and fall back dead,

I and the slayer met together,

He waited the death stroke there in his place,

With thoughts of death, in the lovely weather,

Gapingly mazed at my madden'd face.

Madly I fought as we fought together; In vain: the little Christian band The pagans drown'd, as in stormy

The river drowns low-lying land.

They bound my blood-tain'd hands together.

They bound his corpse to nod by my

Then on we role, in the bright March weather.

With clash of cymbals did we ride.

We ride no more, no more together;
My prison-bars are thick and strong,
I take no heed of any weather.
The sweet Saint grant I live not long.

THE CHAPEL IN LYONESS

SIR OZAVA LE CURE HARDY, SIR GALAHAD, SIR BORS DE GANYS.

Sir Ozono. All day long and every day, From Christmas-Lve to White-sunday, Witnin that Chapel-aids I lay, And no man came asnear.

Naked to the wai f was I.

And deep within my breast did lie,
Though no man any blood could spy,
The truncheon of a spear.

No meat did ever pass my lips
Those days. Alas I the sublight slips
From off the gilded parclose, dips,
And night comes on apace.

My arms lay back behind my head; Over my raised-up knee, was spread A smile cioth of white and red; A role lay on my face. Many a time I tried to shout;
But as in dream of battle-rout,
My frozen speech would not well out;
I could not even weep.

With inward sigh I see the sun Facte off the pillars one by one, My heart faints when the day is done, Because I cannot sleep.

Sometimes strange thoughts pass through my head;
Not like a tomb is this my bed,
Yet off I think that I am dead;
That round my tomb is writ.

"Ozana of the hardy heart, Knight of the Table Round, Pray for his soul. lords, of your part; A true knight he was found."

Ah! me. I cannot fathom it. [He sleeps.

Sir Galahad. All day long and every day,
Till his machies passid away,
I watch'd Ozana as he lay
Within the gilded screen.

All my singing moved him not; As I sung my heart grew hot, With the thought of Launcelot Far away, I ween.

So I went a little space
From out the chapel, bathed my face
In the stream that runs apace
By the churchyard wall.

There I pluck'd a faint wild rose, Hard by where the linden grows, Sighing over silver rows Or the lilies tall.

I laid the flower across his mouth;
The sparkling drops seem'd good for drouth;

He smiled, turn'd round towards the south,

Held up a golden tress.

The light smote on it from the west;
He drew the covering from his breast,
Against his heart that hair he pressed;
Death him soon will bless.

Sir Bors. I enter'd by the western door; I saw a knight's helm lying there; I raised my eyes from off the floor, And caught the gleaming of his hair. I stept full softly up to him: I laid my clin upon his head: I felt him smile: my eyes did swim. I was so glad he was not dead.

I heard Ozana murmur low,
"There comes no sleep nor any love,"
But Galaha i steep d and kiss id his brow;
He shiver'ü: I saw lits pale lips move.

Sir Oza a. There e mes no sleep nor any love:

Ah me! I shiver with delight.
I am so weak I cannot move:
God move me to the dear, we night!
Christ help! I have but little wit:
My life went wrong: I see it writ.

"Ozana of the intriv heart.
Knight of the Table Round.
Pray for his soul, heres, on your part:
A good knight he was found."

Now I begin to fathom it. [He dies.

Sir Bors. Galanad sits dreamily: What strange to the 2s may his eyes see. Great blue eyes fix d full on me? On his soul, Lord, have mercy.

Sir Galahad. Orana, shall I pray for thee?

Her check is laid to thine: No long time lance, also I see Thy wasted throws twit-

Within the tresses of her hair That shingth ploriously. Thinly outspied, to the clear air Against the juster sea. September, 1816.

THE DEFENCE OF GUENEVERE

But, knowing now that they would have her speak,

She threw her wet hair backward from her brow,

Her hand close to her mouth touching her cheek.

As though she had had there a shameful

And feeling it shameful to feel aught but shame

All through her heart, yet felt her cheek burned so.

She must a little touch it; like one lame She walked away from Gauwaine, with her head

Still lifted up: and on her cheek of flame

The tears dried quick; she stopped at last and said:

"O knights and lords, it seems but little

To talk of well-known things past now and dead.

"God wot I ought to say, I have done ill, And pray you all forgiveness heartily! Because you must be right, such great lords: still

"Listen, suppose your time were come to die.

And you were quite alone and very weak:

Yea, laid a dying while very mightily

"The wind was ruffling up the narrow streak

Of river through your broad lands running well:

Suppose a hush should come, then some one speak:

""One of these cloths is heaven, and one is hell.

¹ The preceding, poem, Hands, published under that title in the Oxford and Cambridge Magazine, 1856, and the lyric stanzas to which I have here given the title Gold Hair, both form part of Rapunzel in the Guenevere volume, 1858.

Now choose one cloth for ever: which they be.

I will not tell you, you must somehow tell

" 'Of your own strength and mightiness; here, see!

Yea, yea, my lord, and you to one your eves.

At foot of your familiar bed to see

"A great God's angel standing, with such dves,

Not known on earth, on his great wings, and hands.

Held out two ways, light from the inner skies

"Showing him well, and making his commands

Seem to be God's commands, moreover. too.

Holding within his hands the cloths on wands:

"And one of these strange choosing cloths was blue,

Wavy and long, and one cut short and

No man could tell the better of the two.

"After a shivering half-hour you said:

'God help! heaven's color, the blue;' and he said, 'hell.'

Perhaps you would then roll upon your bed.

"And cry to all good men that loved you well,

'Ah Christ! if only I had known,
known, known;'

Launcelot went away, then I could tell,

"Like wisest man how all things would be, moan,

And roll and hurt myself, and long to die, And yet fear much to die for what was sown.

"Nevertheless you, O Sir Gauwaine, lie, Whatever may have happened through these years,

God knows I speak truth, saying that you lie."

Her voice was low at first, being full of tears,

But as it cleared, it grew full loud and shrill.

Growing a windy shriek in all men's ears.

A ringing in their startled brains, until She said that Gauwaine lied, then her voice sunk.

And her great eves began again to fill,

Though still she stood right up, and never shrunk.

But spoke on bravely, glorious lady fair! Whatever tears her full lips may have drunk.

She stood, and seemed to think, and wrung her hair,

Spoke out at last with no more trace of shame.

With passionate twisting of her body there:

"It chanced upon a day that Launcelot

To dwell at Arthur's court: at Christmastime

This happened; when the heralds sung his name.

"Son of King Ban of Benwick, seemed to chime

Along with all the bells that rang that day,

O'er the white roofs, with little change of rhyme.

"Christmas and whitened winter passed awav.

And over me the April sunshine came, Made very awful with black hail-clouds, vea

"And in the Summer I grew white with flame, And bowed my head down: Autumn, and the sick

Sure knowledge things would never be the same.

"However often Spring might be most

Of blossoms and buds, smote on me, and I grew

Careless of most things, let the clock tick, tick,

"To my unhappy pulse, that beat right through

My eager body; while I laughed out loud, And let my lips curl up at false or true,

"Seemed cold and shallow without any cloud.

Behold, my judges, then the cloths were brought:

While I was dizzied thus, old thoughts would crowd,

"Belonging to the time ere I was bought By Arthur's great name and his little love:

Must I give up for ever then, I thought,

"That which I deemed would ever round me move

Glorifying all things; for a little word, Scarce ever meant at all, must I now prove

"Stone-cold for ever? Pray you, does the Lord

Will that all folks should be quite happy and good?

I love God now a little, if this cord

"Were broken, once for all what striving could

Make me love anything in earth or heaven?

So day by day it grew, as if one should

"Slip slowly down some path worn smooth and even.

Down to a cool sea on a summer day: Yet still in slipping there was some small leaven

"Of stretched hands catching small stones by the way.

Until one surely reached the sea at last, And felt strange new joy as the worn head lay

"Back, with the hair like sea-weed, yea all past

Sweat of the forehead, dryness of the lips, Washed utterly out by the dear waves o'ercast.

"In the lone sea, far off from any ships! Do I not know now of a day in Spring? No minute of that wild day ever slips

"From out my memory; I hear thrushes

And wheresoever I may be, straightway Thoughts of it all come up with most fresh sting:

"I was half mad with beauty on that

And went without my ladies all alone. In a quiet garden walled round every way;

"I was right joyful of that wall of stone, That shut the flowers and trees up with the sky,

And trebled all the beauty: to the bone,

"Yea right through to my heart, grown very shy

With wary thoughts, it pierced, and made me glad;

Exceedingly glad, and I knew verily,

"A little thing just then had made me mad;

I dared not think, as I was wont to do, Sometimes, upon my beauty; if I had

"Held out my long hand up against the

And, looking on the tenderly darken'd fingers,

Thought that by rights one ought to see quite through,

"There, see you, where the soft still light yet lingers,

Round by the edges; what should I have done,

If this had joined with yellow spotted singers,

"And startling green drawn upward by the sun?

But shouting, loosed out, see now! all my hair,

And trancedly stood watching the west wind run

"With faintest half-heard breathing sound: why there

I lose my head e'en now in doing this; But shortly listen: in that garden fair

"Came Launcelot walking; this is true, the kiss

Wherewith we kissed in meeting that spring day,

I scarce dare talk of the remember'd bliss,

"When both our mouths went wandering in one way, And aching sorely, met among the leaves;

Our hands being left behind strained

Our hands being left behind strained far away.

"Never within a yard of my bright sleeves

Had Launcelot come before: and now so nigh!

After that day why is it Guenevere grieves?

"Nevertheless you, O Sir Gauwaine, lie, Whatever happened on through all those years,

those years,
God knows I speak truth, saying that you lie.

"Being such a lady could I weep these tears

If this were true? A great queen such as I Having sinn'd this way, straight her conscience sears;

"And afterwards she liveth hatefully, Slaying and poisoning, certes never weeps:

Gauwaine be friends now, speak me lovingly.

"Do I not see how God's dear pity creeps All through your frame, and trembles in your mouth?

Remember in what grave your mother sleeps,

"Buried in some place far down in the south

Men are forgetting as I speak to you; By her head sever'd in that awful drouth

"Of pity that drew Agravaine's fell blow, I pray your pity! let me not scream out For ever after, when the shrill winds blow

"Through half your castle-locks! let me not shout

For ever after in the winter night When you ride out alone! in battle-rout

"Let not my rusting tears make your sword light!

Ah! God of mercy, how he turns away! So, ever must I dress me to the fight,

"So: let God's justice work! Gauwaine, I say,

See me hew down your proofs: yea all men know

Even as you said how Mellyagraunce one day,

"One bitter day in la Fausse Garde, for so All good knights held it after, saw:

Yea, sirs, by cursed unknightly outrage; though

"You, Gauwaine, held his word without a flaw.

Not so, fair lords, even if the world should end

- "This very day, and you were judges
- Instead of God. Did you see Mellyagraunce
- When Launcelot stood by him? what white fear
- "Curdled his blood, and how his teeth did dance,
- His side sink in? as my knight cried and said:
- 'Slayer of unarm'd men, here is a chance!
- "Setter of traps, I pray you guard your head,
- By God I am so glad to fight with you, Stripper of ladies, that my hand feels lead
- "For driving weight; hurral now! draw and do,
- For all my wounds are moving in my breast.
- And I am getting mad with waiting so.'
- "He struck his hands together o'er the beast,
- Who fell down flat, and grovell'd at his feet,
- And groan'd at being slain so young: 'At least,'
- "My knight said, 'Rise you, sir, who are so fleet
- At catching ladies, half-arm'd will I
- fight,
 My left side all uncovered!' then I weet,
- "Up sprang Sir Mellyagraunce with great delight
- Upon his knave's face; not until just
- then
 Did I quite hate him, as I saw my knight
- "Along the lists look to my stake and
- With such a joyous smile, it made me sigh
- From agony beneath my waist-chain, when
- "The fight began, and to me they drew nigh:
- EverSir Launcelot kept him on the right, And traversed warily, and ever high
- "And fast leapt caitiff's sword, until my knight
- Sudden threw up his sword to his left hand,
- Caught it and swung it; that was all the fight;

- "Except a spout of blood on the hot land; For it was hottest summer; and I know I wonder'd how the fire, while I should stand.
- "And burn, against the heat, would quiver so,
- Yards above my head; thus these matters went;
- Which things were only warnings of the woe
- "That fell on me. Yet Mellyagraunce was shent.
- For Mellyagraunce had fought against the Lord;
- Therefore, my lords, take heed lest you be blent
- "With all his wickedness; say no rash
- Against me, being so beautiful; my eyes Wept all away to gray, may bring some sword
- "To drown you in your blood; see my breast rise.
- Like waves of purple sea, as here I stand; And how my arms are moved in wonderful wise,
- "Yea also at my full heart's strong command.
- See through my long throat how the words go up
- In ripples to my mouth; how in my hand
- "The shadow lies like wine within a cup Of marvellously color'd gold; yea now This little wind is rising, look you up,
- "And wonder how the light is falling so Within my moving tresses: will you dare When you have looked a little on my brow,
- "To say this thing is vile? or will you care
- For any plausible lies of cunning woof, When you can see my face with no lie
- "For ever? am I not a gracious proof?—
 "But in your chamber Launcelot was
- Is there a good knight then would stand aloof,
- "When a queen says with gentle queenly sound:

*O true as steel, come now and talk with me,

I love to see your step upon the ground

" Unwavering, also well I love to see That gracious smile light up your face, and hear

Your wonderful words, that all mean verily

"The thing they seem to mean: good friend, so dear

To me in everything, come here to-night, Or else the hours will pass most dull and drear;

"If you come not, I fear this time I might

Get thinking over much of times gone by.

When I was young, and green hope was in sight:

"' For no man cares now to know why I sigh:

And no man comes to sing me pleasant songs,

Nor any brings me the sweet flowers that lie

"'So thick in the gardens; therefore one so longs

To see you, Launcelot; that we may be Like children once again, free from all wrongs

" Just for one night.' Did he not come to me?

What thing could keep true Launcelot away away said, 'Come?' there was one less than three

"In my quiet room that night, and we were gay;

Till sudden I rose up, weak, pale, and sick,

Because a bawling broke our dream up, yea

"I looked at Launcelot's face and could not speak,

For he looked helpless too, for a little while;

Then I remember how I tried to shriek,

"And could not, but fell down; from tile to tile

The stones they threw up rattled o'er my head [while And made me dizzier; till within a

"My maids were all about me, and my head

On Launcelot's breast was being soothed away

From its white chattering, until Launce-lot said: . . .

"By God! I will not tell you more today,

Judge any way you will: what matters it?

You know quite well the story of that fray,

"How Launcelot still'd their bawling, the mad fit

That caught up Gauwaine, all, all, verily.

But just that which would save me; these things flit.

"Nevertheless you, O Sir Gauwaine, lie, Whatever may have happen'd these long years,

God knows I speak truth, saying that you lie!

"All I have said is truth, by Christ's dear tears."

She would not speak another word, but stood

Turn'd sideways; listening, like a man who hears

His brother's trumpet sounding through the wood

Of his foes' lances. She leaned eagerly, And gave a slight spring sometimes, as she could

At last hear something really; joyfully Her cheek grew crimson, as the headlong speed

Of the roan charger drew all men to see, The knight who came was Launcelot at good need. 1858.

THE GILLIFLOWER OF GOLD

A golden gilliflower to-day I wore upon my helm alway, And won the prize of this tourney. Hah! hah! la belle jaune giroftée.

However well Sir Giles might sit, His sun was weak to wither it, Lord Miles's blood was dew on it: Hah! hah! la belle jaune giroflée. Although my spear in splinters flew, From John's steel-coat, my eye was true:

I wheel'd about, and cried for you, Hah! hah! la belle jaune giroflée.

Yea, do not doubt my heart was good, Though my sword flew like rotten wood, To shout, although I scarcely stood, Hah! hah! la belle jaune giroflée.

My hand was steady too, to take
My axe from round my neck, and break
John's steel-coat up for my love's sake.
Hah! hah! la belle jaune giroflée.

When I stood in my tent again,
Arming afresh, I felt a pain
Take hold of me. I was so fain—
Hah! hah! la belle jaune giroflée—

To hear: Honneur aux fils des preux! Right in my ears again, and shew The gilliflower blossom'd new. Hah! hah! la belle jaune giroflée,

The Sieur Guillaume against me came, His tabard bore three points of flame From a red heart; with little blame.— Hah! hah! la belle jaune giroftée,—

Our tough spears crackled up like straw; He was the first to turn and draw His sword, that had nor speck nor flaw; Hah! hah! la belle jaune giroftée.

But I felt weaker than a maid, And my brain, dizzied and afraid, Within my helm a fierce tune play'd, Hah! hah! la belle jaune giroftée,

Until I thought of your dear head, Bow'd to the gilliflower bed, The yellow flowers stain'd with red; Hah! hah! la belle jaune giroftée.

Crash! how the swords met: giroflée!
The fierce tune in my helm would play,
La belle! la belle! jaune giroflée!
Hah! hah! la belle jaune giroflée,

Once more the great swords met again: "La belle! la belle!" but who fell then?
Le Sieur Guillaume, who struck down ten:

Hah! hah! la belle jaune giroflée.

And as with mazed and unarm'd face, Toward my own crown and the Queen's place, They led me at a gentle pace,—

Hah! hah! la belle jaune giroflée,—

I almost saw your quiet head Bow'd o'er the gilliflower bed. The yellow flowers stain'd with red. Hah! hah! la belle jaune giroflée.

SHAMEFUL DEATH

The mass-priest knelt at the side,
I and his mother stood at the head,
Over his feet lay the bride;
We were quite sure that he was dead,
Though his eyes were open wide.

He did not die in the night,
He did not die in the day,
But in the morning twilight
His spirit pass'd away,
When neither sun nor moon was bright,
And the trees were merely gray.

He was not slain with the sword, Knight's axe, or the knightly spear, Yet spoke he never a word After he came in here; I cut away the cord From the neck of my brother dear.

He did not strike one blow,
For the recreants came behind,
In a place where the hornbeams grow,
A path right hard to find,
For the hornbeam boughs swing so,
That the twilight makes it blind.

They lighted a great torch then,
When his arms were pinion'd fast,
Sir John the knight of the Fen,
Sir Guy of the Dolorous Blast,
With knights threescore and ten,
Hung brave Lord Hugh at last.

I am threescore and ten,
And my hair is all turn'd gray,
But I met Sir John of the Fen
Long ago on a summer day,
And am glad to think of the moment
when
I took his life away.

I am threescore and ten,
And my strength is mostly pass'd,
But long ago 1 and my men,
When the sky was overcast,
And the smoke roll'd over the reeds of the fen,
Slew Guy of the Dolorous Blast.

And now, knights all of you, I pray you pray for Sir Hugh, A good knight and a true, And for Alice, his wife, pray too. 1858.

THE EVE OF CRECY

GOLD on her head, and gold on her feet, And gold where the hems of her kirtle meet.

And a golden girdle round my sweet; Ah! qu'elle est belle La Marquerite.

Margaret's maids are fair to see, Freshly dress'd and pleasantly; Margaret's hair falls down to her knee; Ah! qu'elle est belle La Marquerite.

If I were rich I would kiss her feet; I would kiss the place where the gold hems meet,

And the golden kirtle round my sweet: Ah! qu'elle est belle La Marguerite.

Ah me! I have never touch'd her hand; When the arrière-ban goes through the land.

Six basnets under my pennon stand: Ah! qu'elle est belle La Marguerite.

And many an one grins under his hood: Sir Lambert du Bois, with all his men good,

Has neither food nor firewood; Ah! qu'elle est belle La Marguerite.

If I were rich I would kiss her feet, And the golden girdle of my sweet, And thereabouts where the gold hems meet: Ah! qu'elle est belle La Marguerite.

Yet even now it is good to think, While my poor varlets grumble and drink

In my desolate hall, where the fires sink,-Ah! qu'elle est belle La Marguerite,—

Of Margaret sitting glorious there, In glory of gold and glory of hair, And glory of glorious face most fair;

Ah! qu'elle est belle La Marguerite.

Likewise to-night I make good cheer, Because this battle draweth near: For what have I to lose or fear? Ah! qu'elle est belle La Marguerite. For, look you, my horse is good to prance A right fair measure in this war-dance Before the eyes of Philip of France;

Ah! qu'elle est belle La Marguerite,

And sometime it may hap, perdie, While my new towers stand up three and three,

And my hall gets painted fair to see-Ah! qu'elle est belle La Marguerite-

That folks may say: Times change, by the rood.

For Lambert, banneret of the wood, Has heaps of food and firewood; Ah! qu'elle est belle La Marguerite.

And wonderful eyes, too, under the hood Of a damsel of right noble blood. St. Ives, for Lambert of the Wood! Ah! qu'elle est belle La Marguerite.

THE SAILING OF THE SWORD

Across the empty garden-beds, When the Sword went out to sea, I scarcely saw my sisters' heads Bowed each beside a tree. I could not see the castle leads. When the Sword went out to sea.

Alicia wore a scarlet gown, When the Sword went out to sea, But Ursula's was russet brown: For the mist we could not see The scarlet roofs of the good town, When the Sword went out to sea.

Green holly in Alicia's hand, When the Sword went out to sea; With sere oak-leaves did Ursula stand; Oh! yet alas for me! I did but bear a peel'd white wand, When the Sword went out to sea.

O, russet brown and scarlet bright, When the Sword went out to sea, My sisters wore; I wore but white: Red, brown, and white, are three; Three damozels; each had a knight, When the Sword went out to sea.

Sir Robert shouted loud, and said; When the Sword went out to sea, 'Alicia, while I see thy head, What shall I bring for thee?' "O, my sweet Lord, a ruby red;" The Sword went out to sea.

Sir Miles said, while the sails hung down, When the Sword went out to sea,

"O, Ursula! while I see the town, What shall I bring for thee?"

"Dear knight, bring back a falcon brown:'

The Sword went out to Sea.

But my Roland, no word he said When the Sword went out to sea, But only turn'd away his head; A quick shriek came from me:

"Come back, dear lord, to your white maid!"

The Sword went out to sea.

The hot sun bit the garden-beds When the Sword came back from sea: Beneath an apple-tree our heads Stretched out toward the sea: Gray gleamed the thirsty castle-leads, When the Sword came back from sea.

Lord Robert brought a ruby red, When the Sword came back from sea; He kissed Alicia on the head:

"I am come back to thee: 'T is time, sweet love, that we were

Now the Sword is back from sea!"

Sir Miles he bore a falcon brown, When the Sword came back from sea; His arms went round tall Ursula's gown: "What joy, O love, but thee? Let us be wed in the good town, Now the Sword is back from sea!"

My heart grew sick, no more afraid, When the Sword came back from sea; Upon the deck a tall white maid Sat on Lord Roland's knee; His chin was press'd upon her head, When the Sword came back from sea! 1858.

THE BLUE CLOSET

THE DAMOZELS

LADY ALICE, lady Louise, Between the wash of the tumbling seas We are ready to sing, if so ye please: So lay your long hands on the keys; "Sing, Landate pueri."

And ever the great bell overhead Boom'd in the wind a knell for the dead. Though no one toll'd it, a knell for the dead.

LADY LOUISE

Sister, let the measure swell Not too loud; for you sing not well If you drown the faint boom of the bell; He is weary, so am I.

And ever the chevron overhead Flapp'd on the banner of the dead: (Was he asleep, or was he dead?)

LADY ALICE

Alice the Queen, and Louise the Queen, Two damzels wearing purple and green, Four lone ladies dwelling here From day to day and year to year; And there is none to let us go: To break the locks of the doors below, Or shovel away the heaped-up snow; And when we die no man will know That we are dead; but they give us leave,

Once every year on Christmas-eve, To sing in the Closet Blue one song; And we should be so long, so long, If we dared, in singing; for dream on dream.

They float on in a happy stream; Float from the gold strings, float from the kevs

Float from the open'd lips of Louise: But, alas! the sea-salt oozes through The chinks of the tiles of the Closet Blue:

And ever the great bell overhead Booms in the wind a knell for the dead, The wind plays on it a knell for the dead.

THEY SING ALL TOGETHER

How long ago was it, how long ago, He came to this tower with hands full of Show ?

"Kneel down, O love Louise, kneel down!" he said,

And sprinkled the dusty snow over my head.

He watch'd the snow melting, it ran through my hair,

Ran over my shoulders, white shoulders and bare.

"I cannot weep for thee, poor love Louise.

For my tears are all hidden deep under the seas:

"In a gold and blue casket she keeps all my tears,

But my eyes are no longer blue, as in old years;

"Yea, they grow gray with time, grow small and dry,

I am so feeble now, would I might die."

And in truth the great bell overhead Left off his pealing for the dead, Perchance, because the wind was dead.

Will he come back again, or is he dead?

O! is he sleeping, my scarf round his head?

Or did they strangle him as he lay there, With the long scarlet scarf I used to wear?

Only I pray thee, Lord, let him come here!

Both his soul and his body to me are most dear.

Dear Lord, that loves me, I wait to receive

Either body or spirit this wild Christmaseve.

Through the floor shot up a lily red, With a patch of earth from the land of the dead,

For he was strong in the land of the dead.

What matter that his cheeks were pale, His kind kiss'd lips all gray? "O, love Louise, have you waited long?" "O, my lord Arthur, yea."

What if his hair that brushed her cheek Was stiff with frozen rime? His eyes were grown quite blue again, As in the happy time.

"O, love Louise, this is the key
Of the happy golden land!
O, sisters, cross the bridge with me,
My eyes are full of sand.
What matter that I cannot see,
If ye take me by the hand?"

And ever the great bell overhead, And the tumbling seas mourn'd for the dead;

For their song ceased, and they were dead! 1858.

THE HAYSTACK IN THE FLOODS

HAD she come all the way for this,
To part at last without a kiss?
Yea, had she borne the dirt and rain
That her own eyes might see him slain
Beside the haystack in the floods?

Along the dripping leafless woods,
The stirrup touching either shoe,
She rode astride as troopers do;
With kirtle kilted to her knee,
To which the mud splash'd wretchedly;
And the wet dripp'd from every tree
Upon her head and heavy hair,
And on her eyelids broad and fair;
The tears and rain ran down her face.

By fits and starts they rode apace,
And very often was his place
Far off from her; he had to ride
Ahead, to see what might betide
When the roads cross'd; and sometimes,
when

There rose a murmuring from his men, Had to turn back with promises. Ah me! she had but little ease; And often for pure doubt and dread She sobb'd, made giddy in the head By the swift riding; while, for cold, Her slender fingers scarce could hold The wet reins; yea, and scarcely, too, She felt the foot within her shoe Against the stirrup: all for this, To part at last without a kiss Beside the haystack in the floods.

For when they near'd that old soak'd hay,

They saw across the only way
That Judas, Godmar, and the three
Red running lions dismally
Grinn'd from his pennon, under which
In one straight line along the ditch,
They counted thirty heads.

So then
While Robert turn'd round to his men,
She saw at once the wretched end,
And, stooping down, tried hard to rend
Her coif the wrong way from her head,
And hid her eyes; while Robert said:
"Nay, love, 'tis scarcely two to one;
At Poictiers where we made them run
So fast—why, sweet my love, good cheer,

The Gascon frontier is so near, Nought after us."

But: "O!" she said, "My God! my God! I have to tread

The long way back without you: then The court at Paris; those six men; The gratings of the Chatelet; The swift Seine on some rainy day Like this, and people standing by, And laughing, while my weak hands trv

To recollect how strong men swim. All this, or else a life with him, For which I should be damned at last, Would God that this next hour were past!"

He answer'd not, but cried his cry, "St. George for Marny!" cheerily; And laid his hand upon her rein. Alas! no man of all his train Gave back that cheery cry again; And, while for rage his thumb beat fast Upon his sword-hilt, some one cast About his neck a kerchief long, And bound him.

Then they went along To Godmar; who said: "Now, Jehane, Your lover's life is on the wane So fast, that, if this very hour You yield not as my paramour, He will not see the rain leave off: Nay, keep your tongue from gibe and scoff

Sir Robert, or I slay you now."

She laid her hand upon her brow, Then gazed upon the palm, as though She thought her forehead bled, and:

She said, and turn'd her head away, As there was nothing else to say, And everything was settled: red Grew Godmar's face from chin to head: "Jehane, on yonder hill there stands My castle, guarding well my lands; What hinders me from taking you, And doing that I list to do To your fair wilful body, while Your knight lies dead?"

A wicked smile Wrinkled her face, her lips grew thin, A long way out she thrust her chin: "You know that I should strangle you While you were sleeping; or bite through Your throat, by God's help: ah!" she

"Lord Jesus, pity your poor maid! For in such wise they hem me in, I cannot choose but sin and sin, Whatever happens: yet I think They could not make me eat or drink, And so should I just reach my rest."

"Nav, if you do not my behest, O Jehane! though I love you well," Said Godmar, "would I fail to tell All that I know?" "Foul lies," she

"Eh? lies, my Jehane? by God's head, At Paris folks would deem them true! Do you know, Jehane, they cry for you: ' Jehane the brown! Jehane the brown! Give us Jehane to burn or drown!' Eh!—gag me Robert!—sweet my friend, This were indeed a piteous end For those long fingers, and long feet. And long neck, and smooth shoulders sweet: An end that few men would forget That saw it. So, an hour yet: Consider, Jehane, which to take Of life or death!"

So, scarce awake, Dismounting, did she leave that place, And totter some vards: with her face Turn'd upward to the sky she lay, Her head on a wet heap of hay, And fell asleep: and while she slept, And did not dream, the minutes crept Round to the twelve again; but she, Being waked at last, sigh'd quietly, And strangely childlike came, and said: "I will not." Straightway Godmar's head.

As though it hung on strong wires, turn'd

Most sharply round, and his face burn'd.

For Robert, both his eyes were dry, He could not weep, but gloomily He seem'd to watch the rain; yea, too, His lips were firm; he tried once more To touch her lips; she reach'd out, sore And vain desire so tortured them, The poor gray lips, and now the hem Of his sleeve brush'd them.

With a start

Up Godmar rose, thrust them apart; From Robert's throat he loosed the bands

Of silk and mail; with empty hands Held out, she stood and gazed, and saw, The long bright blade without a flaw Glide out from Godmar's sheath, his

In Robert's hair; she saw him bend Back Robert's head; she saw him send The thin steel down; the blow told well, Right backward the knight Robert fell, And moaned as dogs do, being half dead, Unwitting, as I deem: so then Godmar turn'd grinning to his men,

Who ran, some five or six, and beat His head to pieces at their feet.

Then Godmar turn'd again and said: "So, Jehane, the first fitte is read! Take note, my lady, that your way Lies backward to the Chatelet!" She shook her head and gazed awhile At her cold hands with a rueful smile, As though this thing had made her mad.

This was the parting that they had Beside the haystack in the floods.

TWO RED ROSES ACROSS THE MOON

THERE was a lady lived in a hall, Large of her eyes and slim and tall; And ever she sung from noon to noon, Two red roses across the moon.

There was a knight came riding by In early spring, when the roads were dry; And he heard that lady sing at the noon, Two red roses across the moon.

Yet none the more he stopp'd at all, But he rode a-gallop past the hall; And left that lady singing at noon, Two red roses across the moon.

Because, forsooth, the battle was set,
And the scarlet and blue had got to be met,

He rode on the spur till the next warm noon:

Two red roses across the moon.

But the battle was scatter'd from hill to hill.

From the windmill to the watermill;
And he said to himself, as it near'd the noon,

Two red roses across the moon.

You scarce could see for the scarlet and blue.

A golden helm or a golden shoe:
So he cried, as the fight grew thick at the noon,

Two red roses across the moon!

Verily then the gold bore through
The huddled spears of the scarlet and blue:

And they cried, as they cut them down at the noon,

Two red roses across the moon!

I trow he stopp'd when he rode again
By the hall, though draggled sore with the rain;

And his lips were pinch'd to kiss at the

Two red roses across the moon.

Under the may she stoop'd to the crown, All was gold, there was nothing of brown, And the horns blew up in the hall at noon, Two red roses across the moon. 1858.

SIR GILES' WAR-SONG 1

Ho! is there any will ride with me, Sir Giles, le bon des barrières?

The clink of arms is good to hear,
The flap of pennons fair to see;
Ho! is there any will ride with me,
Sir Giles, le bon des barrières?

The leopards and lilies are fair to see; St. George Guienne! right good to hear: Ho! is there any will ride with me; Sir Giles, le bon des barrières?

I stood by the harrier,
My coat being blazon'd fair to see;
Ho! is there any will ride with me,
Sir Giles, le bon des barrières?

Clisson put out his head to see,
And lifted his basnet up to hear;
I pull'd him through the bars to ME,
Sir Giles, le bon des barrières.

NEAR AVALON

A SHIP with shields before the sun, Six maidens round the mast, A red-gold crown on every one, A green gown on the last.

The fluttering green banners there
Are wrought with ladies' heads most fair.

And a portraiture of Guenevere The middle of each sail doth bear.

A ship which sails before the wind, And round the helm six knights,

¹ Browning wrote to Morris, on the appearance of the Eurthly Paradise: "It is a double delight to me to read such poetry, and know you, of all the world, wrote it,—you whose songs I used to sing while galloping by Fiesole in old days,—'Ho, is there any will ride with me?'"—(J. W. Mackail's Life of William Morris, Vol. I., p. 133.)

Their heaumes are on, whereby, half blind,

They pass by many sights.

The tatter'd scarlet banners there, Right soon will leave the spear-heads bare,

Those six knights sorrowfully bear, In all their heaumes some yellow hair.

IN PRISON

Wearily, drearily, Half the day long, Flap the great banners High over the stone; Strangely and eerily Sounds the wind's song, Bending the banner-poles.

While, all alone, Watching the loophole's spark, Lie I, with life all dark, Feet tether'd, hands fetter'd Fast to the stone, The grim wall, square letter'd With prison'd men's groan.

Still strain the banner-poles Through the wind's song, Westward the banner rolls Over my wrong. 1858.

FROM THE LIFE AND DEATH OF JASON

TO THE SEA

O BITTER sea, tumultuous sea,
Full many an ill is wrought by thee !—
Unto the wasters of the land
Thou holdest out thy wrinkled hand;
And when they leave the conquered town,

Whose black smoke makes thy surges brown.

Driven betwixt thee and the sun, As the long day of blood is done, From many a league of glittering waves Thou smilest on them and their slaves.

The thin bright-eyed Phenician Thou drawest to thy waters wan, With ruddy eve and golden morn Thou temptest him, until, forlorn, Unburied, under alien skies Cast up ashore his body lies.

Yea, whose sees thee from his door, Must ever long for more and more; Nor will the beechen bowl suffice, Or homespun robe of little price, Or hood well-woven from the fleece Undyed, or unspiced wine of Greece; So sore his heart is set upon Purple, and gold, and cinnamon; For as thou cravest, so he craves, Until he rolls beneath thy waves, Nor in some landlocked, unknown bay, Can satiate thee for one day.

Now, therefore, O thou bitter sea, With no long words we pray to thee, But ask thee, hast thou felt before Such strokes of the long ashen oar? And hast thou yet seen such a prow Thy rich and niggard waters plough?

Nor yet, O sea, shalt thou be cursed, If at thy hands we gain the worst, And, wrapt in water, roll about Blind-eyed, unheeding song or shout, Within thine eddies far from shore, Warmed by no sunlight any more.

Therefore, indeed, we joy in thee, And praise thy greatness, and will we Take at thy hands both good and ill, Yea, what thou wilt, and praise thee still, Enduring not to sit at home, And wait until the last days come, When we no more may care to hold White bosoms under crowns of gold, And our dulled hearts no longer are Stirred by the clangorous noise of war, And hope within our souls is dead, And no joy is remembered.

So, if thou hast a mind to slay,
Fair prize thou hast of us to-day;
And if thou hast a mind to save,
Great praise and honor shalt thou have;
But whatso thou wilt do with us,
Our end shall not be piteous,
Because our memories shall live
When folk forget the way to drive
The black keel through the heaped-up
sea.

And half dried up thy waters be. 1867.

THE NYMPH'S SONG TO HYLAS 1

I know a little garden close
Set thick with lily and red rose,
Where I would wander if I might
From dewy dawn to dewy night,
And have one with me wandering.
And though within it no birds sing,
And though no pillared house is there,

And though the apple boughs are bare Of fruit and blossom, would to God, Her feet upon the green grass trod, And I beheld them as before.

There comes a murmur from the shore, And in the place two fair streams are, Drawn from the purple hills afar, Drawn down unto the restless sea: The hills whose flowers ne'er fed the bee. The shore no ship has ever seen, Still beaten by the billows green, 1 Whose murmur comes unceasingly Unto the place for which I cry.

For which I cry both day and night, For which I let slip all delight, That maketh me both deaf and blind, Careless to win, unskilled to find, And quick to lose what all men seek.

Yet tottering as I am, and weak, Still have I left a little breath To seek within the jaws of death An entrance to that happy place, To seek the unforgotten face Once seen, once kissed, once reft from Anigh the murmuring of the sea. 1867.

ORPHEUS' SONG OF TRIUMPH

O death, that makest life so sweet, O fear, with mirth before thy feet, What have ye yet in store for us, The conquerors, the glorious?

Men say: "For fear that thou shouldst

To-morrow, let to-day pass by Flower-crowned and singing," yet have Passed our to-day upon the sea, Or in a poisonous unknown land, With fear and death on either hand, And listless when the day was done Have scarcely hoped to see the sun Dawn on the morrow of the earth. Nor in our hearts have thought of mirth.

And while the world lasts, scarce again Shall any sons of men bear pain Like we have borne, yet be alive.

So surely not in vain we strive Like other men for our reward; Sweet peace and deep, the checkered sward

Beneath the ancient mulberry trees, The smooth-paved gilded palaces,

¹ In A Garden by the Sea, these three lines read :

Dark hills whose heath-bloom feeds no bee, Dark shore no ship has ever seen, Tormented by the billows green.

Where the shy thin-elad damsels sweet Make music with their gold-ringed feet. The fountain court amidst of it, Where the short-haired slave-maidens

While on the veined pavement lie The honied things and spicery Their arms have borne from out the town.

The dancers on the thymy down In summer twilight, when the earth Is still of all things but their mirth, And echoes borne upon the wind Of others in like wav entwined.

The merchant-town's fair marketplace.

Where over many a changing face The pigeons of the temple flit, And still the outland merchants sit Like kings above their merchandise, Lying to foolish men and wise.

Ah! if they heard that we were come Into the bay, and bringing home That which all men have talked about, Some men with rage, and some with doubt.

Some with desire, and some with praise; Then would the people throng the ways, Nor heed the outland merchandise, Nor any talk, from fools or wise, But tales of our accomplished quest.

What soul within the house shall rest When we come home? The wily king Shall leave his throne to see the thing; No man shall keep the landward gate, The hurried traveller shall wait Until our bulwarks graze the quay: Unslain the milk-white bull shall be Beside the quivering altar-flame; Scarce shall the maiden clasp for shame Over her breast the raiment thin The morn that Argo cometh in.

Then cometh happy life again That payeth well our toil and pain In that sweet hour, when all our woe But as a pensive tale we know, Nor yet remember deadly fear; For surely now if death be near, Unthought-of is it, and unseen When sweet is, that hath bitter been.

SONGS OF ORPHEUS AND THE SIRENS

Sirens

O HAPPY seafarers are ye, And surely all your ills are past, And toil upon the land and sea, Since ye are brought to us at last. To you the fashion of the world, Wide lands laid waste, fair cities burned,

And plagues, and kings from kingdoms hurled,

Are nought, since hither ye have turned.

For as upon this beach we stand, And o'er our heads the sea-fowl flit, Our eyes behold a glorious land, And soon shall ye be kings of it.

Orpheus

A little more, a little more, O carriers of the Golden Fleece, A little labor with the oar, Before we reach the land of Greece.

E'en now perchance faint rumors reach Men's ears of this our victory, And draw them down unto the beach To gaze across the empty sea.

But since the longed-for day is nigh, And scarce a God could stay us now, Why do ye hang your heads and sigh, Hindering for nought our eager prow?

Sirens

Ah, had ye chanced to reach the home On which your fond desires were set, Into what troubles had ye come? Short love and joy, and long regret.

But now, but now, when ye have lain Asleep with us a little while Beneath the washing of the main, How calm shall be your waking smile!

For ye shall smile to think of life
That knows no troublous change or fear,

No unavailing bitter strife, That ere its time brings trouble near.

Orpheus

Is there some murmur in your ears,
That all that we have done is nought,
And nothing ends our cares or fears,
Till the last fear is on us brought?

Sirens

Alas! and will ye stop your ears,
In vain desire to do aught,
And wish to live 'mid cares and fears,
Until the last fear makes you nought?

Orpheus

Is not the May-time now on earth,
When close against the city wall
The folks are singing in their mirth,
While on their heads the May-flowers
fall?

Sirens

Yes, May is come, and its sweet breath Shall well-nigh make you weep to-day, And pensive with swift-coming death, Shall ye be satiate of the May.

Orpheus

Shall not July bring fresh delight,
As underneath green trees ye sit,
And o'er some damsel's body white
The noontide shadows change and flit?

Sirens

No new delight July shall bring
But ancient fear and fresh desire,
And spite of every lovely thing,
Of July surely shall you tire.

Orpheus

And now, when August comes on thee, And 'mid the golden sea of corn The merry reapers thou mayst see, Wilt thou still think the earth forlorn?

Sirens

Set flowers upon thy short-lived head, And in thine heart forgetfulness Of man's hard toil, and scanty bread, And weary of those days no less.

Orpheus

Or wilt thou climb the sunny hill, In the October afternoon, To watch the purple earth's blood fill The gray vat to the maiden's tune?

Sirens

When thou beginnest to grow old,
Bring back remembrance of thy bliss
With that the shining cup doth hold,
And weary helplessly of this.

Or pheus

Or pleasureless shall we pass by
The long cold night and leaden day,
That song, and tale, and minstrelsy
Shall make as merry as the May?

Sirens

List then, to-night, to some old tale
Until the tears o'erflow thine eyes;
But what shall all these things avail,
When sad to-morrow comes and dies?

Orpheus

And when the world is born again,
And with some fair love, side by side,
Thou wanderest 'twixt the sun and rain,
In that fresh love-begetting tide;

Then, when the world is born again,
And the sweet world before thee lies,
Shall thy heart think of coming pain,
Or yex itself with memories?

Sirens

Ah! then the world is born again With burning love unsatisfied, And new desires fond and vain, And weary days from tide to tide.

Ah! when the world is born again,
A little day is soon gone by,
When thou, unmoved by sun or rain,
Within a cold straight house shalt lie.

Ah, will ye go, and whither then Will ye go from us, soon to die, To fill your three-score years and ten, With many an unnamed misery?

And this the wretchedest of all,
That when upon your lonely eyes
The last faint heaviness shall fall
Ye shall bethink you of our cries.

Come back, nor grown old, seek in vain To hear us sing across the sea. Come back, come back again, Come back, O fearful Minyae!

Orpheus

Ah, once again, ah, once again,
The black prow plunges through the sea.

Nor yet shall all your toil be vain, Nor yet forgot, O Minyae. 1867.

INVOCATION TO CHAUCER

(From the last book of the Life and Death of Jason)

So ends the winning of the Golden Fleece—

So ends the tale of that sweet rest and peace

That unto Jason and his love befell;
Another story now my tongue must tell,
And tremble in the telling. Would that I

Had but some portion of that mastery That from the rose-hung lanes of woody

Through these five hundred years such songs have sent

Of unrejoicing labor, love them yet. And thou, O Master!—Yea, my Master

And thou, O Master!—Yea, my Master still,

Since like thy measures, clear and sweet and strong,

Thames' stream scarce fettered drave the dace along

Unto the bastioned bridge, his only chain.—

AN APOLOGY

PROLOGUE OF THE EARTHLY PARADISE

OF Heaven or Hell I have no power to sing.

I cannot ease the burden of your fears, Or make quick-coming death a little thing,

Or bring again the pleasure of past years, Nor for my words shall ye forget your tears,

Or hope again for aught that I can say, The idle singer of an empty day.

But rather, when aweary of your mirth, From full hearts still unsatisfied ye sigh, And, feeling kindly unto all the earth, Grudge every minute as it passes by, Made the more mindful that the sweet days die—

—Remember me a little then I pray, The idle singer of an empty day. The heavy trouble, the bewildering care That weighs us down who live and earn our bread,

These idle verses have no power to bear; So let me sing of names remembered, Because they, living not, can ne'er be dead.

Or long time take their memory quite

From us poor singers of an empty day.

Dreamer of dreams, born out of my due time,

Why should I strive to set the crooked straight?

Let it suffice me that my murmuring rhyme

Beats with light wing against the ivory gate.

Telling a tale not too importunate
To those who in the sleepy region stay,
Lulled by the singer of an empty day.

Folk say, a wizard to a northern king

At Christmas-tide such wondrous things

That through one window men beheld the spring,

And through another saw the summer glow,

And through a third the fruited vines a-row,

While still, unheard, but in its wonted way.

Piped the drear wind of that December day.

So with this Earthly Paradise it is, If ye will read aright, and pardon me, Who strive to build a shadowy isle of bliss

Midmost the beating of the steely sea,
Where tossed about all hearts of men must be;

Whose ravening monsters mighty men shall slay,

Not the poor singer of an empty day. 1868.

ATALANTA'S RACE

ARGUMENT

Atalanta, daughter of King Scheeneus, not willing to lose her virgin's estate, made it a law to all suitors that they should run a race with her in the public place, and if they failed to overcome her should die unrevenged; and thus many brave men perished. At last came Milanion, the son of Amphidamas, who, outrunning her with the help of Venus, gained the virgin and wedded her.

Through thick Arcadian woods a hunter went,

Following the beasts upon a fresh spring day;

But since his horn-tipped bow but seldom bent.

Now at the noontide nought had happed to slay,

Within a vale he called his hounds away, Harkening the echoes of his lone voice cling

About the cliffs and through the beechtrees ring.

But when they ended, still awhile he stood,

And but the sweet familiar thrush could hear,

And all the day-long noises of the wood, And o'er the dry leaves of the vanished

His hounds' feet pattering as they drew anear.

And heavy breathing from their heads low hung,

To see the mighty cornel bow unstrung.

Then smiling did he turn to leave the place.

But with his first step some new fleeting thought

A shadow cast across his sun-burnt face;

I think the golden net that April brought

From some warm world his wavering soul had caught;

For, sunk in vague sweet longing, did he

Betwixt the trees with doubtful steps and slow.

Yet howsoever slow he went, at last The trees grew sparser, and the wood was done; [cast, Whereon one farewell backward look he

Then, turning round to see what place was won,

With shaded eyes looked underneath the sun,

And o'er green meads and new-turned furrows brown

Beheld the gleaming of King Schœneus' town.

So thitherward he turned, and on each side

The folk were busy on the teeming land,

And man and maid from the brown furrows cried,

Or midst the newly blossomed vines did stand,

And as the rustic weapon pressed the hand

Thought of the nodding of the well-filled ear,

Or how the knife the heavy bunch should shear.

Merry it was: about him sung the birds,

The spring flowers bloomed along the firm dry road,

The sleek-skinned mothers of the sharphorned herds

Now for the barefoot milking-maidens lowed:

While from the freshness of his blue abode,

Glad his death-bearing arrows to forget, The broad sun blazed, nor scattered plagues as yet.

Through such fair things unto the gates he came,

And found them open, as though peace were there;

Wherethrough, unquestioned of his race or name,

He entered, and along the streets 'gan fare.

Which at the first of folk were well-nigh bare;

But pressing on, and going more hastily, Men hurrying too he 'gan at last to see.

Following the last of these he still pressed on,

Until an open space he came unto,

Where wreaths of fame had oft been lost and won,

For feats of strength folks there were wont to do.

And now our hunter looked for something new,

Because the whole wide space was bare, and stilled

The high seats were, with eager people filled.

There with the others to a seat he gat, Whence he beheld a broidered canopy, 'Neath which in fair array King Shœneus sat

Upon his throne with councillors thereby:

And underneath his well-wrought seat and high,

He saw a golden image of the sun, A silver image of the Fleet-foot One.

A brazen altar stood beneath their feet Whereon a thin flame flicker'd in the wind:

Nigh this a herald clad in raiment meet Made ready even now his horn to wind, By whom a huge man held a sword, entwin'd

With yellow flowers; these stood a little space

From off the altar, nigh the starting place.

And there two runners did the sign abide.

Foot set to foot,—a young man slim and fair,

Crisp-hair'd, well knit, with firm limbs often tried

In places where no man his strength may spare:

Dainty his thin coat was, and on his hair A golden circlet of renown he wore, And in his hand an olive garland bore.

But on this day with whom shall he contend?

A maid stood by him like Diana clad When in the woods she lists her bow to

Too fair for one to look on and be glad, Who scarcely yet has thirty summers

If he must still behold her from afar;
Too fair to let the world live free from war.

She seem'd all earthly matters to forget; Of all tormenting lines her face was clear;

Her wide gray eyes upon the goal were set

Calm and umov'd as though no soul were near.

But her foe trembled as a man in fear, Nor from her loveliness one moment

His anxious face with fierce desire that burn'd.

Now through the hush there broke the trumpet's clang

Just as the setting sun made eventide.

Then from light feet a spurt of dust there sprang.

And swiftly were they running side by side;

But silent did the thronging folk abide Until the turning-post was reach'd at last,

And round about it still abreast they passed.

But when the people saw how close they ran.

When half-way to the starting-point they were,

A cry of joy broke forth, whereat the

Headed the white-foot runner, and drew near

Unto the very end of all his fear;

And scarce his straining feet the ground could feel,

And bliss unhop'd for o'er his heart 'gan steal.

But 'midst the loud victorious shouts he heard

Her footsteps drawing nearer, and the sound

Of fluttering raiment, and thereat afeared

His flush'd and eager face he turn'd around,

And even then he felt her past him bound

Fleet as the wind, but scarcely saw her there

Till on the goal she laid her fingers fair.

There stood she breathing like a little child

Amid some warlike clamor laid asleep, For no victorious joy her red lips smil'd, Her cheek its wonted freshness did but keen:

No glance lit up her clear gray eyes and

Though some divine thought soften'd all her face

As once more rang the trumpet through the place.

But her late foe stopp'd short amidst his course.

One moment gaz'd upon her piteously.
Then with a groan his lingering feet did force

force
To leave the spot whence he her eyes could see:

And, changed like one who knows his time must be

But short and bitter, without any word He kuelt before the bearer of the sword;

Then high rose up the gleaming deadly blade,

Bar'd of its flowers, and through the crowded place

Was silence now, and midst of it the

Went by the poor wretch at a gentle

And he to hers upturn'd his sad white face;

Nor did his eyes behold another sight Ere on his soul there fell eternal light.

So was the pageant ended, and all folk Talking of this and that familiar thing In little groups from that sad concourse broke.

For now the shrill bats were upon the wing,

And soon dark night would slay the evening,

And in dark gardens sang the nightingale

Her little-heeded, oft-repeated tale.

And with the last of all the hunter went, Who, wondering at the strange sight he had seen,

Prayed an old man to tell him what it

Both why the vanquished man so slain had been,

And if the maiden were an earthly queen,

Or rather what much more she seemed to be,

No sharer in this world's mortality.

"Stranger," said he, "I pray she soon may die

Whose lovely youth has slain so many an one!

King Scheeneus' daughter is she verily, Who when her eyes first looked upon the sun

Was fain to end her life but new begun,

For he had vowed to leave but men alone

Sprung from his loins when he from earth was gone.

"Therefore he bade one leave her in the wood.

And let wild things deal with her as they might.

But this being done, some cruel god thought good

To save her beauty in the world's despite;

Folk say that her, so delicate and white As now she is, a rough root-grubbing

Amidst her shapeless cubs at first did rear.

"In course of time the woodfolk slew her nurse.

And to their rude abode the youngling brought.

And reared her up to be a kingdom's curse:

Who grown a woman, of no kingdom thought,

But armed and swift, 'mid beasts destruction wrought,

Nor spared two shaggy centaur kings to slav

To whom her body seemed an easy prey.

"So to this city, led by fate, she came Whom known by signs, whereof I cannot tell.

King Scheeneus for his child at last did claim.

Nor otherwhere since that day doth she

Sending too many a noble soul to hell-What! thine eyes glisten! what then, thinkest thou

Her shining head unto the yoke to bow?

"Listen, my son, and love some other maid

For she the saffron gown will never wear.

And on no flower-strewn couch shall she be laid,

Nor shall her voice make glad a lover's

Yet if of Death thou hast not any fear, Yea, rather, if thou lov'st him utterly, Thou still may'st woo her ere thou com'st to die,

"Like him that on this day thou sawest lie dead:

For, fearing as I deem the sea-born one, The maid has vowed e'en such a man to wed

As in the course her swift feet can out-

But whose fails herein, his days are done:

He came the nighest that was slain today,

Although with him I deem she did but play.

"Behold, such mercy Atalanta gives

To those that long to win her loveliness; Be wise! be sure that many a maid there lives

Gentler than she, of beauty little less, Whose swimming eyes thy loving words shall bless.

When in some garden, knee set close to knee.

Thou sing'st the song that love may teach to thee."

So to the hunter spake that ancient man, And left him for his own home presently:

But he turned round, and through the moonlight wan

Reached the thick wood, and there 'twixt tree and tree

Distraught he passed the long night feverishly,

Twixt sleep and waking, and at dawn arose

To wage hot war against his speechless foes.

There to the hart's flank seemed his shaft to grow,

As panting down the broad green glades he flew.

There by his horn the Dryads well might know

His thrust against the bear's heart had been true,

And there Adonis' bane his javelin slew, But still in vain through rough and smooth he went,

For none the more his restlessness was spent.

So wandering, he to Argive cities came, And in the lists with valiant men he stood,

And by great deeds he won him praise and fame,

And heaps of wealth for little-valued blood *

But none of all these things, or life, seemed good

Unto his heart, where still unsatisfied A ravenous longing warred with fear and pride.

Therefore it happed when but a month had gone

Since he had left King Scheeneus' city

In hunting-gear again, again alone The forest-bordered meads did he behold, Where still mid thoughts of August's quivering gold

Folk hoed the wheat, and clipped the vine in trust

Of faint October's purple-foaming must.

And once again he passed the peaceful gate.

While to his beating heart his lips did lie.

That owning not victorious love and fate, Said, half aloud, "And here too must I

To win of alien men the mastery,

And gather for my head fresh meed of

And cast new glory on my father's name."

In spite of that, how beat his heart, when first

Folk said to him, "And art thou come

That which still makes our city's name accurst

Among all mothers for its cruelty? Then know indeed that fate is good to Because to-morrow a new luckless one Against the whitefoot maid is pledged to run."

So on the morrow with no curious eyes As once he did, that piteous sight he Saw,

Nor did that wonder in his heart arise As toward the goal the conquering maid gan draw,

Nor did he gaze upon her eyes with awe, Too full the pain of longing filled his

For fear or wonder there to have a part.

But O, how long the night was ere it went!

How long it was before the dawn begun Showed to the wakening birds the sun's intent

That not in darkness should the world be done!

And then, and then, how long before the sun

Bade silently the toilers of the earth

Get forth to fruitless cares or empty

And long it seemed that in the marketplace He stood and saw the chaffering folk go by, Ere from the ivory throne King Schoeneus' face

Looked down upon the murmur royally. But then came trembling that the time was nigh

When he midst pitying looks his love must claim,

And jeering voices must salute his name.

But as the throng he pierced to gain the

His alien face distraught and anxious

What hopeless errand he was bound upon, And, each to each, folk whispered to

behold

His godlike limbs; nay, and one woman

As he went by must pluck him by the sleeve

And pray him yet that wretched love to leave.

For sidling up she said, "Canst thou live twice,

Fair son? canst thou have joyful youth again,

That thus thou goest to the sacrifice

Thy self the victim? nay then, all in vain Thy mother bore her longing and her pain,

And one more maiden on the earth must

Hopeless of joy, nor fearing death and

"O, fool, thou knowest not the compact

That with the three-formed goddess she has made

To keep her from the loving lips of men, And in no saffron gown to be arrayed.

And therewithal with glory to be paid And love of her the moonlit river sees White 'gainst the shadow of the formless trees.

"Come back, and I myself will pray for thee

Unto the sea-born framer of delights,
To give thee her who on the earth may be
The fairest stirrer up to death and fights,
To quench with hopeful days and joyous nights

The flame that doth thy youthful heart

consume:

Come back, nor give thy beauty to the tomb."

How should he listen to her earnest speech?

Words, such as he not once or twice had said

Unto himself, whose meaning scarce could reach

The firm abode of that sad hardihead— He turned about, and through the marketstead

Swiftly he passed, until before the throne

In the cleared space he stood at last alone.

Then said the King, "Stranger, what dost thou here?

Have any of my folk done ill to thee? Or art thou of the forest men in fear? Or art thou of the sad fraternity

Who still will strive my daughter's mates to be.

Staking their lives to win an earthly bliss,

The lonely maid, the friend of Artemis?"

"O King," he said "thou sayest the word indeed;

Nor will I quit the strife till I have won My sweet delight, or death to end my need.

And know that I am called Milanion,
Of King Amphidamas the well-loved
son:

So fear not that to thy old name, O King, Much loss or shame my victory will bring."

"Nay, Prince," said Schoeneus, "welcome to this land

Thou wert indeed, if thou wert here to

Thy strength 'gainst some one mighty of his hand;

Nor would we grudge thee well-won mastery.

But now, why wilt thou come to me to die,

And at my door lay down thy luckiess head,

Swelling the band of the unhappy dead,

"Whose curses even now my heart doth fear?

Lo, I am old, and know what life can be, And what a bitter thing is death anear. O, Son! be wise, and harken unto me, And if no other can be dear to thee.

At least as now, yet is the world full wide.

And bliss in seeming hopeless hearts may hide:

"But if thou losest life, then all is lost."

"Nay, King," Milanion said, "thy words are vain.

Doubt not that I have counted well the cost.

But say, on what day wilt thou that I

Fulfilled delight, or death to end my pain.
Right glad were I if it could be to-day,

And all my doubts at rest for ever lay."

"Nay," said King Schoeneus, "thus it shall not be,

But rather shalt thou let a month go by, And weary with thy prayers for victory What god thou know'st the kindest and most nigh.

So doing, still perchance thou shalt not die:

And with my goodwill wouldst thou have the maid,

For of the equal gods I grow afraid.

"And until then, O Prince, be thou my guest,

And all these troublous things awhile forget."

"Nay," said he, "couldst thou give my soul good rest,

And on mine head a sleepy garland set, Then had I 'scaped the meshes of the net. [word;

Nor shouldst thou hear from me another But now, make sharp thy fearful heading-sword.

"Yet will I do what son of man may do, And promise all the gods may most desire,

That to myself I may at least be true;
And on that day my heart and limbs so tire,

With utmost strain and measureless desire.

That, at the worst, I may but fall asleep When in the sunlight round that sword shall sweep."

He went therewith, nor anywhere would bide,

But unto Argos restlessly did wend;

And there, as one who lays all hope aside, Because the leech has said his life must end.

Silent farewell he bade to foe and friend, And took his way unto the restless sea, For there he deemed his rest and help might be.

Upon the shore of Argolis there stands A temple to the goddess that he sought, That, turned unto the lion-bearing lands, Fenced from the east, of cold winds hath no thought,

Though to no homestead there the sheaves are brought,

No groaning press torments the closeclipped murk,

Lonely the fane stands, far from all men's work.

Pass through a close, set thick with myrtle-trees,

Through the brass doors that guard the holy place,

And entering, hear the washing of the seas

That twice a-day rise high above the base,
And with the south-west urging them,
embrace

The marble feet of her that standeth there

That shrink not, naked though they be and fair.

Small is the fane through which the seawind sings

About Queen Venus' well-wrought image white.

But hung around are many precious things,

The gifts of those who, longing for delight,

Have hung them there within the goddess' sight,

And in return have taken at her hands The living treasures of the Grecian lands.

And thither now has come Milanion, And showed unto the priests' wide open eyes Gifts fairer than all those that there have shone,

Silk cloths, inwrought with Indian fantasies,

And bowls inscribed with sayings of the wise

Above the deeds of foolish living things; And mirrors fit to be the gifts of kings.

And now before the Sea-born One he stands,

By the sweet veiling smoke made dim and soft,

And while the incense trickles from his hands,

And while the odorous smoke-wreaths

And while the odorous smoke-wreaths hang aloft,

Thus doth he pray to her: "O Thou, who oft

Hast holpen man and maid in their distress

Despise me not for this my wretchedness!

"O goddess, among us who dwell below, Kings and great men, great for a little while,

Have pity on the lowly heads that bow, Nor hate the hearts that love them without guile;

Wilt thou be worse than these, and is thy smile

A vain device of him who set thee here, An empty dream of some artificer?

"O great one, some men love, and are ashamed;

Some men are weary of the bonds of love; Yea, and by some men lightly art thou blamed.

That from thy toils their lives they cannot move,

And 'mid the ranks of men their manhood prove.

Alas! O goddess, if thou slavest me

What new immortal can I serve but thee?

"Think then, will it bring honor to thy head If folk say, 'Everything aside he cast

And to all fame and honor was he dead, And to his one hope now is dead at last, Since all unholpen he is gone and past: Ah, the gods love not man, for certainly, He to his helper did not cease to cry.'

"Nay, but thou wilt help; they who died before

Not single-hearted as I deem came here, Therefore unthanked they laid their gifts before Thy stainless feet, still shivering with their fear,

Lest in their eyes their true thought might appear,

Who sought to be the lords of that fair town.

Dreaded of men and winners of renown,

"O Queen, thou knowest I pray not for this:

O set us down together in some place Where not a voice can break our heaven of bliss.

Where nought but rocks and I can see her face.

Softening beneath the marvel of thy grace,

Where not a foot our vanished steps can track—

The golden age, the golden age come back!

"O fairest, hear me now who do thy will,

Plead for thy rebel that she be not slain, But live and love and be thy servant still;

Ah, give her joy and take away my pain, And thus two long-enduring servants gain.

An easy thing this is to do for me,

What need of my vain words to weary thee.

"But none the less, this place will I not leave

Until I needs must go my death to meet, Or at thy hands some happy sign receive That in great joy we twain may one day greet

Thy presence here and kiss thy silver feet, Such as we deem thee, fair beyond all words.

Victorious o'er our servants and our lords,"

Then from the altar back a space he drew,

But from the Queen turned not his face away,

But 'gainst a pillar leaned, until the blue That arched the sky, at ending of the

Was turned to ruddy gold and changing gray,

And clear, but low, the nigh-ebbed windless sea

In the still evening murmured ceaselessly. And there he stood when all the sun was

Nor had he moved, when the dim golden light,

Like the far lustre of a godlike town, Had left the world to seeming hopeless

Had left the world to seeming hopeless night,

Nor would he move the more when wan moonlight

Streamed through the pillars for a little while,

And lighted up the white Queen's changeless smile.

Nought noted he the shallow-flowing sea As step by step it set the wrack a-swim; The yellow torchlight nothing noted he Wherein with fluttering gown and halfbared limb

The temple damsels sung their midnight hymn:

And nought the doubled stillness of the fane

When they were gone and all was hushed again.

But when the waves had touched the marble base,

And steps the fish swim over twice a-day, The dawn beheld him sunken in his place

Upon the floor; and sleeping there he lay.

Not heeding aught the little jets of spray The roughened sea brought nigh, across him cast,

For as one dead all thought from him had passed.

Yet long before the sun had showed his head,

Long ere the varied hangings on the wall

Had gained once more their blue and green and red,

He rose as one some well-known sign doth call

When war upon the city's gates doth fall,

And scarce like one fresh risen out of sleep,

He'gan again his broken watch to keep.

Then he turned round; not for the seagull's cry

That wheeled above the temple in his flight,

Not for the fresh south wind that lovingly Breathed on the new-born day and dying night,

But some strange hope 'twixt fear and great delight

Drew round his face, now flushed, now pale and wan,

And still constrained his eyes the sea to scan.

Now a faint light lit up the southern sky Not sun or moon, for all the world was gray.

But this a bright cloud seemed, that drew anigh,

Lighting the dull waves that beneath it lay

As toward the temple still it took its way,

And still grew greater, till Milanion
Saw nought for dazzling light that round him shone.

But as he staggered with his arms outspread,

Delicious unnamed odors breathed around.

For languid happiness he bowed his head.

And with wet eyes sank down upon the ground,

Nor wished for aught, nor any dream he found

To give him reason for that happiness, Or make him ask more knowledge of his

At last his eyes were cleared, and he could see

Through happy tears the goddess face to face

With that faint image of Divinity,

Whose well-wrought smile and dainty changeless grace

Until that morn so gladdened all the

Then he, unwitting cried aloud her name And covered up his eyes for fear and shame.

But through the stillness he her voice could hear

Piercing his heart with joy scarce bearable,

That said, "Milanion, wherefore dost thou fear,

I am not hard to those who love me well:

List to what I a second time will tell,
And thou mayest hear perchance, and live to save

The cruel maiden from a loveless grave.

"See, by my feet three golden apples

Such fruit among the heavy roses falls, Such fruit my watchful damsels carefully

Store up within the best loved of my walls.

Ancient Damascus, where the lover calls Above my unseen head, and faint and light

The rose-leaves flutter round me in the night.

"And note, that these are not alone most fair

With heavenly gold, but longing strange they bring

Unto the hearts of men, who will not care

Beholding these, for any once-loved thing Till round the shining sides their fingers cling.

And thou shalt see thy well-girt swiftfoot maid

By sight of these amidst her glory stayed.

"For bearing these within a scrip with thee,

When first she heads thee from the starting-place

Cast down the first one for her eyes to see.

And when she turns aside make ou apace,
And if again she heads thee in the race

Spare not the other two to cast aside. If she not long enough behind will bide.

"Farewell, and when has come the happy time

That she Diana's raiment must unbind And all the world seems blessed with Saturn's clime,

And thou with eager arms about her twined

Beholdest first her gray eyes growing kind,

Surely, O trembler, thou shalt scarcely

Forget the Helper of unhappy men."

Milanion raised his head at this last word

For now so soft and kind she seemed to be

No longer of her Godhead was he feared; Too late he looked; for nothing could he see

But the white image glimmering doubtfully In the departing twilight cold and gray, And those three apples on the step that lay,

These then he caught up quivering with delight,

Yet fearful lest it all might be a dream; And though aweary with the watchful night,

And sleepless nights of longing, still did

He could not sleep; but yet the first sunbeam

That smote the fane across the heaving

Shone on him laid in calm, untroubled sleep.

But little ere the noontide did he rise, And why he felt so happy scarce could tell

Until the gleaming apples met his eyes.

Then leaving the fair place where this befell

Oft he looked back as one who loved it well,

Then homeward to the haunts of men, 'gan wend

To bring all things unto a happy end.

Now has the lingering month at last gone by, Again are all folk round the running gain are all folk round the running place,

Nor other seems the dismal pageantry
Than heretofore, but that another face Looks o'er the smooth course ready for the race.

For now, beheld of all, Milanion Stands on the spot he twice has look'd upon.

But yet—what change is this that holds the maid?

Does she indeed see in his glittering eye More than disdain of the sharp shearing blade,

Some happy hope of help and victory? The others seem'd to say, "We come to Look down upon us for a little while, That, dead, we may bethink us of thy smile."

But he—what look of mastery was this He cast on her? why were his lips so red; Why was his face so flush'd with happiness? So looks not one who deems himself but dead,

E'en if to death he bows a willing head; So rather looks a god well pleas'd to find Some earthly damsel fashion'd to his mind.

Why must she drop her lids before his gaze,

And even as she casts adown her eyes Redden to note his eager glance of praise, And wish that she were clad in other guise?

Why must the memory to her heart arise Of things unnoticed when they first were heard,

Some lover's song, some answering maiden's word?

What makes these longings, vague, without a name,

And this vain pity never felt before,

This sudden languor, this contempt of fame,

This tender sorrow for the time past o'er, These doubts that grow each minute more and more?

Why does she tremble as the time grows near,

And weak defeat and woeful victory fear?

But while she seem'd to hear her beating heart,

Above their heads the trumpet blast rang

And forth they sprang, and she must play her part;

Then flew her white feet, knowing not a doubt,

Though, slackening once, she turn'd her head about,

But then she cried aloud and faster fled Than e'er before, and all men deemed him dead.

But with no sound he raised aloft his hand,

And thence what seemed a ray of light there flew

And past the maid rolled on along the sand;

Then trembling she her feet together drew

And in her heart a strong desire there grew

To have the toy; some god she thought had given [heaven.

That gift to her, to make of earth a

Then from the course with eager steps she ran.

And in her odorous bosom laid the gold. But when she turned again, the greatlimbed man.

Now well ahead she failed not to behold, And mindful of her glory waxing cold, Sprang up and followed him in hot pursuit.

Though with one hand she touched the golden fruit.

Note too, the bow that she was wont to bear

She laid aside to grasp the glittering prize,

And o'er her shoulder from the quiver fair

Three arrows fell and lav before her eves Unnoticed, as amidst the people's cries She sprang to head the strong Milanion, Who now the turning-post had well-nigh won.

But as he set his mighty hand on it White fingers underneath his own were laid.

And white limbs from his dazzled eyes did flit.

Then he the second fruit cast by the maid:

She ran awhile, and then as one afraid Wavered and stopped, and turned and made no stay.

Until the globe with its bright fellow lay.

Then, as a troubled glance she cast around,

Now far ahead the Argive could she see, And in her garment's hem one hand she wound

To keep the double prize, and strenuously

Sped o'er the course, and little doubt had she

To win the day, though now but scanty space

Was left betwixt nim and the winning place.

Short was the way unto such winged

Quickly she gained upon him till at last He turned about her eager eyes to meet And from his hand the third fair apple

She wavered not, but turned and ran so fast

After the prize that should her bliss ful-

That in her hand it lay ere it was still.

Nor did she rest, but turned about to

Once more, an unblest woeful victory— And vet—and vet—why does her breath begin

To fail her, and her feet drag heavily? Why fails she now to see if far or nigh

The goal is? why do her gray eyes grow

Why do these tremors run through every

She spreads her arms abroad some stay to find

Else must she fall, indeed, and findeth this.

A strong man's arms about her body twined.

Nor may she shudder now to feel his kiss.

So wrapped she is in new unbroken bliss:

Made happy that the foe the prize hath won.

She weeps glad tears for all her glory done.

SHATTER the trumpet, hew adown the posts!

Upon the brazen altar break the sword, And scatter incense to appease the ghosts

Of those who died here by their own award.

Bring forth the image of the mighty Lord.

And her who unseen o'er the runners hung,

And did a deed for ever to be sung.

Here are the gathered folk; make no delay,

Open King Scheeneus' well-filled treasury.

Bring out the gifts long hid from light. of day, The golden bowls o'erwrought with imagery,

Gold chains, and unguents brought from over sea,

The saffron gown the old Phænician brought,

Within the temple of the Goddess wrought.

O ye, O damsels, who shall never see Her, that Love's servant bringeth now to you.

Returning from another victory,

In some cool bower do all that now is

Since she in token of her service new Shall give to Venus offerings rich enow, Her maiden zone, her arrows and her bow. 1868.

SONG FROM THE STORY OF CUPID

O PENSIVE, tender maid, downcast and shy,

Who turnest pale e'en at the name of love,

And with flushed face must pass the elm-tree by,

Ashamed to hear the passionate gray dove

Moan to his mate, thee too the god shall move,

Thee too the maidens shall ungird one day,

And with thy girdle put thy shame away.

What, then, and shall white winter ne'er be done

Because the glittering frosty morn is fair?

Because against the early-setting sun Bright show the gilded boughs, though waste and bare?

Because the robin singeth free from care?

Ah! these are memories of a better day When on earth's face the lips of summer lay.

Come, then, beloved one, for such as thee

Love loveth, and their hearts he knoweth well,

Who hoard their moments of felicity, As misers hoard the medals that they tell,

Lest on the earth but paupers they should dwell:

"We hide our love to bless another day; The world is hard, youth passes quick," they say.

Ah, little ones, but if ye could forget
Amidst your outpoured love that you must die, [querors yet,
Then ye, my servants, were death's con-

And love to you should be eternity,
How quick soever might the days go by:
Yes, ye are made immortal on the day
Ye cease the dusty grains of time to weigh.

Thou harkenest, love? O make no semblance then

That thou art loved, but as thy custom is

Turn thy gray eyes away from eyes of men.

With hands down-dropped, that tremble with thy bliss,

With hidden eyes, take thy first lover's kiss;

Call this eternity which is to-day,

Nor dream that this our love can pass away. 1868.

JUNE

O June, O June, that we desired so, Wilt thou not make us happy on this day?

Across the river thy soft breezes blow Sweet with the scent of beanfields far

Above our heads rustle the aspens gray, Calm is the sky with harmless clouds beset,

No thought of storm the morning vexes yet.

See, we have left our hopes and fears behind

To give our very hearts up unto thee;
What better place than this then could we find

By this sweet stream that knows not of the sea,

That guesses not the city's misery,
This little stream whose hamlets scarce

This little stream whose hamlets scarce have names,

This far-off, lonely mother of the Thames?

Here then, O June, thy kindness will we take;

And if indeed but pensive men we seem.
What should we do? thou wouldst not have us wake

From out the arms of this rare happy dream

And wish to leave the murmur of the stream.

The rustling boughs, the twitter of the birds.

And all thy thrusand peaceful happy words. 1868.

AUGUST

Across the gap made by our English hinds, hinds,

Amidst the Roman's handiwork, behold
Far off the long-roofed church; the shepherd binds

The withy round the hurdles of his fold, Down in the foss the river fed of old, That through long lapse of time has grown to be

The little grassy valley that you see.

Rest here awhile, not yet the eve is still,

The bees are wandering yet, and you may hear

The barley mowers on the trenchéd hill, The sheep-bells, and the restless changing weir.

All little sounds made musical and clear Beneath the sky that burning August gives,

While yet the thought of glorious Summer lives.

Ah, love! such happy days, such days as these,

Must we still waste them, craving for the best,

Like lovers o'er the painted images
Of those who once their yearning hearts have blessed?

Have we been happy on our day of rest?

Thine eyes say "yes,"—but if it came again,

Perchance its ending would not seem so vain. 1868.

SONG FROM OGIER THE DANE

HEC

In the white-flowered hawthorn brake, Love, be merry for my sake; Twine the blossoms in my hair, Kiss me where I am most fair— Kiss me, love! for who knoweth What thing cometh after death?

ILLE

Nay, the garlanded gold hair Hides thee where thou art most fair; Hides the rose-tinged hills of snow— Ah, sweet love. I have thee now! Kiss me, love! for who knoweth What thing cometo after death?

HÆC

Shall we weep for a dead day, Or set Sorrow in our way? Hidden by my golden hair, Wilt thou weep that sweet days wear? Kiss me, love! for who knoweth What thing cometh after death?

ILLE

Weep, O Love, the days that flit, Now, while I can feel thy breath; Then may I remember it Sad and old, and near my death. Kiss me, love! for who knoweth What thing comethafter death? 1868.

SONG FROM THE STORY OF ACON-TIUS AND CYDIPPE

FAIR is the night and fair the day, Now April is forgot of May, Now into June May falls away; Fair day, fair night, O give me back The tide that all fair things did lack Except my love, except my sweet!

Blow back, O wind! thou art not kind, Though thou art sweet; thou hast no mind

Her hair about my sweet to wind; O flowery sward, though thou art bright, I praise thee not for thy delight, Thou hast not kissed her silver feet.

Thou know'st her not, O rustling tree, What dost thou then to shadow me, Whose shade her breast did never see? O flowers, in vain ye bow adown! Ye have not felt her odorous gown Brush past your heads my lips to meet.

Flow on, great river—thou mayst deem
That far away, a summer stream,
Thou sawest her limbs amidst thee gleam
And kissed her foot, and kissed her knee,
Yet get thee swift unto the sea!
With nought of true thou wilt me greet.

And thou that men call by my name, O helpless one, hast thou no shame That thou must even look the same, As while agone, as while agone, When thou and she were left alone, And hands, and lips, and tears did meet?

Grow weak and pine, lie down to die, O body in thy misery. Because short time and sweet goes by: O foolish heart, how weak thou art! Break, break, because thou needs must part

From thine own love, from thine own sweet!

L'ENVOI

THE EARTHLY PARADISE

HERE are we for the last time face to face,

Thou and I, Book, before I bid thee speed Upon thy perilous journey to that place For which I have done on thee pilgrim's weed,

Striving to get thee all things for thy need—

-I love thee, whatso time or men may say

Of the poor singer of an empty day.

Good reason why I love thee, e'en if thou

Be mocked or clean forgot as time wears on;

For ever as thy fashioning did grow, Kind word and praise because of thee I

From those without whom were my world all gone,

My hope fallen dead, my singing cast away,

And I set soothly in an empty day.

I love thee; yet this last time must it be That thou must hold thy peace and I must speak,

Lest if thou babble I begin to see

Thy gear too thin, thy limbs and heart too weak,

To find the land thou goest forth to seek—

Though what harm if thou die upon the way,

Thou idle singer of an empty day?

But though this land desired thou never reach.

Yet folk who know it mayst thou meet, or death;

Therefore a word unto thee would I teach To answer these, who, noting thy weak breath,

Thy wandering eyes, thy heart of little faith,

May make thy fond desire a sport and play

Mocking the singer of an empty day.

That land's name, say'st thou? and the road thereto?

Nay, Book, thou mockest, saying thou know'st it not;

Surely no book of verse I ever knew
But ever was the heart within him hot
To gain the Land of Matters Unforgot——There, now we both laugh—as the whole world may,

At us poor singers of an empty day.

Nay, let it pass, and harken! Hast thou heard

That therein I believe I have a friend, Of whom for love I may not be afeared? It is to him indeed I bid thee wend;

Yea, he perchance may meet thee ere thou end,

Dying so far off from the hedge of bay, Thou idle singer of an empty day!

Well, think of him, I bid thee, on the road,

And if it hap that midst of thy defeat, Fainting beneath thy follies' heavy load, My Master, Geoffrey Chaucer, thou do meet.

Then shalt thou win a space of rest full sweet;

Then be thou bold, and speak the words I say,

The idle singer of an empty day!

"O Master, O thou great of heart and tongue,

Thou well mayst ask me why I wander here,

In raiment rent of stories oft besung!
But of thy gentleness draw thou anear,
And then the heart of one who held thee
dear

Mayst thou behold! So near as that I lay Unto the singer of an empty day.

"For this he ever said, who sent me forth

To seek a place amid thy company; That howsoever little was my worth,

Yet was he worth e'en just so much as I;

He said that rhyme hath little skill to lie;

Nor feigned to cast his worser part away; In idle singing for an empty day.

"I have beheld him tremble oft enough At things he could not choose but trust to me,

Although he knew the world was wise and rough;

And never did he fail to let me see
His love,—his folly and faithlessness, maybe;

And still in turn I gave him voice to pray Such prayers as cling about an empty day.

"Thou, keen-eyed, reading me, mayst read him through,

For surely little is there left behind;

No power great deeds unnameable to do; No knowledge for which words he may not find,

No love of things as vague as autumn wind—

-Earth of the earth lies hidden by my clay,

The idle singer of an empty day!

"Children we twain are, saith he, late made wise

In love, but in all else most childish still.

And seeking still the pleasure of our eyes, And what our ears with sweetest sounds may fill:

Not fearing Love, lest these things he should kill:

Howe'er his pain by pleasure doth he lay, Making a strange tale of an empty day.

"Death have we hated, knowing not what it meant;

Life have we loved, through green leaf and through sere,

Though still the less we knew of its intent;

The Earth and Heaven through countless year on year,

Slow changing, were to us but curtains fair.

Hung round about a little room, where play

Weeping and laughter of man's empty day.

"O Master, if thine heart could love us yet.

Spite of things left undone, and wrongly done,

Some place in loving hearts then should we get,

For thou, sweet-souled, didst never stand alone,

But knew'st the joy and woe of many an

-By lovers dead, who live through thee, we pray,

Help thou us singers of an empty day!"

Fearest thou, Book, what answer thou mayst gain

Lest he should scorn thee, and thereof thou die?

Nay, it shall not be.—Thou mayst toil in vain.

And never draw the House of Fame anigh;

Yet he and his shall know whereof we cry,

Shall call it not ill done to strive to lay
The ghosts that crowd about life's empty day.

Then let the others go! and if indeed In some old garden thou and I have wrought,

And made fresh flowers spring up from hoarded seed,

And fragrance of old days and deeds have brought

Back to folk weary; all was not for nought.

—No little part it was for me to play— The idle singer of an empty day. 1870.

THE SEASONS

Spring. Spring am I, too soft of heart Much to speak ere I depart:
Ask the Summer-tide to prove
The abundance of my love.

Summer. Summer looked for long am J Much shall change or e'er I die Prithee take it not amiss Though I weary thee with bliss.

Autumn. Laden Autumn here I stand Worn of heart, and weak of hand: Nought but rest seems good to me, Speak the word that sets me free.

Winter. I am Winter, that do keep Longing safe amidst of sleep: Who shall say if I were dead What should be remembered? 1871.

ERROR AND LOSS 1

Upon an eve I sat me down and wept,
Because the world to me seemed nowise
good;

Still autumn was it, and the meadows slept,

The misty hills dreamed, and the silent wood [mood: Seemed listening to the sorrow of my

1 Originally with the title The Dark Wood.

I knew not if the earth with me did grieve,

Or if it mock'd my grief that bitter eve.

Then 'twixt my tears a maiden did I see, Who drew anigh me on the leaf-strewn grass.

Then stood and gazed upon me pitifully With grief-worn eyes, until my woe did

pass

From me to her, and tearless now I was, And she mid tears was asking me of one She long had sought unaided and alone.

I knew not of him, and she turned away Into the dark wood, and my own great pain

Still held me there, till dark had slain the day,

And perished at the gray dawn's hand

again;
Then from the wood a voice cried: "Ah,

in vain,

In vain I seek thee, O thou bitter-sweet!
In what lone land are set thy longed-for feet?"

Then I looked up, and lo, a man there came

From midst the trees, and stood regarding me

Until my tears were dried for very shame;

Then he cried out: "O mourner, where is she

Whom I have sought o'er every land and sea?

I love her and she loveth me, and still We meet no more than green hill meeteth hill."

With that he passed on sadly, and I knew That these had met and missed in the dark night,

Blinded by blindness of the world untrue, That hideth love and maketh wrong of right.

Then midst my pity for their lost delight, Yet more with barren longing I grew weak,

Yet more I mourned that I had none to seek. 1871.

THE DAY OF LOVE

(From Love is enough)

Dawn talks to-day Over dew-gleaming flowers, Night flies away
Till the resting of hours:

Fresh are thy feet

And with dreams thine eyes glistening,

Thy still lips are sweet
Though the world is a-listening.

O Love, set a word in my mouth for our meeting,

Cast thine arms round about me to stay my heart's beating!

O fresh day, O fair day, O long day made ours!

Morn shall meet noon

While the flower-stems yet move,

Though the wind dieth soon And the clouds fade above.

Loved lips are thine
As I tremble and harken;
Bright thine eyes shine,

Though the leaves thy brow darken. O Love, kiss me into silence, lest no word avail me,

Stay my head with thy bosom lest breath
and life fail me!

O sweet day, O rich day, made long for our love!

Late day shall greet eve,
And the full blossoms shake,

For the wind will not leave
The tall trees while they wake.
Eves soft with bliss,

Come nigher and nigher!
Sweet mouth I kiss,

Tell me all thy desire!
Let us speak, love, together some words of our story,

That our lips as they part may remember the glory!

O soft day, O calm day, made clear for our sake!

Eve shall kiss night,

And the leaves stir like rain

As the wind stealeth light
O'er the grass of the plain.

Unseen are thine eyes

Mid the dreamy night's sleeping, And on my mouth there lies

The dear rain of thy weeping.
Hold, silence, love, speak not of the sweet day departed,

Cling close to me, love, lest I waken sad hearted!

O kind day, O dear day, short day, come again! 1873.

FINAL CHORUS

(From LOVE IS ENOUGH)

Love is enough: ho ye who seek saving,
(to no further; come hither: there have been who have found it.

And these know the House of Fulfilment of Craving:

These know the Cup with the roses around it.

These know the World's Wound and the balm that hath bound it:

Cry out, the World heedeth not, "Love, lead us home!"

He leadeth, He harkeneth, He cometh to you-ward;

Set your faces as steel to the fears that assemble

Round his good for the faint, and his scourge for the froward:

Lo his lips, how with tales of last kisses they tremble!

Lo his eyes of all sorrow that may not dissemble!

Cry out, for he heedeth, "O Love, lend us home!"

O harken the words of his voice of compassion:

"Come cling round about me, ye faithful who sicken

Of the weary unrest and the world's passing fashion!

As the rain in mil-morning your troubles shall thicken.

But surely within you some Godhead doth quicken,

As ye cry to me heeding, and leading you home

"Come—pain ye shall have, and be blind to the ending!

Come -fear ye shall have, mid the sky's overcasting!

Come -change ye shall have, for far are ye wending!

Come -no crown ye shall have for your thirst and your fasting.

But the kissed lips of Love and fair life everlasting!

Cry out, for one heedeth, who leadeth

Is he gone? was he with us?—ho ye who seek saving.

Go no further: come hither: for have we not found it? Here is the House of Fulfilment of Craving:

Here is the Cup with the roses around it:

The World's Wound well healed, and the balm that hath bound it:

Cry out! for he heedeth, fair Love that led home. 1873.

THE VOICE OF TOIL

I HEARD men saying, Leave hope and praying,

All days shall be as all have been;

To-day and to-morrow bring fear and

The never ending toil between.

When Earth was younger mid toil and hunger,

In hope we strove, and our hands were strong:

Then great men led us, with words they fed us,

And bade us right the earthly wrong.

Go read in story their deeds and glory, Their names amidst the nameless dead; Turn then from lying to us slow-dying In that good world to which they led;

Where fast and faster our iron master, The thing we made, for ever drives, Bids us grind treasure and fashion pleas-

For other hopes and other lives.

Where home is a hovel and dull we grovel,

Forgetting that the world is fair;

Where no babe we cherish, lest its very soul perish:

Where mirth is crime, and love a snare.

Who now shall lead us, what god shall heed us

As we lie in the hell our hands have won? For us are no rulers but fools and befoolers,

The great are fallen, the wise men gone.

I heard men saying, Leave tears and praying,

The sharp kuife heedeth not the sheep: Are we not stronger than the rich and the wronger,

When day breaks over dreams and sleep?

Come, shoulder to shoulder, ere the world grows older!

Help lies in nought but thee and me: Hope is before us, the long years that bore us

Bore leaders more than men may be.

Let dead hearts tarry and trade and marry.

And trembling nurse their dreams of mirch.

While we the living our lives are giving To bring the bright new world to birth.

Come, shoulder to shoulder, ere earth grows older!

The cause spreads over land and sea;
Now the world shaketh, and fear
awaketh,

And joy at last for thee and me.

1884.

NO MASTER

Saith man to man, We've heard and known

That we no master need
To live upon this earth our own,
In fair and manly deed.
The grief of slaves long passed away

For us hath forged the chain,
Till now each worker's patient day
Builds up the House of Pain.

And we, shall we too, crouch and quail,
Ashamed, afraid of strife,
And lest our lives untimely fail
Embrace the Death in Life?
Nay, cry aloud, and have no fear,
We few against the world;
Awake, arise! the hope we bear
Against the curse is hurled.

It grows and grows—are we the same,
The feeble band, the few?
Or what are these with eyes aflame,
And hands to deal and do?
This is the host that bears the word,
"NO MASTER HIGH OR LOW"—
A lightning flame, a shearing sword,
A storm to overthrow. 1884.

THE DAY IS COMING

Come hither, lads, and harken, for a tale there is to tell,

Of the wonderful days a-coming, when all shall be better than well.

And the tale shall be told of a country, a land in the midst of the sea, And folk shall call it England in the days that are going to be.

There more than one in a thousand in the days that are yet to come,

Shall have some hope of the morrow, some joy of the ancient home.

For then, laugh not, but listen to this strange tale of mine,

All folk that are in England shall be better lodged than swine.

Then a man shall work and bethink him, and rejoice in the deeds of his hand,

Nor yet come home in the even too faint and weary to stand.

Men in that time a-coming shall work and have no fear

For to-morrow's lack of earning and the hunger-wolf anear.

I tell you this for a wonder, that no man then shall be glad Of his fellow's fall and mishap to snatch at the work he had.

For that which the worker winneth shall then be his indeed,

Nor shall half be reaped for nothing by him that sowed no seed.

O strange new wonderful justice! But for whom shall we gather the gain? For ourselves and for each of our fellows, and no hand shall labor in vain.

Then all Mine and all Thine shall be Ours, and no more shall any man crave For riches that serve for nothing but to fetter a friend for a slave.

And what wealth then shall be left us when none shall gather gold

To buy his friend in the market, and pinch and pine the sold?

Nay, what save the lovely city, and the little house on the hill,

And the wastes and the woodland beauty, and the happy fields we till;

And the homes of ancient stories, the tombs of the mighty dead;

And the wise men seeking out marvels, and the poet's teeming head;

And the painter's hand of wonder; and the marvelous fiddle-bow,

And the banded choirs of music: all those that do and know.

For all these shall be ours and all men's; nor shall any lack a share

Of the toil and the gain of living in the days when the world grows fair.

Ah! such are the days that shall be! But what are the deeds of to-day,

In the days of the years we dwell in, that wear our lives away?

Why, then, and for what are we waiting? There are three words to speak;

WE WILL IT, and what is the foeman but the dream-strong wakened

and weak?

O why and for what are we waiting?
while our brothers droop and die,
And on every wind of the heavens a wasted life goes by.

How long shall they reproach us where crowd on crowd they dwell,

Poor ghosts of the wicked city, the gold-crushed, hungry hell?

Through squalid life they labored, in sordid grief they died,

Those sons of a mighty mother, those props of England's pride.

They are gone; there is none can undo it, nor save our souls from the curse;

But many a million cometh, and shall they be better or worse?

It is we must answer and hasten, and open wide the door

For the rich man's hurrying terror, and the slow-foot hope of the poor.

Yea, the voiceless wrath of the wretched, and their unlearned discontent,

We must give it voice and wisdom till the waiting-tide be spent.

Come, then, since all things call us, the living and the dead,

And o'er the weltering tangle a glimmering light is shed. Come, then, let us cast off fooling, and put by ease and rest,

For the Cause alone is worthy till the good days bring the best.

Come, join in the only battle wherein no man can fail.

Where whose fadeth and dieth, yet his deed shall still prevail.

Ah! come, cast off all fooling, for this, at least, we know:

That the Dawn and the Day is coming, and forth the Banners go. 1885.

THE DAYS THAT WERE

(MOTTO OF THE HOUSE OF THE WOLFINGS)

WHILES in the early winter eve We pass amid the gathering night Some homestead that we had to leave Years past: and see its candles bright Shine in the room beside the door Where we were merry years agone, But now must never enter more, As still the dark road drives us on. E'en so the world of men may turn At even of some hurried day And see the ancient glimmer burn Across the waste that hath no way; Then, with that faint light in its eyes, Awhile I bid it linger near And nurse in waving memories The bitter sweet of days that were. 1889.

THE DAY OF DAYS

EACH eve earth falleth down the dark, As though its hope were o'er; Yet lurks the sun when day is done Behind to-morrow's door.

Gray grows the dawn while men-folk sleep,

Unseen spreads on the light,
Till the thrush sings to the colored

things,
And earth forgets the night.

No otherwise wends on our Hope: E'en as a tale that's told
Are fair lives lost, and all the cost
Of wise and true and bold.

We've toiled and failed; we spake the word;

None harkened; dumb we lie; Our Hope is dead, the seed we spread Fell o'er the earth to die. What's this? For joy our hearts stand

And life is loved and dear,

The lost and found the Cause hath crowned.

1890. The Day of Days is here.

THE BURGHERS' BATTLE

THICK rise the spear-shafts o'er the land That erst the harvest bore; The sword is heavy in the hand, And we return no more. The light wind waves the Ruddy Fox, Our banner of the war, And ripples in the Running Ox, And we return no more. Across our stubble acres now The teams go four and four; But out-worn elders guide the plough, And we return no more.

And now the women heavy-eyed Turn through the open door From gazing down the highway wide, Where we return no more.

The shadows of the fruited close Dapple the feast-hall floor;

There lie our dogs and dream and doze, And we return no more.

Down from the minster tower to-day Fall the soft chimes of yore

Amidst the chattering jackdaws' play: And we return no more.

But underneath the streets are still; Noon, and the market's o'er!

Back go the goodwives o'er the hill;

For we return no more. What merchant to our gates shall come?

What wise man bring us lore? What abbot ride away to Rome,

Now we return no more?

What mayor shall rule the hall we built? Whose scarlet sweep the floor? What judge shall doom the robber's guilt,

Now we return no more? New houses in the streets shall rise Where builded we before,

Of other stone wrought otherwise;

For we return no more. And crops shall cover field and hill Unlike what once they bore,

And all be done without our will,

Now we return no more.

Look up! the arrows streak the sky, The horns of battle roar; The long spears lower and draw nigh,

And we return no more.

Remember how beside the wain,

We spoke the word of war, And sowed this harvest of the plain, And we return no more. Lay spears about the Ruddy Fox!

The days of old are o'er;

Heave sword about the Running Ox! For we return no more. 1891.

AGNES AND THE HILL-MAN

TRANSLATED FROM THE DANISH

AGNES went through the meadows a weeping,

Fowl are a-singing.

There stood the hill-man heed thereof keeping.

Agnes, fair Agnes!

"Come to the hill, fair Agnes, with me, The reddest of gold will I give unto thee!"

Twice went Agnes the hill round about, Then wended within, left the fair world without.

In the hillside bode Agnes, three years thrice told o'er,

For the green earth sithence fell she longing full sore.

There she sat, and lullaby sang in her singing,

And she heard how the bells of England were ringing.

Agnes before her true-love did stand: "May I wend to the church of the English Land?"

"To England's Church well mayst thou be gone,

So that no hand thou lay the red gold

"So that when thou art come the churchvard anear

Thou cast not abroad thy golden hair.

"So that when thou standest the church within

To thy mother on bench thou never win.

"So that when thou hearest the high God's name,

No knee unto earth thou bow to the same."

Hand she laid on all gold that was there, And cast abroad her golden hair.

And when the church she stool within To her mother on bench straight did she win.

And when she heard the high God's name,

Knee unto earth she bowed to the same.

When all the mass was sung to its end Home with her mother dear did she wend.

"Come, Agnes, into the hillside to me, For thy seven small sons greet sorely for thee 1"

"Let them greet, let them greet, as they will have to do;

For never again will I hearken thereto!"

Weird laid he on her, sore sickness he wrought.

Fowl are a-singing.

That self-same hour to death was she brought.

Agnes, fair Agnes. 1891.

ICELAND FIRST SEEN

Lo from our loitering ship a new land at last to be seen;

Toothed rocks down the side of the firth on the east guard a weary wide lea,

And black slope the hill-sides above, striped adown with their desolate green:

And a peak rises up on the west from the meeting of cloud and of sea,

Foursquare from base unto point like the building of Gods that have been,

The last of that waste of the mountains all cloud-wreathed and snow-flecked and gray,

And bright with the dawn that began just now at the ending of day.

Ah! what came we forth for to see that our hearts are so hot with desire?

Is it enough for our rest the right of this

Is it enough for our rest the sight of this desolate strand.

And the mountain-waste voiceless as death but for winds that may sleep not nor tire?

Why do we long to wend forth through the length and breadth of a land,

Dreadful with grinding of ice, and record of scarce hidden fire,

But that there 'mid the gray grassy dales sore scarred by the ruining streams Lives the tale of the Northland of old and the undying glory of dreams?

O land, as some cave by the sea where the treasures of old have been laid.

The sword it may be of a king whose name was the turning of fight;

Or the staff of some wise of the world that many things made and unmade.

Or the ring of a woman maybe whose woe is grown wealth and delight.

No wheat and no wine grows above it,

no wheat and no wine grows above it, no orchard for blossom and shade; The few ships that sail by its blackness but doem it the mouth of a grave;

Yet sure when the world shall awaken,

Yet sure when the world shall awaker this too shall be mighty to save.

Or rather, O land, if a marvel it seemeth that men ever sought

Thy wastes for a field and a garden fulfilled of all wonder and doubt,

And feasted amidst of the winter when the fight of the year had been fought, Whose plunder all gathered together was little to babble about:

Cry aloud from thy wastes, O thou land, "Not for this nor for that was I

wrought

Amid waning of realms and of riches and death of things worshipped and sure,

I abide here the spouse of a God, and I made and I make and endure."

O Queen of the grief without knowledge, of the courage that may not avail,

Of the longing that may not attain, of the love that shall never forget,

More joy than the gladness of laughter thy voice hath amidst of its wail:

More hope than of pleasure fulfilled amidst of thy blindness is set;

More glorious than gaining of all, thine unfaltering hand that shall fail:

For what is the mark on thy brow but the brand that thy Brynhild doth bear?

Lone once, and loved and undone by a love that no ages outwear.

Ah! when thy Balder comes back, and bears from the heart of the Sun.

Peace and the healing of pain, and the wisdom that waiteth no more;

And the lilies are laid on thy brow

'mid the crown of the deeds thou hast done:

And the roses spring up by thy feet that the rocks of the wilderness wore.

Ah! when thy Balder comes back and we gather the gains he hath won,

Shall we not linger a little to talk of thy sweetness of old.

Yea, turn back awhile to thy travail whence the gods stood aloof to behold?

TO THE MUSE OF THE NORTH

O MUSE that swayest the sad Northern

Song, Thy right hand full of smiting and of wrong,

Thy left hand holding pity; and thy breast

Heaving with hope of that so certain rest:

Thou, with the grav eyes kind and unafraid,

The soft lips trembling not, though they havê said

The doom of the World and those that dwell therein.

The lips that smile not though thy children win The fated Love that draws the fated

Death. O, borne adown the fresh stream of thy breath.

Let some word reach my ears and touch my heart,

That, if it may be, I may have a part

In that great sorrow of thy children

That vexed the brow, and bowed adown the head.

Whitened the hair, made life a wondrous dream.

And death the murmur of a restful stream.

But left no stain upon those souls of thine

Whose greatness through the tangled world doth shine.

O Mother, and Love and Sister all in one.

Come thou; for sure I am enough alone That thou thine arms about my heart shouldst throw,

And wrap me in the grief of long ago. 1891.

DRAWING NEAR THE LIGHT

Lo, when we wade the tangled wood. In haste and hurry to be there, Nought seem its leaves and blossoms good.

For all that they be fashioned fair.

But looking up, at last we see The glimmer of the open light, From o'er the place where we would be; Then grow the very brambles bright.

So now, amidst our day of strife, With many a matter glad we play, When once we see the light of life Gleam through the tangle of to-day.

A SONG IN TIME OF ORDER

Push hard across the sand,
For the salt wind gathers breath;
Shoulder and wrist and hand,
Push hard as the push of death.

The wind is as iron that rings,
The foam-heads loosen and flee;
It swells and welters and swings,
The pulse of the tide of the sea.

And up on the yellow cliff
The long corn flickers and shakes;
Push, for the wind holds stiff,
And the gunwale dips and rakes.

Good hap to the fresh fierce weather,
The quiver and beat of the sea!
While three men hold together
The kingdoms are less by three.

Out to the sea with her there,
Out with her over the sand,
Let the kings keep the earth for their share!
We have done with the sharers of land.

They have tied the world in a tether,
They have bought over God with a

While three men hold together, The kingdoms are less by three.

We have done with the kisses that sting,
The thief's mouth red from the feast,
The blood on the hands of the king,
And the lie at the lips of the priest.

Will they tie the winds in a tether,
Put a bit in the jaws of the sea?
While three men hold together,
The kingdoms are less by three.

Let our flag run out straight in the wind! The old red shall be floated again When the ranks that are thin shall be thinned,

When the names that were twenty are ten;

When the devil's riddle is mastered And the galley-bench creaks with a Pope,

We shall see Buonaparte the bastard Kick heels with his throat in a rope.

While the shepherd sets wolves on his sheep

And the emperor halters his Kine, While Shame is a watchman asleep And Faith is a keeper of swine.

Let the wind shake our flag like a feather,

Like the plumes of the foam of the sea!

While three men hold together,
The kingdoms are less by three.

All the world has its burdens to bear, From Cayenne to the Austrian whips:

Forth, with the rain in our hair
And the salt sweet foam in our lips:

In the teeth of the hard glad weather, In the blown wet face of the sea; While three men hold together, The kingdoms are less by three. 1869.

CHORUSES FROM ATALANTA IN CALYDON

THE YOUTH OF THE YEAR

When the hounds of spring are on winter's traces,

The mother of months in meadow or plain

Fills the shadows and windy places
With lisp of leaves and ripple of rain:

A = 1 the brown bright nightingale amorous

Is nalf assuaged for Itylus,

For the Thracian ships and the foreign faces.

The tongueless vigil, and all the pain.

Come with bows bent and with emptying of quivers,

Maiden most perfect, lady of light, With a noise of winds and many rivers, With a clamor of waters, and with might;

Bind on thy sandals, O thou most fleet, Over the splendor and speed of thy feet; For the faint east quickens, the wan west shivers,

Round the feet of the day and the feet of the night.

Where shall we find her, how shall we sing to her,

Fold our hands round her knees, and cling?

O that man's heart were as fire and could spring to her,

Fire, or the strength of the streams that spring!

For the stars and the winds are unto her As raiment, as songs of the harp-player; For the risen stars and the fallen cling to her,

And the southwest-wind and the westwind sing.

For winter's rains and ruins are over, And all the season of snows and sins; The days dividing lover and lover,

The light that loses, the night that wins;

And time remembered is grief forgotten, And frosts are slain and flowers begotten, And in green underwood and cover

Blossom by blossom the spring begins.

The full streams feed on flower of rushes, Ripe grasses trammel a travelling foot, The faint fresh flame of the young year

From leaf to flower and flower to fruit;
And fruit and leaf are as gold and fire,
And the oat is heard above the lyre.
And the hoofed heel of a satyr crushes
The chestnut-husk at the chestnut root.

And Pan by noon and Bacchus by night.
Fleeter of foot than the fleet-foot kid,
Follows with dancing and fills with delight

The Mænad and the Bassarid;
And soft as lips that laugh and hide
The laughing leaves of the trees divide,
And screen from seeing and leave in sight

The god pursuing, the maiden hid.

The ivy falls with the Bacchanal's hair Over her eyebrows hiding her eyes; The wild vine slipping down leaves bare

Her bright breast shortening into sighs;

The wild vine slips with the weight of its leaves,

But the berried ivy catches and cleaves To the limbs that glitter, the feet that scare

The wolf that follows, the fawn that flies.

THE LIFE OF MAN

Before the beginning of years,
There came to the making of man
Time, with a gift of tears;
Grief, with a glass that ran;
Pleasure, with pain for leaven;
Summer, with flowers that fell;
Remembrance fallen from heaven,
And madness risen from hell;
Strength without hands to smite;
Love that endures for a breath;
Night, the shadow of light,
And life, the shadow of death.

And the high gods took in hand

Fire, and the falling of tears,
And a measure of sliding sand
From under the feet of the years;
And froth and drift of the sea;
And dust of the laboring earth;
And bodies of things to be
In the houses of death and of birth;
And wrought with weeping and laughter
And fashioned with loathing and love,
With life before and after
And death beneath and above,

For a day and a night and a morrow,
That his strength might endure for a span

With travail and heavy sorrow, The holy spirit of man.

From the winds of the north and the south

They gathered as unto strife; They breathed upon his mouth, They filled his body with life; Evesight and speech they wrought For the veils of the soul therein, A time for labor and thought. A time to serve and to sin: They gave him light in his ways. And love, and a space for delight. And beauty and length of days. And night, and sleep in the night. His speech is a burning fire; With his lips he travaileth: In his heart is a blind desire, In his eyes foreknowledge of death: He weaves, and is clothed with derision: Sows, and he shall not reap; His life is a watch or a vision Between a sleep and a sleep.

LOVE AND LOVE'S MATES

We have seen thee, O Love, thou art fair; thou art goodly, O Love;
Thy wings make light in the air as the wings of a dove.
Thy feet are as winds that divide the stream of the sea:

Earth is thy covering to hide thee, the garment of thee.

Thou art swift and subtle and blind as a flame of fire;

Before the the laughter, behind thee the tears of desire; And twain go forth beside thee, a man with a maid; Her eyes are the eyes of a bride whom delight makes afraid;

As the breath in the buds that stir is her bridal breath;

But Fate is the name of her; and his name is Death.

NATURE

O that I now, I too were By deep wells and water-floods, Streams of ancient hills, and where All the wan green places bear Blossoms cleaving to the sod, Fruitless fruit, and grasses fair, Or such darkest ivy-buds As divide thy yellow hair, Bacchus, and their leaves that nod Round thy fawnskin brush the bare Snow-soft shoulders of a god; There the year is sweet, and there Earth is full of secret springs, And the fervent rose-cheeked hours, Those that marry dawn and noon, There are sunless, there look pale In dim leaves and hidden air,

Pale as grass or latter flowers. Or the wild vine's wan wet rings Full of dew beneath the moon. And all day the nightingale Sleeps, and all night sings; There in cold remote recesses That nor alien eyes assail, Feet, nor imminence of wings. Nor a wind nor any tune, Thou, O queen and holiest. Flower the whitest of all things, With reluctant lengthening tresses And with sudden splendid breast Save of maidens unbeholden. There art wont to enter, there Thy divine swift limbs and golden Maiden growth of unbound hair. Bathed in waters white, Shine, and many a maid's by thee In moist woodland or the hilly Flowerless brakes where wells abound Out of all men's sight; Or in lower pools that see All their marges clothed all round With the innumerable lily, Whence the golden-girdled bee Flits through flowering rush to fret White or duskier violet, Fair as those that in far years With their buds left luminous And their little leaves made wet From the warmer dew of tears. Mother's tears in extreme need, Hid the limbs of Iamus, Of thy brother's seed; For his heart was piteous Toward him, even as thine heart now Pitiful toward us: Thine, O goddess, turning hither A benignant blameless brow; Seeing enough of evil done And lives withered as leaves wither In the blasting of the sun; Seeing enough of hunters dead, Ruin enough of all our year, Herds and harvest slain and shed, Herdsmen stricken many an one, Fruits and flocks consumed together, And great length of deadly days. Yet with reverent lips and fear Turn we toward thee, turn and praise For this lightening of clear weather And prosperities begun. For not seldom, when all air As bright water without breath Shines, and when men fear not, fate Without thunder unaware Breaks, and brings down death. Joy with grief ye great gods give,

Good with bad, and overbear All the pride of us that live, All the high estate, As ye long since overbore. As in old time long before, Many a strong man and a great, All that were. But do thou, sweet, otherwise, Having heed of all our prayer, Taking note of all our sighs; We beseech thee by thy light, By thy bow, and thy sweet eyes, And the kingdom of the night, Be thou favorable and fair; By thine arrows and thy might And Orion overthrown: By the maiden thy delight, By the indissoluble zone And the sacred hair.

FATE

Not as with sundering of the earth Nor as with cleaving of the sea Nor fierce foreshadowings of a birth Nor flying dreams of death to be, Nor loosening of a large world's girth And quickening of the body of night,

And sound of thunder in men's ears
And fire of lightning in men's sight,
Fate, mother of desires and fears,
Bore unto men the law of tears;
But sudden, an unfathered flame,

And broken out of night, she shone, She, without body, without name, In days forgotten and foregone; And heaven rang round her as she came

Like smitten cymbals, and lay bare;
Clouds and great stars, thunders and snows.

The blue sad fields and folds of air.
The life that breathes, the life that grows,

All wind, all fire, that burns or blows, Even all these knew her: for she is great; The daughter of doom, the mother of death,

The sister of sorrow; a lifelong weight
That no man's finger lighteneth,
Nor any god can lighten fate;

A landmark seen across the way Where one race treads as the other trod;

An evil sceptre, an evil stay,
Wrought for a staff, wrought for a rod,

Wrought for a staff, wrought for a rod, The bitter jealousy of God.

For death is deep as the sea, And fate as the waves thereof. Shall the waves take pity on thee
Or the south-wind offer thee love?
Wilt thou take the night for thy day
Or the darkness for light on thy way
Till thou say in thine heart, Enough?

Behold, thou art over fair, thou art over wise;

The sweetness of spring in thine hair, and the light in thine eyes.

The light of the spring in thine eyes, and the sound in thine ears;

Yet thine heart shall wax heavy with sighs and thine eyelids with tears.

Wilt thou cover thine hair with gold:

Wilt thou cover thine hair with gold; and with silver thy feet?

Hast thou taken the purple to fold thee, and made thy mouth sweet?

Behold, when thy face is made bare, he that loved thee shall hate;

Thy face shall be no more fair at the fall of thy fate.

For thy life shall fall as a leaf and be shed as the rain;

And the veil of thine head shall be grief; and the crown shall be pain.

THE DEATH OF MELEAGER

Meleager. Let your hands meet
Round the weight of my head,
Lift ye my feet
As the feet of the dead;

For the flesh of my body is molten, the limbs of it molten as lead.

Chorns. O thy luminous face,
Thine imperious eyes!
O the grief. O the grace.
As of day when it dies!
Who is this bending over thee, lord, with tears and suppression of sighs!

Meleager. Is a bride so fair?

Is a maid so meek?

With unchapleted hair,

With unfilleted cheek,

Atalonto the pure among women.

Atalanta, the pure among women, whose name is as blessing to speak.

Atalanta. I would that with feet,
Unsandalled, unshod,
Overbold, overfleet,
I had swum not nor trod

From Arcadia to Calydon, northward, a blast of the envy of God.

Meleager. Unto each man his fate; Unto each as he saith In whose fingers the weight Of the world is as breath;

Yet I would that in claims of battle mine hands had laid hold upon death.

Chorus. Not with cleaving of shields
And their clash in thine ear,
When the lord of fought fields
Breaketh spearshoft from spear

Breaketh spearshaft from spear,
Thou art broken, our lord, thou art broken, with travail and labor and fear.

Meleager. Would God he had found me Beneath fresh boughs! Would God he had bound me

Unawares in mine house,
With light in mine eyes and songs in my lips, and a crown on my brows!

Chorus. Whence art thou sent from us? Whither thy goal?

How art thou rent from us, Thou that wert whole,

As with severing of eyelids and eyes, as with sundering of body and soul!

Meleager. My heart is within me
As an ash in the fire;
Whosoever hath seen me,
Without lute, without lyre,

Shall sing of me grievous things, even things that were ill to desire.

Chorus. Who shall raise thee
From the house of the dead?
Or what man praise thee
That thy praise may be said?
Alas thy beauty! alas thy body! alas
thine head!

Meleager. But thou. O mother, That dreamer of dreams, Wilt thou bring forth another To feel the sun's beams When I move among shadows a shadow, and wail by impassable streams?

Eneus. What thing wilt thou leave me
Now this thing is done?
A man wilt thou give me,
A son for my son,
For the light of mine eyes, the desire of my life, the desirable one?

Chorus. Thou wert glad above others,
Yes, fair beyond word:

Yea, fair beyond word;
Thou wert glad among mothers;

For each man that heard
Of thee, praise there was added unto thee,
as wings to the feet of a bird.

Eneus. Who shall give back
Thy face of old years,
With travail made black,
Grown gray among fears,
Mother of sorrow, mother of cursins
mother of tears?

Meleager. Though thou art as fire
Fed with fuel in vain,
My delight, my desire,
Is more chaste than the rain,
More pure than the dewfall, more ho

More pure than the dewfall, more holy than stars are that live without stain.

Atalanta. I would that as water
My life's blood had thawn,
Or as winter's wan daughter
Leaves lowland and lawn

Spring-stricken, or ever mine eyes had beheld thee made dark in thy dawn.

Chorus. When thou dravest the men
Of the chosen of Thrace,
None turned him again
Nor endured he thy face

Clothed round with the blush of the battle, with light from a terrible place.

Eneus. Thou shouldst die as he dies
For whom none sheddeth tears;
Filling thine eyes
And fulfilling thine ears,

With the brilliance of battle, the bloom and the beauty, the splendor of spears.

Chorus. In the ears of the world
It is sung, it is told,
And the light thereof hurled
And the noise thereof rolled
From the Acroceraunian snow to the ford of the fleece of gold.

Meleager. Would God ye could carry me Forth of all these; Heap sand and bury me

Heap sand and bury me By the Chersonese,

Where the thundering Bosphorus answers the thunder of Pontic seas.

Eneus. Dost thou mock at our praise and the singing begun

And the men of strange days

Praising my son
In the folds of the hills of frome, high places of Calydon?

Meleager. For the dead man no home is: Ah, better to be

What the flower of the foam is In fields of the sea.

That the sea-waves might be as my raiment, the gulf-stream a garment for me.

Chorus. Who shall seek thee and bring And restore thee thy day, When the dove dipped her wing,

And the oars won their way

Where the narrowing Symplegades whitened the straits of Propontis with spray?

Meleager. Will ye crown me my tomb Or exalt me my name. Now my spirits consume,

Now my flesh is a flame? Let the sea slake it once, and men speak of me sleeping to praise me or shame.

Chorus. Turn back now, turn thee, As who turns him to wake: Though the life in thee burn thee, Couldst thou bathe it and slake

Where the sea-ridge of Helle hangs heavier, and east upon west waters break?

Meleager. Would the winds blow me

Or the waves hurl me home? Ah, to touch in the track

Where the pine learnt to roam Cold girdles and crowns of the sea-gods, cool blossoms of water and foam!

Chorus. The gods may release That they made fast; Thy soul shall have ease

In thy limbs at the last: But what shall they give thee for life, sweet life that is overpast?

Meleager. Not the life of men's veins, Not of flesh that conceives: But the grace that remains,

The fair beauty that cleaves To the life of the rains in the grasses, the life of the dews on the leaves.

Chorus. Thou wert helmsman and chief: Wilt thou turn in an hour, Thy limbs to the leaf, Thy face to the flower.

Thy blood to the water, thy soul to the gods who divide and devour?

Meleager. The years are hungry, They wail all their days; The gods wax angry

And weary of praise: And who shall bridle their lips? and who shall straighten their ways?

Chorus. The gods guard over us With sword and with rod; Weaving shadow to cover us, Heaping the sod.

That law may fulfil herself wholly, to darken man's face before God.

FINAL CHORUS

Who shall contend with his lords Or cross them or do them wrong? Who shall bind them as with cords? Who shall tame them as with song? Who shall smite them as with swords? For the hands of their kingdom are strong.

SONGS FROM CHASTELARD

MARY BEATON'S SONG 1

Le navire Est à l'eau: Entends rire Ce gros flot Que fait luire Et bruire Le vieux sire Aquilo.

Dans l'espace Du grand air Le vent passe Comme un fer; Siffle et sorne, Tombe et tonne; Prend et donne Á la mer.

1 Probably no excuse is needed for including here some examples of Swinburne's French verse, here sumpressed a symmetry symmetric beauty, and because it so characteristically represents him. One of his chief distinctions is that of being perhaps the only Englishman, who ever really understood an Lappr cated French poetry.

Vois, la brise Tourne au nord, Et la bise Souffle et mord Sur ta pure Chevelure Qui murmure Et se tord.

Le navire Passe et luit, Puis chavire Á grand bruit; Et sur l'onde La plus blonde Tête au monde Flotte et fuit.

Moi, je rame, Et l'amour, C'est ma flamme, Mon grand jour, Ma chandelle Blanche et belle, Ma chapelle De séjour.

Toi, mon âme Et ma foi, Sois ma dame Et ma loi; Sois ma mie, Sois Marie, Sois ma vie, Toute à moi!

LOVE AT EBB

Between the sunset and the sea My love laid hands and lips on me; Of sweet came sour, of day came night, Of long desire came brief delight:
Ah love, and what thing came of thee Between the sea-downs and the sea?

Between the sea-mark and the sea
Joy grew to grief, grief grew to me;
Love turned to tears, and tears to fire,
And dead delight to new desire;
Love's talk, love's touch there seemed to be

Between the sea-sand and the sea.

Between the sundown and the sea Love watched one hour of love with me; Then down the all-golden water-ways His feet flew after yesterday's; I saw them come and saw them flee Between the sea-foam and the sea Between the sea-strand and the sea Love fell on sleep, sleep fell on me; The first star saw twain turn to one Between the moonrise and the sun; The next, that saw not love, saw me Between the sea-banks and the sea.

THE QUEEN'S SONG

J'ai vu faner bien des choses, Mainte feuille aller au vent. En songeant aux vieilles roses, J'ai pleuré souvent.

Vois tu dans les roses mortes Amour qui sourit caché? O mon amant, à nos portes L'as-tu vu couché?

As-tu vu jamais au monde Vénus chasser et courir? Fille de l'onde, avec l'onde Doit-elle mourir?

Aux jours de neige et de givre L'amour s'effeuille et s'endort; Avec mai doit-il revivre, Ou bien est-il mort?

Qui sait où s'en vont les roses? Qui sait où s'en va le vent? En songeant à telles choses, J'ai pleuré souvent.

1865.

HYMN TO PROSERPINE

(AFTER THE PROCLAMATION IN ROME OF THE CHRISTIAN FAITH)

Vicisti, Galilæe

I HAVE lived long enough, having seen one thing, that love hath an end; Goddess and maiden and queen, be near me now and befriend.

Thou art more than the day or the morrow, the seasons that laugh or that weep;

For these give joy and sorrow; but thou, Proserpina, sleep.

Sweet is the treading of wine, and sweet the feet of the dove;

But a goodlier gift is thine than foam of the grapes or love.

Yea, is not even Apollo, with hair and harpstring of gold,
A bitter God to follow, a beautiful God

to behold?

I am sick of singing; the bays burn deep and chafe: I am fain

To rest a little from praise and grievous pleasure and pain.

For the Gods we know not of, who give us our daily breath,

We know they are cruel as love or life, and lovely as death.

O Gods dethroned and deceased, cast forth, wiped out in a day!

From your wrath is the world released, redeemed from your chains, men say.

New Gods are crowned in the city, their flowers have broken your rods;

They are merciful, clothed with pity, the young compassionate Gods.

But for me their new device is barren, the days are bare;

Things long past over suffice, and men forgotten that were.

Time and the Gods are at strife: ye dwell in the midst thereof,

Draining a little life from the barren breasts of love.

I say to you, cease, take rest; yea, I say to you all, be at peace,
Till the bitter milk of her breast and the

Till the bitter milk of her breast and the barren bosom shall cease.

Wilt thou yet take all, Galilean? but these thou shalt not take.

The laurel, the palms and the pæan, the breast of the nymphs in the brake;

Breasts more soft than a dove's, that tremble with tenderer breath;

And all the wings of the Loves, and all the joy before death;

All the feet of the hours that sound as a single lyre,

Dropped and deep in the flowers, with strings that flicker like fire.

More than these wilt thou give, things fairer than all these things?

Nay, for a little we live, and life hath mutable wings.

A little while and we die; shall life not thrive as it may?

For no man under the sky lives twice, outliving his day.

And grief is a grievous thing, and a man hath enough of his tears:

Why should be labor, and bring fresh grief to blacken his years?

Thou hast conquered, O pale Galilean; the world has grown gray from thy breath:

We have drunken of things Lethean, and fed on the fulness of death.

Laurel is green for a season, and love is sweet for a day; But love grows bitter with treason, and laurel outlives not May.

Sleep, shall we sleep after all? for the world is not sweet in the end;

For the old faiths loosen and fall, the new years ruin and rend.

Fate is a sea without shore, and the soul is a rock that abides;

But her ears are vexed with the roar and her face with the foam of the tides.

O lips that the live blood faints in, the leavings of racks and rods!

O ghastly glories of saints, dead limbs of

O ghastly glories of saints, dead limbs of gibbeted Gods!

Though all men abase them before you in spirit, and all knees bend,

I kneel not, neither adore you, but standing, look to the end.

All delicate days and pleasant, all spirits and sorrows are cast

Far out with the foam of the present that sweeps to the surf of the past:

Where beyond the extreme sea-wall, and between the remote sea-gates,

Waste water washes, and tall ships founder, and deep death waits:

Where mighty with deepening sides

Where, mighty with deepening sides, clad about with the seas as with wings.

And impelled of invisible tides, and fulfilled of unspeakable things, White-eyed and poisonous-finned, sharktoothed and serpentine-curled, Rolls, under the whitening wind of the future, the wave of the world.

The depths stand naked in sunder behind

it, the storms flee away;
In the hollow before it the thunder is taken and snared as a prey;

In its sides is the north-wind bound; and its salt is of all men's tears;

With light of ruin, and sound of changes, and pulse of years:

With travail of day after day, and with trouble of hour upon hour;

And bitter as blood is the spray; and the crests are as fangs that devour:

And its vapor and storm of its steam as the sighing of spirits to be;

And its noise as the noise in a dream; and its depth as the roots of the sea: And the height of its heads as the height of the utmost stars of the air:

And the ends of the earth at the might thereof tremble, and time is made

Will ye bridle the deep sea with reins, will ye chasten the high sea with rods?

Will ye take her to chain her with chains, who is older than all ye Gods?

All ye as a wind shall go by, as a fire shall ye pass and be past:

Ye are Gods, and behold ye shall die, and the waves be upon you at last. In the darkness of time, in the deeps of the years, in the changes of things, Ye shall sleep as a slain man sleeps, and the world shall forget you for kings.

Though the feet of thine high priests tread where thy lords and our forefathers trod,

Though these that were Gods are dead, and thou being dead art a God,

Though before thee the throned Cytherem be fallen, and hidden her head.

Yet thy kingdom shall pass. Galilean, thy dead shall go down to thee dead.

Of the maiden thy mother, mensing as a goddess with grace clad around;

Thou art throned where another was king; where another was queen she is crowned.

Yea, once we had sight of another: but now she is queen, say these.

Not as thine, not as thine was our mother, a blossom of flowering seas,

Clothed round with the world's desire as with raiment, and fair as the foam, And fleeter than kindled fire, and a goddess and mother of Rome.

For thine came pale and a maiden, and sister to sorrow; but ours, Her deep hair heavily laden with odor and color of flowers,

White rose of the rose-white water, a silver splendor, a flame,

Bent down unto us that besought her, and earth grew sweet with her name.

For thine came weeping, a slave among slaves, and rejected; but she

Came flushed from the full-flushed wave, and imperial, her foot on the sea, And the wonderful waters knew her, the winds and the viewless ways,

And the roses grew rosier, and bluer the sea-blue stream of the bays.

Ye are fallen, our lords by what token? we wist that ye should not fall.

Ye were all so fair that are broken; and one more fair than ye all.

But I turn to her still, having seen she shall surely abide in the end;

Goddess and maiden and queen, be near me now and befriend.

O daughter of earth, of my mother, her crown and blossom of birth,

I am also, I also, thy brother; I go as I came unto earth.

In the night where thine eyes are as moons are in heaven, the night where thou art,

Where the silence is more than all tunes, where sleep overflows from the heart,

Where the poppies are sweet as the rose in our world, and the red rose is white.

And the wind falls faint as it blows with the fume of the flowers of the night,

And the murmur of spirits that sleep in the shadow of Gods from afar

Grows dim in thine ears and deep as the deep dim soul of a star,

In the sweet low light of thy face, under heavens untrod by the sun,

Let my soul with their souls find place, and forget what is done and undone.

Thou art more than the Gods who number the days of our temporal breath;

For these give labor and slumber; but thou, Proserpina, death.

Therefore now at thy feet I abide for a season in silence. I know

I shall die as my fathers died, and sleep as they sleep; even so. For the glass of the year is brittle

For the glass of the year is brittle wherein we gaze for a span;

A little soul for a little bears up this corpse which is man.¹

So long I endure, no longer; and laugh not again, neither weep.

For there is no God found stronger than death; and death is a sleep. 1866.

A MATCH

IF love were what the rose is,
And I were like the leaf,
Our lives would grow together
In sad or singing weather.
Blown fields or flowerful closes,
Green pleasure or gray grief;
If love were what the rose is,
And I were like the leaf.

If I were what the words are, And love were like the tune, With double sound and single Delight our lips would mingle,

¹ ψυχάριον εί βαστάζον νεκρόν. ΕΡΙCTETUS

With kisses glad as birds, are
That get sweet rain at noon;
If I were what the words are
And love were like the tune.

If you were life, my darling,
And I your love were death,
We'd shine and snow together
Ere March made sweet the weather
With daffodil and starling
And hours of fruitful breath;
If you were life, my darling,
And I your love were death.

If you were thrall to sorrow,
And I were page to joy,
We'd play for lives and seasons
With loving looks and treasons
And tears of night and morrow
And laughs of maid and boy;
If you were thrall to sorrow,
And I were page to joy.

If you were April's lady,
And I were lord in May,
We'd throw with leaves for hours
And draw for days with flowers,
Till day like night were shady
And night were bright like day;

If you were April's lady, And I were lord in May.

If you were queen of pleasure,
And I were king of pain,
We'd hunt down love together,
Pluck out his flying-feather,
And teach his feet a measure,
And find his mouth a rein;
If you were queen of pleasure,
And I were king of pain. 1866.

A BALLAD OF BURDENS

The burden of fair women. Vain delight, And love self-slain in some sweet shameful way,

And sorrowful old age that comes by

As a thief comes that has no heart by day,

And change that finds fair cheeks and leaves them gray.

And weariness that keeps awake for hire, And grief that says what pleasure used to say;

This is the end of every man's desire.

The burden of bought kisses. This is sore,

A burden without fruit in childbearing;

Between the nightfall and the dawn threescore,

Threescore between the dawn and evening.

The shuddering in thy lips, the shuddering

In thy sad eyelids tremulous like fire,
Makes love seem shameful and a wretched thing.

This is the end of every man's desire.

The burden of sweet speeches. Nay, kneel down,

Cover thy head, and weep; for verily These market-men that buy thy white and brown

In the last days shall take no thought for thee.

In the last days like earth thy face shall be,

Yea, like sea-marsh made thick with brine and mire,

Sad with sick leavings of the sterile sea.

This is the end of every man's desire.

The burden of long living. Thou shalt fear

Waking, and sleeping mourn upon thy

And say at night, "Would God the day were here,"

And say at dawn "Would God the day were dead."

With weary days thou shalt be clothed and fed,

And wear remorse of heart for thine

attire,
Pain for thy girdle and sorrow upon

thine head;

This is the end of every man's desire.

The burden of bright colors. Thou shalt

Gold tarnished, and the gray above the green;

And as the thing thou seest thy face shall be,

And no more as the thing beforetime seen.

And thou shalt say of mercy "It hath been,"

And living, watch the old lips and loves expire,

And talking, tears shall take thy breath between.

This is the end of every man's desire.

The burden of sad sayings. In that day
Thou shalt tell all thy days and hours, and tell

Thy times and ways and words of love, and say

How one was dear and one desirable, And sweet was life to hear and sweet to smell.

But now with lights reverse the old hours retire

And the last hour is shod with fire from hell.

This is the end of every man's desire.

The burden of four seasons. Rain in spring,

White rain and wind among the tender

A summer of green sorrows gathering, Rank autumn in a mist of miseries,

With sad face set towards the year, that sees

The charred ash drop out of the dropping pyre,

And winter wan with many maladies; This is the end of every man's desire.

The burden of dead faces. Out of sight And out of love, beyond the reach of hands,

Changed in the changing of the dark and light,

They walk and weep about the barren lands

Where no seed is nor any garner stands, Where in short breaths the doubtful days respire,

And time's turned glass lets through the sighing sands;

This is the end of every man's desire.

The burden of much gladness. Life and lust [light; Forsake thee, and the face of thy de-

And overhead strange weathers burn and bite:

And where the red was, lo, the bloodless white,

And where truth was, the likeness of a liar,

And where day was, the likeness of the night;

This is the end of every man's desire.

ENVOI

Princes, and ye whom pleasure quickeneth, Heed well this rhyme before your pleasure tire:

For life is sweet, but after life is death.

This is the end of every man's desire.

1866.

RONDEL

Kissing her hair I sat against her feet, Wove and unwove it, wound and found it sweet

Made fast therewith her hands, drew down her eyes,

Deep as deep flowers and dreamy like dim skies:

With her own tresses bound and found her fair, Kissing her hair.

Sleep were no sweeter than her face to Sleep of cold sea-bloom under the cold sea;

What pain could get between my face and hers?

What new sweet thing would love not relish worse?

Unless, perhaps, white death had kissed me there,

Kissing her hair? 1866.

IN MEMORY OF WALTER SAVAGE

BACK to the flower-town, side by side,
The bright months bring,

New-born, the bridegroom and the bride, Freedom and spring.

The sweet land laughs from sea to sea, Filled full of sun;

All things come back to her, being free,—

All things but one.

In many a tender wheaten plot Flowers that were dead Live, and old suns revive: but n

Live, and old suns revive; but not That holier head.

By this white wandering waste of sea, Far north, I hear

One face shall never turn to me As once this year;

Shall never smile and turn and rest On mine as there,

Nor one most sacred hand be pressed Upon my hair. I came as one whose thoughts half linger,

Half run before;

The youngest to the oldest singer That England bore.

I found him whom I shall not find Till all grief end,

In holiest age our mightiest mind, Father and friend.

But thou, if anything endure, If hope there be,

O spirit that man's life left pure, Man's death set free,

Not with disdain of days that were Look earthward now:

Let dreams revive the reverend hair, The imperial brow;

Come back in sleep, for in the life Where thou art not

We find none like thee. Time and strife

And the world's lot

Move thee no more; but love at least, And reverent heart. May move thee, royal and released Soul, as thou art.

And thou, his Florence, to thy trust Receive and keep,

Keep safe his dedicated dust, His sacred sleep.

So shall thy lovers, come from far, Mix with thy name As morning-star with evening-star His faultless fame. 1866.

THE GARDEN OF PROSERPINE

HERE, where the world is quiet,
Here, where all trouble seems
Dead winds' and spent waves' riot
In doubtful dreams of dreams;
I watch the green field growing
For reaping folk and sowing,
For harvest time and mowing,
A sleepy world of streams.

I am tired of tears and laughter, And men that laugh and weep Of what may come hereafter For men that sow to reap: I am weary of days and hours, Blown buds of barren flowers, Desires and dreams and powers And everything but sleep. Here life has death for neighbor, And far from eye or ear Wan waves and wet winds labor, Weak ships and spirits steer; They drive adrift, and whither They wot not who make thither; But no such winds blow hither, And no such things grow here

No growth of moor or coppice,
No heather-flower or vine.
But bloomless buds of poppies,
Green grapes of Proserpine,
Pale beds of blowing rushes
Where no leaf blooms or blushes,
Save this whereout she crushes
For dead men deadly wine.

Pale, without name or number,
In fruitless fields of corn,
They bow themselves and slumber
All night till light is born;
And like a soul belated,
In hell and heaven unmated,
By cloud and mist abated
Comes out of darkness morn.

Though one were strong as seven,
He too with death shall dwell,
Nor wake with wings in heaven,
Nor weep for pains in hell;
Though one were fair as roses,
His beauty clouds and closes;
And well though love reposes,
In the end it is not well.

Pale, beyond porch and portal, Crowned with calm leaves, she stands

Who gathers all things mortal
With cold immortal hands;
Her languid lips are sweeter
Than love's who fears to greet her
To men that mix and meet her
From many times and lands.

She waits for each and other,
She waits for all men born;
Forgets the earth her mother,
The life of fruits and corn;
And spring and seed and swallow
Take wing for her and follow
Where summer song rings hollow
And flowers are put to scorn.

There go the loves that wither,
The old loves with wearier wings;
And all dead years draw thither,
And all disastrous things;
Dead dreams of days forsaken

Blind buds that snows have shaken, Wild leaves that winds have taken, Red strays of ruined springs.

We are not sure of sorrow,
And joy was never sure;
To-day will die to-morrow
Time stoops to no man's lure;
And love, grown faint and fretful
With lips but half regretful
Sighs, and with eyes forgetful
Weeps that no loves endure.

From too much love of living,
From hope and fear set free,
We thank with brief thanksgiving
Whatever gods may be
That no life lives for ever;
That dead men rise up never;
That even the weariest river
Winds somewhere safe to sea.

Then star nor sun shall waken,
Nor any change of light:
Nor sound of waters shaken,
Nor any sound or sight:
Nor wintry leaves nor vernal,
Nor days nor things diurnal;
Only the sleep eternal
In an eternal night.

1866.

LOVE AT SEA

We are in love's land to-day;
Where shall we go?
Love, shall we start or stay,
Or sail or row?
There's many a wind and way,
And never a May but May;
We are in love's hand to-day;
Where shall we go?

Our landwind is the breath
Of sorrows kissed to death
And joys that were:
Our ballast is a rose;
Our way lies where God knows
And love knows where.
We are in love's hand to-day—

Our seamen are fledged Loves,
Our masts are bills of doves,
Our decks fine gold;
Our ropes are dead maids' hair,
Our stores are love-shafts fair
And manifold.
We are in love's land to-day—

Where shall we land you, sweet? On fields of strange men's feet,

Or fields near home?
Or where the fire-flowers blow,
Or where the flowers of snow
Or flowers of foam?
We are in level's band to do.

We are in love's hand to-day-

Land me, she says, where love
Shows but one shaft, one dove,
One heart, one hand.

—A shore like that, my dear,
Lies where no man will steer,
No maiden land.

Imitated from Théophile Gautier. 1866.

SAPPHICS

All the night sleep came not upon my evelids,

Shed not dew, nor shook nor unclosed a feather,

Yet with lips shut close and with eyes of

Stood and beheld me.

Then to me so lying awake a vision
Came without sleep over the seas and touched me.

Softly touched mine eyelids and lips; and I too,

Full of the vision,

Saw the white implacable Aphrodite, Saw the hair unbound, and the feet unsandalled

Shine as fire of sunset on western waters; Saw the reluctant

Feet, the straining plumes of the doves that drew her,

Looking always, looking with necks reverted.

Back to Lesbos, back to the hills whereunder

Shone Mitylene;

Heard the flying feet of the Loves behind her

Make a sudden thunder upon the waters, As the thunder flung from the strong unclosing

Wings of a great wind.

So the goddess fled from her place, with awful

Sound of feet and thunder of wings around her;

While behind a clamor of singing women Severed the twilight. Ah the singing, ah the delight, the pas-

All the Loves wept, listening; sick with anguish.

Stood the crowned nine Muses about Apollo:

Fear was upon them,

While the tenth sang wonderful things they knew not.

Ah, the tenth, the Lesbian! the nine were silent,

None endured the sound of her song for weeping:

Laurel by laurel,

Faded all their crowns; but about her forehead.

Round her woven tresses and ashen temples

White as dead snow, paler than grass in summer,

Ravaged with kisses.

Shone a light of fire as a crown for ever. Yea, almost the implacable Aphrodite Paused, and almost wept; such a song was that song;

Yea, by her name too

Called her, saying, "Turn to me, O my Sappho;"

Yet she turned her face from the Loves, she saw not

Tears or laughter darken immortal eyelids.

Heard not about her

Fearful fitful wings of the doves depart-

Saw not how the bosom of Aphrodite Shook with weeping, saw not her shaken raiment.

Saw not her hands wrung;

Saw the Lesbians kissing across their smitten

Lutes with lips more sweet than the sound of lute-strings,

Mouth to mouth and hand upon hand, her chosen.

Fairer than all men:

Only saw the beautiful lips and fingers, Full of songs and kisses and little whispers.

Full of music; only beheld among them Soar, as a bird soars

Newly fledged, her visible song, a mar-

Made of perfect sound and exceeding passion. Sweetly shapen, terrible, full of thun-

Clothed with the wind's wings.

Then rejoiced she, laughing with love, and scattered

Roses, awful roses of holy blossom:

Then the Loves thronged sadly with hidden faces

Round Aphrodite.

Then the Muses, stricken at heart, were silent:

Yea, the gods waxed pale; such a song was that song.

All reluctant, all with a fresh repulsion, Fled from before her.

All withdrew long since, and the land was barren.

Full of fruitless women and music only. Now perchance, when winds are assuaged at sunset,

Lulled at the dewfall.

By the gray sea-side, unassuaged, unheard of.

Unbeloved, unseen in the ebb of twilight,

Ghosts of outcast women return lament-

Purged not in Lethe,

Clothed about with flame and with tears, and singing

Songs that move the heart of the shaken heaven.

Songs that break the heart of the earth with pity,

Hearing, to hear them. 1866.

DEDICATION

[POEMS AND BALLADS, FIRST SERIES]

THE sea gives her shells to the shingle,

The earth gives her streams to the sea: There are many, but my gift is single, My verses, the first-fruits of me.

Let the wind take the green and the gray

Cast forth without fruit upon air; Take rose-leaf and vine-leaf and bayleaf

Blown loose from the hair.

The night shakes them round me in

Dawn drives them before her like

Time sheds them like snows on strange Swept shoreward on infinite streams;

Leaves pallid and sombre and ruddy. Dead fruits of the fugitive years;

Some stained as with wine and made bloody.

And some as with tears.

Some scattered in seven years' traces, As they fell from the boy that was

Long left among idle green places, Or gathered but now among men; On seas full of wonder and peril,

Blown white round the capes of the north:

Or in islands where myrtles are sterile And loves bring not forth.

O daughters of dreams and of stories That life is not wearied of yet, Faustine, Fragoletta, Dolores,

Félise and Yolande and Juliette, Shall I find you not still, shall I miss

When sleep, that is true or that seems, Comes back to me hopeless to kiss you, O daughters of dreams?

They are past as a slumber that passes, As the dew of a dawn of old time; More frail than the shadows on glasses,

More fleet than a wave or a rhyme. As the waves after ebb drawing seaward,

When their hollows are full of the night.

So the birds that flew singing to meward

Recede out of sight.

The songs of dead seasons, that wander On wings of articulate words:

Lost leaves that the shore-wind may squander,

Light flocks of untameable birds; Some sang to me dreaming in class time And truant in hand as in tongue;

For the youngest were born of boy's pas-

The eldest are young.

Is there shelter while life in them

Is there hearing for songs that recede,

Tunes touched from a harp with men's fingers,

Or blown with boy's mouth in a reed? Is there place in the land of your labor, Is there room in your world of de-

Where change has not sorrow for neigh-

And day has not night?

In their wings though the sea-wind

yet quivers,
Will you spare not a space for them there

Made green with the running of rivers And gracious with temperate air: In the fields and the turreted cities

That cover from sunshine and rain Fair passions and bountiful pities And loves without stain?

In a land of clear colors and stories, In a region of shadowless hours. Where earth has a garment of glories

And a murmur of musical flowers; In woods where the spring half un-

The flush of her amorous face. By the waters that listen for lovers, For these is there place?

For the song-birds of sorrow, that muffle

Their music as clouds do their fire: For the storm-birds of passion, that ruffle

Wild wings in a wind of desire; In the stream of the storm as it settles Blown seaward, borne far from the Shaken loose on the darkness like petals Dropped one after one?

Though the world of your hands be more gracious

And lovelier in lordship of things Clothed round by sweet art with the spacious

Warm heaven of her imminent wings, Let them enter, unfledged and nigh fainting,

For the love of old loves and lost times;

And receive in your palace of painting This revel of rhymes.

Though the seasons of man full of losses Make empty the years full of youth, If but one thing be constant in crosses, Change lays not her hand upon truth;

Hopes die, and their tombs are for token That the grief as the joy of them ends Ere time that breaks all men has broken The faith between friends.

Though the many lights dwindle to one light,

There is help if the heaven has one; Though the skies be discrowned of the sunlight

And the earth dispossessed of the sun, They have moonlight and sleep for repayment.

When, refreshed as a bride and set

With stars and sea-winds in her raiment, Night sinks on the sea. 1866.

AN APPEAL

ART thou indeed among these, Thou of the tyrannous crew, The kingdoms fed upon blood, O queen from of old of the seas, England, art thou of them too That drink of the poisonous flood, That hide under poisonous trees?

Nay, thy name from of old, Mother, was pure, or we dreamed; Purer we held thee than this, Purer fain would we hold; So goodly a glory it seemed, A fame so bounteous of bliss, So more precious than gold.

A praise so sweet in our ears, That thou in the tempest of things As a rock for a refuge shouldst stand, In the blood-red river of tears Poured forth for the triumph of kings; A safeguard, a sheltering land, In the thunder and torrent of years.

Strangers came gladly to thee, Exiles, chosen of men, Safe for thy sake in thy shade, Sat down at thy feet and were free. So men spake of thee then; Now shall their speaking be stayed? Ah, so let it not be!

Not for revenge or affright, Pride, or a tyrannous lust, Cast from thee the crown of thy praise. Mercy was thine in thy might; Strong when thou went, thou went just; Now, in the wrong-doing days. Cleave thou, thou at least, to the right. How should one charge thee, how sway,

Save by the memories that were?
Not thy gold nor the strength of thy ships,

Nor the night of thine armies at bay, Made thee, mother, most fair; But a word from republican lips Said in thy name in thy day.

Hast thou said it, and hast thou forgot? Is thy praise in thine ears as a scoff? Blood of men guiltless was shed, Children, and souls without spot, Shed, but in places far off; Let slaughter no more be, said Milton; and slaughter was not.

Was it not said of thee too, Now, but now, by thy foes, By the slaves that had slain their France And thee would slay as they slew— "Down with her walls that enclose Freemen that eye us askance, Fugitives, men that are true!"

This was thy praise or thy blame From bondsman or freeman—to be Pure from pollution of slaves, Clean of their sins, and thy name Bloodless, innocent, free; Now if thou be not, thy waves Wash not from off thee thy shame.

Freeman he is not, but slave, Whoso in fear for the State Cries for surety of blood, Help of gibbet and grave; Neither is any land great Whom, in her fear-stricken mood, These things only can save.

Lo! how fair from afar, Taintless of tyranny, stands Thy mighty daughter, for years Who trod the winepress of war,— Shines with immaculate hands; Slays not a foe, neither fears; Stains not peace with a scar.

Be not as tyrant or slave, Englant; be not as these, Thou that wert other than they. Stretch out thine hand, but to save; Put forth thy strength, and release: Lest there arise, if thou slay. Thy shame as a ghost from the grave. November, 1867.

HERTHA

I am that which began;
Out of me the years roll;
Out of me God and man;
I am equal and Whole;
God changes, and man, and the form of them bodily; I am the soul.

Before ever land was,
Before ever the sea,
Or soft hair of the grass,
Or fair limbs of the tree,
Or the flesh-colored fruit of my branches,
I was, and thy soul was in me.

First life on my sources
First drifted and swam;
Out of me are the forces
That save it or damn;
Out of me man and woman, and wildbeast and bird; before God was, I am.

Beside or above me
Nought is there to go;
Love or unlove me,
Unknow me or know,
I am that which unloves me and loves;
I am stricken, and I am the blow.

I the mark that is missed
And the arrows that miss,
I the mouth that is kissed
And the breath in the kiss,
The search, and the sought, and the seeker, the soul and the body that is.

I am that thing which blesses
My spirit elate;
That which caresses
With hands uncreate
My limbs unbegotten that measure the length of the measure of fate.

But what thing dost thou now,
Looking Godward, to cry
"I am I, thou art thou,
I am low, thou art high?"

I am thou, whom thou seekest to find him; find thou but thyself, thou art I.

I the grain and the furrow,
The plough-cloven clod
And the ploughshare drawn thorough,

The germ and the sod,
The deed and the doer, the seed and the sower, the dust which is God.

Hast thou known how I fashioned thee,

Child, underground?
Fire that impassioned thee,
Iron that bound.

Dim changes of water, what thing of all these hast thou known of or found?

Canst thou say in thine heart
Thou hast seen with thine eyes
With what cunning of art

Thou wast wrought in what wise.

By what force of what stuff thou wast shapen, and shown on my breast to the skies?

Who hath given, who hath sold it thee,

Knowledge of me?

Hath the wilderness told it thee?

Hast thou learnt of the sea?

Hast thou communed in spirit with night? have the winds taken coun-

night? have the winds taken counsel with thee?

Have I set such a star
To show light on thy brow
That thou sawest from afar
What I show to thee now?

Have ye spoken as brethren together, the sun and the mountains and thou?

What is here, dost thou know it?
What was, hast thou known?
Prophet nor poet

Nor tripod nor throne
Nor spirit nor flesh can make answer, but only thy mother alone.

Mother not maker,
Born, and not made;
Though her children forsake her,

Allured or afraid,
Praying prayers to the God of their fashion, she stirs not for all that have prayed.

A creed is a rod,
And a crown is of night;
But this thing is God,

To be man with thy might,
To grow straight in the strength of thy spirit, and live out thy life as the light.

I am in thee to save thee,
As my soul in thee saith,
Give thou as I gave thee,
Thy life-blood and breath,

Green leaves of thy labor, white flowers of thy thought, and red fruit of thy death,

Be the ways of thy giving
As mine were to thee;
The free life of thy living,
Be the gift of it free;
Not as servant to lord, nor as master to slave, shalt thou give thee to me.

O children of banishment, Souls overcast, Were the lights ye see vanish meant Alway to last,

Ye would know not the sun overshining the shadows and stars overpast.

I that saw where ye trod
The dim paths of the night
Set the shadow called God
In your skies to give light;
But the morning of manhood is risen, and the shadowless soul is in sight.

The tree many-rooted
That swells to the sky
With frondage red-fruited,
The life-tree am I;
In the buds of your lives is the sap of my leaves: ye shall live and not die.

That take and that give,
In their pity and passion
That scourge and forgive,
They are worms that are bred in the bark that falls off: they shall die and not live.

But the Gods of your fashion

My own blood is what stanches
The wounds in my bark:
Stars caught in my branches
Make day of the dark,
And are worshipped as suns till the sunrise shall tread out their fires as a spark.

Where dead ages hide under

The live roots of the tree.

In my darkness the thunder

Makes utterance of me;
In the clash of my boughs with each other ye hear the waves sound of the sea.

That noise is of Time,
As his feathers are spread
And his feet set to climb

Through the boughs overhead, And my foliage rings round him and rustles, and branches are bent with his tread.

The storm-winds of ages
Blow through me and cease,
The war-wind that rages,
The spring-wind of peace,
Ere the breath of them roughen my tresses, ere one of my blossoms increase.

All sounds of all changes,
All shadows and lights
On the world's mountain-ranges
And stream-riven heights,
Whose tongue is the wind's tongue and language of storm-clouds on earthshaking nights;

All forms of all faces,
All works of all hands
In unsearchable places
Of time-stricken lands,
All death and all life, and all reigns and all ruins, drop through me as sands.

Though sore be my burden
And more than ye know,
And my growth have no guerdon
But only to grow,
Yet I fail not of growing for lightnings

Yet I fail not of growing for lightnings above me or death worms below.

As I too in these;
Such fire is at heart in me,
Such sap is this tree's,
Which hath in it all sounds and all secrets of infinite lands and of seas.

These too have their part in me,

In the spring-colored hours
When my mind was as May's,
There brake forth of me flowers
By centuries of days,

Strong blossoms with perfume of manhood, shot out from my spirit as rays.

> And the sound of them springing And smell of their shoots Were as warmth and sweet singing And strength to my roots;

And the lives of my children made perfect with freedom of soul were my fruits.

I bid you but be;
I have need not of prayer;
I have need of you free

As your mouths of mine air; That my heart may be greater within me, beholding the fruits of me fair.

More fair than strange fruit is Of faith ye espouse; In me only the root is That blooms in your boughs; Behold now your God that ye made you. to feed him with faith of your yows.

> In the darkening and whitening Abysses ador'd, With dayspring and lightning

For lamp and for sword, God thunders in heaven, and his angels are red with the wrath of the Lord.

O my sons, O too dutiful Toward Gods not of me, Was not I enough beautiful? Was it hard to be free?

For behold, I am with you, am in you and of you; look forth now and see.

> Lo, wing'd with world's wonders. With miracles shod. With the fires of his thunders

For raiment and rod, God trembles in heaven, and his angels are white with the terror of God.

> For his twilight is come on him, His anguish is here: And his spirits gaze dumb on him, Grown gray from his fear;

And his hour taketh hold on him stricken, the last of his infinite year.

> Thought made him and breaks him,

Truth slavs and forgives; But to you, as time takes him, This new thing it gives.

Even love, the beloved Republic, that feeds upon freedom and lives.

For truth only is living. Truth only is whole, And the love of his giving Man's polestar and pole; Man, pulse of my centre, and fruit of my body, and seed of my soul.

> One birth of my bosom; One beam of mine eye; One topmost blossom That scales the sky;

Man, equal and one with me, man that is made of me, man that is I. 1871.

THE PILGRIMS

"Who is your lady of love, O ve that

Singing? and is it for sorrow of that which was

That ye sing sadly, or dream of what shall be?

For gladly at once and sadly it seems ye sing."

-"Our lady of love by you is unbeholden

For hands she hath none, nor eves, nor lips, nor golden

Treasure of hair, nor face nor form; But we

That love, we know her more fair than any thing."

-- "Is she a queen, having great gifts to give?"

— 'Yea, these: that whose hath seen her shall not live

Except he serve her sorrowing, with strange pain, Travail and bloodshedding and bitterer tears;

And when she bids die he shall surely And he shall leave all things under the sky, And go forth naked under sun and

rain,

And work and wait and watch out all his years."

-" Hath she on earth no place of habitation?"

-"Age to age calling, nation answering nation.

Cries out. Where is she? and there is none to say;

For if she be not in the spirit of men. For if in the inward soul she hath no place,

In vain they cry unto her, seeking her face,

In vain their mouths make much of her; for they

Cry with vain tongues, till the heart lives again."

-"O ye that follow, and have ye no repentance?

For on your brows is written a mortal

An hieroglyph of sorrow, a fiery sign, That in your lives ye shall not pause or rest,

Nor have the sure sweet common love, nor keep

Friends and safe days, nor joy of life nor sleep."

-"These have we not, who have one thing, the divine

Face and clear eyes of faith and fruitful breast."

—"And ye shall die before your thrones be won."

-"Yea, and the changed world and the liberal sun

Shall move and shine without us, and we lie

Dead; but if she too move on earth, and live,

But if the old world with all the old irons rent

Laugh and give thanks, shall we be not content?

Nay, we shall rather live, we shall not die.

Life being so little, and death so good to give."

-" And these men shall forget you."—
"Yea, but we

Shall be a part of the earth and the ancient sea,

And heaven-high air august, and awful fire,

And all things good; and no man's heart shall beat

But somewhat in it of our blood once shed

Shall quiver and quicken, as now in us the dead

Blood of men slain and the old same life's desire

Plants in their fiery footprints our fresh feet."

-"But ye that might be clothed with all things pleasant,

Ye are foolish that put off the fair soft present,

That clothe yourselves with the cold future air;

When mother and father and tender sister and brother

And the old live love that was shall be as ye.

Dust, and no fruit of loving life shall be."

-"She shall be yet who is more than all these were,

Than sister or wife or father unto us or mother."

-"Is this worth life, is this, to win for wages?

Lo, the dead mouths of the awful graygrown ages,

The venerable, in the past that is their prison,

In the outer darkness, in the unopening grave,

Laugh, knowing how many as ye now say have said,

How many, and all arc fallen, are fallen and dead:

Shall ye dead rise, and these dead have not risen?"

"Not we but she, who is tender."

and swift to save."

-"Are ye not weary and faint not by the way,

Seeing night by night devoured of day by day,

Seeing hour by hour consumed in sleepless fire?

Sleepless; and ye too, when shall ye too sleep?"

-" We are weary in heart and head, in hands and feet,

And surely more than all things sleep were sweet.—

Than all things save the inexorable desire

Which whose knoweth shall neither faint nor weep."

-"Is this so sweet that one were fain to follow?

Is this so sure where all men's hopes are hollow,

Even this your dream, that by much tribulation

Ye shall make whole flawed hearts,

and bowed necks straight?"

-" Nay, though our life were blind, our death were fruitless,

Not therefore were the whole world's high hope rootless;

But man to man, nation would turn to nation.

And the old life live, and the old great word be great."

-"Pass on, then, and pass by us, and let us be,

For what light think ye after life to see?

And if the world fare better will ye know?

And if man triumph who shall seek you and say?"

—" Enough of light is this for one life's span,

That all men born are mortal, but not man:

And we men bring death lives by night to sow,

That men may reap and eat and live by day." 1871.

TO WALT WHITMAN IN AMERICA

SEND but a song oversea for us.

Heart of their hearts who are free,
Heart of their singer, to be for us
More than our singing can be;
Ours, in the tempest at error,
With no light but the twilight of terror;
Send us a song oversea!

Sweet-smelling of pine leaves and grasses,

And blown as a tree through and through

With the winds of the keen mountainpasses,

And tender as sun-smitten dew; Sharp-tongued as the winter that shakes The wastes of your limitless lakes, Wide-eyed as the sea-line's blue.

O strong-winged soul with prophetic Lips hot with the bloodbeats of song. With tremor of heartstrings magnetic, With thoughts as thunders in throng, With consonant ardors of chords That pierce men's souls as with swords And hale them hearing along.

Make us, too, music, to be with us
As a word from a world's heart warm,
To sail the dark as a sea with us,
Full-sailed, outsinging the storm,
A song to put fire in our ears
Whose burning shall burn up tears,
Whose sign bid battle reform;

A note in the ranks of a clarion,
A word in the wind of cheer,
To consume as with lightning the carrion
That makes time foul for us here;
In the air that our dead things infest
A blast of the breath of the west,
Till east way as west way is clear.

Out of the sun beyond sunset,
From the evening whence morning
shall be,
With the rollers in measureless onset.

With the van of the storming sea,

With the world-wide wind, with the breath

That breaks ships driven upon death, With the passion of all things free,

With the sea-steeds footless and frantic, White myriads for death to bestride In the charge of the ruining Atlantic Where deaths by regiments ride, With clouds and clamors of waters, With a long note shriller than slaughter's On the furrowless ii. bls world-wide,

With terror, with ardor and wonder, With the soul of the season that wakes When the weight of a whole year's thunder

In the tidestream of autumn breaks, Let the flight of the wide-winged word Come over, come in and be heard, Take form and fire for our sakes.

For a continent bloodless with travail Here toils and brawls as it can, And the web of it who shall unravel Of all that peer on the plan; Would fain grow men, but they grow

And fain be free, but they know not One name for freedom and man?

One name, not twain for division;
One thing, not twain, from the birth;
Spirit and substance and vision,
Worth more than worship is worth;
Unbeheld, unadored, undivined,
The cause, the centre, the mind,
The secret and sense of the earth.

Here as a weakling in irons,
Here as a weahling in bands
As a prey that the stake-net environs,
Our life that we looked for stands;
And the man-child naked and dear,
Democracy, turns on us here
Eyes trembling, with tremulous hands.

It sees not what season shall bring to it Sweet fruit of its bitter desire; Few voices it hears yet sing to it, Few pulses of hearts reaspire: Foresees not time, nor forehears The noises of imminent years, Earthquake, and thunder, and fire:

When crowned and weaponed and curbless

It shall walk without helm or shield The bare burnt furrows and herbless Of war's last flame-stricken field, Till godlike, equal with time, It stand in the sun sublime, In the godhead of man revealed.

Round your people and over them
Light like raiment is drawn,
Close as a garment to cover them
Wrought not of mail nor of lawn:
Here, with hope hardly to wear,
Naked nations and bare
Swim, sink, strike out for the dawn.

Chains are here, and a prison,
Kings, and subjects, and shame:
If the God upon you be arisen,
How should our songs be the same?
How in confusion of change,
How shall we sing, in a strange
Land songs praising his name?

God is buried and dead to us,
Even the spirit of earth,
Freedom: so have they said to us,
Some with mocking and mirth,
Some with heartbreak and tears:
And a God without eyes, without ears,
Who shall sing of him, dead in the birth?

The earth-god Freedom, the lonely
Face lightening, the footprint unshod.
Not as one man crucified only
Nor scourged with but one life's rod:
The soul that is substance of nations,
Reincarnate with fresh generations;
The great god Man, which is God.

But in weariest of years and obscurest
Doth it live not at heart of all things
The one God and one spirit, a purest
Life, fed from unstanchable springs?
Within love, within hatred it is,
And its seed in the stripe as the kiss,
And in slaves is the germ, and in kings,

Freedom we call it, for holier
Name of the soul's there is none;
Surelier it labors, if slowlier,
Than the metres of star or of sun;
Slowlier than life unto breath,
Surelier than time unto death,
It moves till its labor be done.

Till the motion be done and the measure Circling through season and clime, Slumber and sorrow and pleasure, Vision of virtue and crime; Till consummate with conquering eyes, A soul disembodied, it rise From the body transfigured of time.

Till it rise and remain and take station
With the stars of the world that rejoice;
Till the voice of its heart's exultation
Be as theirs an invariable voice,

Be as theirs an invariable voice, By no discord of evil estranged, By no pause, by no breach in it changed, By no clash in the chord of its choice.

It is one with the world's generations,
With the spirit, the star, and the sod:
With the kingless and king-stricken nations,

With the cross, and the chain, and the rod;

The most high, the most secret, most lonely,

The earth-soul Freedom, that only Lives, and that only is God. 1871.

FROM MATER TRIUMPHALIS

[TO LIBERTY]

I am thine harp between thine hands, O mother!

All my strong chords are strained with love of thee.

We grapple in love and wrestle, as each with other

Wrestle the wind and the unreluctant sea.

I am no courtier of thee sober-suited, Who loves a little for a little pay.

Me not thy winds and storms, nor thrones disrooted,

Nor molten crowns, nor thine own sins, dismay.

Sinned hast thou sometime, therefore art thou sinless;

Stained hast thou been, who art therefore without stain;

Even as man's soul is kin to thee, but kinless

Thou, in whose womb Time sows the all-various grain,

I do not bid thee spare me, O dreadful mother!

I pray thee that thou spare not, of thy

How were it with me then, if ever another

Should come to stand before thee in this my place?

I am the trumpet at thy lips, thy clarion, Full of thy cry, sonorous with thy breath:

The graves of souls born worms, and creeds grown carrion

Thy blast of judgment fills with fires of death.

Thou art the player whose organ-keys are thunders,

And I, beneath thy foot, the pedal pressed:

Thou art the ray whereat the rent night sunders,

And I the cloudlet borne upon thy breast.

I shall burn up before thee, pass and perish,

As haze in sunrise on the red sea-line; But thou from dawn to sunsetting shalt cherish

The thoughts that led and souls that lighted mine.

Reared between night and noon and truth and error.

Each twilight-travelling bird that trills and screams

Sickens at midday, nor can face for

The imperious heaven's inevitable extremes.

I have no spirit of skill with equal fingers

At sign to sharpen or to slacken strings;

I keep no time of song with gold-perched singers

And chirp of linnets on the wrists of kings.

I am thy storm-thrush of the days that darken,

Thy petrel in the foam that bears thy bark

To port through night and tempest: if thou hearken,

My voice is in thy heaven before the lark.

My song is in the mist that hides thy morning,
My cry is up before the day for thee;

My cry is up before the day for thee; I have heard thee and beheld thee and give warning,

Before thy wheels divide the sky and sea.

Birds shall wake with thee voiced and feathered fairer,

To see in summer what I see in spring; I have eyes and heart to endure thee,
O thunder-bearer,

And they shall be who shall have tongues to sing.

I have love at least, and have not fear, and part not

From thine unnavigable and wingless way:

Thou tarriest, and I have not said thou art not,

Nor all thy night long have denied thy day.

Darkness to daylight shall lift up thy pean,

Hill to hill thunder, vale cry back to vale,

With wind-notes as of eagles Æschylean,

And Sappho singing in the nightingale.

Sung to by mighty sons of dawn and daughters,

Of this night's songs thine ear shall keep but one,—

That supreme song which shook the channelled waters,

And called thee skyward as God calls the sun.

Come, though all heaven again be fire above thee:

Though death before thee come to clear thy sky;

Let us but see in his thy face who love thee;

Yea, though thou slay us, arise, and let us die. 1871.

COR CORDIUM

[SHELLEY]

O HEART of hearts, the chalice of love's fire.

Hid round with flowers and all the bounty of bloom;

O wonderful and perfect heart, for whom The lyrist liberty made life a lyre;

O heavenly heart, at whose most dear desire

Dead love, living and singing, cleft his tomb,

And with him risen and regent in death's

All day thy choral pulses rang full choir; O heart whose beating blood was running song, O sole thing sweeter than thine own songs were.

Help us for thy free love's sake to be free,

True for thy truth's sake, for thy strength's sake strong,

Till very liberty make clean and fair The nursing earth as the sepulchral sea.

"NON DOLET."

It does not hurt. She looked along the

Smiling, and watched the thick drops mix and run

Down the sheer blade; not that which had been done

Could hart the sweet sense of the Roman

But that which was to do yet ere the Strife

Could end for each forever, and the sun: Nor was the palm yet nor was peace yet

While pain had power upon her husband's life.

It does not hurt, Italia. Thou art more Than bride to bridegroom; how shalt thou not take

The gift love's blood has reddened for thy sake?

Was not thy lifeblood given for us be-And if love's heartblood can avail thy

And thou not die, how should it hurt indeed? 1871.

THE OBLATION

Ask nothing more of me, sweet, All I can give you I give. Heart of my heart, were it more, More would be laid at your feet: Love that should help you to live, Song that should spur you to soar.

All things were nothing to give Once to have sense of you more. Touch you and taste of you, sweet, Think you and breathe you and live, Swept of your wings as they soar, Trodden by chance of your feet.

I that have love and no more Give you but love of you, sweet:
He that hath more, let him give;

He that hath wings, let him soar; Mine is the heart at your feet

Here, that must love you to live. 1871.

A FORSAKEN GARDEN

In a coign of the cliff between lowland and highland.

At the sea-down's edge between windward and lee.

Walled round with rocks as an inland island. The ghost of a garden fronts the sea. A girdle of brushwood and thorn encloses

The steep square slope of the blossomless bed

Where the weeds that grew green from the graves of its roses

Now lie dead.

The fields fall southward, abrupt and broken, To the low last edge of the long lone land.

If a step should sound or a word be spoken.

Would a ghost not rise at the strange guest's hand?

So long have the gray bare walks lain guestless, Through branches and briars if a man make way,

He shall find no life but the sea-wind's. restless

Night and day.

The dense hard passage is blind and stifled

That crawls by a track none turn to climb

To the strait waste place that the years have rifled

Of all but the thorns that are touched not of time.

The thorns he spares when the rose is taken:

The rocks are left when he wastes the plain:

The wind that wanders, the weeds wind-

These remain.

Not a flower to be pressed of the foot that falls not: lplots are dry; As the heart of a dead man the seedFrom the thicket of thorns whence the nightingale calls not.

Could she call, there were never a rose to reply.

Over the meadows that blossom and wither.

Rings but the note of a sea-bird's song. Only the sun and the rain come hither All year long.

The sun burns sear, and the rain dishev-

One gaunt bleak blossom of scentless breath.

Only the wind here hovers and revels In a round where life seems barren as

Here there was laughing of old, there was weeping,

Haply, of lovers none ever will know, Whose eyes went seaward a hundred sleeping

Years ago.

Heart handfast in heart as they stood, "Look thither," Did he whisper? "Look forth from the flowers to the sea;

For the foam-flowers endure when the rose-blossoms wither.

And men that love lightly may die-But we?"

And the same wind sang, and the same waves whitened,

And or ever the garden's last petals were shed,

In the lips that had whispered, the eyes that had lightened, Love was dead.

Or they loved their life through, and then went whither?

And were one to the end-but what end who knows?

Love deep as the sea as a rose must wither.

As the rose-red seaweed that mocks the rose.

Shall the dead take thought for the dead to love them?

What love was ever as deep as a grave? They are loyeless now as the grass above them

Or the wave.

All are at one now, roses and lovers, Not known of the cliffs and the fields and the sea.

Not a breath of the time that has been hovers

In the air now soft with a summer to

Not a breath shall there sweeten the seasons hereafter

Of the flowers or the lovers that laugh now or weep.

When, as they that are free now of weeping and laughter.

We shall sleep.

Here death may deal not again forever; Here change may come not till all change end.

From the graves they have made they shall rise up never,

Who have left naught living to ravage and rend.

Earth, stones, and thorns of the wild ground growing,
When the sun and the rain live, these

shall be;

Till a last wind's breath upon all these blowing

Roll the sea.

Till the slow sea rise and the sheer cliff crumble,

Till terrace and meadow the deep gulfs drink,

Till the strength of the waves of the high tides humble

The fields that lessen, the rocks that shrink.

Here now in his triumph where all things falter, Stretched out on the spoils that his own hand spread, As a god self-slain on his own strange

A BALLAD OF DREAMLAND

I HID my heart in a nest of roses, Out of the sun's way, hidden apart;

In a softer bed than the soft white snow's

Under the roses I hid my heart.

Why would it sleep not? why should it start.

When never a leaf of the rose-tree stirred? What made sleep flutter his wings and part?

Only the song of a secret bird.

Lie still, I said, for the wind's wing closes, And mild leaves muffle the keen sun's dart:

Lie still, for the wind on the warm seas dozes,

And the wind is unquieter yet than thou art.

Does a thought in thee still as a thorn's wound smart?

Does the fang still fret thee of hope deferred?

What bids the lips of thy sleep dispart? Only the song of a secret bird,

The green land's name that a charm encloses,

It never was writ in the traveller's chart,

And sweet on its trees as the fruit that grows is,

It never was sold in the merchant's mart.

mart.
The swallows of dreams through its dim fields dart.

And sleep's are the tunes in its tree-tops heard;

heard;
No hound's note wakens the wild-wood hart,

Only the song of a secret bird.

ENVOI

In the world of dreams I have chosen my part,

To sleep for a season and hear no word Of true love's truth or of light love's art, Only the song of a secret bird.

A BALLAD OF FRANÇOIS VILLON,

PRINCE OF ALL BALLAD-MAKERS

BIRD of the bitter bright gray golden morn,

Scarce risen upon the dusk of dolorous years,

First of us all and sweetest singer born, Whose far shrill note the world of new men hears

Cleave the cold shuddering shade as twilight clears;

When song new-born put off the old world's attire

And felt its tune on her changed lips expire.

Writ foremost on the roll of them that came

Fresh girt for service of the latter lyre, Villon, our sad bad glad mad brother's name! Alas, the joy, the sorrow, and the scorn, That clothed thy life with hopes and sins and fears,

And gave thee stones for bread and tares for corn

And plume-plucked gaol-birds for thy starveling peers,

Till death clipt close their flight with shameful shears;

Till shifts came short and loves were hard to hire,

When lilt of song nor twitch of twangling wire

Could buy thee bread or kisses; when light fame

Spurned like a ball and haled through brake and briar,

Villon, our sad bad glad mad brother's name!

Poor splendid wings so frayed and soiled and torn!

Poor kind wild eyes so dashed with light quick tears!

Poor perfect voice, most blithe when most forlorn,

That rings athwart the sea whence no man steers,

Like joy-bells crossed with death-bells in our ears!

What far delight has cooled the fierce desire

That, like some ravenous bird, was strong to tire On that frail flesh and soul consumed with flame, But left more sweet than roses to respire, Villon, our sad bad glad mad brother's

name?

Prince of sweet songs made out of tears and fire,

A harlot was thy nurse, a God thy sire; Shame soiled thy song, and song assoiled thy shame.

But from thy feet now death has washed the mire,

Love reads out first at head of all our

TO LOUIS KOSSUTH

LIGHT of our fathers' eyes, and in our

Star of the unsetting sunset! for thy name,

That on the front of noon was as a flame In the great year night wenty years agone When all the heavens of Europe shook and shone

With stormy wind and lightning, keeps its fame

And bears its witness all day through the same;

Not for past days and great deeds past alone.

Kossuth, we praise thee as our Landor praised,

But that now too we know thy voice upraised,

Thy voice, the trumpet of the truth of God,

Thine hand, the thunder-bearer's, raised to smite

As with heaven's lightning for a sword and rod

Men's heads abased before the Muscovite. February, 1878.

CHILD'S SONG

What is gold worth, say, Worth for work or play, Worth to keep or pay, Hide or throw away, Hope about or fear? What is love worth, pray? Worth a tear?

Golden on the mould
Lie the dead leaves rolled
Of the wet woods old,
Yellow leaves and cold,
Woods without a dove;
Gold is worth but gold;
Love's worth love.

TRIADS

Ι

The word of the sun to the sky, The word of the wind to the sea. The word of the moon to the night, What may it be?

The sense of the flower to the fly, The sense of the bird to the tree, The sense of the cloud to the light, Who can tell me?

The song of the fields to the kye, The song of the lime to the bee, The song of the depth to the height. Who knows all three? 11

The message of April to May, That May sends on into June And June gives out to July For birthday boon;

The delight of the dawn in the day, The delight of the day in the noon, The delight of a song in a sigh That breaks the tune;

The secret of passing away, The cast of the change of the moon, None knows it with ear or with eye, But all will soon.

TIT

The live wave's love for the shore,
The shore's for the wave as it dies,
The love of the thunder-fire
That sears the skies—

We shall know not though life wax hoar,
Till all life, spent into sighs,

Burn out as consumed with desire
Of death's strange eyes;

Till the secret be secret no more
In the light of one hour as it flies,
Be the hour as of suns that expire
Or suns that rise.

ON THE CLIFFS

ιμερόφωνος ἀηδών (SAPPHO)

BETWEEN the moondawn and the sundown here

The twilight hangs half starless; half the sea

Still quivers as for love or pain or fear Or pleasure mightier than these all may be.

A man's live heart might beat Wherein a God's with mortal blood should meet

And fill its pulse too full to bear the strain

With fear or love or pleasure's twin-born,
pain.

Fiercely the gaunt woods to the grim soil cling

That bears for all fair fruits

Wan wild sparse flowers of windy and wintry spring

Between the tortive serpent-shapen roots Wherethrough their dim growth hardly strikes and shoots

And shows one gracious thing;

Hardly, to speak for summer one sweet Trow

Of summer's self scarce heard.

But higher the steep green sterile fields, thickset

With flowerless hawthorn even to the unward verge

Whence the woods gathering watch new cliffs emerge.

Higher than their highest of crowns that sea-winds fret,

Holds fast, for all that night or wind can sav.

Some pale pure color yet,

Too dim for green an I luminous for gray. Between the climbing inland cliffs above And these beneath that breast and break the bay.

A barren peace too soft for hate or love Broods on an hour too dim for night or day.

O wind, O wingless wind that walk'st the sea.

Weak wind, wing-broken, wearier wind than we.

Who are yet not spirit-broken, maimed like thee,

Who wail not in our inward night as thou

In the outer darkness now,

What word has the old sea given thee for mine ear

From thy faint lips to hear?

For some word would she send me, knowing not how.

Nay, what far other word

Than ever of her was spoken, or of me Or all my winged white kinsfolk of the sea

Between fresh wave and wave was ever

Cleaves the clear dark enwinding tree with tree Too close for stars to separate and to see

Enmeshed in multitudinous unity?

What voice of what strong God hath stormed and stirred

The fortressed rock of silence, rent apart Even to the core Night's all maternal heart?

What voice of God grown heavenlier in a bird,

Make keener of edge to smite

Than lightning.-yea, thou knowest, O mother Night,

Keen as that cry from thy strange children sent 1

Wherewith the Athenian judgmentshrine was rent.

For wrath that all their wrath was vainly spent.

Their wrath for wrong made right By justice in her own divine despite That bade pass forth unblamed

The sinless matricide and unashamed? Yea, what new cry is this, what note more bright Than their song's wing of words was dark of flight.

What word is this thou hast heard.

Thine and not thine or theirs, O Night. what word

More keen than lightning and more sweet than light?

As all men's hearts grew godlike in one

And all those hearts cried on thee, crying with might,

Hear us. O mother Night!

Dumb is the mouth of darkness as of death:

Light, sound and life are one

In the eyes and lips of dawn that draw the sun

To hear what first child's word with glimmering breath

Their weak wan weanling child the twilight saith:

But night makes answer none.

God, if thou be god, -bird, if bird thou be,-

Do thou then answer me.

For but one word, what wind soever blow.

Is blown up usward ever from the sea. In fruitless years of youth dead long land snow And deep beneath their own dead leaves Buried. Theard with bitter heart and sere The same sea's word unchangeable, nor knew

But that mine own life-days were changeless too,

And sharp and salt with unshed tear on

And cold and fierce and barren; and my soul,

Sickening, swam weakly with bated breath

In a deep sea like death,

And felt the wind buffet her face with

Hard, and harsh thought on thought in long bleak roll

Blown by keen gusts of memory sad as thine

Heap the weight up of pain, and break, and leave

Strength scarce enough to grieve

In the sick heavy spirit, unmanned with strife

Of waves that beat at the tired lips of life.

Nay, sad may be man's memory, sad may be

The dream he weaves him as for shadow of thee.

But scarce one breathing-space, one heartbeat long.

Wilt thou take shadow of sadness on thy

Not thou, being more than man or man's desire,

Being bird and God in one,

With throat of gold and spirit of the sun:

The sun whom all our souls and songs call sire.

Whose godhead gave thee, chosen of all our quire,

Thee only of all that serve, of all that sing

Before our sire and king,

Borne up some space on time's worldwandering wing,

This gift, this doom, to bear till time's wing tire-

Life everlasting of eternal fire.

Thee only of all; yet can no memory say How many a night and day

My heart has been as thy heart, and my life

As thy life is, a sleepless hidden thing, Full of the thirst and hunger of winter and spring,

That seeks its food not in such love or strife

As fill men's hearts with passionate hours and rest.

From no loved lips and on no loving breast

Have I sought ever for such gifts as bring Comfort, to stay the secret soul with sleep.

The joys, the loves, the labors, whence men reap

Rathe fruit of hopes and fears.

I have made not mine; the best of all my days

Have been as those fair fruitless summer strays,

Those water-waifs that but the sea-wind

Flakes of glad foam or flowers on footless ways

That take the wind in season and the

And when the wind wills is their season done.

For all my days as all thy days from birth

My heart as thy heart was in me as thee.

Have waves enough to quench it, nor on earth

Is fuel enough to feed,

While day sows night, and night sows day for seed.

We were not marked for sorrow, thou nor I.

For joy nor sorrow, sister, were we made, To take delight and grief to live and

Assuaged by pleasures or by pains affraved

That melt men's hearts and alter; we retain

A memory mastering pleasure and all pain,

A spirit within the sense of ear and eve. A soul behind the soul, that seeks and sings

And makes our life move only with its wings

And feed but from its lips, that in return

Feed of our hearts wherein the old fires that burn

Have strength not to consume

Nor glory enough to exalt us past our doom.

Ah, ah, the doom (thou knowest whence rang that wail)

Of the shrill nightingale!

(From whose wild lips, thou knowest, that wail was thrown)

For round about her have the great gods

A wing-borne body, and clothed her close and fast

With a sweet life that hath no part in moan.

But me, for me (how hadst thou heart to hear?)

Remains a sundering with the two-edged

Ah, for her doom! so cried in presage

The bodeful bondslave of the king of men.

And might not win her will.

Too close the entangling dragnet woven of crime.

The snare of ill new-born of elder ill,

The curse of new time for an elder time.

Had caught and held her yet,

Enmeshed intolerably in the intolerant net.

Who thought with craft to mock the God most high,

And win by wiles his crown of prophecy From the sun's hand sublime.

As God were man, to spare or to forget.

But thou,—the gods have given thee and forgiven thee

More than our master gave

That strange-eved. spirit-wounded. strange-tongued slave

There questing houndlike where the roofs red-wet

Reeked as a wet red grave.

Life everlasting has their strange grace given thee,

Even hers whom thou wast wont to sing and serve

With eyes, but not with song, too swift to swerve;

Yet might not even thine eves estranged estrange her.

Who seeing thee too, but inly, burn and bleed

Like that pale princess-priest of Priam's seed.

For stranger service gave thee guerdon, stranger

If this indeed be guerdon, this indeed Her mercy, this thy meed-

That thou, being more than all we born, being higher

Than all heads crowned of him that only gives

The light whereby man lives,

The bay that bids man moved of God's desire

Lay hand on lute or lyre,

Set lip to trumpet or deflowered green reed-

If this were given thee for a grace indeed,

That thou, being first of all these, thou alone

Shouldst have the grace to die not, but to live.

And loose nor change one pulse of song, one tone

Of all that were thy lady's and thine

The lady's whom thou criedst on to forgive,

Thou, priest and sacrifice on the altarstone

Where none may worship not of all that live.

Love's priestess, errant on dark ways diverse:

If this were grace indeed for Love to give.

If this indeed were blessing and no curse.

Love's priestess, mad with pain and joy of song,

Song's priestess, mad with joy and pain of love,

Name above all names that are lights above.

We have lov'd, prais'd, pitied, crown'd, and done thee wrong,

O thou past praise and pity; thou the sole

Utterly deathless, perfect only and whole

Immortal, body and soul.

For over all whom time hath overpast The shadow of sleep inexorable is cast,

The implacable sweet shadow of perfect sleep

That gives not back what life gives death to keep;

Yea, all that liv'd and lov'd and sang and sinn'd Are all borne down death's cold, sweet,

soundless wind

That blows all night and knows not whom its breath,

Darkling, may touch to death:

But one that wind hath touch'd and changed not,-one

Whose body and soul are parcel of the sun:

One that earth's fire could burn not, nor the sea

Quench; nor might human doom take hold on thee;

All praise, all pity, all dreams have done thee wrong,

All love, with eyes love-blinded from above;

Soug's priestess, mad with joy and pain of love,

Love's priestess, mad with pain and joy of song.

Hast thou none other answer then for

Than the air may have of thee,

Or the earth's warm woodlands girdling with green girth

Thy secret, sleepless, burning life on earth,

Or even the sea that once, being woman crown'd

And girt with fire and glory of anguish round,

Thou wert so fain to seek to, fain to crave

If she would hear thee and save

And give thee comfort of thy great green grave?

Because I have known thee always who thou art,

Thou knowest, have known thee to thy heart's own heart,

Nor ever have given light ear to storied song

That did thy sweet name sweet unwitting wrong,

Nor ever have called thee nor would call for shame.

Thou knowest, but inly, by thine only name.

Sappho-because I have known thee and loved, hast thou

None other answer now?

As brother and sister were we, child and bird,

Since thy first Lesbian word

Flamed on me, and I knew not whence I knew

This was the song that struck my whole soul through,

Pierced my keen spirit of sense with edge more keen.

Even when I knew not—even ere sooth was seen—

When thou wast but the tawny sweet winged thing

Whose cry was but of spring.

And yet even so thine ear should hear me—yea.

Hear me this nightfall by this northland

bay.
Even for their sake whose loud good word I had.

Singing of thee in the all-beloved clime Once, where the windy wine of spring makes mad

Our sisters of Majano, who kept time Clear to my choral rhyme.

Yet was the song acclaimed of these aloud

Whose praise had made mute humbleness misproud,

The song with answering song applauded thus,

But of that Daulian dream of Itylus.

So but for love's love haply was it—nay, How else?—that even their song took my song's part,

For love of love and sweetness of sweet heart,

Or god-given glorious madness of mid May

And heat of heart and hunger and thirst to sing.

Full of the new wine of the wind of spring.

Or if this were not, and it be not sin
To hold myself in spirit of thy sweet kin,

In heart and spirit of song;

If this my great love do thy grace no wrong,

Thy grace that gave me grace to dwell therein;

If thy gods thus be my gods, and their will

Made my song part of thy song—even such part

As man's hath of God's heart— And my life like as thy life to fulfil;

What have our gods then given us?
Ah, to thee

Sister, much more, much happier than to me,

Much happier things they have given, and more of grace

Than falls to man's light race;

For lighter are we, all our love and pain Lighter than thine, who knowest of time or place

Thus much, that place nor time

Can heal or hurt or lull or change again

The singing soul that makes his soul sublime

Who hears the far fall of its fire-fledged rhyme

Fill darkness as with bright and burning

Till all the live gloom inly glows, and light

Seems with the sound to cleave the core of night.

The singing soul that moves thee, and that moved

When thou wast woman, and their songs divine

Who mixed for Greeian mouths heaven's lyric wine

Fell dumb, fell down reproved

Before one sovereign Lesbian song of thine.

That soul, though love and life had fain held fast.

Wind-winged with fiery music, rose and past Through the indrawn hollow of earth and heaven and hell.

As through some strait sea-shell

The wide sea's immemorial song,—the sea

That sings and breathes in strange men's ears of thee

How in her barren bride bed, void and vast,

Even thy soul sang itself to sleep at last.

To sleep? Ah, then, what song is this, that here

Makes all the night one ear,

One ear fulfilled and mad with music,

Heart kindling as the heart of heaven, to hear

A song more flery than the awakening

Sings, when his song sets fire

To the air and clouds that build the dead night's pyre?

O thou of divers-colored mind, O thou Deathless, God's daughter, subtle-souled—lo, now,

Now to the song above all songs, in flight Higher than the day-star's height.

And sweet as sound the moving wings of night!

Thou of the divers-colored seat—behold, Her very song of old!—

O deathless, O God's daughter, subtlesouled!

That same cry through this boskage overhead

Rings round reiterated,

Palpitates as the last palpitated,

The last that panted through her lips and died

Not down this gray north sea's half sapped cliff-side

That crumbles toward the coastline, year by year

More near the sands and near:

The last loud lyric fiery cry she cried, Heard once on heights Leucadian.—

heard not here.

Not here; for this that fires our north-land night,

This is the song that made

Love fearful, even the heart of love afraid,

With the great anguish of its great de light.

No swan-song, no far-fluttering halfdrawn breath,

No word that love of love's sweet nature saith,

No dirge that lulls the narrowing lids of death.

No healing hymn of peace-prevented strife,—

This is her song of life.

I loved thee,—hark, one tenderer note than all—

Atthis, of old time, once—one low long fall,

Sighing—one long low lovely loveless call.

Dying—one pause in song so flamelike fast—

Atthis, long since in old time overpast— One soft first pause and last,

One,—then the old rage of rapture's fieriest rain

Storms all the music-maddened night again.

Child of God, close craftswoman, I beseech thee

Bid not ache nor agony break nor master,

Lady, my spirit—

O thou her mistress, might her cry not reach thee?

Our Lady of all men's loves, could Love go past her,

Pass, and not hear it?

She hears not as she heard not: hears not me,

O trebled-natured mystery—how should she

Hear, or give ear?—who heard and heard not thee:

Heard and went past, and heard not; but all time

Hears all that all the ravin of his years Hath east not wholly out of all men's ears

And dulled to death with deep dense funeral chime

Of their reiterate rhyme.

And now of all songs uttering all her praise,

All hers who had thy praise and did thee wrong,

Abides one song yet of her lyric days, Thine only, this thy song.

O soul triune, woman and god and bird,

Man, man at least has heard.

All ages call thee conqueror, and thy

The mightiest as the least beneath the sky

Whose heart was ever set to song, or stirred

With wind of mounting music blown more high

Than wildest wing may fly,

Hath heard or hears,—even Æschylus as I.

But when thy name was woman, and thy word

Human,—then haply, surely then meseems

This thy bird's note was heard on earth of none,

Of none save only in dreams.

In all the world then surely was but

Song; as in heaven at highest one sceptred sun

Regent, on earth here surely without fail One only, one imperious nightingale. Dumb was the field, the woodland mute, the lawn Silent; the hill was tongueless as the

Even when the last fair waif of cloud that felt

Its heart beneath the coloring moonrays melt.

At high midnoon of midnight half withdrawn, Bared all the sudden deep divine moon-

Then, unsaluted by her twin-born tune, That latter timeless morning of the Rose past its hour of moonrise; clouds gave way

To the old reconquering ray,

But no song answering made it more than day;

No cry of song by night

dawn.

Shot fire into the cloud-constraining light.

One only, one Æolian island heard Thrill, but through no bird's throat, In one strange manlike maiden's godlike

note,
The song of all these as a single bird;
Till the sea's portal was as funeral gate

For that sole singer in all time's ageless date

Singled and signed for so triumphal fate,
All nightingales but one in all the world

All her sweet life were silent; only then,

When her life's wing of womanhood was furled,

Their cry, this cry of thine was heard again,

As of me now, of any born of men.

Through sleepless clear spring nights filled full of thee,

Rekindled here, thy ruling song has thrilled

The deep dark air and subtle tender sea And breathless hearts with one bright sound fulfilled.

Or at midnoon to me

Swimming, and birds about my happier head

Skimming, one smooth soft way by water and air,

To these my bright born brothern and to

To these my bright born brethren and to

Hath not the clear wind borne or seemed to bear

A song wherein all earth and heaven and sea

Were molten in one music made of thee To enforce us, O our sister of the shore, Look once in heart back landward and adore?

For songless were we sea-mews, yet had we

More joy than all things joyful of theemore,

Haply, than all things happiest; nay, save thee,

In thy strong rapture of imperious joy Too high for heart of sea-borne bird or boy,

What living things were happiest if not we?

But knowing not love nor change nor wrath nor wrong,

No more we knew of song.

Song, and the secrets of it, and their might,

What blessings curse it and what curses bless,

I know them since my spirit had first in sight,

Clear as thy song's words or the live sun's light,

The small dark body's Lesbian loveliness

That held the fire eternal; eve and ear Were as a god's to see, a god's to hear,

Through all his hours of daily and night-Iv chime,

The sundering of the two-edged spear of time:

The spear that pierces even the sevenfold shields Of mightiest Memory, mother of all songs made. And wastes all songs as roseleaves kissed and fraved As here the harvest of the foam-flowered fields: But thine the spear may waste not that he wields Since first the God whose soul is man's live breath.

The sun whose face hath our sun's face for shade.

Put all the light of life and love and death

Too strong for life, but not for love too strong,

Where pain makes peace with pleasure in thy song,

And in thine heart, where love and song make strife.

Fire everlasting of eternal life. 1880.

ON THE DEATHS OF THOMAS CAR-LYLE AND GEORGE ELIOT

Two souls diverse out of our human sight Pass, followed one with love and each with wonder:

The stormy sophist with his mouth of thunder.

Clothed with loud words and mantled in the might

Of darkness and magnificence of night: And one whose eve could smite the night in sunder.

Searching if light or no light were thereunder, And found in love of loving-kindness

Duty divine and Thought with eves of

Still following Righteousness with deep desire

Shone sole and stern before her and above -

Sure stars and sole to steer by; but more sweet.

Shone lower the loveliest lamp for earthly feet,-

The light of little children, and their love. April, 1881.

SONG FROM MARY STUART

AND ye maun braid your yellow hair, And busk ye like a bride;

Wi' sevenscore men to bring ye hame, And ae true love beside:

Between the birk and the green rowan Fu' blithely shall ye ride.

O ye maun braid my yellow hair, But braid it like nae bride:

And I maun gang my ways, mither, Wi' nae true love beside ;

Between the kirk and the kirkyard Fu' sadly shall I ride.

HOPE AND FEAR

Beneath the shadow of dawn's aerial cope,

With eves enkindled as the sun's own sphere,

Hope from the front of youth in godlike cheer

Looks Godward, past the shades where blind men grope

Round the dark door that prayers nor dreams can ope.

And makes for joy the very darkness

That gives her wide wings play; nor dreams that fear

At noon may rise and pierce the heart of hope. Then, when the soul leaves off to dream and yearn, May truth first purge her eyesight to discern What once being known leaves time no power to appal; Till youth at last, ere yet youth be not, learn The kind wise word that falls from years that fall-"Hope thou not much, and fear thou not at all." 1882.

WILLIAM SHAKESPEARE

Not if men's tongues and angels' all in

Spake, might the word be said that might speak Thee.

Streams, winds, woods, flowers, fields. mountains, yea, the sea,

What power is in them all to praise the sun?

His praise is this,—he can be praised of none.

Man, woman, child, praise God for him; buil bes

Exults not to be worshipped, but to be. He is; and, being, beholds his work well

All joy, all glory, all sorrow, all strength, all mirth.

Are his: without him, day were night on earth.

Time knows not his from time's own period.

All lutes, all harps, all viols, all flutes, all lyres.

Fall dumb before him ere one string suspires.

All stars are angels; but the sun is God.

CHILDREN

OF such is the kingdom of heaven. No glory that ever was shed From the crowning star of the seven That crown the north world's head,

No word that ever was spoken Of human or godlike tongue, Gave ever such godlike token Since human harps were strung.

No sign that ever was given To faithful or faithless eyes Showed ever beyond clouds riven So clear a Paradise.

Earth's creeds may be seventy times seven

And blood have defiled each creed: If of such be the kingdom of heaven, It must be heaven indeed.

A CHILD'S LAUGHTER

All the bells of heaven may ring, All the birds of heaven may sing, All the wells on earth may spring, All the winds on earth may bring All sweet sounds together; Sweeter far than all things heard, Hand of harper, tone of bird, Sound of woods at sundawn stirr'd. Welling water's winsome word, Wind in warm wan weather,

One thing yet there is, that none Hearing ere its chime be done Knows not well the sweetest one Heard of man beneath the sun. Hoped in heaven hereafter;

Soft and strong and loud and light, Very sound of very light Heard from morning's rosiest height, When the soul of all delight Fills a child's clear laughter.

Golden bells of welcome roll'd Never forth such notes, nor told Hours so blithe in tones so bold, As the radiant mouth of gold

Here that rings forth heaven. If the golden-crested wren Were a nightingale-why, then Something seen and heard of men Might be half as sweet as when Laughs a child of seven.

THE SALT OF THE EARTH

IF childhood were not in the world, But only men and women grown; No baby-locks in tendrils curled, No baby-blossoms blown;

Though men were stronger, women fairer,

And nearer all delights in reach. And verse and music uttered rarer Tones of more godlike speech:

Though the utmost life of life's best hours

Found, as it cannot now find, words; Though desert sands were sweet as

And flowers could sing like birds,

But children never heard them, never They felt a child's foot-leap and run: This were a drearier star than ever Yet looked upon the sun.

CHILD AND POET

You send me your love in a letter, I send you my love in a song: Ah child, your gift is the better, Mine does you but wrong.

No fame, were the best less brittle. No praise, were it wide as earth, Is worth so much as a little Child's love may be worth.

We see the children above us As they might angels above: Come back to us, child, if you love us, And bring us your love.

A CHILD'S FUTURE

What will it please you, my darling, hereafter to be?

Fame upon land will you look for, or glory by sea?

Gallant your life will be always, and all of it free.

Free as the wind when the heart of the twilight is stirred

Eastward, and sounds from the springs of the sumise are heard:

Free—and we know not another as infinite word.

Darkness or twilight or sunlight may compass us round,

Hate may arise up against us, or hope may confound;

Love may forsake as; yet may not the spirit be bound.

Free in oppression of grief as in ardor of

Still may the soul be, and each to her strength as a toy:

Free in the glance of the man as the smile of the boy.

Freedom alone is the salt and the spirit that gives Life, and without her is nothing that verily lives:

Death cannot slay her: she laughs upon death and forgives.

Brightest and hardiest of roses anear

and afar
Glitters the blithe little face of you,
round as a star:

Liberty bless you and keep you to be as you are.

England and liberty bless you and keep you to be

Worthy the name of their child and the sight of their sea:

Fear not at all: for a slave, if he fears not, is free. 1882.

A Baby's feet, like sea-shells pink, Might tempt, should Heaven see meet, An angel's lips to kiss, we think, A baby's feet. Like rose-hued sea-flowers toward the heat

They stretch and spread and wink Their ten soft buds that part and meet.

No flower-bells that expand and shrink Gleam half so heavenly sweet As shine on life's untrodden brink A baby's feet.

II

A baby's hands, like rosebuds furl'd,
Whence yet no leaf expands,
Ope if you touch, though close upcurl'd
A baby's hands,

Then, even as warriors grip their brands When battle's bolt is hurl'd,

They close, clench'd hard like tightening bands.

No rosebuds yet by dawn impearl'd Match, even in loveliest lands, The sweetest flowers in all the world— A baby's hands,

III

A baby's eyes, ere speech begin, Ere lips learn words or sighs, Bless all things bright enough to win A baby's eyes.

Love, while the sweet thing laughs and lies,

And sleep flows out and in, Lies perfect in them Paradise.

Their glance might cast out pain and sin,
Their speech make dumb the wise,
By mute glad godhead felt within

A baby's eyes. 1883.

IN GUERNSEY

(TO THEODORE WATTS)

Ι

THE heavenly bay, ringed round with cliffs and moors,

Storm stained ravines, and crags that lawns inlay,

Soothes as with love the rocks whose guard secures

The heavenly bay.

O friend, shall time take even this away. This blessing given of beauty that endures,

This glory shown us, not to pass but stay?

Though sight be changed for memory, love ensures

What memory, changed by love to sight. would say-

The word that seals for ever mine and

The heavenly bay.

My mother sea, my fostress, what new strand.

What new delight of waters, may this be, The fairest found since time's first breezes fanned My mother sea?

Once more I give me body and soul to thee.

Who hast my soul for ever: cliff and sand

Recede, and heart to heart once more are we.

My heart springs first and plunges, ere my hand

Strike out from shore: more close it brings to me.

More near and dear than seems my fatherland. My mother sea.

Across and along, as the bay's breadth opens, and o'er us

Wild autumn exults in the wind, swift rapture and strong Impels us, and broader the wide waves brighten before us Across and along.

The whole world's heart is uplifted, and knows not wrong;

The whole world's life is a chant to the sea-tide's chorus;

Are we not as waves of the water, as notes of the song?

Like children unworn of the passions and toils that wore us, We breast for a season the breadth of the seas that throng, Rejoicing as they, to be borne as of old they bore us Across and along. 1883.

A SINGING LESSON

FAR-FETCHED and dear bought, as the proverb rehearses,

Is good, or was held so, for ladies; but nought

In a song can be good if the turn of the verse is

Far-fetched and dear bought.

As the turn of a wave should it sound. and the thought

Ring smooth, and as light as the spray that disperses

Be the gleam of the words for the garb thereof wrought.

Let the soul in it shine through the sound as it pierces

Men's hearts with possession of music unsought:

For the bounties of song are no jealous god's mercies,

Far-fetched and dear bought. 1883.

THE ROUNDEL

A Roundel is wrought as a ring or a starbright sphere.

With craft of delight and with cunning of sound unsought,

That the heart of the hearer may smile if to pleasure his ear A roundel is wrought.

Its jewel of music is carven of all or of aught—

Love, laughter, or mourning—remembrance of rapture or fear—

That fancy may fashion to hang in the ear of thought.

As a bird's quick song runs round, and the hearts in us hear-Pause answers to pause, and again the same strain caught, So moves the device whence, round as a pearl or tear, A roundel is wrought.

A SOLITUDE

SEA beyond sea, sand after sweep of sand.

Here ivory smooth, here cloven and ridged with flow

Of channelled waters soft as rain or snow.

Stretch their lone length at ease beneath the bland

Gray gleam of skies whose smile on wave and strand

Shines weary like a man's who smiles to know

That now no dream can mock his faith with show,

Nor cloud for him seem living sea or land.

Is there an end at all of all this waste,
These crumbling cliffs defeatured and defaced,

These ruinous heights of sea-sapped walls that slide

Seaward with all their banks of bleak blown flowers

Glad yet of life, ere yet their hope subside

Beneath the coil of dull dense waves and hours? June, 1884.

ON A COUNTRY ROAD

ALONG these low pleached lanes, on such a day,

So soft a day as this, through shade and sun,

With glad grave eyes that scanned the glad wild way

And heart still hovering o'er a song begun,

And smile that warmed the world with benison,

Our father, lord long since of lordly rhyme.

Long since hath haply ridden, when the Bloomed broad above him, flowering where he came.

Because thy passage once made warm this clime,

Our father Chaucer, here we praise thy name.

Each year that England clothes herself with May,

She takes thy likeness on her. Time hath spun

Fresh raiment all in vain and strange array

For earth and man's new spirit, fain to shun

Things past for dreams of better to be won,

Through many a century since thy funeral chime

Rang, and men deemed it death's most direful crime

To have spared not thee for very love or shame;

And yet, while mists round last year's memories climb.

Our father Chaucer, here we praise thy name,

Each turn of the old wild road whereon we stray,

Meseems, might bring us face to face with one

Whom seeing we could not but give thanks, and pray

For England's love our father and her son

To speak with us as once in days long done
With all mon sage and abund and monk

With all men, sage and churl and monk and mime,

Who knew not as we know the soul sublime

That sang for song's love more than lust of fame.

Yet, though this be not, yet, in happy time,

Our father Chaucer, here we praise thy name.

Friend, even as bees about the flowering thyme,

Years crowd on years, till hoar decay begrime

Names once beloved; but seeing the sun the same.

As birds of autumn fain to praise the prime,

Our father Chaucer, here we praise thy name. June, 1884.

THE SEABOARD

THE sea is at ebb, and the sound of her utmost word

Is soft as the least wave's lapse in a still small reach.

From bay unto bay, on quest of a goal deferred,

From headland ever to headland and breach to breach

Where earth gives ear to the message that all days preach

With changes of gladness and sadness that cheer and chide,

The lone way lures me along by a chance untried
That haply, if hope dissolve not and faith be whole.

Not all for nought shall I seek, with a dream for guide,

The goal that is not, and ever again the goal.

The trackless ways are untravelled of sail or bird;

The hoar wave hardly recedes from the soundless beach.

The silence of instant noon goes nigh to be heard,

The viewless void to be visible: all and each,

A closure of calm no clamor of storm

Concludes and confines and absorbs them on either side,

All forces of light and of life and the live world's pride.

Sands hardly ruffled of ripples that hardly roll

Seem ever to show as in reach of a swift brief stride [goal.

The waves are a joy to the seamew, the meads to the herd,

And a joy to the heart is a goal that it may not reach.

No sense that for ever the limits of sense engird,

No hearing or sight that is vassal to form or speech,

THE CLIFFSIDE PATH

SEAWARD goes the sun, and homeward by the down We, before the night upon his grave be sealed.

Low behind us lies the bright steep

Low behind us lies the bright steep murmuring town,

High before us heaves the steep rough silent field.

Breach by ghastlier breach, the cliffs collapsing yield:

Half the path is broken, half the banks divide;
Flawed and crumbled, riven and rent.

they cleave and slide Toward the ridged and wrinkled waste of girdling sand

Deep beneath, whose furrows tell how far and wide

Wind is lord and change is sovereign of the strand.

Star by star on the unsunned waters twiring down,

Golden spear-points glance against a silver shield.

Over banks and bents, across the headland's crown,

As by pulse of gradual plumes through twilight wheeled,

Soft as sleep, the waking wind awakes the weald.

Moor and copse and fallow, near or far descried,

Feel the mild wings move, and gladden where they glide:

Silence uttering love that all things understand.

Bids the quiet fields forget that hard beside

Wind is lord and change is sovereign of the strand.

Yet may sight, ere all the hoar soft shade grow brown,

Hardly reckon half the rifts and rents
unhealed
Where the scarred cliffs downward

sundering drive and drown, Hewn as if with stroke of swords in tempest steeled,

Wielded as the night's will and the wind's may wield.

Crowned and zoned in vain with flowers of autumn-tide, Life and love seek harborage on the landward side;

Wind is lord and change is sovereign of the strand.

Friend, though man be less than these, for all his pride,

Yet, for all his weakness, shall not hope abide?

Wind and change can wreck but life and waste but land:

Truth and trust are sure, though here till all subside

Wind is lord and change is sovereign of the strand. 1884.

IN THE WATER

THE sea is awake, and the sound of the song of the joy of her waking is rolled From afar to the star that recedes, from anear to the wastes of the wild wide shore.

Her call is a trumpet compelling us homeward: if dawn in her east be acold. From the sea shall we crave not her grace to rekindle the life that it kindled before. Her breath to requicken, her bosom to rock us, her kisses to bless as of yore? For the wind, with his wings half open, at pause in the sky, neither fettered nor free,

Leans waveward and flutters the ripple to laughter: and fain would the twain of us be

Where lightly the wave yearns forward from under the curve of the deep dawn's dome.

And, full of the morning and fired with the pride of the glory thereof and the glee,

Strike out from the shore as the heart in us bids and beseeches, athirst for the foam.

Life holds not an hour that is better to live in: the past is a tale that is told,

The future a sun-flecked shadow, alive and asleep, with a blessing in store. As we give us again to the waters, the rapture of limbs that the waters enfold

Is less than the rapture of spirit whereby, though the burden it quits were sore, Our souls and the bodies they wield at their will are absorbed in the life they

In the life that endures no burden, and bows not the forehead, and bends not the knee -In the life everlasting of earth and of heaven, in the laws that atone and agree. In the measureless music of things, in the fervor of forces that rest or that roam,

That cross and return and reissue, as I after you and as you after me

Strike out from the shore as the heart in us bids and beseeches, athirst for the foam.

For, albeit he were less than the least of them, haply the heart of a man may be bold

To rejoice in the word of the sea, as a mother's that saith to the son she bore.

"Child, was not the life in thee mine, and my spirit the breath in thy lips from of old?

Have I let not thy weakness exult in my strength, and thy foolishness learn of my lore?

Have I helped not or healed not thine anguish, or made not the might of thy gladness more?"

And surely his heart should answer. "The light of the love of my life is in thee." She is fairer than earth, and the sun is not fairer, the wind is not blither than she: From my youth hath she shown me the joy of her bays that I crossed, of her cliffs that I clomb,

Till now that the twain of us here, in desire of the dawn and in trust of the Strike out from the shore as the heart in us bids and beseeches, athirst for the foam.

Friend, earth is a harbor of refuge for winter, a covert whereunder to flee

When day is the vassal of night, and the strength of the hosts of her mightier than he:

But here is the presence adored of me, here my desire is at rest and at home.

There are cliffs to be climbed upon land, there are ways to be trodden and ridden : but we

Strike out from the shore as the heart in us bids and beseeches, athirst for 1884. the foam.

THE SUNBOWS

SPRAY of song that springs in April, light of love that laughs through May,

Live and die and live for ever: nought of all things far less fair

Keeps a surer life than these that seem to pass like fire away.

In the souls they live which are but all the brighter that they were;

In the hearts that kindle, thinking what delight of old was there.

Wind that shapes and lifts and shifts them bids perpetual memory play

Over dreams and in and out of deeds and thoughts which seem to wear

Light that leaps and runs and revels through the springing flames of spray.

Dawn is wild upon the waters where we drink of dawn to-day:

Wide, from wave to wave rekindling in rebound through radiant air,

Flash the fires unwoven and woven again of wind that works in play,

Working wonders more than heart may note or sight may wellnigh dare,

Wefts of rarer light than colors rain from heaven, though this be rare. Arch on arch unbuilt in building, reared and ruined ray by ray,

Breaks and brightens, laughs and lessens, even till eyes may hardly bear

Light that leaps and runs and revels through the springing flames of spray.

Year on year sheds light and music rolled and flashed from bay to bay

Round the summer capes of time and winter headlands keen and bare

Whence the soul keeps watch, and bids her vassal memory watch and pray, If perchance the dawn may quicken, or perchance the midnight spare.

Silence quells not music, darkness takes not sunlight in her snare;

Shall not joys endure that perish? Yea, saith dawn, though night say nay:

Life on life goes out, but very life enkindles everywhere

Light that leaps and runs and revels through the springing flames of spray.

Friend, were life no more than this is, well would yet the living fare.

All aflower and all afire and all flung heavenward, who shall say Such a flash of life were worthless? This is worth a world of care—

Light that leaps and runs and revels through the springing flames of spray.

1884.

ON THE VERGE

Here begins the sea that ends not till the world's end. Where we stand,

Could we know the next high sea-mark set beyond these waves that gleam,

We should know what never man hath known, nor eye of man hath scanned. Nought beyond these coiling clouds that melt—like fume of shrines that steam

Breaks or stays the strength of waters till they pass our bounds of dream.

Where the waste Land's Endleans westward, all the seas it watches roll

Find their border fixed beyond them, and a worldwide shore's control:

These whereby we stand, no shore beyond us limits: these are free.

Gazing hence, we see the water that grows iron round the Pole,

From the shore that hath no shore beyond it set in all the sea.

Sail on sail along the sea-line fades and flashes; here on land

Flash and fade the wheeling wings on wings of mews that plunge and scream. Hour on hour along the line of life and time's evasive strand

Shines and darkens, wanes and waxes, slays and dies: and scarce they seem

More than motes that thronged and trembled in the brief noon's breath and beam.

Some with crying and wailing, some with notes like sound of bells that toll,

Some with sighing and laughing, some with words that blessed and made us whole,

Passed, and left us, and we know not what they were, nor what were we. Would we know, being mortal? Never

Would we know, being mortal? Never breath of answering whisper stole

From the shore that hath no shore beyond it set in all the sea.

Shadows, would we question darkness?

Ere our eyes and brows be fanned

Round with airs of twilight, washed with dews from sleep's eternal stream, Would we know sleep's guarded secret? Ere the fire consume the brand,

Would it know if yet its ashes may requicken? yet we deem quicken? yet we deem Surely man may know, or ever night

unyoke her starry team, What the dawn shall be, or if the dawn shall be not: yea, the scroll

Would we read of sleep's dark scripture, pledge of peace or doom of dole.

Ah, but here man's heart leaps, yearning toward the gloom with venturous glee, Though his pilot eye behold nor bay nor harbor, rock nor shoal,

From the shore that hath no shore beyond it set in all the sea.

Friend, who knows if death indeed have life or life have death for goal?

Day nor night can tell us, nor may seas declare nor skies unroll

What has been from everlasting, or if aught shall alway be.

Silence answering only strikes response reverberate on the soul

From the shore that hath no shore beyond it set in all the sea. 1884.

ON THE MONUMENT ERECTED TO MAZZINI AT GENOA

ITALIA, mother of the souls of men, Mother divine

Of all that serv'd thee best with sword or pen,

All sons of thine,

Thou knowest that here the likeness of the best

Before thee stands:

The head most high, the heart found faithfulest,
The purest hands.

All and the former and form of

Above the fume and foam of time that flits,
The soul, we know,

Now sits on high where Alighieri sits With Angelo.

Nor his own heavenly tongue hath heavenly speech Enough to say

What this man was, whose praise no thought may reach,
No words can weigh.

Since man's first mother brought to mortal birth Her first-born son.

Such grace befell not ever man on earth
As crowns this One.

Of God nor man was ever this thing said:

That he could give Life back to her who gave him, that his dead

Mother might live.

But this man found his mother dead and slain,

With fast-seal'd eyes,

And bade the dead rise up and live again, And she did rise:

And all the world was bright with her through him:

But dark with strife,

Like heaven's own sun that storming clouds bedim,
Was all his life.

Life and the clouds are vanish'd; hate and fear Have had their span

Of time to burt and are not: Ite is here, The sunlike man. City superb, that hadst Columbus first For sovereign son,

Be prouder that thy breast hath later nursed

This mightier One.

Glory be his for ever, while his land Lives and is free,

As with controlling breath and sovereign hand
He bade her be.

Earth shows to heaven the names by thousands told
That crown her fame.

But highest of all that heaven and earth behold,
Mazzini's name. 1884.

THE INTERPRETERS

Ι

Days dawn on us that make amends for

Sometimes,

When heaven and earth seem sweeter even than any Man's rhymes,

Light had not all been quenched in France, or quelled In Greece,

Had Homer sung not, or had Hugo held His peace.

Had Sappho's self not left her word thus

For token,
The sea round Lesbos yet in waves of song

Had spoken.

H

And yet these days of subtler air and finer

Delight.

When lovelier looks the darkness, and diviner

The light-

The gift they give of all these golden hours,

Whose urn

Pours forth reverberate rays or shadowing showers

In turn-

Clouds, beams, and winds that make the live day's track
Seem living—

What were they did no spirit give them back

Thanksgiving?

Dead air, dead fire, dead shapes and shadows, telling

Time nought;

Man gives them sense and soul by song. and dwelling In thought.

In human thought their being endures, their power Abides:

Else were their life a thing that each light hour Derides.

The years live, work, sigh, smile, and die, with all They cherish:

The soul endures, though dreams that fed it fall And perish.

In human thought have all things habitation;

Our days

Laugh, lower, and lighten past, and find no station That stays.

But thought and faith are mightier things than time Can wrong,

Made splendid once with speech, or made sublime

By song.

Remembrance, though the tide of change that rolls

Wax hoary,

Gives earth and heaven, for song's sake and the soul's, 1885. Their glory.

A WORD WITH THE WIND

LORD of days and nights that hear thy word of wintry warning,

Wind whose feet are set on ways that none may tread,

Change the nest wherein thy wings are fledged for flight by morning,

Change the harbor whence at dawn thy sails are spread.

Not the dawn, ere yet the imprisoning night has half released her, More desires the sun's full face of cheer, than we,

Well as yet we love the strength of the iron-tongued north-easter, Yearn for wind to meet us as we front

the sea.

All thy ways are, good, O wind, and all the world should fester,

Were thy fourfold godhead quenched, or stilled thy strife:

Yet the waves and we desire too long the deep south-wester,

Whence the waters quicken shoreward, clothed with life.

Yet the field not made for ploughing save of keels nor harrowing Save of storm-winds lies unbrightened

by thy breath:

Banded broad with ruddy samphire glow the sea-banks narrowing

Westward, while the sea gleams chill and still as death.

Sharp and strange from inland sounds thy bitter note of battle,

Blown between grim skies and waters sullen-souled,

Till the baffled seas bear back, rocks roar and shingles rattle.

Vexed and angered and anhungered and acold.

Change thy note, and give the waves their will, and all the measure, Full and perfect, of the music of their

might.

Let it fill the bays with thunderous notes of pleasure, Shake the shores with passion, sound at once and smite.

Sweet are even the mild low notes of wind and sea, but sweeter

Sounds the song whose choral wrath of raging rhyme

Bids the shelving shoals keep tune with storm's imperious metre,

Bids the rocks and reefs respond in rapturous chime.

Sweet the lisp and lulling whisper and luxurious laughter, [the sun Soft as love or sleep, of waves whereon

Dreams, and dreams not of the darkling hours before nor after,

Winged with cloud whose wrath shall bid love's day be done.

Yet shall darkness bring the awakening sea a lordlier lover,

Clothed with strength more amorous and more strenuous will,

Whence her heart of hearts shall kindle and her soul recover

Sense of love too keen to lie for love's sake still.

Let thy strong south-western music sound, and bid the billows

Brighten, proud and glad to feel thy scourge and kiss

Sting and soothe and swav them, bowed as aspens bend or willows,

Yet resurgent still in breathless rage of bliss.

All to-day the slow sleek ripples hardly bear up shore-ward,

Charged with sighs more light than laughter, faint and fair,

Like a woodland lake's weak wavelets lightly lingering forward. Soft and listless as the slumber-stricken

Be the sunshine bared or veiled, the sky superb or shrouded,

Still the waters, lax and languid, chafed and foiled.

Keen and thwarted, rale and patient. clothed with fire or clouded,

Vex their heart in vain, or sleep like serpents coiled.

Thee they look for, blind and baffled. wan with wrath and weary.

Blown for ever back by winds that rock the bird:

Winds that seamews breast subdue the sea, and bid the dreary

Waves be weak as hearts made sick with hope deferred.

Let thy clarion sound from westward, let the south bear token

How the glories of thy godhead sound and shine:

Bid the land rejoice to see the landwind's broad wings broken,

Bid the sea take comfort, bid the world be thine.

Half the world abhors thee beating back the sea, and blackening Heaven with fierce and woful change of fluctuant form: All the world acclaims thee shifting sail

again, and slackening

Cloud by cloud the close-reefed cordage of the storm.

Sweeter fields and brighter woods and lordlier hills than waken

Here at sunrise never hailed the sun and thee:

Turn thee then, and give them comfort, shed like rain and shaken

Far as foam that laughs and leaps along the sea. 1889.

IN TIME OF MOURNING

"RETURN," we dare not as we fain Would cry from hearts that yearn: Love dares not bid our dead again Return.

O hearts that strain and burn As fires fast fettered burn and strain! Bow down, lie still, and learn.

The heart that healed all hearts of pair No funeral rites inurn:

Its echoes, while the stars remain, Return. Man, 1885. 1889.

A SEQUENCE OF SONNETS ON THE DEATH OF ROBERT BROWNING

THE clearest eyes in all the world they

With sense more keen and spirit of sight more true

Than burns and thrills in sunrise, when the dew

Flames, and absorbs the glory round it

As they the light of agesquick and dead, Closed now, forsake us: yet the shaft that slew

Can slav not one of all the works we knew.

Nor death discrown that many-laurelled head.

The works of words whose life seems lightning wrought,

And moulded of unconquerable thought, And quickened with imperishable flame, Stand fast and shine and smile, assured

May fade of all their myriad-moulded

Nor England's memory clasp not Browning's name.

Death, what hast thou to do with one for whom

Time is not lord, but servant? What least part

Of all the fire that fed his living heart,

Of all the light more keen than sundawn's bloom

That lit and led his spirit, strong as doom bright as hope, can aught thy breath may dart

Quench? Nay, thou knowest he knew thee what thou art,

A shadow born of terror's barren womb,

That brings not forth save shadows. What art thou,

To dream, albeit thou breathe upon his brow,

That power on him is given thee,—that thy breath Can make him less than love acclaims him now,

And hears all time sound back the word it saith?

What part hast thou then in his glory, Death?

But he—to him, who knows what gift is thine,

Death? Hardly may we think or hope when we Pass likewise thither where to-night is he,

Beyond the irremeable outer seas that shine

And darken round such dreams as half divine

Some sunlit harbor in that starless sea Where gleams no ship to windward or to lee,

To read with him the secret of thy shrine. There too, as here, may song, delight, and love.

The nightingale, the sea-bird, and the dove,

Fulfil with joy the splendor of the sky Till all beneath wax bright as all above: But none of all that search the heavens, and try

The sun, may match the sovereign eagle's eye.

Among the wondrous ways of men and time

He went as one that ever found and sought

And bore in hand the lamplike spirit of thought

To illume with instance of its fire sublime

The dusk of many a cloudlike age and clime.

No spirit in shape of light and darkness

wrought.
No faith no fear no dream no ranture

No faith, no fear, no dream, no rapture, nought

That blooms in wisdom, nought that burns in crime,

No virtue girt and armed and helmed with light.

No love more lovely than the snows are white,

No serpent sleeping in some dead soul's tomb,

No song-bird singing from some live soul's height,

But he might hear, interpret, or illume With sense invasive as the dawn of doom.

What secret thing of splendor or of shade
Surmised in all those wandering ways

wherein Man, led of love and life and death and

Man, led of love and life and death and sin,

Strays, climbs, or cowers, allured, absorbed, afraid,

Might not the strong and sunlike sense invade

Of that full soul that had for aim to win Light, silent over time's dark toil and din,

Life, at whose touch death fades as dead things fade?

O spirit of man, what mystery moves in thee

That he might know not of in spirit, and see

The heart within the heart that seems to strive,

The life within the life that seems to be, And hear through all thy storms that whirl and drive,

The living sound of all men's souls alive?

He held no dream worth waking: so he said,

He who stands now on death's triumphal steep,

Awakened out of life wherein we sleep And dream of what he knows and sees, being dead.*

But never death for him was dark or dread:

"Look forth" he bade the soul, and fear not. Weep,

All ye that trust not in his truth, and

Vain memory's vision of a vanished head As all that lives of all that once was he Save that which lightens from his word:
but we,

Who, seeing the sunset-colored waters roll.

Yet know the sun subdued not of the

Nor weep nor doubt that still the spirit is whole,

And life and death but shadows of the soul.
